ity crews worked through the weekend as Newark dug out from two feet of snow and waited for the next storm.

An unofficial measurement from the National Weather Service was 24.2 inches

As of Monday morning, the storm had accounted for 621 man hours from 23 Public Works employees. Crews also spread 250 tons of salt. Crews continued to clear roadways and sidewalks on Monday.

A variety of equipment was used, including 11 trucks and spreaders, one backhoe and one rubber tire

The Parks and Recreation Department also contributed eight staffers who each put in 20-25 hours of labor for snow removal from Friday evening to Sunday night.

The Parks Department also clears the City Hall parking lot and municipal lots.

Parks also takes on the task of clearing the 10.5 miles of city sidewalks. That includes sidewalks in and near city parks and other municipal property.

City revenue gap rises to $4.7 million

By MARK CORRIGAN

MCORRIGAN@CHESPUB.COM

At Monday night's meeting, City Finance Director Dennis McFarland had bad news for City Council members. McFarland reported Newark city revenues $4.7 million dollars below budget estimates, due to a poor performance in utility funds and a sharp decline in transfer tax revenues.

The budget gap could have been much worse. According to McFarland, "Partially offsetting this was a nearly $2 million reduction in operating expenses." He also stated that the final year-end deficit "could be better by a few hundred thousand dollars" after final adjustments and payments have been made.

The report showed that down $5.7 million, with electric revenues down $4 million due to conservation efforts, a mild summer, and financial restraints on customers from the depressed economy.

Real estate transfer taxes, which were $1 million below estimates, were another main contributor to the shortfall.

The report also showed a $1.8 million decrease in cash on hand, leaving a balance of $12.5 million. The report stated, "Establishing adequate cash reserves remains a key financial challenge for the city." Mayor Vance Funk stated it more plainly, "It's going to be a tough year."

Council approved the rezoning of a 1.165-acre parcel located at 136 Elkton Road, the site of the Eagle Diner and other businesses, from general commercial to utility net revenues were central business district.

The Council also approved the demolition of the present site and the construction of a 10,600 square foot mixed use building with commercial space on the first floor and 14 two-story apartments on the upper floors. All apartments will feature independent heating and cooling systems with the option of converting them to owner-operator condominium units. The project went before the Planning Commission in July, 2009.

Angela Tsionas-Matulas, representing her father, owner Gus Tsionas, stated before the Council that the project was initiated to "fit in with the redevelopments on Elkton Road."

DelTweet draws crowd

Nearly 170 persons attended last Wednesday night's DelTweet 3.0 at Kildare's, on Main Street. As the name indicated, it was the third such networking event to be held in the state and the first in Newark.

The event featured Gov. Jack Markell using his Twitter account for the first time and raised a reported $700 for the Food Bank of Delaware, headquartered near Newark.

Markell, who was one of the original employees of cell phone start-up Nextel, said he supports social media as a way for Delawareans to communicate with each other and as a catalyst for job creation.

The event attracted Twitter users throughout Delaware.

Twitter limits messages to 140 characters and Markell said he was not sure how that would go over among politicians

Markell joins a handful of Ken Grant, of Newark, one of the orgagovernors from both parties who are now using Twitter.

Pair of cars broken into at car dealer

Last week, Martin Honda, at 298 E. Cleveland Ave., reported a pair of vehicle break-ins. On Tuesday, an employee at the maintenance department told police that a car that was to be serviced was found with a broken passenger-side window and a cement block in the front seat. The car was kept on a secured and gated lot at the deal-ership. The glovebox had been left open, but no other tampering could be found on the car.

Last Thursday, a customer complained that the contents of his glovebox were strewn about the front area of his vehicle and that several items, including a Nintendo Gameboy, were missing. This car was also kept on the lot.

Robber pulls gun on victim in parking lot

A man visiting his girlfriend at her apartment was robbed in the parking lot of the Northgate Commons in Newark. When questioned, the man stated that he had been walking towards the middle entrance of the building, along the sidewalk, when an unknown black male approached the victim and demanded he turn over all his money The suspect was described as wearing a black jacket with hood that obscured his face. The victim proceeded to give the suspect $200 from his wallet when a second suspect came out from between two cars, carrying a small, black revolver and poking it in the victim's chest.

