COUNCIL HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

Many Improvements Suggested

Feeling that to keep abreast with the progressive growth of Newark some marked improvements should be made on Main street, Town Council at an adjourned meeting last Thursday night discussed plans for making these changes while the sewer operations are going on so that it will not be necessary to have the street dug up a second time. Probably the most important of the proposed improvements discussed was the laying of a conduit on Main street so that all overhead wires could be placed underground. If this is done the town would lease space in the conduits to the different telephone and telegraph companies and compel the latter to remove the large and unsightly poles along Main street. To complete the change Council also discussed the matter of placing in the iron bracket poles similar to those on Market street, Wilmington, which have made such a marked improvement on that street along Main street in place of the present system of street lighting. These matters were referred to a committee of which Councilman Frazer is chairman, to investigate and report back to Council.

Another matter which has been spoken of from time to time for several years is a Building Commission with powers for the regulation of building lines, types of building and all those points coming up under construction work.

Professor Hayward To Take European Vacation

Taking his first vacation in six years Professor H. Hayward, Director of the Experiment Station, and Mrs. Hayward will sail from Boston, July 29th, for Liverpool, leaving that port in return August 26th. They will spend their time sojourning in Scotland.

Open Air Services Popular

Sunday evening Open Air services of the College steps are proving to be very popular. Last Sunday evening a large audience assembled and interesting services were held. Reverends Dr. Rowan, Dr. Phelps and Mr. Poole all took active part. After the usual singing, Rev. Mr. Poole, pastor of the M. E. Church gave a most interesting talk on "Influence," which was received with much favorable comment.

Services will be held at the same hour, 6:30 p. m., on next Sunday.

Liquor Dealers Warned

Following the conviction of William Long for the fifth time this year on the charge of drunkenness Judge Chubb of the City Court of Wilmington has ordered the police department to send notice to all liquor dealers prohibiting them from selling to Long and another offender by the name of Patterson, on pain of being haled before the Court and fined.

Newark also has some undesirable citizens of this class, and for the information of those interested we quote the notice as sent out by the Wilmington police:

"To whom it may concern: The action of all persons licensed to sell or dispose of intoxicating liquors is called to Chapter 145, Volume 24, Laws of Delaware, to wit: 'Section 1. That from and after the passage of this act, any person, who, either directly or indirectly, procures for, or sells, gives, or delivers any intoxicant to or for any habitual drunkard, or to or for a minor, at such minor's request or initiative, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months or both in the discretion of the Court.'"

Approved March 9, A. D. 1907.

College Man Called To New Jersey

W. C. Pelton, assistant Horticulturist at Delaware College Experiment Station has resigned to accept a position in the Extension Department of the New Jersey Station. Mr. Pelton will remain here until October 1st when he will take up his new duties.

NATIONAL BANK RUMORS CONTINUE

Outside Capital Interested In Promotion

It became known today that the rumor of a new National Bank as reported in the Post, two weeks ago, is well founded.

Although it has not been definitely decided, the question is under very careful consideration and it is very probable that such an institution will be opened.

Out-of-town capital is reported to be interested and anxious to associate with local promoters.

W. C. T. U. Meeting

The W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. S. M. Donnell on Friday evening, July 25th, to pack a box of groceries and supplies to be sent to the Girls' Industrial School in Wilmington.

Newark Man As Witness

Ed. Herbener is attending Court at Chestertown, Md., where he is testifying as photographic expert in the case of A. J. Willis, contractor, vs. Cecil County Commissioners. This case, which is an action brought by Mr. Willis to secure payment for the bridge built at Ricketts Mill during 1910-11, was called Monday morning and is still in course of trial.

Compile History Of New Castle County

The newly incorporated Delmarva Advancement Company is active in the work of exploiting the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia Peninsula, and plans are now being perfected for the issuance of a complete and handsomely illustrated History of New Castle County, Delaware. The History of Cecil County, Maryland, is now being rapidly compiled and will be issued in two volume form during the coming Christmas holidays. The capital stock of the Delmarva Advancement Company is being subscribed to by a number of prominent Wilmingtonians. The company has offices in the duPont Building this city and in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Edward H. Rindinger has been appointed secretary to Victor Torbert, president of the company. Mr. Torbert and his secretary were in town yesterday and interviewed several of the leading business men, interesting them in this worthy project.

Supt. Spaid Accepts Position In Maryland

A. B. Spaid, who resigned as superintendent of public schools in New Castle county about one week ago has been elected superintendent of schools for Dorchester county, Maryland. Mr. Spaid was selected by the county school commission, who at the same time increased the yearly salary of the office from $1200 to $1800. He had not been an applicant for the office and did not know he was being considered until one of the Maryland commissions asked him if he would accept the position at a salary of $1800.

Mr. Spaid's selection was unanimous, although the board is composed of six Democrats and four Republicans. The new superintendent succeeds A. Stengle Marine who resigned to practice law. The latter's resignation was effective August 1st, hence the haste in filling the office.

