COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT DELAWARE

Pierre du Pont Publicly Thanked for Million Dollar Gift---Many Notable Men Present

Delaware College commencement of 1917 passes into history as one of the red letter days in the life of the community. Perhaps never before has there been crowded into the exercises the inspiration, the spirit of dedication and service that was felt by everyone in the large audience this morning. World conditions were faced squarely by every speaker, and the nobility of sacrifice for a glorious cause thrilled the hearers.

Pennsylvania; Doctor of Science—John Edwin Greiner '80 (C.E.), Baltimore, Maryland; Master of Science—Clarence Edward Keyes, Farmington; Bachelor of Arts (Arts and Science Course)—Robert Houston Pepper, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Irving Reynolds, New York City; Bachelor of Science (Arts and Science Course)—Raymond Mearns Cameron, North East, Maryland, James Carlton Hastings, Laurel, Harold dwelt upon the individual responsibility that rests upon each graduate.

Mr. Lee said in part: "When you are told to do a thing don't look round and try to find reasons why it cannot be done. Get your shoulder up in the collar hard; do not sit back in the britchen. Too much time is lost in the concoction and delivery of eloquent excuses. Often the sin of shortcoming would be more readily forgiven if time and time again. A feature of the day was the announcement by Henry B. Thompson, president of the Board of Trustees of the name of Pierre duPont as the benefactor who has made possible the greater development of Delaware College. Degrees were conferred by Dean Smith as follows: Doctor of Laws—James Harrison Wilson, Wilmington, George Morgan '75 (M.A.), Philadelphia, Wolfe Horsey, Dover; Bachelor of Science in Agriculture—Richard Morrison Appleby, New Castle, Franklin Tracy Campbell, Washington, D. Elisha Lee, general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad, delivered the commencement address, bringing a message straight from the world of business to the young men. The speaker presented the world's need of men willing and able to assume responsibility; he explained the plea that has gone out from the company he represents, to every employee, urging the importance of individual response, if the country is to measure up to the task ahead of it; and it were not for the accompaniment of preface apology. The main point is, you did or you did not, not why you did or why you did not. In other words, resultism not explanations, are required.

"The right kind of a man delights in responsibility. He may be diffident and modest, distrustful of his capacities, but he welcomes the opportunity to test himself, to measure his powers with other men, to ascertain whether it

Dr. Sypherd Urges Importance Of Established Standards

Twenty-three pupils were graduated from the Newark High School last Friday evening at the commencement exercises held in the Newark Opera House. The hall was attractively decorated with flags and potted plants. The class numerals in electric lights were also a feature of the decorations. A pleasing innovation in the evening's program was the singing of high school students. Miss Sara Wilson delivered the salutatory, Miss Clarice Waller the valedictory. Other student orations were by Misses Helen Leak, Adelaide Lewis, and Anna Ritz, and Mr. Clarence Evans. Dr. W. O. Sypherd was the speaker of the evening. The following received diplomas: Brita Buckingham, William Crossan, Margaret Doyle, Clarence Evans, Hattie Gray, Hazel Gray, Eva Hall, Gertrude Hill, Conrad Lewis, Helen Leak, Adelaide Lewis, Edgar Mackey, Mae Pierson, Cleaver Price, Anna Ritz, Joseph Rhodes, Emily Scott, Ira Steele, Patience Thompson, Clarice Waller, Gertrude Willis, Sara Wilson, Florence Walton.

Dr. Sypherd, speaker of the evening, presented "Some Thoughts about Education." He said in part: "Do you young men and young women know what many people are saying nowadays about this course of study that you have just completed? They are saying that 'Nothing is done as it should be done'. 'The old subjects of study such as Latin and Algebra, and Geometry and Mediaeval History are so good'. 'What you have learned won't help you to live your life'.

Governor Townsend Addressed Y. M. C. A.

Wolf Hall was crowded last Sunday morning when Governor Townsend addressed the Y. M. C. A. of the College. The occasion was notable as the first public meeting held in the auditorium of the new Science building. It was also Governor Townsend's first visit to Newark, and a splendid audience turned out to greet him. James C. Hastings, president of the Y. M. C. A., presided at the meeting.

In introductory words the speaker referred to the recent development of Delaware College, the responsibility of every citizen in its development as a State institution, and the gift of a million dollars without any stipulation whatever, to a state institution. "Delaware comes, a gift, to educate the boys and girls of the State," he said, "according to the standards set by those officially designated. Beautiful the grounds, magnificent the buildings, wonderful the conception, the great thing is that wealth is doing nobly its bit toward the advance of our State.

"Y. M. C. A. to me is one of the happiest signs of the times. Though never fortune with its advantages and associations, it is, I believe, a dominant force for good. Y. M. C. A.—Youth, Manhood, Character, Association,—the hope of the world today, upon these rest individual freedom. Upon these rest commonwealth. Youth, Manhood, Character,—change Association to America—and then upon these rest the fate of nations and christianity of the hour.

One criticism that can far too often be made is that the College (Continued on Page 6)

They are walking every step of the way, selling religious mottoes to help defray expenses. They report a wonderfully interesting trip, with people everywhere very kind to them. The travelers have followed the southern route, and have passed through all the southern states. When they first started the party made only ten or fifteen miles a day; now they report twenty-five without undue weariness. Mrs. Joy, who is seventy years old, measures up to the endurance of the younger generation, on the walk. The party left for Wilmington on Tuesday, reporting their short stay in Newark the first on their trip due to weather conditions.

statements. If we should believe the people who make such statements, we should have to admit that everything is all wrong, that we don't know what we have been about, and that you have wasted a good many precious years of your life. For your sake, I hope that what they say is not true. But assuming, as we may, that these extreme statements are untrue, all of us realize that there were never more or greater differences of opinion about subjects of study and methods of teaching than now."