The victim surrendered the total amount in his wallet, over $600 in cash, and various credit and debit cards. The victim did not see where the pair had fled because he had run into the building.

A K-9 unit followed a track to the northeast corner of the Sleep Inn, where it ended. A few footprints were recovered in the snow. Police are still investigating.

Not much of a chase

A New Castle County Police Officer, who stopped a car for a minor registration violation, suddenly found himself engaged in a brief foot pursuit with a slow footed man who was unable to outrun the much younger officer.

Police learned the subject tried to run because he had been drinking and was wanted for failure to report to a correctional facility to serve jail time for his 4th DUI conviction.

On Feb. 4 at 4 p.m., Officer Scott Pastuszak was traveling on Route 2 (Kirkwood Highway) near Red Mill Road, east of Newark, when he observed a vehicle with a fictitious registration plate. Pastuszak then activated his emergency equipment as the driver pulled behind the Red Mill Shopping Center and suddenly stopped.

The man exited his car and tried to run. Officer Pastuszak quickly caught up to the driver and took him into custody.

Police learned the driver, Jeffery Schneider, ran because he had a capias for his arrest, had been drinking, and he believed he could have outrun the officer.

Schneider, who resides in the 800 block of Birchwood Drive, in the Ogletown area, was charged with his 5th DUI, driving while suspended, and resisting arrest. He has been arraigned and committed to the Howard Young Prison after failing to post a secured bail.

Suspected arrested after robbery

A Wilmington-area man was arrested for allegedly robbing a Rite-Aid drug store at 4607 Stanton Ogletown Road, south of Newark, in the late afternoon of Feb. 7. He was identified by the Delaware State Police as Kevin Smith, 45, of Shea Circle, Wilmington.

Troopers reported that a white male robber entered the store and approached the clerk. The bandit was wearing a knit hat pulled tight down over his head and sunglasses. The suspect presented a note to the cashier which threatened the employee and demanded money. The cashier complied and the robber fled the scene.

The suspect was seen getting into green Chevrolet Cavalier, which was last seen fleeing eastbound on Route 4. A Troop 6 patrol unit located the vehicle on Churchmans Road and noted the license plate was covered with duct tape. A pursuit got under way and the suspect attempted to elude capture by driving to the Christiana Mall area.

The suspect got out of his vehicle in the area of the JC Penny's and took off on foot. A Troop 6 patrol officer located and apprehended the suspect in front of the Men's Wearhouse.

Smith was formally charged with Robbery (felony), Wearing a Disguise during the Commission of a Felony (felony) and Disregarding a Police Officer's Signal (felony). He was committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institute in lieu of a $32,000.00 bail.

Body found in snow

Delaware State Police are investigating the death of a man whose body was found buried in the snow.

Troopers were called to the 1200 block of Old Baltimore Pike in the early morning hours of Saturday. A resident was shoveling snow from the driveway when he found a boot in the snow. Upon further investigation the man found the 49 year-old victim in the driveway covered in snow. The victim was unresponsive and was later pronounced dead.

The initial call came in as an officer down, due to the victim being dressed in his security guard uniform. The victim resided in the area and troopers believe he left work early and suffered a medical condition before collapsing. The 49 year-old victim's body was turned over to the medical examiner's office to determine the exact cause and manner of death. Troopers can not determine at this time if the death was weather related.

Man charged with 2nd degree murder

Wilmington Police detectives have announced the arrest of the suspect from the Thursday, February 4 shootout.

Eric T. Howell Jr., 21, of the unit block of Queen Circle in the Christiana area, was arrested at approximately 8:00 pm Monday February 8 at the Christiana Hospital where he is recovering from a wound he sustained during the robbery. Howell Jr. was charged with the following offenses:

- Murder 2nd Degree (Felony)
- Robbery 1st degree (Felony)
 Attempted robbery 1st degree (Felony)
- Possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony. 3 counts. (Felony)
- Aggravated menacing (Felony)

Howell was arraigned at the hospital and turned over to the custody of the Department of Corrections in lieu of $1 mill-lion.

Killed in the shooting incident was 38 year-old Darrell Swain of the 300 Blk. of North Rodney Street, Wilmington.

