Newark Bike Project has new home

By ELENA BOFFETTA Special to the Post

The community-oriented Newark Bike Project has a new home – one much larger and more prominent than its old one.

In August, board members, volunteers and clients of the Newark Bike Project went to the previous location on South Main Street for the last time. They packed the tools and bike parts, loaded the bicycles on a rental truck, emptied the store and closed its doors – only to reopen

A look into Newark's past

Local historian begins digitizing city council minutes from 1800s

By JOSH SHANNON jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

NEWARK, DEL.

104 YEARS | 38TH ISSUE

In 1877, city council established a fine of 50 cents for letting one's goose run loose in town.

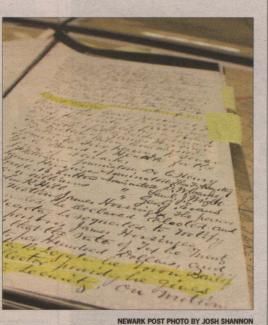

By 1881, its attention had moved on from stray geese and turned instead to confronting the "awful stench" coming from John Pemberton's slaughterhouse. Three years later, council deputized seven men as "there was fear of a riot" due to disturbance by men building the new railroad.

Those are just three tidbits of Newark history contained in the lengthy, handwritten minutes taken at city council meetings long ago.

They're public records and are kept in a filing cabinet in the city secretary's office, but few among the public know they exist and fewer still take the time to look at them.

1,200 sign petition against power plant

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

The word of the night for opponents of the proposed data center and power plant during Monday's council meeting was "transparency," and the lack of it.

Many residents said they still feel uncomfortable with how information on the project was released to the public and accused council, the University of Delaware and The Data Centers, LLC executives of being untruthful and withholding information.

Those on both sides of the issue packed into council chambers to voice their opinion on the 248-megawatt combined heat and power plant and 900,000 square-foot data center to be built on UD's STAR Campus. With not an empty seat in the room, some people sat on the floor and others stood against the wall in what little space they could find.

Members of the group Newark Residents Against the Power Plant presented council with a petition of more than 1,200 signatures and many continued to bombard council with questions they felt have gone unanswered since TDC first held a public meeting in early September.

TDC CEO Gene Kern stated at the September meeting that once the facility is complete, the company will hire 290 full-time and 50 part-time employees for long term positions. He also said TDC's clients will create an additional 300 full-time jobs, according to industry trends. However, resident Anne Murray questioned Monday night what types of information technology jobs TDC really plans to bring to the site.

As an IT worker, she argued that the majority of IT employees the company needs will most likely not be hired from Delaware but outsourced overseas. Even if they do hire IT workers from within the state, Murray said the jobs will not be as longterm as Kern has led on.

"That's what IT is," she said. "They come, they go."

Murray predicted companies using TDC's servers will not move to Delaware and will instead remote in, she said, and that's the last thing the city needs.

"Thousands of servers earning income for people who don't care about Newark, Delaware," Murray said.

Resident Bonnie Meredith has lived in Newark for 14 years and voiced her skepticism about the STAR Campus, adding that she feels UD is making "a hasty, secretive and perhaps uninformed decision" in leasing part of the former Chrysler plant property to TDC for 75 years.

Earlier on Monday, Meredith attended a public UD Faculty Senate meeting about the issue at Mitchell Hall, where Kern and UD officials presented information on the STAR Campus and specifics about the planned facility to university professors and Newark residents.

Professors asked questions about pollution and eco-

New principals adjusting at Glasgow, Christiana

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@newarkpostonline.com

New principals took the reins at Glasgow and Christiana high schools this year. With nearly two months of the school year now behind them, both have plans for what they hope to accomplish in the years ahead.

At Glasgow, Dean Ivory, originally from Camden, N.J., said he wants to make sure students graduate ready for college and a career. Ivory has worked at three high schools in Delaware and has decades of experience in education under his belt.

He first began his educational career as a teacher and coach 20 years ago when he taught business classes and coached mens basketball and baseball at Woodbridge High School in Bridgeville. He then left Woodbridge to get his masters in educational leadership and administration from Wilmington University in 1999 and has been a principal ever since.

Before Glasgow, Ivory was principal for five years at Lake Forest High School, then at Laurel Senior High School for seven. New this fall to the Christina School

"We've had a good start," he said.

