UD returns to Philadelphia Flower Show

By MELISSA MARSHALL

NEWARK POST WRITER

The University of Delaware returned to the Philadelphia International Flower Show for the first time in close to 15 years, focusing on the theme of sustainability and won an award in the process.

The exhibit earned a special achievement award for creativity and design at the Flower Show, where it was displayed over the weekend. The show runs until March 13.

The effort was spearheaded by Jules Bruck, assistant professor of plant and soil sciences, and Jonathan Cox, instructor in art, the exhibit—designed as a Parisian flower shop in honor of the show's theme, "Springtime in Paris"—focused on sustainability issues, a concept that was earlier explored by Bruck in a 2010 Ag Day display.

"Our Ag Day display on rain harvesting, green roofs, and growing vegetables in home gardens and small spaces was so successful that we were encouraged to do the flower show," explained Bruck. "I knew it would be a great opportunity for students, so I said, 'let's give it a shot,'" she continued.

Starting in the summer of 2010, faculty, students and artists collaboratively worked on design ideas. Through discussing original concepts, constructing cardboard models and eventually to scale designs, students gained hands-on experience and insight into landscaping, horticultural and construction methods.

"The students had the opportunity to see the entire design process from start to finish," said Bruck. "They started to see how unique

Vacancy rate low on Main Street

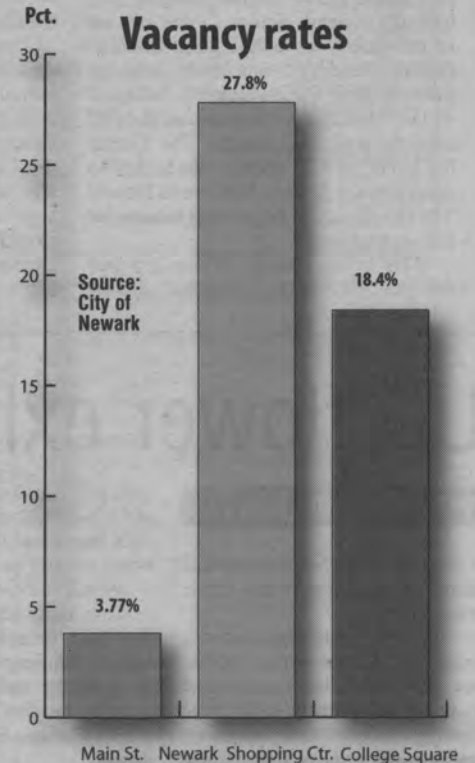

By DOUG RAINEY

DRAINEY@CHESPUB.COM

Vacancies are few and far between on Main Street, but it's a different story at a couple of shopping centers in Newark. That was the finding of a report from the city's Planning and Development Department. The report was issued after City Councilman Ezra Temko expressed concern about store vacancies in the city.

Vacancies on Main Street now stand at 3.77 percent out of 153 business spaces. The low rate of vacancies comes as investment has flowed into the city from mixed use developments that combine retail, student rentals and in one case office space. The city report noted that real

4 running for council seat

A lively race is shaping up for a seat on the Newark City Council. With only a few days to go before the filing deadline, four persons have filed for the District One seat being vacated by Paul Pomeroy. The district includes western areas of the city. According to the City Secretary's office, the four candidates are:

- Kevin Brown of the 900 block of Rahway Drive
 - Michael Conroy of the 100 block of Kinross Drive
 - Robyn Harland of Ethan Allen Court
 - Mark Moorhead of Swallow Circle.
- In addition, one candidate already withdrew from the race after deciding to take job with the city.

Pomeroy decided not to run again, citing increased job responsibilities and a desire to spend more time with his family. He is an executive with Wilmington-based advertising agency of Aloysius, Butler & Clark.

To date, no candidates have emerged for the seats now held by Councilmen Jerry Clifton, District 2 and Dave Athey, District 4.

The filing deadline for candidates is March 14 and the deadline for registering to vote is March 18. The election is scheduled for April 12.

Senior Center offering volunteer service trips

Seven members of the Newark Senior Center (NSC) made a trip to the Ronald McDonald House last week for a morning of volunteer service. The members met at the Center in the morning and took the Newark Senior Center bus up to the facility in Wilmington. In addition to spending a few hours cleaning their facility, the volunteers delivered 19,000 tabs that were collected at NSC over the past few months. The Center has collected 1.25 million tabs to date to donate to the Ronald McDonald House. The tab collection helps raise money for the organization.