Early on Feb. 4, Wilmington Police detectives were investigating a homicide.

Upon conclusion of the investigation, a Wilmington Police detective was walking back to his vehicle which was parked in the 200 Blk. of N. Broom Street approximately 30 feet south of W. 3rd Street. As the detective arrived at his vehicle's location, he saw what appeared to be a street robbery in progress on the southwest corner of the intersection of 3rd & Broom streets.

The robbery suspect was apparently holding two victims at gunpoint when the detective announced that he was a police officer and ordered the suspect to drop his weapon. The preliminary investigation indicates that the suspect began firing his weapon at which time the officer returned fire. The suspect was struck at least once in the head and the officer was uninjured. During the exchange of gunfire, Swaim, was also shot in the head. Both were transported to the Christiana Hospital where Swaim was pronounced dead.

The officer involved in the shooting, a 23-year veteran has been placed on Administrative Leave per Departmental Policy until the completion of the investigation by Detectives, Office of Professional Standards, City Solicitor's Office and the Attorney General's Office.

More snow predicted this week

storm has been a challenge, especially when it comes to clearing sidewalks. Crews often have to wait until streets are plowed, since some of that snow ends up on sidewalks.

The work is being made more urgent by predictions of additional snow later in the week.

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm watch on Monday for Delaware. A storm from the Midwest is expected to come into contact with a coastal storm. The heaviest snow is expected to be in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, although the Weather Service warned that totals could be significant throughout the region.

Delaware officials said the Weather Service estimates snow totals of six to 12 inches. There is the possibility that precipitation will be heavier in the northern end of the state for this storm. However, even if the storm starts as a rain/snow mix in southern Delaware and along the coast, it is forecast to later turn to all snow.

Due to the predicted intensity of the storm, the deadline for the Newark Post was moved up 24 hours. An Olde World Restaurant and Pub

Governor Markell and DNREC Secretary Collin O'Mara spoke about environmentalism in Delaware at the recent forum on "Environmental Policy and You" organized by the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Newark. This was the first of their Green Matters in the Delaware Region series on Wednesday evenings at 7 pm through March 3 (www. uufn.org).

The Governor advised that the environmental and economic futures of Delaware are interdependent and his focus on green jobs will foster economic growth and protect our fragile resources. He highlighted his energy efficiency and renewable energy policies from his first year in office, including changes to Delaware's net metering law to enable those with distributed renewable energy (such as solar panels), to sell their excess generation to the grid, and the energy efficiency resource standard, which will require a 15% reduction in electricity use in Delaware by 2015. He also discussed why

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's Out of the Attic item is a reprise of the picture of Steve and Amanda Williams sledding that appeared January 8, 2010. Seeing the picture, Steve sent an email with picture details and Newark notes from half a century ago. Steve wrote, "The picture was taken about 22 or 23 years ago at the Fairfield Crest Park, near the swimming pool. At the time, we lived about a block away on Lynn Drive. The young lady in the picture is now 27 years old. My wife Holly and I and our two daughters, Mandy and Lizzie, still live in Newark."

He continued, "I am a native Delawargan."

He continued, "I am a native Delawarean. My parents moved from Wilmington to a farm on the DE/MD state line on Dixie Line Road in 1950. The last ¼ mile of I-95 was once 22 acres of the farm. It was at the state line that President Kennedy dedicated the turnpike and, if memory serves me correctly, that was his last public appearance before he was killed. In the 1950s, you could watch tanks being tested from the playground at West Park Elementary School. Kirkwood Highway and Elkton Road were two lanes. Dixie Lin Road was a dirt road, so no school buses would come up it. [So] I can tell my kids about having to walk to the end of the road just to catch the bus. One the weekends, you could rollerskate at the Maryland Roller Rink, go to the State Theater, or go to a U of D football game for 25 cents. Oh, how things have changed."

From 1950 to 1952, Skip taught organic chemistry and did post-doctoral study at the University of Illinois with the eminent polymer chemist, Dr. Carl S. Marvel. Inskip worked as a polymer chemist for the DuPont Company from 1952 until his retirement in 1985.

