JEFF KOMLO

It was a rainy, stormy night, the first Saturday in October of 1976, when the act debuted. On the saturated astro-turf of Philadelphia's Franklin Field, a sophomore quarterback started his second collegiate game. Delaware's opponent was Temple, the traditional thorn in an already challenging schedule.

When the mist had cleared, that quarterback, Jeff Komlo, got the rose. Temple got the thorn. An 18-16 win over a team that was heavily favored. An 18-16 win, ridden on the arm and legs of a quarterback who didn't feel the pressure. An 18-16 win that sent the Blue Hens on their way to an 8-3-1 season and an NCAA play-off berth. An 18-16 win in which a rookie quarterback forgot he was inexperienced and completed 10 of 16 passes for one touchdown and 201 yards while running for the other two touchdowns himself.

Two years later, after Jeff Komlo had started 34 consecutive games at quarterback, lost only nine of those contests, and completely rewritten the Blue Hen record book, Temple coach Wayne Hardin paid him a compliment.

"Jeff has always had one heck of a game against us," said Hardin, who had coached Roger Staubach at the Naval Academy, "and I congratulate him on an exceptional career at Delaware. He throws the ball exceptionally well and can play anywhere and with anyone. I am sure Jeff has an outstanding career ahead of him."

When the dust had cleared after the 1978 season, the list of accomplishments neared monotony. Komlo broke Tom Dimuzio's records for most passes completed in a season (188), and in a career (359), passes attempted in a season (332) and in a career (686), most passing yardage in a season (2677 in 1978), and in a career (5254), and finally, most total offensive yards in a season (2620) and in a career (5417).

In the 30 regular season games he started, Komlo garnered ECAC All-East Weekly awards 12 times including seven in 1978. Ironically, he was on the weekly All-East team for his play in a 17-15 loss to the Citadel in 1976. That was the last game Komlo didn't start.

But football games aren't won on the stat sheet, they are won on the field. That is where Komlo excelled. He captained the Wing-T offense with confidence and dauntlessly called his own plays. His trademark, from that upset win over Temple until his last waltz on a frozen Longview, Texas, high school field was that Jeff Komlo always kept his cool.

An example occurred in the NCAA semi-finals against Winston-Salem. With Delaware facing a fourth-and-goal at the 30-yard line after a series of penalties, Komlo faded back to pass. He rolled left and found nobody. He rolled right, eluded tacklers, and still found nobody in the clear. Finally, as Winston-Salem tacklers clung to his blue and gold mesh jersey, Komlo released a pass that threaded the secondary and found a home in the arms of tight end Mike Mill. Touchdown. Komlo strutted confidently off the field.

As the 1978 season closed, Komlo was named to the Associated Press and Kodak All-American teams. Five days before the NCAA title game in Texas against Eastern Illinois, he confided that "I'd trade all the awards for that championship ring."

The championship ring wish fizzled against a stingy Eastern Illinois defensive line and on a slippery field that thwarted Delaware's potent running attack. Komlo tossed 34 passes and completed a career-high 21, but was hurt by an interception and an offense that fumbled six times.

But the ring can be forgotten now and the awards put in the trophy case. A pro football team is waiting in the wings, including the Kansa City Chiefs, employers of the Delaware Wing-T offense. Play it cool, Jeff, real cool.

1979 saw the third graduating class of Nutrition and Dietetics majors involved in the Coordinated Undergraduate Program in Dietetics.

The seven seniors enrolled received classroom instruction in chemistry, physiology, and other sciences balanced by extensive clinical work in Nutrition Administration and Food Service Management at the Center for the Elderly, Wilmington Medical Center, and the Newark School District.

The CUPD accepts seven to twelve students at the sophomore level and grants a Bachelor of Science degree. Graduates are then eligible to take an examination to qualify as Registered Dietitians.

This student is taking advantage of a recent innovation at the U of D—computer lessons by PLATO.

The PLATO project is a system of computer-based education which allows students to interact individually with programmed material. The system was pioneered at the University of Illinois in the early Sixties and was instituted at Delaware in 1975. Approximately 1800 students per semester in thirty departments receive computer-supplied audio and graphic supplementary lessons.

Delaware's independent PLATO system can provide tutorial assistance, teach Freshman Ear Training, and simulate laboratory experiments. PLATO provides a new brand of flexible, personalized instruction in a time when crowded classrooms and high student/faculty ratios are making such individual attention more difficult.

The Men's Co-op is another example of the alternative housing available. This loosely-knit association of men students resides in a University-owned house on Kent Way. GREEK WEEK

Greek Week is a traditional period of activities and recognition focusing on the fraternities and sororities at Delaware. The week of special events culminates with the contests of the Greek Games.

Competition heats up around unusual collegiate sports events like VW rolling and the mattress carry. It's quite a spectacle for participants and innocent bystanders alike.

