

UP FRONT

An awesome responsibility

By DOUG RAINEY

DRAINEY@CHESPUB.COM

A little more than 15 years ago, I walked into the office of the Newark Post to start the next phase of my career.

There was an air of excitement as we launched the New Castle Business Ledger, now the Delaware Business Ledger.

Five years earlier, I had arrived in Delaware as Editor of the Delaware Business Review, a struggling weekly newspaper. With the help of a dedicated staff, we managed to turn around the Review, despite running head-on into a steep recession.

The desire to seek other challenges led Gene Schwenk, DBR's advertising manager, and myself to join Chesapeake Publishing, which was seeing success with Business Ledgers serving small markets. Over the years, we shared space with The Post and witnessed the highs and lows that come with publishing monthly and weekly newspapers under one roof.

The monthly Ledger clawed its way through a crowded market to take a leadership position, thanks to strong support from the company, most notably Jim Streit, publisher of the Post, who took on the same role at the Ledger.

I had little direct involvement in the Post, which has had the great fortune to be have been led by a number of dedicated editors over the years.

Rapid growth to the south in Bear-Glasgow and Middletown, led to a decision to expand with a separate publication and I did pitch in

More to come from Delaware Does More

Delaware Does More announced that the initiative gathered more than 340,000 pounds of food and more than $300,000 for Delawareans facing immediate basic needs.

This announcement was made at a conference held at the Food Bank of Delaware's Newark location. Speakers included Senator Tom Carper, Representative Mike Castle, and Lt. Governor Matt Denn.

"The greatest source of joy is not from what we get, it's from what we give," Carper said.

Carper was speaking to Natalie Ginsberg, Elizabeth Imhoff, and Rachel and Jeffrey Carlson — children who ran a food drive in their Newark neighborhood. They collected 979 pounds of food on a 20-degree day in November, using their wooden wagons.

Delaware Does More was a statewide collaboration, initiated by the Food Bank of Delaware and United Way of Delaware, to help with growing food, shelter, and utility assistance needs. To date, more than 320,000 pounds of food have been distributed to food closets statewide. More than 675 individuals have been assisted with critical

2 Newark Police officers honored

LIBRARY UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE MAR 19 2009 NEWARK, DELAWARE

The Knights of Columbus held a special banquet to present awards to police officers for outstanding actions and job performance. The semi-annual banquet honored two officers from the past two quarters and the awardees for the winter banquet were Dylan Wiggins and Cpl. Blake Potocki. Recently, the organization honored the two Newark Police officers for their service.

Dylan Wiggins was off-duty and exercising in Handloff Park when he recognized a suspect in a recent robbery walking in the area with another person. This dangerous suspect had escaped arrest after a lengthy foot chase during a robbery the previous week. Officer Wiggins contacted on duty officers and followed the suspect; providing updates to fellow officers about his and the suspect's location. The suspect eventually detected police presence and fled on foot. On-duty officers and Officer Wiggins pursued the suspect until he was apprehended. This is a suspect who at the time was considered dangerous enough that had he been located in a building or house the Emergency Response Team (SWAT) would have been activated.

Cpl. Blake Potocki was on duty late last year when a Maryland State Police trooper was pursuing a vehicle in an unmarked police car without backup. Officer Potocki recognized the state trooper needed backup and immediately joined the pursuit. He exhibited calm demeanor, provided clear and concise radio communications, and displayed above average driving skills during the high speed chase. During the pursuit, they headed southbound in northbound traffic lanes. Officer Potocki put public safety first while following the trooper by driving in southbound lanes. When the suspect crashed their vehicle into a sign, he was the first to arrive on the scene because the Maryland trooper was hindered by traffic. He participated in the arrest with the help of Delaware State Police troopers which had arrived at the scene as the suspect crashed his car. The suspect was charged with 39 counts of both criminal and traffic charges, many of which were felonies.

■ Police Blotter is compiled each week from the files of the Newark Police Department, New Castle County Police and the Delaware State Police.