This is the second service trip that the Newark Senior Center has coordinated in the last five months. The first trip was at the end of October when 10 volunteers spent a day helping the Sussex County Habitat for Humanity do some of the finishing work on one of their houses.

University of Delaware graduate student Ann Homer coordinated the trips as part of her internship at the Center. "This is a great way for members to learn about volunteer opportunities outside of the Center or just volunteer occasionally when they have some free time", says Jessica Feinberg, Development Coordinator for NSC. Members of the Center are already asking when the next trip will be.

estate broker and developer Emory Hill estimates that the average vacancy rate in downtown is 8.2 percent.

It was a somewhat different story at shopping centers that are showing their age. According to the city report, Newark Shopping Center has a nearly 28 percent vacancy rate, with College Square at 18.4 percent. Other vacancy figures for shopping centers are: Fairfield Shopping Center, on New London Road below 7 percent; Park 'N Shop, Elkton Road, nearly 19 percent; and Suburban Plaza on Elkton Road, below 7.5 percent. The real estate firm of Colliers International reports vacancy rates for neighborhood centers in the region run about 11.5 percent, with national figures from Reis, Inc. estimating the national figure at 10.9 percent.

In the report, Planning and Development Director Roy Lopata noted that vacancy rates tend to be highest in the early months of the year, since business owners make decisions on staying open around the peak holiday season. Lopata also noted that the figures do not include store spaces that are leased, but are not occupied.

While the vacancy rates at a couple of neighborhood shopping centers are uncomfortably high, Lopata noted that discussions have taken place with the owners of Newark Shopping Center and Park 'N Shop regarding future full-scale redevelopment of both properties.

The vacancy and condition of the Newark Shopping Center have been the topic of discussion by City Council members in recent years, with periodic talk of redevelopment of the large property and no plans coming forward. The issue of customers being towed from Newark Shopping Center has been addressed, with the council passing an ordinance aimed at limiting "predatory towing" and by a revised policy by management of the shopping center.

Little news has been reported at College Square, which indirectly ended up being one of the campaign issues brought up by Senate candidate Christine O'Donnell last year. In her unsuccessful effort to seek the seat, O'Donnell spoke at the Republican offices at the shopping center, pointing to the large number of vacancies in the area as evidence of a poor economy.

UD flower exhibit dubbed a success

it is to change your conceptual ideas as you transform them into reality."

Not only were the students exposed to real-world skills, but they were also encouraged to think about sustainable gardening—most notably rain-harvesting—a process that Bruck sees as an easy way for homeowners to both conserve water and protect the environment.

"Water conservation and rain harvesting is an important concept as so much water laced with pollutants gets washed into our sewer systems," said Bruck. "It's important to keep as much water on-site as possible."

Bruck advocates rain harvesting methods such as placing rain barrels under down spouts, underground cisterns, or grading rainwater toward a rain garden composed of plants that can handle wet conditions.

In addition to a focus on eco-friendly gardening, their exhibit—of course—also displayed dozens of flowers. Greenhouse leader Chris Rocco, a senior in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and April Starkey, also a senior, worked to grow more than 30 different types of cultivars including three different types of tulips.

Attracting more than 250,000 visitors annually, the Philadelphia International Flower Show is the largest indoor flower show in the world, providing a valuable platform for university students and faculty to exhibit their innovative work. Bruck hopes to revisit the venue next year.

"We would like to do it next year if we can make it sustainable," she explained. "This year we had wonderful donations from alumni; however, the largest time-consuming factor for the faculty was fundraising. If we can secure a budget for next year, we can work it into our courses in advance and ensure that our students have a really great experience," she continued.

"When we stepped back to look at the final project, we high-fived, and the students said, 'We're going to get best of show.' And I said, 'We don't need an award, we did great.' Overall it was a phenomenal experience for everyone."

Safe taken from residence

Newark Police are investigating a residential robbery that was reported last Tuesday from a homeowner on Westfield Drive, Newark.

The resident told officers that a small safe had been taken from its hiding spot in the house. The safe contained over $10,000 in cash, several birth certificates, and a number of painkillers.

The owner said that she uses the safe because she lives with two other people who rent bedrooms from her and that some of the medication has gone missing "here and there."

