Henry Boyles
Henry Boyles, aged 87 years, the oldest man in the colored section of town, died last Tuesday, April 17th, of pneumonia. The deceased had been a member of St. John's church for seventy-five years. A large family, including grand children and great grand children, attended.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD THE WAR

ligerents. God is our witness that we exerted our utmost to arrest the break. We pleaded, we reasoned, we expostulated, we threatened; all to no avail. A nation whose existence, it is asserted, is threatened, claims to have the right to ignore all law and order, and run amuck. To combat that most wicked and dangerous principle we have stepped to the front to measure arms with the outlaw nation of the world. We enter into the contest with the purest of motives, with no lust of conquest, no desire to acquire new territory, no wish to secure a war indemnity. On the contrary we risk our own possessions; we expect to pour out treasures of money and blood. Nor have we any hatred in our hearts for the nation that has dragged us into war. We believe that were the people of that nation allowed to speak their own mind, they would sue for peace at once; for they are heart-sick of the war. We unsheathe the sword for the sake of humanity as against an aristocracy which a regenerated civilization cannot any longer endure. We throw all the weight of our influence against the menace to the liberty of all liberty-loving people. The die is cast. We cannot turn back. The war must be prosecuted until the foe of liberty bites the dust.

"Let us first of all, invoke the assistance of the God of Battles, the very same God to whom our Washington appealed when the clouds were the darkest and no light shone through to direct his faith. Let the world know that as a Christian nation we enter into this contest in firm reliance upon the assistance of Almighty God, with whom nothing is impossible. It is remarkable how scripture abounds in instances that fit the present occasion. Indeed we would have hesitated to present the subject from the pulpit, were it not for these scriptural examples.

"But we cannot expect God to aid us if we sit with folded arms," Dr. Rowan continued. "A remark attributed to Cromwell is applicable to us, said he, 'Soldiers, trust in God, but keep your powder dry.' We cannot afford to treat this as a light affair. Nay, we are engaged in war with a nation that for 40 years has been preparing for such a contest, and began the war when the whole world was off guard. For nearly three years we have stood off at a distance watching the fierce struggle, again and again almost drawn into the fight. Now we must send into the field a great army."

The speaker paused to consider the two courses open to us, citing results from history of the policies of both the volunteer system and the military conscription.

"But what would be the advantage of gathering an army of 2,000,000 men," Dr. Rowan continued, "and then stopping there, considering our task finished? It would be a crime to send it forth without proper training; that would be simply playing into the hands of the enemy. Nor could we under such circumstances expect God to give victory to our arms. He no longer works without the use of secondary causes. Hence since the miraculous is out of the question, let us force the fact of the absolute necessity for the most thorough preparation of our forces. We peace-loving people must study the art of war as we have never done before—trench warfare, heavy artillery service, aviation and the like. We must call to our assistance the best brains of the nation to devise means to offset the subtle plans of an enemy that has subordinated everything to military ascendancy. We must study strategy so as to be able to meet the enemy on their own ground. Let us seek out our Gideons to work out plans by which a comparatively small force of our men may put a host of the enemy to flight. With a united country let us search for a commander who shall combine the wisdom of a Washington with all the splendid strategy of a Lee and the dogged determination of a Grant. May the mantles of Washington, Greene, Jackson, Harrison, Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Grant, and Sherman fall on the shoulders of our chieftains! We will not enter into the war inexperienced, as we might have done two years ago.

Our military authorities have observed closely the method of warfare employed, and furthermore all the plans of the allies are at our disposal, worked out in detail, so that little experimenting will have to be done. This will help to offset any advantage the enemy may possess from their long training in military affairs. Manifestly we are to work in co-operation with our allies, to take part with them in the military councils, to offer suggestions, to profit by their advice, to move in concert with them for the complete overthrow of militarism, that it may never again be dominant on the earth. France, which sent war and ships to aid us in securing our independence, and did it without demanding any recompense, has lifted her bleeding hands in an appeal to her sister republic to help her against the iron heel of an oppressor that knows no respect for law. England, our mother country, twice an enemy, but for many years joined to us in the strongest bonds of fellowship, a fellowship that was tested in our recent war with Spain, when the mailed fist was clenched to strike a blow at our victorious squadron in Manila harbor, England appeals to us to join her in a world movement to remove the menace to the peace of the world. So too, Russia, always our friend, and giving proof of her friendship during our Civil strife, Russia, the latest nation to throw off a detestable monarchy and become a republic, welcomes us as an ally. We say to our allies as Jehoshaphat did to the King of Israel, 'I am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.' The greatest need of our allies is not men, but money, food, and supplies. A measure, having the endorsement of the President of the United States, is about to be presented to Congress giving a loan of billions of dollars to our allies, to enable them to prosecute the war with undiminished force, while we recruit and train our soldiers for the fray. Lest there should be an attempt on the part of misinformed people or sympathizers with the enemy to prevent the bill from passing, or to talk it to death, your Order and all patriotic organizations over the world should give it your heartiest endorsement, and flood Congress with your messages to that effect. Let us trust to our lawmakers to devise for us a mode of taxation that will be just and fair. Let us all be prepared to sacrifice for the sake of our country.

