As people all across the country sat down for Thanksgiving dinner last Thursday, at least two volunteer groups in Newark spent the day making sure that everyone in the community had a place to spend the holiday.

“We can all do our own family thing and not even notice that some people don’t have a place to go,” said Lisa Harmon, who coordinated a free Thanksgiving meal at Ogletown Baptist Church.

More than 100 volunteers helped make the event possible, some arriving as early as 3 a.m. to begin roasting 50 turkeys and cook stuffing, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, corn, green beans and other food.

“It’s a well-oiled machine because we’ve been doing it so long,” said Rob Kempner, who helped oversee the kitchen operations.

The tradition began 30 years ago, when Paula Cobb and her family

UD students, staff gather to protest tax reform bill

By JESSICA IANNETTA
jiannetta@chespub.com

More than 100 University of Delaware administrators, faculty and staff gathered on the steps of Memorial Hall on Wednesday to rally against a federal tax reform bill that would tax tuition waivers for graduate students, potentially causing these students to pay thousands more in taxes each year.

The rally was one of nearly 50 that were held at colleges and universities across the country on Wednesday to protest the impact the tax reform bill would have on higher education. In addition to taxing tuition waivers, the bill would also end deductions for student loan interest and tax the endowments of certain private schools.

As of Wednesday afternoon, the tax reform bill has been passed by the House of Representatives and cleared the Senate budget committee, paving the way for a Senate vote later this week. But with the final outcome up in the air, speakers at the rally urged those in attendance to contact their representatives and be vocal about their opposition to the bill.

"We are all standing together in support of graduate and higher education. We are trying to say, this is not OK. It's not good if you want to try and make it unaffordable for students to go to graduate school," said David Maisson, president of the Graduate Student Government, who organized the rally. "It's not going to fly, it's not going to work. It's going to cripple graduate education, it's going to cripple higher education and we're not going to have it."

For many graduate students, taxing their tuition waiver could potentially triple their tax bill, making graduate school unaffordable for all except the wealthiest, Michael Bush, a graduate student in the math department, told those in attendance. Currently, the graduate student support package provided by UD includes both a stipend and a tuition waiver.

While the stipend — which for Bush amounts to about $20,000 — is considered taxable income, the tuition waiver, which for Bush is about $32,000, is not. That means Bush pays approximately $2,500 in taxes on the stipend, before exemptions. But under the new tax bill, Bush would be taxed as though he makes $52,000 — the combination of his stipend and tuition waiver — leaving him with a tax bill of around $7,000, prior to exemptions, he said.

"That is crippling to graduate students. Can you imagine anyone having to pay three times as many taxes as you do right now?" Bush said.

That sentiment was shared by UD President Dennis Assanis, who also spoke at the rally. Assanis echoed the students' concerns and said he believes the provisions in the tax bill will result in fewer people with master's and doctoral degrees, which means the U.S. could fall behind other countries in fields such as math and science, and even lose its competitive edge in subject areas outside the STEM fields.

Describing graduate students as the "engine performing the research and scholarship," Assanis said UD hopes to double its graduate program enrollment in the next five to 10 years, not see it get smaller. The university recently launched a $750 million capital campaign, which includes as one of its goals the creation of a graduate college.

"The country needs you, the world needs you, and more than that, our state right now, needs you. Our state is in dire need of innovation and innovation is going to come from the University of Delaware," he said. "We are committed to graduate education, and I know one way or another we shall prevail."

Newark Police seeking donations for Toys for Tots program

Dhanyelle Buckson, 9, and her friend, Amya Grimm, 8, talk to Santa at last year's Toys for Tots event.

POST STAFF REPORT
The Newark Police Department is asking the public for help collecting toys for needy children in Newark.

The department's effort, part of the United States Marine Corps Reserve's nationwide Toys for Tots program, aims to collect as many as 500 toys.

Those interested in helping can drop off donations in the lobby of city hall, 220 S. Main St. from now through Dec. 14. Donated toys must be new and dropped off unwrapped.

As is tradition, Santa Claus – with help from NPDP officers and firefighters from Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company – will deliver the toys to kids at the Newark Housing Authority and various neighborhoods throughout the city on Dec. 20.

"Our residents show their passion and support for one another year after year through acts of kindness like the Toys for Tots campaign," acting City Manager Tom Coleman said in a prepared statement. "We hope the generosity of others is once again realized to ensure more children in our neighborhoods can experience the joy of the season."

