McDONALD's Corporation gave Natalie Johnson more than a break — they awarded the Newark resident $10,000.

Johnson is the manager at the Dukart family's Mickey D's restaurant on South College Avenue. It's the only place she's worked since beginning there part-time 23 years ago as a senior in high school.

The Newark resident worked her way up to crew chief, shift manager and eventually general manager of the busy golden arches outlet that is

Casho Mill Rd. work is around the clock

Digging for pedestrian tunnel at CSX rail line is finally getting underway

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Officials at the Delaware Department of Transportation said the work leading up to insertion of a tunnel for pedestrians on Casho Mill Road at the CSX Railroad will be "pretty much around the clock" for the next week.

"They are starting the digging tonight," said DelDOT spokesperson Mike Williams on Monday. "It won't cause any traffic problems and it won't be noisy." (See photo on Page 2).

Williams said the "earliest" the long-awaited concrete pre-fab tunnel will be inserted under the railroad tracks is Feb. 7. "It will be pretty much day-to-day on the progress," Williams said.

According to Williams, DelDOT contractors still plan to a precast section of tunnel for pedestrians.

The project has been in the works since 1996 when the former Western Newark Traffic Relief Committee targeted it as the first in a long list of transportation needs in the area.

"The whole job, including site cleanup, is expected to take until April," Williams said this week.

A Value Engineering Evaluation process, although it delayed the $1.28 million project for about six months, will result in $100,000 in savings by using a steelplate liner for the tunnel instead of a concrete prefab pipe.

In October 1996, officials from the Delaware Department of Transportation said such a project could cost over $900,000, the bulk of which would be for stopping rail traffic on the CSX line while the tunnel was built.

The boring procedure to be used will allow a tunnel to be built without stopping rail or vehicle traffic.

Despite complaints from nearby residents about earlier debris from the site, Williams did not expect the night work to be a problem. He said workers have notified all nearby residents located just off I-95.

I know it's busy - I'm there two or three times each day filling up on Diet Cokes rather than the usual newspaper biz staple - black coffee. The restaurant is just around the corner from our office and I've gotten to know Natalie through these work breaks.

Last summer, Johnson entered a nationwide contest to boast upsizing ("supersizing" in Ronald McDonald lingo) at her store during the Monopoly game promotion. She learned recently she was the winner of the cash. She deserves this lucky break.

Will she take a European vacation with her winnings? Get a new car? Nope, she tells me it's going to home repairs.

Downtown getting 7-11 on Delaware Avenue

Longtime service station owner retires and sells property to 7-11

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Students and other residents at the east end of Delaware Avenue will soon have a new convenience store for their shopping. A 7-11 is opening at the corner of South Chapel Street and East Delaware Avenue in the next few months.

"We're planning to be open by mid-March," said Alan Henry of 7-11 Stores. "But that could change, depending on the winter weather."

The store, which will include pumps for Citgo Gas service, replaces a Gulf Service Station. Former proprietors Robert and Alma Hessey of Newark, who retired and sold the site, had operated a service station at the downtown corner for almost 20 years.

According to information provided to the city of Newark's

Board of Adjustment, the 2,000 square-foot building will be smaller than most 7-11s which average 3,000 square feet. The company sought a variance from the city for parking and landscaping in July 2001.

The Board agreed to reduce the requirements for parking from 30 spaces to 23 on the approximately 19,200 square-foot lot. In addition, the Board found that shade trees, a row of white pines and junipers, and other landscaping proposed by 7-11 would satisfy the city's requirements.

"Two shade trees are acceptable in light of the traffic congestion and need for good visibility for automobile traffic entering and exiting the parking lot," stated the Board in their findings. In addition, a six-foot high evergreen screen of white pines and junipers between the site and adjacent properties, and an irregularly-shaped area of landscaping were found to "comply with the spirit" of the city's code.

The city's zoning code allows the retail use for this site, but some nearby residents told the Board of Adjustment they were concerned about the additional traffic from a convenience store there.

According to information provided for the hearing, depending on the volume of traffic in the future, a signalized crosswalk may have to be installed across South Chapel Street at Delaware Avenue. "We (also) may have to restrict the exit on South Chapel Street to right turn only in the future - the city's Traffic Committee may review (the conditions) after the conversion (is complete)," Newark Police Chief Gerald Conway said in an August 2001 memo.

Future of programs at YWCA still undecided

YWCA board reviewing proposals, including one from Jewish Federation

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

As promised by John Elzufon, president of the Jewish Federation of Delaware, that group has put in a bid to purchase the YWCA on South College Avenue in Newark.

"We made a proposal to purchase the building on Jan. 17 and are in the process of negotiating," said Elzufon on Jan. 22.

At Newark's city council meeting on Jan. 14, Elzufon stated that although the Jewish Community Center had voted against running operations at the site "on their own," the Jewish Federation would consider "backing up" the JCC and still pursuing the purchase.

Elzufon said he could not comment on what the back-up would entail, nor the exact nature of the negotiations with the Y as of last week.

He also could not guess how long the process would go on. "I can say, that every time we have made a proposal, the Y has gotten back to us, and every time they have responded, we have gotten back to them. It's moving constantly."

Judy Wartman, executive vice president of the Federation, said the matter was in the hands of the Y. "We're prepared to take over the programs in existence there immediately, if needed," said Wartman on Jan. 22. "We're very willing, and excited to be able to serve the community."

Neither Elzufon nor Wartman knew if any other parties had made offers. "They have not said there are any other buyers, and they have not said there are not," said Elzufon. "Frankly, we have not asked."

According to Y officials, more than one offer was made but no other information is available at this time.

"All I can say is that some offers have been put forth and we are considering them," said Ruth Sokolowski, executive director for the YWCA. "We know that the community is eager to know what will happen there, and we're trying to move forward as quickly as possible."

