Time to move on

By MARTY VALANIA

Finally, we can all move on.

Daimler-Chrysler AG announced Monday that is selling an 80.1 percent stake in its struggling Chrysler Division to Cerberus Capital Management LP, a private equity firm that specializes in taking public companies private and turning them around financially.

What does this mean for Newark's Chrysler plant?

Nothing. Absolutely nothing.

In fact, if anything, it should mean that no more energy or effort should be wasted on trying to save the plant from closing.

Cerberus isn't going to announce that it is going keep the plant operating past its scheduled idling date. Private equity firms make the companies they run profitable by cutting costs — not adding to them.

Even United Auto Workers president Ron Gettelfinger recently was against this deal because all private equity firms do is "strip and flip" the companies they buy. That is, they come in, cut costs dramatically (by cutting jobs and combining operations for example) and then turn around and sell the now more attractive company at a profit. Gettelfinger, when he saw there were no other viable options, changed his tune and backed the deal. But he still knows that there won't be any adding of jobs or plants.

Keeping the Newark plant open hasn't made sense in a long time — it certainly won't

On the second Saturday of the month, September through May, the Iron Hill Museum of Natural History hosts a "Super Science Day," where visitors can go on a special tour designed to pinpoint a scientific niche particular to the local geographic area.

This past Saturday, May 12, was Archaeology Day, where children and adults were invited to be artifact detectives. Visitors were taken on a brief walk past several artifacts, and were asked to guess what these artifacts were.

Some of the mysteries proved to be the stem of an old pipe, a worn button with an eagle on the surface, a rusted horseshoe, an iron file, a bullet and a little ceramic man who was once part

Sprinkler rules altered

Former councilman makes case against changing law

Newark City Council voted Monday night to provide an exception to the city's strict sprinkler law, going against the request of a former member of city council to leave well enough alone.

The existing law required a sprinkler system be installed in any building with residential units when there was a change in its commercial use. Main Street businesses were the primary target, as many of the buildings have tenants on the upper floors.

Christina has distinguished Title I schools

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Two Christina District schools, Etta J. Wilson Elementary School and Joseph M. McVey Elementary School, were honored at the Delaware Department of Education's Annual School Improvement Banquet in Dover this month. The schools were named National Distinguished Title I Schools at the National Title I Conference held in California and also nominated earlier this year as No Child Left Behind-Blue Ribbon Schools by the U.S. Department of Education.

"We are extremely proud that both schools in Delaware receiving the Title I Distinguished School recognition this year are in the Christina District," said Christina school superintendent Dr. Lillian Lowery. "Wilson and McVey have earned their place among the best Title I schools in the nation and the state, and are proving their commitment to student achievement each and every day."

According to the National Title I Conference publication, "Avenues to Excellence," staff and teachers at Wilson enhanced learning through "effective bilingual parent engagement, individualized learning plans, an effective use of resources, a team approach to planning, and educational field trips."

Wilson Elementary currently is home to one-half of the kindergarten, first, second and third grade Spanish-speaking students in the Christina District. Bilingual students receive a standards-based curriculum with the assistance of a Spanish-speaking teacher and an aide. More than 12 different languages are spoken at Wilson Elementary which is also Delaware's first No Place for Hate school.

Wilson Elementary was also honored with a 2007 Superstars in Education award from the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce for its "WRAP Kindergarten Program."

McVey Elementary's winning efforts included "mentoring programs which focus on literacy and math, a partnership with the University of Delaware which brings over 150 college students to McVey for one-on-one tutoring, TAM classrooms at every grade level, an extended day for at-risk kindergarten students, a team approach to planning, and reading resource staff members that use data to focus school programming and decision-making."

The Title I Distinguished Schools Program recognizes schools that ensure that all children have access to effective instruction and challenging academic opportunities, and that demonstrate sustained success for all children, particularly those who have educational or social challenges. These schools must have student poverty level of 40 percent or greater. Department of Education staff members visit the nominated schools and provide them with a grant to assist them in further developing their programs.

Based on analyzed performance data of all Title I schools statewide, Delaware's Department of Education identified the five highest performing Title I schools in the state and submitted two names to the U.S. Department of Education for national honors. Wilson and McVey were chosen as National Distinguished Title I schools.

"We are also excited that these Christina schools received two of the three state nominations as Blue Ribbon Schools," Lowery stated, "and will be delighted if they are chosen for this designation in September."

The U.S. Secretary of Education will announce the 2007 No Child Left Behind-Blue Ribbon Schools in September. This Program honors public and private K-12 schools that are either academically superior in their states or that demonstrate dramatic gains in student achievement in accordance with state assessment systems and rewards schools that score in the top 10 percent on state assessments.

CITY BRIEFS

Cleveland Heights discussed

Members of the Newark Housing Authority (NHA) were back before city council Monday night – this time with legal representation and an accountant – to ask for council's support in the demolition and sale of the Cleveland Heights property.

The NHA would like to demolish the Heights' 42 apartments and sell the property, using money from the sale to build or purchase another housing complex in Newark.

Only nine families live in Cleveland Heights at this time, and the vacant buildings are in disrepair, said NHA attorney Ron Gouge.

In January, the city provided a letter to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) stating that council knew about the proposed sale of the property.

HUD is now requiring a letter of support from the city, said Gouge.

Council is reluctant to offer this support without knowing the details of the project, and the NHA said it can't make those details public until after the sale of the property – a "proverbial Catch 22," as Councilman David Athey referred to it.

Gouge said the NHA has met with a developer to discuss the possibility of building a mixed-use housing complex in Newark with a portion of rentals being filled by low-income families. Also, the NHA has discussed purchasing an apartment building in town.

Neither idea can be pursued until HUD allows the sale of the Cleveland Heights property, which depends on the city providing a level of support. Council directed City Solicitor Roger Akin to meet with Gouge to discuss language for a letter.

Chapel Fest raises concerns

About 4,000 university students packed into Chapel Street the last Saturday of April for what has come to be known as "Chapel Fest."

The block party raised concerns for several city councilmen and their constituents. Councilman Jerry Clifton said the event, which is not sanctioned by the city, seemed "out of control." He suggested the city look into legislation to reduce the number of people allowed at outside events.

Councilman Stu Markham said he, too, heard from residents about Chapel Fest. "I know students are going to party, but we need to find a way to limit the number of students in one place," he said.

'Operation Lifesaver' shows dangers at grade crossings

By PHIL TOMAN

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

One of the railroads that operate through Newark and throughout the length and breadth of Delaware is the safest Class 1 railroad in the nation, and has been for 17 years. After a train ride provided last week for elected officials, police, media representatives and some other "shakers and movers," it is easy to see why that is so. That railroad is the Norfolk Southern.

