DeIDOT to Newark: no easy traffic solution

By NANCY TURNER
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark residents fed up with heavy traffic turned to state highway officials this week for answers, but learned there are no easy solutions.

About 40 residents from the western part of the city, attending an Old Newark Civic Association meeting Monday night, questioned Delaware Department of Transportation officials about ways traffic patterns might be changed or a bypass could be constructed to divert traffic away from the center of the city, thus reducing the numbers of interstate trucks and commuters transverse Newark.

Ray Pusey, director of state highway operations, said the issue of rerouting traffic around the perimeter of Newark emerged around 1970, only to be shot down by vocal residents.

"You got what you asked for," said Pusey. "I don't remember all the details, but I do know that it was over community objection that it wasn't built."

"I don't think anyone realized how big the University (of Delaware) and Newark would get in 1970," said Ann Brown, president of the Old Newark Civic Association, alluding to the subsequent increase in local traffic. "I don't know anyone who would not agree that we have a very serious problem now. We can't worry about what was done 20 years ago and get the problem solved in 1994.

"Because zoning permitted the development of land northwest of the city along Routes 273 and 896," said Brown, "the fate of diverting through traffic around Newark lies largely in the hands of Maryland and Pennsylvania, which have proven so far to

Deer Park Farm's fate uncertain

By JENNIFER L. RODGERS
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Negative community input has stalled plans to develop the Old Deer Park Farm property on Park Place with luxury townhomes.

Ed Sobelewski, the owner of the 1.2 acre lot and historic farmhouse, is proposing five to six "empty nester" townhouses on the site, targeting families whose children are grown and out of the house.

Sobelewski recently shared his plans with members of the Friends of Old Newark, a local civic association, but failed to find much support.

The land is currently zoned for four townhouses. Dave Robertson, a member of the Friends of Old Newark, said members were opposed to Sobelewski's proposal but "made it clear they could accept four townhomes." Concerned was also expressed about demolishing the farm house, which is registered as an historic building.

Sobelewski will need to get the City of Newark's approval for the additional townhomes. He said his plans are currently "up in the air."

Coming this spring: more highway construction

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Residents living near Possum Park Road and Kirkwood Highway will be seeing more of the familiar orange and white construction barrels that have been in their midst since last summer.

With the near-completion of a traffic-snarling project in December, many said they were beginning to breathe a sigh of relief. But that changed Monday with news that they will be in the midst of even more highway work this year - beginning March 1 and continuing for 10 months.

The news came at Maclary Elementary School, where about 100 people gathered to hear Delaware Department of Transportation officials deliver the details.

Some groaned and shouted "No way" when DeIDOT officials announced the timing and duration of the project.

Plans are to add a center support to strengthen the bridge on Possum Park Road, create a straight-through and a right turn lane, and add two left turn lanes from Possum Park Road to Kirkwood Highway.

Newark council ponders hiking rental fees Feb. 14

By JENNIFER L. RODGERS
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark City Council will vote on whether or not raise rental permit fees for landlords at their next meeting Monday Feb. 14 at 8 p.m.

The fees are currently $120 for a single family home with less than three units and $25 per apartment in a complex. If passed the new fees will be $150 for single family homes and $35 for apartments.

The proposed fee increase met with criticism from some at the last council

Third graders Seungjin Ham (Left) and Raija Eggert examine a banana peel that has been buried in dirt for seven months. The class also buried a newspaper, an aluminum can, a styrofoam tray and a juice box.

'Trashy' classroom situation eyed

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

This newspaper you're reading could take from one year to decompose when buried in dirt, or up to 30 years to break down in a landfill, sealed in plastic from the elements.

Third graders in Jean Leach's West Park Elementary class are learning these facts and others by watching garbage as it decomposes. Leach calls the project the "Trash Bash," as has been doing it for four years.

Back in September the class buried a banana peel, a newspaper, an aluminum can, a plastic bag, a styrofoam lunch tray and a juice box.

These objects were put in mesh bags, labeled by number and buried in a tub of dirt that stays inside the classroom. "When it rains or snows outside we water it," said Leach.

And then every month the class digs up the trash to have a first-hand look at any changes that are taking place.

They also take an educated guess at what the stuff will be like when it's uncovered in the future.

So far, predictions have been a little off base.

The banana peel, the class guessed, would be almost soil, feel sandy or even be gone and completely decomposed. It was actually black, hard, brittle and smelled bad.

The newspaper was expected to have been ripped and partly gone. Instead, it was wet and smooth, partly readable, and

Amick legislates against city wage tax

By JENNIFER L. RODGERS
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Local businesses such as the DuPont Company are taking advantage of Wilmington's tax breaks and moving their operations to the city, but someone is going to pay for the deal according to State Representative, Steve Amick.

Amick (R-Newark) said Wilmington is collecting the money lost in tax breaks by charging a 1.25 percent wage tax to employees.

Employees will incur added transportation and parking expenses as well as the wage tax and Amick believes this is "grossly unfair."

In an effort to stop the wage tax, he proposed House Bill 380 on Jan. 27.

If the bill passes, Wilmington would not be allowed to collect wage taxes during the time a company receives tax breaks.

Amick said he questions Wilmington's incentives because it puts New Castle County and the city in direct competition for business.

"To me there's some questions as to whether or not it is wise," Amick said.

He went on to say the real issue is whether or not it's fair for employees to pay for a tax break given to the employer.

The State House of Representatives will vote on House Bill 380 in March.

RECOGNIZING EDUCATION

Gov. Thomas Carper spoke to students at Holy Angels School Feb. 4 in recognition of Catholic Schools Week. Carper asked students about any plans they had for their future, and assumed the role of mathematician, counting up years of education needed to work in different professions.

Education is at top of candidate Felicia's list

By JENNIFER RODGERS
 NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Felicia

Tony Felicia, a Newark City Council member and the Democratic candidate for State Representative in the 25th District, might need to buy some new walking shoes if elected.

As councilman for Newark's third district, Felicia publishes and a newsletter he personally delivers to every home so that his constituents can be informed about city council actions and his individual endeavors in the area.

He plans to continue the newsletter if elected to the Delaware House.

Education is at the top of Felicia's list of issues. He would like to implement "some kind of advisory panel" to help "identify issues that are important to making schools stronger."

He supports keeping schools open until 9 p.m. so students can participate in more extra-curricular activities.

Felicia said he would support business by introducing a bill that would investigate methods to "minimize the red-tape." He believes businesses have to spend too much time filing forms.

As far as traffic problems are concerned, Felicia believes extending Christina Parkway might be a "long-term" answer to the problem but in the meanwhile he said truck toll dodgers must be stopped.

He supports a "short-term solution" that would include toll booths on Del. 896 at the intersection where I-95 exits into Newark. The toll would only affect trucks and out-of-state cars and charge a "scaled back toll" for daily commuters who live outside of Delaware.

Felicia also supports a health-care program, available to all, with contributions based on income.

In addition to running for a House seat, Felicia plans to run for re-election this April to Newark City Council. If he wins both elections, he said he would resign his city council seat.

Felicia serves as the director of engineering and facilities management at Zeneca Pharmaceuticals Group in Wilmington. He and his wife Cathy have been married for 20 years and have three children, Brian, Carrie and Heather, who attend St. Mark's and Holy Angels schools.

He serves on a number of committees, and is on the board of directors of the Transportation Management Association of New Castle County and the Newark Arts Alliance as well as a member of the Newark Flood Plain Management Task Force and the League of Women Voters.

Felicia faces Republican challenger Stephanie Ulbrich in the race for the 25th District House seat.

Class keeps an eye on trash

The class said the aluminum can would be a little rusty. It wasn't. Along with their own indoor dump, the class is saving food scraps to toss into a compost pile they're building. It's outside the window.

"They add soil to the pile once a week and rake it," said Leach. "It breaks down with snow and rain and over the summer will break down to make great soil."

Students also look at how toys and other products are packaged to see how wasteful packaging can be. And at the end of the year, each student makes a useful object out of trash. In the past, students made

Two men were arrested Feb. 7 on multiple drug charges, as a result of a joint investigation between Newark and Delaware State police.

Police first arrested Bruce Graef, 33, of Northeast, Md., after a struggle.

Police said an attempted to arrest Graef was first made at the Polly Drummond Shopping Center after he was seen by police purchasing a pound of marijuana. He tried leaving in his pickup truck but was stopped shortly thereafter by an undercover officer, who jumped in the truck bed and broke the rear window, forcing Graef to pull over along Linden Hill Road.

Graef was charged with possession with intent to deliver marijuana, two counts of delivery of marijuana, three counts for maintaining a vehicle for the delivery of controlled substances, reckless endangering and resisting arrest.

He was committed to Gander Hill Prison in lieu of $7,300 bail.

The undercover officer was treated at the Newark Emergency Center for cuts on one hand.

In another incident related to the joint drug investigation, police also arrested Donald McCormick, 30, of Hockessin, after a search warrant was executed at his home. Police confiscated a half-pound of Marijuana and 12.5 grams of Phencyclidine (PCP).

McCormick was charged with trafficking Phencyclidine, possession with the intent to deliver both Phencyclidine and Marijuana, maintaining a vehicle for the delivery of controlled substances and possession of drug paraphernalia.

McCormick was committed to Gander Hill Prison in lieu of $24,900 bail.

Crowded roads irk residents

► TRAFFIC, from 1A

be disinterested when the city has tried to negotiate solutions. This will have to be negotiated at a state level. There is nothing that the city of Newark can offer.

While there is no quick-fix solution, residents suggested small changes in traffic planning that might be considered within the city to bring about at least a little relief. Some of them included:

- making Elkton Road two-way between Main Street and Delaware Avenue

- transforming Cleveland Avenue into a one-way street

- making New London Road two-way between West Cleveland Avenue and the Deer Park Tavern and connecting it with Elkton Road at the Route 273 and 896 split.

