Neither snow, nor sleet, slows street crews

NEWARK POST STAFF PHOTOS BY HEIDI SCHMIDT
Snow plows that have been sitting idle around Newark for months got a workout after three storms in less than two weeks. On Monday, city of Newark crews were finally getting a chance to plow their own maintenance yards. Meanwhile, crews from the Christina School District were working on the parking lot at Newark High School.

Despite three winter storms in less than two weeks, it's just business as usual for the city of Newark's street clearing and snow removal.

"I can't praise the streets, water and parks people enough," said public works director Richard Lapointe. "The storm (last week) caught everybody off guard, but street foreman Pat Michini came in at 4 a.m. (on Jan. 25) and we had the crews out at 5 a.m."

Lapointe said the city prepares whether the forecast is for two inches or 12 inches of snow. "Then we play it by ear when the snow starts," Lapointe said, "depending on how fast it comes down and how much."

New Castle County got three inches of snow on Jan. 20, followed by a walloping and unexpected nine inches, five days later. Last Sunday, the area was coated with an additional two-inch mix of snow, sleet and ice.

Public works superintendent Pat Bartling said Michini who usually comes in at 8 a.m. came in early because of the storm forecast on Jan. 25. The crews then worked around the clock from Tuesday morning into the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 26.

"We have five snow routes and used eight trucks, including two from the water and parks and rec departments," Bartling said. "We not only plowed streets, we hauled off the snow from Main Street to leave parking spaces."

Bartling said the snow was hauled truckload by truckload from downtown to the old Curtis paper mill site now owned by the city.

"We used 500 manhours, including 150 hours of overtime, from all departments in the city in those two days," Bartling said. "We also had mechanics on call around the clock in case of equipment breakdown."

Personnel from other city departments also cleaned sidewalks and city property.

This time last year the city of Newark was nearly out of salt supplies after several ice storms in a row caused the state's supplier to

Developer pleads guilty

The city of Newark has received enough money to replant a new sycamore tree on the site of the Charcoal Pit — as well as a few more.

On Jan. 28, Judge Loretto Rufo tripled the restitution of $1,500 at the trial in Alderman's Court in Newark following the plea of guilty from developer Louis Capano & Associates.

"The judge said he wanted the city to use the extra ($3,000) to plant trees wherever the city chooses," said assistant city solicitor Bruce Herron. "The $1,500 is the

"Vial of Life" program started by County EMS

The New Castle County Police Department Emergency Medical Services Section has a new initiative targeting senior citizens or county residents who live alone. Called the "Vial of Life" program, it will provide critical medical and notification information to paramedics, fire-fighters or police officers in the event of a medical emergency.

A medicine vial that contains a preprinted form with medical and personal information is stored in either the butter tray or the top door shelf of the refrigerator, and is marked by a magnet that is placed on the outside door of the refrigerator. Emergency responders would be aware of the Vial of Life by the presence of the door magnet.

This program represents a restoration of an earlier program that was started in some of the senior citizen high rise apartment complexes. The information contained in the vial includes the resident's name, date of birth, past medical history, current medications, allergies, and personal physician's name and hospital preference.

"Our paramedics will be able to use this information for the treatment of patients who are unable to speak on their own behalf," said Lawrence E. Tan, commander of Emergency Medical Services Operations for the County Police Department.

Happy Harry's Discount Drug Stores has provided the medicine vials for the project while informational brochures were provided by the Krienan-Griffiths Funeral Homes.

County residents interested in obtaining additional information should call 571-7948. The Vial of Life program is provided as a free service of the New Castle County paramedics.

CALEA assessors complete NPD review Legislative committee to hold second public meeting this month

Newark Police will not know for at least a month if the department has been reaccredited but Sgt. Thomas LeMin said it looks pretty good.

"The assessors from CALEA (Commission for Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies) were here on-site for four-and-a-half days," said the city's accreditation manager. "They toured the facility, checked the equipment operation, reviewed our files and interviewed officers."

On Monday, Jan. 24, the assessors rode along with officers and sat in on training and rollcall. In the midst of a sudden snowstorm the next day, the assessors took public comment about the department.

"We had one guest speaker, Senior Sgt. Richard Harkness of the New Castle County Police, who actually came out on Tuesday night and spoke for us," said LeMin. "We also had call-ins and a letter from the Delaware River and Bay Authority."

LeMin said the assessors gave an informal overview of their findings to the assembled officers on duty before leaving on Wednesday. "They did not indicate any problems," said

LeMin. "We think we did OK."

In March, Police Chief Gerald Conway will travel to Las Vegas where the reaccreditation board is meeting this year. "He will meet with them and address any questions they have," said LeMin. "They will already have the report prepared by the on-site assessors."

The board will issue their decision concerning the international accreditation at that time. "The board can also issue conditional accreditation with suggestions for fixing problems," said LeMin. "If they do not reaccredit us, which we do not expect, then we would have to reapply and go through the whole process again."

Newark Police have to meet 439 standards in order to qualify for the accreditation. Following the fatal train accident at the Deer Park intersection last July, the department also instituted additional procedures and training not addressed in the previous CALEA standards.

A House of Representatives Investigative Committee chaired by State Representative Joseph Miro will hold their second public hearing into the train incident at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 29 at Clayton Hall. The committee's final report to the state legislature is due in April.

Newark man charged in Internet underage sex case

New Castle County police arrested a Newark man for sexual solicitation of a child after he allegedly solicited sex via the Internet from an undercover police officer who posed as a 14-year-old female.

New Castle County Police received information from a citizen in Texas about a possible sexual predator who was soliciting sex from young girls on the Internet.

The undercover officer opened an account posing as a 14-year-old female and made contact with the suspect who immediately inquired about the officer's age. A short time later, the suspect began engaging in sexually explicit chat with the supposed 14-year-old. Over a period of several weeks, the suspect suggested several times that he and the undercover officer should meet to engage in sexual activity.

On Jan. 12, at 8 p.m., the suspect arranged a meeting with the undercover officer, believing he was a 14-year-old female, at a predetermined place on Christiana Road, near Court 11. The suspect responded to the location after soliciting sex from the officer.

Police arrested Scott Anthony Roberts, 25, of the Buckingham Place Apartments at the scene without incident.

Traffic Calming workshop Monday

The city of Newark, DeIDOT and the Old Newark Civic Association will discuss transportation problems and ways to slow speeding in the Old Newark area at a Traffic Calming Public Workshop on Feb. 7. The workshop sponsored by WILMAPCO starts at 7 p.m.

Accountability hearings this week

The House Education Accountability Committee will hold public hearings this week in Middletown High School at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 10, and 9:30 a.m. to noon at Howard High School, Wilmington, on Saturday, Feb. 12.

Assembly plant sets up college on-site

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Employees at the DaimlerChrysler Newark Assembly Plant can now work fulltime and pursue a bachelor of science degree in business administration without ever leaving the building.

Delaware State University, the United Automobile Workers Union, and DaimlerChrysler signed a partnership agreement to bring professors to teach at the plant in Newark.

"We're providing the space and opportunity on-site," said the plant's human resources director, Archie E. Williams. "Employees are eligible for a tuition refund just as with any other degree program, but this is a nice thing because it's more convenient."

Williams said six classrooms will be used in the plant's existing education training center. "We have 79 employees enrolled this session and about 235 have expressed an interest in participating," Williams explained. "The classes run 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. and 4:15 to 7:15 p.m. so employees can attend after the first shift or before the second shift," he said.

According to Williams, students who take two classes per session in all five, eight-week sessions each year can get their degree in four years. "College algebra and English courses are being offered during this first semester that started Jan. 18," Williams said.

In addition to providing instruction in the classroom, DSU will develop a student and academic support program that will offer counseling and tutorial services.

"There is a population of employees who need to be evaluated before they can begin classes," said Sherman Miller, acting director of the DSU Wilmington campus, who is coordinator for the program. "We plan to have an academic program in place for this group in March."

The partnership with the UAW Union is the first of its kind for DSU. "The plant had a masters degree program set up here with Wilmington College some time ago," said Williams, "but we didn't get enough people to keep it going."

Plant manager Jim Wolfe said the work force is changing with the influx of many new and younger employees.

Clyde Quillen, president of United Auto Workers Local 1183, agreed. "Our line workers will now have an opportunity to pursue a college degree," Quillen said. "That's very important to our younger employees who want to advance and expand their career options."

According to DSU president William DeLauder, the college views this as an opportunity to expand in New Castle County.

"We're also providing DaimlerChrysler employees with quality academic programs without the inconvenience of traveling to a different location," he said.

The plant, with approximately 3,200 workers, is the only one worldwide that assembles and produces the Dodge Durango Sport Utility Vehicle.

Tons of salt used to clear snowstorms to run low. This year, the city is in better shape, but sent in a new order on Jan. 28.

"Each truck holds 25 tons of salt and we used 175 tons of salt and 100 tons of sand last week," said Bartling. "When the temperature drops below 20 degrees, you have to mix the two for traction. We like to keep about 350 tons of salt on hand."

Lapointe said the crews plowed and salted every street in the city, but could only get in for one lane on streets where there were parked cars. "That's a problem," Lapointe noted. "People get out and shovel, then we come along and plow in their driveways and we get complaints galore."

