

EDUCATIONAL DISCUSSION

MR. WASHBURN REPLIES TO MRS. DAWSON

Editor of The Post: It is gratifying to note that those favoring the present selection of subjects for instruction have an advocate in Mrs. E. W. Dawson. I had begun to think that, with the exception of Prof. Conover, the numerous supporters of the present courses might not be willing to even tell us why they oppose what some of us regard as progress in education. Mrs. Dawson, a graduate of a normal school, where she learned much as to teaching, a teacher of the highest class, a graduate of a New York Normal College, where she learned how to instruct teachers in the art of teaching, is probably as well fitted to defend the present system of education as any who reside in this part of the country. Though she speaks of herself as a "house mother and housekeeper," she is learned in all the arguments which may be used to defend a variety of education which has so long been a part of our method of taking the time of children in the schools.

She writes: "A French educator says that 'the education of a people is at once the consequence of all that it believes and the source of all that it is destined to be.' Of the real education this is true. Of education as it ought to be, as I feel it will some time be, it is true. Of education as it is in Newark how far indeed it is from truth! Is education, as now the topics and courses are made up, 'the consequence of all we believe?' Or is it the consequence of what the Board of Education believes, or of what the men who control politics and thus by subtle but not less sure methods, control the selection of the members of those boards believe? Is there a common belief of the whole people which flows in the selection of Latin, for girls who have not acquired a knowledge of household sanitation, who will never see a college but will soon be farmer's wives, trying to cook dinners while they hush a crying child, or plan economies for tomorrow's meals? Is there a general belief which has as a consequence a course in plane geometry for a boy who will in a few months be on a farm? Is Latin so important a part of that education that it is a 'source of all we are destined to be' that it should be allowed to crowd out the development of character, the knowledge of useful things and of our national literature which might be gained while Latin is being studied by boys and girls who are soon to be in shops, stores and farm houses? The real education is one thing; the course which the Delaware State Board of Education is offering is quite another. Mrs. Dawson recommends to 'A Parent' that he asks that board what to do with his son, as to education. The answer of that board is before us, and it would be extremely unlikely to give any other. The answer is the present inadequate and old-world courses of the high schools and of the classical department of the college located in Newark. If the board believed something else better they would provide it. Little would one be likely to gain by asking information of the creators of the list of studies we now have?

Mrs. Dawson refers to my personal experience as a reason why I should write upon education, implying, at least, that having taken a course in a college where the classical course was taught I am myself an example of the value of that educational course which I oppose. The argument is not valid, for if it were it would be true that it, in that college, I had been compelled to study the Paris fashions from the year 1720 to the year 1793, then the system which included that course must be rightly constructed insofar as that study is concerned. I did not gain anything of any appreciable value by two years of Greek and I gave my books on Greek away at the end of the course, and have never regretted that I did so. I had a part of a year of Latin but no persistence I escaped taking more.

I do not think I gained anything, worth the time consumed, from any of several studies I took in high school and in college. From certain other studies I gained much. These studies, and others not yet taught in schools, I value highly. I am not condemning colleges and high schools; I am advocating the idea that they be made useful. As to the education I have attained, I gained much of whatever ability I have to express my thoughts clearly, think correctly and arrive at unprejudiced opinions, an ability far from perfect, not in education institutions, or from classical studies, but from years as a street car conductor, when I was obliged to know things accurately and formulate my thought and speech quickly; from years in a shoe factory where I learned the meaning of co-operation and democracy. My ability to write so that I produce editorials which are accepted, I gained largely from instructions received from that foreboding and not over complimentary person known in newspaper offices as the managing editor. From the time when I left the common school where I had gained instruction in reading, writing, simple arithmetic, geography and that carefully edited half-truth known as American history, until I was twenty years old, I learned more from outside reading of my own selection, from shopmates, personal friends, shop discipline, street car work, temporary employments in various cities and a real touch with a very real world, than I did from my years in high school and in higher institutions. This need not have been true had the educational courses included the things every boy and young man ought to know from school studies and from the work included in school courses.

