SOME EDUCATIONAL PROBLEMS

Address Delivered By President Harter Of Delaware College Before The New Century
Club Of Wilmington

I esteem it a great pleasure to speak to the ladies of the Century Club of Wilmington upon a subject of such interest as the topic assigned to me possesses. This club, through its educational committee, has been ready to help forward on all occasions any movement that promised to improve the educational opportunities offered the youth of our State and the intelligent and active interest of the members has not only greatly enlightened those who are directly engaged in the work of the schools, but has encouraged the general body of our citizens to a higher realization of the value of training for the performance of duty and the enjoyment of pleasure. The organized agencies for the education of the young only become effective when they are connected with other efforts of society to make the most of citizenship in all relations of life. The Century Club is working for circulating libraries for the schools has added much to their power for good. The traveling library has done much to encourage young people of our State to engage in good reading. The country schools especially have been very much helped by them as furnishing the best reading matter and injecting into the daily routine a new life. Many a boy or girl has had a taste for good literature instilled into his young life which has proved a rich blessing in after years. Far more useful is the habit of reading the best books than any other accomplishment which is the result of school days. Bernard Shaw has lately said that the mental impoverishment of the young is appalling, and he makes a strong appeal to the English people to encourage the children to go to the theatre for healthy amusement. This too often fails entirely to furnish a wholesome recreation to the schoolboy or schoolgirl. Indeed in the present state of the stage it is rather to be argued against as furnishing to low appetites and as furnishing very unwholesome food. Then again, Delaware, outside of Wilmington, is almost completely rural, while Mr. Shaw has only urban population in mind when he was making his impassioned statement of the awful dullness in the lives of the people of England. The traveling libraries seem to be the best means of reaching the remote country schools and with the live teacher to awaken an interest in the boys and girls they will find the healthy enjoyment that will make their lives full and sweet.

The introduction of Nature Study into the rural schools offered much relief from the deadening pall that was wont to settle down over the school in the long winter months, but, in response to this movement, the publishers flooded the market with books which were too often compiled by authors who did not observe the true bearing of facts in their statement. The nature fakie perpetrated some of the wildest dreams in the name of Nature study and the schools were overwhelmed with the tide of misinformation. Professor Bailey, of Cornell University, gifted with a rich poetical temperament and a wide fund of knowledge, gained after years of study in different departments of natural science, urged the teachers not to depend upon books but to lead the scholars to study natural objects by direct observation, selecting such manifestation of nature as the locality and the seasons afforded. But the teachers too often lagged out with a hard day's work and not being blessed with an imaginative temperament, stumbled along with a pitiful make-believe at brightness, making of what should have been a half hour of relief, rather a period of greater depression than the drill and grind of regular lessons. A survival of this movement is seen in many of our schools in pots of flowering plants which add so much brightness and interest to the room. It has spread out to the play ground and what was formerly an ugly spot, littered over with waste paper and boxes, is now covered with green sward and sheltered by the unbragging foliage of trees.

This tendency has been extended to cultivating waste ground and growing vegetables furnishing wholesome recreation to boys and girls, and shows how work can be made attractive when performed in the midst of pleasant surroundings. Here I may add that when the child's interest is elicited there will be no trouble in getting the attention. It matters not how you gain the child's interest, when that is secured, and not until then, the educational process will follow. The same may be said of his course of study, provided it is sufficiently broad to furnish him specific training in studies preparatory to his after life. Once the child's mind is aroused and his interest awakened he will go on to wider activity and greater accomplishment. The stimulation furnished by the stories and descriptions found in the libraries (the Nature lessons) once introduced to drive away the shadows that sometimes gather over the school room; a talk about the potted plants or work in the school yard or in any unused plots of ground, each in its proper season will arouse the school to the desire for work and convert it from a treadmill into a growing body of happy youth. Fact is a great gift, and is needed more in the teachers' profession than anywhere else. We owe much to the ladies of the Century Club for their aid and encouragement in putting the various auxiliaries into the activities of our schools, and when a time comes, well discouraged and disheartened by the slowness with which your plans are adopted, remember that under the influence of your efforts the schools of the State have been vastly improved and the leaven will spread from the more favored districts throughout the whole lump of the educational machinery of the Commonwealth.

The movement to have a physician make regular visits to examine the children and see that they are in good physical condition, not only looks towards preserving the health of the school, but oftentimes it shows some weakness or defect in the pupil that may be remedied by treatment. In many cases, that is termed laziness is the effect of disease. A child in one of the Wilmington schools with a slight defect in his teeth, was changed from an irritable, peevish boy into a bright, cheerful disposition by attention to such a trifling cause. Many a boy or girl gets a reputation for dullness or moroseness from imperfect vision that could be remedied with intelligent oversight. I hope you will have the schools of Wilmington under the care of a medical inspector. Every teacher feels that from unequal capacities of the children the work is much hindered by the necessity of keeping the instruction down to the level of the average boy or girl of the class. In many cases the difference of powers of the poorer pupils is due to some minor defect that will yield to treatment and they will have the same ability as the rest of the physical trouble is removed. Those who are less favorably endowed than their fellows should be given such instruction as they can readily master in separate cases. It is unfortunately the case that a small percentage of children are weak minded in various degrees, and it is manifestly wrong to make the vast majority mark time while struggling to get all to keep step.