A pair of 20-year-olds became so intoxicated during separate incidents last Saturday that one wandered into a family's home while the other demanded entry to a stranger's house.

According to police, UD student and Newark resident Daniel R. King wandered into a family's home in the Oaklands neighborhood shortly before sunrise.

Police said a 69-year-old resident of Old Oak Road called officers at about 5:36 a.m. to report finding a stranger sitting on the couch in his living room. The man told police the stranger stumbled off after his two sons asked him to leave the home.

Officers reportedly found King, who matched a description they received, walking southbound on New London Road. King reportedly told police he was heading from one party to another and did not remember entering the home.

King, who had a reported blood alcohol content of 0.121 percent, was charged with underage consumption.

POST COLUMNIST

Preauthorized bankingese

By MARVIN HUMMEL

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

Each month, a wad of canceled checks used to come to me from my bank. I quickly went over the checks, one by one, to verify my account, and then placed them on top of the previous months' checks.

Then one month, frontal photocopies of my checks, all on a page or two, replaced the two-sided originals. The disadvantage to me was obvious – I had no way of knowing who endorsed the checks. The advantage to "my" bank? 30-40 cents a month in posting. Oh, well.

The next innovation? The appearance of "Preauthorized" amounts to the power company, the telephone company, the insurance company, and several other businesses I deal with on a monthly or quarterly basis – but no photocopies of my checks, front and/or back, to these companies appeared any longer. I didn't like it. It was MY account and MY money, so I reasoned that if anybody was going to "Preauthorize," I should; but I hadn't! Nor did I receive notice that the bank would be doing this on my behalf. When I asked about it at the bank, I was very politely and kindly given an explanation that was excellent – if I understood Bankingese. I don't and never will.

(It reminded me of a grouchy CPA whose firm would not make him a full partner until he took a business communications class. He could speak and write Accountingese – but his clients were NOT accountants, so they had little idea of what he was talking about! And they were sore vexed! The young CPA felt aggrieved that he had to become an interpreter and translator of the obvious; to become a full partner he had to endure taking my undergraduate class to redress his clients' failure to understand the one true language – Accountingese!)

Oh, well. I let my banking "situation" go. The nice, polite bankers would never get me to understand Bankingese. And, the Preauthorized charges were indeed for companies I dealt with on a monthly or quarterly basis.

Then one month, a Preauthorized entry showed up on my account that I did not recognize – it was cryptically encoded in numbers and letters that made no sense to me. I called my bank. 17 phone calls to people and voice-robots later, I ended up with a representative of another bank! He shunted me off to a representative of still another bank, darkly suggesting that somebody was up to something nefarious at my account's expense! I called the third bank and met with – Bankingese!

I HATE calling in favors I don't deserve, but in the current culture of identity thefts and the naughty didoes of some banks, I called in that favor I didn't deserve. (After

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's Out of the Attic features a mid-1950s view of one of the oldest brick structures on Main Street. Built about 1800 at the corner of W. Main Street and N. College Avenue, the house was bought in 1804 by John Evans, a cabinetmaker and general store proprietor, as his home and business location. Delaware College presidents Purnell and Caldwell lived there in the latter 1800s. In 1912 a commercial front was added for Motheral's Store followed by the Blue Hen Tea Room and Gift Shop (1922-1930s) and the popular College Inn dining room (1940s – late 1950s). The house is now the University of Delaware's Raub Hall. The picture is on loan to the Newark Post from the Newark Historical Society collection. Visit the Newark History Museum at 148 E. Main St. (between Choate and Haines streets). Hours are Thursday 5 – 8 p.m., Fridays Noon – 3 p.m., and Saturdays and Sundays, 2 – 5 p.m. Admission is free. Contact the Historical Society by phone at 224-2408, by e-mailing to newarkdehistoricalsociety@yahoo.com, and/or by postal mail to P. O. Box 711, Newark, DE 19715.

all, my mattress was already lumpy, and hiding my money in it might hurt my back!)