Mrs. Dawson says: "The educators, the clergy or any one class do not dictate or 'authoritatively determine' what the people shall have as to education. Barring the more or less uneven influence of the politicians, the people have gotten in every age what they have demanded." She overlooks the fact that there is a wide difference between what the people would like to have and that which they demand. A hopelessness, born of disappointments, is on all peoples and they have many wishes they do not make effective by determined action. They leave the boards of education to 'authoritatively determine' what we shall have. The courses are, in fact, so determined. If the board in Delaware decided tomorrow to drop the history of Rome from the high school courses that study would be dropped, and that would probably end the matter. Mrs. Dawson may see an illustration of 'authoritative determination' in Iron Hill. Cecil county has for many years had a common school system, and it has been conducted in a way to make it one of the poorest systems of popular education north of Baltimore. There are no compulsory attendance laws, the school managers are selected by politicians and those selected choose subordinate officials. There is a general lack of efficiency and a large proportion of the country children are out of school so much they cannot possibly receive any education worthy the name. Yet there is no way short of a political revolution by which this condition can be remedied. The Republicans have not thought it best to even declare for that first essential of good schools, compulsory attendance. The Democrats do not favor it; no other party has any power. There is no way by which the people can share in the work of making the schools of Cecil county better schools. Yet Mrs. Dawson desires better schools; she is competent to share the work of directing school activities as any person in the county, yet she and other competent persons, and the mass of the people, have nothing whatever to do with the actual work of selecting the courses of study, or with school work. No one who has met the people of Cecil, intelligent, progressive and loving education as the great majority of parents do, can doubt that they want better schools than they are getting. In Mrs. Dawson's own county the best material for school management is neglected, the boards 'authoritatively determine' and there seems no way to do anything about it as long as the mill owners and other large employers prefer ignorance for the children of the State in order that they may use child labor to replace adult labor and drive the laboring man from the work by hiring his own wife and children, who are underpaid and overworked.

The statement that the people get what they want needs to be revised. 'Some people' would be the correct term; and 'some people' are wealthy people with fashionable ideas, who wish a fashionable, classical education and who are supported in that wish by many excellent people who have received their ideas, not from the study of what the people want, but from a study of what teachers, equipped only to teach a classical course, say.

As to the dominance of the clergy in education; from what I know of the matter it is true, in spite of the citation Mrs. Dawson makes of Copernicus (who was indeed great in science and was indeed a priest, who delayed for thirteen years, through fear of the clergy, the publication of his great contradiction of classical conclusions), that just in proportion as the control of education in any nation is taken from the clergy does education advance in usefulness and breadth. From the days when the Egyptian priests laid their clumsy hands on art, so that the inscriptions on their temple walls remained for unknown centuries unimproved and without grace or beauty; from the days when the clergy punished by burning to death, the scientists who dared dissect a dead body, from the days when the discoverer of the circulation of the blood was in danger of death and fled his native land to escape the wrath of the clergy, from the days when Mather, president of Harvard College, preached a belief in witchcraft and lied to support his theories, from the days when the solid body of the Christian clergy opposed the teaching of the scientific truths discovered by Darwin and supported by Huxley and other great thinkers, to these times, when the clergy are almost solidly arrayed behind the classical education that clutters the minds of aspiring youths until it is too late to prepare them for the practical life, the influence of the clergy upon education, speaking of the clergy as a body, has been retarding and injurious. Today Spain and Portugal, illiterate but aspiring, illustrate what church domination produces in secular affairs. Were doctors or lawyers allowed domination they would produce different, but still evil, results. That an occasional clergyman or priest has written well on education, or done much for education, is true; but it is also true that the higher civilization rises in a state the less the clergy as a whole are allowed to dominate education.

That Mrs. Dawson has given some space to a description of the Montessori method of instruction gives me much satisfaction. It is a subject of the very highest importance and should be better understood. All friends of education wish to know more of it, and I hope she may give the readers of The Post a further description of it. Last I be misunderstood, I may add, in closing, a note: I am not opposed to religion or to the clergy insofar as they serve religion and humanity. I am opposed to certain ideals and practices in education and to certain assumptions, as, for example, that the clergy are better fitted to judge what is best than any other man of the same quality of mind and character.