- reversing the directions of Main Street and Delaware Avenue

- connecting Hillside Road with Apple Road.

Pusey said the city should approach DelDOT with any changes so their feasibility can be explored.

"If city council finds any of these socially unacceptable, then technically it doesn't matter if they work or not," said Pusey. "If city council says that an option is acceptable, then we will look at the technical ramifications."

"I can't imagine why we [city council] would not go to the state with ideas to solve this problem," said Newark City Councilman Tom Wampler.

Christina OKs balanced budget for fiscal 1994

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Christina School Board has unanimously approved a $119.5 million balanced budget for the district.

The budget for the 1994 fiscal year increased about 3.7 percent over last year's budget, according to Kenneth Brown, business and finance director for the district.

The increase covers a raise of district employees salaries, an average of 4-6 percent increase when combined at both the state and local levels.

The increase will also provide approximately $500,000 in staff development opportunities and over 1 million dollars, double over last year's budget, for computers and technology.

Approximately $65,000 will be spent to add girl's soccer and boy's lacrosse teams to the three high schools.

The budget allows for a district-wide building study to assess overall maintenance costs. The study will be done over the next two years.

Also the increase will fund automating libraries and after-school activities at middle schools such as intermural sports and clubs.

Brown said nothing was cut from the budget.

School board meeting rescheduled for Feb. 22

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Christina School Board meeting, which was cancelled Tuesday due to snow and ice, has been rescheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 22, at 7:30 p.m. at Brookside Elementary School on Marrows Road in Newark.

Items on the agenda include information about procedures for the upcoming school board election in May. Filing deadline is April 11, and filing applications will be accepted beginning March 26.

The seat held by board president James Kent is up for reelection this year. Kent has not yet formally announced his election plans.

Also being discussed will be plans for additions and renovations to The Delaware Autistic School, located off Del. 4 next to Kirk Middle School and Jennie Smith Elementary School.

In other district business, superintendent Iris Metts plans to attend an informational community meeting on the desegregation agreement recently approved by all four northern Delaware public school districts.

The meeting, scheduled for 7 p.m. on Feb. 14 at Hodgson Vo-Tech School, is sponsored by the Bear/Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations.

Ogletown Interchange gets green light

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) officials have announced they have all permits needed to go ahead with the construction of the 273/Ogletown Interchange.

Currently, the overpass crosses over Del. 4 near MBNA and ends on both sides into trees.

During 1987 to 1989, the bridge was built in phase one of making Del. 273 a straight throughway. Now while traveling Del. 273 drivers have to get on Del. 4 to continue onto Del. 273.

The proposed road will connect Del. 273 west of the Avon Underpass at one end and east of MBNA at the other.

Construction of the road connector was halted because of wetlands. Wetlands are defined by vegetation, elevation and the effects on ecology in the area. DelDOT said it also has to do with what happens to the land when it rains.

"We (DelDOT) were held up because we got the original wetlands assessment and did phase one (the bridge that now stands) and when it was completed the federal regulations had changed on classifying wetlands," said Christine Gillan, DelDOT public relations.

She said DelDOT had to draw up new plans and work with the federal government to plan the second phase of building the connector road.

Construction of the 273/Ogletown interchange will begin this summer.

A public meeting to view the updated plans of the 273/Ogletown interchange will be on Feb. 16 from 4 to 8 p.m. at Kirk Middle School in Newark.

Schmidt and four other high school seniors competed in the event, held Feb. 7 at the Holy Family Church Education Center on Chestnut Hill and Gender roads.

Post 10 Commander Joseph Hoar presented awards to Schmidt and runners-up Michelle Ten Gon of St. Marks High School, who placed second; Joy Pittman of Delcastle Technical High School, who placed third; and Dorian Perry of Newark High School, who placed fourth.

Schmidt and Ten Gon will go on to compete further at Walter Fox Post 2 in Dover.

The contest, based on the United States Constitution, requires contestants to present an eight- to 10-minute dissertation on a topic of their choice related to that document or the government. As a "tie breaker" another feature requires a three- to five-minute extemporaneous presentation, on a special segment of the Constitution, drawn by lot and furnished five minutes before they must make this speech.

Judges for this year's program were John J. Lynch, Judith Moore, and Tricia Lynn Strader.

More Kirkwood Highway construction planned this year

ROAD, from 1A

for DelDOT, said these improvements are needed to keep pace with development going on in the area.

State Senator Roger A. Martin (D-Newark) said DelDOT should give special consideration to the Possum Park Road area.

He said with baseball season starting at Newark National Little field off Possum Park Road, the Holy Angels carnival coming up and Maple Valley Swimming Pool open for the summer that the construction is going to disrupt a lot of people.

"Until the big season is over, can't we juggle with this?" asked Martin.

DelDOT spokeswoman Michelle Ackles said the state is under a legal commitment to do the project because a contract for the work has already been awarded. She said there is a possibility, however, of juggling the month the work begins, but cautioned that no matter when construction begins, it will still involve a 10-month cycle.

One legislator theorized residents are still reeling from the recent road construction in their area, and fear a bad case of deja-vu.

"I think this is residue of the fiasco on Kirkwood Highway," said State Rep. Richard DiLiberto Jr. (D-Newark). "I have had reports of workers harassing females, urinating behind businesses and being rude to business owners. This is a human relations as well as a construction problem."

DelDOT officials said the road will potentially be closed for one day when work to the bridge is being done. Except for that day, two-way traffic should be open during rush hour times.

Construction questions? call DelDOT from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at 1-800-652-5600.

County, DP&L taken to task over lights

By JENNIFER L. RODGERS
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Members of the Bear/Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations and residents had a chance to grill county and Delmarva Power & Light (DP&L) officials Monday night about the light tax on Turn-of-the-Century street lights.

Residents questioned the county's billing method for what they felt should be a utility cost as well as the availability of the fancy lights.

The county is required by law to bill homeowners for the service. They currently charge 32 cents per $100 of the assessed value of a home for the lights. Some asked why the street light tax didn't go down when the value of their homes decreased during the recession. And on the other hand, if the value of a home increases does the value of a street light increase too?

Well, "relief is on the way" according to Wally Judd, DP&L manager of communications. He said homeowners will be billed about $.16 per $100 of assessed value of their home.

This is because DP&L has identified an additional 500 homes and 1,500 vacant lots that benefit from the lights. When the number of homes enlightened was originally calculated, 2,000 were identified. Now the cost will be dissipated because more people will be paying.

Chris Roberts, New Castle County Councilman suggested a solution may be found if county, DP&L and developers can meet. Roberts, who is presently drafting a law to submit to the state legislature that would require DP&L to bill homeowners directly, said residents who paid large bills might be able to receive a credit towards their next bill.

A representative from the county finance department was not present to answer more specific questions about a possible credit.

People also suggested that developers not be able to choose the expensive lights. Most were never told the lights would cost so much even though the developer used them as "selling point."

"It's not a nuclear power plant out there, it's just a light pole," said Steve Capano, a resident of Caravel Woods. "How many times do I have to pay for this pole?"

Residents suggested that lights be installed after a development was finished so everyone could have a say in the choice.

Gary Jones, a DP&L spokesperson, said waiting to choose the style of light can cause a neighbor against neighbor situation. He said some people would want lights and others wouldn't.

Stephanie Hansen, the Bear/Glasgow Council President, said she believed a credit would probably appease most people but was disappointed that the county finance department "didn't have the guts to show up."

School health centers to open at Glasgow, Newark

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Health and Wellness centers will be added to Newark and Glasgow high schools the beginning of the 1994-95 school year.

The Christina School Board approved a planning process which assesses the needs of students at the schools and the services needing to be offered at the health centers.

Both Glasgow and Newark high schools received funding for the centers through $20,000 planning grants from the Division of Public Health.

Superintendent Iris Metts said getting the funding for the health centers is "a golden opportunity for the district."

Pending a successful plan, the health centers will open. Each center costs the Division of Public Health about $130,000 per year to operate.

Christiana High School has had a health and wellness center for four years, which services between 200-300 student visits per month.

The health clinics are staffed with full-time nurses, counselors, a nutritionist and a part-time doctor, according to Richard Steiman of the Delaware Division of Public Health.

He said the centers offer counseling, education and a place for students to go when they are stressed with problems of daily living.

"The center also acts as a referral source for teachers who are worried about certain kids," he said.

Students have to get parental permission to use the services at the Christiana Health Center. Permission obtained their freshmen year carries through their four high school years.

Steiman said because of the positive relationship with the Christina District, it is very possible the good experience was what led to the other high schools getting the funding for the health centers.

Steiman said the centers are basically free to students.

The centers in the Christina District do not and will not offer reproductive services. The Delaware State Board of Education has ruled that each school district decides whether or not to provide reproductive services and the district has to come up with the money for the services.

A written plan for each of the centers is planned to be presented to the school board prior to the end of the school year.

Girl scouts pay social call on Rockwood

Historic setting offers insight into an elegant, Victorian lifestyle

By TONJA CASTANEDA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark girl scouts in Troop 660 got a taste of life from over 100 years ago.

The six girls toured Rockwood Museum in Wilmington, built in 1851, and drank tea from fine china cups while sampling scones with whipped cream, cherry tarts and finger sandwiches.

The experience left the fifth graders wishing they could have lived at the turn of the century.

"I would have liked to live here except for going without a refrigerator and television," said Alexis Klair, who attends Elbert-Palmer Elementary School.

"I liked the pretty, party dresses (laid out on the beds) and the chandeliers," she said.

Lauren Horney, also a Palmer student, said she would like to have lived at Rockwood. She said she likes the fancy dishes used back then.

"I liked seeing the way they decorated the house for parties," said Jennifer Zawislak, who attends Immaculate Conception in Elkton, Md.

She was referring to Victorian times when the wealthy had servants to do cooking and cleaning, which left them with time to throw holiday parties and hand make decorations for throughout the house.