The speaker referred to the universal spirit of unrest that has accompanied or resulted from the great war, to the chaos of ideas that prevails, applying this condition specifically to education. "In this hurly-burly and confusion of the time," he said, "in this welter of the elements we must at least try to preserve our balance. I would ask nothing more. Let us not ruthlessly reject the old, the tried, the much-abused or hastily adopt the new the possibly attractive program. To enforce my point, let me give you one illustration only. Not a few people in these latter days think formal English grammar—the subject of grammar with which I trust the members of this class are at least on speaking terms—formal grammar should be omitted from the secondary school curriculum. Some of you will doubtless say 'Amen.' Mr. Flexner who is largely responsible for the interest which attaches to what is commonly known as 'The Modern School' believes that this subject of study is necessary for the purposes neither of mental discipline nor of correct speaking and writing. He would accordingly drop this study from the curriculum. On the other hand there are teachers of wide experience who believe that this study is absolutely fundamental and that much of the present-day slovenliness in speaking and writing follows a neglect of this important subject. I have found, in my experience as a teacher, that the boy who has had a thorough grounding in this subject will, other things being equal, have the least difficulty with his English when he comes to college. But I do not wish to press the point here. I am not advocating one program or the other. I am only trying to present the marked divergence of views and to suggest the necessity of looking long and clearly before we leap. You young men and women will have to face, ere long, just such problems as I have suggested here. Don't discard something that has been of great service to you before you have something equally as good to take its place. The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

"If you were to ask me what a high school education should do, I should answer without hesitation—'It must start the boy or girl right.' This is one of those abstract statements which don't mean anything—if you take it by itself. I will try to apply it. There are certain tools of knowledge which we are all agreed the pupil should have and know the use of. He must be able to read and write; to spell the common words of ordinary speech; to express himself clearly in talking or writing; to figure correctly within the limits of everyday need; to know something about the world in which he lives. Six fundamental subjects every high school graduate should have at his command. It matters not what else you give him; he must have these—reading, writing, spelling, composition, arithmetic, geography.

"It is just possible that some of you don't agree with me even on this idea. As I have said before, there are all sorts of opinions about education. Well, I think that a pupil must have these things and have them well. You see that I am finding it difficult not to express a decided opinion—for, like all of you doubtless, I have a decided opinion on many of these educational problems. A pupil should not merely be able to read, but to read well, to read intelligently. I find college students, occasionally, who read nothing but words; they don't read the ideas at all. You may have been told that a boy doesn't absolutely need to write a good hand or to spell correctly, I tell you that such things are of the greatest importance. A genius may get along without them; you and I cannot. Get these fundamentals, and all other things may be added unto you. For the rest, nobody knows. Yet, the selection of the other subjects of the curriculum has been by no means a matter of guesswork. The only reasonably safe guide we have is the consensus of the experience of men through the ages. You can't trust your own judgment or the experience of the moment. There has been a gradual evolution in education as in everything else. But it has been and must be slow—the slower, the better. Changes and modifications must be introduced to accommodate those who must have a limited, a more specific training than that prescribed for the average boy or girl who should have a liberal education. For such a pupil, however, for the average boy or girl who wishes to have what we call 'a liberal education,' it is not clear that the old scheme of study, slightly modified both in content and in method, is not the best scheme today. If the high school puts the average boy or girl in a position to undertake the higher tasks, it has done its fundamental duty.

"The great thing, as I see it, both in the matter of a selection of subjects of study and in the larger matter of estimating the value of any kind of education is to have a standard by which you can judge, decide, and estimate. We are in a sorry position if as the result of so many hundred years of experience in the education of youth, we have nothing reasonably fixed or definite which we may take as the norm, as the rule, something from which we depart at our peril. Take, for example, if you will the subject of English Literature. Are the so-called classics to give way to the new books, to the books which have an immediate appeal, to the books which strike the popular fancy at the moment? As far as literature is concerned, are there to be no earmarks by which we may recognize an educated man? Are there to be no standard books in English Literature which every educated man should know. Whatever the answer may be, we must certainly take a stand on one side or the other. Of course, you know pretty well where you would find me. For myself, I would rather be wrong with Shakespeare than right with George Barr McCutcheon.

"Then there is the much broader matter of essential traits or characteristics of an educated man or woman. How do you recognize these young men and women as high school graduates? Those of you who are parents have seen your boys and girls go through these first years of their school life. Do your sons and daughters who have had this training stand out in some way from the boys and girls who have not had such training? I shall not attempt to answer for you these questions. But I do insist that there ought to be some standard by which we can estimate results.

"In the education of our boys and girls to such an end, I cannot get away from the conviction that the experience of the past lies at the foundation. The old is presumably better than the new. What has come down through the ages is better than that which we offer as of the present. If you can't have both, you had better cling to the old. In matters which admit of exact demonstration, the present is no doubt sufficient unto itself; but in history, government, literature, art, music, religion, we must learn from the experience of the past, and on our knowledge of these things of the past will our education largely be judged.

"If I might venture to give a few concrete illustrations of my own conviction, I would say that I think it is much more important that a high school student should know something about Alexander the Great than about Theodore Roosevelt, about Homer than about the author of the Man with the Hoe, about Luther and the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century than about Dowie and the Zionist movement of the Nineteenth, about the age of Louis XIV than about the times of the present rulers of France, about Mazzini than about W. J. Bryan, about Beethoven and Bach than Debussy and Strauss. If a choice must be made, I should say, go to the experience of the past. There, if anywhere, you will find a standard.

"A standard based on the experience of the past—that is my one idea, if it is possible to find some unity in these scattered observations. I believe, first, that we must have a more or less fixed standard according to which we can apply the touchstone of truth. I believe, second, that such a standard is found only in the records of the past. And I often think that the more attractive and plausible the new idea seems the less likelihood there is of its being sound.

