Snowflakes

Snowflakes,
Dear little snowflakes;
See them flutter by;
They will not even stop
To say good-by.

Franklin Selling Ballads

The picture shows Benjamin Franklin selling Ballads on the streets of Boston, Mass. He worked for his brother James in a printing shop. When he was not busy he wrote poems. His brother put some of the best ones in his newspapers. Benjamin felt very happy when he sold papers that had his poems in them.

Charles E. Mills painted a picture of Benjamin as he looked when he sold those papers.

Music Appreciation Hour, January 13, 1933

I liked the "Thunderstorm" from Overture to William Tell best. I think the composer, Rossini, had a lot of fun writing the words to the music. I have heard it at one of the organ recitals at Mitchell Hall. It was played by Firmin Swinnen.

I think Mr. Damosch chose the "Thunderstorm" because it showed the use of percussion instruments and because he thought the children would like it.

Mary E. Daugherty, Grade 4.

Wise Sayings of Franklin

- These are some of the many wise sayings found in "Poor Richard's Almanac."
1. God helps them who help themselves.
 2. What ever begun in anger ends in shame.
 3. Lost time is never found.
 4. A false friend and a shadow attend only while the sun shines.
 5. Eat to live, and don't live to eat.
 6. Beware of little expenses; a small leak may sink a big ship.
 7. Lying rides upon debt's back.
 8. There are no gains without pains.
 9. Be ashamed to catch yourself idle.
 10. The borrower is a slave to the lender.
 11. Never leave 'till tomorrow what can be done today.
 12. Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon over takes it.

The program closed with a group of trumpet and guitar duets played by Edward and Holton Hurlock.

National Thrift Week

There is a national organization to promote thrift in the United States and the week beginning with January 17, is set aside as "National Thrift Week." During this annual "drive" the benefits of saving and careful spending are impressed by means of newspaper and magazine articles, lectures and radio broadcasts by leading economists and bankers.

What We Have Done In English This Year

First we learned what English does for us and became familiar with our test book.

First we read several stories under stories in verse, some were, "Prisoner of Chillian," "Sohrab and Rustum," "Ulysses," "Enoch Arden" and "Atlantis Race," which were all very interesting. Next we took up stories in prose under which we read "Quenton Durward."

We then studied two authors, Hawthorne and Scott and stories written by them. Downes' "Wooden Image," and "Dr. Heidegger's Experiment," two very interesting stories written by Hawthorne. We then read of one of the few earlier women authors who went under the name of George Eliot but whose right name was Mary Evans.

Then the study of grammar was taken up, first, theme building and why and is dangerous next, avoiding "so," suggestion for themes then avoiding "but."

After this we began the long, interesting study of "Silas Marner," by George Elliot.

The last phase has been the study of short story under which comes "The Fall of The House of Usher," and "The Purlioned Letter."

Under these leading things came library work, book report, and oral talks. In the whole term I think I and everyone else in the sophomore class have had a very interesting course.

Home Economic's Program Emphasizes Thrift Week

Friday, January 13, four members of Mrs. Hancock's eighth grade home economics class came to assembly dressed in white aprons and wearing head bands to explain to us exactly what they did in their cooking classes.

Jane Roberts, the first speaker, told us that their main text book was "Junior Food and Clothing." It is written like a story and contains many nice pictures. The class uses posters and charts. They have written work. Also tests and examinations.

The second speaker, Margaret Skumar, explained by means of posters and charts what type foods we should choose to build up our bodies. Milk and vegetables are the most important food stuffs.

Olive Stiltz told us that they learn other things besides cooking in their classes. For instance they learn to care for younger brothers and sisters, to care for their own rooms and to get rid of flies, bugs and mosquitoes. Good manners including how to set a table, how to wait on a table, how to entertain company, and how to introduce people to each other is also taught. Last but not least they are taught the use of soap.

Ethel Stephan said that in doing the things spoken of by the other girls they learn habits that will help them the rest of their lives.

Mary Moore, another member of the Home Economics class, told us a few ways that thrift is applied in Home Economics. First, in the use and selection of foods. Second, to buy foods wisely. Third, the care and use of clothing. Fourth, renovation in house furnishings and fifth, the proper use and care of equipment.

This program was, I am sure, appreciated by all girls and satisfied the curious thoughts of boys as to what goes on in the Home Economics classes.

