ORGANIZATIONS
Clubs
Perhaps the most important organization on the campus is the Student Council. This body is composed of ten members, nine of whom are elected by the students while the tenth is the Editor-in-chief of ‘The Review.’ The Senior Class is represented by four members, the Junior Class by three members, the Sophomore Class by two members and the Freshman Class has one representative.

The fundamental duty of the Student Council is to govern the student body in accordance with the Constitution adopted by the Student Government Association. The most important charge devolving upon them is the administration of the Honor System and the trying of the cases arising under it. The Student Councils of the past two years under the leadership of Presidents Mannix and Harper have brought the student life of the campus to a higher plane than ever before attained under this complex cooperative system. The decisions handed down by the Student Council in all of the few cases involving violations of the Honor System have been fully upheld by the Scholarship and Discipline Committee. It is upon careful and just, but swift and sure, handling of such cases that the continuance of the faith placed in the student senate hinges. Thus far they have done particularly well.

Early in 1926, the Student Council donated a much appreciated gift to future Senior classes by relinquishing their room on the main floor of Old College and refurnishing it for the use of Seniors. The usual pep fests were held during the football season of 1926 and 1927, including the traditional Freshman "Peerade," with great success.

A notable achievement of the Council of 1926-1927 was the final elimination, by the motion of President Harper, of the usual "first night rumpus," instigated by the Sophomores, and a noticeable decrease in hazing, generally, throughout the year. The body has had splendid success in sublimating the roughhouse tactics of boisterous Sophomores for such things as the organized "tug o' war" and other supervised "rushes."

The Freshman Handbook, published by the Council in 1926 and edited by James Grant, was by far the best example of such work that has yet appeared at the University.

It was also during the years 1926-1927 that the Student Council undertook a plan of careful distribution of funds on hand to needy and deserving organizations upon the Campus. When the Band was rejuvenated, they furnished the money necessary for the hiring of an instructor. They have been of great assistance to the Debating Council also.

Social activities have not been neglected by this body. The Annual Thanksgiving Dinner under their auspices was the usual big success as were three Student Council Dances, among them a Bal Masque which was unanimously voted the gayest dance of the year.
The Derelicts, the only Senior Honorary Society on the University Campus, was organized in October, 1918, by a group of World War Veterans of the Class of 1919. Each year sees a different conception of the general ideals of the Society, but generally speaking, its purpose is to function as a body to promote good fellowship, school spirit, and class spirit, and to encourage all college activities on the Campus. The aim of every Derelict is to promote good fellowship within the Society to which he has been elected, and to foster good fellowship among the students of the University. Although the carrying out of the ideals of the Derelict Society is not always apparent, it must be borne in mind that this is a secret society and therefore its activities are not openly discussed.
The Chapter has an active membership of thirteen men who are chosen or "tapped" on Tap Day, usually the day of the Interscholastic Track and Field Meet. Membership in the Society is an honor to which most Juniors aspire. The colors of the fraternity, gold and black, are worn on the lapel of each pledge during the day of the meet. A Derelict remains active but one year.

The recognition charm of the Derelicts is a small key in gold and black enamel and has come to be very significant on the campus.
The Druid Fraternity

The Druid Society is a National Sophomore Honorary Society, founded in 1907 at Pennsylvania State College. The Delaware Chapter, Epsilon, was officially recognized when in the fall of 1922 the Blue Lantern Society—a similar Sophomore Society founded in 1920 by members of the Class of 1923—was taken into the National Organization. Other chapters of the Druid Fraternity are to be found at Pennsylvania State College, Washington and Jefferson College, Carnegie Institute of Technology, University of Pittsburgh, and Bucknell University.

The ideals and aims of this society in general are: to foster good feelings between the Sophomore and Freshman classes; to stimulate college and class spirit; to encourage athletic and scholastic ability; and to promote good fellowship in the student body.
From the Freshmen whose characteristics and qualities tend toward these ideals, a number are chosen at the end of the first year, by the outgoing members to carry on for the next year.

The members of the Freshman Class who are elected as members are designated on the day of the Annual Interscholastic Track and Field Meet on Joe Frazer Field both by having a piece of green ribbon fastened on the bottom button of their coats and by being “tapped.”

During the scholastic year, in addition to their activities as individuals, the Druids as an organization give a Druid Smoker, to which every member of the Freshman Class is invited; and, of course, they give their annual Druid Dance held each year in Old College Hall.
After a number of years of inactivity, the Wolf Chemical Club was reorganized in October, 1924. The Club was first organized about eight or ten years ago for the purpose of stimulating interest in chemistry. That is now its primary purpose.

The Club holds its regular meetings at times convenient to its members. An address by some prominent chemist is ordinarily the main feature of each meeting. The talks are usually of such a nature as to be interesting and instructive to any student.

Members of the Club in the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes are in the habit of making trips to various manufacturing plants at certain times during the year. These trips supply the students with a practical knowledge of the applications of theoretical chemical principles.

The membership of the Club includes the faculty of chemistry of Delaware College, students in the Chemical Engineering course, and students in the Arts and Science course who are majoring in Chemistry.
Of all campus organizations, there is none that is as active as the Agricultural Club, a body that is composed of men who are interested in the study of agriculture, and who are anxious and willing to put forth all the efforts in their power to learn every phase of their chosen profession.

Any student in the School of Agriculture is eligible for membership in the Club. Each is charged a nominal membership fee each year, and the money is used to defray the cost of lectures and programs put on by the organization. Meetings are held weekly, and at frequent periods during the year men prominent in their field are brought to Delaware to speak to the “Ags” on some particular subject. Illustrated lectures are often given in Wolf Hall.

Educational trips throughout the adjacent country are taken by the Club under the supervision of the Agriculture professors. Dairies, produce farms, and orchards are visited and inspected and a great deal of practical knowledge that could be gained in no other way is secured by the “Ags.” Thus the Club may be classed not only as an active organization, but as an educational medium as well.
There are perhaps no other groups of men who give so unselfishly of their time to the services of their Alma Mater as do the cheer leaders. Because of the small student body, it is extremely hard for a cheer leader to get any gratifying amount of noise from the stands during games, but, in so far as it is humanly possible, Charlie Gurney and his cheer leaders have succeeded nobly. For the services of cheer leading, it is customary for the Student Council to award the Senior leaders small gold megaphones with a blue "D" thereon. It is the only reward given, but it represents a great deal of hard work and a great amount of time devoted to the cause of better sports.
