WAR VETS MARK ARMISTICE DAY WITH BANQUET

A. T. Morrissey Tells Guests
Of Newark Foreign War
Veterans Of Work Done By Order; Other Posts Attend;
Col. Smith Presides

MANY SPEAKERS

"If the Unknown Soldier could be here today I know he would be proud of the work that the Veterans of Foreign Wars are doing," said A. T. Morrissey, junior vice-commander, Department of Pennsylvania, Veterans of Foreign Wars, speaking at the Armistice Day banquet of the Newark Veterans' Post, held Monday night at the Delaware Tea House.

The banquet, the first mixed function held by the Lt. J. Allison O'Daniel Post of Newark since it was revived last February, was attended by about 75 veterans with their wives, including delegations from the Wilmington and Chester, Pa., Veterans' Posts. The Darby Post had accepted an invitation but did not arrive. Colonel S. J. Smith, chaplain of the Newark Post, and for many years chaplain of the national order, was the toastmaster.

The speaking was interspersed by community singing, and Mrs. S. J. Smith sang several solos. She was accompanied by Mrs. David O. Evans. The Harmonica Kings, F. W. Collins and Charles Latham, gave two selections. These men are both members of the Wilmington Veterans, and are well-known radio broadcasters. "Click" Poole also sang and played a combination of harmonica and guitar. The banquet room was decorated with the flags of the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy, as well as the Church flag and Post flags. After the banquet, the floor was cleared for dancing.

Colonel Smith opened the dinner with an invocation and welcome to the guests, and then called on Vice-Commander Morrissey. Mr. Morrissey said that the farther we draw from Armistice Day, 1918, the farther the public appears to draw from the observance of the day. He said that in many minds Armistice Day was thought of as a second Memorial Day, but that while it was a day of memory, it should also be a day of rejoicing and the celebration of victory, and that it was part of the program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to see that the day was perpetuated. Mr. Morrissey told of the work that was being done by the Veterans in caring for disabled veterans, and for the widows and orphans of veterans. He spoke of the Veterans' Home at Eton Falls, Michigan, where each state had a cottage for the housing and care of widows and (Continued on Page 4.)

PROF., STUDENT HURT IN CRASH

Professor Blair And Horace
Clemo Pinned Under Car
When It Turns Over;
Both Recovering

W. L. Blair, assistant professor of English at the University of Delaware, is in the Homeopathic Hospital, Wilmington, suffering from a cracked rib, and Horace Clemo, a junior at the University, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Clemo, of 2906 Washington street, Wilmington, is confined at home with an injured head, the result of an automobile accident on the Lincoln Highway, late Monday afternoon.

Professor Blair, Clemo and another student, Perry Burton, were on their way to Philadelphia to attend the theatre when the accident happened. The three were in Clemo's car with Clemo driving. About one mile this side of the Delaware Tea House two other cars had collided, and as Clemo turned out to avoid the congestion in the road, his car left the concrete and turned over. Professor Blair and Clemo were pinned beneath the car. Burton was thrown clear and uninjured except for minor bruises. A number of men present at the other wreck righted Clemo's car and extricated the two pinned beneath it. Both injured men were rushed to the office of Dr. Wallace Johnson, in Newark, who treated them and sent them to the hospital in the Newark ambulance.

It was first thought that Professor Blair had received serious internal injuries and that Clemo was suffering from a severe concussion of the brain. Clemo, however, revived and was taken to his home, where he is recovering quickly. An X-ray showed that Professor Blair had cracked a rib, and while it was painful, it was not a serious injury.

75 FARMERS ON TURKEY TOUR

Ed Willim Organizes Delaware Group To Visit
Maryland Farms

Flocks of 1500, 1000 and 600 turkeys were visited on the second annual Kent County, Maryland Turkey Tour by a group of about 75 Delaware farmers on November 8. The Extension Department was represented by H. S. Palmer, Poultry Specialist, G. M. Worrillow, New Castle County Club Agent, and Ed Willim, Jr., New Castle County Agent, who sponsored the movement to lead a bunch of Delaware poultrymen from our state to the tour.

The Delaware group left Middletown where they had gathered, by previous arrangement, about 8:15. They made the first stop on the tour at the Biggers Poultry Farm near Millington, Maryland. At this place the tourists saw flocks of Bourbon Reds, Holland Whites and Mammoth Bronz. In all there were around 600 turkeys on this first place visited. Mr. and Mrs. Biggers greeted the visitors with a cordial welcome, and told something of their experiences in the turkey game.

From this place the combined group of about 500 started on the way to the Jervis Turkey Farm near Still Pond, Maryland. The size of the tour continually increased as the day progressed. By the time we had left this farm about another 100 or 200 of people had joined the tour. Mr. Jervis explained how he had increased his flock from 126 raised last year to 1500 young birds on the grounds this fall. A beautiful bunch of turkeys. Some were hatched as late as August 10. Others were earlier birds which would go to market this Thursday, November 15. Mr. Jervis mentioned that he had some old birds which weighed 45 pounds, which means a lot of meat on one turkey.

At the H. M. Baker place, several miles out of Chestertown, the group was again enlarged by the addition of another 100 or 200 of people, making about 800 at this stop. The Baker Turkey Farm is famous in Maryland, the Eastern Shore and probably well known in all of the Eastern part of the United States. It was here that Mrs. Helen M. Baker started her first work with turkeys some eight or ten years ago. It was here that she has built up this fine flock of turkeys the writer has ever seen. One pen of birds fastened away from the rest were held for sale at $100.00 a piece. Many others equally as large and equally as good in color were noticed in the flock of around 1000 birds on her place. Mrs. Baker has had almost complete charge of this farm and is to be congratulated on the fine (Continued on Page 4.)