In his letter to Governor Miller, Professor Spaid gave notice of his resignation to take effect by September 1, but in view of the fact that the Maryland people want him to report there August 1, he will formally resign his position here to take effect August 1.

In addition to an increase in salary of $600 a year, the salary of the local office being $1200, Professor Spaid will be provided with an assistant and an office in the Court House at Cambridge. Traveling expenses will be allowed.

The work in Dorchester county is about the same as in New Castle county, the number of teachers being about the same, 180.

Besides being superintendent of schools Professor Spaid will be treasurer of the county school commission. He will go to Cambridge in a day or so to look over his new field.

GRANTHAM RECEIVES CALL FROM WEST

Prof. A. E. Grantham, agronomist at the State Experiment Station and Farm is kept busy declining offers for positions. The latest is that of Agronomist at the Experiment Station at Washington State College. Friends of the College and Agriculture will be pleased to hear that Professor Grantham will remain at his work here.

Newark Man Low Bidder

His bid was: Trap Rock, $22,118.23; limestone, $21,018.43; combined $20,591.38. The bids were referred to the Court as a committee of the whole.

Horse News

H. R. Tyson, the popular whip, will take his string of eleven horses to Wilmington this week. After the races there, he will go south, not returning until the end of the season.

Clark McCann will introduce the Lafferty string to the track this season. He has gone to Wilmington with Bessie Patchen, Ira L. and the promising 4-year-old, Starlight. He expects to follow the races as far south as South Carolina.

EXCESSIVE CARD PLAYING CRITICISED

Resolutions Read In Churches

Believing that card playing has come to be a craze, and that playing for prizes tends to the creation of the gambling spirit; we, the ministers of the Gospel, earnestly appeal to the people connected with our churches to do all they can to discourage card playing where prizes are offered.

Joel S. Gillfillan,
William J. Rowan,
H. B. Phelps,
L. E. Poole.

The above resolution was read on Sunday morning in the Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

In talking to one of the ministers yesterday morning, the following was given to The Post as explanatory to the cause of their public presentation. Although not in the form of a statement, the idea is here expressed and has an O.K. as correctly interpreting the meaning of his interview:

Excessive card playing is a waste of time, to say the least. While I have no objections to a social evening game as a pleasing recreation, I am strongly opposed to offering of the prize. While it may not in any way affect some people, it most assuredly attracts others and fosters the spirit of gambling, which if carried to its all too probable conclusion leads to serious excess—a sad story to every one who reads the social and recreation news of the day.

During the last social season in this town, the lure of the card table and the prize, reached proportions of a craze. The resolution adopted by the ministers is merely to show that they disapprove of this phase of the social life of the town. This is done simply, yet strongly, without any semblance of sensation, yet clearly setting forth our position. We believe sane reasoning will verify our claim, and careful thought will see the sense of right in our judgement.

The prize, the many wasted hours and the dangers of its effect on immature minds, are plain to all and we hope those ladies of our different circles of society will assist us in withdrawing this temptation, which may in some case, prove serious.

Boys Shocked By Mother's Death

Two sons of Mrs. Hattie Scanlon, of No. 1149 South Broad street, Philadelphia, who, with Mrs. Margaret Wingate, were killed Saturday morning in an automobile accident near Ateo, N. J., were in Newark when word reached them Saturday night of the death of their mother. A. Louis Scanlon, father of the boys, had both legs broken in the same accident and is now in Cooper Hospital, Camden. The two boys are Louis Scanlon, aged 17 years, and Russell, aged 14 years. They are spending the summer in Newark, as had been their custom for several years, and boarded with Mrs. Harry Pool, on Delaware avenue. Louis played baseball Saturday afternoon at Providence with the Newark Penn-Mar League team and it was on his return to Newark after the game that he and his brother first heard of the accident through an uncle who came from Philadelphia after them. Mrs. Edna Willis, widow of the late Professor Lee Willis, who lives here is Mrs. Scanlon's sister. Mrs. Willis and the two boys went to Philadelphia Monday.

Valuable Horse And Barn Burned

The barn of Alfred Renshaw, the well-known speed, Vera Taylor, and all the implements were destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon at his farm near Elk Mills. Mrs. Renshaw was at home alone at the time of the fire. In attempting to save the horse, she was severely burned about the arms. Neighbors, seeing the fire went to her assistance but it was impossible to save any of the contents.

Buffalo Nickels Worth 5 Cents

The so-called Buffalo nickel in circulation in Newark is good for 5 cents in the coin of the realm. Several citizens have suspected them to be counterfeits. Attention to this was called to the Newark Trust Company and after consulting experts, Mr. Singles says the coins are alright. His information is that the die has been somewhat changed from that of the original coin but that it is in no wise a counterfeit, nor has any been reported to the large banking houses.

Burned By Exploding Gasoline

Soldering a tank filled with gasoline at the Delaware Auto Radiator Repair Company's plant, 918 Shipley street, Wilmington, on Saturday, which exploded, William Jacobs was blown through a doorway into the street and was burned about the face, scalp and chest. The roof of the building was forced from its fastenings, windows were smashed and more or less other damage was done to the interior. The blazing gasoline set fire to the premises but firemen quickly checked the flames. Nearby buildings were shaken by the explosion.