Both renters agreed to have their premises searched, which produced negative results. No other persons of interest have been named in this crime, but police are still questioning the owner and neighbors.

Strong arm robbery

Newark Police are investigating a strong arm robbery early Saturday morning.

On March 5, at 1:06 a.m., a Newark Police Officer on patrol was flagged down at the North Chapel Street entrance to Newark Shopping Center. The victim advised the officer that he was walking off of North Chapel Street into the shopping center when he was grabbed from behind by the suspect.

The suspect then reached into the victim's pocket, removed his wallet and then threw the victim to the ground. The suspect then fled on foot with the victim's wallet and was last seen running north-bound on North Chapel Street. The suspect was described as an 18-22 year-old white male, 5'8" to 5'10", average build wearing a black hoodie and blue jeans. The victim, a 21 year-old white male, sustained minor abrasions and lacerations to his left knee.

Pair of assaults could have same suspect

Last Saturday, officers were dispatched in response to a pair of assault reports where the main suspect could be linked to the two instances.

The first report occurred at Haines Street and Lovett Avenue where a pair of victims said that three white males had approached them as they were walking back to their dorm room at the University of Delaware. One of the suspects accused the victims of harassing some girls at a party. The victims said they didn't want any trouble and continued walking home. One of the suspects, described as 6' tall, wearing jeans and no shirt, sporting a military style, crew cut haircut, and with a very athletic build, started hitting one of the victims in the side of the head. A second suspect joined in the fracas and hit the second victim. One victim suffered a swollen left eye, while the other had a severe bloody nose.

One of the other suspects was described as 5'9" tall, wearing jeans, a St. Patrick's Day hat and Mardi Gras beads.

The third suspect was seen as having long brown hair and wearing jeans.

After the initial contact, all three suspects fled behind some houses at the intersection.

A short time later, a second assault report was made in the parking lot at Trader's Alley, 165 E. Main St. The victim, a 24-year-old Newark resident, said that he had passed a trio of white males while going to the lot. One of the suspects, described as 6' tall, wearing jeans and no shirt, sporting a military style, crew cut haircut, and with a very athletic build, ran after the victim and hit him in the face, causing his glasses to fall to the ground. The muscular suspect took the glasses and walked away, with the other suspects, to Main Street turning onto S. Chapel Street and heading towards E. Delaware Ave.

The police have named no suspects at this time, but are putting together a photo lineup for the victims of both incidents. Traffic camera footage is also being reviewed in anticipation of the second occurrence being captured on film.

Cheerleaders harassed

University of Delaware Police are seeking the public's help in identifying three high-school- or college-age males who were outside the Bob Carpenter Center on the afternoon of Sunday, Feb. 27, while a cheerleading competition was under way.

Three competition participants were approached outside the building by the three young men who started talking to them and then offered them money to take off their uniforms. The participants said they were upset and scared, and ran away from the men in the parking lot.

The suspects, all white males, did not appear to have wristbands that would have admitted them to the competition, and the victims said they had not seen them inside the building.

The first suspect is described as bald with a black leather jacket and jeans; the second had long black shoulder-length hair and a long beard; and the third had curly brown hair and was wearing a black hoodie.

UD Police have released a surveillance image of a person of interest who may have been with the group.

Anyone with information about the suspects is asked to contact University of Delaware Police at (302) 831-2222. The photo is available at udel.edu or newarkpostonline.com.

Woman accused of stealing from student

New Castle County Police have arrested Heike Clouse, 46, female of the unit block of Dempsey Drive in the community of Green Leaf Manor in the Newark area.

Clouse

She has been arrested for felony theft and a related offense after it was discovered that she was taking money from the victim's bank account and also had forged her name on numerous checks.

Over the past week detectives have been investigating a theft complaint that indicated the victim had $30,000 removed from her bank account. It was learned that the 17-year-old victim is from Germany and attending school in the area and was using the money to pay for her education.

Detectives discovered that the victim met her roommate, who is also from Germany, in the summer of 2009 when she was living here and participating in a student exchange program. The suspect (Clouse) allowed the victim to live with her as she is currently attending school.

Officer First Class Scott Crum and Detective Troy Mayer discovered that Clouse had gained access into the victim's bank account and was forging her name on the victim's checks. Clouse was using the money for personal items, to make mortgage payments, car payments, along with paying her other bills. It was also learned that the victim did not authorize any of the transactions.