Grinch visits downtown Newark for Small Business Saturday

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

The Grinch isn't exactly known for his Christmas spirit, but even he couldn't pass up the opportunity to get some holiday shopping done in downtown Newark on Saturday.

The popular, green Dr. Seuss character descended Mount Crumpit and headed to Newark in honor of Small Business Saturday.

In what's become an annual tradition sponsored by the Downtown Newark Partnership, The Grinch – portrayed by an employee of the University of Delaware Bookstore – visited various shops and restaurants on Main Street to greet customers and pose for photos.

He also stopped by Grotto Pizza and "stole" the trophy the restaurant received for winning last year's storefront decorating contest. The trophy will be given to this year's winner next month.

Downtown shops saw steady business as customers took advantage of unseasonably warm weather to get a start on their Christmas shopping.

Created in 2010 and heavily promoted by credit-card giant American Express, Small Business Saturday is intended to encourage people to patronize local businesses one day after big-box retailers offer Black Friday discounts. Parking was free downtown, and the DNP lured in shoppers by offering deals on DNP gift cards, which can be used at most shops and restaurants on Main Street and South Main Street.

"It draws attention to all the unique businesses we have," DNP spokeswoman Megan McGuriman said, adding that Small Business Saturday provides a "day-out experience" that's more relaxing than lining up at the mall for Black Friday deals.

The Grinch's visit adds to the fun, she said.

"The Grinch just makes everybody smile," McGuriman said.

Smoothie bowls, like these ones, are sold at Viva Bowls in Market East Plaza. A second smoothie bowl shop will open soon on Main Street.

Dustin Mushinski (left) will run the Main Street location of the chain Playa Bowls, which was founded in 2014 by Abby Taylor (right).

Smoothie bowl trend comes to Newark

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@chespub.com

Suffering from severe allergies, Kelly Hartranft was looking for healthy, dairy-free foods to eat when she tried a smoothie bowl during a trip to California.

"It blew my mind how delicious it was," Hartranft said.

Now, she's one of two entrepreneurs who are working to introduce Newarkers to the smoothie bowl trend.

Two weeks ago, Hartranft and her boyfriend, Robert Peoples, opened Viva Bowls in Market East Plaza. Meanwhile, Playa Bowls, which already has several locations in New Jersey, plans to open early next year on Main Street.

Smoothie bowls typically feature "superfruits" like acai or pitaya, both native to South America. The acai or pitaya is blended with additional fruits and ingredients like almond milk or coconut water until it has a consistency a little thicker than a smoothie. That serves as the base of the bowl and is then topped with a variety of fruits, granola and other toppings like chia seeds, coconut flakes or nut butter.

Other varieties use bananas, kale or avocado as the base. Both restaurants also plan to sell oatmeal bowls, chia pudding bowls and traditional smoothies.

Popular on the West Coast, smoothie bowls only recently began making inroads on the East Coast. Playa Bowls was founded by Abby Taylor and Robert Giuliani in New Jersey in 2014.

Taylor first experienced smoothie bowls on a surfing trip to Puerto Rico and decided to bring the idea to her hometown at the Jersey Shore, she said, adding that she started small.

"It was basically like a hot dog cart in front of our apartment in Belmar," she said.

Playa Bowls grew quickly and now has 23 locations, with another 14 planned. The Newark restaurant will be the company's first in Delaware.

Bear resident Dustin Mushinski will run the local Playa Bowls, which will open at 134 E. Main St., formerly home of the Newark Police Department's community policing center and, before that, SAS Cupcakes.

Mushinski, a friend of Taylor and Giuliani, said she's been impressed with Playa Bowls and wanted to get involved with the business.

"I've been fascinated by them," she said. "They're incredible."

She's hoping that the proximity to the University of Delaware will bode well for Playa Bowls' success.

"There's a lot of brand awareness with all the students from UD who are from New Jersey," she said.

Viva Bowls – located further from campus and a bit off the beaten path – is targeted at a broader market, said Hartranft, a Washington, D.C., native who now lives in Bear, adding that she chose Market East Plaza because it has its own parking lot.

"I know people don't like to venture into Main Street because of the parking situation," she said.

She hopes to eventually open additional restaurants in Wilmington and at the Delaware beaches.

While some customers are familiar with the smoothie bowl concept, others require some explanation, Hartranft said.