According to Sokolowski, the YWCA board was scheduled to meet to discuss the sale on Jan. 22. However, the board's only action on the sale that night was formation of a committee to study the proposals.

YWCA spokesperson Nancy Bahr confirmed that the Y's fitness programs will end on Feb. 23. "The before-and-after-school care, which will end in June, will continue at that location until we know more about the future of the building," Bahr said.

Other individuals have also expressed interest in the site but have not stated whether they have made offers to purchase.

Former New Castle County candidate and Newark resident Michael Ramone told Newark's city council on Jan. 14 that he was interested in acquiring the Y property as a place to relocate his Delaware Swim and Fitness Centers now based in New Castle.

On the same night, developer Jeffrey Lang said he was interested in the site and had toured it for an unspecified possible proposal.

Osborne seeking third term

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Fairfield resident Frank Osborne will seek a third term in District Five on Newark's city council in April.

Osborne said there are a number of local issues he wants to pursue if he is re-elected.

"One of my platform objectives in 1998 was to secure a guaranteed water supply for the city," said Osborne. "I want to see construction of the reservoir through, since I started out with that."

While Osborne noted that "the bulk of the decisions have been made" regarding the water storage facility, the city still needs to sell bonds and monitor construction overruns to see that they do not become "onerous."

This year the city also will have help in keeping electric utility costs down. "I went down to see DEMEC (Delaware Municipal Electric Corporation) start up the new generator near Smyrna in November," Osborne said. "This will really be a benefit to the city. Electric service will be guaranteed during brownouts, and with Delmarva selling out to a large company, we could not be assured of favorable treatment, otherwise. It will help stabilize the cost to our electric customers. It's a big asset."

Eight municipalities in Delaware, including Newark, have contributed funds to build the new generator that will only be used by those cities during periods of peak electric use.

POLICE REPORTS

Old farmhouse vandalized

Newark Police arrested Brian W. Methven, 21, and Todd M. Howaniel, 24, both of Pinebrook Apartments in Newark, after they were found shooting paintballs around 2:35 a.m. on Jan. 20 at the farmhouse on the city of Newark reservoir site off Old Paper Mill Road. Police went to the location after a complaint from a neighbor and "walked up the hill and found the suspects" in action.

Police reported the front door of the home had been kicked in and the walls inside were also damaged with paintballs. Because the damage was over $1,500, Methven and Howaniel each were charged with three felonies of burglary, criminal mischief and conspiracy.

Man hit with beer bottle on Prospect Ave.

Newark Police report two 21-year-old men from Wilmington were assaulted on Prospect Avenue around 1:20 a.m. on Jan. 13, the victims were fighting with two unknown white suspects and two unknown black suspects when they were punched and one victim was struck with a beer bottle, suffering a cut on his right eye.

The victims, who were on their way home from a nearby party, told police there was a verbal altercation, and "then everybody started punching and kicking." Police are investigating.

Construction worker charged with sending child pornography

Delaware State Police James M. Bannister, 58, to Delaware on Jan. 25 from Huntington, W. Va., to face charges of transmitting child pornography over the Internet.

Bannister worked on a construction project on River Road near Delaware City back in October 1999 and co-workers found files of child pornography on a computer that Bannister had been using. State Police also found evidence that Bannister was allegedly was passing himself off as a 15-year-old boy and transmitting lewd material electronically through the Internet to a 12-year-old girl in West Virginia.

It is believed that Bannister was acquainted with the young girl. Bannister was taken into custody by police in West Virginia back in December 1999.

Bannister was indicted in New Castle County for unlawfully using a computer to depict children engaging in a prohibited act, possession of child pornography and sexual solicitation of a child. He was committed to the Department of Correction in default of bail.

Students arrested for bomb threats

State Police detectives arrested two additional suspects in the ongoing investigation of bomb threats at Christiana High School on Jan. 4.

Anthony Nardo, 18, of Bear, and a 17-year-old male, both students at Christiana High School, were arrested on Jan. 23 and charged with terroristic threatening.

Both students were in the company of Michael J. Albanese, 21, of Bear, and a 16-year-old female from Newark, when they contacted the school via telephone around 11:40 a.m. on Jan. 4 and made statements that a "bomb would go off" in the school. Police previously charged Albanese and the 16-year-old female with terroristic threatening and conspiracy. Detectives also arrested a 17-year-old female from Newark who called Christiana High School on Nov. 27, 2001, around 9 a.m. and again on Jan. 7, around 10:10 a.m., and informed school personnel that "there's a bomb in the building." The Christiana High School student was also charged with terroristic threatening and conspiracy.

Both investigations are continuing.

Tractor-trailer overturns on 896 ramp

Delaware State Police are investigating a traffic crash involving an overturned tractor-trailer on Jan. 26 at approximately 11:50 p.m. on the I-95 northbound on-ramp from Route 896. As Charles Lane, 29, of Sherman Mills, Maine, entered the ramp his load of dry goods shifted.

The truck and its trailer overturned and landed in the gorge area between the on-ramp and the interstate. It took about three hours to upright the truck. The road remained open while workers cleared the wreckage from the area. Lane, who suffered lacerations to his head and hand but refused medical treatment, was cited for careless driving.

Christina school bus crash in Christiana

New Castle County Police are investigating a Jan. 23 school bus accident that left the driver hospitalized with paralysis to his left side. Around 7:21 a.m., police responded to the area of Brown's Lane and Neurys Lane for a report of a school bus accident with injuries.

The investigation revealed the bus had just turned from Route 7 onto Brown's Lane in Christiana.

