The vicarship of Cambridge is rich in historical associations. French troops landed there to help Colonel de la Farge on the Hudson River and the city of the town of the statesmen, business men, in its time home to many of the holy crowned by France and England.

One of the outstanding landmarks on the road between Wilmintgton and Conowingo is a huge oak, said to be one of the largest in the country. It stands near the original road and is a symbol of the past.

In order to reach this interesting section follow the Lancaster Turnpike through Hockessin, Avondale, Elkton and vicinity. Stop at the last home of the late H. O. DeLancey, son of the late John DeLancey, and a member of the family for many years. Staying in Elkton a visit to the museum is a must.

First Editorial of The Newark Post

The name of this paper is THE NEWARK POST. It is to be a paper for Newark, the seat of Morris County, New Jersey. I have always had a desire for this kind of work. Not that I have any particular views to promote, not that I have any friends to have not that I have any enemies to score. I just want to do it.—I want to have a paper and to do the best possible work on it. I want to be known as a good writer and a good editor. I want to be a friend to all who live here. And so I will not expect much real help from your enemies. I want to make the town and country better.

I shall fail many times but want to conduct it. I shall not give up but want to continue. I shall be as brave as I am rich or poor. As I am brave, I will go ahead and try to do the best possible work on it. I shall not think a rose would grow.

—OUR MOTTO.