But a start, Ivory said, is just what it is.

He explained his many goals for the school, including raising student achievement and improving standardized test scores, which he hopes to achieve in the next several years. Aside from academics, he wants to make sure Glasgow is a safe environment and encourage students to get in-sports, arts and band and take advantage of college and career-planning.

"The school is rich in resources for kids, and that's really exciting to be a part of," he said.

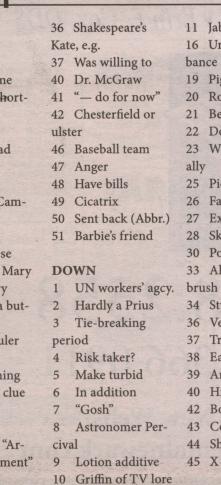

This year, the Christina School District welcomed back Noreen LaSorsa, a familiar face to Christiana High School. LaSorsa has reclaimed her role as principal, one she previously for four years, and held said she is excited to start what she calls "the second chapter."

LaSorsa first joined the Christina School District tion teacher at Drew-Pyle Middle School helping "physically frail" students and those with cognitive disabilities. She holds a bachelors degree in health and physical education from West Chester University and a masters in education and administration from Wilmington College.

After eight years as a physical education teacher, LaSorsa was inspired by a colleague at Drew-Pyle to take on new leadership roles and became the assistant principal at the school in 2000. She then went on to become assistant princi-for three years, then assistant principal at Newark High and finally Christiana High School's principal from 2006 to 2010.

LaSorsa took a break from school administration and served as Change Leader for the district and chief officer of the School Turnaround Unit for the Delaware Department of Education until the Christina School District superintendent asked her "to come home," and she did.

"Christiana High School has my heart," LaSorsa said.

When she left the school about three years ago, La-Sorsa said she left behind some unfinished business which she plans to con-tinue now that she's back. Like Ivory, she hopes to improve student achievement, but to her it's a "twolane highway.

On one hand, she wants to increase students' standardized test scores, improve graduation rates and curb the dropout rate. LaSorsa said the other part of this process involves increasing the rigor of the curriculum and the students' day-to-day exposure to education and cultural experiences. She wants to LaSorsa said she couldn't be happier to be back as principal and is excited to get the ball rolling. In the past, she said, Christiana High had an outstanding reputation within the community and amongst students and alumni, something she plans to help the high school regain in the next several years.

"I hope to support the school and lead it back to a school of distinction," she said. "The status quo is not something we are satisfied with. We're always trying to do better."

Police arrest man who triggered massive manhunt

By CARL HAMILTON AND JACOB OWENS Special from the Cecil Whig

The attempted murder suspect who prompted a massive manhunt in southern Newark earlier this month has been captured.

Considered by police to be "armed and dangerous," Marquel Nakai May, of the 400 block of Kemper Drive in Bear, remained on the loose until 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 11.

That's when police in Maryland captured May at his friend's residence in the 800 block of Wind Stream Way in Edgewood, Md., located approximately 40 miles southwest of Newark.

"He was taken into custody without incident," Lt. Michael Holmes, a spokesman for the Cecil County Sheriff's Office, said. "We developed information that he would be at that Sheriff's Drug Task Force located a suspect identified as May in the area of Marrows Road and Wyoming Road in Newark and then requested assistance in conducting a traffic stop in order to take tempted first-degree murder, him into custody.

Cecil County Drug Task Force members continued following the Jaguar to the area of South Cha-pel Street and Blue Hen Drive, where a Delaware State Police trooper in a marked patrol vehicle pulled behind May's car and then turned on his cruiser's flashing emergency lights and siren in the area of Old Baltimore Pike, according to police.

May refused to stop, how ever, and drove west on Old Baltimore Pike in a reckless manner as he approached the Route 896 intersection, police and struck a vehicle that was traveling in the southbound lane of Route 896 before continuing onto westbound Old Baltimore Pike, where his car hit the rear of a second vehicle that was in front of it,

But the damage sustained in those two crashes disabled May's Jaguar, forcing him to a wooded area in the northwest corner of Route 896 and Old Baltimore Pike, according to police.

CAI NFWS

Troopers and other law enforcement officers set up a perimeter around the wooded area. They used K-9 units and a Delaware State Police helicopter in the manhunt.