Lois, Skip's wife of 53 years, died at their home on March 20, 2002. Skip is survived by a brother, Kenneth A. Inskip, of St. Louis, MO; three children, Gregory A. Inskip and his wife, Betty Collins Inskip, of Kennett Square, PA; Peter D. Inskip of Rockville, MD; Elizabeth I. McCombs and her husband, Maxwell E. McCombs, of Austin, TX; four grandchildren, Louisa K. Inskip, Robert G. Inskip, Maxwell I. McCombs, and Samuel E. McCombs; and many nieces and nephews.

Inskip's wishes were that there be no memorial service or funeral and that any memorial contributions be made to the charity of the giver's choice.

of the project, Tsionas-Matulas said that the start time would be dependent upon the cooperation of all the present tenants. She tentatively gave a completion date of spring 2011.

Both Tsioans-Matulas and her father hope that all tenants will return to the new building, but know that the businesses must weigh their options that will come from being out of business for eight months or more. The other factor in the timeframe is the legal agreement of honoring the leases of the tenants, which is two years in most cases.

Also approved was a special use permit for Rohit Patel, the owner of Abna Bazaar, on Kirkwood Hwy., to open a second location in the Stop-N-Park Shopping Center, located at 267 Elkton Rd., in the former site of the Finnaren & Haley Paint Store. The store will feature groceries only and will not sell tobacço or alcoholic products. According to the permit, no cooking will be allowed on the premises.

Patel, in a letter to the Council, wrote that he hopes "to bring in 500 families to shop" in his store every week and that he will "satisfy this community as far as their Asian grocery needs."

he vetoed the repeal of the bottle bill, and his vision for state-wide curbside recycling.

DNREC Secretary Collin O'Mara spoke about environmentalism from a personal, introspective approach. He reviewed attitudes towards the earth and environmentalism across ancient and world religions, quoting a Native American proverb that "we do not inherit the earth from our ancestors, we borrow it from our children." The responsibilities of stewardship and environmental protection may conflict with the name of his department, the Department Natural Resources and Environmental Control, but he is making progress towards a more holistic approach in state government.

During the speeches and the question period, it became clear that both gentlemen have strong convictions about the importance of responsibility in achieving a more sustainable future. We must all do our part – walk the walk in addition to talking the talk. We must transcend ceremonial environmentalism to have hope for a more sustainable future.

Inspired by the philosophical discussion of environmentalism anchored in individual responsibility, I reflect upon the challenges and opportunities that we face in our own community in Newark. We have had tremendous improvements to policies and programs for energy sustainability and environmental stewardship.

Curbside recycling, launched less than a year ago, has been a tremendous success in Newark and in the first six months of the program recycled close to 3,000 tons of waste and saved the city more than $38,000 in tipping fees at the landfill. Newark's curbside recycling program is truly what the Governor was referring to when he linked environmental protection with financial prosperity. Our electricity supply is heavily dependent on dirty sources of power, such as coal and nuclear energy. Newark has included several programs in the 2010 budget that will improve energy efficiency and conservation in Newark, thereby reducing the pollution and damaging environmental impacts of our energy supply. An electric rate study has the potential to offer a rate structure that rewards conservation; and a conservation advancement program could provide the education, skills and tools to reduce household energy consumption. Newark is also evaluating its renewable energy portfolio, which could further reduce our reliánce on environmentally harmful energy sources.

While our local government continues to develop programs for environmental protection, the responsibility also falls on each one of us. Curbside recycling sounds great, but are we taking advantage of this opportunity that is right at our doorstep? A recycle bin only becomes a tool for environmental protection when we use it. Do we recycle at work and while out in public? And, perhaps more importantly, are we making decisions at the store that reduce our waste by buying materials packaged in recyclable containers or with minimal packaging?

Energy conservation and efficiency is another area where individuals can promote environmental protection in our own homes. Reducing our energy consumption through the use of efficient light bulbs, thoughtful consideration of the indoor temperature of our homes, reduction of the phantom loads from our TVs and electronic entertainment by unplugging or using power strips, and turning things off when we are not using them can also protect the environment right here in Delaware. It will also save a lot of money

'She Stoops to Conquer' major triumph

........ NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

"She Stoops to Conquer"

That is, the University of Delaware's Professional Resident Ensemble Players (REP) production of Oliver Goldsmith's phosphorescent masterpiece triumphs.