Victorian games during a valentine's social may have included one where each girl wrote a boy's name on a paper heart and threw it into a basket. The girls' hearts that made it into the basket had found their true loves.

Another game was for a person to try and draw a perfect heart on a chalkboard while blindfolded.

The girl scouts learned the ways of the affluent in the Victorian Era where they rang bells and servants came running to help them dress. Also, that woman used day beds to rest during the afternoon so as not to muss the beds because servants were too busy to fix them.

They saw the original kitchen with a coal stove and learned that the residents of Rockwood put a great emphasis on tea, having it three or four times a day.

"Our girls are interested in history," said Debbie Gallo, who signed up the scouts for the tour. "We thought the tour would be interesting because the girls are studying colonial America."

Pat Baldwin of Rockwood Museum said this is the second year that girl scouts have visited the house.

"A small group of girl scouts toured Rockwood last year and it went so well that a Girl Scout magazine wrote about it," said Baldwin.

This year the Rockwood staff invited all girl scouts to visit and about 100 will tour the estate and have tea there.

"All little girls like having tea and so do big girls," said Baldwin.

Although the museums valentine's tea is booked full, there will be an Irish tea and concert at Rockwood on March 12 at 1 p.m. The cost of the tea is $12.

Museum tours are available Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. For more information, call Rockwood at 761-4340.

Lesniak announces plans to challenge Amick

By JENNIFER L. RODGERS
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Democratic candidate Paul Lesniak has announced he will run against Republican Steve Amick for the Delaware State Senate seat in Newark-area District 10 this fall.

Lesniak is a newcomer to the local political arena.

He said one of his goals as a candidate is to visit each of the 9,000 homes in the district to meet the voters and hear their concerns.

Lesniak has worked for W.L. Gore & Associates in Elkton, Md. for 12 years as a Human Resources Specialist and engineer. He uses his human resource skills at local high schools to help students deal with job pressures and expectations.

He is a member of the Board of Directors for First State Project With Industry, a nonprofit group that helps disabled Delawareans find jobs, a member of the Fairfield Civic Association, and a volunteer for youth groups such as the Newark Little League and "I Have a Dream Foundation."

He and his wife Nancy, and son Matt, 8, have lived in Newark for 12 years.

Think we're having a dose of strange weather now? Last year was unusual, too

While the recent weather has made for an unusual winter, climatic conditions across Delaware during 1993 were truly unusual, too, according to Daniel J. Leathers, Delaware state climatologist in the University of Delaware's Center for Climatic Research.

Although the state's mean annual temperature and average precipitation for 1993 were near normal, the year began with temperatures in January more than 6 degrees Fahrenheit above the 99-year average and precipitation amounts below normal.

However, this warm and tranquil start to the new year was followed by a cool, wet spring. During March, two major storms on the 4th and 13th of the month resulted in considerable damage across the state. In particular, the storm of March 13 was accompanied by strong gusty winds and heavy snowfall, with 13 inches of snow falling in the Wilmington area. In fact, the average statewide precipitation of 7 inches during March ranked it as the third wettest March in the last 99 years.

The cool, wet spring season was followed by four months of below normal rainfall and above normal temperatures across the entire state. This combination led to moderate to severe drought conditions and extensive damage to many crops. The peak of the summer's warmth and dryness came in July when temperatures averaged more than 3 degrees Fahrenheit above the 99-year mean and precipitation across the state was only 54 percent of normal. Drier than normal conditions continued through the autumn and early winter, except for the month of September when precipitation across the state averaged 150 percent of normal.

The following data detail conditions across the state during 1993:

- The state's mean annual temperature was 55.4 degrees Fahrenheit, 0.89 degrees above the 99-year mean.

- The statewide average precipitation of 42.9 inches was slightly below the long-term average of 43.6 inches.

- The extended heat wave and dry spell during the summer months of June, July and August made the summer of 1993 one of the 10 warmest and one of the 10 driest in the last 99 years.

- During the year, 36 days with temperatures of 90 degrees Fahrenheit or above were recorded at the airport in Wilmington, nearly twice the average of 20 days. In Dover, 30 days with temperatures of 90 degrees Fahrenheit or above were recorded, 12 days more than the normal of 18 days.

- Snowfall across the state was variable. In the Wilmington area, 26.2 inches of snow fell, slightly above the average value of approximately 21 inches. In Dover, 10.9 inches of snow fell; approximately 60 percent of normal.

So much for compassion

Timing can mean everything, as demonstrated by the owners of the Newark Shopping Center who saw to it Thursday morning that a 10-foot high mound of snow was strategically placed in front of an access road near Blue Hen Bowling Lanes, blocking a well-traveled entrance to the Newark Senior Center.

Tom Krapf, whose family owns the shopping center, said the move was deliberate, adding that not only are there no plans to remove the snow — there will soon be a fence erected to ensure the access road is permanently blocked.

The reason for all this? Krapf blames it on too much traffic that congests the shopping center's parking lot, and potential insurance liabilities resulting from keeping access to the road open.

He said the only reason clear access has been maintained until now was because the road was also used by Newark police to reach the police station on Main Street next to the Senior Center. The station closed in September.

The senior citizens, many of whom have used the road for at least 15 years to reach the senior center and do their shopping at Mr. Krapf's shopping center disagree. They feel the road has been blocked out of spite. (The Krapf family's bid to purchase the senior center was recently rejected by Newark City Council.)

We too question Mr. Krapf's actions. Why wasn't access to the road blocked five months ago, when the police left — if, as Mr. Krapf contends, their presence was the only reason for it to be open in the first place?

Newark Senior Center Director Margaret Catts is upset by the Krapf family's apparent lack of concern for the older Newark residents who have been inconvenienced. What's worse is that she wasn't even afforded the courtesy of a phone call to let her know what was going on.

There's been talk that the seniors will protest the Krapf's actions. Good for them. They've been around long enough to know the real story.

FROM THE HEART

The ultimate long-term friendship

By TONJA CASTANEDA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Valentine's Day is almost here and I'm still trying to decide how to celebrate with my husband.

Last year I got him red and white balloons and a basket with heart-shaped candies.

I want this holiday to be really special. After almost four years of marriage, I really want my husband to know that I love him and I appreciate all that he does for me.

We're still in the honeymoon stage, although we have come a long way from when we lived on hamburger helper the first year we were married.

So even though married life for me is wonderful. There are times when everyday life becomes dull with romantic dinners and late night chats being replaced with working overtime and going to sleep early because of work the next day.

With us both working full time, mostly conflicting hours, it's a struggle to find time to spend together.

I wanted some tips on how to keep my marriage happy and full of romance, so I went to the experts—Newark couples who have been married for most of their lives.

Daniel and Filomena Budani will be married 70 years in June. Filomena has been sick and says that her husband has been wonderful during her illness. She said he takes care of her and the house. "He Castaneda does everything for me but breathe," she said.

Filomena said a marriage lasts because of commitment and survival. "You don't let anything come between you," she said.

Filomena said when her husband argues, she sees the humor in it. She said she still has love letters he wrote to her. "I read them especially when I'm mad at him," said Filomena.

She said she gets a valentine from her husband every year and says she will darn his socks for his present.

Daniel said for him it's simply the four-letter word love.

Don and Eleanor Foreman have been married for 63 years.

Eleanor said they share interests such as politics and throughout their life traveled together. "You need to be tolerant and patient," she said.

Don said not to carry grudges but sit down and talk it over. He said they share a kiss each night before going to bed.

Jesse and Elizabeth Tressler have been married 51 years.

"We argue but it's fun making up," said Elizabeth.

She said they do things together such as eating out and going to the senior center. "Last year I got a dozen roses on Valentine's Day," she said. "Of course I don't know what I'll get this year."

"I love her all the time," said Jesse.

I found in these couples love still going strong. They talked about each other and to one another with warmth in their voices and sparkling eyes.

I guess when it comes down to it Valentine's Day is just another day to show love. The rest of the year couples should still try to find ways to show they care.

I am happy about the little thing that my husband does like going grocery shopping with me and chauffeuring me around in bad weather when his schedule permits.

Although I in no way want to rush the years by—Ken and I still have to look forward to buying our first house and having and raising children—I hope when the time comes for me to be retired and sitting in a rocking chair on my front porch I will be lucky enough to have my husband next to me.

I wish everyone a Happy Valentine's Day.

Ever heard of Eldridge Johnson?

By ELBERT CHANCE

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

"What do you know," inquired my good friend Cornelius Tilghman Sr., "about Eldridge Reeves Johnson?"

The blank look on my face undoubtedly answered the question. Despite my interest in both music and Delaware history, the name meant nothing to me, but I promised Neal Tilghman that I would pursue his suggestion to read several pieces about the man and visit the Johnson Memorial at the intersection of Bank Lane and New Street in Dover to correct this deficiency. Having done both, I am motivated to share my findings with readers of this column.

Eldridge Reeves Johnson was born in Wilmington in 1867, but was sent to live with his aunt and her husband in Dover two years later when his mother died. He graduated from Dover Academy in 1882 and aspired to continue his education in college, but the school's director bluntly advised that he should learn a trade instead.

In 1883 Johnson joined relatives in Philadelphia and was apprenticed to a small manufacturing and repair firm. He later moved to the Scull Machine Shop of Camden, N.J., and, in 1894, became the owner of that business.

In 1877 Thomas A. Edison had invented a talking machine and others, including the Berliner brothers and a cousin of Alexander Graham Bell, had produced improved versions of that machine. One such product was brought to Johnson's shop and he soon became convinced that it had almost unlimited commercial possibilities. After contributing to the product development of several companies, he incorporated the Victor Talking Machine Company in 1901, which had developed into a multimillion dollar business by 1927 when he sold it to a consortium of bankers. In 1929 the company became a division of RCA Victor.

