SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

Carlyle says that history is the essence of innumerable biographies. So the history of the Class of '31 is the essence of our college lives. A complete record of our college careers is contained in other parts of this book. I give only the essence here—our history.

Our college career had its beginning in the confusion of half-unpacked trunks, formidable faculty meetings, the business office, sophomores, and Greek letter fraternities, all equally perplexing. Judging from the reception handed us by the sophomores, we thought ourselves very important—they must have planned well for our arrival. We were grateful, of course, for their thoughtfulness. Accordingly, we gave them a fight worth their best efforts in the class rush.

Then, suddenly, everything became quite orderly. Scheduled classes began and we dug in. Along with it we did not forget "Rat-rules"—(how could we?)—fraternities, dances, athletics, and various other college activities. Fraternities chose many from our ranks. A proper reception was planned for those "Rats" of the Class of '32. They must have felt a certain degree of self-importance, for we are sure that they enjoyed a royal welcome. (The class rush was not so successful as it could have been, but both classes put up a fine fight.)

Our sophomore year passed very quietly. (Again we had our representatives in athletics, social activities, and on the Review Staff.) Such things as Mid-years and Finals come as a matter of course now. The same may be said of the other attempts of our worthy professors in proving to us that we could still learn something.

The high lights of our year came with the Freshman Banquet and the "Rat" Bonfire. Both were "free-for-alls." The first was seasoned with a few of the Baltimore police force, but the second consisted of raw "Rats" and Sophomores. The "Rats" did succeed in staging a banquet and eating in comparative peace. But, we did get a chance in between to give them a little excitement. When they returned home, we greeted them with a shower of one part flour and three parts water, accompanied by another part of Seasonal Greetings and Best Wishes.

When we became Juniors, things began to happen. We conceived of the idea of establishing the custom of class rings. Accordingly, we had a ring designed which proved to be very pleasing. To say the least, it will find its way among the cherished tokens of our college life.

The one Big event of the year was our Junior Prom with the Gold Ballroom as its setting, spirited by perfectly syncopated music and inspired by beautiful ladies, it was pronounced a thrilling success.

With Fraternity Formals, came the closing event of our career as Juniors. That event was the tapping of the Derelicts. Every Junior stood by with a peculiar skip in his heart beat, half-expectant, or at least longing to congratulate those chosen.

June came; we were no longer Juniors. The realization dawned on us that just one more circuit of time and we would be severed from Delaware and become alumni just the same as those we have observed in the classes above us during our college career. This realization prompted a new thought in us; it gave us at once a feeling of dignity and one of sorrow and sadness.

So we parted for the last college summer vacation. September's call brought us again to meet on the beautiful campus—Seniors now.

There's work to be done as a Senior as well as during other years. The Blue Hen Staff found a challenging task in organization, and another task twice as hard in putting the publication across. The work was begun, but success seemed impossible and the Publication Committee announced that the Blue Hen would be abandoned for the year. Some of our alumni heard of the plan, and through their efforts the Student Council, backed by the Business Office, came to the rescue. The Blue Hen, we hope, will never come so near to being abandoned again.
So now we arrive at that which has been our goal for many years, our College Commencement. We turn, as a traveler at evening, to catch one more fleeting glance at the sunset of our college career. We see marvelous growth in our Alma Mater. The addition to our Gym provided a first-class swimming pool. A new Engineering Building is giving the Engineering School a fitting home. Mitchell Hall, our new Auditorium, the thoughtful gift of two of our Alumni, is the Mecca of local music lovers, the haven of the Dramatic Societies, and a marvelous hall for university and local meetings. The Women's College has acquired what promises to be a fine Gym. The sad part is: it only promises; it is not complete. We see growth in the size of the student body. We have witnessed the revival of that old spirit of the Blue Hen's Chicks, and, last, but not least, we have witnessed success in Delaware's athletics. We have seen our football coaches develop a team which bowed in defeat only thrice. Our team took the laurels of victory from an ancient rival never before forced to bow to us.