This uproariously funny comedy of confusion, after gracing the raked (slanted) Thompson Theatre stage in U of D's Roselle Center for the Arts with eight enthusiastically received performances, goes on hiatus until Thursday, February 18. There will then be four more performances. You've been given adequate warning; get your tickets now.

'She Stoops to Conquer," one of the few 18th century plays to be regularly performed for modern audiences, turns on an (im)practical joke and a blind date. These help create a complicated, convoluted plot based on miscommunication and mistaken identities while exploring ethical, aesthetic and class issues. And the chasm between artifice and reality.

Sounds weighty highbrow? Pish tosh. With Goldsmith's fast-paced script, the company's dazzling costumes, technical perfection and luminous characterizations that REP's audiences have come to expect, "She Stoops to Conquer" is a must-see.

Goldsmith's second play, and originally titled-later sub-titled- "The Mistakes of a Night," "She Stoops to Conquer" premiered in London on Monday, March 15, 1773. It was an immediate hit.

A philosopher at heart, Irish iconoclast Goldsmith was an early opponent of the pervasive humorless theatrical sentimentality. However, his masterwork succeeds because of its gentle, good-natured blend of "sentimental comedy" and the then nascent "laughing comedy."

At the show's iridescent center is upper class Londoner Charles Marlow, who becomes a stammering, timid, slight, terror-riddled milquetoast when confronted with "a single glance from a pair of fine eyes" from a woman of his own class. He's about as selfassured as a sword swallower with hiccups. And later on, his prospective father-in-law refers to him as "one of the most bashful and reserved in all the world." 0 great, damned with beige praise.

Yet-and this is one of the most comical yets in post Restoration theater-master bashful is quite frisky with females of the lower order.

We first encounter him when he's on his way to the Hardcastle's country estate to court Kate, the daughter of the county house. The two have never met. When Marlow and his London friend George Hastings mistake the Hardcastle home for an inn and the owner and his daughter for an innkeeper and wench, hilarity ensues as Kate "stoops to conquer" as she plays a saucy servant in order to catch Michael Gotch gives a finely textured, bravura performance as Marlow. The actor has an obvious native intelligence about his character and slips into it like a powdered hand slips into its tailor-made glove. At Marlow and Kate's first "interview" (meeting), Gotch, Houdini-like, somehow makes himself smaller as he becomes the quaking, meek Marlow. It's magical. And, in lesser hands, could so easily be overplayed.

Goldsmith's quoted as saying, "girls like to be played with, and rumpled a little too, sometimes." Elizabeth Heflin, as Kate, holds her own with Gotch when the rumpling ensues as Marlow, the cockscomb seducer, attempts to verbally simonize Kate, the true conqueror. Their time together, with its modulated slapstick and pratfalls, its point perfect gestures, is itself worth the ticket price. It's also a tribute to the fine direction of Sanford "Sandy" Robbins and Stephen Pelinski.

At first hearing, urbanite George Hastings seems to be Marlow's sidekick. However, in the capable hands of Mic Matarrese, Hastings is his. own man as he connives with Constance Neville, the other female lead, played by Carine Montbertrand. One won-ders, though, if the heat of the Hastings-Neville romance could be notched up a bit and delineated more forcefully. As Goldsmith explains, "romance and novel paint beauty in colors more charming than nature."

Mark Corkins is spot on as country squire Hardcastle, who grumbles, "I wonder why London cannot keep its own fools at home," and then, by turns, is all faux obeisance, obtruding gasbag and comical flabbergast when confounded by two of London's habitues.

Another of this production's strengths is its secondary players. They give the play additional loft and heft. The skuzzy quintet of Hardcastle's male household servants, with exquisite timing and physicality, are joys to behold. Four of these lovable dunderheads double as tavern rustics.

Backyard gardening is on the rise, and the trend is expected to continue this year. It's no wonder with issues of the economy and wanting to eat locally. It's hard to believe with the snow cover on the ground, but it's that time of year to start planning and thinking about your vegetable garden.