Meanwhile, the Delaware Department of Transportation battled the snow and ice piling up on the major highways in the state. According to DelDOT, more than 325 pieces of equipment and 350 people put in 30 continuous hours of snow removal on the interstate system after the Jan. 25 storm. Secondary roads, such as those with state route numbers were passable but still snowcovered up to two days after the storm.

According to state officials, snow drifting back across roads caused much of the problem. They cautioned against slippery conditions, especially on hills, and requested residents to be patient as they tried to re-open the highways.

For information about snow events in Delaware, citizens can visit the DelDOT website at www.deldot.net. The state provides real time data as well as views from numerous traffic cameras.

Kalbacher running for second term

First time Newark city councilmember Karl Kalbacher said he liked the experience so much he's running again. "I've enjoyed it even when we've been challenged," said Kalbacher with a smile. "I think we do a good job and I want to continue."

Although he has served on the Newark Conservation Advisory Commission, Newark Flood Plain Management Task Force and the South Wellfield Advisory Committee, the District 3 member had never held public office prior to running for Newark city council in 1998. He ran unsuccessfully for the Delaware House of Representatives in 1996.

Kalbacher said his main interests this time around in Newark include electric deregulation, solid waste, and recycling. "I want to find ways to reduce the cost of providing electricity to the customers," he said. "In regard to solid waste disposal, the city has a contract right now but it's time to start planning - there are other places we could send it for less, even out of state."

Kalbacher said the entire state could do a better job of recycling. "It's inexcusable that we have no curbside recycling in Delaware,"

he said. "And it would help if the state provided incentives for businesses to use recycled materials in new products."

Kalbacher said he also wants to see the water supply issue and reservoir project resolved. "And I also agree with Frank Osborne that it's time to look at the city's Comprehensive Plan," Kalbacher said.

Osborne, currently councilmember in Newark's 5th District, is also running for reelection. He has proposed that council discuss comprehensive planning at a council workshop.

The seat in District 6, presently held by Gerald J. Grant Jr. is also up for election. Grant has not indicated whether he will run again. As of Wednesday, no other persons had filed to run in the April election.

FIRST THOMPSON AWARD GOES TO STERCK

The Brookside Lions Club recently presented the first annual Joseph Edmund "Ed" Thompson Memorial Award to the Margaret S. Sterck School for the Deaf. On hand for the presentation of the award and a check for $1,000 were: son Keith and daughter-in-law Debbie Thompson, both members of the Glasgow Lions Club, Mrs. Gerri Thompson, Emil LaVita, chairman of the Sight and Hearing Committee chairman for the Brookside Lions, Sterck principal Ed Bosso, and Jack McCloskey, Brookside Lions past president.

The award will be given each year in memory of Thompson who served in the Lions Club for more than 52 years.

Thompson was a past president of the Brookside Lions Club, a district deputy governor and a former president of the Lions Eye Bank of Delaware Valley. His many honors included the Sightseekers Award from the Lions Eye Bank, two International Lions president's commendations as well as Ralph Helm and Melvin Jones Fellowships. Throughout his life as a Lion, Thompson strongly endorsed the emphasis Lions Clubs International has placed on both sight conservation and aiding the deaf or hard of hearing.

CSX agrees to wall on RR land

GRAVES, from 1

Norris Wright, University of Delaware facilities director Dick Walter, Newark planning director Roy Lopata, University of Delaware government relations director Rick Armitage, state representative Timothy Boulden (R-Newark), and CSX Railroad representative Steve Peniel were among those who reviewed the site for the wall on Monday.

"CSX has agreed to let the wall be built (partly) on their right-of-way, which takes the issue of grave desecration right out of the picture," said

Billingsley. "The wall can be started and completed in about six weeks this summer."

Billingsley said the wall section will look exactly like adjacent portions previously installed by the University.

The extension to the existing wall that currently runs along the rail line near the University's Fraser Field was approved by Newark city council as part of an agreement which would provide safety upgrades at railroad crossings and along the tracks. Under the agreement, the city will build the fence with CSX funding and the owners of the cemetery will maintain it.

CSX has already promised $50,000 for the wall expected to cost approximately $156,000, according to Billingsley. "Another $40,000 is coming from the state legislature's Street Funds," he told other NTRC members. "I will go back and see if the railroad can (give more to make up the difference needed)."

In August 1999, city council rejected all bids for putting up the wall because the lowest bid was $249,269. The high cost was blamed at that time on the limited access to the site due to locations of the gravesites and the railroad tracks.

Ideas offered to improve ped safety

CROSSING, from 1

from Main Street to the railroad tracks. "This would take significant pressure off the crosswalk at College Avenue and Main Street," said Godwin. "Drivers going south now can only go to the Deer Park intersection and they could go around to there by Cleveland Avenue."

Godwin said this way, drivers at South College would not have to negotiate a right turn onto Main Street while checking for traffic coming on their left. "Any pedestrian crossing in the blind spot in front of the Evans house is probably going to be a University student," said Godwin. "I've heard people say they almost hit students when they thought they were doing the right thing."

Meanwhile, NTRC member Jack Billingsley told the committee that he had talked to Reza Moghissi, chief traffic engineer at the Delaware Department of Transportation, about a separate walk time for pedestrians crossing South College at that intersection. "Pedestrians would have over a minute to cross this way," said Billingsley.

Moghissi said currently pedestrians can cross South College when vehicles have the green light on Main Street, which puts the pedestrians in the way of vehicles turning left onto South College.

City planning director Roy Lopata said he could not agree with Billingsley's proposal. "At (almost) every other intersection downtown, drivers have to look when turning left - that's not unusual," said Lopata.

Lopata also noted that the traffic flow on Main Street was a concern to businesses and the added pedestrian crossing time would slow traffic down. "If this change is not going to slow traffic, then that's not an issue, but I don't see how it can't."

Lopata further noted that proposals of this sort are supposed to go to DeIDOT through city council.

"The city's Traffic Committee has to look at this and then city council has to send a resolution to DeIDOT if they want to do it," said Lopata. "I sit on the Traffic Committee and I never heard anything about this."

Elizabeth Short, DeIDOT liaison to the NTRC, assured NTRC members that DeIDOT was not considering any changes at the intersection at this time. "I have talked to the Mayor and I understand that anything which involves changes has to go before city council for a resolution," she said.

FIRST THOMPSON AWARD GOES TO STERCK

The Brookside Lions Club recently presented the first annual Joseph Edmund "Ed" Thompson Memorial Award to the Margaret S. Sterck School for the Deaf. On hand for the presentation of the award and a check for $1,000 were: son Keith and daughter-in-law Debbie Thompson, both members of the Glasgow Lions Club, Mrs. Gerri Thompson, Emil LaVita, chairman of the Sight and Hearing Committee chairman for the Brookside Lions, Sterck principal Ed Bosso, and Jack McCloskey, Brookside Lions past president.

The award will be given each year in memory of Thompson who served in the Lions Club for more than 52 years.

Thompson was a past president of the Brookside Lions Club, a district deputy governor and a former president of the Lions Eye Bank of Delaware Valley. His many honors included the Sightseekers Award from the Lions Eye Bank, two International Lions president's commendations as well as Ralph Helm and Melvin Jones Fellowships. Throughout his life as a Lion, Thompson strongly endorsed the emphasis Lions Clubs International has placed on both sight conservation and aiding the deaf or hard of hearing.

CSX agrees to wall on RR land

► GRAVES, from 1

Norris Wright, University of Delaware facilities director Dick Walter, Newark planning director Roy Lopata, University of Delaware government relations director Rick Armitage, state representative Timothy Boulden (R-Newark), and CSX Railroad representative Steve Peniel were among those who reviewed the site for the wall on Monday.

"CSX has agreed to let the wall be built (partly) on their right-of-way, which takes the issue of grave desecration right out of the picture," said

Billingsley. "The wall can be started and completed in about six weeks this summer."

Billingsley said the wall section will look exactly like adjacent portions previously installed by the University.

The extension to the existing wall that currently runs along the rail line near the University's Fraser Field was approved by Newark city council as part of an agreement which would provide safety upgrades at railroad crossings and along the tracks. Under the agreement, the city will build the fence with CSX funding and the owners of the cemetery will maintain it.

CSX has already promised $50,000 for the wall expected to cost approximately $156,000, according to Billingsley. "Another $40,000 is coming from the state legislature's Street Funds," he told other NTRC members. "I will go back and see if the railroad can (give more to make up the difference needed)."

In August 1999, city council rejected all bids for putting up the wall because the lowest bid was $249,269. The high cost was blamed at that time on the limited access to the site due to locations of the gravesites and the railroad tracks.

Ideas offered to improve ped safety

from Main Street to the railroad tracks. "This would take significant pressure off the crosswalk at College Avenue and Main Street," said Godwin. "Drivers going south now can only go to the Deer Park intersection and they could go around to there by Cleveland Avenue."

