everything that is not an absolute necessity.

On the morning when the writer and her family departed for a summer of auto rambling, an intimate and lovable neighbor invited them for a farewell breakfast. As they sat consuming innumerable griddlecakes and golden maple sirup the guest thought of the waiting car with its compact equipment and casually remarked, "Before we leave, you must see our car all packed for the summer." This remark evidently suggested to the neighbor a most disgested to the neighbor a most dis-tressing mental picture, for she ven-tured commiseratingly, "Well, I'm sure it couldn't look any worse than ours when we motored from Ne-braska to Georgia." For a fraction of a second the enthusiast was nonplused, but politeness restrained her from boasting of the virtues of the pack. An idea of its comfortable pack. An idea of its comfortable simplicity, however, may be gained when it is said that from the time the family gets up in the morning until the car is packed—a period which includes washing, dressing, cooking and eating a hearty breakfast, washing dishes and packing the equipment on the car, all without undue haste—is just two hours.

The Sea Language

A lady of our acquaintance was once introduced to an old sea captain in this manner: "Captain S—, I wonder if you have ever met my sister, Miss G—?" The old man smiled graciously, but as he extended his hand, he drawled: "No, I believe I've never run afoul o' her before." It was delightful. Even in lower Delaware, especially along the Indian River, a generation or two ago, at least one man from many of the families "followed the water." And they brought home the sea language, appropriate and unusual. A pretty girl was "pretty as a yacht," or, "pretty as a steamboat"; a term of scorn was "a landlubber." When they went from home, if only for a few miles, "they set sail"; when they returned, they "came to port." Open dealing was "dome on deck," underhand work, "in the galley." One hears less and less of such expressions and we can sympathize with the plea of the New York Times:

"Sailors of the old school lament the passing of the ancient and honorable art of navigation. Your modern steamer gets her

"Sailors of the old school lament the passing of the ancient and honorable art of navigation. Your modern steamer gets her position and weather predictions by radio, and the mechanically controlled wheel needs no helmsman. A sailor need be no more skillful than a landlubber in the use of a sextant.

"Worse yet, the very language of the sea is disappearing. Seamen speak of their ship as if she were a hotel. The crews no longer talk of going aft or forward, an officer on the Aquitania is quoted as saying, but say they are going to the front or to the end of the ship. Right and left are used instead of starboard and post, and they go outside instead of going on deck. A woman passenger asked a steward if he had seen her husband, and he replied, 'Yes, mum; he. just gone up on the roof.'

"Apparently, stewards are recruited from among bell-hops and sailors from college boys. Something ought to be done to save the picturesque old sea terms. Tourist agencies might have classes in nautical talk, and ask travelers to pass an examination before receiving a passport. Then passengers could be counted on the language of the ald salts and robband with her before the traffic at the correct of the safety of the school. A place where all the girls and boys of Newark, regardles of age or grade, may have full opportunity of developing the traffic of grades of the school. ### Grade Crossings

An editorial spokesman for the railroads asserts that the An editorial spokesman for the railroads asserts that the elimination of grade crossings would call for an expenditure of a luge sum and make necessary a raise of rates to meet the additional expense. Such changes, he points out, represent an outlay of capital upon which no return can be expected. But does not the growing list of damage suits faced by the railroads on account of crossing accidents, the difficulty of maintaining scheduled speed and the wear and tear on the nerves of engineers, represent a serious charge against the railroads? Conditions of modern traffic are such that elimination of the grade crossing appears to be growing imperative.

PROF. OWENS GOES TO FEDERALSBURG
Professor James Herbert Owens, of Baltimore, was recently appointed by the school board of Caroline County, Maryland, as principal of the Federalsburg High School, and has accepted the post. He will succeed Professor Benjamin C. Willis, who was be growing imperative.

The plea is made that more intensified campaigns for safety will eliminate grade crossing accidents, but if anyone believes some classes of drivers can be taught caution he is a true optimist. Grade changes are costly and inconvenient, but if railroads were being constructed now and with a view to modern traffic conditions they would no more think of permitting grade crossings than they would of running the track down a congested street. The question of grade crossing accidents is one with which the Federal government will soon be called upon to deal.—Every Evening. Evening.

The Latest In Bird Nests

There is a dear little white haired lady in our town who de-lights in tatting. She sits and "tats" and "tats" and sits, while the rest of us rave over her dainty handiwork. Of course, each piece is prized by her fortunate friends and members of her family. The articles are exhibited, used, laundarticles are exhibited, used, laundered and carefully packed away. No stain is allowed to remain on a single piece. And thereby hangs the tale.

A tatted doily became soiled and was washed and put on the grass in the sunshine to bleach. A mis-in the sunshine to bleach. A mischievous wind blew it away so that it could not be found by sharp-eyed seekers. Its loss was mourned and the little lady straightway tatted another doily.

A year passed by. A neighbor's small grandson found an old bird's nest under the caves of his grandfarther's house, and brought it down. It was beautifully and wonderfully made. But what a deciver that nest builder had been!

Did he or she think to impress birddom with the latest thing in nests? For the foundation of the structure was a tatted doily and the usual nest-building materials were woven cleverly in and out among its lacy meshes. It was soiled beyond reclaiming with suds or sunshine, but was still firm and strong as when finished by the little lady's hands.

Here's the Way to Carve Ham

With summertime here it is appropriate that he take a lesson in carving the meats now in favor. Here is the to carve ham.