It is gratifying to know that the educational committee of this Club is agitating the question of the establishment of a juvenile court which will have jurisdiction over those minor violations of the law in the case of children which are wont to grow into criminal acts if unchecked. The youthfulness of the offenders renders it wrong to bring them into contact with the violators of the laws that they would meet in the ordinary courts and a kindly judge could often direct the energies of the mischievous boy into channels of usefulness and respect. I have not time to say more than that Wilmington, which is growing into metropolitan properties, should take the leadership in this movement for the preservation of the respect for law and order among our people.

Some one has said that our cities are the concrete expression of the social forces that build them. In Europe there are many traces of the walled towns that were built for protection and some of these walls are kept for picturesque or other sentimental reasons. Just so our laws are the expression of the aspirations of the people, and still many of their early imperfections have been retained for one reason or another, even when we see how imperfectly they fit the times. When a little more than a decade ago Mr. Henry Ridgely, of Dover, undertook to collect the school laws of the State, and purge them of inconsistencies and of imperfections, you remember with what consternation it was received when he proposed to change the system of taxation for schools. In rural Delaware the school district is the unit of taxation and was the unit of organization and administration until the school law of 1897 was adopted. It is true that before 1880 there was a State superintendent of schools and three county superintendents went into effect, but there was not and could not be a school system with such an utter lack of cohesion among the parts of the fabric. Laws had been passed from time to time, all well meant, but which were so mischievous in operation, or so local in application that they were a hindrance and obstruction to the progress of the schools.

Mr. Ridgely entered upon the Herculean task with energy and sought advice and information from every one. He presented a bill to the General Assembly and succeeded in having it passed. He did not offer it as his best thought but as a bill that would pass. When he talked of enlarging the unit of taxation to include a hundred he was met with the cry from the potted plants or work in the school

DELAWARE REMAINS IN REPUBLICAN COLUMN

Victory--Heald Re-elected To Congress.
Legislature Safely Republican.

Election Of Republican To U. S. Senate

A Republican victory was the verdict of Delaware at the election yesterday (Tuesday) when the State ticket was elected, the county tickets in New Castle and Sussex counties, and the latest reports are that the Republicans will have a good working majority in both branches of the Legislature.

Congressman Heald and State Treasurer D. O. Moore were both re-elected by good round majorities.

The Legislature safely assures a Republican for the next United States Senator.

Some of the surprises among Republicans this morning are the defeats of Palmer Dickey, of White Clay Creek Hundred, and Dr. Caleb R. Layton, Republican Senatorial nominee from Georgetown. The latter made a strong fight and was watched with interest all over the State.

With the State ticket elected, the full county ticket in New Castle county the result of the Legislative ticket from that county is as follows:

MEMBERS OF THE SENATE.

Wets Carry Rural New Castle--Result A Great Surprise

Perhaps the greatest surprise to our readers was the result of the Wet and Dry issue. Pender Hunderd made perhaps the best showing in favor of the Drys, swinging in their favor by a majority of 45 against over 100 majority wet the last campaign. The Drys made great gains in New Castle and Blackbird went dry by a good majority. White Clay went for License, 138.
The last reports show a majority in favor of License of about 400 for the county.

Pender The Star In License Fight

From accounts received it looks as if Pender will hold the record in the Wet and Dry fight. The last time it was voted on, the Hundred gave over a hundred for license, and yesterday the vote changed to forty-five against.

Cecil County Dry

In spite of the wrangle between the Temperance forces and the Anti-Saloon League, Cecil county went dry again by the largest majority in the history of the movement, winning by 834 majority.
In 1898, when the present law for local option went into effect the License forces won by 336. Following that the results have been—
1902 Against 63
1906 " 204
1910 " 844
These figures show Cecil to be heartily in favor of conditions under "No License."

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE
NEAR AT HAND

The teachers of New Castle County are looking forward to an institute of unusual excellence on November 21, 22 and 23. The counties of New Castle and Kent have combined and are to hold the coming session in the Dover Opera House. This has been done in order to get the best instructors, which had come to be a difficult matter with the limited amount at the disposal of the superintendent for such expenses.

This year's instructors have been selected with the greatest care. Among them are Dr. A. E. Winslow, of Boston, Dr. C. H. Gardner, of Shippensburg, Pa., and J. I. Myre, Jr., State Librarian of New York.
The music, under an able director, will be an important part of the program. Each teacher will be presented with a copy of the latest song book.

The evening entertainments represent talent of a high order, being the most expensive ever brought to this county's teachers.