The Home and That Boy of Yours

By F. H. CHELEY

NEVER PRESCRIBE WORK AS PUNISHMENT

AN OLD fashioned custom which should soon give way is the custom of punishing, disciplining with work.

"Very well then, my young dandy," says an aggrieved and affronted parent, "you failed to get home when you said you would, therefore, you may water the flowers, empty the ashes, cut up the kindling (if you are lucky enough to have any) and when that is finished, you can sponge off the car! A boy who simply cannot be depended upon must be made to suffer."

Superficially, it looks all right and has been, for some generations, a widely used custom, but it is wrong, just the same. On one hand we are earnestly desirous of growing a boy who will work, and who can work and who enjoys work, all of which is essential to his future success and happiness; then we promptly turn around and use work as a demerit, simply because it is an easy way to show our authority and vested power and incidentally get certain things done which have been neglected. Result, the boy is conditioned to believe that work is a misfortune, a pure bit of drudgery which must be tolerated. The joy of work is absolutely missing; the sense of partnership in carrying the home load is not even considered. The boy knows that he has to do what he is told or draw even worse punishment, so he goes at the job in ill humor, without the slightest bit of interest or enthusiasm for it, or without the slightest bit of satisfaction. The job is poorly done as quickly as possible and the letter of the demand filled but in bad spirit. The "curse of work" is upon him. He has learned to do just as little as he can possibly get by with and has learned that "toll" is the penalty for stolen pleasure. This job and all work are irksome.

Every boy should have as his share certain home chores which he should be proud and glad to carry through and will be if properly trained; but such a situation will be very hard to maintain when work and punishment are linked together in a boy's mind.

Above all things seek to get work well done for the joy and the interest of it. It will not be easy but it can be managed if not complicated by problems of discipline.

Exactly the same principle holds good at school. Extra work, especially in difficult or uninteresting subjects, should never be imposed as discipline. As early as possible, every boy should be helped to evolve for himself a philosophy of work. He should be helped by every possible means to come to realize that work is man's best friend and not a policeman or a punishment.

Some parents are able to deliberately create a job for the boy in the right environment where a boy is interested, learns some of the elements of business and earns a part or all of his spending money. Such a situation is ideal.

Alexander Hamilton Assembly Topic

Miss Gallaher's home room had charge of the assembly program for Wednesday, January 11. The main topic was Alexander Hamilton. Margaret McMullen gave a talk on Hamilton, as a world figure. Dorothy Powell then gave some of his characteristics and Anna Smith talked on "Hamilton's Dream of Industrial Protection."

Summary of First Semesters Work in 11th Grade English

Our introduction to this course was "Why We Study English." This was studied in detail. We then took up "English in Connection with Life." The English language and its correct usage is a means of expressing personality. All means of communication is made by language. The importance of "Creative Reading" was studied.

We were then introduced to our literature books by studying the table of contents and the form in which the book is written. The first thing taken up in our literature book was, "The Chivalric Age." Under this topic we read "Idylls of The King," by Tennyson. Tennyson wrote this to bring out the ideals of "the days of chivalry," which most people try to live up to in the present day. We then read "Romance in Modern Life," which is a group of more modern poems. The second topic was "Finding New Worlds."

this we studied, "The Discovery of Guiana," by Raleigh, and then "Travels With a Donkey," by Stevenson. We found these two selections very different, but both very interesting. We are now studying Shakespeare's play, "King Henry the Fifth," which comes under the third topic entitled "The National Ideal."

Along with the other literature work we had theme writing and some grammar.

A Summary of this Semester's Work in Physical Education

The physical education classes under the direction of Miss Johnson have made rapid progress due to the advantages supplied by the new gymnasium and locker rooms.

The entire semester work has been divided into units. During the first part of the semester the work was carried on out-of-doors, when the weather permitted by playing hockey and soccer. Hockey teams were organized for intermural games, which were played during the sixth period. These games included girls from grades eight to twelve. The seniors came out victorious and were awarded letters for their work.

The other units have been carried on inside because of the colder weather. The classes have been drilled in marching and exercises. Each girl has been examined in posture and individual cards have been made out showing her faults. Corrective exercises have been given in the classes which enables each girl to correct her posture in school as well as out of school.

To relieve the monotony of this routine simple dancing steps have been taught such as folk dances, clog, character, tap, etc. Mat work games have also been chosen from pyramids, tumbling and stunt walks.