"Our own experience at the present time bids fair to be a most valuable contribution to the knowledge of the world of the future. Through the present war, traditions will be upset or strengthened, clearer ideas of international relations will be established, and different conceptions of the relation of man to man will doubtless prevail. We shall certainly learn that unselfishness and co-operation among men and among nations are not incompatible with ambition, with personal endeavor, with national pride. And whatever in education—whether in school or college—that contributes to a training of the individual which will enable him to play his part well in the changing conditions of life will be, we know, of the things which change not with the seasons but are everlasting as the foundations of the world.

If I may apply this idea to our local affairs, I would plead at this moment for a better spirit of co-operation among our citizens in matters looking toward the betterment of our schools. The Newark High School ought to be the best school in the State—I except none—best in that it does best the things which it attempts to do, no matter how few or how limited in their scope they may be. The resources of the College are—many of them—immediately accessible to the school and to school people. There seems to have been so far little helpful intercourse between the school and the college. The blame may lie with the school, with the college or with the community. I am not concerned with that. But what I am interested in is the obvious possibility of a union in our town of all its forces of education. And concentrated as they might be, and as they surely ought to be, on the one aim of making our high school stand out as a model for our sister schools, I can see in the near future a state of affairs in education which would justify the old statement that 'Newark is the Athens of Delaware.' But we shall not realize our hopes, unless we are willing and ready to co-operate. If we believe in our schools, we ought to be willing to work for them. And I call upon the members of this graduating class and of the classes which have immediately preceded them to take the lead in the great work which lies before you. You members of the class of 1917, show yourselves worthy of the diplomas which will be given to you tonight. Let the community see that the school has given you something which has helped largely in making you live, intelligent, unselfish citizens, interested in the welfare of the school which sends you forth to-day."

DR. RANDOLPH ADDRESSES GRADUATESDwells Upon God's Gift To The American Nation

Baccalaureate services held in Wolf Hall last Sunday evening were largely attended. Dr. Herbert F. Randolph, D.D., pastor of Grace M. E. Church, Wilmington, delivered the charge to the young men, basing his sermon upon Luke 19:23—"Trade ye herewith until I come." Dr. Randolph dwelt on the tragedy of the uninvested talent and urged the young men to make use of the gift that God has given them. He said in part: "To lose the vision of the goal is the great peril of the practical man. We need the vast inspiration which is born of the finished achievement. If a man keeps his eye steadily fixed on probable defeat he will squander his resources all along the road of life. The anticipation of triumph is one of the sure secrets of victory. In such days as these we all need to cultivate most assiduously the habit of the seers, those men who see the triumph from afar. But the second and more apparent principle of the text is the greater and more urgent thought of the claim of the immediate."

"The words of urgent exhortation, 'Trade until I come,' remind us that we must be soldiers as well as seers. Trade means capital and interest. And what is life's capital? What is the pound that we are commanded to invest? It is life regarded from the standpoint of an investment. And what is our capital as traders in the kingdom? We each have a capital of truth, of conscience, of ideals, of ability. We are called upon to invest these gifts. The nation calls for this investment. It summons every man to do his bit for the world conflict for freedom, for the great boon of liberty and justice in the earth, and any man who heeds not that call will suffer the inexorable penalty of being deprived of the gift which he possesses. The universe is so constructed that every investment justifies itself in the interest it returns. The greatest tragedy of life is that which is here depicted when a man having a gift from heaven fails to use it for the common good."

"The truth is a great truth in history. The rise and fall of nations mark the movement of God's purpose. Nothing on the pages of history is more clear than that a nation is invincible, so long as she obeys the laws of her own destiny. When the day comes in which she forgets her mission and wraps her peculiar function in a napkin and buries it away in the earth, she is doomed."

The speaker cited illustrations from history and declared, "In some respects we Americans have been accorded the rarest privileges without the gift of God. Such talents have never been entrusted to the other nations of the earth. We are to be the feeders, the financiers, the fighters for the whole earth. Such ability no nation ever had entrusted to it. But our resources will become our share unless we respond to the command to go out and trade with it. We are making history today with such rapidity that it well nigh takes our breath away. God revokes no resource so long as it is being employed for the uplift of the world."

Dr. Randolph in closing applied the truth to the spiritual life, urging the development of the higher things which make of a man's soul.

Warm School Board Battle

Wilmington's School Board election on Saturday was hotly contested. The Supporters of the Citizens General Committee's ticket succeeded in electing George B. Miller, an official of the American Culvanized Fibre Company, president of the Board by a majority of 1157 over Samuel H. Barnard, who had held the post for ten years. Dr. Conwell Banton, colored, Citizens' nominee in the Sixth Ward, defeated F. R. Zuley, of the present Board, by 160 votes. John Moore, Citizens' nominee, defeated J. W. Casgrave by 24 votes, in the Eighth Ward. In the Ninth Elwood Sonder, Citizens' nominee, led A. J. Lang by 210 votes. John T. Kersey, present member from the Second Ward, defeated J. T. Magee by 126 votes. In the Tenth W. J. Campbell, present member, defeated John H. Hickey, Citizens' nominee, by 266 votes, and in the Eleventh George Rommel, present member, led W. L. Meredith, Citizens' nominee, by 414 votes. In the Fourth Ward F. A. Pinkerton was unopposed. The Board with the president, contains 13 members, of whom 5 hold over. The Citizens elected the president and three members but the old members with the hold-overs will control the Board.