The methods of carving ham vary with the way it is to be served. If the ham is not to be brought whole to the table, the simplest and most economi-cal way to carve it is to begin at the end and cut in thin slices on each side of the bone. If the ham is to be carved at table and if the desire is to serve the choice portions at once, an incision is made through the thickest part. a little way from the small end. The ham is then shaved off in very the slice. The brife must be very thin slices. The knife must be very sharp to make a thin slice. Each slice should be served with a portion of the fat with its crisp crust. This method is the same as that for carving a leg of lamb except that the slices of lamb

Cheese Dessert

SALADS

"Salad" in this story dosen't mean a stringy leaf of lettuce with a slice or two of cucumber on it, such as one would serve with a regular dinner, but a hearty, luxurious course that forms the main dish of a meal, suffi-ciently substantial in itself so that the addition of a cup of tea or coffee will make of it a complete and satisfying repast. Hot date biscuit or whole wheat raisin bread are particularly happy combinations.

There are three good and sufficient reasons why salads should appear ofon hot weather menus. First, appetite; second, their fruit and vege-table content is conductive to health, and third, they give the housewife freedom for more pleasant things.

The keepers of the hotels at the Falls of Niagara publish a card dated the 4th inst. in which they announce their intention on the 8th of the ensuing month to set adrift the largest sail vessel on Lake Erie a mile above the great Falls. It is to have on board "a number of the hardiest animals, such as bears, wolves, etc., that can be obtained from the countries bordering on Lake Huron and Michigan."

They proceed to say "when the vessel is put adrift the animals will be unservised by the standard of the standard of the shing pier as far as the First-Aid shing pier as far as the First-Aid shing pier as far as the First-Aid

Cattle Show To Be Big Feature At Fair

Number Of Cash Prizes Have Been Offered For Best Animals

One of the most attractive groups of exhibits that will feature the Wilmington Fair at Elsmere September 5 to 10, will be that devoted to cattle Jerseys, Guernseys, and Holstein Freisians will compete for cash prizes pecferation of Independence, July 4 and ribbons and there will also be a 1777, John Paul Jones hoisted the contest for grade classes limited to newly-created national emblem on his residents of Delaware, and adjoining counties in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia.

A. E. Tomhave, the cattle expert of the University of Delaware, is super-intendent of the cattle department and this means that it will be first class in every particular. All of the cattle exhibited must be tuberculin tested within ninety days prior to the fair. The entries close on August 20 and all animals must have been owned by the exhibitor 60 days previous to the fair.

In the individual classes there are ash prizes for bull three years or over, bull two years to three, senior yearling bull, junior yearling bull, senior calf bull; cow three years or over, cow two to three, senior yearheifer. junior yearling heifer, of bull under two years, two heifers one year old and two heifers under one year. In the Get of Sire class the group consists of four animals of

In the individual classes the regulation and ages are the same as the Jerseys, and the same group prizes are offered as in the Jersey classes. The same regulations and ages prevail in the individual and group classes for Holstein-Friesian cattle. In all three of the classes ribbons are offered for senior and junior champion bull, senior and junior champion female and for grand champion bull and grand champion

In the grade classes cash prizes are ffered for the best grade cow over four years, for the best grade cow be-tween three and four years, for the best grade cow between two and three years, for the best grade heifer under one year and also over one year. Ribbons are offered for the senior champion cow, junior champion cow, and for the grand champion cow.

All breeds must compete with each other, there being no separate classes.

The judging of Jerseys will be on Tuesday, Guernseys on Wednesday, and Holstein-Friesians on Thursday.

gation of the question, issued a statement that the Stars and Stripes flag was flown in battle at the defense of Fort Schuyler, Au-gust, 1777. However, after a more exhaustive study of the question the conclusion was reached in May, 1927, that the flag used by the Americans at that time and place was not the Stars and Stripes. Those studies also led to the conclusion that the flag then and there used was a form of flag that had been used by some units of the American Army previously to June 14, 1777, the time of the adoption by Congress of the design of the Stars and Stripes. It appears, as a result of those studies, that the flag used by the Americans at the fort in question in August, 1777, while it hore strines, hore no stars. while it bore stripes, bore no stars This is the present view and holding of the War Department.
I find on inquiry that a War Department press notice issued July 16, 1927, repeated the announcement on this question that was issued a year previously, the fact of the new onclusion of May, 1927, being over-looked. This accounts for the re-cent press story to which you refer and which you will see from the foregoing is erroneous. A new press notice, dated July 19, 1927, is being disseminated by this Denartment. disseminated by this Department correcting the error of July 16.

Sincerely yours,

POULTRY SCHOOL AT HOCKESSIN

The Hockessin Poultry School will be held August 22 and 23 in the Hockessin School House. The school is under the direction of the Extension Service of the University of Delaware. H. S. Palmer, Extension Poultryman, and R. O. Bausman, County Agricultural Agent, are giving their personal attention to the school. The following committee is now active in arranging the details for holding the school: Frank F. Yearsley, Joseph Pierson, Wilson T. Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Horace P. Dennison, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Woodward, James Jack-son, and W. C. Matthews.

The purpose of the school is to the farmers of New Castle county to learn the fundamental points in the judging and selection of poultry. This will enable them to use more accuracy in selecting their breeding stock and in culling out the inferior hens for the market. Twenty-five selected hens will be on exhibition. Through the use of these hens and with the aid of illustrated lectures, Mr. Palmer will personally conduct the two days of instruction.

Any one in New Castle county is eligible to enroll in the school. Those interested should compunicate with