POLITICS

The recent announcements in the political world have added zest to the local State campaign, and the action of the Republican convention of next Tuesday will be watched with more than usual interest. The ticket will be supported or resented just in proportion to the personnel of the ticket named and the clearness of the platform adopted.

Never in the history of the party in this State has it been so vital that a strong ticket be named. No candidate should let his personal ambitions stand in the way of party success. In fact, no true Republican whose name has been mentioned as a candidate will take any personal part in the convention. Rather will he urge simply an expression of the judgment of the delegates and gladly abide their decision. The attempt to pledge delegates to one man at the sacrifice of the whole ticket and party success should be strongly resented by the delegates as it will be by the voters at large.

To date there is not enough publicity of the actions of party workers. Especially is this true locally. Visitors at this office, who take no active interest in politics other than to loyally support the ticket, are expressing dissatisfaction at the silence on political matters. Readers of The Post expect to find local political news and party leaders here would do well for party success by consenting to acquaint the voters with more details of the campaign.

EDUCATIONAL ARTICLES

The article on Education, by Mr. Washburn, in answer to Mrs. Dawson, appearing in another column, will likely bring out a defense by others of the cultural trend. We join Mr. Washburn in our request that Mrs. Dawson give in more detail the working of the Montessori method.

In the People's Column will be noted a request for some of our professional educators to give their views. With a wide discussion of these educational matters public opinion would be aroused. And this is just what is needed—get the people thinking.

Some of our High School teachers should take part in this discussion and add to the general good. Throw away this modesty of not wishing to appear in public print. Give the public the benefit of your observations and experience.

"The only way to finally win is to get the politicians at-guessing by being honest. They can't understand it."

Although the recent rains have kept the streets reasonably clean, the Board of Health should strongly urge Council to continue the flushing of the gutters. This is the danger season of the year and suspicious reports are increasing daily.

SOME SOUND POLITICAL ADVICE

Editorial presented by a Post reader

We do not presume to advise our readers as to how they should vote, that is, as to the person for whom they should vote, or the party with which they should be affiliated. We have no hesitation in discussing at the proper time the underlying principles of government, but the particular method of applying these principles in either case is the job of the reader and not ours. For this he is responsible and not we. None the less we think we are competent, from long observation and a good deal of experience in dealing with men, to make some suggestions that will add to the peace of mind of our readers and contribute to the public welfare. This advice will be mainly in the form of "don't's."

Don't believe a word you hear or read reflecting on the private life of any candidate from the president down. The story may possibly be true; but there is a strong possibility that ninety-nine times out of a hundred it is a lie put out solely for the purpose of defeating him, and you don't have the time to investigate. We have made it a rule for nearly forty years to treat as a falsehood every story affecting the private life of a candidate, that was started during a campaign; and we don't believe we ever made a mistake in this.

Don't try to convince any man whose mind is evidently made up on any political subject. Whether he is right or wrong, he is affected so far as you are concerned with hardness of heart; and the more you argue with him, the more hard-hearted he becomes. Just save your breath. If he insists on convincing you, and your heart is practically as hard as his, turn the subject to the fall seeding of alfalfa or clover, or the value of sweet clover as a pasture plant, or the probable price of corn this fall, or the price of feeding steers. If he insists that the nomination of "Dear Will" was stolen, let him think so. If he insists that the future of the nation rests with "Dear Theodore," let him think so. If he insists that Woodrow is the perfect flower of modern civilization, let him continue to so think. It will do him good to develop an ideal. You cannot convince any of these men unless you speak in parables, as Jesus did when His enemies had made up their minds that He was in league with Beelzebub; and even then you may fail. If you get mad in arguing with those whose minds are made up they will believe you are in league with a political Beelzebub.