COMPANY E OFF TO WAR

Interesting Week Planned For Delaware Militia—Governor's Day The Leading Feature

Company E, State Militia, under command of Capt. L. B. Jacobs, on Friday night at 8:30 o'clock will hike to Camp McDonough, at the State Rifle Range near New Castle, where the Annual Camp of Instruction will be held for one week. Major Short, Inspector General, formerly captain of the company will accompany it to camp.

The hike will be made in light marching order and camp will be reached about midnight. A short stop will be made at Christiana where sandwiches and coffee will be served by W. R. Powell. A special detail, under Q. M. Sergeant Morris will leave for camp Friday morning to pitch the tents and have the quarters in readiness on the arrival of the company.

An added incentive will be given to the work on the Rifle Range as it is hoped to send a winning team to participate in the Rifle Meet at the Perry Centennial, where teams from every state in the Union and leading foreign countries will compete for the world's marksmanship championship. The ambition of the local company is to furnish a majority of the Delaware team, as it has done several times in the past.

The program at the camp follows:

FARM OBSERVATIONS

CRIMSON CLOVER

During the past few years the value of crimson clover for soil improvement has been fully demonstrated in Delaware, Maryland and parts of New Jersey. There is little doubt that crimson clover is the cheapest and most effective green manure crop that can be grown in these sections. Considering the season and the number of months the plant occupies in the ground, the cost of seed, fertilizers and soil preparation as contrasted with the value of the crop removed and the effects on the soil, crimson clover growing is highly profitable. The experience of hundreds of farmers has shown that crimson clover will produce a crop of hay and leave the soil in a condition of fertility equivalent to applying twelve loads of stable manure per acre. However, on lands of low fertility the entire crop is turned under. After the soil has been improved, as good results are secured where the crop is cut and removed as where plowed under.

Adaptation.—Crimson clover is especially well adapted to the climatic condition of the states mentioned above. The mild, even climate with the absence of sudden and extreme changes of temperature favor the best development of the plant. The amount and distribution of the rainfall during the summer months insure the prompt germination of the seed during the heated portion of the year. The open winters allow the clover to make some growth nearly every month, which is an advantage in conserving the fertility of the soil and in preventing blowing and washing. The length of the growing season is such that crimson clover may be followed by other crops which in turn may be seeded to clover again in the fall. Also, a seed crop of crimson clover may be removed in time to grow a crop of corn or late potatoes.

Soils.—Crimson clover will grow on any type of soil, varying from a stiff clay to almost pure sand, although the plant will thrive best, other conditions being equal, on a loam soil. Certain precautions in sowing and fertilizing are necessary to secure good results on heavy clays or on very sandy soils. Earlier sowing should be the practice on clay soils as the plant must be well established to prevent heaving out during winter. A poor, sandy soil will require a small application of mineral fertilizers, phosphoric acid and potash, in order to start the plants. Often the lack of organic matter or humus in the soil will prevent the retention of moisture to such an extent that the clover will die soon after germination if it germinates at all. While crimson clover has the reputation of growing on relatively poor land yet in introducing the crop some attention might be paid to the condition of the soil as to moisture and plant food at seeding time.

Preparation of the Soil.—The general practice of sowing clover is to follow some cultivated crop. This does away with the necessity for special soil preparation or the use of a nurse crop. One of the advantages of crimson clover is its habit of starting growth and other growing vegetation. Crimson clover sown in corn, tomatoes, or potatoes, will catch readily if the seed bed is in good condition. Moisture and a light covering of the seed are necessary to insure prompt germination and development. Hence, it will pay well to thoroughly cultivate the previous crop, as the shallow mulch formed by proper cultivation will not only be of advantage to the growing corn, but the moisture retained by this practice will leave the soil in the best condition for sowing clover. As crimson clover is sown at the hottest season of the year, some care must be taken to have moisture conditions favorable. With certain crops—as tomatoes, it may not be practicable to harrow in the seed, but the shade of the vegetation may serve to start germination. Most farmers aim to sow at the last cultivation of the crop, the labor serving a double purpose. On soils of low fertility, or after a crop like wheat or oats, the ground must be especially prepared either by disking or plowing. When sown in this manner the growth is generally more rapid, a better distributed stand is secured, and the plants pass the winter in a more vigorous condition.

Time of Seeding.—Crimson clover, when following corn or tomatoes, is generally sown at the last working of the crop. This saves additional soil preparation and the plants are given an early start. However, sowing may be delayed and the seed harrowed in later. The general practice in Delaware is to sow from July 1st to August 15th. A soil in a good state of fertility will bear sowing somewhat later than a poor soil. Seeding may take place on especially prepared ground in the open somewhat later than when sown in corn. In any case it is very desirable to have the plants make sufficient growth for good rooting before freezing weather. As to how late it is safe to sow is largely a matter of season.