When it comes to successful gardening, planning and organization can be good skills to have; and can be a big benefit to you for this season and many seasons to come.

Stoops

Think about the space you want to plant the vegetable garden. You'll want to aim for maximum sunlight exposure, good drainage, and easy access for you and for watering. You'll also want to think about the type of bed that you want and what your land, time and dollars can support. Do you want a traditional in-ground garden or a raised-bed garden? Will you container garden or use trellises? Will your garden have a theme? Make sure to consider vegetables that you actually enjoy eating, but don't be afraid to try something new! There are many options and you are only limited by your creativity, space, time and money. Remember, if you are new to vegetable gardening, start small. Gardening can be time consuming, and it is easy to get discouraged by starting

A great small starter theme garden is a salsa garden. Plant couple of varieties of tomatoes, peppers, cilantro, garlic and onions. Or, give it an Italian spin by planting basil, oregano, thyme, garlic, onions, tomatoes, peppers and egg-

Sketch out a rough idea of what you want to plant with dimensions allowing for proper spacing of plants. Keep in mind some plants take much more space than others. For instance, members of the cucurbit family (cucumbers and melons) require about four to five feet planting distance between rows and 18-inch spacing in rows, but garlic only requires a foot and a half to two feet between rows and 3-inch spacing in rows. You can also drastically decrease the amount of foot space that you need by planting 'up' or trellising.

Hunger is an issue that we may not think about, but is prevalent even within our community. This year if you can, plan to add an extra row or plant per vegetable type and donate the harvest to the Food Bank of Delaware. 'Plant-A-Row' is a program sponsored Delaware Cooperative Extension and the Food Bank of Delaware to help promote awareness and fight hunger in Delaware. Those that can are asked to donate extra produce to the Food Bank. You may drop off your harvest or other food donations to the Food Bank of Delaware at 14 Garfield Way in Newark, or for more information call 302-292-1305.

Castle County New Extension has fact sheets and information to help you with your vegetable garden. Stop in our office located at 461 Wyoming Road in Newark, Delaware, call 302-831-2506 or visit http://ag.udel.edu/ extension/ncc/nccindex.php for more information.

Red Lion Christian 13-year-old QB commits to USC

By JON BUZBY

JONRUZRY@HOTMAIL COM

I'd be remiss to not offer my two cents on the news that we reported last week online as our print edition hit the streets.

David Sills, a highly-touted quarterback attending Red

Lion Christian
Academy, verbally accepted a football scholarship offer from USC
coach Lane Kiffin
via telephone last Thursday night.
However,

Sills has yet to take a competitive snap at any level of high school football, and according to Red Lion Christian coach Eric Day, will see very limited, if any, varsity action in the fall.

"As of right now, senior DJ Russell is our starting quarterback," Day said in a telephone interview the morning after his prodigy quarterback committed. "We have a freshman schedule next year playing several very good teams out of state, so [Sills] will play with that team. But he has five quarters a week, so hopefully, if we are able to get some big leads, we'll give him a quarter or so at the varsity level.

"He is one of a group of young kids that are very talented and so we are looking at the big picture and would like to keep them together."

The 5-foot-11, 136-pound seventh-grader has traveled the country attending football camps, most notably to California where he has been tutored by Steve Clarkson, whose previous students include NFL quarterbacks Matt Leinart and Ben Roethlisberger, along with current USC signal-caller Matt Barkley. And it was a tip from Clarkson to Kiffin that initiated what seems to have become the "phone call heard 'round the world."

Sills was instructed to place the call to Kiffin because, according to Day, NCAA rules prohibit a college coach from initiating contact with a recruit until May of his junior year. Sills will not be able to officially sign a letter of intent until Feb. 2015. And while that signing might be years away, Day is confident the young prodigy's time will come. "Skill-wise he is ready to play varsity right now, but stature-wise, he is not," added Day, who has served as an assistant coach at the college level, including at Delaware State University. "He is very special."

The offer by Kiffin, and subsequent acceptance by Sills, sparked a national debate on sports stations across the country as to whether or not offering a scholarship to a seventh-grader should even be allowed. Some blamed the parents, while others, including yours truly, blamed Kiffin and the NCAA for even allowing it to happen.