Last week's trip was special in many ways. It was jointly sponsored by Delaware's Operation Lifesaver and the Norfolk Southern (NS). The invitation offered a chance to ride aboard a special round-trip train covering all three counties in Delaware, which could demonstrate a number of contributing factors relating to motor vehicle-train crashes and right-of-way trespassing incidents.

It is, or should be, an important topic for all because these types of accidents, maiming and deaths are among the most preventable of all.

To make this train trip more meaningful, the NS locomotive was camera and video-linked to large screen monitors in both cars of the special train. For many of us, it provided a whole new perspective, as we could see just what the engineer sees coming at him.

And see plenty we did: a large cement truck ran through flashing lights and clanging bells with a locomotive horn screaming as the train moved forward; a car with youngsters in it running through a red traffic light plus the flashing railroad signal lights and bells and our Diesel horn. We even saw a school bus violate the law and run through the red signals and bells to dash across ahead of our train.

Probably the scariest part of the trip each way was the grade crossing at U.S. Route 40. Traffic just kept moving at speed as though there were no warnings either audio or visual. One could not help but wonder if any of those drivers ever considered the weight of his or her car measured in pounds and the weight of the locomotive and coaches whose weight is measured in tons, and the outcome of a collision.

NS executives, safety personnel and railroad police made presentations. All had one theme: preventing accidents and saving lives. The question and answer session lasted throughout the trip with railroad personnel moving through each car to talk to passengers.

Doug Andrews, head of Delaware's Operation Lifesaver, explained what he was trying to accomplish with visits to schools and speaking engagements with adult groups.

Railroad officials revealed "Operation Officer on Board," which has a police officer in the cab who can see these dangerous violations. He calls the local police jurisdiction, and an arrest is made. There is a lot of extra effort and money to save people from accidents and death. Too bad drivers can't wait a moment or two and stamp out this kind of accident altogether.

The train left the NS yard here in Newark and traveled to below Harrington to show riders a good cross-section of the state. No county is immune to ignoring all the warning signals railroads put at grade crossings.

College visit 'makes it real'

Sophomores at Christiana High School traveled to Delaware State University in April for what DSU staffer Brenda Farmer called "Ms. Brenda's Keepin' It Real Tour."

Forty-eight CHS students had a first-hand opportunity to check out college majors, classrooms, residence halls, sports facilities, and recreational areas on the DSU campus.

Farmer also held a Q & A session where students' questions varied from curfews to SAT and GPA requirements. "You should never focus on the minimum," Farmer told them. "The higher your GPA and SAT scores, the more money you will be given to get your education. You can't turn a GPA around [in the last year] — you have to work hard all along the way."

Farmer used humor and real examples. "There is no curfew on Delaware State University's campus," she said, "but remember that in high school an 'F' is free. In college, you have to pay again [to retake and pass that course]."

Besides requirements and expectations, Farmer shared news about popular DSU programs like the Airway Science Program, in which students go up in the air during the first week of class. Farmer also said the university has one of the top business programs in the nation. Farmer also cited other benefits to attending Delaware State University: small classes, diverse population, and clean grounds. Farmer said that there are also many internships available and opportunities to study abroad. "Don't wait for your parents to lay out everything for you," she urged the high school sophomores. "Be more proactive about [planning] your college education. You can do these things for yourself."

Several CHS students have started to follow Farmer's advice. "The tour at Delaware State made me realize I need to try even harder in my classes to get better grades in order to get the college I want," said sophomore Dean Hunter. Sophomore Morgan McQueen learned that it would be much easier to go to an in-state college regarding finances. "I also learned that Del State has a lot of things I'm looking for, she said. I'm now planning to go there." The high schoolers also had a chance to dine and mingle with college students. "The food was on point," said sophomore Rashad Walker. "I had one scrumptious burger."

CHS team teacher Diane Sparks said Farmer covered a lot of ground with great enthusiasm. "The students were very excited about her presentation and proudly showed off the gifts she gave them," Sparks said. "Almost every student carried the items to school the next day."

Other teachers and parents also found the trip to be a rewarding one. "Today was extremely worthwhile for the students because the tour opened a lot of eyes," said Denise Rosaio, team teacher. Parent chaperone William K. Dadson added, "The trip has actually opened up a new frontier for the students. I strongly feel that some of the students will be aided greatly by this tour."

Elementary students presenting 'Annie'

St. John the Beloved School in Milltown is presenting its third annual full-scale production, directed by Allan Carlsen, in June. Under the musical direction of Lisa Papili-Carlsen, the musical "Annie" will be held on Saturday, June 2, at St. Mark's High School at 7 p.m. The cast consists of 80 St. John the Beloved students in third through eighth grades. The Drama Club and Choir meet weekly throughout the school year, while also presenting a Christmas Program each holiday season. The children also perform at other school and church functions throughout the year.

All tickets are $6 and must be paid in advance. Tickets cannot be ordered and held at the door. For more information on this event or to purchase tickets, please contact Lynne Carmack at (302) 292-0829 or sjbym@mac.com.

Middle school tournament concludes tomorrow

Christina District staff, teachers, parents and community members have helped organize a middle school, intramural basketball competition for the first time. Wondering about the moon?

Marshall Elementary students and their families gazed up at the heavens in wonder during the school's first-ever Family Astronomy Night in April. The event sponsored by the Marshall PTA featured local astronomer James T. Morgan, former vice-chair of The Astronomical League, a national organization of amateur astronomers.

Morgan's multimedia presentation featured footage shot from the Apollo missions of the lunar surface.

Audience members tried to identify a certain pattern of three craters. Students amazed their parents by pointing out key features: "They're all round, not oval;" "They're all the same size;" and "They form an arc."

During a question-and-answer session, students wanted

B.L.A.S.T. focuses on teen leadership

The Hip Hop round-table workshop drew the greatest number of students at the newly named B.L.A.S.T. (Building Leaders & Serving Teens) conference, according to lead conference co-chair Nicole Conte.

Approximately 200 Delaware middle and high schoolers and their advisors gathered at Wesley College in Dover for the leadership conference in early May. Offered exclusively to students who were trained as Peer Leaders by the YMCA Resource Center, the conference was entitled "Lean On Me" the first eight times it was held. "By changing the date and name of the conference and having a fun, tropical theme, the YMCA Resource Center hoped to generate more interest," said Conte. "That's exactly what we did!"

In addition to Hip-Hop, the 1st annual B.L.A.S.T. conference included workshops on: the positive and negative consequences of cliques; discovering and expressing each student's unique gifts and talents; "Myspace" and exploring cyberspace; celebrating diversity, not just tolerating it; planning and costs of a life path; the concept of privilege and ways to level the playing field; and testing knowledge of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs. POST COLUMNIST

On the road again

By RUTH KELLY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

I just had to write to let you know the latest happening at the Kelly house.