"Opening in Delaware, we have to educate people. What's an acai bowl? What's a pitaya bowl?" she said.

Both Hartranft and Mushinski said a large percentage of their customers are millennials, who tend to be health-conscious and open to trying new things. They do much of their marketing through social media, particularly the photo-centric Instagram, which is perfect for the colorful smoothie bowls.

"They're the prettiest photos," Mushinski said. "No filter needed."

evening; call 302-366-7147 for weather-related cancellation information.

The Reindeer Run, a 5K that benefits Special Olympics Delaware, will be held in conjunction with Winterfest, beginning at 7 p.m. in Academy Street. Day-of-registration is $30.

Last year's event drew more than 1,500 participants and raised $61,000 for Special Olympics Delaware. In the event's 11-year history, more than $405,000 has been raised.

"Because of the uniqueness of this event, it attracts people from all over the area," Lisa Smith, director of development for Special Olympics Delaware, said in a prepared statement. "Whether you are a serious runner or just want to bring the family to downtown Newark for Winterfest, participating in the Reindeer Run and Romp is the perfect way to give back to the community during the holiday season."

On Saturday morning, the Newark Parks and Recreation Department will host Snack with Santa at the George Wilson Center on New London Road.

The annual event includes games, crafts, snacks and photo opportunities with Santa from 9:30 until 11:30 a.m. Vendors will set up Santa's Secret Shoppe, where kids can buy gifts under $5 for family members and friends. Admission is $2 per person.

On Saturday evening, Newark resident Christa "Brandy" Fowler will invite the community to her home to view her light display and visit Santa.

The event runs from 6 to 9 p.m. at 27 Winslow Road. Parking is available on Winslow, Townsend and Orchard roads.

Fowler started the event last year, explaining that while growing up in Newark in the 1970s and 1980s, she treasured her annual trips to Newark Shopping Center to see Santa Claus. Feeling nostalgic after watching old buildings get torn down and other parts of Newark history fall by the wayside, she decided to start a new Christmas tradition.

She decorated almost her entire front yard with Christmas lights, hired someone to play Santa and took out a newspaper ad inviting the general public to her yard.

"The city of Newark is changing so much," Fowler said last year. "I thought I'd bring back something I loved about Newark."

Milsom honored for 40 years of service to Newark American LL

By JON BUZBY

JonBuzby@hotmail.com

Most people don't do any one thing for 40 years. But in 1978, Dave Milsom's volunteer coaching career at Newark American Little League began. Nearly 40 years later, he's still managing the same team and on Monday night, Newark Mayor Polly Sierer read a proclamation at a city council meeting recognizing Milsom for his years of service.

"When I got a call from the mayor's office about the award, my first reaction was to say, 'No thanks,'" Milsom, 75, said with a laugh. "I was reluctant. I'm not really big on publicity. I'm not a headline seeker."

Milsom's volunteer tenure at Newark American began in 1978.

"When my son, Dave Jr., turned 8 years old I took him and signed him up," Milsom recalled. "Someone there knew me and said, 'There's a guy who can coach. We need a coach.' He recruited me and signed me up."

In 1981, when his son moved onto the majors division, Milsom became the manager of the Delaware Tire Orioles. Then, when his son aged out of Little League, Milsom decided to stay on as the manager of the Orioles and has served in that role ever since.

"I enjoyed doing it and to be honest with you it got easier," Milsom said. "The hardest thing to do is coach your own kid. It's hard on you and hard on your kid."

Milsom didn't play organized baseball as a kid because there was no Little Dave Milsom Sr. has volunteered for Newark American Little League for nearly 40 years.

League back in the 1950s. Instead, he fell in love with the game the old fashioned way - playing in the sandlots.

"I wasn't very good because I had a vision problem," he admitted. "It's tough to play baseball when you have trouble seeing the ball."

After graduating from Conrad High School in 1959, Milsom took a job at NVF in Kennett Square. He and his wife, Dot, eventually moved to Newark where they raised their two children - Dave Jr. and daughter Doria - and he made the decision to volunteer with Newark American.

"I just enjoy it. It's my hobby," he said. "I like getting out and staying active. I enjoy seeing new kids come in and progress and grow and leave as teenagers."

Milsom has also served in several other volunteer roles during his tenure.