Rate of Seeding.—Practice has determined the use of about 15 pounds of seed per acre. Few growers sow more or less. Thick seeding is recommended by some growers to prevent heaving out. The thick fall growth may in some cases serve to cover the ground so as to lessen the daily freezing and thawing of the surface, which will injure the plants. Too thick growth does not allow so perfect development of the individual plant, and on this soil the dense stand interferes with the size and maturity of the crop.

Methods of Seeding.—Crimson clover is generally sown broadcast by hand, or with a grass seeder. A portable seeder or hand sowing is necessary in standing corn. The even distribution of the seed is facilitated by sowing from horseback, although more seed is required because of lodging. On especially prepared ground in the open the wheelbarrow seeder works well. Where practicable, it is desirable to cover the seed lightly. The practice of sowing at the last cultivation is, perhaps, the cheapest method. If possible, seeding should take place immediately after a rain. Much clover is lost each year from sowing on ground with only enough moisture to germinate the seed. The subsequent hot dry weather prevents further development. On some soils sowing immediately before a rain may be satisfactory, but on soils inclined to run together or bake, the plants may fail to get through. The general practice is to cover the seed.

Fertilizer.—Like other clovers, crimson clover is a heavy feeder of mineral plant food, phosphoric acid and potash, especially the latter. To soils lacking these elements in available form must be added some fertilizer for the clover. The general practice is to apply the fertilizer to the regular crop only, the clover feeding on the residue in the soil. Where the ground is in good condition and properly fertilized for corn and tomatoes, no fertilizer need be applied for clover following the crops. In order to get a start on poor sandy soils it will be necessary to apply some phosphoric acid and potash. Three to four hundred pounds per acre of a mixture of equal parts of acid phosphate and kainit should be sufficient. Nitrogenous fertilizer is not needed save in extreme conditions, and then only for starting growth. When sown in open ground, it will pay in most cases to use some mineral fertilizer. In any case, the minerals are not lost and will be available for succeeding crops.

Some growers claim good success from top-dressing the clover with acid phosphate and potash late in February and March. This promotes a thrifty growth, and less fertilizer need be applied for the following corn crop. The standard fertilizer for corn, where crimson clover is turned under, is a mixture of acid phosphate and muriate of potash or kainit.

The value of lime for stimulating growth, or correcting soil conditions for crimson clover, does not seem to be fully decided by growers. Experiments indicate that lime is of benefit on soils of a clay type. However, as most of the crimson clover is grown on a sandy loam type of soil, it is possible that better soil ventilation and aeration prevents an extremely acid condition, and hence the failure to note marked results from lime on that of soil.

Inoculation.—On soils where crimson clover has not been previously grown it is advisable to inoculate. The cultures for inoculation may be secured from the U. S. Department of Agriculture or from commercial firms. Another method of inoculation is through the introduction of soil from a field where crimson clover has been successfully grown as indicated by the nodules on the roots. Two or three hundred pounds of this soil thoroughly mixed with an equal quantity of ordinary soil will grow sufficient bulk to enable even distribution over an acre.

Save Good Seed.—The failure to get a satisfactory stand of crimson clover is often attributable to low grade seed. A poor stand results either from seed that will not grow, or from the presence of considerable weed seed or foreign material. The lack of vitality may be due to the seed being harvested too early, to heating, to molding before threshing, or to age. When the seed is fresh it is of a bright reddish-yellow color, and has a high polish. The color changes to a rusty brown with age, and becomes dull and lustreless. Seed of dull appearance should be carefully examined. All crimson clover seed should be tested for germination before sowing. The fact that seed is fresh is no guarantee that it will grow. A good grade of crimson clover seed should germinate 85 to 95 per cent. Seed over a year old is likely to deteriorate rather rapidly. Native grown seed is usually better than that imported. Crimson clover is not commonly adulterated; at any rate, it may be readily identified by the color, and by its almost oval shape which will allow it to roll easily from a smooth surface.

Mrs. Charles Heim, of Ellendale, whose spine was dislocated in childhood, after frequent and costly treatment by physicians at home and abroad without relief, fell down stairs recently and as a result found the spine replaced, permanently, it is hoped.

The first of eight big barges built for service on the Panama Canal by the American Car and Foundry Company's shipyard in Wilmington, was launched last week. The craft is 195 feet long, 40 feet wide and 20 feet deep with a capacity of 2,000 tons. Three other barges are under construction and the remaining four will follow.

John Gillespie, found senseless in an alley in Wilmington on Thursday, was locked up as drunk. He had not awakened on Friday morning and was sent to Delaware Hospital, where he died at noon. It was found that his skull had been fractured. Coroner Spring will investigate the case.

Miss Elizabeth Watson, of 207 Rodney street, Wilmington, employed as a nurse at the home of John Biggs, 1310 West Fourteenth street, after leaving a Delaware avenue car at Broome street on Wednesday night, was attacked near the Biggs home by a negro who knocked her down, grabbed her handbag and disappeared over a highboard fence. Her scream brought Mr. Biggs to the scene and he fired a revolver after the negro without effect.

The Democratic Club of New Castle county has been organized in Wilmington to promote party interests in general with D. P. Du Ross, president; C. W. Malcolm, secretary and D. M. Buckley, treasurer. An executive committee of members from each ward in Wilmington and each hundred in rural New Castle county will be appointed.