Brown's Lane is a very narrow roadway barely wide enough to accommodate two regular sized vehicles passing each other. Police learned the bus driver pulled the vehicle to the far tight side of the lane as another vehicle approached from the opposite direction. The bus struck a tree branch that penetrated the windshield temporarily pinning the driver to the seat.

The Christina School District bus was occupied with eight students from the Christiana High School. A 15-year-old male student was taken to Christiana Hospital with minor cuts and bruises. The collision remains under investigation. No charges have been filed as of the time of this release.

State Trooper crashes on Route 1

Delaware State Police are investigating a traffic crash involving a trooper along Route 1 on Jan. 26 at approximately 1:53 a.m. Lieutenant Robert Schleifer, 42, who is assigned to Troop 1, Penny Hill, was driving an unmarked 1997 Chevrolet Blazer south on Route 1 near Route 72 when the vehicle left the roadway.

The cruiser crossed the grass median and entered the northbound lanes before striking a guardrail. The vehicle overturned after striking the guardrail an additional time. Schleifer, a 16-year veteran with the Division, was taken to Christiana Hospital where he was listed in critical condition with severe trauma to his left hand. The northbound lanes of Route 1 were closed for approximately an hour until the wreckage could be cleared from the scene.

Guns, ammunition, drugs found in home

When officers went to the Fairwinds Trailer Park to execute an arrest warrant, they detected the odor of marijuana emanating from inside Williams' trailer.

Detectives also found 31 marijuana plants growing inside the trailer. Williams was charged with manufacturing/cultivating marijuana, maintaining a dwelling for keeping controlled substances, possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

At approximately 3:40 a.m. on Jan. 19, a Newark Police officer observed two defendants enter the cemetery at New Street by climbing the security wall from the area of the CSX railroad tracks. Colin Cromer, 22, of Newark and Richard Lapsley, 23, of Syosset, N.Y., were charged with trespassing.

Railroad behind the Newark Cemetery at New Street. The pair were seen by Newark Police as Malone attempted to jump the security wall.

On Jan. 20 around 1:40 p.m., Newark Police arrested Amy Matterer, 20, and Leah Heise, 22, both of Newark, and charged them with trespassing after they were observed trespassing on CSX property behind the cemetery security wall at New Street.

Police report an unknown suspect damaged security wall behind the Newark Cemetery on New Street on Jan. 15 between 1:15 and 3:15 p.m. The hole was approximately four feet wide by eight inches high.

Anyone with information about the damage incidents is asked to call police at 366-7111.

Breaking out new selves

By KATY CIAMARICONE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

On a snow-filled afternoon in mid-January, inside a dimly-lit, humid gymnasium, men and women methodically moved their bodies back and forth and from side to side, as if they were dancing.

A woman took hold of her partner's wrist with one hand, grabbed his elbow with her other hand, and proceeded to flip him over. He landed flat on his back.

Through this practice of aikido, a martial art performed through a series of non-resistant movements, the 50 or so participants were not only celebrating their physical growth this particular day. They were also representing the country from which the practice stemmed, by saying goodbye to the old year and welcoming the new one.

"Aikido is just like life," explained Rev. Zenko N. Okimura, chief instructor of the Aikikai Foundation of Delaware. "Life is not already choreographed. You have to practice to perfect it."

The Aikikai Foundation of Delaware, a federal non-profit group, moved to the Delaware Industrial Park in 1993 and since has grown to include 150 members.

They, along with locals from other nearby martial arts organizations, celebrated "Kagami Baraki," or the Japanese New Year, together Sunday, January 20 at the AFOD center in the Delaware Industrial Park.

Also called the "breaking out of one's new self," the Kagami Biraki celebration included a formal rice pounding ceremony, the packed rice symbolizing people's joining together.

Participants made Cha-no-yu, or tea, a ritual which in Japan is sacred tradition. "In Japan, people study for years to perfect making tea," said aikido student Jonathan Dubois. They learned origami, folding paper to form intricate designs, and how to do Japanese calligraphy.

At the center of the celebration stood a mirror which Dubois explained was unveiled to reveal the "new self" of all who believe.

Other local events at which Aikikai members perform include a week-long Japanese culture and aikido summer camp for children, Japanese cooking classes, meditation classes and a Japanese film series. Foundation officials hope to begin plans for a Japanese cultural center in Newark or the surrounding area.

Alcohol Commission has ideas for new city regulations

Members of Newark's Alcohol Commission agreed at their most recent meeting to recommend some new regulations they hope will curb alcohol-related negative behavior in local neighborhoods.

Commission members have until April to develop a comprehensive policy to upgrade Newark's drinking scene. They have been meeting since December to identify the most pressing alcohol-related issues and discuss which solutions will be the most effective.

Members agree that some of the problems are in residential areas where University of Delaware students and other young adults throw house parties, at which alcohol fuels noise, fights, vandalism and other disruptive behavior.

At a recent city council meeting, District 6 councilmember Christine Rewa complained about increased rowdiness in and around her district.

Rewa, a resident of Prospect Avenue in downtown Newark, said negative behavior likely fueled by alcohol was "wreaking havoc" in her neighborhood during the winter session at the University of Delaware when many students do not take a course.

"January is turning into a scary month if you live in neighborhoods with renters," said Rewa on Jan. 14. "Kids are getting beat up, windows are broken, there are car break-ins — day after day, hour after hour — neighbors are coming over to complain and calling me at 2 in the morning."

Rewa said she wants to target landlords who rent to irresponsible tenants and never seem to check on the conditions at their properties. "I want to wage war on absentee landlords," Rewa said. "I'm tired of them never even coming to mow the lawn, I'm tired of kids who think they only have to pay rent and they can do whatever they want — other students are so upset they're calling the police, too."

At their meeting, the Alcohol Commission tentatively agreed to propose that city council members approve items targeting alcohol consumption at parties.