Don't imagine that the country is going to the bowwows if your candidate is not elected. These cyclonic political storms, sometimes with tornado effects in their action, will sweep over the political waters. A good deal of damage will be done to some political reputations; there may be some wreckage; but the outcome will be a better citizenship. The Mississippi valley is watered by cyclonic action. Without these great circular atmospheric movements, which pump water from the gulf and distribute it over the land, it would be a desert. Storms always do more or less damage, whether on land or sea; but the final result alike on land or sea, is blessing. So it is in politics. After the storm the grass will grow, the birds sing, the corn shed its pollen on the silk, the valleys wave with grain and the cattle fatten on a thousand hills, no matter who is elected. The Lord reigns and makes even the political wrath of man to praise Him.

Don't alienate your friends because you differ with them in politics. There is particular danger of this now, when political parties are being rent asunder and realignment is under way. What makes a man worthy to be your friend is not his opinion on the tariff or on reciprocity, or the integrity of Taft or Roosevelt or Wilson, but his honesty, his integrity; not his head power mainly, but his heart power; his sterling manhood. We have had no trouble in finding such friends among standpatters, among Progressives, among Democrats, among Socialists, so-called, among Catholics, among Protestants, and among men affiliated with no church. We plead with the Democrat not to lose confidence in his Democratic friend who cannot see his way clear to vote for Woodrow, and with the Republican not to lose confidence in his old-time Republican friend who thinks it his duty to stand by "my dear Will," or the one who feels he must support "my dear Theodore." Friendship is too sacred a thing to be sacrificed for a difference of political opinion.

Don't imagine that this campaign will usher in the political millennium. It is after all only a skirmish in the age-long warfare between right and wrong, in which good men often get on the side which they think for a time is right, but which in the end proves to be wrong, themselves being the judges; and in which bad men sometimes get on the right side for the time being, and bring the cause into disrepute. There will be wrongs to right after November and after other Novembers for hundreds of years, even until the end of time.

Therefore, don't waste your breath. You know it will be wasted, if you but stop to think. Don't lose confidence in your friends who do not see it as you do. Make up your mind conscientiously where your duty lies, and do it "with malice toward none and charity toward all."

Pomona Grange will meet at Brandywine Springs Park on August 29th. An excellent program is being arranged.

The W. C. T. U. will meet next Friday evening at 7.30 at the home of Miss Belle Mote. Plans are progressing for the supper which will be held in the banquet room of the Opera House on September 12th.

PEOPLES' COLUMN

X QUOTES X ON EDUCATION

Mr. Editor: Isn't there a member of the College Faculty or the local Board of Education who will give his views on education? Modesty prompts Mr. Washburn to style himself as one of the common people while Mrs. Dawson pleads only as a housewife and mother.

Let's hear from these College men. I know it's vacation but their salary runs all the year. Where are the champions (what's the feminine for champion) of culture in the New-Century Club?

As a spur to action, I submit the following quotation:

"There was an idea in the olden time—and it is not yet dead—that whoever was educated ought not to work—that he should use his head and not his hands. Graduates of colleges were ashamed to be found engaged in manual labor, in plowing fields, in sowing or gathering grain. To this manly kind of independence they preferred the garter and the precarious existence of an unappreciated poet, borrowing their money from their friends, and their ideas from the dead."

"The educated regarded the useful as degrading—they were willing to stain their souls to keep their hands white. The object of all education should be to increase the usefulness of man—usefulness to himself and others. Every human being should be taught that his first duty is to take care of himself, and to be self-respecting he must be self-supporting."

"To live on the labor of others, either by force which enslaves, or by the cunning which robs, or by borrowing or begging, is wholly dishonorable. Every man should be taught some useful art. His hands should be educated as well as his head. He should be taught to deal with things as they are—with life as it is. This would give a feeling of independence, which is the firmest foundation of honor or character. Every man knowing that he is useful admires himself."

Name the author and go for him, X.