Godwin said this way, drivers at South College would not have to negotiate a right turn onto Main Street while checking for traffic coming on their left. "Any pedestrian crossing in the blind spot in front of the Evans house is probably going to be a University student," said Godwin. "I've heard people say they almost hit students when

Meanwhile, NTRC member Jack Billingsley told the committee that he had talked to Reza Moghissi, chief traffic engineer at the Delaware Department of Transportation, about a separate walk time for pedestrians crossing South College at that intersection. "Pedestrians would have over a minute to cross this way," said Billingsley.

Moghissi said currently pedestrians can cross South College when vehicles have the green light on Main Street, which puts the pedestrians in the way of vehicles turning left onto South College.

City planning director Roy Lopata said he could not agree with Billingsley's proposal. "At (almost) every other intersection downtown, drivers have to look when turning left - that's not unusual," said Lopata.

Lopata also noted that the traffic flow on Main Street was a concern to businesses and the added pedestrian crossing time would slow traffic down. "If this change is not going to slow traffic, then that's not an issue, but I don't see how it can't."

Lopata further noted that proposals of this sort are supposed to go to DelDOT through city council.

"The city's Traffic Committee has to look at this and then city council has to send a resolution to DelDOT if they want to do it," said Lopata. "I sit on the Traffic Committee and I never heard anything about this."

Court orders funds for more trees around Newark amount Capano said it would cost to replace the tree on that site."

Rufo also fined the developer $1,000 for violating the city code.

Contractors digging a utility trench at the Charcoal Pit building on Main Street cut into the roots of the old tree in December causing it to become unstable. The city stopped work at the site and had the tree demolished for safety reasons.

City manager Carl Luft said the arborist retained by Capano did all the work involved in taking down the tree. "We agreed to use him as well because he also was recommended by our parks and rec department," said Luft. "The city supervised the removal."

Luft said Tree Tech, the arborists, will arrange the replanting as soon as the weather permits. "It will probably be sometime in March or April," said Luft. "The arborist also gave detailed information about the care the new tree will need to be maintained properly."

City parks and recreation director Charles Emerson is preparing an assessment of where to put other trees with the additional restitution monies from Capano. "I gave some ideas of places to plant," said Luft, "but I told Charlie Emerson to prepare a report with his suggestions."

City resident Jean White told city council in January she is concerned about the city's care of their trees in general.

"Mature street trees were removed at the Center Square site (another development on Main Street)," White said. "That wasn't indicated as part of the plan and the place where they were has now been bricked over so it doesn't look they will be replaced."

White also noted that several sycamore trees were taken down near the intersection of Wyoming Road and Library Avenue where the Delaware Technology Park is expanding. "It's a terrible shame,"

White said. "We have to do something in Newark to protect our trees."

In December, city council agreed to withhold the Certificate of Occupancy for the Capano site until the tree was replanted. City building director Junie Mayle said this week that the developer had not applied for the certificate. "If they apply for the CO before the tree goes in, we will require them to escrow funds to cover the cost of replanting before issuing it."

Don't get the facts in a community vacuum

Often in the past we have urged residents to attend meetings and become informed about particular issues or local government in general.

We still make the same recommendation.

Recently, however, a new concern has arisen which leads us to present an amendment to that suggestion: just because you have an informed opinion doesn't mean you can proceed without consulting the rest of us.

In this community, as in every other in the world, there are people who believe they see a solution and just want to get the job done. They are impatient with, and make a virtue of ignoring, those people who see what they believe is a solution but realize they need time and cooperation from others to make it work.

These approaches most often conflict in Delaware when public discussions address new construction or changes to roads, buildings and property.

A few times in Newark, even state legislators and city councilmembers have complained they were surprised when traffic signals changed patterns overnight or new buildings seemed to spring up in a week.

Residents rightfully complain

when they are not notified, or given enough advance notification, about changes which will affect property values, the view out their living room windows, and their daily lives.

A Delaware Department of Transportation employee recently said Newark is unusual in the state because of its high level of citizen involvement. We aren't sure if that was meant as a compliment, but we certainly consider it one.

But, with this significant involvement comes increased responsibility.

Before complaining that nothing ever gets done, no one ever listens to what the residents want, and no one objects until it's their property that is affected, consider how many others you know in the community with the same goal as yours.

Do they see the way to the solution going in the same direction? Have you given enough warning before suddenly pulling into their path?

Persons on all sides of an issue, private citizens, neighbors, community workers, and government officials, need to take a breath at times and check the pulses of those around them.

Common courtesy, expediency, efficiency — and sometimes even the law — demand no less.

GUEST OPINION

Separate community cultures must meet at some point

By LLOYD W. KLINE

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

Some years ago, a successful labor leader noted that "Once you have hammered your way through negotiation to a potential settlement, you're only halfway home. Now, you must sell your membership on that potential settlement."

The stated mission of the University of Delaware's Campus/Community Coalition, funded at the University of Delaware largely by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, is to "change the culture" of alcohol abuse that has long bedeviled campuses and their surrounding neighborhoods nationwide.

In trying to change that culture in Newark or in any other University-centered community, even the strongest of leaders face challenges similar to that of the labor negotiator quoted above.

All of us in a university-centered town breathe the same air through sheer physical proximity. Privately, socially, and on the job, we live our everyday lives as University professionals, town residents, and students often quite literally next to each other, sometimes elbow-to-elbow.

But, as residents of a community that encompasses three fundamentally different cultures, we sometimes seem to exist alone while together.

A caller at my door spoke for herself and three of her sorority sisters: "We want to participate in this neighborhood, because we're going to be living here for two years. That's a long time."

She was earnest, intelligent, hard-working, straightforward and a junior at the University. I hadn't the heart to tell her of the twice-widowed, 80-some-year-old next door whose reveries year after year simmered with the joy of having lived in "this house my husband built for me 65 years ago."

Nor could I expect the 19- or 20-year-old undergraduate to grasp the cohesive sense of ownership that most of the householders in the block had developed over the 20-to-30 years that each had been living there.

Nor to believe that I considered even myself a bit of a newcomer to this neighborhood some 10 or 12 years after having moved in.

Student culture is one of movement, action, dramatic ups and downs. It is about transition — a noisy, high-energy mix of post-MTV and higher math, lifetime ideals and last night's date, hanging out and hurrying to class, chasing a major and pinning it down, hoping to fit in while trying to reach out, feeling potential but not yet empowerment.

It warps from late adolescence to early adulthood in very short order, so short that transition turns on transience. Bound to moving out sooner rather than later, student culture sees Newark rentals and campus dorms as places to go home from, not come home to.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

According to Barbara Bryant White of Newark, this undated photo of the Continental Diamond Fiber plant was taken sometime during the 15 years her father was working there. The plant on South Chapel Street was an active concern then, with a stop light to regulate traffic for pedestrians crossing to the parking lot. The plant buildings will soon be a memory as a student housing complex rises from the cleared site. The former parking lot across the street has already become home to an apartment complex. Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark 19713. Special care will be taken and photos can be returned. Starved horses found on farm near Newark

An outrageous case of neglect and cruelty was uncovered late last week, when Newark police officials visited the old Rambo farm near Chestnut Hill, and found two mules and a horse starving to death.

Constable Ellison and Chief Lewis visited the farm in response to a warrant sworn out by one of Marshall's neighbors. The animals had been turned out before the severe storm last week, and there was not a sign of them having been fed for four or five days.

The owner of the animals, is being trailed by Newark police, but has thus far outwitted them by suddenly vacating his farm and moving across the nearby Maryland line where he is living in a shack.

May erect $60,000 Post Office here;

Word was received in Delaware yesterday, according to reports, that Congress is likely to enact the Public Buildings bill introduced by the Post Office Department.

If such action is taken within the next few days, Newark will be allotted the sum of $60,000 for the erection of a Federal Building.

Every confidence is expressed among Post Office officials that the pending bill will pass Congress.

It is the intention of both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General to have buildings erected first in towns where the Government has already acquired a site.

If this is so, Newark is even more firmly entrenched, as the plot of land at the corner of Delaware avenue and South College avenue has been the property of the Government since 1914.

February 7, 1978

City set to begin apartment checks

The Newark Building Department this week launched a comprehensive inspection program of the city's apartment complexes.

About 20 complexes will be inspected to see if they meet city fire, building and health codes.

"This is the first time this has ever been done in the city," said Newark Building Director Angelo Vitalo.

Newark gives 911 tentative approval

The city of Newark is willing to participate in the county's 911 emergency telephone system-but not under the county's terms.

Newark City Council agreed last night to participate in the highly-touted program only if 911 calls ring directly at the Newark police station or if the calls can be transferred to the police station.

But the county's plan requiring the city to staff dispatchers at the county communications center is "unacceptable," said Mayor William Redd.

February 3, 1995

Two more convicted, vandalism reports drop

Newark's battle on graffiti is getting results.

Two juveniles have been convicted in Delaware Family Court for graffiti charges and police are reporting a decline in damage.

Last spring, Newark police conducted a three-month probe into graffiti on buildings, bridges and overpasses. They spent more than 200 manhours on the case and compiled over 1,000 photographs of graffiti for evidence.

Still in line at money machine

An Aetna fire engine and ambulance blocked the right hand lane of Main Street Wednesday after a dye-pack was accidentally detonated by a Wilmington Trust bank employee. Police responded to ensure bank security and the fire company spent more than an hour ventilating the bank with large fans.