Suggestions, subject to revision, included:

- Anyone who wishes to buy a keg of beer must fill out a registration form with his or her name, address and the address of where he or she intends to take the keg.

- Keg buyers would have to deposit money, which would be refunded upon the keg's return only if local police were not called to the scene for misconduct. This would hold the keg buyer liable for any problems that occur while the keg was used. Under the current law, no such registration or deposit are required.

- A University of Delaware student with outstanding fines to the city could not receive his or her diploma without paying those fines.

- City residents must obtain a "special event" permit from the city if they plan to host a private party of between 100 and 250 people. Anyone hosting a party of more than 250 people also would have to obtain $300,000 worth of liability insurance. Commission members proposed that the cost of special event permits be $1 per person attending the party, which would be refunded if police were not called during or as a result of the event.

- Every rental lease in Newark has to include detailed information outlining local alcohol-related restrictions and penalties.

- Local authorities have to notify landlords and other residential property owners of an alcohol-related complaint or offense at their properties.

The next meeting of the Alcohol Commission is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 6 at 9 a.m.

Foundation, Osborne is very interested in controlling alcohol problems in Newark. "We have the dollars in the budget (for possible ordinances), but we're waiting for recommendations from the Mayor's Alcohol Commission before proceeding," Osborne said.

Osborne said there have been numerous positive changes in the city during the four years he has been a councilmember. "The old Budd plant has been demolished and replaced with the University Courtyard Apartments," he said. "The city has also seen the old NVF plant renovated and replaced with the construction of Timothy's Restaurant, an office complex and apartments. New buildings and renovations have revitalized the downtown area."

Osborne also noted that the University of Delaware is putting up a new hotel along Route 896 in his district. "I think that will be a good thing for the city," he said. "And I haven't had any complaints from local residents about it, either."

Osborne said that, in an effort to bring and keep more businesses downtown, the city was consolidating and improving parking lots. "(They've also) improved the signage to make the lots more accessible," he said.

Traffic is still on Osborne's to-do list, as well. "Some progress is being made with truck traffic," said Osborne. "WILMAPCO (Wilmington Area to reroute truck traffic entering Delaware. Talks have been going on for about six months. We're also looking into putting scales on Route 896 - we're working with DelDOT and city staff on that one."

Elected Deputy Mayor in April 2001, Osborne also serves as a lobbyist for the city in the General Assembly. "I've been going down to Dover for several years, now," Osborne said. "I don't go all the time (the Assembly is in session) - only when something pertaining to the city is on the agenda."

Osborne said he keeps informed of activities in the state legislature through the Internet. "Rick Armitage (a lobbyist in Dover for the University of Delaware) also keeps me posted," Osborne said.

A veteran of the Korean War, Osborne was involved in having a flag honoring those veterans erected in councilchambers. Now retired and a full-time city councilmember, he previously taught high school students for almost 40 years. During his 29 years at Newark High School, Osborne taught U.S. history, government, economics and criminal justice. He also served a chairman of the social studies department.

He was city councilmember for District One from 1968 to 1972 and has served on the city's Conservation Advisory Commission and Reapportionment committees.

Lost sleep not the worst problem

Picture this. They are digging a giant hole in your backyard while you sleep. There are lights. There are pieces of equipment. There are workers exchanging information on the job-site. But, none of this activity causes any noise. Promise.

And the traffic flow past your front door never falters all during the night. Well, there's a relief.

According to officials at DelDOT, this is the scenario for residents along Casho Mill Road for at least the next week.

We sincerely hope it will work this way, because it means the promised pedestrian tunnel under the railroad line over that road is well on the way to being a reality instead of a words on paper.

In watching this story, however, we have been continuously reminded of another problem involving writing – graffiti.

Most of the year, the railroad overpass at Casho Mill Road, as well as the ones at Washington Lane and Capitol Trail, and the bridge along Route 72/Library Avenue have been a wonder to behold.

As in, wonder when CSX is going to get around to repainting them?

We understand from various police agencies that the graffiti has to remain in situ for some time until it is photographed and documented for investigation purposes.

But, some of these scrawls last months.

The city of Newark has an ordinance in place requiring businesses to cover graffiti on their property within 10 days. Maybe that's not enough time for a national railway company.

We know the railroads have their own police force working on this effort. How about Newark officials, our state and national legislators, and even members of the general public putting more pressure on CSX to cover up these eyesores on a more timely basis?

OUT OF THE ATTIC

The house on the left in the picture is 303 West Main Street. The deed to that property indicates that the residence was once the manse for the Head of Christiana and Glasgow Presbyterian churches. This photo is from a previous edition of the Newark Post.

Readers who have an old photo from the Newark area are invited to loan it for reprinting in this space. Special care will be taken. For information, call the Newark Post, weekdays, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 737-0724.

More railcars coming

Conrail representatives told Newark officials this week that they will definitely increase rail traffic on the CSX rail line through the city when their expected merger goes through

Mr. Matthew and the First 100 Years

By MARVIN HUMMEL

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

Mr. Matthew's 80-year-old daughter welcomed me and took me into the living room where Mr. Matthew was awaiting me in his recliner chair. He apologized for not getting up, but I told him his beautiful hand-carved cane excused him from that amenity.

That pleased Mr. Mathew: his brain was telling him to get up but his body threatened rebellion if he did.

He told me he had worked for the railroad beginning in 1900, after he came back from "The War." (His 60-year-old granddaughter proudly brought in his medals and discharge papers.) I asked Mr. Matthew if he had ever met General Roosevelt, and he told me, "Not to talk to, but I saw him from a distance. Nice man. He waved at us and said we were good soldiers. It made us proud. Then I voted for him for president. Nice man."