November 21st Dr. Cobbell, of New York, will lecture, November 22nd, the College Singing Girls of wide popularity, will entertain and on November 23, the Katharine Ridgeway Co. will be the attraction.

About 125 teachers from New Castle county will attend the institute.

Presbyterian Executive Meeting

The executive meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of New Castle Presbytery was held at the home of the president, Miss Eva B. Taylor, Wilmington, Friday afternoon, when plans for work of the auxiliary societies were outlined for the year, based on suggestions from the Synodical Society and from the Foreign Board. The foreign program for the Presbytery meetings to be held in Elkton on the second Wednesday and Thursday in April was also arranged.

This is a meeting of the officers only. Owing to the bad weather which prevailed, no out of town members of the committee attended.

Wedding Anniversary Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Smith received a number of their relatives and friends on Saturday evening, November 5, in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Smith received many congratulations. Silver, cut glass, china and linen were among the gifts received.

He was meeting with excellent success and making good time. He walks the distance for his health and receives $500 if he makes it in the stated time.
Delaware decided yesterday to let well enough alone.

CAPTAIN RICHMOND P. HOBSON PLEADS FOR "WAR ON THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

On Sunday, November 6th Newark had as her distinguished guest, Richmond P. Hobson, of Merrimack fame. Mr. Hobson's address was a plea for truth, for individual consideration of the facts and a following of the truth as gained thereby. Although he talked for over two hours, he seemed far from having exhausted the subject. Added to the array of facts were many appeals to the patriotism of the citizens of America, delivered by this one of her sons who has answered to the call for brave and courageous men, and has proved that he practices as well as preaches his precepts.

Mr. Hobson began with a recital of facts concerning the effects of alcohol as gathered from statistics compiled by the governments of Great Britain and the United States.
Every argument that he put forth was clinched by positive figures.

He regards the American nation as having reached a critical point in its history. This great industrial age calls for the bulk of the population to be in the city where corruption is rampant. The history of all the world repeats the sad fact of a decline when the rural communities—standing for the better morals and loftier patriotism—cease to predominate the affairs of state. Hitherto the remnant of those who have held to these ideals have gone westward and founded a new government on those principles.

Now the course of empire has circled the globe and the supreme test of humanity is being made in America. Whenever the nation weakens others are waiting to grasp the chance. Across the Pacific there are swarms of yellow people, who are not degenerating, and who regard America as the promised land.

By indisputable scientific facts Mr. Hobson proved the destructive and degenerating influence of alcohol.

He asked how many realized how much they loved the flag, telling of his discovery of the answer to that question as applied to himself. He was in a prison cell in Cuba. As he paced back and forth before the bars, the one object upon which his eyes centered was the Spanish flag. He began to wonder for what that flag stood. Soon his reverie was broken by the crack of rifles in the distance. The next day the firing came nearer, and later in the day the Spanish were wounded with them. He realized that an American army had landed on the island. Then his attention became riveted upon one object—that flag. Finally he saw that Spanish ensign come down and be replaced by the Stars and Stripes. He realized that liberty was assured to the Cubans—for there waved the guarantee—our flag.

Another instance was given which happened when he was a midshipman in the navy. The fleet commanded by Admiral Walker, was lying in a Grecian harbor. It was a feast day of the Greek Church. The boy had gone on deck before breakfast to see the sights. Flags fluttered everywhere. Soon the Admiral strode along the deck, seeing that all things were ship-shape for the new day. He took his binoculars and swept the shore. At once his eye spied the string of flags—the American was there on the list. A pucker appeared on the brow, the eyes snapped and orders went forth to brusque tones. The boat was ordered to shore. According to all etiquette official business must be postponed until ten o'clock. The Admiral paid no heed, but went straight to headquarters. "If you wish to use that flag in your decorations you are welcome, but it must be at the head of the ship."

Captain Hobson said you tell me that prohibition will not prohibit—then you recognize that the stars and stripes do not fly at the top of the string. There is another flag floating above it—the black flag of vice and crime. As American people will you submit?

The crucial test for America has come. We are not living in times of peace. The thunder and smoke of a moral battle is all around us. It is a question of individual worth.

For 3000 years the world has been educated to believe that alcohol is helpful—that it buoys up the tired body. Art and literature have emphasized the joys of the feasts of Bacchus and the delights of the banqueting hall.

We need a campaign of education. Deep in the nature of all men is a love for the truth. Show that truth to your neighbor—pass it on—do not sit with folded hands and expect legislators to deal with this deep-rooted, organic disease. Every citizen is called upon to enlist in the fight.
Captain Hobson left all appeal to the emotions to others, confirming himself largely to the presentation of cold blooded facts. This combined with his great earnestness and sincerity of purpose, the polish of the scholar and his gift of oratory marked the speech as one of the great ones of the day.

HISTORY OF WHITE CLAY CREEK SCHOOL

The lands near the White Clay Creek were settled by Scotch Irish immigrants, about 1720. Land was abundant and cheap and the early settlers bought large tracts. Until there was time and necessity for subdivision the population was very much scattered.