Throughout the turmoil, patrons continued to queue at the automatic teller machine.

In this community, as in every other in the world, there are people who believe they see a solution and just want to get the job done. They are impatient with, and make a virtue of ignoring, those people who see what they believe is a solution but realize they need time and cooperation from others to make it work.

These approaches most often conflict in Delaware when public discussions address new construction or changes to roads, buildings and property.

A few times in Newark, even state legislators and city councilmembers have complained they were surprised when traffic signals changed patterns overnight or new buildings seemed to spring up in a week.

Residents rightfully complain

when they are not notified, or given enough advance notification, about changes which will affect property values, the view out their living room windows, and their daily lives.

A Delaware Department of Transportation employee recently said Newark is unusual in the state because of its high level of citizen involvement. We aren't sure if that was meant as a compliment, but we certainly consider it one.

But, with this significant involvement comes increased responsibility.

Before complaining that nothing ever gets done, no one ever listens to what the residents want, and no one objects until it's their property that is affected, consider how many others you know in the community with the same goal as yours.

Do they see the way to the solution going in the same direction? Have you given enough warning before suddenly pulling into their path?

Persons on all sides of an issue, private citizens, neighbors, community workers, and government officials, need to take a breath at times and check the pulses of those around them.

Common courtesy, expediency, efficiency — and sometimes even the law — demand no less.

GUEST OPINION

Separate community cultures must meet at some point

By LLOYD W. KLINE

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

Some years ago, a successful labor leader noted that "Once you have hammered your way through negotiation to a potential settlement, you're only halfway home. Now, you must sell your membership on that potential settlement."

The stated mission of the University of Delaware's Campus/Community Coalition, funded at the University of Delaware largely by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, is to "change the culture" of alcohol abuse that has long bedeviled campuses and their surrounding neighborhoods nationwide.

In trying to change that culture in Newark or in any other University-centered community, even the strongest of leaders face challenges similar to that of the labor negotiator quoted above.

All of us in a university-centered town breathe the same air through sheer physical proximity. Privately, socially, and on the job, we live our everyday lives as University professionals, town residents, and students often quite literally next to each other, sometimes elbow-to-elbow.

But, as residents of a community that encompasses three fundamentally different cultures, we sometimes seem to exist alone while together.

A caller at my door spoke for herself and three of her sorority sisters: "We want to participate in this neighborhood, because we're going to be living here for two years. That's a long time."

She was earnest, intelligent, hard-working, straightforward and a junior at the University. I hadn't the heart to tell her of the twice-widowed, 80-some-year-old next door whose reveries year after year simmered with the joy of having lived in "this house my husband built for me 65 years ago."

Nor could I expect the 19- or 20-year-old undergraduate to grasp the cohesive sense of ownership that most of the householders in the block had developed over the 20-to-30 years that each had been living there.

Nor to believe that I considered even myself a bit of a newcomer to this neighborhood some 10 or 12 years after having moved in.

Student culture is one of movement, action, dramatic ups and downs. It is about transition — a noisy, high-energy mix of post-MTV and higher math, lifetime ideals and last night's date, hanging out and hurrying to class, chasing a major and pinning it down, hoping to fit in while trying to reach out, feeling potential but not yet empowerment.

It warps from late adolescence to early adulthood in very short order, so short that transition turns on transience. Bound to moving out sooner rather than later, student culture sees Newark rentals and campus dorms as places to go home from, not come home to.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

According to Barbara Bryant White of Newark, this undated photo of the Continental Diamond Fiber plant was taken sometime during the 15 years her father was working there. The plant on South Chapel Street was an active concern then, with a stop light to regulate traffic for pedestrians crossing to the parking lot. The plant buildings will soon be a memory as a student housing complex rises from the cleared site. The former parking lot across the street has already become home to an apartment complex.

Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark 19713. Special care will be taken and photos can be returned. For information, call 737-0724.

Starved horses found on farm near Newark

An outrageous case of neglect and cruelty was uncovered late last week, when Newark police officials visited the old Rambo farm near Chestnut Hill, and found two mules and a horse starving to death.

Constable Ellison and Chief Lewis visited the farm in response to a warrant sworn out by one of Marshall's neighbors. The animals had been turned out before the severe storm last week, and there was not a sign of them having been fed for four or five days.

The owner of the animals, is being trailed by Newark police, but has thus far outwitted them by suddenly vacating his farm and moving across the nearby Maryland line where he is living in a shack.

May erect $60,000 Post Office here;

Word was received in Delaware yesterday, according to reports, that Congress is likely to enact the Public Buildings bill introduced by the Post Office Department.

If such action is taken within the next few days, Newark will be allotted the sum of $60,000 for the erection of a Federal Building.

Every confidence is expressed among Post Office officials that the pending bill will pass Congress.

It is the intention of both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General to have buildings erected first in towns where the Government has already acquired a site.

If this is so, Newark is even more firmly entrenched, as the plot of land at the corner of Delaware avenue and South College avenue has been the property of the Government since 1914.

City set to begin apartment checks

The Newark Building Department this week launched a comprehensive inspection program of the city's apartment complexes.

About 20 complexes will be inspected to see if they meet city fire, building and health codes.

"This is the first time this has ever been done in the city," said Newark Building Director Angelo Vitalo.

Newark gives 911 tentative approval

The city of Newark is willing to participate in the county's 911 emergency telephone system-but not under the county's terms.

Newark City Council agreed last night to participate in the highly-touted program only if 911 calls ring directly at the Newark police station or if the calls can be transferred to the police station.

But the county's plan requiring the city to staff dispatchers at the county communications center is "unacceptable," said Mayor William Redd.

February 3, 1995

Two more convicted, vandalism reports drop

Newark's battle on graffiti is getting results.

Two juveniles have been convicted in Delaware Family Court for graffiti charges and police are reporting a decline in damage.

Last spring, Newark police conducted a three-month probe into graffiti on buildings, bridges and overpasses. They spent more than 200 manhours on the case and compiled over 1,000 photographs of graffiti for evidence.

Still in line at money machine

An Aetna fire engine and ambulance blocked the right hand lane of Main Street Wednesday after a dye-pack was accidentally detonated by a Wilmington Trust bank employee. Police responded to ensure bank security and the fire company spent more than an hour ventilating the bank with large fans.

Throughout the turmoil, patrons continued to queue at the automatic teller machine.

Our tragic, uninformed approaches to school reform

By DR. FLOYD E. MCDOWELL

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

In the decade of the 1990's, our state has made a number of "tinker and proclaim" politically and bureaucratically aligned attempts to reform and improve our public schools.

These included the Sizer Re-Learning project, Goals 2000 and now the good-sounding tougher standards and student/teacher accountability.

Any citizen can contact Vance Grant in the U.S. Department of Education at 202-205-4956 and obtain free, faxed or mailed, statistics on how Delaware's public schools have compared with schools in the other 49 states over this past 10-year period.

These statistical records will reveal:

Delaware taxpayers have kept annual per student expenditure at 5th to 8th from the top-funded state; that during this decade, Delaware has slipped from 35th in ranking on student academic achievement to near the 40th position; and that in 1990 we graduated 70 percent of 1986 entering 9th graders while the latest figures show that in 1997 we graduated only 63 percent of 9th graders who entered high school in 1993.

And one of the key goals of wordsmith hype Goals 2000 was to graduate 90 percent by the end of the decade. Proven: documented reform knowledge is ignored in our state

Every citizen interested in program and cost effective public schooling should obtain and study a 1999 educational publication about school reform that this writer considers one of the most valuable ever published.

"The Schools Our Children Deserve" , subtitled, "Moving Beyond Traditional Classrooms and Tougher Standards," by Dr. Alfie Kohn also presents 93 pages of documented research findings and proven data-based best practices information that desperately needs to be understood and utilized by Delaware school administrators and teachers.

By training administrators and teachers to relate instruction, curriculum and authentic assessment to each student's rate of learning, all students learn and learn well.

When these students take the inevitable superimposed standardized tests, they score an average of two to four grade levels above those still mired in our "one size fits all", totally disproven factory model of ineffective schooling.

Teachers are equal victims with students in our bureaucratic, malpracticing systems and their schools. They receive less than 10 percent of this proven best knowledge training while in college/university training programs.

Then they're placed in a probationary status of employment for three years until they can prove they have adapted to the ineffective, outmoded policies and practices of our bureaucratic school districts.

Yet our political and bureaucratically aligned decision-makers and supporters point accountability fingers at these victims without ever examining even one of the three fingers pointing back.

Delaware should replicate the Kentucky Education Reform Act

In the late 1980s, groups of Kentucky citizens sued their ineffective public school systems. They presented proven, effective best knowledge school improvement evidence and won in both the lower and Kentucky Supreme Courts. The Supreme Court turned to the state legislature (constitutional responsibility and accountability for effective public schools in every state) and ordered these legislators to put this best knowledge into state law and policy.

Since the Reform Act went into effect on July 1, 1991, the Kentucky public schools have made more student achievement and other effective progress than any other state.

First, the legislature removed all previous educational laws and policies from their books.