During his long career Johnson received more than 70 patents. His most famous invention was the Victrola, but his greatest achievement may have been his successful negotiation with representatives of rival companies that led to a cross-licensing agreement that involved Victor, Columbia and Edison and ended a long and expensive struggle over patent rights.

It was Johnson who recognized the advertising value of the Francis Barraud painting of Nipper, the fox terrier, listening to an old cylinder phonograph. Johnson purchased rights to the painting, titled "His Master's Voice", from the British Gramophone Company and it subsequently became the worldwide trademark for RCA Victor. Johnson also persuaded Enrico Caruso, who became his personal friend, to record for his company at a time when many singers were skeptical about risking their reputations by singing for a mechanical reproduction that was still far short of concert hall quality. Soon the world's leading artists were recording on Victor records.

Limitations of space preclude a more detailed accounting of Johnson's career, but his name lives on in the many benefactions he made, among them the Johnson Foundation for Research in Medical Physics at the University of Pennsylvania; the Cooper Branch of the Free Library, the Deaconess Home and the Peter Pan statue in Johnson Square, all in Camden, N.J.; the Moorestown, N.J., Community House; and the Community Church in Dover, given in memory of his mother.

In Dover's Johnson Memorial, operated under the auspices of the state's Bureau of Museums and Historic Sites, visitors can see the evolution of the Victrola, the Caruso bust sculpted by the great tenor himself, and Barraud's original painting, "His Master's Voice". #### Farmer Murderously Assaulted and Robbed

C. D. Baker, an elderly farmer, who lives alone on a farm near Ogleton was murderously assaulted by a person or persons unknown on Monday evening about 5:30 and is now in a serious condition in Delaware Hospital as a result of the attack.

Mr. Baker went to the barn about 5:30 to do his chores and while stooping over in the performance of his tasks was struck over the head with a heavy club and beaten into insensibility. While he lay in an unconscious condition, his assailants ransacked his person and secured about $83 in money.

After several hours, Mr. Baker regained consciousness and succeeded in crawling to the home of a neighbor who brought him to Newark for medical attention. His condition was such that Dr. Walt H. Steel sent him immediately to the hospital where it was found that the skull was fractured.

Other neighbors were notified and telephoned to Newark for aid. Squire L. W. Lovett sent Officer Apsley, Roger Lovett and a posse of men to the scene of the attack in automobiles and they with the aid of neighbors surrounded and searched both house and barn. The assailants had made a get-away, however. The bludgeon with which the deed was committed was found, however, and is now at Squire Lovett's office.

Basket Ball Team Plays Penn Tonight

The Delaware College basketball team accompanied by 100 or more rooters will go to Philadelphia on the 5:46 train this evening to play the U. of P. team of that place. This is the big game of the year for the Blue and Gold. They think they have an excellent chance to win. Delaware has defeated some of the same teams that Penn has beaten, and by about the same score. Delaware has an unusually strong combination in Alexander and G. Carter forwards; McCaughan, center, and B. Carter and Marston, guards, with Barnard as a substitute.

Smith was wounded near TuyHoa, Vietnam on 21 June 1966 while a member of 327th Infantry, 101st Airborne Division. He was with the Newark Police force since May 1968.

Christina Approves Redistricting

After months of work, the Christina School District has a new redistricting plan, approved Saturday by the school board.

The work is just beginning, though, for school officials who must now implement the plan.

"I'm happy about the fact it was passed," said Dr. Capes Riley, Christina director of planning and special projects. "We now can move on and do the other things that must be done."

City, Police Settle Contract Dispute

Newark police finally have a contract.

The new three-year agreement was signed Tuesday after members of the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) Lodge 4 ratified the contract last week.

"I think, all in all, everybody was satisfied that was as good as we were going to do," said Sgt. Thomas Penozo, FOP president.

GUEST OPINION

By KENNETH M. WEINIG
SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

Dr. Jack Bartley in his recent Post column (Schools: A choice decision?), which deals with school choice, states that the basis for sound decision should involve logic and facts, with only a nod to any "emotional predisposition." I found the article much lighter on both logic and facts than on outright bias. When I finished reading it, I said to myself, "This sounds as if it were written by someone from the National Education Association (the largest public school teachers' union)," and then I discovered that it had been! This explains a great deal. Dr. Bartley's arguments are old and tired ones, long espoused by Albert Shanker (American Federation of Teachers) and N.E.A. leaders. Responses to several of his points are in order:

"For some families, there is no choice." It must be pointed out that most nonpublic schools, especially the most expensive ones, have generous financial aid budgets. Obviously, if every eligible public school child applied for these funds, there would not even be enough openings in the nonpublic schools, let alone enough financial aid; however, it is a serious falsehood to say that those who attend Delaware's nonpublic schools are exclusively rich or even upper middle class. I can't resist making the suggestion that the voucher be raised from $1500-$2000 to $6000, which is much closer to the actual per-pupil expenditure in Delaware. After all, this is exactly what each parent of a nonpublic-school pupil saves the state and district by not choosing public school. The savings, by the way, exceed $100,000,000 each year!

Dr. Bartley does not address what he may believe is a major barrier to granting public funds to parents for use in nonpublic schools, the church/state issue. He should be aware, however, that legal precedents in Minnesota and other states clearly the way for this if some sensible rules are observed, such as banning the use of such funds to directly advance religion.

Before addressing the writer's major point, a helpful analogy. After winning a fifty-yard dash, a runner is approached three minutes later by a contestant crossing the finish line dragging heavy chains. The tired contestant angrily berates the winner: "Anyone can come in first without these chains; I'm going to insist that the judges make everyone wear them." In essence, Dr. Bartley is admitting that private schools can "run faster" (i.e., educate better), but, to make them eligible for public funds, they should put on the chains public schools must carry. I strongly suggest that he and other public school reformers should do just the opposite: work to remove the ridiculous chains!

What are they? For one, public schools should not have to "take everyone," at least not in the same school and certainly not in the same classroom. The recent state initiative to establish special schools for the disruptive is an excellent and long-overdue idea. Another "chain" is the restriction against values, which has led to a major exodus of pupils from the public system to religious schools. The N.E.A. recently spent several millions of dollars in a negative public relations campaign to torpedo the California parental choice initiative. These funds and many more millions spent bashing private schools could have been better spent in chain removal. Why not devote some of the union's tremendous clout with the Democratic party to repeal some of the students' rights legislation, which, over the last thirty years, has crippled the rights of schools to remove the disruptive and caused so many families to flee to private schools? Why not lobby for return to the pre-Madeline Murray Era when silent prayer and posting of the Ten Commandments (yes, somewhat sectarian, but the moral code is common to almost every faith) were legal in every classroom? If General Motors had followed the pattern of teachers' unions and other public school lobbies, it would have spent funds on commercials attacking foreign imports instead of product improvement—and it would be out of business today.

The answer to educational reform is not to make private schools copy the practices that are destroying public schools. It should be pointed out, too, that the essence of a nonpublic school is its mission, its purpose for existence. Each school is or should be unique, in its approach to education, in its expectations of teachers, in its clientele served. It is also a serious mistake to assume that private schools only take bright, docile children with no problems. Has Dr. Bartley forgotten the nonpublic schools that take only the learning disabled, or only the severely retarded? One of the key differences between public and nonpublic schools is that public schools are kind of like general practitioners in medicine, and private schools are more like specialists. Nonpublic schools are usually smaller, and they specialize in the types of students they serve best. To suggest that they "take everyone," is to suggest that they abandon their missions, that all medical specialists should become general practitioners (although this idea has occurred to President Clinton).

The column also recommended that nonpublic-school teachers be held to the same certification requirements as those in public education. This is another bad idea but an understandable one coming from a union representative. Are teachers true professionals? This is a topic much-debated in all educational circles. Obviously, I would not like to be operated on by an unlicensed person claiming to be a surgeon, even if he had a Ph.D. in anatomy. But this is not the same thing as a retired but uncertified scientist teaching high school physics. Such an individual might have the born teaching skills (yes, there are such things, sorry to inform some education professors) and love of children, thus he/she might be a far better success in the classroom than the state-licensed bore with more "ed" courses than content courses. Nonpublic schools have many successful but uncertified teachers, and enlightened states such as New Jersey now permit them in public schools.

To end on a note more optimistic for Dr. Bartley, he can rest easy with the observation that vouchers or tax credits will not be a reality any time soon. The reason, however, is not that the issue will simply go away. Public aid for nonpublic schools is opposed by many nonpublic-school groups. Both Christian schools and independent schools (many represented by the National Association of Independent Schools) fear that such aid will come with strings, the very "chains" Dr. Bartley advocates. Although the largest group of nonpublic schools, the parochial schools, favors aid, it is also careful to resist concomitant controls. I think that close scrutiny of the voucher movement will show that the main advocates are not private school groups, but grassroots organizations of parents dissatisfied with public schools. I again urge concentration on the correction of the maladies causing the discontent, instead of wasting money attacking those calling for a solution.

Mirage chef shares real a sweatheart of a recipe

By NANCY TURNER
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Feeling decadent? Does the thought of a large slice of chocolate mocha torte with a triple moat of raspberry coulis (puree of fresh raspberries), chocolate sauce, and creme en glaise make you melt with a love struck sigh?

This flourless chocolate torte is Mirage Restaurant's signature dessert. At $5 per serving, it sells ten to one over all other deserts.

In the spirit of Valentine's Day, Mirage reveals the recipe for their coveted silky dessert to Newark Post readers. It's a lot easier to prepare than you may think. And of course, it is sure to put Cupid's arrow through the heart of your favorite chocolate lover.

Executive Chef Lisa Scolaro, an admitted chocoholic, leads the culinary staff of Mirage in their preparation of Chocolate Mocha Torte. The native of Staten Island, New York, earned her degree from the Culinary Institute of America at Hyde Park and has studied under international chefs in France, Australia, New Zealand and Hong Kong. Prior to coming to Mirage, she has worked at the David Finney Inn in New Castle, the Brick House in Middletown, and Tiffin in Wilmington. Scolaro also teaches upper level courses at the College of Hotel and Restaurant Management.