PRISON WORKERS HERE

Captain Ethel Benard, prison missionary of the Volunteers of America, is in Newark this week to ask aid for needy prisoners' families in the State of Delaware. The work which Captain Benard is doing is endorsed by Warden Elmer J. Leach, of the New Castle Work House, who has given her a letter showing the value of the work accomplished by the organization. Before starting her work in Newark, the Captain visited Mayor Frazer and procured a letter of introduction from him.

SING WAR SONGS

The Lieutenant J. Allison O'Daniel Post, American Legion, of Newark, celebrated Armistice Day, Monday evening, with a smoker and get-together in the Post rooms in the Old Academy Building. Forty-five guests and post members attended.

Post Adjutant John R. Fader was chairman and kept the meeting humming in an informal way. A four-piece orchestra composed of Ira S. Brinsler, Orville Little, William K. Gillespie and Harold E. Barker furnished music, and James C. Hastings led in singing songs popular with the A. E. F.

One of the features of the evening was a series of extemporaneous talks by post members on where they were on Armistice Day, 1918. Among those who spoke were Lester Scotten, James C. Hastings, Dr. C. C. Palmer, and Fred E. Strickland, one of the two men from Delaware who won the Croix de Guerre. Ira S. Brinsler gave a talk on "Armistice Day, a Day of Proud Sorrow." Wayne Brewer gave a sketch of the life of J. Allison O'Daniel, in whose memory both the local posts of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have been named. Mr. Brewer read portions of a letter written by a chaplain on Lieutenant O'Daniel's death when his machine fell.

Agriculture Dept. Grades Beef

Housewives are finding their task of shopping for meat materially lightened due to the present system of marking beef to denote its grade, according to Inez S. Wilson, Home Economics Specialist of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, and other authorities who have made an extensive study of the consumers' reaction to this new merchandizing plan. The beef grading and branding service was inaugurated over a year ago by the United States Department of Agriculture. A number of packers also are applying their own private brands.

It was pointed out that housewives have various and erroneous ideas as to what constitutes quality in meat. A government survey revealed a general lack of knowledge of meat among women who buy it day after day. While most women admit their lack of knowledge in this respect they do not seem to know how to remedy it, said Miss Wilson.

One of the chief reasons for placing the grade mark on beef is to relieve the shopper of the responsibility of becoming an expert judge of this food product, it was said. The grade label on a cut of beef is definite assurance that the purchaser is getting exactly what she wants. A roller stamp is used to apply the label so that it is easily seen and identified by the consumer. It extends from one end of the carcass to the other. Thus, most of the cuts as they appear on the retail counter bear a portion of the mark.

Since the government inaugurated this system of grading and branding, more than 100 million pounds of beef have been branded, either with the government mark or with private brands adopted by some of the packers. The government grading has been done at ten large points of slaughter in forty-nine plants operated by thirty-three packers.

Although the government classification of beef divides it into seven grades, branding is now limited almost entirely to the three top grades, prime, choice and good. The marks being used are "U. S. Prime," "U. S. Choice," and "U. S. Good." The packers brands, while not necessarily using the terms prime, choice, and good, indicate the same general grade classification established by the government.

Marketing authorities see value in this grading plan to both the consumer and retailer for the brand serves as a guarantee that the beef is being sold entirely on its merits. While hams and bacon have carried the brands of packers for many years, the present system being used on beef is an innovation. The success of the plan with this meat leads many to believe that further expansion is inevitable.

A RECEIPT FOR HAPPINESS

People are always chasing after happiness, and it is always eluding them. They hunt for it in all sorts of queer corners—fame, riches, sport, love, friendship, and what not—but they come no nearer to it than grasping its tail. If they would only stop thinking of being happy themselves and start planning how happy they can make someone else, they would soon find the problem solving itself. The way to get happiness is to give it.—London Daily Express.

Let every dawn of morning be to you as the beginning of life and every setting sun be to you as it close; then let everyone of these short lives leave its sure record of some kindly thing done for others, some goodly strength or knowledge gained for yourselves.—Ruskin.

FORMER ELKTONIAN DIES AFTER FALL

The funeral of Mrs. Martha Mahan Devou, 90 years old, a former postmistress at Elkton, whose death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter L. Roberts, 2401 Jefferson street, Wilmington, on Saturday night, took place from there at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, with the Rev. W. E. Harrison, Jr., pastor of McCabe M. E. Church, officiating. Interment was at Elkton.

Mrs. Devou's death was the result of injuries suffered in a fall down a flight of stairs while she was on a visit to another daughter, Mrs. Louis L. Pritchard, at Providence, R. I., on October 3.

She was born and reared in Wissahickon, Philadelphia, but at an early age moved with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. James Crawford, to North East, Md., where she married Captain Joseph L. Mahan, and moved to Elkton, where her husband was a postmaster. After Mr. Mahan's death she married Dr. Isaac L. Devou, of Wilmington.

Tosh Had Died From Injuries Suffered Several Days Ago

Within less than an hour after he had made arrangements at West Nottingham cemetery for the burial of his father, who had died a few hours before from injuries in an automobile crash, Melvin Tosh, a farmer of near West Nottingham, Cecil county, Monday afternoon saw his little daughter, Dorothy, age 6, hurled fifty feet to one side by her eventual death by another automobile.

The grief-stricken parents—Mrs. Tosh was in the machine also and witnessed the tragedy—once they had regained their composure, ran to the side of the crumpled figure of the little girl along the side of the road, where they found her more dead than alive. In the meantime, Delmar Graybeal, of Liberty Grove, according to the parents of the little girl, was unable to stop his car until he had gone 200 yards beyond the scene of the accident, so fast was he going. The parents, with the assistance of Graybeal and others, took the girl to Richards' Hospital, Port Deposit, where he is being held pending the outcome of the coroner's inquest, which is set for Thursday night. Coroner Howard W. Green summoned a jury Monday night after making a preliminary investigation of the accident.