Next, they appropriated funds and required that training in best knowledge school improvement be provided to school administrators and teachers.

Further, they legally provided that if administrators didn't prove they had learned and applied this best knowledge, their contracts would be terminated at the end of the school year.

Every Kindergarten through Grade 3 school was legally required to provide a best knowledge, state-of-the-art developmentally appropriate program.

This writer was the first consultant/trainer brought in July, 1991 to provide foundational training in this important area for all elementary school principals (over 800) as well as 200 school superintendents and lead teachers.

One of the most important best knowledge components legally mandated for all schools was that all decision-making on budget, hiring, firing, use of staff, student programming, etc. would be made at each building level by three elected teachers, two elected parents and the building principal.

That the DSEA and the state and local PTA leadership haven't learned about what this has done to improve student programming in Kentucky is a real mystery to me.

McDowell is chairperson, and holds civic/political positions for the reform party of Delaware. He resides in Bear.

Cultures must meet

► KLINE, from 6

The center of gravity in campus culture seeks to move it toward broader goals and solid futures. It places student welfare and individual development foremost among its priorities. And, as a university in the traditional sense of the word, its academic concerns and interests are universal and timeless.

Town culture, by contrast, cherishes privacy and relatively stable qualities of life. Individual homes may be child-centered, but neighborhoods belong to adults. While campus pathways, landscapes, and facilities tend to be communal and thus open to all who live therein, neighborhood backyards, front lawns, driveways, fences, and shrubbery are sacrosanct - preferably to be shared only on personal invitation and never subjected to random damage by irresponsible inebriates of any age.

If we who share in any one, or two, or all three of the elbow-to-elbow cultures here expect to change the student alcohol abuse and resolve any of the problems it brings upon us, we've got to recognize situations from the points of view of others as well as from our own.

Such recognition requires clear, fearless, and candid communication at every political level and within and across the coexisting cultures, then firm and full negotiation, and, finally, concerted action.

Somehow, I suspect that if you have read this far, you would have me end these personal observations with an emotional "Rah! Rah!" for this or that strong leader, for one or another program, or at the very least, to come up with a single smart answer. But, as I said at the outset in this series of observations, I've learned a lot in my six months of listening on to the Campus/Community Coalition. Among other things, I've learned I'm not that smart.

But, neither will I give up in trying to help resolve the problems. How about you?

Hey...Wet Basements Stink!

You've got mold and mildew and if it rains enough, you actually get water. You know you need to get it fixed before your foundation is ruined. You wonder if anything can be done to fix the problem for good. What is the answer?

Allstate American Inc. Waterproofing is an honest, hardworking local company. We will come to your home, give you a free evaluation and estimate and a fair price. We have repaired thousands of basement problems in the area, so we can provide local neighborhood references.

Teach kids to keep food safe

Twelve-year-old Johnny arrives home from a long day at school. What's on TV? What video game should he play? But first things first — he's starving! Then he remembers the leftover ham sandwich in his backpack. The boy's sandwich, packed at 6:30 a.m. and carried for eight hours in a backpack at room temperature, is the kind of environment in which bacteria thrive.

All over Newark this scenario plays out every school day.

As a result of downing the leftover lunch, Johnny may miss school in the next few days because of an upset stomach. His folks may think the upset is the result of a virus while the cause is actually a food-borne illness, the kind that sickens thousands of people in the United States each year.

Food-borne illnesses are serious business; more than 5,000 Americans die each year as a result.

Children must be taught how to handle food to prevent food-borne illness, and the Delaware Cooperative Extension, using several curricula, offers food safety education for kids. Very successful in day camps, after school programs and classrooms, the lessons teach children the three basics of food safety: keep cold foods cold, hot foods hot, and all food clean.

"Chances and Choices with Food" is a fun, interactive curriculum for use in an informal setting. The lessons have been a big success in day camps and after school programs.

Operation R.I.S.K. (Reducing the Incidence of Sick Kids) teaches children the same concepts in a more formal setting.

Many teachers have used this curriculum in their 4th and 5th grade classes. Teachers of higher grades use the "Microbial Contamination-Project Food Safety" materials to demonstrate how fast illness-causing bacteria can multiply under the right conditions. Extension provides teachers with all lesson materials free of charge.

The children learn through games such as "Safe Food Baseball" and the "Germ Hideout," searching for places where their hands get dirty.

Children are asked to apply a lotion that simulates germs, after which they wash their hands and then view their hands under a black light to see how effective their handwashing techniques are.

Volunteers supervise children while they prepare a recipe to teach children not to cross contaminate, to cook food thoroughly, and other safe preparation techniques.

Former member Warner Perry proposed the wing which will add 7,000 square feet to the already 21,000 square-foot Newark Senior Center on White Chapel Drive.

by Sharon R. Cole
Newark Post Contributing Writer

Almost three years after his death, a past member's gift is nearing fruition at the Newark Senior Center. The much anticipated "Perry wing" is only a month away from opening.

Warner Perry, who died on Aug. 6, 1997, left an estate of more than $1 million to build the wing which will add 7,000 square feet to the already 21,000 square-foot senior center on White Chapel Drive.

Since its opening in May of 1996, membership at the senior center has risen from 1,400 to 2,700 persons with daily attendance increasing from 76 to 200 visitors.

This new popularity, coupled with the expected interest from retiring baby boomers in the next five years, prompted the senior center's board of directors to draw up a proposal for the new space in 1997.

To date, $1.2 million has been raised for the $1.6 million project which includes funds left by Perry as well as other corporate and private donations.

According to executive director Jean Williams, the Perry Education Center, which includes an expanded fitness center, larger space for the Meals on Wheels program, a computer lab and several classrooms, is projected to be finished in March. "Warner Perry's dream was to have a nice library where people could sit and read at any time," explained Williams. "The library we have already was used for meetings and programs, too."

By April, Williams expects the expanded space designed with an abundance of windows and some high ceilings to be thriving with the introduction of new programs and events. "Our thought for the original senior center was to build a beautiful building that would attract more people and encourage people to be more active," said Williams. "We wanted the same thing for the new section."

The expansion is as functional as it is attractive, allowing activities to take place in more appropriate settings.

Currently, various programs share space in not-so-workable conditions. The current computer room is also used by non-computer related programs like arts and crafts, while the library and the fitness center are one-in-the-same.

This will change dramatically with the opening of the new wing. The computer lab housing 16 computers is intended for computer information use only; and special classrooms are designated for seminars and arts and crafts programs.

A recent survey at the senior center indicated that many of the members are interested in learning about travel, technology and computers, and antiques. Classes relating to these subjects and others will be offered during day and evening hours, said Williams.

Other topics noted by interested members on the survey were new-age alternative medicine, investing, arts, and nature.

The new fitness center, built in two sections, will allow for line dancing, Tai-chi and other open floor activities on one side, with exercise equipment on the other.

"We've experienced a mini-revolution since 1994 for seniors and fitness," said Williams, noting new studies promote activity for seniors who are living longer, healthier lives.

Creating space for the fitness lovers was not the only concern for the directors.

"We wanted to serve a broad spectrum of people including those who like a lot of activity and for those who enjoy sitting and talking or relaxing," Williams said.

As a result, a cozy sitting room with plenty of windows was added to one side of the building. The windows allow people to not only enjoy a nice view, but to keep an eye out for the bus.

"We have some people who get concerned about missing the bus, so this room is perfect for that, also," Williams said with a laugh.

In addition to the education center, a few alterations were made to the original facility. A new women's locker room with six showers has been added, and the Meals on Wheels delivery area has been extended to provide space for the more than 300 meals prepared for the program each day. In addition to the building space, 50 new parking spaces will be added as well.

'Diary of Anne Frank' is timeless

By ANN LOPATA

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

The inspirational story of Anne Frank is being performed at Temple Beth El in Newark on Saturday, Feb. 19, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. The play, by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, from "Anne Frank: the Diary of a Young Girl" edited by her father, Otto Frank, won the Pulitzer Prize, the Tony Award, the Critic's Circle Award and virtually every other theatrical prize.

Produced first on Oct. 5, 1955, at the Cort Theatre in New York City, "Anne Frank" is an ageless play and an unforgettable experience for viewers and actors. The New York Times noted that it was "A lovely tender drama...Strange how the shining spirit of a young girl now dead can filter down through the years and inspire a group of theatrical professionals in a foreign land." But this play continues to do so.

The play recounts the true story of Anne's life during her years hiding in Amsterdam through the revelations in her diary. While the book may be the most accurate historical record, the play brings the diary to life. Amidst the horrors of the Holocaust we experience a young girl's optimism and joy. Andrei Drooz, the 17 year old who plays

Peter Van Daan, sees the play as allegorical in nature - it reflects the universal process of self-discovery of adolescence. It is the story of children trapped, literally and figuratively, in an adult world. Amidst turmoil, this is also a love story, the innocence of love against the background of cruelty and horror.

