Introduction. Though inconclusive evidence may suggest that Franklin owned a slave before 1745, the accounts prove that he did by the summer of 1745: on 14 Aug, Charles Moore charged Franklin 15.0. "To a Racoon hat for your Negro" and on 21 Dec Franklin paid Moore "To dressing a hat for your Negro." BF’s sister Elizabeth Douse appears, 14 Nov. On 12 Oct, BF bought the other half of a lot (site of the present 318 Market Street) from John Croker, the son-in-law of Sarah Read, Deborah’s mother. She had left half the lot (9 April 1734) jointly to her daughters Deborah Franklin and Frances Croker. Frances had died in 1740 and shortly after, John Croker moved to New York. Now Croker sold his half-interest to BF for £80. A receipt for 26 March leaves no mystery as to what Franklin paid for ground rent on his Arch Street property (see 1 Aug 1741): "Receiv’d of Benjamin Franklin Three Pounds, Seven Shillings, 3.7.0., which (with one Years Gazette) is in full for the Rent of his Lot between Arch Street & Appletree Alley to this Day per me, Christopher Thompson." Equally revealing is a receipt from Franklin’s partner, David Hall, "Receiv’d of Benj. Franklin at Sundry Times, Cash, Forty four Pounds to this Day, which with my Diet, &c. to the 20th of June past Twenty-Six pounds, makes in all, Seventy Pounds." Though Franklin seems never to have brought suit against anyone for outstanding debts, he did involve himself, albeit indirectly, in litigation on 9 Dec: "Receiv'd of Benjamin Franklin on Account of Richard Pitts (for whom I was special Bail in a Suit commenc'd against said Pitts by Mr. Hodge,) the Sum of Fifteen Pounds, in full Discharge of what was promis’d me by said Franklin on sd Pitt's Account." The printer Andrew Bradford had died on 24 Nov 1742, and his widow and executrix Cornelia Bradford settled his account with BF on 1 Feb 1744/5. BF sold printing equipment (5 Aug, “Mend’g Comp’s; and 2 Sept, ballstocks) to Jonas Green of Annapolis. And the German printer Armbruster first appears in the accounts on 5 May.

Imprints. At his own risk, Franklin published George Armstrong’s Art of Preserving Health: A Poem (Miller 367), and began selling copies by 12 June (Evans). Other sales are recorded on 15 and 27 June and two (Read and Smith) on 2 July. He gambled on a printing of the new testament in 1745, selling hundreds of copies on 28 June to his New York partner James Parker. BF did a reciprocal business with the Boston bookseller Joshua Blanchard. In the entry (9 July) noting that he sent 500 unbound Testaments to Blanchard, BF recorded that Blanchard sent him 96 copies of Ebenezer and Ralph Erskins’ Collection of Sermons (Miller B38). BF returned a dozen of the latter on 20 May 1747. He revised the rambling introduction to Dr. Thomas Cadwalader’s Essay on the West-Indian Dry-Gripes (Miller 369) and printed the pamphlet by 17 May, when he sold a copy to Dr. Patrick Bard for 1.6, the advertised price. On 25 May, Gov. George Thomas bought a copy for 1.8, probably one specially bound. BF gave Cadwalader himself a special price for 20 copies on 8 June--1.15.0. And BF sold 50 to his partner James Parker at the reduced price of one shilling apace.

BF paid the engraver Thomas Leech for “Cutts” on 25 June. I suspect the cuts were the "Plan of the Town and Harbour of Louisburgh," which appeared in the Pennsylvania Gazette for 6 June, the first illustrated news event in American journalism. As usual, near the end of the year, Franklin did a booming almanac business with other printers and booksellers. On 28 Nov, he sent 300 Poor Richards to Fleet in Boston; 500 to his sister-in-law Ann Franklin in Newport (but these were gifts); 200 Poor Richards and 100 pocket almanacs to Jonas Green in Annapolis; 50 pocket almanacs to his partner James Parker in New York; 100 pocket almanacs to William Parks in Williamsburg; and on 3 Dec, he sent 200 Poor Richards to Parker in New York. In addition, numerous sales of small numbers of Poor Richards were recorded. The Pennsylvania Assembly paid Franklin £185.8.4 for "Paper and Printing the last Bills of Credit" (Miller 361, but not recorded in Miller); and "per Order, £62.1.2, and for Postage of public Packets, £11.10.0" (23 Aug). As Clerk of the House and for printing the votes, etc, he was paid 31.16.0; and for sending expresses to Virginia and Maryland, 24.5.0 (7 Sept).