Then Mr. Matthew's head fell back on the lounge, eyes closed; he was breathing, but he was gone. His 80-year-old daughter assured me he was just napping, and if I could wait 15 minutes we could resume the interview.

When Mr. Matthew rejoined us, he wanted to talk about World War I. He had missed it, but he had worked on our troop trains. "We took the young men to New York, and after we helped them off, we turned right around and helped the wounded young men get on. It was so sad. You wondered which of the boys you just said goodbye to wouldn't be coming back..." He fell asleep again. I waited.

He began to cry and say in his sleep over and over again how bad it was about the nice young men, that even if they did come back, they'd "never be the same." He moaned a collage of names of battles and generals from the five wars of his lifetime. His daughter got on the phone, and within 10 minutes, three of the cutest little kids you'd ever want to see were bursting through the front door and heading for Mr. Matthew's lap. One of them turned on the Muppets, and the others woke up their great-great-great grandpop to watch it with him. My interview was, of course, understandably over for the day. He was having too much fun to talk seriously with me.

In all our other interviews, he fell asleep too: sometimes he cried about Vietnam, and when he did, the great-great-great grandchildren were quickly sent for to giggle and Muppet him back to us. And he always came back, not seeming to remember the rice paddies and trip wires and Agent Orange he had shed a thousand tears over just minutes before.

Sometimes in his sleep, he would cry about becoming poor and dependent when he hit "the double O." He had gotten it in his head that all Social Security, army, and railroad pensions ended when you reached age 100 (the "double O" - he loved to call it), which was less than a week away for him. Out of his sleep came the repeated wail, "Then what do I do when the warranty is up on me?"

Another phone call quickly made by his daughter, and Mr. Matthew's great-granddaughter came from the law office where she worked, waving official-looking papers at us.

He wanted her to read to him "right off the papers."

So she read legal-sounding words in an authoritative voice while looking down at the "documents" and then looking up at him. When she assured him that he would be "covered" until he "hit 200," he cackled, "But who will help me after I'm 200? You'll be long dead! Then what'll I do?" He went to sleep again, but he laughed at his joke and repeated it to himself a couple of times. (He was having a good time inside there.)

In the five or six interviews I did for the article on Mr. Matthew, I met five generations of his family, all of whom had a role to play in Mr. Matthew's health and happiness. They played their roles well. His 80-year-old daughter lived in his house and acted as the primary care giver; his 60-year-old daughter was the chauffeur and "go for" as well as the coordinator of the family talent to get him out of one of those sudden sorrows that often haunted his drift-off sleeps.

If, when I walked up to the door, I could hear the silly voices of romping kids, I knew he had once more dreamt of all those "poor, poor boys" and needed the kids' innocent lives jumping and shouting and climbing all over him.

But if, when I walked to the door and a female "judge" inside was telling him in pseudo-language of the courts that all of his pensions had been "adjudicated and forthwith found in order and would furthermore be added to and inculcated and probated and duly reprocessed according to the laws of the land and the state of Delaware," I knew he had dreamt his "warranties" were up.

He was a sweet old man. Once as I was leaving, he said, "Mr. Marvin, I guess you know I worry about my pensions. My daughter probably told you. She shouldn't have. None of her business. But I swear on the Holy Bible, if it would keep those boys from goin' over and gettin' killed, I'd give up my pensions and sleep on the street - What are we goin' to do?"

I turned on Sesame Street and kept repeating, "I don't know, Mr. Matthew," until the first great-great grandchild burst through the door and solved the situation. This time.

President

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the many gifts donated to the 22nd Annual Weichert, Realtors Toy Drive to benefit needy children.

The kindhearted generosity of the public this year helped us brighten the holiday season for many underprivileged children and made this year's toy drive the most successful ever! Thousands of toys were collected at our 2002 offices and distributed to local charities in Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington D.C.

How does the city of Newark determine which ordinances to enforce and which to ignore? The sidewalks are a perfect example. The city has spent thousands of dollars on their sidewalk repair program. When it comes to winter safety the City seems to fall short. Sidewalks are supposed to be clear of snow after 24 hours. And yet a quick drive reveals businesses on Main Street and around the city with unclear sidewalks. Numerous residential sidewalks are left untouched.

Trash collection is another perfect example. The Newark Post had a very nice article recently about a trash collector who was moving into another job and would be missed for his dedication and service. I guess the writer of that article never had a trash collector come to his door and tell him that he couldn't take all of the trash because it exceeded a limit. No, that writer was praising his collector because he would take 11-12 bags at a time. I wonder which trash collector was involved in the unsuccessful curbside recycling program? And while we are on the subject, what about all of those plastic bags sitting in front of the rental homes on Cleveland Avenue?

The city is so proud of their bike lanes but when is the last time you saw them being used for bikes on Delaware Avenue? All too often the path is used for a driver turning lane or temporary parking for delivery trucks.

What does it take to get the ordinances currently on the books enforced? Another ordinance?

Visit Main Street in Newark and look at the current restaurant scene and you will find many of our restaurants with liquor licenses functioning like bars after 9 p.m. Those that opened with the promise of being "family-oriented" have evolved into student drinking holes because selling liquor to students is more profitable than serving food to families. Some owners have been tempted into negligence or worse as certain "restaurants" became known as places where it was easy for underage students to drink and for young people of all ages to binge drink.

The friendly atmosphere of the daytime Main Street is often transformed late at night into a less-than-friendly place when drunken young people crowd the sidewalks headed to the next Happy Hour for cheap drinks.

The cost of such high-risk drinking continues when you move away from Main Street and onto the neighborhood streets. People who both owned and rented here, who raised children here, made friendships here, had roots here, are gone. One-by-one individual decisions were made over decades as the changes in neighborhood became intolerable, as the houses were not maintained and became run down, and more and more of the new residents - the students renters - exhibited anti-social behaviors. Behaviors made worse by alcohol abuse.