Another interesting part of this semester's work has been the basketball games. Each class has been divided into teams, which are distinguished by a letter of the alphabet. Every day a game is played between these teams and the winner of one day's game plays the winner of another game. Teams for intermural games have also been chosen from grades seven to twelve. Some of these games are played during the sixth period and others in the evening as preliminaries.

All of this work completed this semester has proved interesting as well as beneficial and all classes are looking forward to the second semester's work.

First Semester Social Science Grade 9

The Social Science course of the Ninth grade conceives problems of American culture. The text book used in this course is entitled "An Introduction to Problems of American Culture," and is written by Harold Rugg.

During this semester we have studied the changes in family life, neighborhood life, social organizations in conditions of work and in security of employment, in government, in law enforcement, in what people read; in the formation of public opinion, in the history of the individual, in ways of business and selling, in leisure, in interests, customs and standards, and in population.

Each of these changes has had some visible effect on one or more of the other changes mentioned. One of the most important of these changes which helped to induce others was the growth of small towns into large cities.

Ninth Grade Home Economics

In Home Economics this year the ninth grade girls have worked for perfection in their work.

During September the girls canned fruits and made jellies and jams. Among these were spiced pears, grape conserve and grape jelly.

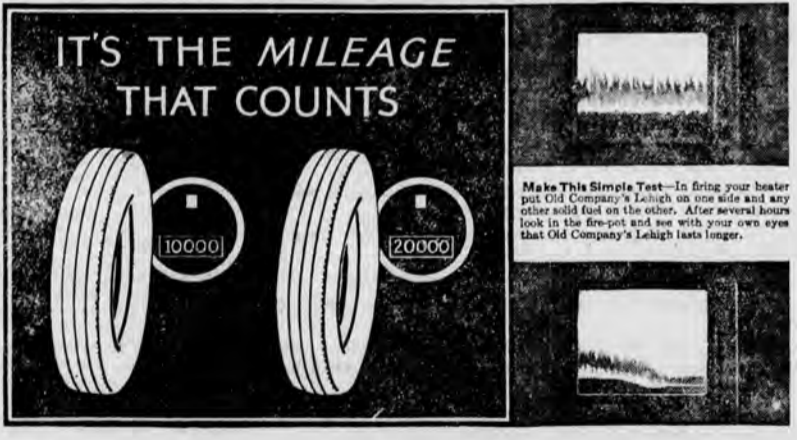

At the beginning of October we began work on white smocks for use in the laboratory. These were finished about the first of November. The average cost of these smocks was from seventy-five cents to a dollar.

After our smocks were finished we prepared breakfasts. We did not prepare many new dishes. Instead, we worked for perfection in the preparation of those we already knew how to prepare. Every week a breakfast was planned, cooked and served by members of the class.

The week before Christmas was

Small-Town Chambers of Commerce

"Small-Town Chambers of Commerce" is the subject of a radio talk to be given Sunday, January 22, from 7.00 to 7.15 p. m., Eastern standard time, by Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce of the United States. He will speak from Washington over the coast to coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Dr. Klein will uphold the view that students of business matters should not concentrate unduly upon the big industrial centers and money-marts of the country, but should also scrutinize with utmost care the conditions, sentiments, and efforts in the smaller communities. From the well-spring of small-town vigor and intelligence, the Assistant Secretary believes, potent forces for our business recovery are flowing, and are destined to gain in strength.

Dr. Klein will show how such forces find expression through the local newspapers, whether daily or weekly, and through active chambers of commerce in these smaller cities and towns. He will cite numerous instances in which such agencies have rendered remarkable service to their communities in combating unusual perplexities of the depression—overcoming grave local difficulties through energetic concerted effort. Urging that the small-town chambers of commerce be loyally supported, Dr. Klein will discuss their principles, problems, and possibilities for even broader usefulness in the future.

Do you have enough clothes to keep you

W A R M

On cold, bleak or raw days?

If so, you are more fortunate than some others in Newark

The Mayor's Central Welfare and Unemployment Committee are receiving Clothing, such as Coats, Pants, Overcoats, Underwear, etc., for those in Newark that do not have enough clothing to wear to keep warm. If you have any of the above articles to help the unfortunate call the Chairman or any member of the Committee and they will be called for, or send to Council Room or this office.