James Tosh, the grandfather of the ill-fated girl, was driving a milk wagon several days ago near his home in the Harrisville section when an automobile crashed into his wagon. He suffered severe injuries, which complicated with his old age, resulted in his death Saturday morning. After

At the forestry woodlot judging contests held near Rising Sun and Bayview by Extension Forester F. B. Trenk in cooperation with County Agent, Thomas H. Bartilson, at Rising Sun and Bay View, youthful farmers carried off honors over their parents.

That farm boys and girls are quite as good, if not better, judges of woodlot thinning, was shown by the way in which they carried off the prizes which were donated for the event by Standley Evans, of Elkton, one of the foremost forestry enthusiasts of Cecil County.

In the Rising Sun contest, held on the farm of Harry L. Glackin, James Williams, a 15-year-old high school boy won the first prize axe, with two other high school students, Ruth Jenkins and Howard Terry, and Lloyd Balderston, a farmer of Colora, trying for second prize. The hatchet was finally awarded to young Terry by elimination.

The Bay View contest, held on the farm of Alexander G. Smith, developed into a father and son contest, with the boys having just an edge on their dads. Harry P. Gamble, of Bay View, succeeded in tying his father, J. W. Gamble, for first place and was awarded the axe given as first place. The hatchet for second place was awarded to Melvin Smith, who succeeded in nosing out his father, Alexander G. Smith, by just one point.

ber, telling what recipes had been tested since the October meeting. Mrs. Kate Daugherty, the Home Demonstration Agent, then had charge of the meeting. She would like to ask each home-maker in the neighborhood that does not belong to either Christiansa or Middletown Club to join one of the three clubs, as that is what the State's idea is to reach every home-maker. Then she gave us some ideas on Christmas gifts, several members bringing some articles and ideas with them, which were exchanged and talked about. Everyone enjoyed the afternoon, after which the hostess served refreshments. The next meeting, in December, will be at the home of Mrs. Kate Daugherty, on Orchard Ridge, Newark, where she will demonstrate candies, cake and cookies for Christmas. ## Christiana

The Christiana Improvement Association held their regular business and social meeting Tuesday evening of this week, when routine business was transacted. A musical and literary program was presented, and refreshments were served.

There was a good attendance at the pie and milk social held by the Improvement Association last Saturday evening. Pie, milk, ice cream and candy were on sale, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the piano fund. A feature of the evening's entertainment was a "guess pie" donated by Mrs. Maud Howell; the idea being to guess what ingredients were used in making the filling for the pie—at five cents a guess. Mrs. George W. Davis had charge of the candy table, and Mr. George McCarns of the ice cream. Mrs. Charles Beatty acted as cashier, while the following ladies served as waitresses: Mrs. William Howell, Mrs. Ida Tomlin, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Jr., Mrs. John Hanna, and Mrs. George McCarns.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church will hold their regular meeting this (Wednesday) evening at State Road Chapel, with Mrs. Harry Hance and Mrs. Frank Moody acting as hostesses.

The recently organized Girl Reserves held their weekly meeting Monday evening at which time plans were completed for the box social to be held Friday evening of this week. There will be no admission charge, but the boxes will be auctioned off, and home-made cakes and candies will be on sale. The new concrete road from Christiansa to Hares Corner is open to traffic now for about half its length, though considerable work remains to be done in grading the shoulders and constructing concrete gutters and headwalls. It is hoped that by Thanksgiving, or possibly a little before that time, the road will be opened all the way through to Hares Corner—in which event the people of this vicinity will have cause for thanksgiving.

The Red Cross

Eighty-eight large disasters called the American Red Cross into action during the past year. Sixty-six of these were in this country, twenty-two of them abroad. These were spectacular, with the Red Cross on the way to the rescue before the first news was cold. In a quieter way, the Red Cross has brought health and sanitation to thousands through its 745 nurses working in disease ridden insular possessions; has carried on civilian relief activities in rural sections throughout this country; has given first aid, nutrition and hygiene instruction to hundreds of thousands. It has transcribed 1,316 volumes into the Braille system of raised letters for the blind, and has produced a quarter of a million garments and two and a quarter million surgical dressings for use in emergencies.

No other organization does such a great work over such a large field. No other organization asks as little financial support from its members. It is as much a duty of citizenship to belong to the Red Cross as it is to cast a vote. It is hoped that the citizens of Newark will perform this duty generously, by joining during the Roll Call, which will be in progress until Thanksgiving Day.

One of the greatest satisfactions in doing any sound work for an institution, a town, or a city, or for the nation is that good work done for the public lasts, endures through generations, and the little bit of work that any individual of the passing generation is enabled to do gains through association with such collective activities an immortality of its own.—Charles W. Eliot.

orphans, and that schools and churches were provided for the residents of the home. He explained that the Veterans of Foreign Wars was an organization, founded at the close of the Spanish-American War, and was open to any veterans of service with the armed forces of the United States in any campaign for which Congress issues a campaign bar.

Mr. Morrissey particularly commended the Newark Post for its success in enrolling such a large proportion of the eligibles in its district. He stated that while the Delaware posts are now under the Pennsylvania Department, he hoped that it would organize its own state department. He pointed out the aid that the social side of post work has in promoting cooperation and good comradeship, and told of the inter-post visitations inaugurated in Philadelphia, which had materially strengthened the work of the order in that city. He urged the formation of Ladies Auxiliaries, as an aid to the social side of the work, and said he hoped the Newark Post would be successful in reviving its Auxiliary. In conclusion he stated that while there was no set rule for success in post work, it was well to remember that no individual was bigger than the organization, and that it called for close teamwork to put a post over.