These immigrants were intelligent. The Church of Scotland early adopted measures for the promotion of general education.

Hetherington, under date of 1769, speaks of an Act of Parliament respecting schools, "realizing what had been long and earnestly sought by the Presbyterian Church—a school in every parish throughout the whole kingdom so far supported by the public funds as to render education accessible to even the poorest in the community."

It was the religious character, intelligence and love of liberty of these people which drove them first from Scotland to Ireland and then to this country, and which gave them so important an influence in establishing the free institutions which we now enjoy.

In the old documents of the White Clay Creek Presbyterian Church established in 1721, not a "mark" in the signing of names is to be found. The first building upon the present site of the church was erected in 1732. Just across the public road there stood until about five years ago, an ancient, one-roomed, log building, where the great-grandparents of the present generation attended school.

The writer has been unable to obtain any definite information as to the history of this school prior to 1807, one of her ancestors being a pupil about that time.

An extract from an historical sermon, delivered at White Clay Creek in 1826 is pregnant with suggestion. "The Reverend Charles Tennant was licensed by the Presbytery of Philadelphia in 1796 and became pastor of this church in 1797. He was the youngest son of Reverend William Tennant and was born in Ireland in 1751. His father came to this country with his family in 1716. It had been necessary for those who wished to enter the ministry of the Presbyterian Church in this country, to obtain their education either in a New England College or in Europe, but Mr. Tennant taught his four sons—all of whom entered the ministry—and many others, and the small building which he occupied as a schoolroom received the celebrated name, "the Log College."

The location of this building is not given. Reverend Charles Tennant was at White Clay Creek from 1797 until 1798. Did he follow the example of his father and establish a "Log College" for his and others' children?

The records show that a son was born to him in 1744 and another in 1747. Quoting from the same discourse, we learn that the Tennant family and those associated with them occupy a very important place in the early history of the Presbyterian Church. They co-operated with Whitfield in evangelistic work, and their progressive spirit is shown by the fact that they took a prominent part in the great Schism of 1741, between the Old and New Side of the Presbyterian Church.

The men who razed the old log structure a few years ago had a tough piece of work. The logs were of oak and severely mortised or notched. In the first decade of the last century it was a "pay school." A man would appear in the neighborhood in the fall, declare himself a schoolmaster and begin "giving round heads" on a scale. Parents who could afford to do so, paid a pittance for each child sent to school. The master eked out a living by cobbling shoes after school hours.

When there was an interment in the nearby "graveyard," the teacher ranged the pupils in line and marched them over to view the "burying." No doubt this barbarous performance was to impress upon their infant minds the fact that life is short and they had best take advantage of the privileges to improve the fleeting hour.

The date of the erection of the present stone building can not be ascertained, but there seems to be no authority for placing it earlier than 1829, though pupils of the early fifties declare it was a very old building then.

The tract of land upon which the building stands was bought from Squire Sanders for $200. The "Squire" was an important man in the community, combining the activities and trades of Justice of the Peace, cabinet-maker, undertaker and farmer. He was thought to have driven quite a bargain with the school commissioners in selling a quarter of an acre of woodland for $100.

Pupils of the school in 1852 recall the existence of grass-grown excavations in a nearby field belonging to the ancestors of Judge George Gray. A tract from this property was offered for the erection of a school building, with the understanding that the school should be kept open a designated number of months each year; failing this the tract should revert to the Gray estate. Evidently the worthy voters of the district felt unable to fulfill the required conditions as a meeting was called at which it was decided to purchase the present location.

In 1834 John Pennington, who afterward became a member of Congress from Delaware, was a pupil. Miss Pennock, probably from Chester county, Pa., was teacher in 1835.

Mrs. Widdoes and George D. Medill, of Newark, who were pupils in 1852, recall that the building presented very much the same outside appearance as at the present time. Inside, were three long desks extending around as many sides of the room. The benches were slab with no backs, and the children sat facing the windows which had very small panes of glass. A "ten plate" stove stood in the middle of the room. Blackboard there was none, slates were placed upon each pupil's slate by the teacher. The New Testament was studied every day.

Mr. Burke, of Wilmington, who was a pupil in 1858, recalls that the primary pupils had a few dog-eared spelling books.

At nutting time the school was given a half holiday to gather walnuts from the woodland which surrounded the schoolground on all sides. After being hulled the nuts were spread to dry in the loft and eaten on rainy days at the school hour.

The teachers of this period, who are spoken of with respect and gratitude are Miss Alice Tweed, Miss Margaret Wilson and Lewis Baldwin, who studied medicine and afterward became a successful physician in Philadelphia.

An Irishman who taught in the early fifties, left a reputation for severe floggings and a pronounced brogue.

Being informed by an excited uncle one day, that the building was on fire, he exclaimed:

"Go ye to the house beyond and fetch a flour clawth and be quack at thot." His command had to be repeated several times before the frightened children could understand what he wished. The "polished scholar," as he was designated in future years by a member of the school board who employed him, received the munificent salary of $25 a quarter.