Through Anne's eyes we see her envy of her "perfect" sister Margot (Jessica Schultz), her conflicts with her mother (Laurita Halbert) and her unconditional love for her father (Carl Shulak). We experience her mixed reactions to the other inhabitants of the small attic-the self-absorbed Mr. and Mrs. Vandann (Sue Herst and Irv Engleson), their son Peter, and the dentist, Mr. Dussell (Sam Rittberg). We also meet their caretakers, the selfless Miep (Anne Solan) and Mr. Krahler (Bill Spinn). The personalization of the story of the Holocaust from a teenager's perspective makes this a powerful and exciting play for young people.

I had an opportunity to sit down and discuss with Marielle Solan (Anne) and Andrei Drooz (Peter) their reactions to the play. At 15 and 17, Marielle and Andrei are the same ages as the characters they portray and they both feel that this gives them a perspective into the emotional sides of their characters.

Marielle, a sophomore at Newark High, has performed in various community theater productions and she also appeared in "Beau Jest" at Temple Beth El. Andrei, a senior at Glasgow High, has performed in many productions at his high school, including "The Crucible" and "Moon over Buffalo."

This is the second theatrical production by Temple Beth El and is a community effort. Two years ago, Beth El's presentation of the comedy, "Beau Jest" was very well received. Paula Shulak, who also directed "Beau Jest," is directing the "Diary of Anne Frank." Paula is well known for her many local directorial successes and her lifelong involvement in all areas of the Arts.

For tickets and further information please call Temple Beth El at 366-8330. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens. Temple Beth El is located at 301 Possum Park Road in Newark.

Caesar Rodney coming down off his pedestal in Delaware

The 7,500-pound bronze statue of the American patriot who rode through treacherous weather from Dover to Philadelphia in 1776 to sign the Declaration of Independence has to be moved so repairs can be made to its pedestal.

The stone pedestal has kept the likeness of Caesar Rodney 28 feet above street level in downtown Wilmington ever since 1923. But some stones in the pedestal have turned brittle and cracked, raising concerns about keeping the statue from shifting or eventually toppling over.

To get to the pedestal, contractors will cut the pins holding it down and use a crane to lift the statue down from its height.

During the $265,000 renovation, the statue of Rodney will be kept on the sidewalk behind a fence.

National Fine Arts program honors local children

The Boys & Girls Clubs of Delaware joined more than 2,300 across the country to identify talented young artists.

Local winners of the Fine Arts exhibit are Bryan Young, Amanda Delaplaine, Rodney Saunders, Andrea Haggerty, Margaret Dawson, Geoffrey Fox, Angelina Feher, James Young, Yanel Parrish, Andrea Ware, Yazmin Alehandro, Eric Gross, Annaleise Westergard, Courtney MacLaren, Sharon Lezotte, Christine Dewson, Scott Delaplaine, Jonathan Lopez, Eric McCloud, Tracy Carter, Guy Schiavi, Terrance Morehead, Alia Moss Koonce, Shawn Wilkinson, Alicia Donimquez and Adrian Martin.

More than 400 pieces of artwork were submitted to the contest from four age divisions and 11 categories, such as watercolors, pastels, oil, acrylic and collage. The works were judged on color, degree of completion, shading, topic, detail and aesthetic.

Selected winners will receive scholarships to the Delaware Art Museum sponsored by the Howard Pyle Studio group.

Arts and Crafts director Carol Kusel said she said she has seen so many children gain self-esteem through this art program. "We have some very gifted members at the Boys and Girls Club," she said.

The competition is part of Boys & Girls Clubs of America's National Fine Arts Exhibition sponsored by L'Oreal Kids. A total of 44 national winners will be named and their art work displayed as part of the National Fine Arts exhibit held at B&GCA's national conference next year in New Orleans and at other special events throughout the year.

City employee calls it a day after 35 years

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

More than 100 people bearing gifts and good wishes gathered for a luncheon recently to celebrate the retirement of Bobby Price, a city of Newark employee for 35 years.

After working steadily since 1965, Price said he will spend his new found time keeping healthy and, possibly, taking on jobs for small engine or brake work.

"It was time for me to retire and the doctor said I really needed a change of environment since I've been working in a garage for so long," Price said.

For the past 15 years, Price was employed by the city's public works department working on equipment ranging from lawn mowers and police cars to electronic generators and air compressors.

"When I went into the garage I took care of anything the city owned," Price said.

Price worked for the city briefly in 1959 as the heavy equipment operator in charge of Newark's landfills before moving into the street division and then public works.

He has seen three city managers hold office in Newark, including Francis F. Nighty, Peter Marshall and currently, Carl Luft. During his longtime stay, Price also developed close friendships and many memories.

"One time a (much needed) latch on a city sod mower loosened causing the mower to hit a telephone pole," Price recalled. "We had to get it hooked on to a tow truck which turned out to be a big deal."

Trying to regenerate engines for the city water well pump stations on more than one occasion is another experience Price remembers well. "They would have to call us in at all hours to get those engines running again," he said.

In addition to his everyday tasks, Price was one of four men responsible for obtaining a charter to establish the Local 1670 A.F.L.C.I.O Union back in the late 60's.

Chief mechanic Chuck Riley said Price's expertise on the job will be missed.

"He knows many of the secrets to keep this equipment running, he's one of the most experienced we've had," Riley commented. "We joke with Bobby because his background is from West Virginia, so he's got a little hillbilly in him. We say he can hold things together with spit, wire and chewing gum."

All joking aside, Riley described Price as having a strong work ethic and a love for his job. "I don't think there is a more loyal employee than him," Riley said. "He gave 110 percent."

This dedication was well appreciated, and according to Riley, accounted for the high attendance at Price's retirement luncheon.

"I don't think Bobby expected so many people to show up," Riley said. "He's touched so many people's lives."

Although 35 years of service to one employer may seem a rarity these days, Riley said the city of Newark is so good to their employees, that many city workers remain for a long time.

"I'm going to miss all the nice people I work for in the city of Newark," Price said. "I had an awful lot of friends there and I will miss them all."

More than 100 people, including Mayor Hal Godwin (left), showed up to extend best wishes to retiring city employee Bobby Price and his wife, Nancy.

Parent accountability is first here

Only school in state to require parental involvement

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Parents are the "boss", so to say, at one local pre-school.

For the past three decades, the Newark Co-operative Preschool has been able to uphold a level of parent involvement that is only a dream at other Delaware schools.

With a philosophy stating that "every family has a voice and serves a role at the school," parents gain as much an education as their children.

"It's just wonderful being in the classroom," said Colette Matsanka, president of the preschool's board of directors. "I've learned a lot - things that I can take home with me."

According to director Shirley Glines, a teacher for 15 years at the preschool, parents actually own and operate the school. Although it may sound like a lot of commitment, Glines said, "parents just have to come in at least once a month during preschool hours and take on a job

NHS musicians in concert at Tower Hill

The All State Jazz Ensemble concert will be held Feb. 3 through 5 at 7:30 p.m. each night at Tower Hill School in Wilmington. Newark High School has three students in the 20-piece ensemble: Brian Bartling on bari sax; Rob Barbarita on alto sax; and Omar Thomas, first trombone. Newark High musician Tom Bradley is alternate on bass.

Lloyd H. Ross, director at Newark, also announced that seven students were chosen for the Junior High All State Band. They are: Deena Anderson, Jordan Layton, Katie Bartling, Kaitlyn Wittman, Greg Read, Sonrisa Lewis, and Patrick Wilcox.

Ross said 18 Newark students previously were selected for Senior high All State Band. The all state band concerts will be in March.

to assist the teacher for a day."

If a parent is unable to attend one month, a grandparent or other guardian is welcome to come. "We have to have two helping adults every day," said Glines.

In addition, some parents serve on the board of directors where decisions about budget, school closings and themes for teaching are discussed.

"Most of the major issues we discuss are brought up for a vote by all parents," said Matsanka.

The curriculum is set by the school's two hired teachers: Glines and Joe Cutter, both certified educators.

During a time when "accountability" is a buzz word in the education arena, parents at the co-op school already know what it means.

"When you don't go to school to be educated as a teacher, you just assume what (teachers) should or shouldn't do," admitted Matsanka. "Having been in a preschool like this helps you see that it not easy (being held accountable) for everything going on in school."

Matsanka also noted another important aspect of having parents involved.

"Here the kids know each parent deserves the same respect, not just the teacher," she said. "And since each parent is in charge of a different activity, it's important that the kids listen to them."

For Glines, one of major benefits with a co-op school is the fact that parents are directly involved in their children's education at a critical age.

"At first (the children) are attached to their mommies, but as the year moves on they don't even want to sit next to their mom," said Glines. "They are growing independent this way."

Barbara Monjon, parent of one child presently at the preschool and another who just moved on to first grade, agreed with Glines. "I think at this age it is important that parents are involved," Monjon said. "I've heard people at work say that their kids wish their parents could come to school with them."

The school was founded in 1968 by a group of parents, according to Glines, and the first class consisted of about six to eight kids.

Up until three years ago, the preschool operated out of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Today they are located in the Newark United Church of Christ on Main Street with an enrollment of 16, 4-year-olds and 26, 3-year-olds.

A typical day at the preschool includes free play, group discussion, music, stories, outdoor play and a nutritious snack.

Within these activities, Glines said that children develop multi-sensory and social skills as well as sensory motor coordination and the ability to interact with a diverse group of children and adults.