And the sunset of our college career dims. With gathering darkness, comes realization of the sadness of parting. These four years have gone quickly and we regret, now that we are at the end. It means we must relinquish those pleasant associations of college days. They can live with us only in memory. Such parting is sad. But ho! darkness gives way to dawn. Sadness is replaced by joy. We have come to the end of collegiate life at Delaware, but we are on the threshold of life. Life, where problems are real.

A sudden twist of the wind brings together numerous leaves from trees in far separated places. The rain falls and these sheltered leaves soon give of their nourishment to develop a great and useful tree. Such is the history of the class of 1932 giving—like the leaves—its energies to the tree of the growing greatness of the University of Delaware.

Entering college one hundred twenty-six strong, we have in the three years past suffered a mortality of thirty-six per cent bringing us to our present level of eighty-one students. The present number lacks many who in former years were familiar faces, yet we have gained large groups of new friends. To these more recent comrades I would now pay a tribute. Their work is helping to mold our class into its final finished state.

'32's Freshman-Sophomore relations have been attended by mixed qualities of success and of—never mind what. On entering college, this class, for about a week, received what was practically the last of the so-called "Old-fashioned hazing" at Delaware. Then, the name "Wahoo" will always remind active members of this class of the Freshman Banquet held in Baltimore after the end of the Christmas holidays. Having been denied the opportunity of defeating the upper class in the tug of war across the creek, '32 made its triumph even more striking over the next year's Freshmen. These and many other events helped to fill the pages of our record of interclass activities.

Our class has had no brilliant scholars—if there have been any potential ones among us, they have so filled their time with extra-curricular activities, that they have avoided dazzling the rest of us of the lower scholastic planes; the class has had few great stars in any special athletic or other activity; but we have had many men who in various fields have upheld Delaware as skillful and active participants.

Martin Goldberg as "Review" editor; "Doc" Viohl as a musician; Jack Waddington our Jazz artist; and our Dramatic quartette of Stanley Salsburg, John McVaugh, Paul Smith, and Marshall McCully: these are names with whom we are acquainted. Likewise, few will forget our own "I.T." Cooper, who was omitted from the present International Chess Tournament (so they say) only because he neglected to sign his name to his acceptance of that honor. Furthermore our class had in it, during the first year, a very marriageable young lady. Who that was there at our first "Peerade" will ever forget the sweetness, the poise, the very perfection of feminine contouring of that Ex 1932, Charles Hocker.

During our period in college we have had as captains of sports: Lewis and Fulling of Golf, Caulk of Soccer, Sloan of Football, Roman of Basketball, Walter Davis of Fencing, and Lyman Byam of Rifle.

Details of the sport history of our Junior year, are thus far too incomplete to admit of discussion in this history. However, our Junior Class history includes on its pages, the record of a well-managed and highly successful Junior Prom. The names of those to whom tribute for this is due are well known on the campus. For this reason there is no need to mention them.

Among the more notable events that have taken place at Delaware are: the development of new and improved campus buildings, the practical elimination of hazing, the extension of the Foreign Study Plan to include German as well as French, etc. Of the first event, I might say that the clearing of the old Engineering shacks to be replaced by a new Engineering building; the planning and construction of Mitchell Hall, our new Auditorium; these would be enough to stamp this as a most progressive period. To the State Legislature, to Mr. Sharp, and to Mr. Pierre S. du Pont, we have the heartiest gratitude.

We know that the past work of our class is but a prestige of an even more fully flowered activity during our Senior Year. We know that when Alumni we shall continue united in work for the good of Delaware. Our class thus achieving, it shall be that people will remember along with Dr. Sypherd's famous '96, the even better known Class of 1932.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL
Thomas Craig
Like the beginning of all great events, the arrival of the Class of ’33 was unpretentious. The Class came, the Class walked around seeing: it is now, we trust, conquering.