"I've done just about everything, except be president," said Milsom, who has spent the majority of his 40 years also serving in some role on the league board of directors.

Volunteering is a commitment that often brings with it family sacrifices. And although Dot doesn't volunteer at Newark American - "Her hobbies are other things," Milsom said - she was on hand for one very special night.

"We had a game the day of our 50th anniversary, and it was a weeknight," Milsom reminisced. "I convinced her that after 50 years we could celebrate on another day. Our team mother organized [an on-field celebration] and had both of us come on the field before the game. They gave us a gift card for a dinner, flowers for Dot and announced the anniversary. That was it. Play ball!"

"We did take a long weekend and went to Annapolis a few days later," he added, smiling.

Milsom has seen many changes in youth baseball over the years, but none as significant as the type of bats used today by kids of all ages.

"When I started we had wooden bats, and now they've involved into these super bats," Milsom explained. "Little kids are hitting it out of the park."

The number of home runs hit this upcoming season might decrease because the rule concerning bats has pitcher are dangerous. It's a major change, but I think it's a good one."

The other major change during his 40 years has nothing to do with the technology of equipment.

"The league has shrunk," he pointed out. "When I started, we had eight teams in the majors division and now we are down to four. I just think there are fewer kids in the area. The kids in the developments we serve have grown up and moved away."

Despite the decrease in numbers, Milsom still finds satisfaction in his role.

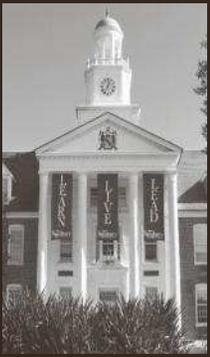

"I have enjoyed seeing new kids come in and progress and grow and leave as teenagers," he said with a hint of emotion in his voice. "I've seen them become doctors and lawyers and have other successful careers."

Milsom has no plans of ending his favorite volunteer activity anytime soon.

"It's enjoyable, and you meet a lot of good people," he said. "The parents, players, umpires and other coaches. It's a nice circle of friends you end up making."

And in Milsom's case - generations of friends.

Three vying to become Newark's lobbyist

Three people are in the running to become Newark's lobbyist in Dover.

Among the candidates is Rick Armitage, who has served in the position since 2015. Armitage, who previously spent 26 years as the University of Delaware's director of government relations, also lobbies for the National Rifle Association.

Also seeking the position is former New Castle County Executive Dennis Greenhouse, who has been a lobbyist since 2014. He also lobbies for the Delaware Coalition Against Gun Violence as well as a gun control advocacy group founded by former Congresswoman Gabby Giffords.

The third candidate is Mary Kate McLaughlin, from the law firm Drinker Biddle & Reath. The firm currently lobbies on behalf of a number of other organizations, including Bloom Energy on the University of Delaware's STAR Campus.

City council interviewed the candidates Monday and will vote on which one to hire Dec. 11. Under their proposals, Armitage would charge $54,000 per year, Greenhouse would charge $48,000, and McLaughlin would charge $36,000.

Among issues the lobbyist will be tasked with is convincing legislators to expand the Payments in Lieu of Taxes (PILOT) program to include Newark and to allow the city to impose a hotel accommodation tax.

UD lets drivers pay off parking tickets with food donation

Drivers who have recently received a University of Delaware parking ticket can now pay off their fines while helping those in need this holiday season, thanks to a "Cans for Cites" food drive by UD Parking Services.

Through Dec. 15, each canned good or non-perishable food item brought to the Parking Services office in Perkins Student Center on Academy Street will count as $5 toward the cost of an on-campus parking citation that is less than 30 days old.

Drivers can pay a portion or the entirety of their citation via donations, and all food will be delivered to the Food Bank of Delaware at the end of the drive, just in time for the holiday season.

This is the fourth year Parking Services has offered the Cans for Cites program.

Those without a citation can drop off food donations in collection barrels at any UD parking garage, the Morris Library, the Bob Carpenter Center, the Fred Rust Ice Arena and several other UD buildings.

NPD seeks public comments as part of accreditation process

The Newark Police Department is inviting the public to provide comments about the agency as part of its regular accreditation process.

The department is evaluated by the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, Inc. (CALEA) every three years. CALEA evaluators will arrive on Sunday to examine all aspects of NPD's policies, procedures, management, operations and support services.