At one point during the concentrated search, May was seen running out of the woods onto I-95, police said. Investigators believe that May crossed the interstate's southbound and northbound lanes, before running into the woods near Welsh Tract Road. The concentrated search then was shifted to that wooded area and, once again, a perimeter was established.

The manhunt lasted seven hours, but officers were unable to find May.

Investigators did find six "bundles" of heroin, however, which contained a total of 77 bags of heroin on the shoulder of the road next to the disabled Jaguar, police reported.

A Newark-area woman who has spent several years volunteering in local schools was sworn in last week as the newest member of the Christina School Board.

Elizabeth Paige was appointed to fill the seat left vacant by the June resignation of Gina Backus. She will serve until school board elections in May when she can run for the chance to serve until 2016.

Paige, who lives in the Beechers Lot neighborhood off Salem Church Road, said she had considered joining the board in the past and decided to do it when the district put out a call for candidates this summer.

"When they needed the help, I saw it as a sign," Paige said.

She plans to use the next few months to help Christina implement the Common Core curriculum and said she is a proponent of school choice.

The shop moved to 58 E. Main Street, where the Delaware Book Exchange and TLicious used to be located. Angela Tsionas-Matulas, the owner of that building, is planning to tear down her propriety in 10 months and offered the empty space to the New-ark Bike Project on a tempo-rary basis for a cheap rent, Murray said.

"This is an amazing spot, right in the center of Main Street," Murray said. "There is a huge amount of people walking by, and business definitely increased since we moved here.'

The new store is 9,000 square feet, which allows the Newark Bike Project to have three more mechanic stands, resulting in volunteers being able to help 50 percent more costumers. The new space also allows for an inside test drive, where customers can test their new purchases or their repaired bicycles, and provides additional storage space, resulting in the store being able to take more bike donations, its main source of revenue

On a recent evening, Zyair Brown, a junior at the University of Delaware, was purchasing her second bike at the Newark Bike Project. She acquired her first bike from the old store on South Main Street, but it got stolen and she came back to the store to to the Newark Bike Project for its friendly and relaxing environment. She said she can find good quality bikes at a fair price and knows she will believes it will allow the Newark Bike Project to compete with the other bicycles shops on Main Street.

"I think it is a much better idea as so many more students are on Main Street," Brown said. "It gets more attention as it is on the front of Main Street and if you are in a good place, you get more business.'

Murray said the group still does not know where it will be relocating in 10 months after the building is torn down. He said he hopes the group can find a suitable long-term location.

Baner's field goal lifts UD to homecoming win

By JON BUZBY Newark Post columnist

Sean Baner's 42-yard field goal as time ex-pired lifted Delaware to a thrilling 33-30 home-coming win over Albany on Saturday afternoon.

game-winning The score was set up when, with the Hens trailing 30-22, Trent Hurley threw a strike to Rob Jones in the left-hand corner of the end zone and then lofted a fade pass to Michael Johnson in the right-hand corner for the two-point conversion to tie the game at 30 with 1:42 to play. The Hens then stopped the Danes on downs and drove the ball 38 yards to set up Baner's homecoming heroics.

The made field goal helped the 17,363 in attendance forget a missed field goal that sailed wide right and two missed extra points caused by bobbled snaps. Punter Eric Enderson was brought

This is what I'm supposed to do. Without the offense and defense doing their jobs, I wouldn't have had the chance. They put me in a great position to make a winnable kick.

At times, Delaware looked like the team that defeated James Madison two weeks ago here at Delaware Stadium, and at other times resem-bled the squad that was trounced in Maine just one week ago.

"This was a hard-fought game, and we are very excited that it turned out the way it did," first-year Delaware head coach Albany. He is first in Dave Brock said. "We active FCS coaches in had some tough situations that we overcame

Hurley completed 20 of 34 passes for 207 yards and a touchdown. Nick Boyle led all receivers with 73 yards on five receptions despite leaving the game early in the second half with an undisclosed injury. Andrew Pierce had a team-high 125 yards on 20 carries. scoring two touchdowns on runs of 6 and 4 yards.

10 LOCAL NEWS Glasgow athletes 'Care' about their community

By JON BUZBY

Oct. 26 is a rare off day for all but one of the Glasgow High School fall sports teams.