REPUBLICAN AT SEA

Editor Newark Post, Dear Sir: Of late years, in this representative district, both the Republican and Democratic parties have nominated candidates for representative in the General Assembly without any regard for their fitness, in fact seemingly in spite of their unfitness. This condition should not continue to obtain; men of force and ability must be sent to Dover to secure for this district the consideration to which we are entitled, and to place before the Legislature in a sympathetic and just manner the needs of Delaware College.

We assume that the Republican party will nominate, as usual, a weak sister, and therefore the only hope left, is, that the Democrats will make a good selection of their candidate; for the immediate present, owing to the withdrawal of Mr. Hossinger, they seem to be without one.

If the assumption as to the Republican nominee may be accepted, the writer, as a life long Republican, suggests to the Democrats of this district the name of David C. Rose, as a broad minded, aggressive, and able man, who would represent us as we need to be represented once again, and a Democrat to whose support we can guarantee fifty Republican votes.

Mr. Rose, if nominated, will go to Dover, and he will bring back to this district what we are entitled to receive. He is tried and true, a worker and a leader.

We hope the better element will control this nomination and nominate this real man in spite of the petty jealousies and two-cent would-be politicians which permeate the Democratic organization of this district. Republican.

WHAT'S GOING ON

Mr. Editor: As a Republican paper, why isn't there more political news in your columns. The silence of White Clay politics is amazing. The gum shoe play for leadership will not make for success. I am a voter and have taken no active part in politics except perhaps a little personal work among some of my friends. This is a Republican year for White Clay if we get at it. The Democrats are divided between Saulsbury and Handy and it's our chance. Republican.

Youth And Age

(From Collier's Weekly.)

Youth has its advantages, but so has age, although these latter are not so easily understood. Color and passion should fade not into dullness, but into pictures as lovely as those of twilight or the star-set night. Age should be the time when with an eye made quiet by the power of harmony, and the deep power of joy.

We see into the life of things. In the greatest, perhaps, of all English meditative poems are celebrated these gains; the mind to hear the still, sad music of humanity, with its power to chasten and subdue; the presence that disturbs us with the joy of elevated thoughts; he sense sublime Of something far more deeply interfused.

Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns.

Parents, if they are fortunate in their children and in themselves, combine the advantages of maturity with those that have gone. They know again, with love, but without storm, the interests of all the human stages. They live in toys, in romance, in ambition, but with selfishness purged away, with hopes purified, with hearts that seek for the young only such experiences as shall lend value and beauty to them always.

Where Printing is done

PRINTING vs. Printin

You have often heard the expression "I've got a little 'printin'" to have done and I run down to the job office and have it struck off."

Of course, there are lots of shops that do "printin'" and are rightfully called job offices. And too, if you want a little "printin'" "struck off," they are the places to go.

But if you are in need of printing—that is printing, beginning with a big "P" and ending with a "g" it's most likely that you will go to a place like the Post Press, whose shop is on Main street in the town of Newark—the State College, another well-known institution is just across the street.

This is not a job office and we do not strike off any "printin'."

This is a printing shop where printing is considered a work of art and not just a "job of printin'."

The devil—a printer's devil—can "strike off a few" on any old press. But to do a piece of work that will attract notice worthy of a gentleman, requires a careful man at a well-appointed and well-selected case of type. Next a good press (our Colt's runs perfectly), good ink, not lamp-black—that's for printin'—and then an artist to make that form ready. Then a good pressman who has an eye for accurate register. Let the devil slip sheet it, put it in the drying rack. Then you have a piece of real printing—one, two, three or four colors, we do this. A piece of "printin' struck off" is a sad attempt at one color and then every sheet is different.

One thing we forgot—it must be good stock.

This costs money, you say. Oh, yes, any work really worth while costs money. But do you know it costs you but very little more than "printin' struck off."

And there's lots of satisfaction in having a piece of printing done instead of a "job of printin'" struck off. And it pays big returns.

All really successful business men have printing instead of "printin'." You judge a man and so do we, by his stationery.

How's yours?

We don't "strike off" any letter heads and envelopes—but we can print some fine ones.