"What we wanted to create was total decadence," said Scolaro. "This torte is very simple and kind of elegant. We didn't want to do fourteen layers of ganache and sponge cake or make a mountain of whipped creme on top of a dessert. I desserts that allow one taste to shine through at a time. In this case it's the raspberry coulee or the chocolate. Scolaro has a few tips for cooks at home who want to try their hand at the torte.

"Chocolate is definitely a temperamental item. You have to be very careful when you temper it," she said. "It scorches easily when you are melting it down. You want to do it over a water bath or on very low microwave power. "Use the best chocolate you can get, like Calbout, Peter's or Nestle's Special Dark, for example. Cheap chocolate has a graininess and usually has a lot of sugar added. This desert isn't overly sweet and it goes to the heart of what I think chocolate is all about."

- 1 1/2 cup strong coffee
- 1/2 oz. Kahlua*
- 1/2 oz. dark rum*
- 10 whole eggs (crack into separate and whisk lightly) * alcohol may be omitted or substituted with Bailey's, Grand Mariner, etc.

Add all ingredients except eggs to a medium size pot. Whisk or stir over low heat until it is blended to a smooth and shiny consistency. Remove from heat.

Stir in eggs. Whisk vigorously until the mixture returns to a shiny color.

Line a deep dish (3 inches) 10 inch round cake pan with aluminum foil to cover bottom and sides. Pour in cake mixture. Bake at 200 degrees, turning every half hour, for two hours or until semi firm when moved slightly. (Note: lower oven temperature if edges start to rise.) Do not invert.

Sunday mornings the Prime Minister's horse would Winnie up the Church-hill.

One is often out-of-harmony when his (her, its) plans come perfectly orchestrated, get decidedly off-key.

Life tends to be fulfilling when one is down in the dumps.

Author's note:

Lunacies like these have been inflicted on my poor wife, children and colleagues for years. They have been greeted by both groans and guffaws - the latter, perhaps, to pacify the punster and offset a further barrage. To its victims, punning can be seen as a disease, since any laughter, however sparse, can be contagious. I hope Post readers will tackle this word-play nonsense with zest, thereby assuring them Eternal Joy and a letter from Ed McMahon.

Time to start grazing through the seed catalogs

NEWARK OUTLOOK

FROM THE STAFF OF THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION OFFICE AT UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

Compared to January, February can't help but be a decent month. I finally feel as if spring will be here again soon. Even before the Big Chill set in, I'd been receiving the new seed and plant catalogs.

I do love to have at least one of everything offered but I must face the reality of limited space in my suburban yard. Regardless of my limitations, I think you'll be tempted by some of these new plants.

The Hybrid Begonia Prelude series has improved performance as a bedding or container plant. Rain and heat should be less damaging to the quality and quantity of blooms compared to some earlier varieties. Neat mounds of medium green leaves grow to about 10 inches height and can tolerate some shade.

Another good choice for containers and bedding use is the Princess Pink hybrid dianthus. Sixth in a series of different colors, the habit of branching nearer the ground prevents this plant from getting too tall and floppy.

Early spring is a good time to set out pansies, and there are two very nice options available for the first time. More heat tolerant than many other violas, the Jewel series is the first F1 hybrid ever offered. Dainty little plants only 5 inches tall bear cheerful flowers within 2 months after seeding. Solid yellow, white and blue and purple color with face markings. Last fall, lots of nurseries responded with good selections of pansies for fall planting. Sky hybrid pansies are a new addition bred for even better frost tolerance to provide bright blossoms late into the season. As an added bonus, these plants should be able to be among the first to respond with flowers again with the return of warm weather. fourteen separate colors make up this series.

I'm an herb fan, and I'm really excited about the new Lady lavender introduction. This plant should bloom the first season from seed and form a mound 10 inches tall and 18 inches wide. Lavender flowers make wonderful sachets and arrangements. I have an antique bowl stuffed with upright, evenly cut stems of dried lavender flowers. Visitors never fail to comment on the simple beauty and heavenly fragrance of the arrangement.

Try this one in a hot sunny flower bed: Gnome White gomphrena, also called globe amaranth. The flowers look like plump white clover blossoms. The 6 inch plants are neat balls of pest-resistant foliage. The flowers are excellent for drying and crafting.

Now let's turn to a feast for the taste buds, and not only the eyes. There are plenty of new introductions for vegetable gardeners, too.

Silver Queen lovers may want to try Silver Choice sweet corn. It matures about two weeks earlier than the old standard and produces 8 inch ears that taste 15 to 20 percent sweeter.

If you're short on space, but want to grow cucumbers, Fanfare may be the perfect choice. This 1994 All-America Selections winner stays compact, and produces through heat that shuts down other varieties. Inbred resistance to six diseases can help reduce need for chemical fungicides, too.

Without a doubt, peppers are popular, whether red hot, sugar sweet or in-between. Starting mild and ending wild are these four new selections: Big Dipper, Banana Supreme, Matador and Garden Salsa. These new peppers show how well breeders are achieving better disease resistance, heat tolerance, earlier fruiting and compactness.

Reserving final comments for the number one garden vegetable, here are the tomatoes. All-American Selection winner Big

This week's author: Jo Mercer

Beef combines the best of large (10 to 12 ounce) fruit size, old-fashioned flavor, disease-resistance and heavy yields.

Smaller, but every bit as pretty and flavorful, both Merced and Santiago produce 9 ounce red-ripe fruits. Each of these varieties carry a long list of disease resistance, including verticillium, fusarium and tobacco mosaic virus.

Now that you're duly inspired start searching for these gems as soon as your favorite garden center sets out its seeds and bedding plants. Call your retailer to request these plants on the shelves. Sometimes the newest offerings sell out quickly at the wholesaler.

Beans add an interesting variety to regional Italian fare

Beans are wonderful things. Some beans belong to the Americas and are now shared with other cultures around the world, the most common being the navy bean, kidney bean, lima bean and string bean.

It's hard to imagine our early colonial culture getting along without the baked-bean pot, or the Latin Americans without their pinto beans, or the Cubans without their black beans. Or Italians without their beans in pasta.

In the region of Tuscany you'll find wonderful bean dishes. However, you'll find the popularity of the bean is common throughout the North.

PASTA E FAGIOLI (Serves 6-8)

A dish of pasta and beans is hearty, to say the least. It's very simple food but also comforting and sustaining. There are as many variations on this dish as there are grandmas in Italy.

- 2 cups cranberry beans—find in Italian markets
- 6 cups cold water
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 2 cups fresh or canned beef stock
- 4 1/2 cups fresh or canned chicken stock
- 3 cloves garlic, crushed
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1 cup tubetti pasta, not cooked
- 1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese

GARNISHES

- Chopped parsley
- Extra-virgin olive oil
- Grated Parmesan cheese

Place the beans and the cold water in a 6-quart pot and bring to a boil.

Cover the pot and turn off the heat. Leave the pot covered on the burner you used. Allow to stand 1 hour.

Drain the beans and return to the pot.

Add the wine and the beef and chicken stock and bring to a boil. Cover and simmer gently for 30 minutes.

Strain out half the beans and puree. Return the pureed beans to the pot.

Add the garlic, tomato paste, parsley and the raw tubetti pasta and simmer gently, uncovered, for 25 to 30 minutes or until the pasta is very tender and the soup is thick. Stir the soup regularly to prevent the pasta from sticking to the bottom of the pot.

Stir in the 1/3 cup of Parmesan cheese.

Garnish with chopped parsley, a drizzle of extra-virgin olive oil and grated Parmesan cheese.

PASTA E FAGIOLI FRIED (makes 8 patties)

This is a clever way to use up leftovers. We had this dish in a very tiny restaurant in Modena, and even though it was indeed made of leftovers, we paid plenty for our lunch!

- 2 cups Pasta e Fagioli (recipe above)—use leftovers that are cold from the refrigerator
- 4 tablespoons flour
- Additional flour for dredging
- Olive oil for pan-frying

Mix the Pasta e Fagioli and 4 tablespoons flour together in a small bowl.

Form into patties 2 1/2 inches in diameter by 1/4-inch thick.

Roll the patties in flour and pan-fry in a non-stick frying pan with a little olive oil until nicely browned on both sides.

Remove and drain on paper towels.

You can also serve the fried patties with fresh or bottled tomato sauce ladled over the top.

PISAREI (Serves 6-8)

This unusually good dish is easy to make. It was offered to me by a wonderful young woman of the Braida winery in Asti.

THE THICK SOUP OR SAUCE

- 3/4 cup cranberry beans—find in Italian markets
- 2 cups cold water
- 1/3 cup chopped pancetta (Italian-style bacon)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 cloves garlic, crushed
- 3/4 cup diced carrots
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 3/4 cup peeled and chopped yellow onion
- 1/2 cup chopped tomato
- 1 1/2 cups peeled, quartered and thinly sliced potato
- 2 cups fresh or canned chicken stock
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley

THE FRUGAL GOURMET

By JEFF SMITH

- 1 bay leaf
- Salt and pepper to taste

THE DUMPLINGS

- 1 cup fine bread crumbs
- 3/4 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1/2 cup cold water
- Additional flour for dusting

GARNISHES

- Butter to taste
- Grated Parmesan cheese

Place the beans in a small saucepan and add 2 cups cold water. Bring to a boil, cover and turn off the burner. Allow the beans to sit for 1 hour and drain.

Heat a 4- to 6-quart pot and add the pancetta and olive oil.

Brown the pancetta and add the garlic, carrots, celery and onion. Saute until the onion is clear.

Add the remaining ingredients for the sauce, except the salt and pepper along with the drained beans and bring to a simmer.

Cover and simmer gently for 50 minutes. Add the salt and pepper to taste.

Combine the dry ingredients for the dumplings in a bowl. Stir in the beaten egg and cold water and knead together to form a smooth dough.