"The great bulk of the nation, however, can have no active part in the struggle. This has been always so. The select few of the nation have gone to the front, while the majority remain at home. But in a sense the work of those who stay is as important as that of the fighters, and if there were any spoils of war the two might share alike. The age limit will exclude many, as well as slight defects of person, as the eyes, the ears, the limbs. But on every citizen the burden of responsibility must rest. None must be unemployed who can work. We will be required to increase greatly the food supply, to do which no plot of ground capable of being used for food should be allowed to go to waste. Hence workmen must be sent to farms and gardens to cultivate them to their maximum supply and the able unemployed should be compelled to go to the front or to help raise the amount of food supply of your land. If there should happen to be a shortage of men for any particular tasks which women can perform, we look to them to do as the women of France and England have done in this great emergency. We as a nation will be divided into two classes—warriors and helpers. While the first prepare themselves to meet the foe, on the field of battle, the second will conduct the business of the land, and keep the warriors well supplied with food, clothing, and ammunitions.

"We feel sure of victory. We have chosen this text because it represents the attitude of our enemy toward us. They deride us as a military power, regarding us as a negligible quantity, whose entrance into the conflict will not count so much as a straw's weight in the ultimate result. They make sport of our lack of preparation. We remember that previous to the war of 1812 our naval officers were belittled in the same manner. But the war had not gone many months before the world was treated to a surprise. Ship after ship of the despised American navy, lowered the colors of the acknowledged mistress of the seas. The world may be treated to another surprise when the American spirit is given an opportunity to display itself. Who knows but the death blow may be administered to submarine warfare by American genius divinely directed? Who knows but that three million American soldiers may force the surrender of the citadel of militarism? We have never sought to be a world power, for we love peaceful pursuits. But once aroused by a sense of the justice of our cause we will prove to be formidable antagonists. Do not our foes underestimate our resources, our courage, our determination? If they ever had a chance of success in the present war, our entrance into the strife has reduced the chance to zero.

"Only one thing stands between us and victory, and that is sin. Now is the time to get rid of the saloon. Economic reasons, if they are the higher ones, require us to take the drastic step. All unnecessary luxuries should be dispensed with. Let us conduct ourselves quietly, soberly, and righteously. Let us forsake all impiety, all skepticism, all irreverence. Let us with a return to the faith of our fathers, build up again the family altar, and crowd to our churches, to offer up unto God the sacrifices that are pleasing in his sight, 'a broken spirit, a broken and a contrite heart.' If we do these things God will make us invincible."

Fast Train Kills Farm Hands

Returning from Frederica to their home, near Felton, early on Friday morning Albert Harris and Daniel Burris, two colored farm hands, drove upon the crossing south of Felton station just as the fast Norfolk express was approaching. The engine struck and demolished the carriage and the two men were fatally injured. The crew of the train, which was stopped when sparks from a brake shoe were noticed, found a fragment from the carriage wedged in the shoe and signs on the engine pilot of an accident. The train was backed and the victims were found. Dr. Bishop of Dover, was wired to meet the train and accompanied the men to Wilmington where they were rushed to Delaware Hospital, where one was found to be dead when the ambulance arrived and the other died about 9 a. m.