OUR PEOPLES' COLUMN

The Peoples' Column of this paper is a Peoples' Column in fact as well as in name. So long as any one observes the ordinary rules of newspaper decency, a writer in this column can say what he pleases. Here, any citizen of whatsoever station in life, is given opportunity to present his views to the public. We in no wise pretend to edit what appears here. Should any one want to criticize the policy of The Post or show up the editor, his communication will be given our careful attention. Every writer, so far as is possible, should avoid personalities but if the cause demands names, then there is a certain admiration for the man who dares to write his opinions in his face of earping criticism.

Whether we agree with the opinion expressed in this column is not pertinent to the question. It is not our column and further than the laws of what shall be put into public print, we are not responsible. To make the street observations that we are authors of recent communications in this column is, indeed amusing. Why should we? We have a column of our own, in which to express our opinion and use it according to our judgement. The presumption is that we are afraid to stand sponsor for our opinion and so hide the authorship. Afraid? Of what, of whom, pray? It is neither bravery nor foolhardiness that leads us to say our say; it is simply exercising our rights of plain ordinary citizenship, born and bred into us in Sussex county, Delaware, U. S. A.

Any man successfully refusing that right has more power than we have ever credited to any citizen. And any man so foolish as by threat to secure us into silence is a joke to crude for life's vaudeville as seen in Newark.

The Peoples' Column is a good idea and is open to everybody—friends and enemies, alike.
Be a man and play the game.

School Board Discuss Tax Rate

Auto Assessment Settled

The subject of assessments and rate of taxation was discussed at a meeting of the Board of Education last night. In view of recent decision that the assessment of automobiles was within the legal rights of the Board it has been decided that the assessment on machines shall be 40 per cent of their retail cost for new machines, 30 per cent for 2 year old, 25 for 3 year, 20 for 4 year and succeeding years. This assessment will apply to all the standard cars. The only exception will be in some of the cars that are no longer made.

In view of the increase during the last few years of the teaching force and graded increase of salaries and prospective repair and other extra expenses during the coming year to make the rate $3 for the ensuing year. Although this is a little in advance of last year, it is still less than the prevailing rate in incorporated towns throughout the State. That the taxpayers might see just how the increase in expenses is being spent, the Board offered the following table for the last few years, showing the different items. Of these items it will be seen that the salary increase is by far the largest. The table follows:

Pick Ups

Any one wishing to make contributions to the Fire Engine Fund will find a hearty welcome and receive the stamp of Public Spirited Citizen.

The meeting of Council last Thursday night was suggestive of much good. It is hoped that all the ideas there expressed will be put into execution.

We have been asked by some of our patrons to call attention to the Fountain in front of the College. It has been out of commission for some weeks now. The repair of this would be greatly appreciated.

The article on crimson clover is worthy the attention of our farmer readers.

Rumors of startling improvements on Main street.

If Newark has any idea of having an Army somebody had better get busy. BELIEVE ME!

SQUIBS

"Newark is going so fast this year I can't keep up."
Well, come on, get in and ride.

A Band Stand with two concerts a week would be a good investment for merchants in Newark. The percentage of rural sales would increase. I never knew it to fail where it has been tried.

It is difficult for some people to see possibilities. Look at North College Avenue.

There are different grades of cowards as well as different classes of heroes. The most contemptible coward is a newspaper man who refrains from writing his honest opinion with the fear of loss of business or popularity.

A newspaper without an enemy? Why there isn't any such thing. "Give me this day an enemy" is the unconscious prayer of every newspaper trying to do something worth while.

Methodist Picnics

The M. E. Church and Sunday School will hold their annual picnic on July 24th at Brandywine Springs. Much interest is being shown in the picnic this year and a larger crowd is expected. The picnic for the Primary School will be held on the grounds in the rear of the church on Wednesday afternoon, July 23rd.

Summer School Bulletin

The fourth week of the Summer School for Teachers shows a final registration for the various courses of 165, several students having entered at the middle of the session for the purpose evidently of preparing for the examinations of the State Board of Education. These examinations will be held at the State Board of Education. These examinations will be held at the College on Friday and Saturday, July 25 and July 26. For the examinations, 110 students of the school have already handed in their names. The majority of the students will take all of the examinations, the average number of examinations for each student running above eight.

Additional facts and casual comment illustrate the seriousness with which most of the students are approaching the work of the school and the varied benefits resulting from the prescribed work of the courses, from the opportunities for independent reading, and helpful exchange of ideas, and from the general afternoon and evening lectures. Two significant facts to educators, at least, are, first, that 92 per cent of the students of the school are taking the full number of courses allowed—that is, four courses, with one additional course, if it is Drawing or Primary Methods and, second, that 82.46 per cent of the opportunities of the school are thus being realized, the difference in percentage being explained by the fact that every student might have taken five courses. It is a matter of much gratification to the authorities of the school, however, that contrary to their feeling at the opening of the session, students are now beginning to realize that even four or five subjects are too many to handle satisfactorily. Now that the Summer School is a permanent institution, prospective teachers and others need no longer feel that they must cover so much ground in any one (continued on page 8)

Another Authority

On Free Libraries

The opening of a free public library is a most important event in the history of any town. A college training is an excellent thing; but after all, the better part of every man's education is that which he gives himself, and it is for this that a good library should furnish the opportunity and the means. All that is primarily needful in order to use a library is the ability to read; primarily, for there must also be the inclination, and after that, some guidance in reading well.