Clouse was arrested last evening and has been charged with the following crimes:

- Felony Theft
- Forgery in the Second Degree

She has been arraigned and released on $10,000 unsecured bail.

TED DAY, PASTOR

Campus Edge project will be an asset to Newark

Last week, the Newark Planning Commission voted by a 4-3 margin to recommend the proposed Campus Edge project. The multi-million dollar student housing and retail project is proposed for a site on Delaware Avenue adjacent to the TD Bank branch. It should be noted that developers plan to configure the apartments so the units could one day be converted to non-student uses.

To no one's surprise, the discussion focused on the scale of the four-story project and details related to parking for the complex that would be adjacent to Trader's Alley, a small retail complex off Main Street that often has no parking available. Commission members, including Vice Chairman Ralph Begleiter, had ideas of their own on how the project should be configured.

Over the years, there has been a considerable amount of discomfort over the fact that Newark seems to be getting more mid-rise projects that according to critics change the small town feel of the city. Those attitudes were clearly in evidence when it came to the University of Delaware Bookstore, now under construction on Main Street.

The fact of the matter is that for owners to make the numbers work, more than a couple of stories are necessary. When developers step forward and come up with a design that goes beyond the fortress-like appearance of many mixed use complexes in the city, it is a cause for celebration.

The Delaware Avenue site, like the bookstore tract, presents similar challenges, but based on the renderings and presentations at the meeting Campus Edge has a great deal going for it, starting with the architecture, which obviously draws inspiration from the University of Delaware. The project would clearly be an asset to the Delaware Avenue area.

In the next few weeks, some tweaking will go on and if something resembling the plans presented last week emerges, it will richly deserve to be approved by City Council. This is an interesting and potentially exciting way to redevelop an area that otherwise is likely to fall victim to one more look-alike rental complex.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's Out of the Attic item is an undated photograph circa the 1950's of the north side of East Main Street facing west from a point in front of the Wilmington Trust Bank. Neighbors Pharmacy shows the "modern" commercial front on an existing house with residential use above. The State Restaurant next door is a modern front extension to the historic Bank of Newark Building. Continuing west, the first awning is the Newark News Stand and the next two awnings are on the National 5 & 10. These two businesses started in the 1930's and although their facades have changed over three quarters of a century, they continue in business in the second decade of the 21st century. A close look at many of the buildings between the UD campus and Tyre Avenue (especially viewed from the back) show them to still be houses with commercial fronts.

Visit the Newark History Museum located at the historic passenger train station on South College Avenue. The museum will be open through March by appointment for groups, individuals, and special events. Call 368-9845 for arrangements. The Newark Historical Society invites donations or loans of objects, stories, pictures and other artifacts of places, activities, people, and life styles in the Greater Newark Area for its permanent collections.

An academic scholarship for Newark baseball standout

By JON BUZBY

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

Most high school student-athletes are as focused on their batting or scoring averages as they are their grade point averages, figuring the former might open as many, if not more, doors than the latter.

But Newark resident Lincoln Lambertson's commitment to hitting the books as hard as he hit baseballs during his four years at Salesianum has resulted in a special door being opened for the multi-talented senior ... and it's painted Carolina blue.

Lambertson, a stellar student and All-State baseball player, found out Thursday afternoon that he has been selected as a recipient of the Morehead-Cain scholarship from the University of North Carolina.

"I'm really excited about the opportunity to continue my education at the University of North Carolina," Lambertson said shortly after receiving an e-mail notifying him of his selection. "The sense of school spirit and the passion for learning that I got from the students during my visit there are things I'm really looking forward to when I enroll for the fall semester."

According to the Morehead-Cain website, the program offers the oldest and most prestigious merit scholarship in the country. It provides recipients the opportunity to attend UNC for four years, including four summer enrichment programs. The scholarship is fully funded and covers full tuition, student fees, housing, meals, books, a laptop, travel, supplies and other miscellaneous materials.

"This scholarship is more than four years of academic study at a prestigious university," his mother, Jill Lambertson, said. "It gives Lincoln great opportunities to explore the world, and grow in ways that might otherwise not be open for him. He'll meet each challenge with the character and humility of a gentleman and make the most of it. And of course, I will proudly applaud his success with unending love and admiration."