But instead of sleeping in, hanging out with family and friends or heading to part-time jobs, the majority of the school's athletes and coaches are participating in the school's inaugural Glasgow Care Walk before they head to Delcastle to watch the Dragons face the Cougars on the gridiron.

The walk begins at 10 a.m. in the stadium. As of this week, there are nearly 100 students registered, and the general public can sign up during school hours at the school or starting at 9:30 a.m. the morning of the event. Of the $10 registration fee, $7 will be donated to the local Red Cross and $3 goes toward the school's athletic department.

"At the end of last year, we decided that we wanted our athletes and school in general to be more involved in the community," athletic director Jeremy Jeanne explained. "We want our student-athletes to understand that being an athlete want our athletes to understand that privilege, we want them to understand the importance of giving back. Our kids are very excited about this event."

A simple idea that started out as a relatively small walking event involving only studentathletes has since expanded to include any interested member of the student body, their family and friends and the general public. The overwhelming positive response was one reason Jeanne decided to expand the Glasgow Care concept beyond the athletic department.

"The original goal of the Glasgow Care campaign was for Glasgow High School student-athletes to give back to their community," Jeanne said. A dozen or so students partici-pating in Saturday's morning walk are doing double-duty, as they plan to spend the afternoon at the Veterans Hospital in Elsmere to visit with the veterans and make blankets for them.

"I was very excited about volunteering for this because I believe it's an honor to be able to meet some of the veterans is a privilege and because we who had a hand in keeping liberty in America," junior tennis player Jackie Cornejo said. "I'm looking forward to hearing about how life changes after being part of something as big as serving the country."

Saturday's community outreach is just another example of a year-long effort by the Glasgow athletes to give back to the community. Other initiatives include visiting elementary schools in the district to read and donate books during the winter months, and hosting an egg hunt in the spring for kids with disabilities or who are in a shelter.

"Our mission as educators is to produce responsible and productive citizens that give back to their communities," Glasgow principal Dean Ivory said. "I am so proud of our student-athletes for leading by example."

That example has now expanded beyond just the athletic department, and although that was not the original intent, eanne couldn't be happier that it is the end result.

"Glasgow students truly care about the community," Jeanne beamed. "I just love it!"

Out of the Attic

This week's Out of the Attic item is a picture of six household objects from different Newark area homes that were damaged by fires. The objects are from the collection of Diane Silveman, a local volunteer fire safety instructor. She has been teaching and collecting for 30 years. She is an active member of the Aetna Hose, Hook, and Ladder Fire Com-pany and the Aetna Emergency Ambulance Service.

The three large round pieces forming the triangle in the center of the picture go together as a mug and coffee maker. A faulty clock type timer started a fire near the old coffee maker. It spread rapidly and burned the wood cabinet above spilling the coffee cup down into burning plastic. The upstairs smoke de-tector woke up the family just in time.

Going clockwise around the circle, the plastic canister in the lower left was stored on the stove top too close to a burner turned on in error. The little bedside radio in the upper left corner caught fire when a small pillar candle, with no holder, burned down and onto the radio after the occupant dozed off. As his bed caught fire, he awoke and smothered the fire with his pillow. Some of the feathers from the pillow can still be seen attached to the radio and wire

A house electrical line was struck by lightning, but this little square whole house surge protector blew out and stopped the electrical surge in its tracks. The pillar candle in the upper right was left unattended, with no holder, on a bedroom dresser. It burned completely through, set the dresser top on fire, and set off the smoke alarm. The last object in the lower right was a stack of styrofoam coffee cups. They had been normal size, stored on top of a kitchen cabinet. A large grease fire caused them to shrink as the hot air rose upward. Plastic gives off toxic fumes.

Is your house fire safe? If something does happen, GET OUT and call 911. Let the Aetna volunteers handle it. Support your local fire service with a thank you and a donation.

nomic impact of the facility, and some were concerned with TDC's lack of experience building data centers. The one planned for Newark would be the company's first.

Meredith suggested council and residents dig deeper into these risks before buying into the benefits.

"We are the beta test," she said. "We can expect issues and setbacks."

Kern tried to calm some nerves by ensuring those at the faculty senate meeting that TDC has done its homework by working with a variety of firms to determine its marketability, sales model and design for the data center and power plant are valid. He also discussed the industry's need for a larger, cleaner, more efficient data center.