His chief recommendation appears to have been that he could cover the side of a building with "fingers" in the solution of a difficult "sum."

One "long ago" pupil recalls with what interest she used to watch the passing of "a stage drawn by four horses and with steps behind."

During the season of "bad roads" the wheel would sink into mud almost to the hubs.

Today, while the same old building is used as a public school, automobiles dash by on a macadamized road. Truly the hand of progress is stayed ere it reaches the rural school.

Frances Medill, Teacher.

Concerning Our Schools

"The only sphere, then, left open for our patriotism, is the improvement of our children—not the few, but the many; not a part of them, but all. This is but one field of exertion, but it opens an infinite career; for the capacities of mankind can go on developing, improving, perfecting, as long as the cycles of eternity revolve. For this improvement of the race, a high, a generous, an expansive education is the true and efficient means. There is not a good work which the hand of man has ever undertaken, which his heart has ever conceived, which does not require a good education for its helper. There is not an evil afflicting the earth which can be extirpated until the auxiliary of education shall lend its mighty aid.

If an angel were to descend from heaven to earth, on an errand of mercy and love, he would hasten to accomplish his mission by illuminating the minds and purifying the hearts of children. The Savior took little children in his arms and blessed them; he did not, by any miraculous exertion of power, bar up all passages to sin and error, and at once make mankind the passive recipients of perfection. He left it for us to be agents and co-workers with him in their redemption. He gave to us, not so much the boon of being blessed, as the more precious, the heavenly boon of blessing others. For this end, an instrument has been put into our hands, fully adequate to the accomplishment of so divine a purpose. We have the power to train up children in accordance with those wise and benign laws which the Creator has stamped upon their physical, their intellectual, and their moral nature; and of this stewardship we must assuredly give account. May it be rendered with joy and not with sorrow!

OPPORTUNITY OF THE COMMON SCHOOL.

"Without undervaluing any other human agency, it may be safely affirmed that the common school, improved and energized as it can easily be, may become the most effective and benignant of all the forces of civilization. Two reasons sustain this position. In the first place, there is a universality in its operation, which can be affirmed of no other institution whatever. If administered in the spirit of justice and conciliation, all the rising generation may be brought within the circle of its reformatory and elevating influences. And, in the second place, the materials upon which it operates are so pliant and ductile as to be susceptible of assuming a greater variety of forms than any other earthly work of the Creator."

UNDERWOOD STANDARD TYPEWRITER

A LEADER

The principle of construction in the Underwood was found first in the Underwood, and every typewriter seeking business in the same field with the Underwood which has been put on the market since the advent of the Underwood, has been an imitation of, and in general appearance like, the Underwood.

The last "Blind" advocates of importance have now fallen into line, and there is not today a single "blindwriting" typewriter actively on this market. Recall all the arguments you have heard in past years by Underwood opposition, and you will realize what an advance agent to progress the Underwood has been; then bear in mind that the Underwood was the first fully "visible", has had time to develop and improve, and is to-day the most perfect typewriter made.

NOVEMBER, 9, 1910

AT THE election yesterday, Delaware again held true to her traditions and reputation—a cool, sane, conservative people. Our citizens are not swayed by every new move in either State or National issues. With a good majority, the Republicans carried the State ticket and have a working majority in the General Assembly. In the Legislature there is a healthy opposition and enough of the so-called radicalism in the majority to insure good work at the next General Assembly.

THE outcome of the wet and dry contest was indeed a surprise. In summing up how it happened the result can perhaps be attributed to not enough practical politics among the Anti-License forces and too much of a practical side to the License people.

WITH the Democratic sweep over the country, it will be interesting to watch the next session in Congress.

DELAWARE Democrats certainly have much to comfort them.

THE result of the New Nationalism shows plainly that the people of this country believe in a strong, steady march, instead of double-quick. There is this to be said however, that the Old Guard must march and not "mark time." The life and spirit of the Republican party is progress and not "stand pat"; nor is it fanaticism.

DR. HARTER'S ADDRESS—EDUCATION FOR GIRLS

WE wish to call special attention to the address on Education for Delaware Girls, made by Dr. Harter this afternoon, before the New Century Club, of Wilmington. After giving a review of the development of our educational system and comparing it with those of other States, he makes recommendations for further development with special reference to the higher education for our girls. This is a vital subject and demands our attention. The address should be printed in every paper in the State.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

WE read in the Wilmington papers of the good times provided at its Y. M. C. A. Hall—of the 12 mile walks over the country at this season when it is clad in all its fall array of splendor, and we chime forth for all such work, an appreciative Amen.

Their gymnasium practice and social hours make us regret the lack of such in our own town. We cannot hope for anything pretentious probably, but we certainly should have something along this line for our boys.

The suggestion comes from a Western town of opening our churches and schools to supply some form of social life.

All this non-taxable property is for the public good. Just so long as it stands the center of the social doings of that community they are bound to be pure and right.