But perhaps it was the father, David IV, who played quarterback at Newark High in 1978, who defended the move best when he pointed out through several media outlets that if his son was an ace in math or a gifted pianist and offered the same opportunity, the rest of the country most likely wouldn't be as critical. But because it's football, all of a sudden we tend to criticize and question.

The bottom line is that neither party is bound to anything. A lot can happen in five years: injury, loss of interest in the sport or school, or a change in the USC coaching staff.

This story brings to mind thoughts of our last local prodigy, Elena Della Donne, whose situation unfolded before our very eyes. We learned firsthand that sometimes things don't work out as planned. But fortunately in her case, they seem to have worked out for the best.

We can only hope for our most recent local prodigy, that if and when and wherever he ends up playing quarterback at the next level, his story turns out as well as our last one's did.

St. Mark's girls enjoying perfect season

It's been the perfect season thus far for the Lady Spartans, who have come to rely on players in all grade levels to achieve their unblemished record to date. And with senior captain Annie Rivituso out until at least the end of the month with a broken finger, her teammates will need to continue to step up in order for St. Mark's to continue its quest toward a state championship.

Coach John Fiorelli has been pleased with the steady play of seniors Amanda Farrell and Briana Goodge, and has been pleasantly surprised by the improvement of up-andcoming sophomore Lindsey Nichols.

"I'm very pleased with our season up to this point," Fiorelli said. "Right now we're dealing with the loss of our senior captain and everyone on the team has had to step up a bit, and that has meant some younger players have had to play more minutes and our older players have had to provide even more leadership."

After having its Monday game against Hodgson postponed due to weather, St. Mark's will take a perfect 12-0 record into its game at St. Elizabeth on Thursday night.

Two difficult pieces of business are Kathleen Pirkl Tague's turn as the sometimes shrewish, often petulant, always outrageous Mrs. Hardcastle, and Cameron Knight's limning of Tony Lumpkin, Mrs. Hardcastle's mischievous, uneducated and apostate son-a "very consumptive figure, truly.

One wants to go along with these two comic characters but the characterizations at times cross over that thin follicle between artful eccentricity and buffoonery to campish artifice. The two characters seem to have no redeeming qualities, little of Goldsmith's good-natured intent, nothing with which to sympathize, and are weighted down by an inexplicable edgi-

Mrs. Hardcastle seems too often to inhabit the land of snarkiness and at times comes Lumpkin's anti-Methodist ditty should be a delight, even to our modem-day ears. It is not, because it is garbled. Lumpkin's voice too often moseys between a crackling cranky cackle and something out of "Mayberry RFD."

This being said, and one hears Mrs. Hardcastle's complaint of "this is all but the whining end of a modem novel," the Resident Ensemble Players' production of "She Stoops to Conquer' leans much more toward Kate Hardcastle's assertion that "I was never more agreeably entertained...

Care urged in digging out around gas equipment

this weekend's snowstorm, Delmarva Power asks its natural gas customers in northern New Castle County, Del. to be careful and identify the location of natural gas piping and metering equipment around homes and businesses. Those plowing with trucks and snow-blowing equipment should be mindful of the location of gas meters and piping to avoid damage.It is important to be careful when clearing snow and ice from

As customers dig out from natural gas equipment so as not to damage it and accidentally cause a gas leak.

Delmarva Power also reminds customers of the importance of clearing snow from the vents of natural-gasfired appliances to ensure safe and proper operation of this equipment. These appliances include heaters, water heaters, natural gas fireplaces and clothes dryers.

Heavy snow could hamper the operation of direct vent appliances. These appliances experience problems with your rely on an uninterrupted supply of fresh air to work properly. Blowing and drifting snow could block the intake and exhaust vents, forcing appliances to automatically shut down and possibly cause serious damage to the equipment. Some vents are as low as 12 inches above the ground.

Most appliances have automatic shut-offs that indicate there could be a problem with the venting system. If you equipment, check your exhaust vents first. Customers with questions can call Delmarva Power Customer Care at 800-

Gas and electric meters should be carefully cleared to prevent melting snow and water from penetrating the equipment and possibly damaging it. Additional safety information may be found at www.delmarva.com. To report a natural gas emergency, call 302-454-0317.