Former Governor Watson's Death

Farmer Governor William T. Watson, died at his home in Milford on Friday night, after several months illness, aged 68 years. He owned considerable railroad stock and much valuable property in Milford. He was elected to the State Senate from Kent county for four years in 1892 and was chosen Speaker or President in 1895 and succeeded Governor Joshua T. Marvill, who died in March of that year. Followers of J. Edward Addicks had blocked the choice of a United States Senator at the Legislative session of 1895 but on the closing day the Regular Republicans had mustered 15 votes for Henry A. duPont. Governor Watson, whose term as State Senator had not expired, attended and presided over the joint session and as his presence left the Republicans one short of a majority (16) of the full Legislature at that time no Senator was chosen. Governor Watson, who was succeeded by Governor Tunnell in 1897, leaves a widow who was Miss Harriett Poole, of Philadelphia, and a son, William T. Watson, Jr.

Plans are reported in preparation for a large brick making plant at Marcus Hook. The site, it is reported, will embrace 100 acres and a fine electric power equipment is to be installed.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH NEWARK?

What is the matter with Newark? Apparently enveloped in a benumbing indifference, she sits calmly by, while the neighboring towns go hurrying on, in an attempt to adjust themselves to the national crisis. War with Germany has been declared, and Newark's new modern armory stands, quiet and deserted, through seven days and six nights of each week. With a call for an enlistment, and a population including more young men than are to be found in any town of equal size in the State, FOUR have presented themselves at the armory as candidates for the physical examination preparatory to enlistment. In response to the call from Governor Townsend, published in local papers, for the formation of a Home Guard, made up of men between 45 and 55, who are subject to call only when their homes are in danger, there has been practically no action. During the last week two evenings have been named, and men urged to report to the armory to discuss the question. On the first evening J. P. Armstrong and L. K. Bowen reported; on the second evening J. P. Armstrong and J. A. McKelvey.

Again we ask, what is the matter? Is Newark suffering from the picture which a writer in a recent issue of Collier's magazine describes: that of one lone gray-haired farmer with a drum, a bloody rag around his head, his son with a rifle, his grandson with a drum, chasing single-handed the British army from our continent? Are we living under the delusion that our future is bound to be a succession of "star-spangled victories"? Too many of us have failed to recognize that war with any country is war, but that war with Germany is W-A-R—a battle of science, brain, skill, and efficiency which extends to the most commonplace duty of life.

Dover town Council has formed an Emergency Committee; they have taken an agricultural census of the county and are planning to get all idle land under cultivation. Seaford, Laurel, and Delaware City, towns without armories, have asked special permission to use other buildings as substitutes and organize home guards. Middletown has formed a Red Cross Chapter; Elkton is swelling the National Guard with re-enlistments.

All the neighboring states are likewise at work. The strongest organization of Home Guard to date is in Connecticut. In the college town of New Haven the Home Guard recently organized includes practically all of the college professors. Hon. W. H. Taft, ex-president of the United States, has joined the company, pledging himself to report to the armory for drill three nights a week. According to the ruling of the War Department all Home Guard, which correspond to the Organized Militia previous to the law of last June, will be discharged immediately upon the declaration of peace.

Are we not a part of America, and shall we not share in these things?

GOVERNOR CALLS STATE-WIDE CONFERENCE

Governor Townsend has today issued a public invitation to the citizens of Delaware to attend a conference to be held at the State House, on Friday morning, April 20th, at 10.30, to consider methods of increasing Delaware's food production, and general preparedness measures. Special invitation has been extended to members of the Agricultural Department of the State College, the State Board of Agriculture, State Grange, meat packers, railroad representatives, cold storage men, the State Commissioner of Education, the County Superintendents, ex-governors Miller, Pennewill, and Hunn, representatives of the DuPont and steel companies, representative farmers, the county agents, Bankers Association, Adjutant General Wickersham, the General Service Board, the Consumers' League, Live Stock Sanitary Board, and Labor organizations.

Superintendent Johns and General Latrobe, of the Pennsylvania railroad, both of whom will be present, announced today that a special train will be run from Wilmington at nine-thirty.

Now many representatives will Newark send?

WAR AND LOVE VIE FOR HONORS

Thrilling Photo Play At The Opera House

Gretchen Hartman and Alan Hale are two featured players who hate each other. That is, they hate each other in the new moving picture they have made for William Fox, "The Love Thief." Miss Hartman portrays a Mexican senorita, and Mr. Hale is an American army officer; and if there are any two persons who hate each other, they are Mexican ladies and American military men.

At the beginning of the story, the senorita, Juanita, is in love with gallant Captain Arthur Boyce. He does not love her, but she contrives to make his fiancée, Clare Nelson (Frances Burnham), think that he does. The result is that Clare breaks off her engagement.

