NEWARK, DELAWARE, WEDNESDAY, MAY 29, 1912

NUMBER 19

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR FARMERS' DAY

The fifth annual Delaware Farmers' Day will be held at the State Farm, Newark, Del., on Monday, June 17th. A special effort is being made to have the day this year better than any of the previous ones.

The Agronomy field never offered such a great opportunity to study the value of various kinds of plant food for wheat, corn and grass; the different kinds of rotations, and in showing the results of using selected seed.

The orchards have made a very satisfactory growth during the past year, and will probably bear enough fruit this season to give an indication of the possible importance of the many different methods of management now under observation.

At the present time there are over 100 varieties of fruit on the State Farm, and an opportunity is given to observe their growth and possibilities under Delaware conditions.

In spite of the fact that the past winter was unusually hard on live stock, most of the animals at the college are looking very well; especially is this true of the work stock and the cattle. At the present time there are on the State Farm, six mules of different types, four registered Percherons and two Hackney horses, thirty-four Guernseys, five Jersey and four Angus cattle, twenty sheep of four different breeds, and about forty pigs of the Berkshire, Yorkshire and Duroc Jersey breeds.

The speakers this year will be Hon. D. O. Hastings, Henry B. Thompson, Senator Charles R. Miller, of Wilmington, and Hon. S. H. Derby of Woodside.

The invitation to be present is extended to the farmers of Delaware, especially, and to all others who are interested in the welfare of agriculture on the Delaware-Chesapeake peninsula.

Up-to-Date Auto Service

Auto express service between Newark and Wilmington by Oth Widdoes is the latest proof that Newark is abreast the times. Yesterday morning the new car made its appearance on the streets. It is a ton and a half truck, built by the Federal Motor Company of Detroit—an up-to-date car in every way.

Mr. Widdoes expects to make daily runs to Wilmington. The exact schedule has not yet been made.

With a car such as this and the man back of it, Newark can be assured of prompt and reliable service.

For strictly up-to-date auto service, Newark certainly leads the parade. And this latest car is not the last one in line either. Aside from express deliveries, we wager it will be in demand for straw bales during the coming season.

Headquarters and schedule will be made known in a few days.

PLANS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

J. B. Lutton and Thomas Mullin, members of Reynold Pest, G. A. R. No. 9, have completed arrangements for Memorial Day in this vicinity. School children will be prepared to sing the national songs in the cemeteries; Co. E, Organized Militia of Delaware, will send a firing squad and addresses will be made in both cemeteries.

Strahorn's large automobile back has been secured and with Mr. Lutton, Mr. Mullin, Miss Medill and the school children, will leave the Old Academy at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. The Methodist Episcopal cemetery will be visited first. The graves of the soldiers will be decorated by the children and the firing squad will discharge a volley. The children will sing special selections under the leadership of Miss Medill.

From the M. E. cemetery the party will go to the Head of Christiana, where the program will be repeated. The Episcopal cemetery will be visited on the return, and flowers and a flag placed on the grave of each soldier. One veteran is buried in the Catholic cemetery and a flag and flowers will be sent there to decorate that grave.

The exercises will take place at the M. E. cemetery at 9:30 o'clock at Head of Christiana at 11 o'clock.

The Grand Master in a few well-chosen words accepted the gift and thanked the lodge for its generosity. Toasts were responded to by Professor Charles McCue, (Goats I Have Met), Professor C. A. Short, (Our Obligation), and short speeches by Grand Treasurer Samuel Cleaver, Past Grand Masters Mode and Young.

SHALL WE OBSERVE FIVE MINUTES FOR MEMORY

The tendency of the sport-loving American public with its enthusiastic appreciation of a "day off" is toward observing the thirtieth of May as a holiday merely, and to overlook the significance of "Memorial Day." In too many instances the tribute to those who were willing to be sacrificed in order that the crisis in our national affairs might be safely passed, is paid by the loyal little band of G. A. R. The rest of us save our thoughts and garlands for our own departed loved ones, heaping the family graves only with fragrant flowers. All remembrance is beautiful, but let us not lose the distinctive idea of the national memorial day.

The G. A. R., which has perpetuated the idea since the first observance in 1868, has been quick to realize the drift of the times, and they have instituted this year, as a preventative, a custom which promises to find favor everywhere. "Five minutes for memory!"

Whatever his circumstances or environment, this tribute is possible to every man. From twelve to twelve five, in hundreds of towns, the bells will toll and the cannon boom in honor of the soldier dead.

Reverence and gratitude are deep rooted in the American. His greatest fault is heedlessness. Now that the suggestion has come, it is sure to meet with a hearty response.

Shall Newark not do her share to make the beautiful idea a permanent part of Memorial Day?

Ore Pits on Chestnut Hill Sold Mining Operations to Start

Word has been received that the property on which are located old iron pits on Chestnut Hill have been purchased by a Mr. Scott, representing a mining corporation of Philadelphia.

Lumber is being hauled for shacks and several car loads of machinery are expected in the next few days. It has not been learned whether the pits are to be opened for mining iron, or whether the refuse from the old mining operation is to be crushed for the manufacture of paint.