I received an ad from Newark Dodge that had a "scratch off" contest in which one could be eligible to win four prizes, including a three-day, two-night trip to one of 26 destinations. I always think these things are not real, but decided, what the heck.

I also had another plan in mind. I was growing weary of Kim talking, every waking moment, about going online to check insurance rates. She was also saving money for a "down payment." I normally just listened, smiled and wouldn't say anything. I knew insurance rates would be so high she wouldn't be able to afford it. I did, however, want her to experience what is involved in purchasing a car. I also wanted her to hear from someone else that she would have to wait and continue to save money.

As we were on our way to the dealer, I told her to expect a sales person running toward her, and that he would do anything to sell her a car, which is exactly what happened. I bet she was thinking – "wow, my Mom really knows a lot!"

Whenever we have big decisions to make, we touch hands and agree that we will have a good outcome. Usually, when I hold up my hand and ask her to touch and agree with me, she gives me a hard time. This day, she said, "Mom let's touch and agree." She sat down with the salesman, and I found a seat with my dog, Pumpkin, and watched from a distance. I was thinking that this will be a good learning experience for my daughter, and she would stop blaming me for not supporting and helping her. She picked out a car, took a test drive and then they got down to the paperwork. You could see the excitement in her face. Then the fateful question – "do you have insurance?" I peeked over Pumpkin's head and watched my daughter's head drop when the salesman told her insurance would be more than $600 per month. I looked over and saw her eyes welling with tears, so I got up and took Pumpkin for a walk outside. Believe me; I was smiling, but broken-hearted also. It hurts to see your child cry.

When Pumpkin and I came back, there was a flurry of activity. Salespeople double-teamed and making phone calls. I was starting to get a little bit nervous. One associate brought me a cup of cold water for the dog, and one salesman ran next door to get me an iced tea when I said I was thirsty. He came back with a super-duper large one.

To make a long story short, I don't know how it happened; God must have intervened. Kim is back on the road again in a 2004 red Dodge Stratus. Somehow they found an insurance company whose rate was much lower than $600 per month. One other plus in Kim's favor was her credit worthiness. I have taught her well regarding the importance of what a good credit rating will get you in life, and she saw it pay off.

Of course, she didn't have the car 24 hours before we had our first big fight. I told her that she hasn't driven for eight months, and asked her that when she got off work at 8 p.m. to come straight home. I wanted her to wait until Sunday morning before she went to work to take the car for a drive and "get the feel of it." When 9 p.m. rolled around and she was not home, I worked myself into frenzy. When she hit the door around 9:30 p.m., I was a raving maniac. It took two Xanax and Lunesta to calm me down and then finally knock me out. The next morning, she came and apologized and told me that she would prove to me that she would be responsible.

Her first full day back on Delaware's highways, I panicked each time I heard a siren. I received three calls from her shortly after she drove to my office to "just pop in" and bring me a jelly doughnut. (Please know that she calls now to see if I need anything, hoping I will say yes and she will have to drive to go get it.) Each call made my heart skip a beat. Call number one: "Mom, I just got an 'A' on my English final." (I'm thinking, "oh my God what did she hit.") The next call came 30 minutes later: "MOM, a bird pooped on my head." After that call, I had had it and told her not to call me again.

How long will this anxiety last? My friends tell me it never ends.

By the way, she didn't mind my sharing this news with all of you. In my heart, I think she has learned her lesson about distractions, cell phones, loud booming music while driving. I only hope it lasts after the newness of driving again has worn off.

Please keep us in your prayers. I asked her to promise me that every time she gets into the car to say a prayer of thanks to God, because He had to have had His hand in this, and also to pray for travel mercy. I also called the doctor to send me some more pills. Stay tuned!

P.S. I did win the three-day, two-night mini-vacation. The closest destinations are Washington, D.C., or Williamsburg, Va. The salesman recommended one of the trips to Florida with Kim doing the driving. I don't think so.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's Out of the Attic features a photograph thought to have been displayed in the old Washington House at one time. Former Newark residents Dorothy and Howard Cage acquired a collection of photographs when the tavern closed, said their nephew Bill Barrow, who donated the photos for use in this space. This photo shows West Main Street. Readers who have a historic picture and would like to share it with other readers are invited to loan their photos for reprinting in this space. Special care will be taken. For information, call the Newark Post, weekdays, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 737-0724.

Jarvis: No beltway for Newark

The grandiose plans for a state-built beltway around Newark have been buried under Delaware's mound of financial troubles.

Requiem for all but a few miles of the controversial roadway was delivered Monday by state Secretary of Highways and Transportation George Jarvis, after a review of statewide capital projects was submitted last week by Governor Pierre S. duPont's Capital Projects Review Committee.

The Newark beltway hailed as the answer to Newark's traffic problems by its supporters and called an environmental disaster that wouldn't help traffic by its detractors – was born in the 1950's when large-scale highway projects were in fashion. Conceived as a four-lane limited-access highway swinging west around Newark and originally estimated at $3 million, the beltway was downgraded through the years to a two-lane ring road while its price tag

'Young and dumb' no excuse for Cinco de Mayo party

To: the Editor
From: Vivian Rapposelli

My parents sent me off to the University of Delaware fortified with a simple message: the collegiate experience will broaden your mind, expand your horizons and introduce you to the real world. Unfortunately, they were right. Although I have wonderful memories of my days at UD, the recent incident involving students celebrating Cinco de Mayo with stereotypical racist Latino garb brought back memories of the culture shock I experienced nearly 20 years ago.

While attending my first frat party, I witnessed the response of an arrogant student when two African-Americans showed up. He began taunting them with racial slurs, and I watched in embarrassment as others were merely amused. As a Latin American, I was used to similar stereotypical, racist behavior and tended to associate it with the "young and dumb."

Years later, when I was in court with a client, I saw "young and dumb" with an unchanged, overbearing attitude now presenting his case before an African-American judge. I recognized the same disdain in his eyes. His lack of respect to the court reminded me of my old college days, yet the provincial bigoted student was now a professional in our community. "Young and dumb" had turned "old and bold" but hadn't outgrown the narrow-minded attitude.

Rather than go into a whole diatribe about how the conduct of UD fraternity students at a Cinco de Mayo party was an example of racist behavior that has no place in a learning environment, let's focus on the bigger issue. These students may well be the future leaders of our community, and while some people may dismiss their behavior as stupid and immature (weren't we all young and stupid once?), the reality is that if such offensive behavior is not confronted, it amplifies the divide between cultures and continues into adult lives.