STAY ON FARM INSTEAD OF BACK TO THE FARM

Plans To Hold Them

Kansas is going to have a "Back to the Farm" movement all its own, led by Governor George H. Hodges.

It will be in reality a "Stay on the Farm" movement, as the governor believes that the generally accepted plan of getting people to return to the soil is wrong in principle, and he proposes to begin at the other end and make it nicer to live on the farms than in the cities, giving the farmers virtually all of the advantages to be found in the cities.

The back to the farm movement is predicated on the theory that the farmers are deserting and that city people should go to the farms and take their places," said the governor, in discussing his plans. "I believe the thing to do is to keep the farmers on the farm, let the men who know farming keep at it and provide them with everything the city man has, and in addition they have the independence of their own business.

"The reason the farmers are leaving their farms to the tenants, the worst thing that can happen to a farm, is because of their children. Nearly every farmer in Kansas sees the benefits of education, and he is determined that his children shall have the best there is. Under the present system this cannot be done, so he moves to town to educate his children.

WOULD CONSOLIDATE DISTRICTS.

"During the last few months ninety-six Kansas school districts in the country districts voted $232,000 for new school buildings, costing an average of $2400 each. There ought to be a law prohibiting this in Kansas, and if we had good roads generally over the state the law would be easy of enactment.

"Kansas ought to prohibit the building of anything but two to four room school buildings, with an auditorium or large recreation room. Four to eight ordinary school districts should be joined into one and put up a real school house right in the center of the consolidated districts, employ two or three real school teachers and pay them as good salaries as the teachers get in the cities.

"Then have a man with a big covered wagon haul the children living a mile or more away, to and from school. This can be done for 5 cents a day per child and it will promote regular attendance at all times. The district should pay the expense.

"There are thirty or forty of these consolidated districts in Kansas now and the school work is just as high class as in the cities, and in the five or six of these districts I have been in the farmers told me their children got as good education in the grades as any city child and there was no talk of moving to the cities among these farmers.

PRaises township high school. "The township high school is taking root in Kansas. There are now about a dozen of these, providing a complete high school course, the equal in quantity and quality of any city school. Their graduates are accepted in any college in Kansas and in some schools in other states without entrance examinations. No graduate of one of these township high schools has ever been conditioned in college. There ought to be about 5000 consolidated graded schools in the country districts of Kansas and about 1000 township high schools where all the high school work is a regular thing. In addition, there should be an elementary course with practical experiments in agriculture, domestic science and art and in manual training.

"I am going to ask the next legislature to make it easier to build better roads and better schoolhouses and provide better teachers and graded-school work and township high schools with complete curriculums, and that law will also provide for the use of the school building for neighborhood gatherings at all times, the state to pay the heating and lighting bills."

STURGEON FISHING ENCOURAGED

Through Efforts of Consul Knowles, Streams Along Coast to be Restocked—Through Courtesy, Government Names Delaware to be First

Through the persistent efforts of Horace G. Knowles, of Wilmington, United States minister to Bolivia, sturgeon is to be restored to the American rivers, and, as a testimonial to Mr. Knowles the Delaware river is to be the first to be restocked.

Since the great value of the fish is comparatively unknown to the people of the United States, the importance of this announcement, which comes from Washington, will hardly be appreciated. Sturgeon, particularly the Roumanian species grows to enormous size. It is a common thing for the fishermen on the Danube river to catch sturgeon weighing 600 to 900 pounds, and occasionally a 1700-pound fish is landed.

Sturgeon is the king of food fish. The flesh is very palatable and nutritious, and the roe, which weighs hundreds of pounds, provides caviar. Where sturgeon is plentiful meat prices are low. So the assurance that the Delaware river is again to be the home of the sturgeon, and this time of a larger variety than was once found in these waters, is big news to economists and those who are devoting their attention to scientific means of reducing the cost of living.

In 1909 Mr. Knowles returned from Roumania, where he had represented the United States government, with an offer of the Roumanian government to send all the sturgeon eggs and fry needed to restock the streams of this country. The generosity of Roumania was a token of the esteem of the authorities of that country for Mr. Knowles and the United States. All that was necessary was for the United States government to transport the eggs and fry to this country and see that they were propagated. The request was refused, however, and lost sight of until the return of Mr. Knowles from Bolivia.

Recently Knowles returned from Bolivia to tender his resignation to the new national administration. In conversation with Secretary of State Bryan he referred to the Roumanian sturgeon project. The secretary took great interest in it and enlisted the co-operation of Secretary Redfield, of the department of commerce.