UNIVERSITY FARMHOUSE

The University Farmhouse is the most recent addition to the special housing residences. Intended primarily for agriculture-oriented students, the Farmhouse provides a fresh alternative to dorm life.

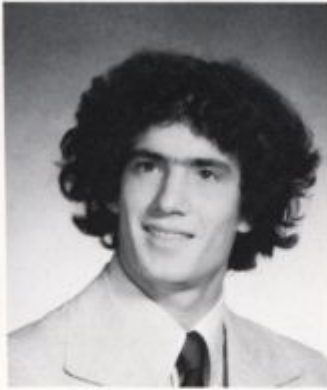

Located on the grounds of the University's Experimental Farm, residents can enjoy the benefits of a wide lawn and fresh air. Special programming includes botanical tours of Longwood Gardens, bonfires, cookouts and hayrides. Resident do their own cooking (usually collaborating in small groups) and work to maintain a country farmhouse atmosphere. As one resident puts it: "The people here are great. We go to square dances and discos on the same night."

AG DAY

Ag Day festivities give the public a chance to see what the College of Agriculture has to offer. Samples of student work are on display as well as prize livestock and experimental plant hybrids.

A light rain did not prevent close to 1200 people from coming by this year to buy plants from the Horticulture Club, tour some of the University's facilities, participate in a dog show and free rabies clinic sponsored by the Animal Science Club, and help themselves to a barbecue prepared by the honorary society Alpha Zeta.

PAULA PETRIE

One of Delaware's most outstanding female athletes for the past few years is Paul Petrie. Paula, a Physical Education major from Springfield, Pennsylvania, has been a familiar figure in Delaware basketball and softball for two years and in field hockey for four.

In 1978 she helped the Hens battle to a third place finish in the nationals in Denver, Colorado, and near Seattle, Washington, in 1979 fought to a second place spot after a 3-0 loss to local nemesis Westchester. She also played on a team in the Olympic Committee Sportsfest.

Paula's major goal after graduation is to help the U.S. Olympic Team qualify this August in Vancouver. The U.S. Team must place fifth or better to get a chance to compete in the first Olympic Women's Field Hockey contest in Moscow in 1980.

The AICHE is the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. The active student chapter at the U of D helps ChE majors to ease into the real world of professional engineering. Tours of local chemical plants, guest speakers, and clinics on resume writing and interviewing techniques are some of the projects the AICHE sponsors to smooth the transition from student to professional.

Not all activities are quite so serious— the members regularly hold social events like picnics at Lum's Pond, too.

SPRING THING

You can tell springtime is here when the Spring thing happens at Christiana. Students and local residents mingle in the warm sunshine and fresh breezes to celebrate the official end of winter.

Continuous music by student performers fills the background for a day of activities and games like egg-tossing, pie eating and tug-of-war. Munchies are plentiful and local craftsmen set up booths for display and sale of everything from jewelry and leather goods to T-shirts.

If the winds are right, an exhibition of precision skydiving skill tops off the afternoon activities. Overall, it's a great way to spend the first sunny Saturday of spring.

A FAMILIAR FACE

Elaine Beck may be one of the most recognizable persons on campus. For three years she has worked part-time as a teller at the Student Center branch of the Farmers' Bank of Delaware.

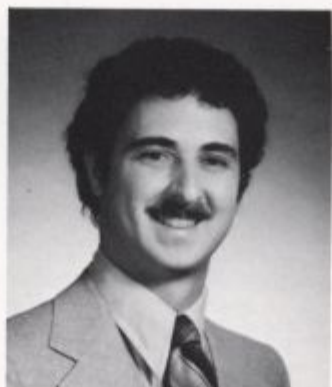

"I'm usually noticed away from school. In Florida over spring break and at parties at away football games I've seen dozens of people pointing and saying 'Oh, look - there's the bank teller.'"

Elaine is a Business Administration - Finance major from Wilmington. Although she plans to aim for a career in corporate finance, her work during school (and especially her more managerial duties in the summer) she sees as valuable experience.

"For a part-time job, you can't beat it. You get to meet a lot of people - I guess that's the best part."

GRADUATION

June 2, 1979 marked the 130th commencement ceremony at the U of D. A stadium full of parents and friends watched as members of Delaware's largest graduating class ever received degrees.

Russell Bodner introduced the commencement speaker, Ms. Bella Abzug, a leading civil libertarian and women's rights activist.

Special recognition and honors were awarded to several people: Delaware alumnus and recent Nobel laureate Daniel Nathans received an honorary Doctor of Science degree; Robert John Bonk, Jean Louise Rounds, and Peter Lynn Dymtryk were honored for their 4.0 cumulative standings; and Dr. Robert L. Pigford of the University's Department of Chemical Engineering was named recipient of the first Francis Alison Award.