Apologies were offered, a town meeting was held to address the concerns of the Campus Alliance de La Raza, a message from President Roselle reiterated that celebrating racist stereotypes of the Latino culture was counter to University values, and Phi Sigma Pi carried out its own disciplinary actions against the offending students. Although some may regard the scope of this response as much ado about nothing, ignoring or dismissing bad behavior is effectively condoning it.

A wake-up call now will go a long way toward affecting future behavior. I wish "young and dumb" had had his wrist slapped years ago, when it may have made a difference.

I also wish the current political awareness had existed when I was a student. I offer kudos to our leaders for responding as they did, and I applaud the offending students for apologizing.

To all UD students, I offer the sentiments my parents expressed and the words they drilled into my head: Expand your mind, broaden your horizons and be a respectful part of the real world. Act like someone is always watching—because they probably are.

Vivian Rapposelli heads up the only all Latino law firm in Delaware, Rapposelli and Gonzales, with offices in Wilmington, Milford and Philadelphia.

What will happen to land?

make sense to Cerberus.

I think everybody can agree on that.

Now that this is known, can we please move on to the issue of what's going to happen to that property?

The Chrysler plant is in a valuable location. What's next?

Is it a spot for some high-tech industry to come in and take advantage of the proximity of the University of Delaware and some chemical and pharmaceutical giants? Is it the location that the university has been seeking for an expansion?

There are a host of organizations that could help find out what the best use of this property is and we should take advantage of all of them. The state chamber of commerce, the New Castle County Chamber of Commerce, the Greater Newark Network, the Downtown Newark Partnership and the university should all be actively studying what would best fit in that location. In addition, they should be examining what needs to be done (and the associated costs with any transformation) to the property to make it attractive for the best possible solution.

This is the type of energy and effort that needs to be taking place at this point.

These organizations should be working with industries that will be prospering in the future—not one where leaders of both labor and management only worry about exorbitant health care costs that were granted when the industry was fat, happy and overconfident.

Just because the plant will be shutting down doesn't mean

Newark will be shutting down. To the contrary, Newark has a lot going for it and, because of that, has a chance to turn this negative into a positive—but now is the time to start working on it.

Years and years of speculation and questions have finally come to an end. It's time to move on.

Finally.

Taxes going up in Newark district

The Newark School Board has approved a two-cent tax hike per $100 of assessed valuation for 1977-78 residents of Newark.

At the regular board meeting last night, board member Randolph Lindell II explained the necessity of the tax increase because of an anticipated move by the legislature to transfer the cost of special education trans-

Newark has become the first municipality in Delaware to make failure to wear a seatbelt a primary offense. "The state of Delaware does not have this law, yet," said Mayor Hal Godwin. Talking with children about tragedy

By MARIA PIPPIDIS

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

Recent local and national news can be stressful to families and especially youth. As adults we try to protect children against tragedies. We would like to ensure that they have happy, innocent and carefree lives. But they see the news or hear about issues at school or from friends. So what is a parent, teacher, or other caring adult to do when disasters fill the airwaves and the consciousness of society?

Realize that kids have heard about it. They probably know more than you think. Not talking about it makes it seem "off-limits."

They have probably heard bits and pieces and don't fully understand what it all means. Adults may feel confused, hurting or angry but children need to feel adults are still strong and in control.

We all know that children will mirror adults. We can teach our children to fall apart emotionally at signs of danger, or we can teach them calmness in the face of unsettling times. Remember especially young children watch you to see the most socially acceptable response.

Be available and open for questions. Let kids know that it is okay to talk about the sad or unpleasant events. By listening, you can find out what they need to know and how you can support them. You do not need to explain more than they are ready to hear, but be willing to answer their questions.

Share your feelings. Tell young people if you feel afraid, angry or frustrated. Don't expect to find answers yourself in your children.

Main Street flag to fly by Memorial Day

Ceremonies start Sunday, May 20, at 1 p.m.

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A new flag will fly over the City of Newark War Memorial in front of the Academy Building on Main Street just in time for the city's annual Memorial Day parade and ceremonies to be held this Sunday, May 20.

Newark's VFW Post 475 raised the $4,000 necessary to install a flag pole at the stone memorial, which is marked with the names of Newark's own who died in World War II, the Korean and Vietnam wars.

"Everything looks good," said Post Commander Leroy Esh of the project. "The flagpole should be in by the parade."

Esh said, as of last Friday, the flag's concrete base had been poured. The flagpole is to be installed this Saturday, he said.

The site, which until now has been without a flag, plays an important role in the city's annual Memorial ceremonies.

Marching bands and military units will pass in front of a reviewing stand set up nearby during the parade which starts at 2 p.m.

And, after the parade, Newark Mayor Vance Funk and representatives of various veterans groups, including Cooch's Bridge Chapter DAR, American Gold Star Mothers, WWI Barrack No 2550, VFW Post 475, American Legion Post 10, Korean War Veterans, Submarine Veterans and a veteran of the Iraq war, will lay wreaths at the base of the memorial.

The day to celebrate, remember and honor our veterans begins at 1 p.m. on the University of Delaware

Green with the State Memorial Ceremony. Special guests include New Castle County Clerk of the Peace Ken Boulden, Lt. Gov. John Carney Jr., Admiral Morris D. Kerstein and Mayor Funk.

The honor guard from the U.S. Navy Reserve Center in Wilmington will be reviewed. Then, the names of those active duty Delaware soldiers who have died since last year will be read.

The parade starts at 2 p.m., marching in the reverse direction on Main Street. Parade Marshal Maj. Thomas E. Kelly, USMC retired staff, will be joined by honorary parade marshals from the Commission on Veterans Affairs.

Marching units include historic and active military groups, veterans' organizations and community groups, such as Boy Scout troops, fire companies and the Newark High School Marching Band.

City parking lots will be open for the day and restrictions in University of Delaware parking lots will be relaxed.

Car wash to benefit Rebekah Leithren Foundation

A car wash will be held this Saturday, May 19, to benefit the Rebekah G. Leithren Foundation.

The foundation, started by the family of Rebekah Leithren, a Newark resident who died at age 12 from a rare medical condition, raises money for research on the causes and cures of the disease that took her life.

That disease, Protein Losing Enteropathy or PLE, causes a patient to lose blood protein through the intestinal tract. As the protein level in the blood-stream falls, blood plasma leaks into the body's tissues, which can be seen in swelling of the patient's face, abdomen and extremities.

Current treatments include steroid therapy, hormone therapy and blood thinners, each of which has negative consequences with long term use, and painful intravenous albumin boosts. None of the available treatments addresses the cause of the problem.

As the disease progresses, the body attacks its internal organs as a source of protein. The disease often affects children like Rebekah who have had certain surgical procedures to fix an underdeveloped heart.