Dr. Hugh M. Smith of the Bureau of Fisheries stated a few days ago that in recognition of Mr. Knowles efforts that the Delaware would be the first stream to receive this attention.

It is in fact a process of rehabilitation for there was a time back in the eighties when there was sturgeon in the Delaware and other American rivers. They were not appreciated then as food fish and fishermen made war on them because they destroyed the light nets used for catching shad.

Then the appetite of the American epicure was whetted up to an appreciation of caviar, and fishermen hunted sturgeon the year round for the roe, which brought as high as $7 a pound. There were no laws for the protection of sturgeon, and in a few years they were exterminated. The caviar production dropped from 6,000,000 pounds in 1888 to 3,000,000 pounds in the early nineties, and now there is none at all.

The Delaware sturgeon weighed 150 to 250 pounds, and the roe frequently weighed as high as 100 pounds. The variety to be imported from the Black Sea streams are twice to three times as large, and it is believed that they will thrive just as well in the Delaware as they do on the Danube.

While they multiply fast, protection must be given during the spawning season. Those who are familiar with conditions on the Delaware river advocate government control of the sturgeon fishery industry. State regulation would probably be inefficient in protecting a fish so valuable as a roe sturgeon, which would yield $500 to $1000 worth of caviar, and flesh that when cut into steaks should bring 10 cents a pound.

It is understood that an effort will be made to bring to this country three carloads of sturgeon eggs and fry in the first shipment. They will be shipped in tanks under the care of experts connected with the United States bureau of fisheries. It may not be necessary to obtain an additional shipment, for with careful propagation in the hatcheries stock may be obtained for all the important streams.

Tragedy Of The Harvest

Now comes the time of harvest. The yellow fields of waving wheat have already been shorn from the breast of Mother Earth, and there sounds across the fields the rhythmic roar of the mower, bearing tidings of a harvest, if not as bountiful as that of the latter year, at least the assurance of a sufficiency. We hear the driver upon his hay-strewn seat, now calling to his sweating horses, and anon, lifting his voice joyously to the heavens. For this is a happy period of farm life, the garnering in of the rewards of past labors, though it entails long days of arduous toil.

But in the midst of this prosperous season for man, what a tragedy the harvest is for the lower forms of animal life. Though we drive ever so carefully, scarce a day passes that we do not have an animal tragedy brought to our notice. And who shall tell of the thousands of unseen, unmarked tragedies which lie beneath the heavy swath.

The mother rabbit which will not leave her wee bunnies till the ravenous steel teeth are upon her; the scarcely fledged sparrow which hops, perhaps fruitlessly from the pathway; the song bird which remains upon the highest weed until they fall together; and the multitudes of insects who die, trampled, cut and suffocated, lie mute witnesses of the great mystery of death.

And were these forms of life, our progenitors? It recalls the epitaph in the country churchyard, "As you are now, so once was I." Poor wounded bird! Was I, aeons and aeons ago, such as you? It is common to believe that the lower animals are not a prey to the complex and varied emotions which assault humanity, yet do they not suffer two of the most poignant of human emotions—fear and pain? And perhaps they grieve, also, over the helpmate, the young, trampled beneath our Brobdingnagian heels.

And the lesson of the harvest; not only should be keenly sensitive to the feelings and emotions of dumb creation, but we should be more human to one another. Descended from common stocks, we are all related to a greater or lesser degree. We are all of the great Human Brotherhood. Are we trampling upon others in our mad race for success, sacrificing friends and brothers for ambition's sake? Are we following the great rule of human conduct, enunciated by atmosphere of the parent-teacher circle the problems of the home and school can be discussed, usually with profit both to teacher and parent. That children thrive under the new sympathetic relation of home and school, induced by parent teacher association and meetings, is shown by the fact that they often urge their mothers and fathers to attend. Doubtless there are many of us who never realize how alien a place school is to the little ones and how helpful it is to see mother and father there a part of it.

Texts From Emerson

Each age, it is found, must write its own books; or rather, each generation for the next succeeding. The books of an older period will not fit this.

The book, the college, the school of art, the institutions of any kind, stop with some past utterance of genius.

Books are for the scholar's idle times.

Colleges have their indispensable office,—to teach elements. But they can only highly serve us, when they aim not to drill, but to create.

Colleges and books only copy the language which the field and work-yard made.

The literature of the poor, the feelings of the child, the philosophy of the street, the meaning of household life are the topics of the time.

Home And Endeavor

Before another school year rolls around Uncle Sam will have invited more than 4,000,000 mothers of the country to join in the working out of a co-operative plan whereby it is hoped to bring home and school nearer together, to help the parents to get the viewpoint of the teacher on one hand and on the other to help the teacher to guide little Johnny or Mary along lines of thought and work which will make the child a greater help in the home and assist it to develop into a better citizen in the nation.

During the hot months of summer, when both grown-ups and children are giving more attention to vacation plans than to school matters, experts in the United States bureau of education have just begun the organization of a new division to direct this new co-operative work which will aim at the rebuilding of two of the most important American institutions, the school and the home. For the want of the bureau has been called the division of home education, which might suggest that the purpose of the government is to turn homes into schools. The encouragement of co-operation between parent and teacher, however, is the sole purpose of the division, and in no manner will its work conflict with the activities of the school.