GAMES OF THE WEEK

The game scheduled between Newark and Oxford on the local grounds last Saturday, had to be called off on account of rain. The Elk Mills-Northeast game was also postponed because of rain, and this left but two games played in the Tri-County League. Havre de Grace won from the leaders, Port Deposit, 2 to 0, and Aberdeen took Elkton's measure in a ten inning game, 6 to 5. The standing of the clubs in the league is as follows:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Port Deposit	12	6	.666
Havre de Grace	12	7	.631
Aberdeen	11	7	.611
Newark	9	8	.529
Elkton	9	9	.500
Oxford	8	9	.470
Elk Mills	5	12	.293
Northeast	5	13	.278

Preparing for Fast Finish.

Although rain interfered with the Newark-Oxford game on Saturday, the locals really made a slight gain by being idle. The defeat of Port Deposit by Havre de Grace, cut down the margin of the leaders over Newark to less than three games. The defeat of Elkton by Aberdeen also helped as it gives Newark undisputed possession of fourth place or the rear end of the first division.

There was much disappointment because of the rain on Saturday as the prospects were that one of the largest crowds of the season would be on hand to see the game. Oxford, because of the gentlemanly conduct of the players, is the most popular team in the league with the Newark fans, and the fact that since the first of last month this club has been going at a faster pace than any other team in the league made it a double attraction.

The work of the locals is cut out for them from now until the end of the season if they expect to give the leaders a good fight for the pennant. While two and one-half games does not seem much, yet it is a good lead this late in the season, and Newark will have to play a steady and strong game all the time to eat it down.

One thing can be said to the advantage of Newark, and that is the fact that at the present time the team is stronger and going better than at any time since the bell sounded last spring. "Vic" Willis is now in condition, and it is safe to say that he will win practically every game that he pitches from now on if the club will only but some back of him. He will likely pitch most of the remainder games.

Scott Gregg has also strengthened the club, and put more confidence in the players as they now realize that anything that goes near centre field will be taken care of. When Scott finds his batting eye it will also make a great difference in the play of the locals as he is a natural hitter, and will no doubt break up some of the games. As it is he has played but few games this year. He is much enthused, however, and can be depended on to put up a crack game all the time.

Newark has eleven more games to play. This includes two postponed games, one with Aberdeen and one with Oxford. A double header will be played with Aberdeen when that club visits Newark the last of the week, but as Oxford is not scheduled to return here again the double header with that club will likely be played in Oxford.

To win the pennant it will no doubt be necessary for Newark to win at least eight of the remaining eleven games. That would be going some, but it is what will have to be done to capture the flag. The fact that a majority of the games are scheduled away from home makes it all the harder to accomplish. So far Newark has gotten the bad end of the luck, and has lost a number of games by one run. This luck is bound to turn, and with the good end of the luck from now on, it is possible that the local boys may counter home with the pennant flag, and at any rate every fan should root hard until every chance of it is gone.

Now that Newark has gotten a taste of league baseball, it has been proven that it is the best baseball town in the Tri-County League. According to all reports the attendance has been much larger here than in the other towns, and the local organization will have a good balance at the close of the season.

Penn Mar League.

The game between the Newark Field Club team of the Penn-Mar League, and the Elkton club of the same league, which was scheduled to be played at Elkton, was also called off because of rain. Newark is now tied with Iron Hill for first place and is going strong. The club is in better shape and much stronger than at any time during the season, and if it fails to win out there will be a number of disappointed fans.

NATIONAL TUBERCULOSIS DAY

Churches and religious societies to the number of at least 100,000 will be urged to give special attention to the prevention of tuberculosis on Sunday, October 27, or on some day during the week preceding or the week following that date. This season has been set apart and designated as the Third National Tuberculosis Day by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which makes this announcement.

Tuberculosis Day was originally set on April 28, but was postponed because of a conflict with Conservation Sunday of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which was held on that date. The observance of Tuberculosis Day in the fall this year will be utilized only for the general education of church-goers on consumption, but also for the purpose of interesting them in the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Every one of the 600 or more anti-tuberculosis associations allied with the National Association will be urged to promote Tuberculosis Day in their respective communities. While last year over 50,000 churches observed this occasion, it is expected that this year this number will be doubled. Millions of circulars and other forms of literature will be distributed. The support of every religious denomination will be asked for.