"Bekah's Car Wash" will be held this Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., at the Word of Life Christian Center at the corner of Old Baltimore Pike and Route 72. Requested donation is $5 per car.

Use art, music to express feelings

► OUTLOOK, from 8

Tell them how you plan to deal with your feelings.

Help children use creative outlets like art and music to express their feelings. Children may not be able to find the right words to describe their feelings. Using art, puppets, music or books might help children open up about their reactions. They may want to draw pictures and then destroy them, or they could want to display them or send them to someone else.

Reassure all your family members and help them feel safe. Children may be afraid that the same will happen to them. Help them understand that though they may see it on television, the tragedy may have happened far away. Tell them that you will keep them as safe as possible. You can always tell them that you love them.

Support children's concern for people they do not know. Children often fear for people they do not even know. They learn that many people are getting hurt or are experiencing pain in some way. Explore ways to help others.

Help find a course of action and take it. One important way to reduce stress is to take action. You and your family may want to write a letter to someone about your feelings, get involved in an organization working to prevent events like the one they are dealing with, or send money to help. Let young people help to identify the action choices. They may have wonderful ideas.

It is not enough to let children take action by themselves. Children who know that their parents, teachers or other significant caregivers are working to make a difference feel hope. They feel safer and more positive about the future. So do something. It will make you feel more hopeful, too. And hope is one of the most valuable gifts we can give children and ourselves.

Grounding yourself is important too. Deal with your personal feelings. Be in touch with your personal beliefs or religion. It brings a feeling of calm when life events don't make sense.

Managing during times of tragedy can be difficult; especially when daily life needs to continue on. Make time for addressing the concerns for your family members. Make time for you to use some of the above tips for yourself. You'll not only be implementing good coping strategies you'll be modeling these strategies for your family members.

'U don't need it?'

Departing UD students encouraged to participate in city recycling event

In an effort to reduce the amount of items sent to landfills each spring by departing University of Delaware students, the Town & Gown Environmental Cooperative has partnered with several agencies to organize a recycling event.

Starting May 21 and continuing to Sunday, June 3, a "U Don't Need It?" site will be open at the Curtis Paper Mill on Papermill Road. The site will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., for the receipt, storage and placement of items being discarded by students.

The program is meant to reduce the amount of items sent to landfill that could be recycled or reused. Partnering agencies will assist in efforts to get reusable items into the hands of people who need them. Hazardous materials will be collected and put in the control of the Delaware Solid Waste Authority for proper disposal.

Departing students are encouraged to participate to the fullest extent possible and can earn 10 percent discount coupons to be used at local businesses.

The event is being organized by Town & Gown Environmental Cooperative, the City of Newark, Green Delaware Recycling, Planet Aid, the Ministry of Caring, AMERICORPS, State Office of Volunteerism and the Food Bank of Delaware.

Volunteers are needed to assist at the site. Interested persons can contact Deb Hoff, chair of the Town & Gown Environmental Cooperative, at 831-8498, Carol Houck, assistant to the city manager at 366-7020 and Green Delaware Recycling at 609-405-0979.

IN THE NEWS

Museum houses Iron Hill history of a handle of an old pot. There was also broken glass from old bottles, old scraps of leather from old shoes, pieces of jasper and a button-maker.

The Iron Hill Museum, run by the Academy of Natural Science, is the primary educational resource for the study of human and natural history in the Iron Hill region of Newark.

It's housed in a former one-room schoolhouse on Old Baltimore Pike. Pierre S. DuPont built the school in 1923 by Pierre S. DuPont for African American children in the area. Now, the school building is crammed full with rocks, stuffed reptiles, animals, birds, snakeskins, arrowheads and more that make up the Iron Hill museum.

On Saturday, the museum was filled, too, with curious visitors. "We have to pass on the knowledge," said one woman from Chadds Ford, Pa. "The children are tomorrow's caretakers of our earth."

During June, July and August, the Iron Hill Museum will be hosting summer camps. For more information about the museum and their scheduled events check the Web site, www.ironhillmuseum.org, or call 302-368-5703.

Mayer enters state Hall of Fame

By TOM TOMASHEK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

When Vincent "Winnie" Mayer entered the Delaware Sports Hall of Fame last Tuesday night in the Chase Center on the Riverfront, the long-time Newark resident became one of nearly 250 inductees on the Hall roster.

Although many athletes got there before him, they are relative tourists when it comes to having roots in Delaware sports. Yes, Mayer, 96, was born in Elkton, Maryland, but he moved to the First State when he was five and over the last 91 years has earned his Hall of Fame residency as a Newark High and University of Delaware athlete and fan. Mayer has probably been around longer than Michigan began wearing the Michigan helmet, a Wolverine trademark that former UD football coach and athletic director Dave Nelson brought with him to UD in the early 1950s.

"My dad loved basketball, so we used to drive to games on a horse-drawn sleigh," Mayer said Monday afternoon. "We also used to sneak into Delaware football games when I was a kid, crawled through a fence."

Mayer was an all-around athlete at Newark High, who as his five brothers played on at least one of the school's six state football championships in that era. He graduated in 1929 and enrolled at UD where he played four years each of baseball and football. Granted, he's been a fan much longer than he was an athlete, but once an athlete, always an athlete, his fondest memories were of his playing days and not among the many highlights he's seen.

Mayer's finest moment came in 1930 when the Blue Hens secured what might have been the greatest victory in the football program's 115 seasons — bigger than any Temple, Villanova, Lehigh, or Rutgers triumph — a 13-12 victory over Swarthmore. The Pennsylvania college led the series 0-20-2, owned a 524-43 scoring advantage, and on 17 occasions shut out Delaware. Mayer explained the role he played in a triumph deemed so monumental that the president gave us off a day of school.

Newark nine rolls past Delcastle

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark's Jared Keith and Brandon Ellis each had two hits, and Billy Morton pitched four shutout innings to lead the Yellowjackets to a 7-3 Flight A victory over host Delcastle Tuesday afternoon.

Newark improved to 18-1 on the season and 12-0 in Flight A, while Delcastle fell to 10-8 overall, and 6-7 in conference.

"I was very proud of my team's effort today," said Delcastle coach Dave Battafarano. "We battled hard for seven innings against a strong opponent, but we never quit and we played with a lot of determination. Playing to the end, that's something we often talk about."

Newark began its scoring in the top of the third on a triple by Ellis, two walks, and a single by Keith.

The Jackets had a chance for another run, but second baseman Chadd Lane was thrown out at third base trying to advance on Keith's hit.

In the fourth, Casey Ferris reached on a fielder's choice and scored on Ellis's second triple of the game.

Ellis then scored on a wild pitch to give Newark a 4-0 lead.