The National Congress of Mothers of the United States is responsible for the establishment of the new branch of the bureau of education. The division now being organized will not be provided for out of government funds, but will be maintained by virtue of a co-operative arrangement with this large mothers' organization, which will provide financial backing for the work, which will be directed and supervised by experts of the bureau of education. This method of providing for the work is similar to the plan followed by the government in conducting the co-operative farm demonstration work in the south, which is made possible largely by funds provided by the general education board, a part of the Rockefeller foundation. The same system of government co-operation with semi-private institutions is in operation in financing the new rural organization service of the department of agriculture, congress providing $50,000 for part of the work and the general education board subscribing larger amounts to extend the lines of investigations.

The new division of home education will enable the government to give official sanction to the important work of the parent-teacher associations which have been encouraged by the National Congress of Mothers, and which are now organized in most of the large school centers of the country. The purpose in organizing the division is to extend the same idea of co-operation between home and school in the rural and small town communities which the parent-teacher associations have developed in the large cities.

With this end in view, Commissioner P. P. Claxton, of the bureau of education has just mailed to a list of 4000 county superintendents of schools a letter asking their co-operation in the work about to be taken up by the division of home education, requesting the names of the schools under their supervision in the open country, villages, or small towns, and the names of at least two women of intelligence and influence in the vicinity of every elementary and high school. The women, preferably mothers, will be asked to co-operate in the work of the home education division by organizing parent-teacher associations for the discussion of the care and training of children in the home both before and after school age. In the entire country it is expected that there will be named at least 4,000,000 mothers who will co-operate with the government in the work of connecting up school and home to the mutual advantage of both. In a report to Commissioner Claxton on the parent-teacher associations and the scope of work of the division of home education Mary Harmon Weeks says:

"The National Congress of Mothers realized that there is a tendency to thrust much of the home's share of child nurture upon the overburdened schools. Our members believe that through parent-teacher meetings the true division of labor between home and school may be determined; through discussions of the problems of parents and teachers, the home may be educated to the necessity of assuming and performing its share. The public may thus be brought to understand that it also has a duty to home and child, which will best be performed not by makeshift play grounds, makeshift meeting places, makeshift methods of preventing infant mortality, but by making every dwelling a true home."

"The school can do many things for the children that the home used to do, and perhaps can do them better. There are a number of things, however, which must be done in the home, or they will not be done at all. In the sympathetic

The Voice That Answers: "Number, Please?"

Those young women whose voices you hear calling "Number, please," are important personages in telephone affairs.

It is the operator who applies intelligence to the machine that never stops—the Human Element that acts to control the wires as they summon aid in time of disaster—calls the doctor in illness or accident, or gets that word of assurance which dispels doubt or fear.

Don't forget the Austin Flood, the Omaha Disaster, the patient brave girl of the telephone switchboard who makes it possible to increase the joys of living, facilitates the activities of business, and who summons help in cases of extremity.

session, but that two or three subjects thoroughly mastered will be of greater permanent benefit than half a dozen subjects hastily skimmed over. Of the value of the well equipped library and of the suggestions for outside reading which instructors are constantly offering, the following remarks of one student are illustrative: "If I had got nothing else but my reading of 'Jean Mitchell's School,' I should feel amply repaid for my work in the Summer School." This book, it may be said, is one of three books recommended by Dr. Wagner to his class in School Management. Duplicate copies of these books as of all other books in general demand are provided by the College and placed on the Reserved Shelves for the use of the students.

The afternoon and evening general lectures are proving of great benefit. Last week Superintendent Twitmyer addressed the students on educational problems in Delaware. On Monday evening, Superintendent Spaid delivered an illustrated lecture on the subject, "The Nesting Places of the Blue Hen's Chickens." In the course of his lecture, Professor Spaid dwelt on the early history of the State, referring to the settlements by De Vries at Lewes in 1631 and by the Swedes on the Christina in 1638. Of much interest were the slides showing the many things of historical importance in the State, such as the New Castle County Court House, the stone marking the point at which the three states of Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Delaware meet, Coach's Bridge and the Mansion, made famous by Washington's visit. In connection with his slides showing some of the school houses of New Castle County Professor Spaid gave much helpful advice to the teachers. The slides which were shown covered the territory of the whole state, and were therefore of interest to the students from the three counties. On Tuesday evening, a lecture was given by Mrs. Reeve of Moorestown, N. J., on the subject, "Good Roads." On Friday, July 18, Superintendent Hardesty of Sussex county will meet all students of the school who expect to teach in his county during the coming year.

A list is to be kept of persons frequently arraigned in the City Court in Wilmington for drunkenness, to be furnished liquor dealers with notice not to sell to them under penalty of prosecution.

James M. Bronson, a well-known barber and prominent Socialist of Wilmington, hanged himself in his shop and pool room at 801 Elm street, last week. His wife's opposition to his political activity is thought to have prompted his suicide.