Cover the dough and allow to rest 5 minutes. Cut the dough into 8 equal pieces. Roll each piece of dough out into a snake about 1/4-inch thick. Cut the rolls of dough crosswise into pieces about 3/16-inch thick.

Place the dumplings on a sheet pan and dust them with flour. Bring a large pot of water to a boil and add salt to taste. Boil the dumplings 3 minutes and drain well.

Add the drained dumplings to the pot of sauce and simmer gently for 20 minutes.

Stir gently a couple of times while cooking. Serve in shallow bowls with a pat of butter and grated Parmesan cheese.

CANNELLINI BEAN SALAD (Serves 6 as as salad)

The Italian cannellini bean is very close to our northern white bean, but the texture and flavor are just different enough that I urge you to find the actual cannellini.

They will not mush up as much as our normal white bean and for this reason they make a terrific salad. You will find this dish all over Northern regions of Italy.

- 2 1/2 cups dried cannellini white beans—or use northern white beans (Northern white beans may take a little less time to cook)
- 1/2 medium yellow onion, sliced
- 4 green onions, chopped
- 3 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh rose-

- mary
- 2/3 cup olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 2 tablespoons white-wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup prosciutto (dried ham of Parma) thinly sliced and chopped (optional)

Place the beans in a bowl and add 6 cups fresh cold water. Allow to sit on the counter overnight.

Drain and place in a 6- to 8-quart pot. Add 3 quarts of fresh cold water.

Bring the beans to a boil, cover and simmer 25 to 30 minutes until barely tender.

Drain well and pour the beans out onto a large sheet pan. Allow to cool completely and remove to a large bowl.

Add all the remaining ingredients to the bowl. Toss and allow to marinate for at least 2 hours at room temperature before serving.

Delaware's own Louisa Marks is soloist for concert series

Remember the cliché, "You can't be a prophet in your own land?" Well, I would not like to talk about prophets, but you get the idea. That is all changing this month when "one of our own" is the principal soloist with the Delaware Symphony Orchestra in the Classical Concert Series of February 24, 25 and 26. The soloist is Principal 'Cellist of the DSO, a fine musician, Louisa Marks.

Anyone who knows music in this state knows, and has enjoyed performances by, Louisa Marks. She is not only the principal 'cellist with our symphony, but also of the Opera Delaware Orchestra as well. She is a member of the Wilmington String Ensemble too. Local music lovers know her from her work with the Newark Symphony Orchestra. She has also performed with the Wilmington Community Orchestra and in chamber music concerts at the University of Delaware, West Chester University and the Wilmington Music School. During the summers, she coaches and performs at the Vermont Music and Arts Center of Lyndon State College.

Before coming to The First State, Louisa Marks was a member of the Louisville Symphony, the Florida Symphony and Principal 'Cellist of the Austin Symphony. Her first musical training came at the side of her father, an accomplished 'cellist and music educator in Pennsylvania, and her mother, a violinist who is still instructing in the instrument at the age of 88!

The DSO's February soloist is not satisfied with performance alone, even during the concert season. She gives private instruction in her studio here in Newark and teaches at both the University of Delaware and Wilmington Music School. With a schedule like that I asked if she had time for anything but breathing and sleeping. Shooting back a good laugh she explained that she also enjoys gardening, hiking, swimming and travel. She did admit that with the weather the last few weeks she hadn't been active in her hobbies.

Her family is into its third generation of musicians. Both her sons are musicians. Arthur is a bass player with the Delaware Symphony and Norman is a music educator and tuba player. I didn't ask about the fourth generation!

The program, being offered at the Grand Opera House those three nights at 8 p.m., consists of Maurice Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Jean Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 in E minor, Op. 39. Louisa will join the orchestra for a performance of Camille Saint-Saens' "Cello Concerto No. 1. in A minor, Op. 33. There is something in this program for everyone.

With a famous local musician as soloist, it is most appropriate that the Delaware Symphony offer us a guest conductor for these three concerts. Conducting will be the noted Portuguese master of the baton and composer, Alvaro Cassuto.

Maestro Cassuto is currently Music Director of the Portuguese Symphony Orchestra. In 1969 he won the Koussevitsky Prize at the Tanglewood Festival. Since that time he has conducted on both sides of the Atlantic including the Philadelphia Orchestra, the London Symphony and the radio orchestras of Berlin, Brussels, Milan and Jerusalem.

Our guest conductor has been active with many other orchestras in his career. He has served as Associate Conductor of the Gulbenkian Orchestra, Music Director for the RDP Symphony in Lisbon, University of California Symphony, Rhode Island Philharmonic and the National Orchestra of New York.

The combination of these two performers on the stage of the Grand Opera House with the Delaware Symphony Orchestra will make for three great evenings of music. The DSO's Elizabeth Garcia tells me that there are some tickets in most locations of the house still available, but advises to get orders in quickly for the best choice.

Ticket prices begin at $14 and range to $45. They are obtainable from the symphony box office, 302-656-7374; B&B Tickettown at 302-656-9707 or at the Grand Opera House box office the evening of each performance. When you are getting your tickets for February, you might see what's available for the rest of the season.

Students with ID can save 50% on ticket prices or may participate in the DSO's "Student Rush" when tickets may be purchased at the Grand box office one hour before each concert. I offer a "Tip of The Toman Topper" to the board of our symphony for this outstanding effort to make these concerts available to, and affordable for, students of all ages.

The Delaware Symphony has been bringing us great music for over 60 years. Why don't you go in to the Opera House this month to find out what all the excitement is about?

Enjoy!

St. Mark's avenges loss to Salesianum

Gordon scores 29 points to lead Spartans past Sallies before huge crowd

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

MILLTOWN — Revenge can definitely work as a motivating factor.

The St. Mark's basketball team avenged an early season loss to Salesianum with a 66-56 victory over the Sals last Friday night before an enthusiastic, standing-room-only crowd of 2,400.

The Spartans (11-3), playing a strong 1-3-1 zone on the defensive end, shot a sizzling 59% from the field on the offensive end on their way to the win over their Catholic rival.

"The last game they really frustrated us," said Spartan guard John Gordon, who led all scorers with 29 points. "We thought we'd win easily but we didn't. It really psyched us up for this game."

The game's tempo was set early. St. Mark's, after missing its first three shots, made eight straight shots to build a 17-7 lead after one quarter.

The lead was improved to 26-10 midway through the second quarter.

"We got a lot of good looks at the basket," said St. Mark's Coach Lee Sibley. "We did some things offensively differently than we did the first time we played. We executed well."

"It was a great high school atmosphere. It was the biggest crowd I've seen at a regular season game in this state."

Sallies (10-3) regrouped to cut the lead to 28-17 at halftime. The third quarter, though, was all St. Mark's.

The Spartans, playing most of the game without starting guard Alex Karlson due to a bout with the flu, connected on 7-of-9 shots from the field and 5-of-6 free throws to build a 48-29 lead entering the fourth quarter.

Salesianum, battling hard, cut into the lead in the fourth quarter but was never able to get the gap under eight points.

"We were tentative on offense for the first three quarters," Salesianum Coach Mike Gallagher. "We finally started attacking the zone the way we wanted to in the last quarter."

"[St. Mark's] deserves credit. They played well. They outplayed us for three quarters."

Besides Gordon's 29, St. Mark's got 10 points from Gene Kelly and eight from Brian August.

Matt Vankoski led Salesianum with 16 points.

The win was the first for St. Mark's in its final third of the season stretch.

"It's a great start," Sibley said. "We want to play well going into the tournament. We looked good."

The Spartans played just three games in January and the coach worried about the team being rusty.

"Surprisingly, it helped us," Sibley said. "We got a lot of good practice time in. I think we needed that. It was beneficial."

St. Mark's junior guard led all-scorers with 29 points in the Spartans 66-56 win over arch-rival Salesianum last Friday night before a sell out crowd at St. Mark's High.

St. Mark's grapplers fall to Penn Spartans manage just three wins in the match

By MARTY VALANIA

MILLTOWN — The William Penn High wrestling team showed everyone in Delaware why it's considered the best in the state with a 37-10 win over St. Mark's before over 2,000 fans last Saturday.

The Colonials won all the tight bouts dominating the scoreboard from start to finish.

The first match of the day, considered to be a pivotal one as far as the team score was concerned, was a classic battle between two of the state's top 103 pounders that William Penn's Todd Mergenthaler won 10-9 over Kyle Talley.

The reversal-filled thriller saw Mergenthaler leading 10-9 after two periods. The Colonial freshman, who has only two losses, was able to ride Talley the entire third period to earn the victory. The loss was just the second of the season for Talley, also a freshman.

The win was the first of six straight for William Penn which built a 21-0 lead.

"If you look at the score it was terrible," said St. Mark's Coach Steve Bastianelli. "But there were some tight matches that didn't go our way. Ones that a move here or there would've made a big difference."

The Colonials, who have won 27 straight dual-meets, got decisive victories in the next four weight classes.

R.J. George and William Penn's Tom Jacobs hooked up in another tight bout at 135. George beat Jacobs 6-0 three weeks ago in the Mid-Atlantic Wrestling Classic but this time Jacobs got an overtime takedown to nip George 3-1.

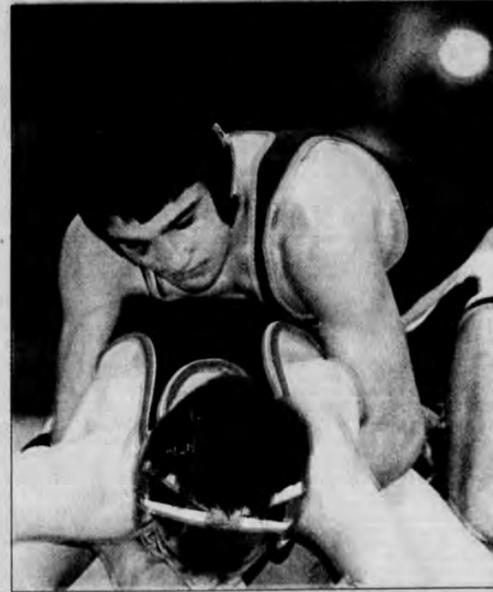

"Who would've thought that would happen," Bastianelli said of the George-Jacobs match. "But when you get into sudden death, anything can happen."