Newark's batters continued their relentless attack in the fifth.

Keith doubled to start the inning, and streaked home on an RBI single by starting pitcher Billy Morton.

Morton then scored on a RBI double off the bat of third baseman Joe Brown, who eventually crossed home on a sacrifice fly to deep left by catcher Andrew Young.

Delcastle got on the board in the bottom of the sixth off reliever Lane. With two outs, Jeff Shughart reached on an infield error, advanced on a single by Jordan Santak, and came home on an RBI single by Jeremy Richardson.

In the seventh, Delcastle added two more runs off the bats of David Martin and Josh Smith.

"We want to keep firing on all cylinders, we don't want to let up now," said Keith. "We want to stay sharp for the tournament, if we're selected."

Newark coach Butch Simpson said he feels the team is rounding into shape for a possible post-season berth.

"Pitching and defense, that's the centerpiece of how we've had our success this season," said Simpson. "We find a way to win. We don't dominate people as much as we play the game clean enough to get results we're looking for."

CHRISTINA HOLDS MIDDLE SCHOOL TOURNAMENT

Teams from Kirk and Gauger squared off in a game last Saturday during the Christina School District's inaugural Middle School Basketball Tournament at Kirk Middle School. Teams from Shue also participated. The championship games will be held this Saturday at Kirk starting at 10 a.m.

St. Mark's tops Cape

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

St. Mark's used the long ball and a six-run fifth inning to defeat Cape Henlopen 9-2 at home Monday afternoon in a non-conference baseball game.

The Spartans raised their record to 15-2, putting themselves in a good position to make the upcoming 2007 Delaware High School Baseball Tournament.

"We definitely hit well in the fifth inning," said Spartan coach Matt Smith. "We were able to put that big inning together, and hopefully we can keep playing well the rest of the season."

St. Mark's scored a pair of runs in the bottom of the first to give starter Steve McCloskey an early cushion.

Spartan Shortstop Matt Harden started the third with a single to center, moved to second when the Cape outfielder bobbled the ball, advanced to third on a passed ball, and eventually scored on a single to right by Ryan McCallin for a 3-0 lead.

Cape Henlopen finally got on the board with two runs in the top of the fifth, and chased McCloskey from the mound. He was replaced by Justin King, who gave up a deep sacrifice fly to center and then walked the bases loaded.

Blue Hens upset Virginia in NCAA Tournament lacrosse

The University of Delaware registered one of the biggest wins in school history in any sport Sunday afternoon as the Blue Hens dominated the second half and stunned defending national champion University of Virginia 14-8 in an NCAA men's lacrosse first round game before 2,328 sun-drenched fans at Klockner Stadium.

No. 15 ranked Delaware (12-5), which won its sixth straight game overall and fifth straight on the road, broke a 7-7 tie early in the second half by scoring seven straight goals, including two each by Jordan Hall and Curtis Dickson, and cruised to the win.

The win advances the Blue Hens to the NCAA quarterfinals where they will play UMBC Sunday at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD. UMBC (11-5) No. 7 seed Maryland 13-9.

No. 3 ranked and second-seeded Virginia (12-4), which captured the NCAA Division I title last season with a perfect 17-0 record, had an eight-game home-winning streak snapped. The Cavs' top two leading scorers, Ben Rubeor (46 goals) and Garrett Billings (21 goals, 22 assists) were both held without a goal as the Hens came up with yet another stellar defensive effort.

The Blue Hens, playing in the NCAA Tournament for just the fourth time, posted their first tournament win since downing UMBC in the 1999 first round and snapped a streak of 20 straight losses to Top 10 opponents since that victory over UMBC. Virginia is the highest ranked opponent the Blue Hens have ever defeated as Delaware's only other top five win was a 9-5 victory over No. 5 Maryland in 1985.

"I am so impressed and proud of this team," said Delaware 29th year head coach Bob Shillinglaw, who also led UD teams to the NCAA Tournament in 1984, 1999, and 2005. "This is such a great group and the best part is that we get at least one more chance to play. They played their hearts out today but even more importantly, they executed well. We played aggressive defense and created a transition game and out offense took it from there. This win is right up there with any of them we've had here and that means a lot. I think today's win says a lot about the growth of not only our program but about the growth of the game."

Dickson, a freshman, led the Blue Hens with four goals and an assist while Vincent Giordano added two goals and an assist, team leading scorer Adam Zuder-Havens contributed a goal and two assists, and Brett Manney dished out two assists. Junior goalkeeper Tommy Scherr came up big all afternoon in the nets, posting a season-high 18 saves and consistently turning back an offense that entered the game ranked No. 4 in the nation in scoring with 11.6 per game.

Delaware's two-time All-American faceoff specialist Alex Smith, the 2007 CAA Player of the Year, was outstanding once again. The NCAA leader in each of the last three seasons, won 18 of 26 faceoffs and scooped up 10 groundballs and continued his assault on the NCAA and Delaware record book.

Spartans improve record to 15-2 with win

► SPARTANS, from 14

Oncay, who closed out the inning with a strike out.

"Oncay really pitched out of a jam in the fifth," said Smith. "That kept us in the ball game, and gave us a chance to increase the lead an inning later," he said.

In the pivotal fifth, Harden led off with a walk, stole second, then scored ahead of Evan Zechman's home run just over the left field fence to increase St. Mark's lead to 5-2. Eight batters later, the Spartans added four more runs to build up a 9-2 advantage.

Smith said the Spartans have been playing well in all aspects of the game recently. "We've been getting some timely pitching, our defense has been solid, and we've also been hitting the ball well over the past few weeks," he said.

Mayer honored at Hall of Fame induction

► MAYER, from 14

"Boo White and I usually alternated on the kickoffs, and I can't remember why he didn't kick that day," said Mayer, UD's oldest living letterman. "Well, I kicked off and shanked the ball about 35 yards. I kept right on going, mad as hell, and I bopped the sucker who caught the ball. He fumbled and we took it in for the touchdown. We went on to score and won the game."

"After the tackle, I was cussing about the kick and one of our guys said, 'Why don't you shut the hell up, you made a 35-yard gain.'"

Although associated closely with football in the last seven decades, Mayer's favorite sport was baseball, and he still cherishes the game in which he played every position during his high school, college, and amateur days. He was a member of a Delaware team that split a two-game series against George Washington University, the opener reported by a newspaper to be the first night game played in Washington, D.C.

"It's strange, my father's favorite sport was basketball, and he didn't care that much for football or baseball," Mayer said. "[UD] President [David P.] Roselle once asked me why I didn't play basketball at Delaware. I told him that I did play, but quit. I didn't like taking a shower after a practice or game and then having to walk three miles home in the cold wearing a big overcoat and carrying my books. I preferred to study."