When Juanita finds that she cannot make Boyce love her, her passion turns to hatred, and, in a fit of rage, she arranges a scheme by which the officer is accused of having murdered a woman. In the trial that follows, Boyce is convicted.

Meanwhile, a band of Mexicans led by Juanita and Costa (Edwin Cecil), a Mexican who is in love with Clare, raids an American town near the border. In the place are Clare and her uncle, Nelson (Willard Louis), who has been secretly furnishing the greasers with munitions. Costa takes Clare prisoner.

Juanita finds the girl with her uncle and Costa in a rude shack. She sees her way to get revenge on Clare; she will force her to marry Lopez (Charles Edhler), one of the bandits in her employ. While she is thinking over this plan, Arthur Boyce is brought into the hut.

Boyce had been exonerated of his crime when the real murderer, stirred by pangs of conscience, confessed. Resuming his command, he had rushed to the rescue of the captured party, only to be defeated by the greasers and taken prisoner himself.

Clare and Boyce are left with Lopez in the shack. By a skillful piece of maneuvering, the girl succeeds in outwitting their guard, and she and Boyce escape from the building.

DELAWARE ALUMNUS RETURNS FROM CHINA

One hot summer night when the Ku Hsien Sen (Ku, Cooper; Hsien Sen, Mr.) was alone, Mrs. Cooper having gone to Kuling, I went around to see him.

He talked to me about the kind of home people live in in America. How each family has its own house and how the windows give light and air to each room and look out upon a street or yard. I am a clerk in the postoffice and have been promoted again and again until now I am almost the head Chinese clerk. My salary is good. In a country where five dollars a month is a good average salary for a clerk, I get thirty dollars a month. My wife and I with two children live in three rooms in a Chinese house. There are eighteen more people, three families, in the same house, and we all use the same reception room. It is difficult for me to have my friends in to see me. If they come often my neighbors complain, and then according to the Chinese custom when a male guest comes the women of the family all have to disappear.

When the Ku Hsien told me how people live in America I thought I would like to have such a house and have it cozy and private with my wife and children. The only windows in our house look out into a courtyard in the center of the building and all the rooms are dark and badly ventilated. The courtyard is small and we haven't so much as a square-foot of ground in which to plant vegetables or flowers. Our children play on our uncarpeted floors or in the dark, damp courtyard. Sometimes they go outside the door into the narrow, crowded street where coolies carrying heavy loads suspended from a carrying-pole and richshaws are a danger to them.

Truly I am thankful that I am a Christian and believe in a good God who sends His guardian angels to care for the little children. One of my neighbors does not believe in God, but in spirits who want to harm his children and snatch away their life, and to deceive these spirits he calls his first child Ko, "dog," and the second by the classic literary term for dog, we might say, Chuen, "canine."

One day Ku Hsien Sen talked to me about forming a club for young men who had been educated in mission schools in China or in foreign countries, the Chinese young men of ideals and aspirations. He said we would try to have some cheerful rooms with pictures and curtains, chairs and tables, and that he would write to Miss Wood at Wuchang and ask for a Boone University loan library, and that we could have games and newspapers, and that the club would be open every night.

The idea seemed to me a splendid one, although I am often busy in the evenings. Some evenings I give our postmaster, who is a foreigner, lessons in Chinese, and oftentimes my work keeps me. But when I can be free, just such a club as Ku Hsien Sen proposed would suit me. And when he said we would organize with a few members and asked me to be the secretary, although I was busy, I was glad to do it. I typed the rules of the club and the notices and made out a list of the books that came from Boone and acted as librarian. I often drop in at the club about five o'clock to see the newspapers, and in spite of my busy evenings I come each Thursday night—which we call club night—when we are sure to meet all the other members.

I once studied in Huntington School and spent two years in Japan but I never cared for books, and yet you would be surprised to see what good drawings I can make. Just now I am drawing plans for the new Bank of China building which is to be built on the South Gate Street.