The match symbolized the day for the two teams; everything going well for William Penn and poorly for St. Mark's.

"We didn't wrestle up to the level we were suppose to," the St. Mark's coach said. "I didn't see anything out of [William Penn] to say that they're so much better than us that they're untouchable. But we definitely have to wrestle better — no question about it."

The Spartans did get three straight wins from Mark Bosick, Stan Spoor and Corey Frederick to close to within 21-10.

Local skaters should get our support

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

We all love to root for the home team during the Olympics; this year should be no different.

Part of the home team this year, however, is very close to home. Pairs figure skaters Karen Courtland and Todd Reynolds, who have trained at the University of Delaware for the past six years, qualified for the trip to Lillehammer with a third place showing in the United States Championships last December.

The two have been skating together just three years. That is a very short period of time in the world of pairs figure skating. To qualify for the Olympics in that short of period of time is an amazing feat.

POST GAME

That lack of experience will probably prohibit the pair from earning a medal.

A medal, though, isn't what they are shooting for. These are two athletes are going to Lillehammer to be a part of the Olympic experience — this time.

Both the skaters and their coach, Bob Young, feel a top 10 finish would be a great accomplishment.

Young feels that Courtland and Reynolds will be a pair that is in the medal hunt in the 1998 Olympics. The two are very strong, classical skaters and lack only that experience that the best pairs currently all possess.

A top five finish is just a year or two away according to Young.

So while everyone in America is focused on Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya

Newark High swimmers cruise past Glasgow big dual meet

By JOHN HOLOWKA
NEWARK POST SPORTS WRITER

GLASGOW — Newark High won all but two events as the girls swimming team posted a wide margin of victory over district foe Glasgow Saturday afternoon in a Blue Hen Conference dual-meet.

The Yellowjackets finished the season 13-1, 11-0 against conference teams and are gearing up for this weekend's state swimming championships at Carpenter Sports Hall. Newark's only loss came in mid-December against St. Mark's.

"We're doing as well as we can with all the practices we had that were canceled and the rescheduled meets," said Yellowjacket Coach Dave Arles. "We've all working real hard the last few days getting ready for the state tournament. I figure we'll have to swim very fast and count on our depth."

Karen Mellon, who holds the state's best time this year in the 100 freestyle (55.20), won two individual events for Newark. She clocked 25.96 in the 50 freestyle and won the 100 freestyle in 56.22.

"It was basically for the conference title," said Arles. "(Glasgow was) excited to swim against us and we've been looking forward to them also."

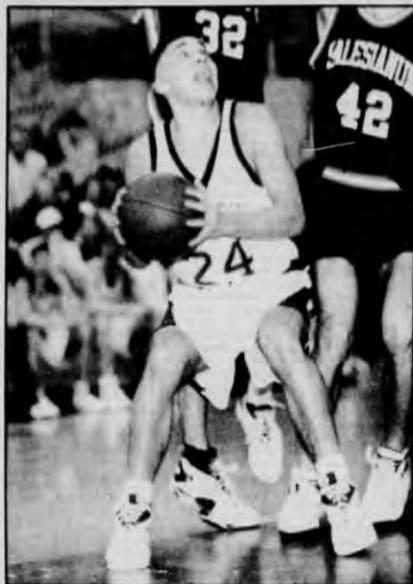

Newark won the 200 medley relay in 2:01.47, and then made a sweep of the relays by winning the 200 freestyle (1:48.07) and the 400 freestyle (3:56.81) events.

"Glasgow has a real good team; it was just bad timing for them," Arles said. "They had to do a lot of rescheduling also and some of their swimmers (on Saturday) were a little tired from a meet that morning. It was unfortunate for them. The meet should have been a whole lot closer."

Newark's Carolyn Firchak won the 200 IM with a time of 2:22.83. Deb Caron took honors in

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

JOHN GORDON - ST. MARK'S

John Gordon wanted to make sure that Salesianum knew he was a good basketball player. Gordon, who had been held to just eight points in a St. Mark's loss to Sallies in January, scored 29 points to help lead the Spartans to a convincing victory over the Sals last Friday night.

"The last [Sallies] game was very frustrating," said the Spartans' junior guard. "We put in a new offense incorporating three guards. There's no way they could stop all three of us."

Gordon was the one unstoppable Friday. He scored from outside, inside, on the fast break, in the half-court offense and from the free throw line. He hit three-point shots and converted layups into three-point plays.

"He played super," St. Mark's Coach Lee Sibley said of Gordon's performance versus Sallies. "He really stepped up his game. He's been waiting for three weeks for this game. He was a little embarrassed after the last game."

"We really got him some good looks at the basket. I think that was the key."

Gordon thought scoring early was a key. "Sometimes when I don't play well early I get frustrated," he said. "I wanted to get off to a good start." That he did.

If the Hens win the game they will clinch the regular season championship and be the top seed in the ECHA playoffs next Friday and Saturday at the tournament, to be held at the University of Delaware's Gold Arena.

Leading the way for the Hens on offense is Bergey, who has tallied 66 points (38 goals, 28 assists). Buell is second on the team in scoring with 58 points while Ron Forcino has added 40 and Chris Bellino 32.

Tim Caum leads the goaltenders with 11 wins.

David Scruggs manned the goal. The Power also remained undefeated in league play with big wins over the Cecil Rebels and CAA Explosion. DiGiacobbe, Dzielak, Haynes, Alexander, Scruggs and mark Rigney scored for the Power.

A bowling column contributed by Blue Hen Lanes Lanes

The Delaware State Young American Bowling Alliance 29th Annual Team Tournament was held at Blue Hen Lanes Jan. 22-23. A total of 122 teams - 488 bowlers participated. Division B yielded both second place and fourth place finishers from Blue Hen. Division B teams compete with other teams averaging in the 585 to 729 range. With 2548 total pins the "Thomas" team comprised of 17-year-old Mike Thomas, 15-year-old Kristin Ciaramicone, Jason Demers -16, and Tara Brouillette -16, won their second-place trophies. Congratulations to these fine young bowlers and to all who participated.

Struggling Hens to host Hartford, UVM

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

The University of Delaware basketball looks to right its ship this weekend with two home games at the Carpenter Center.

The Blue Hens (10-9 overall, 3-4 North Atlantic Conference) completed the first half of its NAC schedule with a 74-67 home loss to Drexel last Saturday. The loss dropped Delaware below .500 in the league with more losses than the last two years combined.

The Dragons, on the power of Saturday's win and Hartford's loss to Vermont, moved into a first place tie with the Hawks with a 6-1 record.

The fifth-place Hens (Maine and New Hampshire are tied for third with 4-3 records) must play Hartford Friday night and Vermont Sunday.

Hartford, minus lottery pick Vin Baker, enters Newark with a 12-7 overall mark while Vermont is 10-9 overall, 1-6 in the NAC. The Hawks are 0-7 in previous trips to the Delaware Valley for its regular season games against Delaware and Drexel. Hartford also plays at Drexel Sunday in a game that will have serious impact on the regular season championship race.

"I'll think we'll prepare like we did the first time," said Blue Hen guard Rob Garner. "We know Hartford's tough but we also know that we can win."

The Hens, after leading much of the game, dropped the first contest 88-76 to Hartford as Mike Bond roughed up Delaware with 31 points and nine rebounds.

"We would like to take Bond out of the game this time," said Delaware Coach Steve Steinwedel. "We don't want him to touch the ball; that way we can keep him from scoring inside."

Vermont's has struggled in league play but its one win was last weekend over Hartford. The Catamounts also bring the NAC's scoring leader Eddie Benton. Benton, who scored 28 in the first meeting with the Hens (an 89-75 Delaware win) has posted an impressive 31.0 points per game scoring average.

This time through the league, Delaware will play four of the seven games at the Carpenter Center where it has posted an 18-3 record over the past three seasons.

"Hopefully, playing at home will make a difference," Steinwedel said. "We played well enough [against Hartford] on the road to win but we just didn't make the plays down the stretch."

Delaware Chiefs lose first

The Delaware Chiefs semiprofessional ice hockey team lost their first game of the season, 4-3 to Molson Ice, last Saturday.

The Molson Ice scored two late goals to come back and earn the win.

Goaltender Pat Diossi made 43 saves in the game.

Scoring for the Chiefs were Jay Rosser, Pete Bovankovich and Chris Kerns.

The Chiefs leave March 10 to appear in the Lake Placid Cup Tournament in Lake Placid, N.Y.

For more information on the Delaware Chiefs call 731-2924.

St. Mark's falls to William Penn

► WRESTLE, from 1B

However, William Penn's Deon Jenkins got the Colonials back on track with a 9-2 decision over Phil

Manolakos at 160.

William Penn closed out the match with three more wins, including Damian Craighton's pin at 171, to provide the final margin.

Despite the lopsided margin, St. Mark's did fare better than Dover and against the Colonials - a margin that may go a long way in determining the second seed in the state's dual-meet tournament at the end of the season.

Local skaters shoot for top 10

► POST GAME, from 1B

Harding, we can keep an eye on Courtland's and Reynolds' quest for the top 10.

It's not a medal but it's a good start for these two as they enter the international scene.

More importantly, the two are great people.

Both are friendly, articulate and hard-working.

Courtland, for example, works 50 hours per week running her own entertainment and decorating company. Reynolds is popular among other skaters and in the fitness club where he trains.

So reserve your spot on the soon-to-be-crowded Courtland and Reynolds bandwagon. These are two people that deserve all the support they can get.