Still, the urge to know his feelings about the present-day football situation, the man who saw hundreds of game, home and road, was asked about players and the five coaches who served after his playing days under Charles Rogers. He said he probably had the greatest rapport with Tubby Raymond, the most gregarious of the group, and as for a player he most greatly admired he paused before answering. His response was mildly surprising for one who has seen hundreds of UD games.

"I think it was probably [Bill] Vergantino," he said of the gritty quarterback who started four seasons, beginning in 1989. He was tough and he ran the Wing-T to perfection. I can remember sitting next to a guy at Marshall when Vergantino was sick during that playoff game [1992 NCAA quarterfinals].

"The guy said, 'Where did you get him? He's good.' I told him, if you think he's good, you ought to see him play when he's not sick."

As for Mayer, he's been an enthusiastic, positive fan for many decades, but considering his zest for life and sports at age 96, it would have been a delight to see one of the newest Delaware Sports Hall of Fame members play.

New use cannot increase hazard class said John Farrell, a former city councilman who worked to implement the sprinkler laws a few years ago. "We didn't want to create hardships for anyone in Newark, but we also wanted to create a better life/safety standard in Newark."

The fire department looks at Main Street as an "extremely vulnerable area" due to the density of buildings and the mixed use, said Gene Niland of Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder Company.

"We look at this as hoping against hope that, in the long haul, the original ordinance would eventually drive sprinklers into every one of these buildings, so it would lower the exposure to people dying in tragic fires," he said.

But, some argue, the law created unintended hardships for Main Street property owners who found the costs of installing a sprinkler system prohibitive.

Steve Pilnick, who owns 48 and 50 E. Main Street, said the law is "simply too restrictive." His building, which does not have a sprinkler system, has been vacant for several years. Estimates to install sprinklers were in excess of $85,000. He said he would not be able to recoup those costs from tenants.

Pilnick could rent to "mercantile" businesses, such as a shoe repair shop, without triggering the sprinkler law, but, he said, those types of businesses "simply are not in demand any longer" on Main Street. He said, if the law were changed, he would seek to bring in an architectural firm, creative shop or a fitness center to the space.

After hearing comments from fire personnel and business owners, council voted in favor of altering the sprinkler law.

The approved change allows an exception to the existing law if the city's building director determines three conditions are met: the change in use does not increase live loads, occupant load or exceed 2,000 square feet per floor area.

Council voted to add two additional conditions to the exception. The new use must not increase the building's "hazard class" as defined by the National Fire Protection Association, and property owners must install a fire alarm system that is connected to the fire department.

Council voted 5 to 2 in favor of the law with these amendments. Councilmen David Athey and Doug Tuttle voted against it. Tuttle said, "In the long run, our interest for community safety is to have the building sprinkled. I, personally, don't see any reason to amend what was done (in the past)."

More setback wanted

tenor of one of our oldest, most classic neighborhoods."

Because of the size of the project, Baggott said he will only be able to see a "very large, institutional office building" through the windows on the side of his home fronting the property.

Another Winslow Road resident, James McGee, said, as designed, the project will "change the entire dimension of the street."

Currently, the building is to be set 15 feet away from Winslow Road. McGee and others said this setback should be larger.

Their comments were made at Monday's meeting of city council before Rick Armitage, director of UD's government relations, made a presentation about the planned building, showing several drawings.

Armitage said, because of the growing interest in the University of Delaware, the university needed more space to house its admission staff, registrar's office and financial aid. "Over the last five years, it's been more and more of a need to create some sort of facility to deal with the volume of students looking at the University of Delaware," he said.

Armitage said the university considered other locations for the building, including the former Jewish Community Center on the corner of Park Place and S. College Avenue, but decided the Winslow Road site was the best location.

By law, the University of Delaware is not required to follow the city's zoning laws or go through the process of having projects approved by city council. The city has no say in new development projects on campus.

Even so, the Winslow Road residents felt it necessary to make their concerns heard. "We're hoping it's not too late for them to make a change of vital importance," said Pat McGee, referring to the building's proposed setback from Winslow Road.

Armitage assured residents he would convey their thoughts on the setback to the university's senior administration.

Making a better Newark

Manns Avenue home selected for city award

The city of Newark's Conservation Advisory Commission (CAC) has chosen the property at 116 Manns Avenue, home of Steve and Debbie Hegedus, to receive the "A Better Newark Award."

The property was chosen for improvements made in energy efficiency. Earlier this year, the homeowners had solar electric panels installed on their roof to convert sun energy into an electrical current.

The solar project was the first in Newark to make use of the state's Green Energy Fund, which offers rebates of 50 percent or up to $22,500 on solar installation projects as an incentive to homeowners.

The CAC selects homes, periodically, for such measures as waste reduction, energy, water and soil conservation or landscaping and structural renovations.

The award was established about 20 years ago to recognize property owners of houses and businesses for improving the environmental integrity and appearance of their property.

Anyone may nominate a Newark property for this award by completing a nomination form, available at City Hall at 220 Elkton Road.

Ashok Verma, 59, journalist, activist in India

Ashok Verma, 59, of Newark, died on Sunday, May 6, 2007 at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md.

Verma was born on June 28, 1948, at Varanasi, located on the banks of the Holy Ganges in India, in the house of his maternal grandfather, Mehtab Rai, younger brother of the novelist, Munshi Premchand.

He spent his early childhood in Avon Grove & Liza Hill tea estates in the green valleys of Darjeeling, which were managed by his father, Krishna Kumar Verma, who was a veteran freedom fighter, an eminent educationist and also the first Indian to manage a tea estate.

Verma attended the Gujarati High School and had his early college education in D.B. College of Science, Gondia. After the death of his mother, the late Laxmidevi, Verma with his brothers and sisters moved to the town of Jabalpur where he completed his bachelor's degree in science and then attained a double master's in literature and sociology.

Verma led the student movement during the turbulent years of the 1980s as the President of the University Students Union in Jabalpur. After a year of teaching English literature in S.N. Mor College, Tumsar, Verma returned to Jabalpur to take up a career in journalism at the Narmada Herald, the first English news daily in town. He also contributed extensively by writing on subjects of public interest and social advocacy in World Features.

Verma married Mridul, who had family in Delaware, in 1977. He was appointed by the UNI, the leading News agency of India to cover news originating from the State Capitol, Bhopal. Verma was sent to study the working of newspapers in the U.S.S.R. during the Cold War period and obtained specialist training at the Warner-Lamberg International Institute of Journalism in Berlin, East Germany.