According to Kern, the average size of a data center is 2,500 square feet and only 35 percent efficient with neither the capacity nor the ability to expand. TDC hopes to be a leader in the industry with its 900,000-square-foot facility, which will be 50 percent efficient, eventually up to 70 percent.

"Putting more electricity into a small space and trying to cool it is a problem facing the industry," Kern said. "We think we have a solution to that with this data center."

Because the data center will generate 248 megawatts of power on site and not take power from the grid, he said the servers are safe from grid outages and will never go down. This method, Kern explained, is more efficient than the typical data center which uses 72 diesel generators and 12.5 acres of batteries that he said "put off more pollution by far than this data center does in a year."

But John Morgan, UD physics and astronomy professor, wasn't satisfied. He spoke at the faculty senate meeting, asking what impressions the data center and power plant will make on prospective students and their parents.

104 Sandhill Drive

into the sky. "Do we want a cloud half this size hovering over our campus?" Morgan asked, noting that TDC's proposed plant would generate nearly half the electricity of Lake Side.

Although there have been a handful of public information meetings and discussions about the power plant, some residents still feel the process has not been transparent enough. This, Kern said, has been partly due to the fact that the project is still in the early stages and the company cannot fully answer all the specific questions fired at them over the last two months.

"The design is not complete," he said. "Construction drawings haven't been created yet."

TDC is nearing the end of what Kern called a 24-month development phase and will be entering the design phase of the project, which will be finished sometime between March and April. TDC plans to hold a public meeting once the designs are finalized and plans have been drawn up. But residents refused to wait on Monday night, demanding that council give them answers and information they believe council has been withholding. Councilman Luke Chap-

Councilman Luke Chapman told the crowd that is not the case and he is still learning specifics as they continue to emerge. "I'm getting information just as you are" he said. "I have no information that you don't have."

As discussions continue both for and against the proposed power plant, Deputy Mayor Jerry Clifton said council members will gather as many specifics as they can and provide residents with answers to their lingering questions at the next meeting. At this time, however, he said they do not have the information at their fingertips.

Greater York

"I don't expect council to shoot from the hip," Clifton said.

Tastes like fall Savory and sweet combine in fall recipes

By DARA MCBRIDE Special to the Post

Outside it smells like woodsmoke and wet leaves. Inside it smells like nutmeg, cinnamon and apples.

Fall is here — outside and inside the kitchen — and so are dishes with apples and pumpkin and sweet treats for Halloween.

Now that the hot weather of summer is in the past, get ready to eat some richer and hotter dishes. Baked potatoes make for easy meals, and the addition of some mashed pumpkin is a way to sneak a vegetable in.

When it's time for Halloween, children will be ready to trick-or-treat. If. you're craving something sweet too, try a recipe that's a quick snack, like homemade puppy chow. Also try a dessert that can be made as a single serving, like individual choco-pumpkin tiramisu, severed in mini glass iars.

try these savory and sweet recipes this fall.

Twice-Baked Pumpkin Potatoes

Pierce 4 potatoes with a fork; bake at 400 degrees for 45 minutes. Halve and scoop out the flesh; mash with ½ cup pumpkin puree, 1/2 cup sour cream and z¹/₂ cup shredded cheddar cheese, 1/2 stick butter and tablespoons chopped chives. Add more or less pumpkin as desired. Spoon into the potato skins; bake 20 minutes. Sprinkle with nutmeg before serving.

Apple Cider Fondue

In a medium saucepan, bring 1 cup cider or hard cider to a simmer over medium heat. In a medium bowl, toss 1 cup shredded yellow cheddar and 1 cup shredded Monterey jack cheeses with Gradually stir the cheese refrigerate for approximate-

Whatever you're craving, mixture into the cider until melted and smooth. Add nutmeg to taste. Transfer to fondue pot. Serve with sliced apples.

Maple Apple Kebabs

Soak four wooden skewers in water for 15 minutes. Heat oven to 400 degrees. Cut 16 ounces fully cooked kielbasa into diagonal bitesized chunks. Slice two apples, preferably Braebun or Fuji, into chunks. If desired, quarter one medium onion for kebabs. Alternating between kielbasa, apple and onion, thread the skewers and place in a baking pan. Brush the skewers with 1/4 cup maple syrup and cook for 20 minutes.