Quickly my friend resolved the problem: I had started taking my car to Gladstone Auto Services for winterizing it and having periodic routine work done, and they used numbers and letters as their code name! Had the PreAuthorized payment been to Gladstone, I would have understood, but it was to X7-J4! So Gladstone's bank had Preauthorized my bank to Preauthorize MY checks which I had not Preauthorized!

Now, Bankingese and Accountingese and Legalese are obvious languages to professionals in those fields but the equivalents of Sanskrit to many/most of their clients. Recommendation – hire interpreters to explain OUR affairs to us laymen!

I have my own expertise – Theologese! But nobody asks me any questions. Is everybody Preauthorized in my field?

housing or utility expenses.

Food donations were collected by the Food Bank of Delaware, which distributed the food to agencies throughout New Castle, Kent and Sussex counties.

"The economy was causing working families to go hungry, and overburdened agencies were unable to help," said Patricia Beebe, CEO of the Food Bank of Delaware. "Delaware Does More helped us to meet that critical need and feed those families."

Monetary donations were allocated by a committee convened by United Way of Delaware. One hundred percent of the funds collected went to select agencies statewide.

People who received financial assistance from these agencies included a senior citizen who fell behind in his mortgage due to illness. Funds from Delaware Does More protected him from having to foreclose on his house. Also helped was a struggling single mother who was trying to further her education. Delaware Does More funds helped her pay her utilities bill, which she needed in order to keep her Section 8 voucher.

"On behalf of everyone who was helped by Delaware Does More, thank you for your generosity," said Michelle A. Taylor, CEO of United Way of Delaware. "Our original goals were to raise 300,000 pounds of food and $250,000. With your help, we exceeded those goals. Delaware is truly a small state with a large heart."

Delawareans should look for additional Delaware Does More initiatives in the upcoming months.

"The need doesn't end because the days are longer or the weather is warmer," said Beebe. "Please continue to support health and human service agencies year-round. By helping one person, you help us all."

from time to time to assist the Route 40 Flier.

Still, it would be safe to say that life has never been easy for The Post.

Wedged into an area near the Maryland and Pennsylvania borders, population growth is modest and competition is fierce. Big box retailers that put their advertising budgets in mailers or daily newspaper inserts made life even tougher.

Even the college town atmosphere that we all love can be brutal in the summer when merchants batten down the hatches while waiting for the fall.

Still, the Post has persevered for and last year reached a long-sought goal of moving to a location with a Main Street address.

Then came a swift and brutal downturn that hit all media hard, especially newspapers that invest heavily in people and equipment. Many publications have closed in recent months, particularly to the north of us in Chester County, Pa.

At our company, tough decisions had to be made and fine people have been let go or transferred.

It is with more than a little humility that I take on the responsibility of editing The Post and Flier publications in addition to my post as founding editor of the Business Ledger.

I would be remiss in not telling you that we are regrouping as we deal with a new environment and ask for your patience and understanding as we work to cover this jewel of a community.

Despite the current period of adversity, we do know that the Post and Fliers are more widely read than ever, based on our circulation and traffic on our website.

Begleiter honored

Delaware Press Association (DPA), an affiliate of the National Federation of Press Women (NFPW), recently named Ralph J. Begleiter the 2009 DPA Communicator of Achievement. Begleiter, Distinguished Journalist in Residence at the University of Delaware (UD) as well as the Rosenberg Professor of Communication, was recognized for bringing more than 30 years of broadcast journalism experience to classrooms for students interested in international affairs and broadcast journalism. Additionally, he directs the university's outstanding annual "Global Agenda" speaker series on international issues.

Ralph J. Begleiter

During two decades as CNN's world affairs correspondent, Begleiter was based in the network's Washington Bureau, writing and producing thousands of news reports and programs that aired worldwide. He was the network's most widely-traveled reporter, logging nearly two million miles while visiting some 95 countries on 6 continents.