Today, so many central neighborhood streets have been taken over by student rentals that there is no longer a large enough family population living within walking distance of Main Street to support the diversity of Main Street businesses. This leaves us with a Main Street that functions less and less as a town center for the greater Newark community.

We can't bring back the past, either in the old neighborhoods or on Main Street.

We can promote efforts to encourage first time homebuyers to move back onto these streets, creating new and stable neigh-

Last but not least, jay walking. How many street corners and crosswalks are there on the streets of Main, South College, and Delaware Avenue? Why is it acceptable for pedestrians to think they can cross wherever and whenever they choose or is convenient for them?

Unless noted, I thought crosswalks and street corners were to be used when traffic was clear or the traffic lights in your favor. It is not unusual to have a pedestrian step out in front of an oncoming vehicle and expect the driver to stop. What happened to stop, look both ways, and cross when clear?

We can face up to the social problem of high-risk drinking and do something about it. We can join one of the committees in the Building Responsibility Campus/Community Coalition, committed to reducing high-risk drinking in Newark. NEWARK OUTLOOK Planning a vacation?

The average family will spend over $2,000 on food and lodging while on summer vacation, not including transportation, entertainment and other costs. If you've got that kind of money sitting in the bank, you've got nothing to worry about. For everyone else, the time to start planning is right now.

Vacations don't have to drain your pocketbook. Planning now can mean the difference between a relaxing getaway and the fear of facing a big bill when you return. Here are a few tips to make your vacation more affordable:

Overspending on a vacation is easy. In addition to the major expenses, things pop up that can burn a hole in your wallet. If you follow a budget for your household, it makes sense to follow a budget for your vacation.

Set a spending limit before choosing your destination. Include hidden costs.

Cut out the unnecessary expenses. For example, if you plan on spending little time in your hotel room, should you really pay extra for that room with a view?

Make a plan By Cynthia Antoine that covers transportation, lodging and meals. Subtract that amount from your overall vacation budget to determine what you have left for day-to-day activities. Divide this amount by the number of days to get your daily spending allowance.

"If you deal exclusively with the same agent, you're not always going to get the best deal," says Wayne Robinson, author of The African-American Travel Guide. "I've called several travel agents and got different prices for the same vacation."

You might be better off calling the airlines yourself. You could get a lower rate than if you went through a travel agent. If you belong to a frequent-flyer program, summer vacation is the perfect time to cash-in. Look into how many frequent-flyer miles you've earned and when they expire.

"Summer is the busiest vacation time of the year," says Robinson. "Not only are you competing for space with Americans, but with people from around the world."

Diverse...yet the same

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Representatives from Puerto Rico, Yemen, Israel, Mexico and the United States, among other countries, gathered in one room recently, but it was not for a United Nations conference.

This gathering of different cultures was a way to bring local high school students together.

Members of the Student Government

Association (SGA) and students in the English as a Second Language (ESL) courses at Glasgow High School were celebrating diversity.

The ESL program includes 48 students from about 10 different countries who take lessons from Margaret Cassling at Glasgow High.

Meeting in the school's Dragon's Lair, the student government members presented the ESL students with unique gifts.

Each ESL student received a shirt displaying "Dragon Pride" in eight different languages.

The shirts were given to make the foreign language students feel included in the Glasgow community, according to assistant principal William Conley.

"(This is) a way to build bridges between the kids who are part of the mainstream and those who are not," said Conley. "(ESL students) have their language lessons and specialized classes, so they may not always feel like part of the mainstream."

agent. If you belong to a frequent-flyer program, summer vacation is the perfect time to cash-in. Look into how many frequent-flyer miles you've earned and when they expire.

"Summer is the busiest vacation time of the year," says Robinson. "Not only are you competing for space with Americans, but with people from around the world."

Vacation packages are often a better deal than booking everything separately. Add-ons, such as sightseeing excursions, cost less than if purchased separately.

Special events also account for fewer hotel rooms. If there is a major event in town, the rooms will be more expensive. Get a visitor's bureau events schedule for the city you'd like to visit, and plan accordingly.

Booking in advance also protects you from rate hikes. "If you booked a flight for three days from today from the Midwest to California, it would cost $1,000," says Robinson. "That same flight booked three months in advance could cost as little as $200."

The Internet has become a haven for travel deals, but knowing who to trust can be difficult. Watch out for fly-by-night web sites promising bargains that sound too good to be true.

If you're ready for a worry-free summer vacation, there's no time like the present to plan ahead. Careful consideration and a clear plan of action will make your vacation a wonderful memory instead of a troubling financial burden.

Hodgson wrestling back on track

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Hodgson Vo-Tech wrestling team started its season on a positive note - taking home the Governor's Trophy for the highest placing team in the Beast of the East Tournament.

The Silver Eagles, though, then had an unexpected bump when they lost a dual meet to Caesar Rodney.

It's pretty hard to call a loss to the Riders a disappointment since CR hasn't lost a dual meet in years. Yet, it was uncharacteristic of a Hodgson team to give up so many pins.

Since then, though, Hodgson has been back on a roll.

Saturday's dominating win over a very good Newark team was proof that the Silver Eagles are again the team to beat in Division II.

They have a solid lineup that is buoyed by Jordan Sianni and Brian Welch. Sianni, as his second place showing in the Beast of the Newark rallies past Christiana in final minute

Waters help lead Jackets to win

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

"I knew I had to step it up for us to win the game, so I just gave it my best," said a tired, but smiling, Rasheme Waters, "I knew what I had to do to help my team."