My father is very rich and was formerly the president of the Ichang Chamber of Commerce, but in spite of having all this money we live back of a rice shop that belongs to my father and have no floors in our house. My father has "lots of pull" and some time ago he got me a city contract for $1500 which cost me a few hundred to do. This contract was in connection with the new streets that are being laid out in that section of Ichang where the graves had been removed. About this time Ku Hsien Sen of the American Church Mission used to come to see my father and asked him to help him buy a tract of the old grave land. Father was willing to do this for he had often been to Huntington

School at truck meets and on sports day. I think Ku Hsien Sen saw that I loved my baby son. Anyhow he was always kind to me and spoke pleasantly to me, and one day when Wang Teh Hsien of the post office asked me around to the club which he was starting, I was glad to go. It certainly was a new idea to me. I had always gone to restaurants and tea houses where there is so much noise and dirt, and then the coarse jests and gambling and singing-girls disgusted me. I found a clean, attractive room with posters and pictures on the whitewashed walls. One table was filled with newspapers, and I must say I enjoyed the picture supplements—they gave you more news than the newspaper itself. There were two other tables where we played games, and Ku Hsien Sen was teaching Tu Wen Chin of the railroad to play foreign chess. I am very fond of Chinese chess and right away I was interested and wanted to learn the foreign game.

There was a bookcase with about fifty volumes of English books. I am very sorry I have never learned that language. Almost all my friends speak English but when I was at school I simply could not apply myself. But then there were at the club fifty volumes of Chinese books with the most fascinating titles. I suppose many of them were translated from foreign languages, for I never heard of such Chinese books before. I did enjoy that evening and when Wang Teh Hsien the day after asked me if I would like to become a member of the club, I said I should, and asked him to see my friend Tin Fu San, for I knew he would like to join too.

So I and several of my friends joined the club and liked it very much. We like the teachers in Huntington School and Wang Teh Hsien, although they belong to foreign religion. And the Rev. Lin Yu Lin we like too. He never uses bad language nor tells coarse jokes, but is always cheerful and helpful.

COLORED PEOPLE EX- TEND SCHOOL TERM

maker of garments, but I feel certain it is just what every teacher is. He is worth while only as he fits the child for life. Indeed that is the whole of education—to adapt the experience of school to meet life. I can say in all sincerity that your race has been the means of introducing perhaps the biggest idea in modern education. And I am not alone in this opinion, for I found it only today in an article written by Professor Moore of Harvard. I refer to the education which we now call vocational education—the development of the skill that is in the hand, the development of the whole man through the senses. And it all came about with the advent of a young man, Samuel Chapman Armstrong, the son of a missionary who had spent his life in Hawaii. Young Armstrong came to America with a letter to Robert Ogden, and he was soon placed in an American College under the great teacher, Mark Hopkins. Upon graduation in 1862 he entered the army as captain, and a year later raised a regiment of colored volunteers who served through the Civil War.

"Following the war he did not desert his men. Instead he said 'I believe I can take the element of work and with that as an instrument I can form a great race.' He gathered about him all the money he could at Hampton, Virginia, and what did he do there? He started to teach the pupils in his school everything that makes good habits. If you want to form the habit, you act, you do the thing over and over again. He put his boys to making benches, shoes, saddles, to building brick walls, with such a marked degree of success that all the world has stopped to see how he has done it. Recently one board of directors has set aside $25,000 to send men to study this school and tell all the world about it.

"I cannot close," Dr. Mitchell said, "without telling you a story about a young man working in the Carolina mines. As he was picking away by the light of the miner's lantern on his cap, he heard two men in the next corridor talking of this school at Hampton. The young fellow didn't know how far Hampton was, but he blew out the light in the lantern and said, 'I'm going to that school.' The speaker related how Booker T. Washington walked all the way to Hampton, and by his persistency earned his way through the school. "Several years ago," Dr. Mitchell said, "I was down at Tuskegee, and stopped to speak to an old colored man, sitting aside, hammering away on a piece of tin, which he was fashioning into a wash boiler. I didn't, at first, take him for any one of special importance, but learned after a moment's conversation that he had years ago written the letter to General Armstrong at Hampton asking him to send a bright young man down there to build a school for them. And he sent Booker T. Washington who took a lot of old land, utterly worn out, nothing but rocks, and developed it, until now it supports great flocks of sheep, horses; it has libraries, reading rooms, a great church, and its influence has spread all over the world."

Dr. Mitchell spoke of an educational meeting which he attended during the Easter holidays in the South—a conference of the supervising teachers of the colored schools, which represented 135 counties. Miss Charlotte Slove, supervising principal of the colored schools of Cecil County, Maryland, presided at Sunday's meeting.