"Verification by the team that the Newark Police Department meets the commission's state-of-the-art standards is part of a voluntary process to gain accreditation – a highly prized recognition of law enforcement professional excellence," Police Chief Paul M. Tiernan said in a prepared statement.

As part of the on-site assessment, members of the community are invited to offer comments at a public information session on Tuesday at 4 p.m. The session will be conducted in city council chambers, located at 220 S. Main St.

Those who can't attend can give comments via telephone by calling 302-453-8741 on Monday between the hours of 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Comments will be received by the Assessment Team.

Anyone wishing to offer written comments may mail them to CALEA, 13575 Heathcote Blvd., Suite 320, Gainesville, VA, 20155.

Art gallery makes a home in Barksdale Road professional building

OUR TOWN

THE PEOPLE, PLACES AND TRADITIONS THAT MAKE NEWARK UNIQUE

By DARA MCBRIDE
Special to the Post

JaneKav Art Gallery is perhaps the only art space where patrons can peruse ceramics while waiting for their tax forms.

Most people don't know there is a gallery inside Suite 103 in the professional complex at 625 Barksdale Road, artist and proprietor Jane Kavanagh Morton said. Visitors, she said, typically find out through word of mouth or are already friends or neighbors.

"We have clients that come in a lot during tax season, and they're delighted to come in and look at something really nice before they go back and find out what the problem is with their taxes or how much they have to owe," Kavanagh Morton said.

Her husband, Jeff, runs Alma Company Accounting. He's operated the business in its current location for about 25 years. Before that, it was his father's accounting firm.

Kavanagh Morton studied ceramic art at Hood College in Maryland and has worked in various mediums for 40 years. She sells her work at The Palette & The Page gallery in Elkton, Md., and in an online Etsy shop. But her pieces continued to fill the Mortons' home in the nearby Oaklands neighborhood.

So, about five years ago, the couple came up with the idea of moving some of her work to the office.

"It's great," Jeff said of the gallery now occupying his waiting room and back office. "Before this, we had a bunch of old accounting books."

The accounting office and gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Kavanagh Morton is usually off-site working in her home studio but visits the gallery by appointment and is also in during her bi-annual open house. The accounting firm has about 250 clients, and about 70 to 80 visitors showed up at the last JaneKav open house, Kavanagh Morton said.

"When we have the openings, it's a real neighborhood gathering," Kavanagh Morton said. "And people say, 'I had no idea this was here.' And I say, 'Well, now you know.'"

The next open house, her Holiday Art Show, will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday at JaneKav Art Gallery, with a preview of the event from 6 to 9 p.m. tonight. In addition to ceramics from Kavanagh Morton, the show will also include photography and encaustics from her sister, Baltimore-based artist Nancy Kavanagh O'Neill, and ceramics from fellow Delaware artist Paula Camenzind.

Although each artist has a distinct style, Kavanagh Morton said she expects visitors will see the artists have a kind of "comfortableness" among each other.

The Kavanagh sisters, she said, both found inspiration in their family's history of Irish coppersmiths who settled in Baltimore.

One of Kavanagh Morton's largest sculptures on display in the gallery is a brew pot, which her father suggested, and which is based off a photograph Kavanagh Morton took of a whiskey kettle at Jameson Distillery in Ireland. In another room, photos of Irish towns from Kavanagh O'Neill appear alongside miniature ceramic houses.

While both Kavanagh Morton and Camenzind work with clay, their work shows two different sides of ceramics. Camenzind uses porcelain to create timeless vases and bowls based on ancient Chinese works. She then enhances the surface with glazes in iridescent blues and purples, and textures inspired by shells, coral and sea glass.

"What I love to hear from people who have my work is they pet it, they pick it up and they hold it," Camenzind said.

Kavanagh Morton's work, while still tactile, is more whimsical and narrative, and has a rustic appearance. All of her works — many of which feature little faces — are created with her hands, through the process of slab making and coil building, and she prefers not to use the throwing wheel.

"I think it will work together because it is different," Kavanagh Morton said of the show. "Variety is the spice of life."

Perhaps that's the same reason a neighborhood gallery has found a home in an accounting office.

MEALS

members found themselves celebrating the holiday at a Chinese food buffet. The person who normally hosted their Thanksgiving dinner had died, and they didn't have an alternative plan.

"We thought there must be a better way to spend Thanksgiving," Cobb said.