A recent criticism of our town—that there are too many happy homes for the good of the few who do not possess such—is surely a just one. Our teachers know it and all others who endeavor to enter into the spirit of this latest generation.

The children who paid their round of calls this very Halloween carried with them an appeal for how many of these young folks brought the message of an absence of interest on the part of older ones.

Our conditions are not to be expressed in terms of "worst", but most assuredly they might be better, and it seems the place of the elders to make them so.

These youngsters want there to be "something on hand" and if wiser heads fail to supply that chance more zealous hands will create it for them selves.

Any how over the result is ill founded and deserves no sympathy.

NEW CENTURY CLUB

The first meeting of the Club year convened in the classroom Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the new president, Mrs. Delaware Clark, presiding. The President, in speaking of the year's work, hoped for the friendly cooperation of all the members.

"We call our club literary association, but they are more than this. They are schools where the lovely graces of high motives, gentleness and sympathy should be acquired more and more; where gossip should be banished, and where in this age of worship of material progress, attention should be turned to the things which make the heart and mind richer."

Business was next in order, and the different committees made their reports.

Mrs. Maxwell, chairman of the library committee, reported about seventy new books added to the library during the past summer, among them a set of ten volumes known as "The Children's Hour." "There is no academy on earth equal to the mother's reading to her child." This set of books contains folk-stories and fables, biography of poetry, all from the best writers, and the mother will find these books suitable reading for that time Longfellow speaks of.

"Between the dark and the daylight, when the night is beginning to lower, Comes a pause in the day's occupations, that is known as the 'Children's Hour'."

The Club members are hoping the time is not far distant when the library can be open every day in the week. To augment the library funds, Miss MacLaren, a talented educationist and impersonator, will give "The Fortune Hunter," in Newark Opera House, Wednesday evening, November 10. The people of the town and vicinity are invited to enjoy a pleasant and profitable hour, and at the same time help a worthy cause.

The program for the afternoon was then taken up.

"Vacation Days in Europe," by Mrs. C. B. Evans, Mrs. Evans gave a delightful account of her European trip. She spoke of the different countries she had visited—England, Holland, Germany, France and Italy, and related experiences and showed souvenirs collected en route. Her account of the "Passion Play" in the little Bavarian village of Oberammergau was most interesting. How the plague was brought to Oberammergau in 1680 and the people made a solemn vow before God to give every ten years a presentation of the Passion of Jesus Christ if the pestilence might be removed. The theatre in which the play is given, seats four thousand people and the day Mrs. Evans saw the play the theatre was crowded and more than a thousand people had to wait over until the next day. The play begins at eight o'clock in the morning and continues until six o'clock in the evening with an intermission at noon.

The vessel in which Mrs. Evans returned to America broke all previous records, making the passage across the Atlantic Ocean in four days ten hours and 41 minutes.

Mrs. Evans concluded the afternoon by reading Henry Van Dyke's poem, "An American in Europe."

"This fine to see the Old World, and travel up and down,

Among the famous palaces and cities of renown,

To admire the crumbling castles and statues of the kings—

But now I think I've had enough of antiquated things.

So it's home again and home again, America for me!

My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be,

In the land of youth and freedom beyond the ocean fairs,

Where the air is full of sunlight, and the flag is full of stars.

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;

And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair;

And it's sweet to dream of Venice, and it's great to study Rome;

But when it comes to living, there is no place like home.

I like the German fir woods in green Lattitudes drolled;

I like the gardens of Versailles with flashing fountains filed;

But oh, to take your hand my dear, and ramble for a day

In the friendly western woodland, where Nature has her way!

I know that Europe's wonderful, yet something seems to lack;

The past is too much with her and the people looking back.

But the glory of the Present, is to make the Future free—

We love our land for what she is and what she is to be.

Oh, it's home again, etc., etc.

at 2 o'clock.

At the hour mentioned, the bridal party arrived at the church, and to the strains of Loeuengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Mary Boylen Keely, organist of the church, walked up the centre aisle to the chancel. The bride was attired in a dress of white satin. She wore a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Sadie Kennedy, a sister. The best man was James E. Cullin. The bridesmaid wore a gown of yellow embroidered pongee and a picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The ushers were Messrs. Frank A. Walker, Leo J. Kennedy, John Lafferty, of Chester, and Frank L. Smith, of Washington, D. C.

Immediately following the ceremony the party left the church and proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held.

Every room of the home was lavishly decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns, chrysanthemums and potted plants in addition to numerous neatly arranged streamers, yellow and white being the color scheme. Possibly the most prettily decorated room of the dwelling was the dining-room, where a wedding dinner was served. The reception was attended by the immediate relatives of the families and a few intimate friends of the couple.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. McMonigal left the house for the Pennsylvania railroad station where they boarded the 6:28 train for Albany City. Upon their return they will reside in their newly furnished home at 1129 Potter street.