Bear resident Anthony Farina, press secretary for Governor Thomas Carper and parent of a 3-and-a-half-year-old student, said this is the only school of its kind in the state of Delaware.

"It's a blessing for us to have Nicole in this setting where other parents are involved," Farina said, "where families are involved, and she is also receiving quality instruction from the staff."

Parents, grandparents or guardians of students have to come in at least once a month at Newark Co-operative Preschool and take on a job to assist the teacher for the day.

Registration for 2000-01

Newark Co-operative Preschool is currently registering for the 2000-01 school year for returning families. Registration for the general public begins on Feb. 15. The preschool offers a two-day-a-week program for children who are 3 by Dec. 31 and a three-day-a-week program for children who are 4 by Dec. 31. Families may select a morning session, 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., or an afternoon session, 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. Parents are actively involved in the day to day operation of the preschool and are scheduled to help in the classroom several times a month. Please call 368-0178 to schedule a visit or for additional information.

Hodgson wrestlers overpower Newark

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The Hodgson Vo-Tech Silver Eagle wrestling team scored a well-balanced, 46-18 victory over host Newark in a nonconference match last Saturday before a noisy, packed gym.

The defeat left improving Newark with a 5-2 record in dual meets. The Yellowjackets then posted wins over McKean (59-12) and Brandywine (51-15) in a tri-match on Monday to improve to 7-2. Matches with Glasgow, No. 1 St.

Mark's and Middletown, are ahead.

The victory improved Hodgson's dual meet record to 6-0. The Silver Eagles, who have not lost a dual-meet match to a Delaware team since 1996, faced Concord and Howard before meeting William Penn on Saturday (Feb. 4). The varsity match follows the junior varsity, which begins at 1 p.m.

Hodgson is ranked second by the Newark Post, while William Penn is ranked third.

"I give (Newark) a lot of credit," said Hodgson Coach Jerry Lamey. "They were juiced up to wrestle us.

They were looking at us as the team to beat to help them move up in the rankings, and they did a good job."

At the outset, it appeared as though Hodgson may have been headed to a blowout, as Brian Welch (103 pounds) scored a 9-0 decision over Brad Needham and Jordan Sianni (112) pinned Mike Marra 12 seconds into the second period.

But at 119, Newark's James Vitek earned a 10-7 decision over Kevin Woodland. Newark's Chris Vitale then followed at 125 with a 5-2 victory over Kris Remedio.

Newark then took the lead when Stephen Woodbridge pinned Justin Mendick with 10 seconds left in the second period at 130 pounds.

However, Hodgson won the next six bouts, including four by pins, to seal the outcome.

At 135, Hodgson's Mike Welch earned a 9-4 win over Chris Hudson; Tyler Smith (140) defeated Justin Wample 4-1; Marc Rispoli (145) pinned Jeff Hudson with 23 seconds left in the second period; Ryan Smith (152) pinned John Brayman; John Kerr (160) pinned Bob Eno with 33 seconds Newark High's Bram Walker (top) is awarded a first-period pin in the 189-pound match against Hodgson's Andrew Ulrich last Saturday. Hodgson won the nonconference match 46-18 to improve its record to 6-0. On Monday, Newark improved to 7-2 overall by beating McKean 59-12 and Brandywine 51-15 in Blue Hen Conference Flight A matches. Walker and teammate Jeff Hudson recorded pins in both matches.

Newark girls net important Flight A win

Prince scores 28 points, Lones 25 in victory over Wm. Penn

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POSTSPORTS EDITOR

Toiling in Flight A of the Blue Hen Conference is difficult in almost every sport.

So when you get a chance to beat one of your main competitors for one of the top spots, it's always good to take advantage of it.

Last Friday at Newark High, the Yellowjackets took advantage of that opportunity and William Penn didn't. The result was a 61-53 win for Newark, which wasn't as close as the final score indicates.

The victory improved Newark's record to 4-2 in Flight A and 8-5 overall.

William Penn, meanwhile, which had rallied from a double-digit deficit in the second half to beat Newark by two points earlier in the season, fell to 3-2, 6-4.

What was puzzling was that four days earlier, the Colonials had played flawlessly in charging to a 42-15 lead at halftime over Christiana in another Flight A game. The Colonials went on to a convincing win in that game.

"We didn't do anything right," William Penn Coach Chuck Bartels said of his team's effort. "They out-hustled us, they outrebounded us; we threw the ball away, we couldn't make a shot, we couldn't dribble, we couldn't catch.

"It was an embarrassment to play that poorly. For a good team to play that bad, it's an embarrassment. But we'll get better. We will recover."

The one shining constant for William Penn once again was senior Michelle Whalen, who scored 36 points, helped by making 10 of 11 foul shots. Unfortunately for her, none of her teammates finished in double figures in scoring.

Newark, however, got 28 points from senior Reyya Prince and 25 points from junior Keisha Lones.

Leading 25-22 at halftime, Newark outscored the Colonials 17-7 in the third quarter helped by seven points from Prince. A three-point basket by Lones at the buzzer capped the surge.

Newark was able to build its lead to 47-33 early in the fourth quarter before Whalen converted a three-pointer and a foul shot to cut it to 47-38.

However, a basket by Lones and a three-pointer by Prince sent the Yellowjackets on another surge to put the game out of reach.

With the score 56-41, Whalen scored eight points in the closing minutes, including a three-point shot at the buzzer.

"It was a good win just basically because they were ranked (No. 7 by the News Journal) and we weren't (ranked)," said Newark Coach Don Patton. "We (essentially) beat them

Hens hope to rebound again

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

One-for-25 and 1999. Those were the numbers that had the most significance following Maine's 71-56 victory over Delaware last Saturday night at the sold-out Carpenter Center.

The Blue Hens, uncharacteristically, made just one of 25 attempts against the Black Bears from three-point range. That, more than anything, was the reason for Delaware's downfall. It also led many of the Hens to recall the 1999 season — when they were also dismantled by Maine at home in January, but went on to win the America East championship.

The loss dropped Delaware's record to 15-5 overall, 7-3 in league and ended the nation's 10th longest home winning streak at 17 games. Maine improved to 16-5, 8-2 and took over sole possession of second place — one game behind league-leader Hofstra.

"We lost to a very good team," said Delaware coach Mike Brey. "[Maine] is certainly a team capable of winning a championship. They're better than us right now."

The whole night was eerily similar to the 1999 tilt at the Carpenter Center between these two teams. The Black Bears won that night 70-59 and clearly looked like the best team in the America East.

Delaware's late-season resurgence and ensuing conference championship has been well documented. The question is, can this team repeat the feat?

"I'm not going to count us out," said senior guard John Gordon, who had just four points against his former team. "We have to go out and get better."

There will be no better time to start than this weekend. The Hens face their toughest conference road trip of the season, playing at Drexel Friday night and at Hofstra Sunday.

A loss to either team will make the already-difficult task of winning the regular season conference championship (and more importantly the top-seed in the tournament) nearly impossible.

"It's a huge week for us,"

UD senior Mike Pegues addresses the Carpenter Center crowd after breaking the school scoring record last Thursday night.

Brey said. "It is a big challenge. But right now we just have to get better."

"There's really no pressure on us. Getting the number one seed is a long shot. We may have to win on the road to win the conference championship, so we have to get better on the road."

The return of Darryl Presley should help the Hens down the stretch.

Presley, after missing six straight games with a hairline fracture of his right tibia, played for the first time against Maine. In just 12 minutes of playing time, the 6-6 senior scored 13 points (including 11 straight in the first half) on 5-of-6 shooting from the field.

"It felt really good to be out there again," Presley said. "I wanted to play more but I think [coach Brey] wanted to make sure I didn't overdo it in my first game."

Presley practiced just once at full strength before Saturday night's game.

"I felt I should play the guys that have been in there all year,"

Brey said. "Obviously, it's something I may want to revisit. He really gave us a big lift when he was in there. I'm amazed Darryl was able to what he did."

Presley's return marked the first time all season Delaware was able to play its preseason starting five.

"It's definitely good to have everybody back again," said Gordon, who also missed a chunk of this season due to injury. "I think it will help us."

If Delaware wants to duplicate its 1999 run, it'll take all the help it can get.

NOTES: Delaware has won 32 of its last 34 games in the Carpenter Center. Both losses have been to Maine. . . The Bears' two wins over UD this season marks the first time since the 1996-97 season that any America East team has been able to sweep the regular season series from Delaware. . . The Hens next home games will be Feb. 10, 12 and 14 against Boston University, Northeastern and Hartford.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

REYVA PRINCE — NEWARK

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

For Newark High's girls basketball team to be successful, coach Donald Patton must get balanced scoring.

There's little doubt his best scorer, Reyva Prince, can put the ball in the basket on a consistent basis. And when teammates Keisha Lones and Laura Streets are contributing, the Yellowjackets are a formidable squad.

Last Friday, Prince had her usual dangerous game, pouring in 28 points to spark Newark to a key 61-53 Blue Hen Conference Flight A win over William Penn.