Commander William Rupp of the Newark Post, sketched the history of the local post, telling of its strength at the time it was founded in 1920 when the bulk of its members were "rehab" and of its slow disintegration due to politics. He said that the Veterans of Foreign Wars was organized to uphold the fundamentals of the Constitution of the United States, and made a plea for tolerance, both religious and political.

Both Commander Charles N. Macklin and adjutant George M. Bailey, of the Jacob Ferdinand Spear Post, Wilmington, spoke on the purposes and work of the Veterans. Adjutant A. L. Speece, of Newark, told of the reorganization of the Newark Post, and its success in enrolling members and of obtaining a meeting room. Commander A. Morson, of the Chester Post spoke, and Mrs. Morson talked on the Auxiliary.

John Grundy, junior vice-commander of the Newark Post, and the only member of the post to have been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, stated that the Newark Post had enrolled 36 out of the 50 eligible service men eligible in this district. Mrs. Rachel R. Creswell, a Gold Star Mother, from Newark, said a few words.

Others who gave short talks were: Mrs. David Bailey, Mrs. Michael Plinick, Mrs. Benjamin McCormick, Harry Mercer, Mansel Tweed, Fred Snooks, Fred Harrington, Benjamin McCormick, Harry Kelly, and John McElvee, adjutant of the Chester Post.

The banquet was concluded with a Period of Silence in memory of fallen comrades.

extension and missionary work she has been doing, not only in Kent County, but in other parts of Maryland and Delaware. She spent one day with the Delaware State Poultry Association tour at Newark on October 25. This time and lecture she gave were given entirely free of charge to the association and represents a very high type of public spirit on her part.

The field day part of the tour was held on the Baker farm. Speakers of state and national renown were heard. Opportunity to learn what to do and what not to do with turkeys was presented very ably by the speakers of the afternoon. Director Symons, of Maryland Extension Service, Dr. Jull and Mr. Schrader, of the United States Department of Agriculture, Mr. Smyth, of Kent County Farm Bureau, were some of the speakers along with the practical talks given by Mr. and Mrs. Baker on the cost and methods used on their farm in raising their turkeys.

Luncheon was served to the group on the Baker farm. The complete exercises were finished around 4 o'clock. Much credit must be given to Kent County, Maryland Agent, Mr. H. B. Derrick, for sponsoring, arranging and carrying through this well planned and instructive event.

NO EDITORIALS

No more editorials—at least not in their traditional form as a daily feature—are to appear in the Boston Traveler, which had its beginnings away back in the last century. Pursuant to an announcement made in its erstwhile editorial column, the Traveler proposes to pass over the direction or molding of, or leadership in, public opinion to the people. This radical departure from time-honored custom is said to have sprung from a desire to have the people, "through honest discussion," arrive at "better understandings, greater tolerance and approximate unity in many matters regarding which the disagreements once seemed hopeless." And so the Traveler's editorial column will become a "People's Forum," and the Traveler itself will inject its own opinions only at such times as "occasion warrants." Then, and then only, "the Traveler will speak."—Christian Science Monitor.

NEW GEYSER IN YELLOWSTONE
Spectacular new geyser burst out recently in Yellowstone National Park in the Fairy Creek region of the Lower Geyser Basin. This is about six miles from the main highway. From a crater about 100 feet wide, 120 feet long and 8 feet deep the geyser plays twice every twenty-four hours to a height of 75 feet. Occasionally the perpendicular stream reaches a height of 100 feet, at which time loud explosions take place every ten or fifteen seconds.

Many short diagonal streams spurt from the geyser's centre. The overflow creates a stream four feet wide and about eight inches deep, running at a rate of approximately 120 gallons to the minute.

Can a Horse Think

This is a true story. I have long wanted to tell it to a larger circle of people than those with whom, in my quiet daily life, I come in contact.

The question as to "whether animals think" is so often discussed, that it implies that there are many people still who are doubtful about it. They probably have never been especially fond of animals, nor have lived very close to them by watching their ways, making companions of them and studying their habits.

In this day of automobiles, the horse has well nigh vanished; he holds an inconspicuous place in the background; yet the horse still has a place, and in all probability always will have, and it is about a horse that my story is to be.

After my father died, we still kept our driving horse, a large and handsome black fellow. He might well have been named "Black Beauty," but instead he was called just "Ned."

Much of his care now devolved upon me. I was, and am still, a lover of animals and I loved Ned. To care for him was no cross to me, even in the coldest weather of winter, or during a driving blizzard. Many a time, under such conditions, I would make two trips to the barn, at meal time, once to get his feed, take it into the house and mix it with hot water and a little salt, and when I gave it to him, he ate it with such apparent relish that I felt more than repaid for my trouble. Then it was my custom to unhitch him at meal time, so that after eating he was free to back out of his stall and drink from the water tank, for he would never touch water before eating. I knew just about how long it took him to eat his grain and drink his water and then I would go out again to tie him. I always found him back in his stall, munching hay, but proof was there that he had been over to the tank, for he never failed to splash the water about on the floor, as though he had been playing in it.

One very cold winter night I had fed him as usual and made my last trip out to tie him. He was in his stall, but it could plainly be seen that he had not been out to drink as all was dry about the tank, so I waited for him to come out, walking back and forth over the barn floor to keep myself warm. Still he did not come. I began to feel chilled, while Ned calmly continued to eat his hay, occasionally turning his head to gaze at me. It was not long, however, before he reasoned my presence and purpose there in the cold. He backed out of his stall, walked deliberately to the tank, and without even looking at the water, returned and went back into his stall. All of this showed plainly that he had thought out a way to let me know that he did not wish to drink; also it was plainly shown, that although but a dumb animal, he possessed much of the human quality of selfishness. His actions spoke as loudly as any words could that he would not keep me waiting any longer. He was ready for me to tie him.