That tuberculosis is a serious problem among church congregations is evidenced by statistics which the National Association gathered last year, which show that 10 per cent of all deaths among church members are caused by tuberculosis. Based on these figures and on the mortality statistics of the Census Bureau, over 52,000 of the 33,000,000 communicants in churches in the United States die from tuberculosis every year. This figure assumes that the death rate of 1.60 per 1000 population in the registration area applies to all church-goers, when, as a matter of fact, the rate would probably be higher.

William Reed, who has been in the employ of a New York firm installing machinery in a large paper mill at Fullerton, La., came to his home in Newark on Monday, to recover from the effects of a recent illness contracted while in the south.

MUTUAL BUILDING ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Mutual Building Association of Cecil county was held in Elkton last week. George W. Cosden was re-elected president. S. C. Peacock, secretary, and F. T. Haines, treasurer, with the old board of directors, David Scott, H. D. Lee and E. H. Leffler, showed 1419 shares of stock owned by members of the association, 79% of which will mature this month after a lapse of 12 years and 7 months since their issue. The total assets are $147,741.84, of which $127,255 is invested. The reserve and undivided profits total $30,002.49. With the payment of the maturing 79% shares about $35,000 will have been distributed during the past eight months by the association.

Many farmers are busy threshing from the fields.

SUCCESS AND FRIENDS

When a man makes any kind of success, however small, he finds that his friends resolve themselves into three classes. The first class turn sullen and show their displeasure in many mean ways. The second class was more friendly than usual and come showering their congratulations. The third class show a reasonable pleasure at your success and remain just as they were before. God bless the first class. God bless the second class. God bless the first class—Stephen.

O-Cedar Polish

A woman can live with a broom in her hand and still not be a good housekeeper. The dust settling on the furniture and window sills has always been a trying problem to the dainty housewife who wants things spick and span. Not only that but dust is the greatest germ carrier. Living on our dusty streets, this has become a serious problem. You all know how you swept yesterday and company came to-day and there you could write your name on the furniture.

And now here comes a remedy

O-CEDAR

Moisten a piece of cheese cloth and wipe off the furniture and the dust is absorbed. Nor does it injure the polish on the piano—it is a polish as well, absolutely GUARANTEED not to injure the highest mahogany finish.

It is in fact a wonder for it not only is a dust killer but a polish and germ killer. This may sound strange but a trial will convince the most particular.

For floors, an O-Cedar DUSTLESS MOP comes that beats electricity—it gives a tone to the floor like a new waxing—even on plain stained and varnished floors.

Again—for cleaning and polishing automobiles—it comes highly recommended.

Try it out—it's not expensive and a labor saver.

The Sign of The "Business Grip"

Look around in your town, Mr. Merchant. The men of greatest success are those who have made their telephones, the always present, always ready servant.

And these men turn to the telephone FIRST, in the rush of everyday business. The Bell telephones of the United States now carry more than twenty-four million messages every twenty-four hours.

Can you longer afford to be without a telephone?

Call the Business Office and ask for rates to-day.

Absent Ones

Absence makes the heart grow fonder but the memory of the absent one becomes vague and dim. You long to picture in your mind just how "HE" or "SHE" would look, but there's a mysterious something which makes the mental picture impossible.

But if you had a photograph before you, then you could recall the forgotten face, yes, even the kind acts, the gentle words.

Wouldn't that "ONE" so far away appreciate your photograph too?

COAL

Many of the best posted people believe it wise, for those who can do so, to lay in now their winter supply of coal.

For one-sixth of the entire year no coal has been mined, and it is deemed that when cold weather comes again the demand will exceed the supply, and prices, too, will be higher.

Benefit yourselves by filling up your bins now, and at the same time you will be out of the way of those for whom it is not convenient to buy until later on in the season. We have good coal and could deliver at any time entirely convenient to you.