Prof. Hayward is in Eastern Pennsylvania arranging for the shipment of eleven head of registered Guernsey cows for the College herd.

A number of satisfactory sales are now being made from the pure bred Berkshire herd of pigs on the College Farm.

Mr. H. S. Jackson, formerly assistant in Plant Pathology at the Experiment Station, has recently been elected Professor of Botany and Plant Pathology in the Oregon State University.

Prof. McCue was recently called upon to recommend a man for Agricultural Extension work in Georgia at a good salary.

Prof. Hayward has been invited to address the Women's Suffrage Society of this State on The Higher Education of Women, on Thursday of this week.

Dr. Dawson visited the Milford Vaccine Laboratories on Saturday of last week.

Prof. Hayward will take the Animal Husbandry Class to the Animal Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, New York, next week.

The Class in Agricultural Bacteriology is studying local tuberculosis at present. The material was gotten from an infected pig at the Experiment Station.

The students in Horticulture will start in practical apple packing next week. The material to be obtained from Delaware farms.

Heart Cheer

"Oh, trust God and take courage! If He has seemed to set bounds to your path, and hedged you in, be assured that there is for you a broader, higher and grander mission than any you have yet conceived of for yourself. Strive to be a bit of blue sky in the lives of those around you. Then your life cannot be a failure any more than those blue rays are a failure."

"Never was there a cloud which has not passed, a storm, however long, which did not cease. And though our way be darkly overcast, By sorrow's shade, beyond is sure release; As sure as that God lives for aye and aye, If only we keep on our steady way."

"Some people are always finding fault with Nature for putting thorns on roses; I always thank her for putting roses on thorns."

"I have told you of the man who always put on spectacles when about to eat cherries, in order that the fruit might look larger and more tempting. In like manner I always make the most of my enjoyments, and, though I do not cast my eye away from troubles, I pack them up into as small a compass as I can for myself, and never let them annoy others."

"The man who cannot be strong, cheerful, creative, in his own age, would find all other ages inhospitable and barren."

Is not a man or woman who puts on magnifying glasses to make the pleasures that come look as great as possible, much wiser than he or she who puts on smoked glasses and at once declares that even the sunshine is dark, and there is nothing but dense gloom everywhere? To be sure, trouble comes to all of us; but we know that if God sends us on stony paths, he will provide us with strong shoes. What a happy, blessed thing it would be for all of us if we would implicitly trust God's promises! Our lives would then be as bright and cheery as a sunshiny winter day. And why is it that we do not trust Him implicitly? He has told us that all things work together for our good if we but love Him; and if we would but take Him at His word, even the shadowy parts of life would become radiant with the reflection of His tender love and care.

"It is a blessed privilege to talk over our troubles to our Heavenly Father, but it is not at all necessary for us to be forever harping upon them to our friends. We should, like Robert Southey, pack them into as small a compass as possible for ourselves, and never allow them to annoy others."

"Upon the sadness of the sea The sunset broods regretfully; From the far lonely spaces slow Withdraws the wistful afterglow.

So out of life the splendor dies; So darken all the happy skies; So gathers twilight, cold and stern; But overhead the planets burn.

And up the east another day Shall chase the bitter dark away; What though our eyes with tears are wet? The sunrise never failed us yet.

The blush of dawn may yet restore Our light, and hope, and joy, once more; Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget That sunshine never failed us yet."

"How grateful we ought to be," exclaims Henry Ward Beecher, "when God sends us a natural heart-singer who calms, cheers, and helps his fellows!" There are natural heart-singers to whom songs and smiles come as spontaneously as sighs and tears to others. The latter have been unfortunate in their heredity, or early environment, or training, for a normal man or woman is cheerful, healthy, and optimistic, while an abnormal one is gloomy, unhealthy and pessimistic. Clouds and sunshine alternate in every life. Those who prefer to sulk in the shadow, when the sun is shining, have none but themselves to blame if all the world seems dark and miserable."

"Life must have its sometime sorrow, but the years that drift along Touch the minor chords but seldom; there are spaces hithle with song. Sometimes we must face the shadows where the wind blows keen and cold. But the shadow fades the dawning, and the east is flicked with gold."

"The Lord said two things to Abraham: 'I will bless thee' and 'Be thou a blessing.' When God makes us glad the gladness is not to end with ourselves—we are to pass it on."

"Oh, to scatter blessings broadcast, to give without wish for return, to do good for the joy of it, to toss your god-will and heartiness right and left among men; to bring a smile to wan faces, hope with dull eyes, sunshine into dark corners, and so touch men's lives that they shall feel the passing of some benign influence, the presence of something divine—here are aims!"

A Fine Report Of The Orphans' Home

A splendid report comes from the Delaware Orphan Home and Industrial School, which is in better working shape than at any previous time in the history of the institution.

It has a large number of orphans from different parts of the State of Delaware, also inmates from the nearby States of New York, New Jersey and Maryland.

The outside fall work is all complete and all are centering their efforts on the school proper.