But without the strong play of Lones, the victory wouldn't have happened. Lones, who finished with a career-high tying 25 points, added some key foul shots late in the fourth quarter to keep the rally-minded Colonials at bay.

Earlier this season, William Penn had overcome a double-digit deficit to beat the Yellowjackets by two points.

In that game, Lones played the point and had more points than Prince, who was often double-teamed, said Newark Coach Don Patton.

"We put a lot of pressure on (Prince and Lones) to beat their press," said Patton. "We put more pressure on ourselves a lot of time because the other kids miss layups and don't attack the basket and do those little things that really would help us out."

"You look at that score, we really could have done some damage if those kids had made some more layups and stuff."

Patton has been helped by the increased minutes of substitutes Sharmika Moody and Chelsea Adams. He said it was after a two-point loss to Caesar Rodney that he decided to use Moody and Adams more because of the fatigue of his starters.

"When I stopped being afraid of playing those other two kids more, then it helped us out," Patton said.

"From the perspective of giving us at least an opportunity to have a rotation, I try to look at the score and I try to look at the situation, it allows me to play their big player a little more..."

Lones said she's aware the team is relying on her, too, but everyone must contribute.

"Sometimes we do well, like today," Lones said. "If we know we can beat a team, sometimes we don't play as hard and the coach will get mad at us. But against William Penn, we thought we could beat them and we were tired of losing to them. So we wanted to play hard."

Lones, of Wilmington, has been playing basketball since she was six years old with family and friends. It wasn't until two seasons ago as a sophomore — that she decided to play at the scholastic level.

Lones, who has scored 25 points on two other occasions, said her team is capable of great things.

"If my teammates put their minds to it, we can go (to the state tournament) and we can win it. I have a lot of confidence in them."

"I think (Lones) has a better understanding of what I want and what I'm trying to get her to do," said Patton. "The ability that she has, from that standpoint, she's improved. But her game all over has improved from when she first started playing. She's a better rebounder, she takes better shots now."

"The last two games she's not really been herself because she's made some mental mistakes, but she doesn't usually make those mental mistakes."

Newark High falls to Hodgson

► WRESTLE, from 16

left in the first period, and Derrick Davis (171) pinned John Brennan with one second left in the first period.

"(Rispoli) beat a real tough wrestler," said Hodgson Coach Jerry Lamey. "When we won that one, I was very confident after that."

Newark's Bram Walker reversed the tide when he pinned Andrew Ulrich with 12 seconds left in the first period. But Hodgson heavy-weight Ed Udinski put an exclamation point on the day for the Silver Eagles by pinning Art Estifanos with 44 seconds left in the first period.

Despite the outcome, Newark

Coach Kevin Martin said he was pleased with the way his team performed.

"The kids wrestled tough, even in matches we lost," Martin said. "I thought we would keep the score a little closer, but they have some wrestlers who will place high in the state tournament."

"There were some good, close matches, but when we got to their 'big gun,' I knew we were in some serious trouble and that helped blow the score out of control."

"(Newark) came out hard after us, especially in the middle rounds, but our strength is in our upper weights," Lamey said.

the last game. What beat us was fatigue. We played five players, today we played seven.

"It gave us a chance to give a couple kids a breather and so we had less mistakes at the end and more chances that went for us than went for us the first time.

"The last time, they pressed us at the end, we turned the ball over. Today, they pressed us and we didn't turn the ball over as much."

Hodgson coach Lamey not crying over the season, yet

If there's truth in the saying that things happen in threes, then Hodgson wrestling coach Jerry Lamey is about to have his hands full.

Not that he already doesn't. Lamey has guided his second-ranked team to three consecutive Division II dual meet state championships. They haven't lost a dual-meet match to a Delaware team since Smyrna beat them in the Division II dual meet finals in 1996.

(Two years ago, Hodgson lost to Northampton, Pa., which was ranked second nationally).

Last Saturday's 46-18 win over seventh-ranked Newark helped Hodgson improve to 6-0 this season.

But the fun for Lamey and his pregnant wife, who already have a three-year-old and a one-year-old, will really begin next month when she's scheduled to deliver triplets (two girls and a boy).

"So if you really want to get a story on somebody who's completely consumed with things going on..." Lamey said with a laugh. "No, there isn't one (a Lamey triplets relief fund) right now. It's going to be interesting, that's for sure."

Although opposing coaches may have some sympathy for Lamey when it comes to his domestic challenge, they probably aren't very interested in seeing Hodgson win another title.

Lamey's alma mater - No. 3 William Penn - will put Hodgson's streak to a major test on Saturday in New Castle.

So far, Hodgson has managed to continue its dominance despite losing six of 13 starters, including two state champs and two state runner-ups, to graduation.

Lamey, whose physical appearance and easy-going public demeanor may seem more suited to coaching golf, or fox hunting, perhaps, said looks can be deceiving.

"If you ask some of my kids, they wouldn't say I was such a nice guy," Lamey said, laughing again. "It's a demanding sport because every time you step out there you're going to be challenged."

"In some sports if you break, no one hurts you. You just lose. In this sport, if you break, they're going to pummel you. But I think this (coaching) staff gets the most out of our kids. I think we work well together. We feed off each other."

Lamey said some wrestlers require different approaches when it comes to teaching things such as techniques.

But none escape his wrath when training is involved.

"We don't back off when it comes to conditioning," Lamey said. "If a kid was having some emotional problems, or with his confidence, you have to read it as a coach. You have to bring out the wrestler in him."

New book offers students advice on getting a job

Newarker Marianne Green, assistant director of the Career Services Center at the University of Delaware, has written a new book, "Majoring in Success," primarily for underclassmen and also high school seniors. A practical guide to getting a job, the book is the culmination of 25 years of experience in career counseling with college students.

"When it comes to getting a job, times have changed," Green said. "It used to be that a college degree was all that was needed to open doors. Now companies are looking at the total picture when they interview students. Students who have meaningful work experience, internships, volunteer work, leadership positions and other activities have the leading edge over those who don't. In fact, it's become a necessity to offer extracurricular experience on the resume."

Green calls this the second curriculum. "Academics are very important, but outside activities, work experience and internships build skills, help students define who they are and demonstrate what they can do," Green said.

Green wrote the book with Anthony Arcieri, a former UD graduate assistant in the office and now at George Mason University, to reach underclassmen and high school seniors so that they will seek out and take advantage of the opportunities that come their way.

"I hope high school guidance counselors can use it for workshops to help prepare students for college and to get the message out to parents. By the time college students are seniors, it is somewhat late to get involved in these kinds of activities, and it's frustrating for them and for me that they lack these experiences as they seek to enter the job market," she said.

"From day one, college freshmen should be thinking in terms of careers they may wish to pursue," Green said.

The book offers practical advice to students and is inter-persed with vignettes of students Green has counseled. They range from the student who is overextended in activities and the one who has placed total emphasis on academics, to a volunteer tutor, a student leader and a participant in a work co-op program.

The book also includes worksheets for students to complete on assessing achievements, abilities, aptitudes and interests.

Green suggests that students find related activities that will build on their career interests. "What employers are looking for are bright, alert, capable graduates who have work experience," she said.

A graduate of Goucher College, Green has master's degrees in counseling and education from Washington University in St. Louis and Xavier University in Cincinnati. She joined the University staff in 1985 and is the author of "Internship Success," a guide to help students get the most from internship experiences.

Job Fair at UD slated for Feb. 16

The 10th WDEL/WSTW Job Fair will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 16, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Bob Carpenter Center, Newark. Representatives from more than 35 local and regional companies will be holding on-the-spot interviews to find talented new employees for a variety of positions. The Job Fair is free and there is no need to preregister. Attendees should dress professionally and bring several copies of their resume. A partial list of participating companies includes: AIG Life Companies (U.S.), American General Finance, Applied Card Systems, The Associates National Bank, Bell Atlantic, Chase Manhattan, Clement Communications, CSC Chemical and Energy Group, Dean Witter, Diamond State Financial Group, Edward Jones, F. Schumacher & Company, Fleet Credit Card Services, HSBC USA, Suburban Cable, MBNA, Prudential, Wawa and more! For information on the Job Fair sponsored by PFPC Global Fund Services, call 478-2700.

'Creating a New Career' Workshop starts Feb. 24

Dr. Kris Bronson, a licensed psychologist, will facilitate a four-session workshop dedicated to individuals who are planning a career or job change. In "Creating a New Career" participating men and women create a vision of the job they want to pursue by exploring and clarifying their interests, abilities, likes, dislikes, values, lifestyle preferences, and the world of work. Proven techniques help participants make good career decisions, such as an interest-inventory, self-assessment exercises, group activities, and guided discussions.

Bronson specializes in career counseling at The Brandywine Center, which has locations in both Newark and Wilmington. She also facilitates an ongoing women's counseling group, which is currently accepting new members.

This workshop is appropriate for women and men who are unhappy or dissatisfied at work, midlife career changers, as well as those experiencing downsizing. The workshop will be held Feb. 24, March 2, 9 and 16 from 7 - 9 p.m. at the Brandywine Center, LLC, 2500 Grubb Road, Suite 240, Wilmington. Registration is required and space is limited. Anyone interested in participating, please call 475-1880 ext. 7.