I have no doubt that animals think and have the same feelings as their human superiors, of course, in varying degrees, but the more an animal is made of and is petted, the more intelligent he grows and in the Great Beyond I cannot help believing that the spirit of the animal will be there, just as much as the spirit of the human. Surely there is a place big enough and broad enough for us all.

A PARABLE FOR SICK PARISHIONERS

Mrs. Huff is up the mill tree
On a seat fixed good and firm;
And she'd like to tell the preacher
A few things and make him squirm.

Mrs. Huff was sick abed, sir—
Yes, sir, sick abed a week!
And the preacher didn't call, sir,
Never even took a peek.

Wasn't that enough, enough, sir,
To provoke a saint to wrath?
And to make a Christian pilgrim
Wander from the churchly path?

When I asked her if the doctor
Called to see her, she said, "Sure."
And she looked as if she thought I
Needed some good, strong mind cure.

Then I asked her how the doctor
Knew that sickness laid her low,
And she said that she had called him
On the phone and told him so.

So the doctor called to see her,
But the preacher didn't go,
For the doctor knew that she was ill
And the preacher didn't know.

—O. Q. Bailey, in The Triangle.

Offense is more frequently given by the manner in which truth is spoken than by the truth itself. He who makes truth disagreeable, commits high treason against virtue.—Sophia Parker.

There ought to be more scrupulous honesty in big business men than in any other human relation. For big business requires team work on a gigantic scale.—Henry L. Doherty.

The spectrum of love has nine ingredients: patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness, sincerity.—Drummond.

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause.

—Henry Ward Beecher.

READABEDS

Mr. Edward Frederic Benson, our old friend "Dodo," recites his recreations in the English "Who's Who" as "golf, tennis, skating." These are his conventional out-of-door amusements. In The Spectator he reveals his favorite indoor recreation; and speaks broadly and confidently, from the heart. All properly constituted people read in bed." From his Elysian couch Mark Twain waves approval of that impregnable proposition. There are unfortunates, seething with frustrated desire for this healthful and necessary pastime, victims of the early bulldozing of ignorant nurses or thrifty parents bent on cutting down the bills for light.

How they used to dwell on the dangers of fire. These are negligible. The seasoned noctilegent must have tobacco with his book. If he drowses, he automatically wakes up at the moment the cigar starts to fall from his lips. Light pipe tobacco is sometimes a little too frolic. "Plug" may be preferred by conservatives. In any case, the superstitious and punctilious of housekeepers will be despised by the thoughtful. Cigarettes are too brief and fitful, but much unconscious exercise, the only kind that counts, may be had by the couchant puffer of these torches of Erebus. He leaps. He brushes. He whacks. Amid those easily quenched sparks his intellectual fire burns brighter. The decay of the old "reading lamp" and the triumph of electricity over gas have made reading in bed one of the safest, as it is one of the most healthful, of enjoyments. Mr. Benson doesn't go too far when he says that "any one who doesn't want to read in bed should consult a doctor."

What he shall take to that haunt of peace is his own business and pleasure. One remembers an old clergyman who used to pick out a dozen or fifteen books, leaving to his feeling and judgment, after half an hour or so of trial and error, to choose the fittest comrade of his mood when clarified and tranquilized by repose. The old notion that one goes to bed to sleep is outworn. Amid the modern multiplication of noises and inventions, bed is no place to invite sleep. More than an overdose of it can be had in the long and ever longer "wait" in automobile jams. The ether is packed with words. The small part of the population not making speeches is supposed to hear or read them. The subway and elevated rider, the six-days-a-week commuter, spends months of his years in sleep, unless, as Vermont grandmothers used to say, he wants to "spile his eyes."

Sleep is all right in its place. One may even sleep in bed, but the only shoehorn to innocent and refreshing slumber is a book easy to hold and to become as you like it. Mr. Benson warns against any exciting story, but the judicious member of the Book-a-Night-in-Bed Club may prefer some favorite to whose excitements, if it be Dumas or Stevenson, he is immune. Mr. Benson is a Janette. Almost any book of Anthony Trollope is a perfect bed-book to the acclimated Trollopean. Mr. Benson seems to think that bed-reading is a diversion of the night. Has he never tried it on a stormy Sunday? To be well-breakfasted, well-bolstered, well-lighted, this is an even choicer method. There are variations and excesses, as in every good.

We once knew a gentleman of much cultivation, himself an author, who was supposed to have disappeared from his country home one Summer day. Late in the afternoon it was remembered that nobody had seen him. Anxious search at length discovered him in a bathtub, going over "Vanity Fair" again, a bottle of whisky within easy reach. Fortunately, in a purer age, this divagation from bed-reading precedent is not apt to be imitated.—N. Y. Times.

"I see that you have a notice in your shop, 'We aim to please,'" remarked the irritated man.

"Yes," replied the proprietor, "that is our motto."

"Well," said the customer, "you ought to take a little time off for target practice."

After his speech, games were played in French, and refreshments were served. Professor Clement, of the French Department, was also a guest of the club.

ACCURATE SPEEDOMETERS

The speedometers of the new Model "A" Ford cars have shown remarkable accuracy in the measurement of speeds.

Designed and built to maintain an accuracy of within three miles fast at seventy miles per hour, these speedometers of the new Fords thus far have shown, in tests, an average accuracy of not more than one and a half miles fast at seventy miles per hour, or just one-half of the tolerance allowed.

The allowed tolerance of three miles fast at a speed of seventy miles per hour means, translated into terms of the average driving speeds, that if the speedometer on the car indicates a speed of twenty-four miles per hour the actual rate of travel of the car at that time is not less than twenty-three miles per hour, or that if the speedometer shows a speed of forty-seven miles per hour, the car actually is travelling at a speed of not less than forty-five miles per hour.