A bridge is being built across the creek on the William R. Wilson farm, the old right of way to the ore pits.

Construction gang is expected in a few days.

Best Train Service for Years

Under the revised schedule of the B. & O. Newark will enjoy the best train service for years.

The new schedule which went into effect last week took off the 1.02 Express going north and gave the 11.06 as a substitute.

Immediately on publication of this order Mr. Gallaher, the local agent, took up the matter with the General Passenger Agent in Baltimore and explained the need of this train, requesting that the stop be retained.

Messrs. Alfred and Walter Curtis went to Baltimore and made similar statements. Letters have been received granting this request and also giving the extra train 11.06, the Royal Special, for Newark's accommodation.

Congratulations to our agent for his prompt attention to this and also to those who interested themselves in going to Baltimore.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

Arrangements have been completed for the graduating exercises of the Newark Public School. The exercises will be held in the Opera House on Friday, June 14th.

The nine graduates have their essays prepared and will deliver them before three judges, Mrs. C. O. Houghton, Mr. David Jaquette and Father Dougherty, in the Opera House next Monday evening.

The judges will select the three speakers for commencement evening. Music will be furnished by the Stansbach orchestra of Wilmington.

NEWARK WOMEN HONORED

The twenty-fifth convention of the W. C. T. U. of New Castle county, was held in the M. E. church, Marshallton, last Thursday. The session was marked by the largest attendance in years and interesting addresses.

During the day eight memorial memberships were presented and four life memberships, the fees for which amounted to $60. The Delaware City Union and the soldier boys gave one for Mrs. Samuel M. Donnell; Newark Union gave one for their president, Mrs. E. K. Butler, and Mrs. Donnell gave one for her mother, Mrs. Sarah C. Cooch.

Mrs. S. M. Donnell was re-elected county president and presented with a beautiful cut glass bouquet holder as an appreciation of past services.

SENIORS CELEBRATE

Members of the senior class of Delaware College celebrated the completion of their studies last Thursday. The members of the class who are taking the mechanical and electrical engineering courses left their last recitation at 12 o'clock, and in honor of the event the entire class cut drill in favor of the annual parade.

The class formed in line and headed by the band, marched down the middle of Main street to Rhodes' drug store. Dr. Rhodes grasped the situation and handed forth the sodas expected.

After a few selections by the band, followed by the college yell, the officers resumed their duties, drilling the companies, in preparation for the competitive drill held during commencement week.

A merry-go-round on Delaware avenue attracts many children to that locality.

DEATH OF AUSTIN L. CROTHERS

Former Governor of Maryland

Former Governor Austin Lane Crothers, whose term expired at the opening of the present year, died at 12.10 a. m. on Saturday, at the home of his nephew, State Senator Omar D. Crothers, on East Main street, Elkton, of uraemia attendant upon Bright's disease, from which he had been suffering for some months past. He began sinking about three weeks ago and when uraemia developed the end came quickly. For several days previous to his death his mind wandered and toward the end he sank into coma from which he did not rouse.

Governor Crothers was the seventh son of the late Alphens Crothers, a farmer of the Eighth district, and was born near Conowingo, May 17, 1840. Most of his brothers were men of marked ability and derived their talent mainly from their mother, Margaret Aurelia (Porter) Crothers, who was a lady of fine mind and cultivated taste. He attended the public schools and the West Nottingham Academy, then in charge of the late Rev. Samuel A. Gayley. Later he taught school and read law with his brother, the late Charles Carroll Crothers, who was successfully State Attorney, State Senator and nominated in the Hurst-Lowmides campaign for Attorney-General. He finished his studies at the Law School of the University of Maryland and was admitted to the bar. In 1891 he was elected State Attorney for four years and made a fine record. In 1897 his brother, Charles C. Crothers, died, and he succeeded him as State Senator. He supported Governor John Walter Smith in the measures urged by him at the special session of the Legislature called in 1901, when emblem voting was abolished. The Wirt-Constable faction charged him with helping to disfranchise illiterate voters, and he was defeated in the fall of 1901 for the State Senate by Henry M. McCallough. He was renominated in 1905 and was again defeated by Dr. J. I. France, who had married the widow of Jacob Tome and who made a vigorous canvas.

Seemingly down and out, he came to the front when Governor Warfield appointed him to succeed the late Edwin H. Brown, of Queen Anne's county, as Associate Judge of the Second Circuit, embracing Cecil, Kent, Queen Anne's, Talbot and Caroline counties. He made an excellent record on the bench and gained in popularity so much that Senator John Walter Smith picked him at the eleventh hour as his candidate for Governor, or in 1907 and with the help of the late Governor Jackson, made him the nominee. The morning after he made his speech of acceptance in the Lyric, in Baltimore, he was seized with typhoid fever and did not leave his bed till after the election in November, at which he defeated George R. Gaither, his Republican opponent, by upwards of 8,000 votes.