The next year, she and other church members organized a Thanksgiving meal at the church. The event, which attracted just a couple dozen people the first year, has grown into a massive undertaking that feeds more than 1,500 people each year.

The church ran buses to pick up people from Hope Dining Hall, the University of Delaware and other locations. Volunteers also delivered meals to more than 300 people in the area who couldn't get to the church.

"If people call and need a meal, we'll find a way to get it to them," Goodwin Cobb IV, Paula's son, said. "This might be someone's only meal today."

The church also collected donated clothes and made them available to any visitor who needed them.

Dana McNair, who described himself as "down on his luck," enjoyed the meal with a few friends.

"Look, everybody's happy," McNair said, noting that he comes to the event every year. "I look forward to it. I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Earlier in the day, the Newark Parks and Recreation Department hosted its annual Thanksgiving breakfast, now in its 31st year.

Nearly 150 people attended the breakfast, which was held at the Newark Senior Center. The event began as a way to serve UD students who couldn't make it home for the holidays. While it still draws some students, particularly from the burgeoning population of international students, it has morphed into a community event that draws many of the same families year after year.

For $3, attendees were treated to eggs, pancakes, sausage, doughnuts, coffee and orange juice.

Chrissy Holubinka, a recreation specialist with the Newark Parks and Recreation Department, said 53 volunteers helped cook and serve the meals.

"It's really possible because of them," Holubinka said. "It really warms my heart every year."

Many of the volunteers come back year after year, while others, like Jean Kutcher, were first-timers.

"I love this," Kutcher said as she passed out plates topped with food. "It's a great community gathering."

Even some of the youngest Newarkers got into the act.

Joey Baranyai, 12, was serving meals with friend Logan Wolverton, 10.

"I like going around helping people out and bringing them stuff," he said.

Meanwhile, 6-year-old Rachel Magee spent the morning wheeling around a cart full of doughnuts, stopping at each table to offer treats to the guests. Her brother, 8-year-old Jason, stood off to the side drawing Thanksgiving cards to hand out at the event. Both are veterans of the event, in at least their third year of volunteering.

Bolivia native Yara Montenegro attended the breakfast with her husband, Edgar Salazar, a Colombia native who is studying for a Ph.D. in electrical engineering at the University of Delaware. They sat with Rania Triki from Tunisia and Rob Detwiler, a Newark resident.

This is the couple's second year in the United States and their second time experiencing Thanksgiving.

"We really like it," Montenegro said. "It's a special day to think about all that you're grateful for. We like that Americans do this every year. We don't have something like this in our countries."

Mary Roland, who came to the breakfast with friend Leta Ruth, said she has been attending for years, first as a volunteer and then as a guest.

"It's fun to see people come in and come together as a community," Roland said. "When I come, I get to see a lot of people I don't see throughout the year."

Ruth, a first-time attendee, was quickly impressed.

"It's quite nice," she said. "All the volunteers are wonderful. I think I might be back."

Logan Wolverton, 10, and Joey Baranyai, 12, volunteer at the city of Newark's Thanksgiving breakfast.

OBITUARY

Anne Harris Redd

Anne Harris Redd, 90, died peacefully on November 8, 2017, at Country House in Wilmington, her home for the last 16 years. She was predeceased by her husband of 62 years, William Marshall Redd Jr., former mayor of Newark.

She is survived by daughter, Cathy Anne Redd (Byron Woodbury), of Washington Crossing, PA; daughter, Nancy Redd Lewis (Gary Scott Lewis), of Drexel Hill, PA; granddaughter, Elizabeth Redd Woodbury, of Cambridge, MA; and grandsons: Scott William Lewis, of Bellevue, WA; and Todd Robert Lewis, of Drexel Hill, PA.

Born Anne Warrene Harris on August 15, 1927 in Tianjin, China, she was the daughter of Brig. Gen. Frederick Mixon Harris and Dorothy Barwise Harris. Her first language was Chinese. She also spoke Spanish, French and Italian, and took joy in using languages to connect with people from other countries. After graduating from Goucher College in 1949, Phi Beta Kappa and valedictorian of her class, she became an intelligence analyst at the CIA. She was training to be the CIA's first female intelligence officer in Trieste during the Cold War, but left the agency to marry Bill Redd in 1951. The couple moved to Delaware, where Bill worked for the DuPont Company, and lived in Newark until 2001.