Oreo Fudge Balls

Crush one package Oreos in a food processor until crumbs form. Use mixer to combine crushed Oreos and one block softened cream tablespoons cornstarch. cheese. Shape into balls and ly an hour. Remove from Pumpkin Spice refrigerator and dip each into melted white chocolate. Keep refrigerated.

Salty Turtles

Place pretzels on baking sheet. Unwrap one bag Rolos candies and place one on each pretzel. Bake approxi-mately 3 minutes at 250 degrees. Immediately press M&M or Reese's Pieces candy piece into each Rolo. Let cool. Can be refrigerated or stored at room temperature.

Quick Pumpkin Mousse

Whip one small package instant vanilla pudding mix and one small package instant butterscotch pudding mix with 2 cups skim milk. Let set for 5 minutes. Fold in a can of pumpkin puree, 8 ounces Cool Whip and tablespoon pumpkin pie 1 spice. Keep refrigerated and serve chilled.

Savory and sweet-

Puppy Chow Heat 1 cup white choco-late chips and ¼ cup butter together in a glass bowl in the microwave. Stir in 1/2 cup peanut butter, 2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla until smooth and combined. Place 9 cups rice or corn Chex cereal in a large mixing bowl and pour the chocolate mixture on top of the cereal. Gently toss to combine until the cereal is evenly coated. Add 1 cup powdered sugar and half of the cereal mixture to a bag. Seal, and gently toss to combine until the cereal is coated. Add the remaining cereal and toss again to combine until the cereal is coated. Place in a dish to serve and toss Reese's Pieces on top.

Choco-Pumpkin Tiramisu

a food processor, coarsely

chop 4 ounces bittersweet chocolate and 4 ounces semisweet chocolate. Whisk chocolate into ³/₄ cup strong hot coffee until melted. Stir in 2 tablespoons bourbon. In large mixing bowl, cream together 1 1/2 cups mascarpone cheese and 1 cup powdered sugar. Add 1/2 cup heavy cream and 1 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and continue to whip. Sprinkle in 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon and 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg. Gently fold in 1 cup pumpkin pu-ree. Mix well until creamy. Dip ladyfinger cookies into coffee mixture until soaked but not soggy. You will need 20 to 30 cookies. Arrange in single layer in bottom of small glass canning jars, breaking cookies if needed. Alternate a layer of cookies with a layer of pumpkin mixture until jars are full. Sprinkle just enough shaved semisweet chocolate over each jar. Cover and refrig-On a cutting board or in erate for at least 4 hours. Serve chilled.

Sixers defeat Celtics 97-85 at Bob Carpenter Center

By JACOB OWENS

Special to the Post

More than 4,600 spectators flooded into the Bob Carpenter Center last Friday night to watch a rare NBA game played in Delaware.

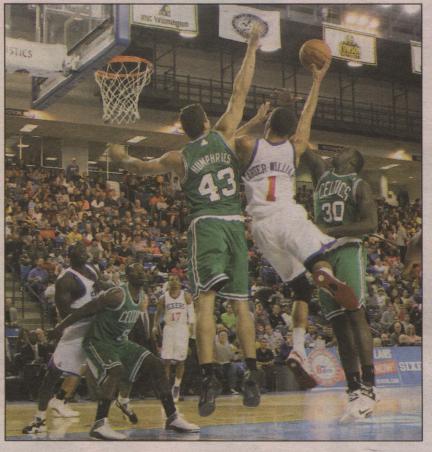

As part of a promotional tour of the region with the Delaware 87ers beginning play in the NBA D-League in Newark this fall, the Philadelphia 76ers squared off with the Boston Celtics in a preseason matchup on the University of Delaware campus.

Fans were entertained with a variety of dunks, three-point shots and entertainment between quarters.

In the end, the hometown Sixers earned a 97-85 victory, largely on the play of starting power forward Thaddeus Young, who finished with 20 points, six rebounds and three steals; small forward Evan Turner, who scored 12 points and added nine rebounds; and rookie guard Michael Carter-Williams, who finished with six points, six rebounds and six assists.

Also playing in the game for the Celtics were former NBA All-Star forward Gerald Wallace and starters Kris Humphries, Jeff Green and Avery Bradley.