MAKES BREAD FROM MAPLE WOODEleanor Woodruff Tries It Out On Friends

Although Eleanor Woodruff, who will be seen as the romantically inclined Olivia Martindale in the picturization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "Heights of Hazard," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, does not claim to be of a domestic turn of mind and simply abhors cooking, she recently became interested in a magazine article that stated flour or meal could be made from several kinds of wood, which, in combination with wheat flour, would make edible bread. She determined to experiment with wood as a digestible substance, and following the instructions in the article, obtained twigs and branches from a young maple tree, one of the five woods said to contain the most nutriment, and had them ground to a fine meal or coarse flour.

A cook book was next on Miss Woodruff's list, and then the real experiment began. Using one-third wood flour and two-thirds wheat flour, she mixed, kneaded and baked until she had a half dozen golden brown loaves and two pans of biscuits. She did not taste the biscuits herself, but invited several of her friends to dinner. She watched while they tried her biscuits and was astonished when they disappeared like magic. She served the bread, and then, plucking up courage enough to taste it, found it good. Then Miss Woodruff told her friends.

The Vitagraph player does not claim to be the one to introduce wood as edible matter, as it was used during the great famine of 1816-17, but does claim priority in introducing it to her friends and herself, even if she did, to use the theatrical phrase, "try it on the dog" first.

COLLEGE TRUSTEES IN REGULAR SESSION

1, 1917.

Miss Ethel Dole, Extension Worker in Home Economics, (gift) Canning Project, salary of $1,200 beginning July 1, 1917.

On motion the question of filling the position at the Women's College made vacant by Miss Hinds' resignation, was referred to Dr. Mitchell and Miss Robinson.

Pomona Grange, through their representative, Mr. Horace Dilworth, offered two prizes, the first $25.00, and the second $15.00, to the pupils submitting the best entrance examination papers in the agricultural course.

Dinner was served, under the direction of Miss Caldwell, in College Hall.

The agricultural committee submitted the following report:

The members of the Department of Agriculture are looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to occupying their new quarters in Wolf Hall at an early date. The building is a model of its kind, splendidly adapted to its purpose and will serve as an inspiration for many years to come to the students in Agriculture as well to those who teach and to those who conduct researches in this most important industry of our state. All of those connected in any way with Agriculture at Delaware College wish to express their keen appreciation and profound gratitude to those who, through their untiring zeal and unrequited love for the College, have made this magnificent building a reality.

Never before in the history of our country has Agriculture occupied such an important place as at this time. In the great crisis we are now facing, as much depends upon those who till the soil, as upon those who stand the brunt of battle on land or sea or who toil in the production of munitions. Eighty per cent of the world's population is looking to America's agricultural strength and to America's military strength to make the world safe for democracy.

Wolf Hall, affording as it does such increased facilities for high class work, is made available at an opportune time, a time when Agriculture is appreciated more than ever before and at a time when we need to utilize every possible resource in order that the greatest production may be assured.

During the year just closing a number of changes have taken place in the personnel of the Department of Agriculture. Some of these have been resignations but more have been additions to the research or extension staffs.

Dr. E. M. R. Lamkey, the Plant Physiologist, whose appointment was recently authorized, has been on duty since April 15th.

The assistants in the Experiment Station, Mr. Neff in Agronomy and Mr. Young in Horticulture are also at work.

We are glad to announce that two women county agents have been appointed in the Agricultural Extension Department. Miss Clara M. Nixon, agent for Sussex County, began her duties the first of May and Miss Ethel M. Dole, agent for Kent County, began her work June 1st.

Mr. Lester W. Tarr, assistant Chemist, resigned in April to accept a more lucrative position in industrial chemistry.

Mr. L. H. Cooch, county agent in New Castle County, resigned in April. Mr. F. A. Carroll, state dairy agent, working in co-operation with the Dairy Division, Bureau of Animal Industry, resigned in May to accept a position as county agent in New Jersey, at a large increase in salary.

Assistant Professor Cory, who has been in charge of the newly formed division of Poultry Husbandry, has been commissioned a captain in the Quartermaster's Department of the United States army and expects to receive orders to report for duty at an early date.

Your committee has recommended to the committee on instruction that Mr. H. T. King, of Pennsylvania State College, be appointed to succeed Mr. Tarr as assistant Chemist in the Experiment Station at a salary of $100 per year. Mr. M. O. Pence, of Danville, Ind., has been appointed Assistant State Leader of County Agent Work. It has been further recommended that Mr. Carroll's position be kept vacant and in his stead Mr. Howard T. Ruhl, of Columbia University be appointed State Leader of Boys' and Girls' Club Work, at a salary of $2000 per year, one-half to be paid from Smith-Lever funds and one-half by the national States Relations Service; also that Prof. R. V. Mitchell, of the New Hampshire State College, be appointed Professor of Poultry Husbandry at a salary of $1900 per year.

The activities of the Department have proceeded along the usual lines, with the exception that the work in agricultural extension has increased rapidly of late owing to the food crisis and it is expected that it will be abnormally heavy for sometime to come.

There is an emergency appropriation bill now pending before Congress which will probably pass. If it does, Delaware will have about $7000 more than it now has for extension work.

Bet Fifty That

Autocracy Won't Win

That the hour is dark and the pending crisis full of terrors for the American people is sensed by all intelligent men who realize that only by mobilizing the savings of the masses to back the American Army of democracy can we triumph, first over our own fears, and second over Prussian militarism.

No matter how all this came about, we are in the war, either to achieve a victory for democracy, or to go down to defeat under the power of entrenched Central Europe, which protects itself while it destroys the world's commerce with the submarine.

The farmers of Iowa and the workers of Pittsburgh alike must know that they cannot get out of paying, either for victory or defeat now. They'll pay dearer for defeat under an indemnity levied from Berlin by a victorious Germany, in case England is starved and isolated France is crushed.