He covered news relating to the infamous gas leakage at the Union Carbide factory in Bhopal in 1984 for the French News agency, AFP. In 1988, a year after the birth of his son, Pranshu, he moved to Delaware, where he joined The News Journal, looking after the archives and photographic section. He gained various IT skills and, in his spare time, created a news Web site dedicated to India. His link is www.neeti-marg.tripod.com. The Web site will continue to be a living tribute to Verma, who became a U.S. Citizen in 2001.

Verma leaves behind his wife, Mridul, and son Pranshu, who is a student at the University of Delaware. His interests in journalism will be carried forward by his younger brother, Jayant.

Children needed for study of attention

By CHRISTINE NEFF

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Research being done now in a Newark-based study may contribute in the future to a better assessment of children suspected of having Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). The research is being conducted by BioAssessments, a company formed by Licensed Psychologist Christopher Hyde.

"One of the main problems in ADHD now is trying to figure out who has it," said Hyde, who has spent the last 12 years doing research and clinical work on attention disorder.

Typically, a child is diagnosed after parents and teachers evaluate his or her behavior using scientific rating scales. The system works, but is subjective, Hyde pointed out.

He is studying the possibility of an objective, biological measure, "to see if there are differences in how your child's brain works when they try to pay attention."

In his study, Hyde tests children between the ages of 7 and 16. He works with kids that have diagnosed attention disorders and those that have no problem paying attention. The kids perform a variety of tasks while Hyde and his assistants monitor such factors as blood flow, heart rate and blood pressure.

Hyde compared the brain to a leg muscle in order to explain what he's looking for in test results. Like the leg, the brain must have a consistent supply of blood in order to work, he said. "If you don't have consistent blood flow to the brain, you can't expect a child to have constant, on-task behavior," he said.

Through his research, Hyde is hoping to come up with a "fingerprint," a group of biological factors that identify what happens when people pay attention. These factors may differ in children with ADHD, he proposed, and could eventually lead to a better understanding of the disorder.

But that's a long way off, he's quick to point out. "It's my ultimate goal, but I'm certainly not there now," said Hyde. "It will take more studies."

His study, which is funded by the National Institute of Mental Health, is now starting its fourth summer. Already, 100 kids have participated. Hyde hopes to test another 250 children.

The tests are completed over two visits to the BioAssessments office on Chapel Street. Participants receive $50 for the first two-hour visit and $100 for the second four-hour visit.

Hyde said children who participated in past summers enjoyed the experience, even though the tasks they're asked to complete are a bit on the boring side. No Spiderman or Harry Potter movies, here. "To study attention, you need to have kids do something very boring," he said.

For more information or to volunteer for the study, call 731-2886 or e-mail participate@bioassessments.com.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN DETERMINATIONS OF BASE FLOOD ELEVATIONS FOR NEW CASTLE COUNTY, DELAWARE (AND INCORPORATED AREAS) UNDER THE NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM

On January 17, 2007, the Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency identified Special Flood Hazard Areas (SFHAs) in New Castle County, Delaware (and Incorporated Areas), through issuance of a Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM). The Mitigation Division has determined that modification of the elevations of the flood having a 1-percent chance of being equaled or exceeded in any given year (base flood) for certain locations in these communities is appropriate. The modified Base Flood Elevations (BFEs) revise the FIRM for the communities.

The changes are being made pursuant to Section 206 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Public Law 93-234) and are in accordance with the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended (Title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, Public Law 90-448), 42 U.S.C. 4001-4128, and 44 CFR Part 65.

A hydraulic analysis was performed to incorporate the effects of the improved topographic data and revised hydrology along Muddy Run from just upstream to approximately 5,400 feet upstream of State Route 896 and NW Tributary to Muddy Run from approximately 100 feet upstream to approximately 3,100 feet upstream of confluence with Muddy Run. This has resulted in an increase in SFHA width and establishment of BFEs for Muddy Run and NW Tributary to Muddy Run. The table below indicates new established BFEs for selected locations along the affected lengths of the flooding source(s) cited above.

| Location | Existing BFE (feet)* | Modified BFE (feet)* |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| Muddy Run | | |
| Just upstream of State Route 896 | None | 45 |
| Approximately 5,400 feet upstream of State Route 896 | None | 70 |
| NW Tributary to Muddy Run | | |
| Approximately 100 feet upstream of confluence with Muddy Run | None | 48 |
| Approximately 3,100 feet upstream of confluence with Muddy Run | None | 52 |

*North American Vertical Datum, rounded to nearest whole foot

Under the above-mentioned Acts of 1968 and 1973, the Mitigation Division must develop criteria for floodplain management. To participate in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), the community must use the modified BFEs to administer the floodplain management measures of the NFIP. These modified BFEs will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents and for the second layer of insurance on existing buildings and contents.

Upon the second publication of notice of these changes in this newspaper, any person has 90 days in which he or she can request, through the Chief Executive Officer of the community, that the Mitigation Division reconsider the determination. Any request for reconsideration must be based on knowledge of changed conditions or new scientific or technical data. All interested parties are on notice that until the 90-day period elapses, the Mitigation Division's determination to modify the BFEs may itself be changed.

Any person having knowledge or wishing to comment on these changes should immediately notify:

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF
CHESTER COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA
ORPHANS' COURT DIVISION
ADOPTION NO. AD-07-0013 A.L.B.

TO: Louis R. Bentivegna, Jr.

A Petition has been filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Chester County asking the Orphans' Court to put an end to all rights you have to a male minor child, A.L.B. (d.o.b. 5/13/96), and to show cause why your parental rights to this child should not be terminated involuntarily. The Court has awarded a Citation on this Petition for Involuntary Termination of Parental Rights.

The Court has set a Call of the List for Monday, June 18, 2007, at 9:30 o'clock a.m., Honorable Paula Francisco Ott Court Room No. 1, Chester County Courthouse, High and Market Streets, West Chester, Pennsylvania, to determine which day your case will be heard, and to show cause, if any you have, why the relief sought in the Petition should not be granted. If you have not signed an acknowledgement that you are the father or have not made a claim that you are the father, your rights may also be terminated forever unless you appear at this Call of the List for the purpose of objecting to your rights being terminated or file a written objection with the court prior to the hearing. You or your lawyer should be present at the Call of the List to find out the specific date that your case will be heard. If neither you nor your lawyer appears for the Call of the List, you may not find out when your hearing will be.

You are warned that even if you fail to appear at the scheduled hearing, the hearing will go on without you and your rights to this child may be ended by the court without your being present. You have a right to be represented at the hearing by a lawyer. You should take this paper to your lawyer at once. If you do not have a lawyer or cannot afford one, go to or telephone the Lawyer Reference Service, Chester County Bar Association, 15 West Gay Street, West Chester, PA 19380, Telephone No. (610) 429-1500 to find out where you can get legal help.