Whatever the speed limit allowed by law, the driver of one of the new Fords may be certain that he is within that limit if his speedometer indicates exactly that figure which is the legal limit.

The speedometer which is standard equipment on the new Fords is one of the best known and finest of makes. It is driven from a gear on the drive shaft and measures speed from the revolutions per minute of the shaft. The tests of these instruments that are being made regularly in the Ford Engineering Laboratory at Dearborn are interesting. The speedometers are tested against an electric tachometer, which in turn is checked with an integrating revolution counter, the most precise device made for determining speeds in revolutions per minute.

The timid young woman, for the first time in a bank, approached the paying teller and gave him a check which she wanted to cash.

"How do you wish the money?" the teller inquired.

"Oh," she replied in some confusion, "I'll just hold out my hand and you can put the money in it."

IS YOUR DOG STUBBORN?

Instances have been known in which a child suffered himself to be beaten to death because rendered apparently incapable of performing a simple command. It is very much the same way with a dog. To stand over him with the loud noises and menacing gestures often so frighten him that he cannot obey your orders—cannot even think. He is, for the time, virtually paralyzed.

Temperament has to be considered in dealing with dogs. Remember, he is next to man in intelligence. Recently I saw an instance of self-consciousness as I ever saw in a person.

The little fellow, a fox terrier, had been ordered to walk across the street on his hind legs. At his first attempt, a crowd gathered. Immediately, the dog showed timidity, and for the life of him he could not keep his balance for more than a few steps.

The man remarked that his pet had done the trick scores of times; but in answer to my question he said that the terrier had never performed before a crowd. Most of the spectators thought that the dog was stubborn, but he was not; he wanted to obey, but his mind was on the crowd and he could not concentrate on the trick. Later, when only a few persons remained, he succeeded.

Often dogs are easily intimidated, and the more you rail at or whip such a dog, the more helpless he becomes. He is like a child, but he remains that way; age does not develop the faculty of reason as it does in a person. If temperamentally timid and sensitive as a puppy, he cannot school himself out of the weakness as a girl or boy does—anyway, not to anything like the same extent.

Gentleness and kindness are absolutely the only effective measure with such a dog. Usually, he is particularly smart, if wisely handled. He will do anything for you, his master, if he can and when he can; but there may be certain conditions, as it was with the fox terrier and the crowd, that inhibit, shackle his abilities. It is up to you to know your pet's disposition and to treat him accordingly.

A stubborn dog is rare indeed; I cannot say that I have ever known one, and I have known a lot of dogs. Under normal conditions of surroundings and health, the average dog is affectionate and obedient. To him, you, his master, are the whole world. He lives for you, gets his greatest joy from pleasing you and earning a kind word and a few pats on the head. Such a creature does not know what stubbornness is; when he fails there is some good reason; he may not understand, he may be ill, or he may be so nervous or embarrassed that he has no muscular control. If you own two dogs, jealousy will often hamper one of them; he is too hurt over your partiality to do himself justice. But he isn't stubborn; he'd like nothing better than to do his best, but he can't do it when you are obviously more fond of the other dog.

The Cleveland Humane Society, originally organized in 1873 for the protection of animals, but, in 1876, including the protection of children, has now given up entirely the care of animals and is devoted wholly to the children's work. Its department of animal protection has been merged with the Animal Rescue Home under the name of The Humane Society Animal Rescue Home which is devoted entirely to the protection of animals.—L. E. Eubanks, in "Our Dumb Animals."

Oh, the comfort, the inexpressible comfort of feeling safe with a person—having neither to weigh thoughts nor measure words, but pouring them all out just as they are, chaff and grain together; certain that a faithful hand will take and sift them, keep what is worth keeping, and with a breath of kindness blow the rest away.—Elbert Hubbard II.

Christian Science Churches

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 11.

The golden text was from Romans 11:26; "All Israel shall be saved as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob."

Among the citations from the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. But there went up a mist from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground, and the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground" (Genesis 1:26, 2:6).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It may be worth while here to remark that, according to the best scholars, there are evidences of two distinct documents in the early part of the book of Genesis. The science of the first record proves the falsity of the second."

THE SECRET OF THE PSALMS

The secret of the Psalms lies in the fact that they spring from the constant realization that everything in the universe and in the fortunes of men is dependent on God's will, and must finally fulfill His purpose. These ancient poets offer us a striking contrast to their modern successors. It would seem that nowadays men seek the inspiration of their verse by turning their thoughts upon themselves to be absorbed in reflecting on their own sensations, their own sorrows, their own perplexities, or their own triumphs. Their eyes are turned entirely to the little things of their human experience, and everything is judged in its relation to themselves. It is not so with the Psalmists. The central theme of life for them is God, and His praise is their joy. Their customary refrain is: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, From whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, Which made heaven and earth."

"MUSIC IN MAY" THE PERFECT MUSIC PLAY

In "Music In May," which the Messrs. Shubert are presenting at the Forrest Theatre, Walnut street between 11th and 12th streets, Philadelphia, this producing firm which occupies the undisputed position of leader in the field of operetta, has a worthy successor to its prior successes, "Maytime," "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince" and "My Maryland." Since its first performance, this new offering, described as "the perfect music play," and acclaimed by critics as such, has proved just the kind of show that Philadelphia and its vicinity enjoys to the utmost. Crowds at every performance attest this fact.