Quiet as it may have been, however, it was an epochal event for both divisions of the University. It meant for the Men’s College the acquisition of such luminaries as “Scottie” Craig, “Charlie” Hartmann, “Dan” Mudron, and “Pete” Rice; it meant for the edification of W. C. D. the brilliant persons of “Walt” Kelk, “Ash” Long, and Frank Lynch.

The Class of ’33 began its college career auspiciously by sleeping through a series of sonorous lectures on the meaning of a college career. They awoke to find themselves confronted with problems of organization. Thus began the rise of one, Charlie Hartmann. His voice was loudest and so he was elected temporary chairman.

And the Sophomores gathered the tribe together. And they said, Let there be light from boxes of matches, and salutes, and rat hats, and black socks. Let there also be courtly and diffident manner among the freshmen. And it came to pass. And the Sophomores saw that it was good.

But the tribe of Freshmen vanished their foes on the field of battle, and it was then that the legend of Katz, the mighty, arose. And there were tomatoes. At this point we should quote from Hudibras lest some critic detect the effect of the English Bible on our style, if any. But, as we were saying, there were tomatoes. And we of the Class of ’33 are proud to say that on a certain September evening this estimable vegetable and the Class of ’32 first became acquainted in a really intimate way. The occasion was the class rush which resulted in a draw. The Class of ’33 won the flour fight, while ’32 won the rush and the jousting contest. Katz being on the end of the rope and Archimedes not being in the immediate vicinity, victory in the tug-o’-war was pre-ordained for the Class of ’33.

It was a lively and enterprising throng, this class of ’33 that swung into the round of events in the autumn of 1929. They brought forth yells that were yells, pep-fests that were pep-fests, and if the cheering section had counted for everything, the football season that year would have been a different tale. In many ways it was a banner class. Its members included no less than thirteen varsity letter men. These were “Scottie” Craig, “Bud” Haggerty, “Dave” Marvel, “Dan” Mudron, “June” Walker, Aubrey Walker, Kelso, Klein, Tweed, Lindstrand, Hartmann, Ross, and Harry Williams.

Ere the snow began to fly “Scottie” Craig replaced Hartmann as chairman and James Hollis was elected temporary chairman. A committee headed by Oscar Tucker was charged with the duty of planning the Freshman Banquet. This was held at the Strath Haven Inn, Swarthmore, and had Nero, himself, rather than Tucker and his associates, arranged it, the affair could not have been done on grander dimensions. With the aid of some traitorous seniors President Sparks was captured and was all but boiled.

Rushing season and Mid-years came and went as rushing season and mid-years always come and go. Then the time arrived to elect fully qualified officers and the following were named: “Pete” Rice, president; “Dan” Mudron, Council representative; Samuel Nickle, secretary; James Hollis, treasurer, and Robert Curtin, historian. “Scottie” Craig then turned over the government. The same day, the Freshman edition of the “Review” appeared in green ink, featuring the best from the pens of “Sam” Silver, “Dave” Waxman, and “Ed” Hensel.

Rat Rules were lifted in February, earlier than ever before. This was attended by a huge bonfire in which certain edifices, reverently esteemed from ancient times, were destroyed with appropriate rituals. The whole proved a memorable interlude in the ordered affairs of the Women’s College.

Earlier in the year, the Class of ’33 had defeated the Sophomores by a score of 8 to 0 in the annual football game. The Sophomores seized the opportunity to taste vengeance in the Class track meet, taking first place.

The year ended with the election of Victor Graham to head the class on its return from the summer vacation. In September, 1930, an even larger freshman class was taken in hand by the Class of ’33. Several changes were made in the freshman regulations, the neckties being made green instead of black and the caps, blue and gold instead of red and green. ’33 tasted defeat in the class rush, but managed to hold their wild younger brethren to a tie in the football game. Again mid-years came and went and again the early lifting of Rat Rules was celebrated by a bonfire, and more edifices went up in smoke.

It is true that each year sees the same drama replayed, the same rivalries glow and fade, but there is something individual about each, some special flavor for every class to cherish. It was there in abundance for the Class of ’33 and it will not soon be forgotten.