Peace is the ideal of America. Peace can be purchased now in one of two ways, either by backing our soldiers at once with the two billion dollar Liberty Loan, or by paying Germany the cost of her war in return for her grant of quarter to our defeated allies.

This two billion dollar loan is a trifle compared with the $20,000,000,000 loaned by the English people. It is but half the recent new French loan, subscribed for by the peasants. It is small compared with the recent German loan to which 5,250,000 German people volunteered subscriptions. But it is colossal compared with any former American national loans.

If the German people beat us in subscribing for war loans, of course they will defeat us at arms.

In the present desperate posture of affairs it would be fatal for the masses of the people to say: "Let the rich men and the banks make the loan." It would be impossible for the banks thus to convert the deposits of the people, for the commercial requirements and the industrial needs demand that the resources of the banks be kept liquid.

The people are the true source of wealth, and to the people the government must go for this Liberty Loan. THIS MEANS YOU.

Without this loan business will surely suffer, and with this loan prosperity will be assured. For the government is going to spend your loan right under your nose again to keep you employed, as well as protected.

With The Orators

At Commencement

Up from the mast at Trafalgar Lord Nelson signaled, "England expects every man to do his duty." America now signals the message to every citizen.

LeRoy Bayard Steele

A man's work is determined by his ability to think. We owe our progress to the men who dream dreams and are willing to make their dreams come true.

Elisha Lee

College men used to be trained to show the fact that a benevolent government or an indulgent father had made it unnecessary for them to earn a living. Now it means the opportunity to work and work hard at something you can do well.

Elisha Lee

You cannot dream yourself into a character. You must hammer and forge yourself into a character.

The value of an education shows itself in your ability to force yourself into doing well the thing that should be done, whether you feel like doing it or not.

RAIN MARS MONDAY'S EXERCISES

Prizes In Public Speaking Contest

Class day exercises scheduled to be held on the old college campus on Monday afternoon, owing to the story weather, were held in Wolf Hall. The program which was one of much interest, was followed by the reception given by Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, to the graduating class, their friends, and friends of the college. The reception was held in the new student commons, the first public affair in the remodeled building.

At the public speaking contest held on Monday evening, the alumni prizes of $30 and $20 were won by Leroy Bayard Steele and William Scott Levey.

Delaware Meets Penn

On Frazer Field

In a splendid game on Frazer Field on Tuesday, Delaware lost to U. of P. by the score of 2 to 1. The game was one of the best games ever played on Frazer Field. It was a pitchers' battle between Jim Clancy and Walter Bernhardt, with the former having all the better of it until the eighth inning.

Clancy was partly responsible for the loss of his own game when he and D. Horsey got mixed on a pop fly from Bernhardt's bat in the eighth inning, which dropped safe. Berry sacrificed Bernhardt to second, who scored on Todd's single to center. Captain Todd had struck out three times until this inning. His hit struck the running track in center field and D. Horsey had time to throw Bernhardt out at the plate but his heave went over Pierson's head and Todd went to third. The latter scored on White's clever squeeze.

Delaware scored in the third inning, when Stewart, McCardell and Pierson bunched singles. Delaware lost an opportunity to score in the fifth by poor base running.

The Origin Of "Old Glory"

The name of "Old Glory" for our flag is thought to have become famous through some poetical allusion. In 1898 James Whitcomb Riley wrote a poem on the subject, in which occur the following lines:

"Who gave you, Old Glory, the name that you bear
With such pride everywhere?
Who gave you the name of Old Glory?"

Then occur the following lines (stanzas 3 and 4):

"Then the old banner leapt, like a sail in the blast,
And fluttered an audible answer at last.

And it spake, with a shake of the voice, and it said:

"By the driven snow-white and the living blood-red
Of my bars, and their heaven of stars overhead—

By the symbol conjoined of them all, skyward cast,
As I float from the steeple, or flap at the mast,

Or droop o'er the sod where the long grasses nod,—
My name is as old as the glory of God.

... So I came by the name of Old Glory."

A Slice Of Bread

A single slice of bread seems an unimportant thing. In many households one or more slices of bread daily are thrown away and not used for human food. Sometimes stale quarter, or half, loaves are thrown out.

Yet one good-sized slice of bread—such as a child likes to cut—weighs an ounce. It contains almost three-fourths of an ounce of flour.

If every one of the country's 20,000,000 homes wastes on the average only one such slice of bread a day, the country is throwing away daily over 14,000,000 ounces of flour—over 875,000 pounds, or enough flour for over a million one-pound loaves a day. For a full year at this rate there would be a waste of over 319,000,000 pounds of flour—1,500,000 barrels—enough flour to make 365,000,000 loaves.

As it takes four and one-half bushels of wheat to make a barrel of ordinary flour, this waste would represent the flour from over 7,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Fourteen and nine-tenth bushels of wheat on the average are raised per acre. It would take the fruit of some 470,000 acres just to provide a single slice of bread to be wasted daily in every home.

To produce this much flour calls for an army of farmers, railway men, flour-mill people. To get the flour to the consumer calls for many freight cars and the use of many tons of coal.

But some one says, a full slice of bread is not wasted in every home. Very well—make it a daily slice for every 4 or every 10 or every 30 homes—make it a weekly or monthly slice in every home—or make the wasted slice thinner. The waste of flour involved is still appalling—altogether too great to be tolerated when wheat is scarce.

Any waste of bread is inexcusable when there are so many ways of using stale bread to cook delicious dishes.

The United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., or your State Extension agent will tell you how to use stale bread in many ways.

The Women's Missionary Society of Presbyterian Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Ernest Frazer on Thursday evening at 7.30.

Many women employees at the Bannock Mills, at Rockford, are wearing overalls at work as an experiment. Whether their use will prove permanent depends upon the judgment of the workers.