Help is an understatement, as Waters and teammate Greg Collins combined for nine points in the last two minutes, and a stingy defense held Christiana to only two points, as Newark edged the Vikings 67-62 Wednesday night in a classic Blue Hen Conference Flight A match-up.

Waters said, "A lot of people didn't expect Newark to do very much this year, and everyone doubted our abilities, but we've upset a few teams and we feel very confident right now."

It was the eighth straight victory for Newark, now 9-3, and keeps the team undefeated in conference with a perfect 6-0 mark. Christiana's record, 2-8 overall, and 1-6 in Flight A, may not show it, but the team is rapidly improving quarter by quarter.

Christiana appeared to have an upset victory for the taking when Brian Green hit a three pointer, and Ronnie Evans sank a free throw to give the Vikings a 60-56 lead with just under three minutes left to play. But then, Waters sank three of four free throws and a basket, and Collins hit four of six from the free throw line to ice the victory in the game's waning moments.

Christiana coach Ron Hollis said his team played well enough to win on most nights.

"We played very well from the end of the third quarter until the last two minutes, we just couldn't hold our composure at the end," he said.

Hollis added he felt the team would play much better during the second half of the season.

Newark jumped out to a big early lead thanks to an 11-0 run that resulted in a 23-13 lead after one quarter, with four different players contributing to the offense.

The Jackets continued to shoot well in the second quarter, but Christiana shooters began to find the mark. The Vikings outscored Newark by two, but the Jackets remained on top at half-time 39-31.

After intermission, Christiana began to heat up, and Newark's shooters went cold.

The Vikings Nate Sanders and Evans repeatedly hit big baskets, as Christiana cut the lead to only five with one quarter to go.

Sanders, Evans and Green kept hitting until the scored was tied at 52, but Newark's duo of Waters and Collins eventually gave Newark the lead for good.

Newark coach Greg Benjamin said he applauded his team's eventual come-from-behind victory, but cautioned his team at halftime, to not take Christiana too lightly.

"We were very relaxed at the half, but I was a bit worried, because I didn't see the killer's instinct in my players' eyes tonight. But winning at the end was definitely a confidence booster for us," he said.

Hollis said he knew his team will play better, now that the Vikings have played some of the top teams in the conference.

"It's just a matter of learning how to win," he said.

Newark's Lamont Davis led all scorers with 19, while Waters and Collins each had 12 points. Marzette Dollard chipped in with 11 points.

Christiana was led in scoring by Nate Sanders who netted 18 for the night, and teammates Evans and Wayne Sanders both had 10 points.

UD women win while men fall again

Women top W&M in 2 OTs

Junior guard Allison Trapp scored five her team-high 19 points in the second overtime as the University of Delaware pulled out a 80-77 double overtime victory over William & Mary in a Colonial Athletic Association women's basketball thriller Sunday afternoon at the Bob Carpenter Center.

Delaware (13-4, 7-2 CAA) broke a 71-71 tie early in the second overtime as forward Christina Rible hit a jumper and Trapp followed with back to back baskets to clinch the Blue Hens' fifth straight win. William & Mary, who has lost six of his last seven games, fell to 8-10, 2-7 go with 11 rebounds while freshman Julie Sailer came off the bench to add 16 points and nine rebounds, senior guard Megan Dellegrotti added 10 points and six assists before fouling out for the first time in her career, and freshman forward Tiara Malcom added eight points and a team-high 12 rebounds. Delaware pulled 62 rebounds for the game, one shy of the school record 63 collected vs. Rider Jan. 27, 1990 and connected on 30 of 43 free throws. The Tribe managed just 47 rebounds and hit on 14 of 19 attempts from the foul line.

The Blue Hens trailed by as much as seven points in the first half before rallying to take a 28-26 lead at intermission. Delaware maintained the lead for most of the second half, going up by eight points several times, the last

East showed, is one of the top wrestlers in the country at his weight.

Welch, too, is a highly touted wrestler. Larry and Joe Cylc, although inexperienced in terms of years wrestling, have turned into powerhouses at the top of the Silver Eagle lineup.

As the season winds toward the conference and state championship tournaments, keep an eye on the Eagles.

What's up with the Hens?

It has been a crazy year for the University of Delaware men's basketball team. The Blue Hens just can't seem to find any consistency.

Sure, they were able to knock off some good teams in UNC-Wilmington, Drexel and George Mason, but they haven't been able to sustain that effort for very long.

Heck, the Hens have tough time sustaining any consistency for a game.

In games against Penn and Hofstra, they have played some of their worst basketball in falling way behind. Then they find a way to play some of their best basketball to close the gap in the second half.

Obviously, the ability is there. If they can only find a way to use it for an entire game (and then another), the Hens will be tough to beat.

Decision time

Newark High's Brandon Snow is one of the most highly recruited football players in the country.

Several schools and thousands of fans across the country will be anxiously awaiting his decision.

The all-state fullback and linebacker is finishing up his school visits this month and will choose between Penn State, Maryland, Virginia, Florida and Tennessee shortly.

According to recruiting experts across the country, Snow's decision is one of the most anticipated among colleges and their fans.

Signing day is Feb. 6.

Tribe forward Jami Lange scored a game-high 22 points, including a perfect 11 for 11 from the foul line, and Jaye Marolla came off the bench to add 18 points on six three-pointers.

Men lose at Hofstra

Hofstra University jumped ahead early and never looked back as it handed the University of Delaware men's basketball team its second-straight Colonial Athletic Association loss, 74-67, at Hofstra Arena on Saturday afternoon.

The Blue Hens (8-11, 4-5 CAA) have now lost four of its last five.

The Blue Hens dug themselves a hole early, shooting just 27 percent from the field in the first half, as the Pride (9-11, 4-5 CAA) stormed out to a 24-6 lead. Rick Apodaca and Michael Radziejewski each scored 10 in the first half as Hofstra took a 37-23 halftime lead.