At CNN during the 1980s and 1990s, he covered U.S. diplomacy, interviewed countless world leaders, hosted a global public affairs program called "Global View," and co-anchored CNN's prestigious "International Hour." In 1998, he wrote and anchored a 24-part series on the Cold War. He covered many historic events at the end of the 20th century, including virtually every high-level Soviet/Russian-American meeting; the Persian Gulf Crisis in 1990-91; Middle East Peace efforts; and many UN and NATO summit meetings. In recent years he has hosted the Foreign Policy Association's annual "Great Decisions" television discussion series, aired on Public Broadcasting System stations.

Although Begleiter has received numerous awards for outstanding coverage of politics and diplomacy around the world, he says, "What's most important in a career that has taken me from the remotest corners of the earth to the most sophisticated cities of the world still boils down to the people with whom I've worked over the years. Photographers and producers, other reporters, diplomats, politicians and military men and women. It's those people who remain constants, amid all the political shuffling and changes of assignments."

At Delaware, Begleiter teaches undergraduate courses in "Media and Politics," "Broadcast News," "Crisis News," "History of TV News Documentary," and "Global Media & International Politics." But the former globetrotting journalist also offers special courses with the world as his classroom.

W. L. Gore remains Innovation leader

W. L. Gore & Associates, maker of GORE-TEX Fabric and thousands of other market-leading products, has earned a spot on Fast Company magazine's 2009 "Fast 50" list of the world's most innovative companies. Gore is ranked number 30. The complete list is available at FastCompany.com.

Gore, which began in 1958 as a wire and cable manufacturer, is a multi-billion dollar global leader in the fabrics, medical, industrial and electronic products markets. In addition to GORE-TEX Fabric, it is best known for such products as GLIDE Floss and ELIXIR Guitar Strings. The company is headquartered in Newark and employs more than 8,500 associates in nearly 50 facilities around the world.

"At Gore, we apply leading-edge materials technology to create innovative solutions for highly challenging applications. From our waterproof and breathable fabrics to our lifesaving medical devices, we make products that truly impact people's lives," said Jack Kramer, global technology leader at Gore. "For more than 50 years, our products have performed in demanding environments where failure is not an option. Innovation is core to our success, and it's an honor to earn recognition as one of the world's most innovative companies."

In its "Fast 50" list, Fast Company magazine highlights three of Gore's recent innovations — GORE OPTIFADE Concealment, a camouflage pattern engineered with a deer's vision system in mind; GORE inLIGHTEN Window Screens, a unique window screen made with an ultrafine material that makes it appear virtually invisible; and a yet-to-be-named technology that adds fire resistance to such materials as nylon and polyester while maintaining the performance and comfort of Gore's traditional outerwear.

"I need help rewiring my house. Who do I call?"

Over thirty-five electrical contractors are listed in the Cecil County yellow pages. But when asked, 92% of Cecil County residents couldn't name one.

Athey seeks 4th term as representative on City Council

David Athey, who is completing his third term as District 4 Representative on Newark City Council, has filed with the City Secretary's office to seek a fourth term.

In a release, Athey cites his experience gained in the six years he has been in office as a reason for his decision. He headed City Council oversight of the development of Newark's Comprehensive Development Plan. This included facilitating council workshops to gather statements from residents and work through implementation challenges. During the budget process in December, he helped craft a compromise that enabled funding for three additional police officers while maintaining competitive property tax and utility fee levels. He also led the initiative which resulted in an increase in speeding finances as part of an overall program to improve pedestrian and bicyclist safety.

Athey believes the biggest challenge will be providing the services Newarkers have come to expect within budgetary constraints. This will necessitate a detailed analysis of revenue sources and expenditures as well as the development of a long-term sustainable financial plan. While he acknowledges financial pressures may be a limitation, there are numerous action items from the Comprehensive Plan to be put into practice including environmental components of subdivision regulations and affordable housing programs. Finally, using his engineering background and public administration education, he plans to work with the City Manager in improving infrastructure maintenance and rehabilitation programs.