New Castle branch of the Navy League on June 4, packed a box containing 90 sleeveless jackets, 90 mufflers and 90 pairs of wrist-lets knitted by its members for the use of the crew of the United States Destroyer MacDonough, to be shipped to Washington.

Enlist Your Dollars in the War

In this time of our country's crisis an idle dollar is as much a "slacker" as an idle man. Are your dollars doing their duty?

"The Liberty Loan of 1917" invites the immediate response of the American people. Every dollar subscribed will help make it a success. The quicker the better.

Armies of dollars are an absolute necessity for national defense. Unless the dollars at home stand back of them, the soldiers in the field cannot do their utmost to protect our households and our freedom.

man often assumes an attitude of aloofness from the crowd. I realize that your associations here, your trend of thought, your mingling with books and masters, cause you to lose patience with the crudities of men less fortunate. In this particular, to my mind, you have failed. University Club criticism by men who fail to give either thought or time is small expression of good citizenship. Every question of civic interest is your question for action. Get in the thick of the fight, mingle with the crowd, impress your personality on men. Give your state the benefit of the training that has been given you. Especially is this true of a state institution such as this. The duty as well as the opportunity is very definite. From other institutions you may go, and the service to your State is one of choice. Here it is an imperative debt. To this State and nation, by your training here, you are expected to repay. I care not whether a man of profession, as trained farmer, as engineer, as professor in the arts, you neglect and neglect shamefully, if you fail or refuse to play the full part of citizenship. By this I do not mean as a superior being but as a man among men. In all the questions of the day, the problems of the public school not only in the Institutes, but in the assessment and election of officials.

"In the problems of education, not only by casual suggestion to a committee before the General Assembly, but in the primaries that send men there.

"The professional practical man of politics from whom you shrink, may be doing the best he knows and no mere expression of disgust from you is going to reform conditions. You can not do your full part and escape. Your man of History who knows more of the ancients than the doings of Congress has failed. Your man of Literature who knows more of the Classics than what is in the weekly reviews has failed. Your man of language who can't talk to the man on the street has failed. Your engineer who looks at the world only through the instrument has failed. Exceptions we grant—but only when a genius. Even those are conspicuous today in the nation's service.

"My point is, gentlemen, that your state and country wants you. It is gratifying to see your professor of Literature associated with a business man in taking military registration. It is interesting to make out a Commission as Notary Public to your professor of engineering.

"I learn with pleasure of College men acting as Clerks in a Board of Registration. I warrant they found us common men, eager, willing to do the right thing. The success of the Registration is proof of my claim.

"Little do you realize the power for good that is in your hands. Not as leaders until you have inspired the right and confidence. To will truly is not a matter of domination but of co-operation.

"Nor would I have you as a mere 'Me Too' Follower.

"Speak, work and fight for your convictions. The man who follows without question may make a good soldier, but not a good citizen. Be not awed by some high light. Dare not to fawn to one in high position. In a word be a Man of Delaware, whose ideal is to respect authority but not cater to it. To win favorably by agreeing with everything ill becomes our State.

"You men who are acquainted with the dramatic events of history oftentimes, I suspect, yearn for those days of hot blood and high tension. The High Lights of History are recorded so as to appeal to you. The routine drudgery of the days is left out. You have been, no doubt, inclined to think the exciting days of the Colonists and the Revolution or even those early days of Lincoln offered more to the life and ambitions of youth than today.

"We have during your years been living in prosperity of mechanical progress. The dramatic acts of the history heroes have not been in your day. The rush, of invention, the work of development, the stampede for gain, have not the glamor of those who are pioneers or soldiers for Ideals. Sacrifice for country, appeals to honor are dulled.

"But today, again, stronger than history records, comes the call for soldiers for right. That love of country, that honor of men, that defense of Liberty, has been so accepted that we can scarcely realize that they have been questioned. But they have. Reluctant as we may be, hesitate as we have, the stern world fact is before us—We are at War.

"Not by choice, not by excitement, not by subtle plans. We are at War. Not for conquest, not for gain, not for display of force. We are at War, that this idea of National life of ours shall live. This Ideal of ours, conceived in hardship, drenched in blood, is at bay. The principles upon which this Nation was founded, the meaning of our flag are not mere platitudes. They are not mere high sounding phrases. They have a very definite meaning and hold a very definite bearing on your every day life and mine. Say not that this is not your War. It is. Democracy is not a theory but a reality. Individual liberty is not a dream but a fact. It is your war.

"Whether in class room, in the laboratory, in the market place, on the farm, in professional life or as a day laborer you and I have got to make the sacrifice in time, with our wealth, by our blood, to stem the attack on a conception of government based on and approaching those Ideals spoken by the Man Jesus.

America demands something more than platform loyalty, more than routine duty of citizenship. When questioned it means our all. It is a heritage to us, made possible by our fathers. They gave us all that we might these privileges so enjoy. As worthy sons of those fathers, we must see that it is defeated, that our sons will be as proud of their ancestry as we are of ours.

"These are wondrous times. The world looks to us for the maintenance of individual liberty. Dramatic! Not in history since the gray dawn at Calvary equals this day.

"Called from these beautiful halls, called from the shaded green of this campus, called from home, called from ambition, hope and everything that is dear—Applied Christianity demands your thought, your time—yes if need be, demands the sacrifice of your all.

"I appeal not in vain to the youth in Delaware. The history of America, running down the years is aplashed by our father's blood. In war, in peace, our fathers have been true."

State Fair To Be Food Growers' Training Camp

Since the announcement of Samuel H. Wilson, Jr., several weeks ago, which stated emphatically that there was no intention of calling off the Delaware State Fair this year, but that it would be operated as a Food Training Camp in the voluntary service of the Government, the plan has been commended very highly by the public.