Delaware started the second half outscoring Hofstra 26-16 in the first 10 minutes. A Mike Ames jumper with 12:12 remaining capped a nine-point run that cut the Hofstra lead to six.

The Blue Hens cut deeper into the Pride lead when Austen

Rowland hit a three pointer with 4:47 to pull within five. UD managed to get the ball back on the next possession but failed to connect on three shots. UD managed to cut the lead to four with 23 seconds remaining, but the foul shooting of Apodaca did not allow the Hens any closer, as he hit 7 of 8 free throw attempts in the final minute.

Apodaca led all players 25 point and Woody Souffrant dished out 10 assists for the Pride. Hofstra shot 23-27 from the charity stripe.

The Delaware bench outscored Hofstra's bench 35-13, as Rowland came in to score 15 points and Sean Knitter finished with 14. Ames also posted 14 points for Blue Hens.

The game was a rematch of the last two America East championships. The outcome ended up a repeat as well, as the Pride ended up on top.

The Blue Hens look to end their two-game losing streak when they host CAA rival Virginia Commonwealth on Wednesday night at 7 p.m.

Salesianum knocks off St. Mark's in basketball

Sals avenge early season loss

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Finally something to cheer about! After losing to their arch-rivals in football, soccer, and once already in basketball this year, the Salesianum hoopsters defeated St. Mark's 53-45 Friday night on the Spartans home court.

Senior guard Kyle Stem paced the Sals with 27 points, and played a tenacious defense on whomever the Spartans sent out against him. His rugged defense and several key steals in the fourth quarter helped seal the victory for the 11-4 Sals.

Stem said it was a good feeling to beat the Spartans on their home court.

"We didn't prepare for them properly the first time we played them on our court, but we wanted to come back and get our revenge, and we did that tonight," he said.

The game was similar in nature to the contest played between these two Catholic Conference teams earlier in the month. The Spartans came out in their usual style, with a deliberate offense and smothering defense. Junior Shannon Davis did most of the scoring early on, but the Sals led 14-12 after one quarter after Stem scored on a two-on-one breakaway, and off a steal just before the buzzer.

In the second quarter, the play remained even, with both coaches going to the bench very often. The game, at times, seemed like a chess match with players coming off both benches in rapid-fire order.

Spartan coach Lee Sibley said he did make a few more moves than usual.

"We have a number of young kids who are pretty equal in ability, so I wanted to give them some playing time to expose them to tough and exciting games," he said. When the dust had settled at halftime, the game was tied at 24.

At intermission, Davis and Romanczuk had combined for 22 of the Spartans points, while Stem and Pat Kilcur totaled 17 points for Salesianum.

Sallies coach Mike Gallagher said his team responded well to the pressure.

"Their aggressive defense denied us some shots, but we were able to take advantage of some other opportunities as a result," he said.

In the third quarter, the tempo and intensity picked up considerably. St. Mark's players began to run more with the Sals, and were able to keep pace. As in the first half, and in the first game between these two teams, the lead seesawed throughout the night. Davis and Romanczuk continued to pace St. Mark's, but Dan Edgar came off the bench for Salesianum to give the team some "instant offense" and five quick points.

The turning point came from an unusual source late in the third period. Spartan coach Sibley was given a technical foul for 'discussing' a call with an official too strenuously. Sallies one point advantage was promptly turned into a 39-33 lead, one that the Sals would not relinquish the rest of the game.

In the fourth quarter, the Sals depth and experience helped build a 10-point lead at 51-41 on a lay-up by Phil Szczerba with about two minutes left to play.

Salesianum then went to the foul line five times over the last minute, but only cashed in two points.

Defensively, the Sals kept St. Mark's to only four points and only a few shots over the last few minutes of the game.

Gallagher said his team was a little stronger off the bench than the Spartans.

"We played a few more people and had fresher legs at the end, but we really need to shoot better from the foul line than we did tonight," he said. Gallagher said the team would definitely work harder on that in the weeks ahead.

front until the 1:20 mark when two free throws by Sailer knotted the score at 61-61. Dellegrotti followed with two more free throws 38 seconds later for a 63-61 lead. After William & Mary guard Jen Sobota (10 points, eight assists) missed both ends of a two-shot foul, the Tribe tied the game at 63-63 on two Lange free throws with 22 seconds left. The Hens had the chance to win it in regulation but Dellegrotti missed a jumper with seven seconds left. Sobota turned the ball over with one second left to send the game into the first extra session.

The lead changed four times in the first overtime period and William & Mary took its final lead with 1:52 left when another Marolla three-pointer gave the Tribe a 69-67 lead. Sailer hit two free throws with 45 seconds left to send the game into the second extra session. William & Mary had two chances to score in the first overtime period but jumpers by Lange and Sobota were off target.

Delaware never trailed in the extra session. Lange hit a jumper to tie the score at 71-71 with 4:16 left, but Delaware took over from there.

Rible nailed a jumper and then Trapp took control, hitting a layup and stealing the ball at midcourt and driving in for another layup to give UD the 77-71 lead with 2:41 left. William & Mary cut the lead to 79-77 with 14 seconds left on yet another Marolla three-pointer, but Trapp came back with a free throw seven seconds later to ice the win. The Tribe had one last chance to tie it, but Sobota's three-pointer just before the buzzer missed.

A detailed illustration of several large stacks of US dollar bills, likely $100 bills, arranged in a tiered, pyramid-like structure. The bills are fanned out at the top of each stack, showing the '100' and the dollar sign. Scattered around the base of the stacks are several US coins, including quarters and dimes. The entire illustration is rendered in a grayscale, woodcut-style aesthetic.