The score of "Music in May," by Emile Berte of "Blossom Time" fame and Maury Ruben, is delightful, from the opening chorus to the third act finale, while the lyrics by J. Kiern Brennan are far above the average. And there is a wonderful singing cast to show off the good points of the music and the story. The principals include Solly Ward, Greek Evans, Marion Marchante, Bartlett Simmons and Gladys Baxter. Marion Marchante has the prima donna ingenue role, while the "heavy" comedy of the piece is in the capable hands of the popular Solly Ward, of Music Box Revue days, and one of the best laugh-getters of the present crop of dialect entertainers. In the feminine part of the cast, Marjorie Leach takes care of the comedy. Others are Charles Lawrence, Edith Scott, George Offerman, Jr., Joseph Lertora, Joseph Toner, Charles Chesney and James Norris. There is a male student chorus which evokes unstinted applause at each appearance, their work being especially noteworthy in the rollicking numbers, "Seidels," and "High! High! High!" Then, too, there are Chester Hale Girls, dancers, who are attractive and skilled.

The story of "Music in May," adapted from the original German by Fanny Todd Mitchell, deals with a Prince falling in love with the daughter of a purveyor of umbrellas and sunshades. There are romance, complications and fun. There are Viennese waltzes and there is jazz to please everybody. The settings are gorgeous and the costumes dazzling. One of the features is an ensemble of sixteen young women musicians, Smith's String Orchestra, with Rita Mario. Besides there is a full and excellent symphony orchestra. "Music in May"

ORCHESTRA BATON CAUSED DEATH OF ITS INVENTOR

The orchestra season is again well under way and the baton is in full swing. Though simple in construction this invaluable equipment of the orchestra conductor was not a simple invention. It even caused the death of its inventor, the composer Jean Baptiste Lully.

Until Lully's time the custom was for the conductor to tap on the floor with his foot in marking time. Lully, while conducting Louis XIV's band of "Petits Violins," found it wearisome to mark time with his foot for a long period, and he sought to find a substitute for it. One day he appeared before his orchestra with a six-foot staff.

At one prominent court function, when Lully was called upon to direct his band the composer-conductor was so intent on making a great impression on his audience that he brought down the end of his pole with unwonted exertion. During the climax of the composition being given he brought down the pole with such force that, striking his foot, it caused a deep wound. Lully was so engrossed in his conducting that he paid no attention to the injury. Blood poisoning set in and spread rapidly to the heart, resulting in Lully's death. The pole, or baton, adopted by other conductors, was steadily made less and less unwieldy until it was brought down to its present size.

Harold (showing Granny his wireless set): "Of course, you know who invented wireless, don't you, Granny? It was Marconi!"
Granny: "Harold! Harold! How disrespectful! You should say Mrs. Conl."

NEWARK TAKES D. I. A. A. LEAD

Play Desultory Game, But Defeat Middletown, 19 to 6; Puts Newark At Top Of Northern Bracket

By beating Middletown, at Middletown, last Friday, Newark High School established themselves in the lead for the Northern half of the D. I. A. A. football championship. The final score of Friday's game was 19 to 6. Newark showed marked superiority in the first quarter, and two touchdowns by "Rip" Smith, Newark's triple threat back, assured the game for the local team. However, from the first on, Newark let down and played an indifferent game.

Showing an excess of fight and fire as the game opened, Newark carried the ball straight down the field twice for touchdowns in the first period. Smith taking the ball over each time. The first try for extra point failed, but a pass, Holloway to Captain "Winnie" Mayer netted the seventh point on the second touchdown.

During the second period, Coach Gillespie made a number of substitutions in the Newark team, and the team slowed down to a walk. However, McCully took the ball over once for Newark's third and final score. A try for extra point failed.

Neither team displayed much football in the third quarter, and neither goal line was threatened. In the last quarter, all the steam seemed to ooze from the Newark squad and Middletown carried the ball down the field for a touchdown in five straight first downs.

Aside from Edmondson and Frank Mayer, all of the Newark players developed that old tendency to let down after they had a lead. In this case it wasn't dangerous, as they outclassed Middletown thoroughly, but to have Middletown score was no credit to Newark. The game was marked by excellent officiating. Lineup:

DELAWARE WINS ITS FIRST GAME

Takes Easy Victory From Gallaudet, 24 to 0; Backfield Comes To Life

Among the various startling football upsets of last Saturday, prominent mention may well be given the University of Delaware football team, which made its first score and won its first game of the season. Playing on Frazer Field for the first time in four weeks, the Blue and Gold suddenly acquired an offensive that rattled the Gallaudet line, and eventually rolled up a score of 24 to 0.

The deaf mutes brought a light team to Newark, and Delaware took the game right out of their hands, allowing them only 3 first downs in the first half and none in the second. On the kick-off Delaware started a march down the field on straight football. Hubert and diJoseph bore the brunt of the plunging, hitting the Gallaudet line for gain after gain. Taylor fumbled and Gallaudet recovered and for a few minutes looked dangerous, carrying the ball to the Delaware 20 yard line. However, Delaware recovered and a pass, Morris to diJoseph, 2 end runs by Taylor, and 18 yards through the line by Hubert brought the ball to the mutes 11 yard distance. diJoseph hit the line for 8 yards and then Taylor took the ball around end for Delaware's first score of the season. The try for extra point failed. In fact all four tries for the seventh point were unsuccessful.

Newark-Dover Game Will Decide D. I. A. A. Finals

On the Newark School Field, at 1:30 Saturday afternoon, the Newark High School football team will meet Dover High School in a game which will decide whether or not Newark will play Laurel on Thanksgiving Day for the State D. I. A. A. Championship. Should Newark win Saturday's game, it will make them undisputed Northern champions, but if the local team drops this game to Dover, it will throw Newark, Dover and duPont into a three cornered tie for the Northern championship. Dover and duPont have each lost two games, while Newark has lost but the one game, to duPont early in the season. Should this tie develop, it would probably mean postponing the State championship game to a later date than Thanksgiving.