In an interview today, Mr. Wilson said: "I fail to see why anyone should believe that the war is apt to cause the fair to be discontinued. It is needed more badly this year than ever, because of the assistance it can give in stimulating the production of more food and its conservation.

"Plans for the 'Food Training Camp' are being formulated rapidly. Many educational features will cause the Delaware State Fair to be of great assistance to the Government."

The Fair is to be held September 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, this year.

WHAT DOES MUSIC MEAN TO YOU?

Do you struggle into your dress clothes occasionally for an hour or so of temporary exaltation? Do you merely get an occasional morsel of good music? Music is a necessity to your spiritual and mental development. You are doing yourself a grave injustice if you do not have good music in your home. Particularly, you are doing your children an unforgivable injustice if you do not fairly saturate their souls with noble music.

THE NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

solves the problem. It doesn't give you the travesty on music which is characteristic of the ordinary talking machine. Instead, it gives you the literal Re-Creation of music, meaning that it Re-Creates the human voice and other forms of music with such literal fidelity that if a living artist sang or played in comparison with the New Edison's Re-Creation of such artist's performance you could not tell one from the other, if you closed your eyes. The truth of this statement has been demonstrated in public before more than half a million people and these demonstrations are chronicled in nearly five hundred of America's principal newspapers.

WE WANT YOU TO HEAR

this wonderful new invention. We invite you and your friends to come to our store. We want to be your hosts at a complimentary musicale. You will not be urged to buy. You will not even be asked to buy. We are perfectly satisfied if you will come and listen.

NOTICE: Please do not ask us to sell you Edison Re-Creations if you intend to attempt to play them on any other instrument than the New Edison. No other instrument can bring out the true musical quality of Edison Re-Creations. Furthermore, injury to the records is likely to result if you attempt to play them on an ordinary phonograph or talking machine.

Iron Hill Wins Final Game

Iron Hill defeated the Newark Collegians again last Saturday in the final game of the three-game series. Each team had won one of the preceding games, and this was one of the closest contests ever witnessed on the local grounds. The Collegians were in the lead from the first, as the locals never seemed able to bunch their hits. In the ninth inning, however, with the score 3 to 1 against Iron Hill, the locals had a wonderful batting rally. Slack and Ivins singled, and came home on Lomax's double, while Lomax crossed the plate on Powell's single, bringing in the winning run for Iron Hill.

Both Carter and Slack pitched an excellent game. McCardle, the short-stop of the Collegians, held down his position in great style, while the work of their outfield is to be especially commended.

Ivins starred for the local nine. Besides playing a brilliant game in the field, making one double and two singles out of four times at bat. The score:

"Busy!"

It is actually more work for a telephone operator to report that a line is "busy" than to complete the connection. Just before the operator "plugs in" to the "jack" or terminal of the line you are calling, she touches the tip of the cord to its edge. If the line is in use she hears a buzzing sound which informs her of that fact, and she reports accordingly to you. Bear in mind, too, that the "busy" report does not always mean that the telephone you are calling is in use—some other "party" on the line may be talking.

Busy men have busy telephones. It is unavoidable that you may sometimes have to knock more than once at their telephone doors.

is in him to make good. He may go down in defeat, either from unsuspected limitations in his nature or from circumstances beyond his control, but he welcomes the opening for enlarged opportunity that comes from increased responsibility.

"Opportunity knocks in vain at the door of the man who repels responsibility from fear that he cannot carry the burden. The good fortune of those who forge ahead in the race of life frequently is chiefly due to seeking responsibility and co-operating with your associate for the good of the cause, no matter what it may be. Sins of commission are more easily overlooked than sins of omission. It was, I think, Mr. Rockefeller who said: 'A man who is right fifty-one percent of the time will succeed.'"

"Here at Newark, and in Delaware, you are located in one of the finest farming sections on the North American Continent. The appropriations from your Legislature for maintenance and for a new dormitory for the Women's College, together with the gifts from that generous citizen of your state which permitted the purchase of a new campus and the erection of the three buildings which will be formally opened today, and at the same time adding to the endowment funds, have made it possible to expand your college to carry on its activities in a proper manner and make it possible for its graduates to take further advantage of the agricultural possibilities of your location.

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country" and whether this applies to the appreciation of the possibilities of this work among you, I do not know. It is, however, an established fact that the farm offers large rewards to whoever chooses it as his vocation. This opportunity is present today more than ever before. Attention is constantly being drawn to the farmer's part in producing adequate crops to feed not only America, but our Allies as well. The man who can produce foodstuffs is just as necessary to the life of the Nation as the man at the front.

The main factor of success in any business is the marketing of its products. The Delaware, Maryland and Virginia Peninsula is nearer to the centers of population of the country than any other farming section. Within a radius of five hundred miles are eighty-four of the principal cities of the United States. The transportation facilities permit of quick delivery of produce to the markets. Refrigerator cars and fast preference freight schedules allow perishable foodstuffs to reach their destination many miles away and at a time that a price may be had for them.

"It may seem strange to you that a railroad man should be interested in an agricultural problem, but agriculture is one of the bases of our wealth and it is as much to the interest of the railroad that our production is adequate to our needs as it is that we should obtain a sufficient supply of coal, iron and steel.

"These are serious times. Our railroads are trying to do their part, and with no intention of casting any reflection on the other industries and citizens who are loyally and energetically helping in this great crisis, I should like to indicate to you in a few words what the railroads are trying to do, as illustrative of the spirit generally pervading the industries of this country.