A new teacher has been employed for one of the industrial departments. The school is sending out both boys and girls to work in private families and they are receiving very satisfactory reports of these former pupils. As many as seven boys were sent to a farmer at once during the busy summer season.

The special efforts of the managers of the institution are centered on the raising of $20,000, to enable them to receive the applicants who are seeking admission.

The following named persons have been found qualified to look after this matter and are working for the home and school: Rev. G. C. Carter, financial secretary; George Thomas, Mrs. Sarah E. Washington, Miss Julia Barnett and Miss H. A. M. Boyer, a former teacher and corresponding secretary for the home for four years.

The Delaware football eleven goes to Western Maryland on Saturday. This is one of the big games of the season. Lebanon Valley comes to the college on the 19th.

MIDLINGS is often written on the bag—and mill sweepings IN THE BAG.

How can you tell good midlings?

The color of MIDLINGS is WHITE.

Now if you get a bag marked Midlings and they are dark—that means MILL SWEEPINGS.

Now all the proof you need to this statement is just to come take a look at the Midlings I am selling, any farmer in this section will agree with me when they compare the PURE WHITE MIDLINGS and MILL SWEEPINGS.

An Appreciation Of Henry Van Dyke

Henry Van Dyke loves books and booksish things, but they form only a part of his life, for much of the year he is an out-door man. In Princeton he has eight acres of garden and orchard, and the real country is at his very door. There is a greenhouse which furnishes cut flowers all through the winter, there are hot-beds in which early vegetables are raised, and there are many magnificent trees and beautiful shrubbery scattered everywhere. Many of the trees have been growing for generations.

There is one elm that arches over a foot from tip to tip. Then there are fine tennis courts, the doctor being quite an enthusiastic player. The participants are sometimes members of the family, and at other times members of the Princeton faculty. The family includes five children. Much of their summer is spent in an Adirondack camp or elsewhere far away from large communities.

For many years their closest neighbors have been the Cleveland family. Henry Van Dyke and Grover Cleveland were warm friends. His "Days Off" he has dedicated "with warm and deep regards to my friend and neighbor, Grover Cleveland, whose years of great work as a statesman have been cheered by days of good play as a fisherman."

I like the wordings of his dedications. Fisherman's Luck, a book of short stories, he had dedicated to his wife as "My Lady Greygown" he always refers to her).

"Here is the basket—I bring it home to you. There are no great fish here, but perhaps there may be a little one here or there to your taste."

And there are a few shining pebbles from the bed of the brook, and a few ferns from the cool green woods, and a few wild flowers from the places that you remember. I would fain console you, if I could, for the hardship of having married an angler—a man who relapses into his mania with the return of every spring and never returns to a river without wishing to fish in it.

But after all, we have had good times together as we have followed stream and life to the sea. And we have passed through the dark days of losing a heart—because we were comrades. So let this book tell you something that is certain—in all the life of your fisherman, the best of luck is just YOU."

The Blue Flower he has dedicated to the dear memory of Bernard Van Dyke, 1887-1897. With the love that lies beyond the years."

He speaks tenderly of his son in one of his short stories "The Open Fire." Read "Altars of Remembrance," p. 28, in "Fisherman's Luck." Several months ago Dr. Van Dyke was elected as an Honorary Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature of Great Britain. The honor was only once before conferred upon an American—having been bestowed upon Joseph H. Choate, when he was Ambassador to England.

It is hard to find anything more fitting to a tired body and mind than the calmness of the great outdoors as it is breathed forth from the writings of this man, whether we are sitting ourselves in the words of a bedtime as described in "Between Turpin and the Laurel" or in one of his beautiful verse.

We can find no more fitting conclusion to our consideration of this man than a repetition of his creed as expressed in his Footpath to Peace: "To be glad of life because it gives us the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them, to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and manners, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to expect nothing but your neighbor's, except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies; often of your friends; and every day of Christ; and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors; these are little guide-posts on the footpath to peace."

Delaware Federation Of Women's Clubs

The State Executive Committee of the Delaware Federation of Women's Clubs was held in Laurel Thursday of last week. The ladies were entertained by Mrs. Daniel Short, the State Treasurer. Members from all over the State attended, also visitors from Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

After the routine business the committee spent most of the time in discussing the subject of Higher Education of Women in Delaware.

Mrs. Robinson recommended the Society in the Federation work to forward this movement. The majority of the Clubs in the State are taking up the movement. A special demand is being made for courses in domestic science.

Senior Club--Newark Grammar School

The club meeting was held at the usual time. Four very interesting papers were read. The Adventure of a Shilling, by Miss Maria Brown; The Battleship Delaware, by Miss Kathryn Clark; A Voyage to the Sea, by Miss Harriet Ross, and A Chessman, by Miss Mary Stewart. The current events of the past week were read by Miss Kathryn Clark. Some popular jokes were read by the club members. After singing some popular songs the club then adjourned. Visitors were Misses Bessie Whittingham, Leila Herbener, May Lovett and Betty Slack.