In the second quarter Delaware kept up its same line boring tactics, and held the ball in enemy territory. Late in the half, Captain Glasser raced back of the Gallaudet line and leaping into the air pulled down a long pass for the second touchdown. Glasser did identically the same thing in the last quarter for Delaware's fourth and last score.

Delaware tried some fancy work in the third period, but the stitches didn't hold and no score was made. However, Gallaudet was outclassed and made no threats to score.

In the last half, the Blue and Gold returned to straight football and scored two more touchdowns, one Glasser's spectacular catch of a high pass, and the other on a buck through the line by diJoseph.

While the Delaware backfield did some real execution for the season, the Delaware line showed its real worth and opened the seams in the line that the backs sifted through. When Gallaudet held the ball, the Blue and Gold forwards held the mutes in check successfully.

This Saturday Delaware will meet St. Josephs on Frazer Field. Lineup:

The Blue Hen Tea Room continues to further establish its reputation as the tea house of Newark. The thing that sustains this reputation more than anything else is the year after year patrons. So regardless whether you are a regular or just one who comes once in a while, you will always find a warmly welcome awaiting you and good old Blue Hen dependable service.

PREST-O-LITE HELPS HUNT GAME IN AFRICA

Mr. Kreuger, the Wilmington Prest-O-Lite Battery man, was talking the other day about dependability in batteries. He said, "Of course, the Prest-O-Lite organization is world wide. The P. O. L. distributor in South Africa wrote the company from Salisbury in South Rhodesia, which is nearly 2000 miles from Cape Town, the headquarters of Mr. Ashley, the 'Dark Continent' distributor. Mr. Ashley reports game very plentiful, but he did not run into any lions. South Africa is a Prest-O-Lite stronghold and, although two-thirds as large as the United States, has only 100,000 motor cars. In fact the little old State of Delaware stands up against the whole of South Africa."

The Prest-O-Lite people have about fifty service stations and dealers and since the first of the year has purchased over 2000 batteries—all Rubber and standard Prest-O-Lites. These batteries have established a reputation for reliability and dependability that makes them the battery wanted in that country of great distances. Mr. Kreuger says, "That if there is no good for Africa then there is no room for argument as to their value in this good old country."

STRONG CATOR TAKES NEW MERCHANDISING STEP

The Armstrong Cator Company is a new merchandising house, established in Baltimore in 1803, 25 years ago. It has, during that period of time, been a manufacturer of millinery and a wholesaler of general merchandise to retailers throughout the country. On October 1st this institution decided to change its policy from wholesaling to dealers to wholesaling to the direct. The first step was a move to Baltimore. This step was quickly followed by a branch in Washington, one in Norfolk, and a third in Wilmington, Delaware. The policy of this organization is to sell all merchandise at wholesale prices direct to the public, eliminating many of the costly practices of retail stores, being manufacturers of millinery, all helping to contribute the success of this plan.

Lodge Notes

K. OF P.

Oseola Lodge, No. 5, Knights of Pythias, Monday evening at a regular meeting completed plans for a box social on next Monday evening, at which the Pythian Sisters will take part. In giving this box social the members of Oseola will get away from the old way of ladies bringing boxes and will furnish boxes themselves, and let the ladies do the buying. Everybody is urged to turn out next Monday evening.

A. O. U. W. WILL ATTEND BANQUET

Tomorrow evening, Anchor Lodge, No. 4, Ancient Order of United Workmen will attend a banquet given by Grand Master Workman Howard F. McCall, at Workman Hall, 900 Washington street, Wilmington. The Newark lodge will assemble at their room in Fraternal Hall in time to take a special bus, which will leave for Wilmington at 7:00 o'clock sharp. There will be no charge to any of the members for this trip, funds being taken out of the A. O. U. W. Booster's Club treasury.

The Master Workman is giving this banquet as one of the events in the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the A. O. U. W.

Anchor Lodge this week sent baskets of fruit to Ellis Todd and Vernon Jackson, both of Elk Mills, who are in a Wilmington hospital recovering from an automobile accident. They are members of the Newark organization.

JR. O. U. A. M.

A wonderful spirit of true brotherhood was shown in the American Flag Council, No. 28, Jr. O. U. A. M. session last Monday evening. Councilor A. Neal Smythe received new members. Brother Colmery spoke on his trip to Washington for Armistice services. Brother McMullen told of the banquet that followed. Brother Norton had prepared a special treat of extra fine refreshments. After the session closed the brothers all congregated and related interesting experiences of their lives.

MORE FOOLS NEEDED

Someone should write a poem, dedicate a library or erect a glorious statue to the enthusiastic fools of the world. A fool is a man with a great idea which he can't prove. After he has shown the soundness of his thesis, the world acclaims him a genius.

If people back in dear old Spain prior to 1492 knew what it meant to be cuckoo or woozie or dotty or something like that, they would have said Columbus was that way. Pulton was the laughing stock of New York until the Clermont sailed the Hudson. Lindbergh, up to that day in May, 1927, when he gave the world the greatest supply of gooseflesh it has had in centuries, was called the "flying fool."

It would be possible to string out a series of human interest stories about enthusiastic fools who have accounted for the great things that have been done for civilization in advancing it to its present stage of jazz by radio, grade crossing accidents and wrong numbers.

Conservatism and caution have their place in the world but we would still be running around in ox carts and getting just all excited and nervous over stereopticon exhibitions if there had not been a lot of enthusiastic fools in the world.—Harry Daniel, in "Thrill Magazine."

I am a link in the Golden Chain of Love that stretches around the world, and must keep my link bright and strong.

So I will try to be kind and gentle to every living thing I meet and to protect and help all who are weaker than myself.

And I will try to think pure and beautiful thoughts, to speak pure and beautiful words and to do pure and beautiful actions.

May every link in the Golden Chain become bright and strong.—Annie Besant.