St. Mark's host big crowds

St. Mark's High seem to be the place to be last weekend.

Over 4,000 people poured into the gym for two good high school events - the St. Mark's-Salesianum basketball game and the St. Mark's-William Penn wrestling match.

Friday night's basketball game was packed to the rafters. All the seats in the county's largest gym were taken and there were many people standing. In all, over 2,400 fans were in the gym.

Saturday's big wrestling match drew about 2,000 fans as well.

St. Mark's Athletic Director Tom Rosa and his staff did a good job of keeping the large crowds in control both days.

It's nice to see that there is a way to have big athletic events without fights or crowd-control problems.

DELAWARE'S OLYMPIANS

DELAWARE DUO HEADS TO LILLEHAMMER

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

When watching the Winter Olympics, most people love to root for the home team. This year Newark will have its own home team in the form of Karen Courtland and Todd Reynolds.

Courtland and Reynolds, who train at the University of Delaware and have resided in the area for the past six years, will compete in the pairs figure skating competition at the XVII Winter Olympiad, which gets underway this weekend in Lillehammer, Norway.

Skating together for just three years, a very short time in the world of figure skating, the pair has made a strong impression on the national skating scene. A third place finish in the United States Championships last December in Detroit qualified the Courtland and Reynolds for the trip to Lillehammer.

It will mark their first appearance at an international event.

"It's like a dream come true," Courtland said last week after a practice session at the University of Delaware Ice Arena. "I've worked my whole life for this; it's almost mind boggling!"

"All of my life it's been a dream to go to the Olympics," said Reynolds, who is a sturdy 6-foot, 190-pounder. "To finally realize its happening blows me away."

Both skaters have been preparing for this moment most of their lives. Reynolds first laced up skates when he was two-years-old. He and his mother would awake at 4 a.m. and drive 41 miles to a rink for before-school practice sessions.

Courtland, a diminutive 5-foot, 100 pounder originally from upstate New York, was introduced to skating at the age of six and doesn't regret all the time spent training.

The pair views its well-earned spot on the Olympic team not as a culmination, but as the start of a new dream.

"It's the beginning of a quest," said Reynolds, a 27-year-old who skated singles for many years before teaming up with Courtland. "It takes many years for pairs to develop the kind of experience necessary to be in the hunt for a medal. This is just our first international competition. We just want to make a name for ourselves and start working up the ladder."

A medal may not be in the cards for the duo, but that doesn't dampen the excitement the two share.

"Everyone that's been [to the Olympics] told me it really doesn't hit you until your standing at the opening ceremonies and crying," said Courtland, a 23-year-old who runs an entertainment and decorating company to help cover her training costs. "It's suppose to be very emotional. Everything we've worked for for an entire life is right there."

According to the pair's coach, Bob Young, a top-10 finish would be a tremendous accomplishment.

"It's incredible what they've accomplished in just three years," Young said. "We just want them to go there, compete and enjoy themselves. This is their first-time in an international event and they should have fun."

"Within a few years, though, they could be a top five (in the world) pair. Nothing is missing from their package except experience together."

Young feels that the Delaware pair fills a void in American skating.

"They are very classical," he said. "They're not a bee-bop pair. They are much like the European skaters; something we don't see in this country."

The two look forward to representing an entire nation.

"It's a big responsibility," said Reynolds, a 27-year-old from Houston, Tex., "To represent the United States is to be one of the best in the world."

"We've had a lot of people coming up and patting us on the back and telling us that they'll be thinking of us and rooting for us. It's a neat experience."

REQUIRED ELEMENTS IN PAIRS' ROUTINES

There are eight required elements for this year's original program — one double overhead lift; one double twist lift; solo double jumps; solo spins, with one foot change and at least one position change; pair spin combination with one foot change and at least one position change; one death spiral; a spiral step sequence of a different nature.

JUMPS

Waltz - A simple jump involving a half-revolution in the air, taken from a forward outside edge and landed on the back outside edge of the other foot.

Loop - A jump in which the skater takes off from a back outside edge, turns one revolution in the air and lands on the same back outside edge. As with most jumps, a double involves two turns, a triple three turns in the air.

Toe Loop - A jump taken off from and landed on the same back outside edge, just as in a loop. But the skater kicks the toe pick of the free leg into the ice upon takeoff, providing added power.

Toe Walley - Similar to a toe loop except the takeoff is from the inside edge.

Flip - A jump taken off from a back inside edge with the toe pick of the free leg dug into the ice, and landed on a back outside edge.

Lutz - A toe jump similar to the flip, taken off from a backward outside edge with the toe pick of the free leg dug into the ice. The skater enters the jump skating in one direction and concludes the jump skating in the opposite direction. Usually performed in the corners of the rink, the jump is named after Alois Lutz, who first completed it in Vienna in 1918.

Salchow - The skater takes off from the back inside edge of one foot and lands backward on the outside edge of the opposite foot from which the skater took off. Named for its originator, Sweden's Ulrich Salchow, the 1908 Olympic champion.

Axel - A combination of the waltz and loop jumps. A simple Axel is 1 1/2 revolutions. The most difficult jump because of the extra half-turn, it is the only jump begun from a forward outside edge. It is landed on the back outside edge of the opposite foot. The jump is named for its inventor, Norway's Axel Paulsen.

SPINS

Simple Spin - The rotation of the body in one place on the ice. Various spins include the back, fast or scratch, sit and layback.

► GLOSSARY, from 3

PAIR MOVEMENTS

Death Spiral - In perhaps the most dramatic move in skating, the man, acting as the center of a circle, holds tightly to the hand of his partner and pulls her around him. The woman, gliding on one foot, achieves a position almost horizontal to the ice.

Lifts - Any maneuver in which the man lifts the woman off the ice. The man holds his partner above his head with one hand.

Hand-to-hand Loop Lift - The man raises his partner, who is in front of him and facing the same direction, above his head. She remains facing the same direction, in the sitting position with her hands behind her, while her partner supports her by the hands.

Hydrant Lift - The man throws his partner over his head while skating backward, rotates one turn and catches his partner facing him.

Platter Lift - The man raises his partner overhead with his hands resting on her hips. She is horizontal to the ice, facing the back of the man in a platter position.

Star Lift - The man raises his partner by her hip, from his side into the air. She is in a scissor position, with either hand touching his shoulder, or in a hands-free position.

Toe Overhead Lift - The man swings his partner from one side of his body, around behind his head, and into a raised position. She is facing the same direction as the man, in a split position.

Throws - The man lifts the woman into the air and throws her away from him. She spins in the air and lands on one foot.

Twist - The man throws the woman into the air, she spins either twice or three times and he catches her at the landing.

Medal hopes

U.S. looks for record medal haul

By FRED BAYLES

ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

When it comes to U.S. medal hopes at the Lillehammer Olympics, it's a case where familiarity breeds contentment.

Thanks to the unique two-year interval in the Winter Games, all but three of the U.S. athletes who garnered 11 medals at the Albertville Games will be returning, many at the top of their form.

And in addition to well-known names like Blair, Boitano, and Kerrigan, a handful of top-ranked competitors and potent newcomers have a chance at finishing on the medals stand.

Past performances and present predictions point to a team poised to break the 12-medal mark first set in 1932 and tied in 1980.

"It isn't wild speculation," said Mike Moran, spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee. "If we would repeat our success in 1992, our strength in events like the luge, bobsled and freestyle skiing would put us over the top."

U.S. women led the way in 1992 with nine medals. All return this year with the exception of gold medal figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi.

Moran said the two-year cycle benefits the U.S. team perhaps more than other countries.

"Bonnie Blair and Dan Jansen are good examples," he said. "They are really at the peak of their careers. If we were waiting for 1996, they wouldn't be around."

Dan Jansen never won an Olympic medal in speed skating, but that's about all he hasn't won. The World Cup champion in the 500 meters since 1991 showed he is ready for Lillehammer by setting a world's record last month.

Short track racing looks promising, too.

Cathy Turner defends her 1992 gold medal and anchors a strong women's relay team, which took silver last time out. Eric Flaim, a 1988 silver medalist in the 1,500 meter long track, has switched to short track competition in individual and team events.

The U.S. team has other hopes on ice.

Before the strange events of the last month, the U.S. figure skating squad seemed a good bet for medals. Now with the attack on Kerrigan, and possible involvement of Harding, could spin performances in many different directions.

There is cautious optimism for the U.S. hockey team.

Head coach Tim Taylor of Yale did things differently this Olympic preseason. He kept essentially the same squad together, earning strong showings in exhibition games.

"We're young and we have to survive on youthful enthusiasm," Taylor said. "We're going to have refreshingly excited kids."

Beyond figure skating and hockey lie some potential surprises.

The U.S. luge team is the strongest ever. Wendel Suckow's world championship last season made him the first U.S. slider to place in the top three. Olympic veteran Duncan Kennedy has medaled in every competition this year.

Cammy Myler, fifth place finisher in the women's competition at Albertville, will return.

Hopes are even higher for the U.S. bobsled team, which has not seen a medal in 30 years.

Expectations are also high for the freestyle skiers.

Donna Weinbrecht is back to defend her 1992 gold medal in the moguls following a year of excruciating rehabilitation from knee surgery. She has come back strong with gold medals at her first two World Cup events.

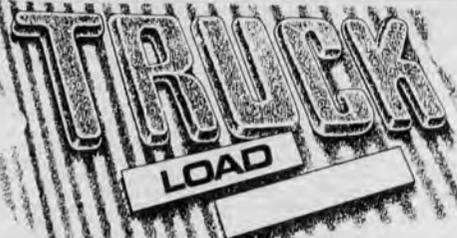

The men's aerials team is particularly strong with World Cup champion Trace Worthington and fourth place finisher Kris Feddersen.

There is less optimism about the Alpine and Nordic events, given the usually strong European teams, particularly the Norwegians with their home-field advantage.