Miller A198 recorded only one job printing, 200 warrants for William Parsons (10 May). It seems unlikely that Franklin did not do as many job printings on credit in this and the following years as he had done earlier, but only one is recorded for this year; one for 1746, and two for 1747. On the other hand, for the years 1730 through 1745, 185 job prints are recorded, an average of more than 12 per year. I suspect that in late 1744 or in 1745, Franklin began recording the job printings in a separate register. (See also introduction to 1747 for evidence tending to confirm this hypothesis.)

The Shop. Unusual items Franklin sold in 1745 include: a "Drop for an Earring" (8 January), a "Bar[re]l Fish" (14 January), two bar[re]ls apples (6 Feb), "Brass Rule 20 Foot" (7 Feb), whalebone (5 Aug), a "Sh[or]t Cloak" (31 Oct), a lock (1 Nov), and a clock (21 Nov). The only interesting item Franklin received in barter came from "Sister Ann Franklin" on 14 Aug, when she received 13.5.4. credit for a ram. He continued to help her and his nephew James Franklin not only by sending them hundreds of copies of his almanac but in this year by sending them paper and pastboard for printing and binding from the papermaker Thomas Wilcox (18 and 20 May). A puzzle occurs in an entry for 14 Feb: "Matthias Harris, Esq., Dr. Black Gimp Pd. Cash for 16.0." It seems that Harris paid 16 shillings for a "Black Gimp"--whatever that may be.

Bookseller. The accounts suggest that the books auctioned "at the large Room over Mr. Vidal's School in Second Street," previously thought to have been books owned by Joseph Goodwin, were Franklin’s. The auction began on Monday evening, 11 March, and continued every evening until all the books were sold. The Supplement was advertised as "just Published" on 19 March, with the sale of its titles to commence on Monday evening, 25 March. The original advertisement, 5 March, and the two subsequent ones say that "Catalogues, with the Conditions of Sale, given gratis at Joseph Goodwin’s, Bookbinder; in Black Horse Alley, and at the Place of Sale." It has therefore been supposed that Goodwin owned the books. But a series of entries dated 28 March record debts to BF for books, with five of them specifying “For Books bought at Auction,” and with one, William Bingham’s, saying “Posted from Auction Memorandum.” Though "Mr. Gooding, bookbinder" (i.e., Joseph Goodwin), turns up eight times in Franklin’s accounts in 1745, none record a charge for an advertisement. Further, Goodwin never advertised any books for sale. I conclude that Goodwin, who often worked for Franklin as a bookbinder, also distributed the catalogues and perhaps kept track of the books for BF. BF loaned him 20.6 on 9 Feb; and for "work done," paid him 1.0.6 on 4 March and 8.6 on 20 March. Miller 370 attributed the printing of the Catalogue to Franklin, but cautioned that there was "no positive evidence" that he printed it. Since it was a catalogue of Franklin's books, it is certain beyond a reasonable doubt that Franklin printed it. Besides Goodwin/Gooding, Franklin was doing business with another bookbinder in 1745, Adolph Young (31 Aug).

The accounts show that the poet, playwright, and minister, the Rev. James Sterling (1701-63), sold BF £30 worth of books on 22 April.

Postmaster. BF’s postmaster’s business makes a new appearance in the accounts, for the earliest known example of his post-master’s way bill was dated 13 June (Miller 381). The little form, which Franklin presumably devised, organized and simplified the postmasters’ accounts. Another is dated 11 July. For a special delivery, Franklin hired Edward Dring to ride express to Virginia (11 Sept).