"I can best do this probably, by reading to you a few extracts from a statement recently issued by our President to the officers and employees of our Company:

"To All Officers and Employees: 'Every railroad man in the United States is confronted with a solemn duty to his Nation, and I trust that the 250,000 who are working for the Pennsylvania Railroad System are giving constant thought to the personal responsibility each must discharge. It is essential that every one on our pay rolls should know what share the Railroads are taking in this War, and should realize that the Army, Navy, Agriculture and the Industries will be seriously hampered unless our Officers and Employees show the spirit of their devotion in active, loyal service.

"The Railroads of the United States have undertaken the biggest task in their history to produce a maximum of national transportation efficiency during the War. They, therefore, have agreed to co-ordinate their operations into a Continental Railway System, and to merge all their merely competitive activities.

"In co-operation with the Council of National Defense and its Advisory Commission, the direction of this Continental Railway System has been voluntarily placed in the hands of an Executive Committee of the Special Committee on National Defense of the American Railway Association, now designated, for brevity, as the Railroads' War Board.

"Railroad Officers and Employees should be keenly appreciative of this opportunity to demonstrate to the Nation at large the value of the Railroads in time of War. Only by great personal interest and effort on the part of each man will the Railroads be able to meet the extraordinary transportation needs of the Country, which have become more acute since the entrance of the United States into the War."

"We are, normally, a peaceful Nation, and many of us are inclined to feel that serious harm cannot reach us, but this war that we have been forced into is a most serious business, and will come pretty close to many of us before we get through with it, and the sooner we all of us understand that it means effort and sacrifice, the better we shall be able to meet whatever the future may bring to us, and do our part. Some will be privileged to do the fighting; others of us must do our part here in order that those who are fighting may properly perform their allotted task.

"Now that we have entered the World War, the whole world is turning their eyes our way to see how we conduct ourselves.

"Our Nation is on trial.

"Our industries are on trial.

"Each individual of us is on trial.

"Each of us must do his part in his or her own sphere, in order that we may have a symmetrical whole and all parts of the Country, industrially and individually, working to the highest efficiency in order that we may have a well-rounded and successful result."

Following Mr. Lee's address Henry B. Thompson president of the Board of Trustees, publicly thanked Pierre duPont for his magnificent gift to Delaware College, and also the architects, Messrs. Day and Klauder, for the genius and imagination which they had put into the three buildings already completed as a result of the gift. Mr. Thompson referred to the four boys in khaki seated among the graduates, declaring, "We know these young men will very probably in the future, quietly and surely, depart from us. Some of them may never return. Although this thought brings sadness to our hearts we also know that to die in such a cause is but the dawn of a glorious awakening, and not death."

Of especial moment and interest at this time was the presence of Dr. Parkin, of Oxford University, England, director of the Cecil Rhodes scholarship fund. Dr. Parkin spoke eloquently and inspiringly of the response of the university and college to the call of the country: "Every college in England," he said, "has posted in their halls great long lists of those who have already given to their country, their lives. Out of a normal enrollment of 3500 at Oxford, there are now scarcely 300 men. Oxford has sent to the front 11,000 men."

Dr. Parkin has recently been in England, and in the devastated districts of France. "All of my relatives of fighting age are at the front," he said. "I was recently told by my son that he had not a single intimate friend who had not given his country his life. But they have died in a glorious cause. I don't know that a long life is necessary to a great life. A man who spends his life and gives it in a great cause becomes immortal; he links himself eternally with the progress of his race and nation."

"Don't think that the war is all bad," Dr. Parkin declared. "About forty years ago I visited France, just following the Franco-Prussian war. I was struck by the sense of humiliation and depression everywhere. Now there has come a change. Their losses have been great. It is probable 500,000 perished before Verdun alone; the very blood of France has been drained until it is almost white. But in traveling through the country recently I have been impressed with a sense of great confidence everywhere. They still believe they have a future before them; the spirit of confidence is everywhere."

"I am not so sure that we don't see around us signs that we need this world war to call us back to higher things. There has been, in England, in Canada, in America, a riot of extravagance, of luxury, the cost of living, an absence of simplicity, and a lack of moral tone flowing from those thinking only of the almighty dollar. I am not sure that we can't find conditions that required just this great world war. Germany was famed for her music, her theology, her philosophy; she has become demoralized by the stupendous commercial development of the last forty years. I am not sure that great commercial prosperity doesn't lower the moral tone; it demands some great corrective.

"One of my great desires is that I shall be able to do something to make my country better understood in America. One of the great surprises that we English people feel upon coming to America is how the whole American mind drops back to 1776. This country has gone through all kinds of experiences since then. Why, when you want to arouse especial enthusiasm to you drop back to it?"

Dr. Parkin has devoted his life to the unity of the Anglo-Saxon race. "Just as this war has so I hope it will swallow up the dwarfed every battle in the past, things that have kept us apart, and our differences. Thru my association with the one hundred American students who are kept all the time at Oxford, and my touch with all the colleges which they represent, I feel that I know American life, and I say the Anglo-Saxon ideal is still the ruling power in this country. I recently visited Augusta, Maine, and saw there a fine building, a great library, which one of your philanthropists had given to the city. Carved in the columns were the names of those who have contributed to the literature of the world. But there was a special tablet in the front reserved to show the men who have especially moved the minds of this country. I moved up to this with a great deal of curiosity. I found thereon twenty-nine names, and of these eighteen were Englishmen. We need your best to help us; you need our best to help you. I believe the unity of the Anglo-Saxon race would mean the greatest league for peace that could be known."

Following the exercises luncheon was served to the alumni and guests of the college. A procession to Wolf Hall formed at 2.30, when the portrait of Dr. Theodore

R. Wolf, presented by the family, was unveiled. Robert Bunsen Wolf, Class of 1896, eldest son of Dr. Wolf, made the presentation speech. Mrs. Wolf, the widow of Dr. Wolf, and Theodore Wolf, Class of 1901, the younger son, were also present at the exercises.