Anne was active in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church in Newark. She participated in Bishop William Mead's program to apply organizational development to Episcopal parishes, and was a trainer with the Mid-Atlantic Training and Consulting Committee, offering OD to churches of all denominations. Anne served on the Newark Parish Council, which brought the Pastoral Counseling and Consultation Center to Delaware. Inspired by the mission of PC & CC, she completed a program in pastoral counseling at the PC & CC of Washington, DC, and was a therapist at PC & CC of Delaware for many years. She earned a Master's in counseling from the University of Delaware.

Anne pushed the Delaware legislature to pass laws in the 1990s requiring counselors to meet professional licensure requirements. She then served on the Delaware Board of Licensed Professional Counselors of Mental Health, and was president for two terms.

Anne and Bill were utterly devoted to each other, and Anne never really got over Bill's 2013 death. Anne was a vibrant, intelligent, warm woman who used her considerable skills and talents to bring happiness to family and friends, and to make important contributions to her church and community. She was a strong woman of deeply-held convictions. She was also a ton of fun.

A memorial service for Anne will be held at 10:30 a.m. on December 2 at Danby Chapel in Country House, 4830 Kennett Pike, Wilmington, DE 19807.

Her family asks that any contributions in her honor be made to St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, 276 S. College Ave., Newark, DE 19711-5235.

ANNE HARRIS REDD

Enjoy the moment this holiday season

Life After 50

Carla Grygiel

Let's start with the easy ones first. Many of us have our weekly routine that can be interrupted during the holiday season. We may do pretty well at faithfully making it to the exercise class, watching what we eat and getting plenty of rest. But, as various holiday obligations change our routine, we may notice physical, mental and emotional changes, as well.

Try to plan for those changes that will occur during this time. Making healthy choices or simply watching portions can make a difference. Another simple act can make a huge difference - staying hydrated. Dehydration can happen throughout the year, not just during the summer. Not drinking enough water can result in dizziness, which increases the risk of falls and can lead to many more serious symptoms.

Another major stressor around the holidays may be family obligations. It is very important to ask for help if you need it. I have noticed that many older adults don't like to ask for or accept help from children or grandchildren. They don't want to be a burden.

Try to think of it more as a bonding experience than the fact that you are no longer able to do something on your own. Your children or grandchildren are probably happy to help; they just don't even know that you may be a little overwhelmed during the holidays. It may also be a good idea to pass the torch of hosting the major holiday gatherings. Just because you have always done something in a certain way does not mean that things can't change.

For many people, children and grandchildren are spread out around the county. It is nearly impossible to all be together on major holidays. Try to celebrate with the important people in your life throughout the holiday season. If you find yourself alone, ask friends or neighbors if they might like to gather for a simple meal. Chances are, you are not the only one who finds this time of year challenging.

As we grow older, family dynamics are always changing. Try to enjoy each experience as you share special time with loved ones. We all need to do the best we can to nurture meaningful relationships with those around us and to enjoy this very special time of the year.

Editor's note: Volunteers at the Pencader Heritage Museum have been digitizing old Newark City Council meeting minutes. They share excerpts with Newark Post readers in a weekly column.

October-December 1937: The minimum water allowance per quarter was raised by 150 c.f. New uniforms cost $29.75 for patrolmen and $35.75 for the police chief. The Delaware Safety Council invited town councilmen to annual banquet at Hotel DuPont, cost $2.25 per person. No action taken.

The annual public appeal to support Flower Hospital was nearing. Council would not provide drainage for surface water from Jane Smith's property on South College Avenue, because it was the property owner's responsibility. Extension of water and sewer lines to Frank Palmer's property east of town limits was refused as being too costly at this time. Wollaston Avenue residents wanted the street paved before they were required to put in sidewalks, since the street was impassable in bad weather.

Council agreed to help install Christmas decorations on Main Street but would only furnish electricity at cost, not free, as the Chamber of Commerce wanted. The chamber was asked to supply one man to aid town employees in the installation. National Vulcanized Fibre wanted a storm sewer on Race Street and Council agreed to pay half the cost.

At the request of the American Legion, Council agreed to register all WWI veterans' discharges, making them available in future if originals were lost. The University of Delaware was advised that all tax-exempt properties had to comply with the city charter and construct sidewalks. To better regulate traffic, a center yellow line would be painted full length of Main Street. A water line on Briar Lane would feed off Nottingham Road line.