Dr. Wagner spoke of the rights of the child—his right to be well-born, well nourished, and well nurtured. He urged parents to start each child out with the habit of doing as well as it is possible for him to do whatever he attempts; to teach him to always crave the knowledge that he has done his best. "First of all," he said, "you must live up to the best in yourselves, before you have any right as a citizen to demand of your children that they do their best."

Superintendent Cross emphasized the fact that good teachers make good schools, and congratulated the Newark district upon their good judgment in continuing their teachers. He explained the new law which places the minimum salary for an experienced teacher at $50.00 per month, and explained that during next year, before the new state appropriation goes into effect, this condition may cause some schools to consider the employment of inexperienced teachers. "Don't do this," Dr. Cross said. "You will find it poor economy and lose out in the end."

Prizes of $2.50 and $2.00 offered by the board to captains reporting the largest collections were awarded to Miss C. Waddleton, and C. Wilson.

FIGHT THE FLY MENACEPrepare To Keep Away Disease

"As a practical measure of Preparedness, the dangerous house fly must be eliminated," The Merchant's Association of New York has declared. And they back up their statement with the first move in the campaign—the widespread distribution of a special bulletin which wages war on the fly. "American military records show that the fly causes more deaths than the enemy." Here is something everyone may do for the general welfare and the public good.

Kill Flies And Save Lives

Kill at once every fly you can find and burn his body.

Observers say that there are many reasons to believe there will be more flies this season than for a number of years.

The killing of just one fly NOW means there will be billions and trillions less next summer.

Clean up your own premises; see and insist that your neighbors do likewise.

Especially clean "out-of-the-way-places," and every nook and cranny.

Flies will not go where there is nothing to eat, and their principal diet is too filthy to mention.

The Fly Is The Tie That Binds

The Unhealthy To The Healthy!

The fly has no equal as a germ "carrier"; as many as five hundred million germs have been found in and on the body of a single fly.

It is definitely known that the fly is the "carrier" of the germs of typhoid fever; it is widely believed that it is also the "carrier" of other diseases, including possibly infantile paralysis.

The very presence of a fly is a signal and notification that a housekeeper is uncleanly and inefficient.

Do not wait until the insects begin to pester; anticipate the annoyance.

April, May and June are the best months to conduct an anti-fly campaign.

The farming and suburban districts provide ideal breeding places, and the new born flies do not remain at their birth place but migrate, using railroads and other means of transportation, to towns and cities.

Kill flies and save lives!

Edward Hatch, Jr.,

Chairman.

The United States Government makes the following suggestion for the destruction of house flies: Formaldehyde and sodium salicylate are the two best fly poisons. Both are superior to arsenic. They have their advantages for household use. They are not a poison to children; they are convenient to handle, their dilutions are simple and they attract the flies.

Preparation Of Solutions

A formaldehyde solution of approximately the correct strength may be made by adding 3 teaspoonfuls of the concentrated formaldehyde solution, commercially known as formalin, to a pint of water. Similarly, the proper concentration of sodium salicylate may be obtained by dissolving 3 teaspoonfuls of the pure chemical (a powder) to a pint of water.

A container made of an ordinary, thin-walled drinking glass is filled or partially filled with the solution. A saucer, or small plate, in which is placed a piece of WHITE blotting paper cut the size of the dish, is put bottom up over the glass. The whole is then quickly inverted, a match placed under the edge of the glass, and the container is ready for use. As the solution dries out of the saucer the liquid seal at the edge of the glass is broken and more liquid flows into the lower receptacle. Thus the paper is always kept moist.

Other Simple Preventives

Any odor pleasing to man is offensive to the fly and vice versa.

Style in Eyeglasses is now a matter of much importance in considering your personal appearance. Good-looking FITS-U Eye-glasses cost no more than the ordinary kinds.

Take five cents' worth of oil of lavender, mix it with the same quantity of water, put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the rooms where flies are. In the dining room spray it lavishly even on the table linen. The odor is very disagreeable to flies but refreshing to most people.

Geranium, mignonette, heliotrope and white clover are offensive to flies. They especially dislike the odor of honeysuckle and hop blossoms.

According to a French scientist flies have intense hatred for the color blue. Rooms decorated in blue will help to keep out the flies. Mix together one tablespoonful of cream, one of ground black pepper and one of brown sugar. The mixture is poisonous to flies. Put in a saucer, darken the room except one window and in that is the saucer.

To clear the house of flies, burn pyrethrum powder. This stupefies the flies, but they must be SWEEPED up and BURNED.