Thousands of students apply each year for the scholarship, and then the finalists are flown in for an all-expenses-paid long weekend in Chapel Hill, termed "Finals Weekend," when the students go through a round of interviews, tour the campus and learn more about the many academic programs the school has to offer. This year there were 118 finalists, and from that pool 60 were selected to receive the scholarship.

"Since I had a 50 percent chance going in and given that I thought my interviews went fairly well, I thought I had a decent shot. But there was still doubt in the back of my mind," Lambertson said. "The other finalists I met during my time at Chapel Hill were so talented and had such impressive resumes that all of them were certainly deserving of receiving the award."

Lambertson defines the term student-athlete. He was ranked seventh out of 263 Sallies students at the end of his junior year and last season was named to the second team All-State baseball team as a designated hitter.

"It is not a shock to me at all to see Lincoln get this award because he is always striving for excellence in all that he does," Salesianum baseball coach Ted Godfrey said. "His character, attitude, and work ethic are off the charts and I can't say enough positive comments about this young Salesianum gentleman."

Lambertson, who plans to double-major in business and political science at UNC, says he will not play baseball because "the talent level is so high." Not playing sports will be something new for Lambertson, who grew up in Newark and first played organized sports at the Western YMCA before moving on to play ice hockey for the Junior Blue Hens and baseball at Canal Little League and Christ the Teacher Catholic School. He was the starting catcher on Canal's 2005 Major League All-Star team that won the state championship and advanced to the Mid-Atlantic Regional Tournament in Bristol. The past two summers he played American Legion baseball for Post 10.

He'll finish his baseball career this spring at Salesianum, receive his diploma, and then pack his bags for his first summer enrichment program. He says he'll miss playing baseball and played more than played at the college level in the right situation. However, the student mind of this student-athlete realizes there's more to life than playing sports, and in fact, a life to prepare for beyond his playing days.

"It will be great to come out of college debt-free," he said. "This was too good of an opportunity to pass up."

student body widely felt the two would make a wonderful couple, which, for 65 years, they did.

In 1949 the Mitchells moved from New Hampshire to Delaware, where they raised their two children and where Carolyn taught English for more than 20 years at Newark Senior High School. Upon their retirement they moved back to New Hampshire, settling in West Lebanon. They were members of the West Lebanon Congregational Church. They volunteered for the Lebanon Senior Center Meals on Wheels program, and also volunteered at Sacred Heart Elementary School where Carolyn was delighted to share her love of reading with grade school children.

Carolyn is survived by her husband,

Bill, her son Perry and his wife Brenda of Flagstaff, Arizona, her daughter Mary and husband Ray of Thetford, five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Calling hours were held Wednesday, March 9, at Ricker Funeral Home in Lebanon, NH. A memorial service will be held at the West Lebanon Congregational church later this month. Donations may be made in Carolyn's memory to the West Lebanon Congregational Church or to the Lebanon Senior Center's Meals on Wheels program. Online condolences can be left for the family at www.rickerfuneralhome.com.

Ronald Nagle

Ronald I. Nagle, 78, of Bethany Beach, formerly of Wilmington, died peacefully surrounded by his loving family on Sunday, February 27, at Maris Grove in Glen Mills, PA.

Ron was born on October 15, 1932 in Boyertown, PA, son of the late Irwin and Mabel (Sorg) Nagle. He graduated from Newark High School, Class of 1950, and the University of Delaware, Class of 1956. He was a member of Theta Chi Fraternity, where he served as president. Ron worked as an insurance executive for Johnson and Higgins for over thirty years, until his retirement. A season ticket holder for close to 50 years, Ron was an avid University of Delaware Football fan.

He will be dearly missed by his wife of 48 years, Anne Robben Nagle; son, Michael, his wife Jennifer (Ondik), and their children, Shannon and Matthew; son, Daniel, his wife Pamela (Lyons), and their son, Connor; and his many life-long friends.

Visitation was held on Wednesday, March 2 at Mealey Funeral Home, 2509 Limestone Road, Wilmington and on Thursday morning at St. John the Beloved Church, 907 Milltown Road, Wilmington. Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated on Thursday morning at St. John the Beloved Church. Interment was private.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests contributions to the Little Sisters of the Poor, 185 Salem Church Road, Newark, DE 19713. To send an online condolence, please visit mealeyfuneralhomes.com/