As he was a confirmed bachelor with no family ties, he gave his whole time to the duties of the Governorship and was the hardest worker that had ever filled the chair. Most Democrats and many Republicans hold that he was one of the best equipped and influential executives ever chosen by the people of Maryland, and it is admitted that his health was wrecked by too faithful service. He was easily the ablest stump speaker in Maryland, of the present generation, and few of his predecessors ever surpassed him. He was gifted with a keen analytic intellect and had a fund of sound common sense, and talent that would have made him a successful man of business, which enabled him to master the details of the State's finances as few of his predecessors had ever done. He fathered the good roads movement in Maryland, started the direct primary legislation, secured the passage of the Corrupt Practices Act, the creation of the State Public Service or Utilities Commission, which largely put lobbyists out of business, and, in fact, got more progressive legislation enacted than did any previous governor. Three brothers, several nephews and grand-nephews survive him. He saved much of his salary, made wise investments and carried several policies of life insurance, but the value of his estate will not be definitely known until his will is probated. He was a large holder of stock in the National Bank of Elkton, of which he was a director.

His funeral was held yesterday, from his nephew's home, and was largely attended by men of prominence throughout the State. The body was taken by special train to Colorado, on the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad and interred in West Nottingham cemetery, where his brother, Charles C. Crothers and other members of the family are buried.

Progress at the College Farm Encouraging Report of the Director

The annual report of the Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station has recently been published. The pamphlet reviews the work of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911. The station is referred to as "a sort of clearing house in all matters pertaining to agriculture and country life. While agricultural research is constantly going on, and contributing facts of importance, the influence of the institution has been extended further through the application of the results of these experiments to farm conditions than in any other way. Evidence in support of the statement is seen in the fact that as a whole, the chain of Experiment Stations that were created by an act of Congress in 1887, although ridiculed by the farmers themselves, are now supported most loyally by the rank and file of the farmers of the country. At no time in the history of American Agriculture have the men who till the soil and who have some appreciation of their responsibility to it, been so willing to give a hearing to the agricultural investigators as now. This argues well for the future as it indicates that the time has passed when farming was supposed to be a vocation that required brawn alone."

The director urges the advisability of separating the work of investigation and teaching, and considers this combination the greatest handicap under which the station is laboring. It has been possible to relieve the Divisions of Chemistry and Plant Pathology from both teaching and extension work. It is hoped that similar arrangements can be made with reference to the Division of Agronomy at an early date.

The farm sales during the year amounted to $2,617.24. $2,378.22 was applied to clearing up the deficit of the year 1909-10, leaving but $239.02 to be applied to the work of the fiscal year herein reported.

Two of the bulletins published during the year are of especial interest. That on "Anthrax," by Dr. C. F. Dawson, pronounced without doubt, the best work extant on this important disease, and "The Relation of Parasitic Fungi to the Contents of the Cells of the Host Plants," by Dr. M. T. Cook. During the fiscal year a terra cotta hollow tile silo has been built on the State farm. A herd of registered Guernsey cattle purchased with the Adams' fund has been added to the live stock equipment. This herd will consume the roughage of the farm, and the manure from it will assist in no small degree in building up the fertility of the land.

The peach and apple orchards have made a satisfactory growth during the year, and are beginning to give some evidence of their experimental value.

The crops have been good, proving the wisdom of the commission in their selection of a farm for the State.

As soon as funds will permit, it is planned to begin to drain the farm with tile. It is believed that the clay soil will respond readily to drainage, and it is expected that by a good system of drainage the production of the farm will be materially increased.

"FIVE MINUTES FOR MEMORY"

A NEW FEATURE OF MEMORIAL DAY

Arrangements have been virtually completed for the nationwide observance of the new, beautiful and impressive ceremony to be known as "five minutes for memory" on Memorial Day of this year and every year hereafter.

The ceremonial was inaugurated last Memorial Day by the ringing of the bell in old Independence Hall, the half-masting of flags and the booming of guns at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

This year, bells in all parts of the country and in the nation's colonial possessions will be tolled and millions of people will stand silent and uncovered during the period between twelve o'clock noon and five minutes past twelve.

At that time flags will be lowered to half-mast, guns on the great army and navy reservation will be fired at long intervals and, so far as shall be practicable, silence shall overspread the land and all the people will put aside both work and play in memory of those who died that the nation might live.

The Grand Army Order.

Formal notification of the new observance comes from the source of all inspiration for Memorial Day, the Grand Army of the Republic. The commander-in-chief of the fading gray-haired, blue-clad host has issued the following exhortation and order upon the subject:

Our Posts, wherever located, are urged to see to it that May 30, of the present year be properly observed as a sacred holiday, and to this end it is suggested that they associate with them our auxiliary and affiliated organizations—the Women's Relief Corps, the Sons of Veterans, the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Daughters of Veterans. All other patriotic societies and especially the volunteers of the Spanish War and the Philippine Insurrection, and the public generally, should be invited to take part in the ceremonies of the day. The forty-ninth National Encampment, held at Rochester, in August, 1911, ordered that, as part of the public exercises of Memorial Day bells be tolled from twelve o'clock noon to twelve-fifty, that flags be placed at half-mast and that comrades remain standing with uncovered heads during this period.

Logan Order and Lincoln Address.

In addition to this general order it has also been ordered that the general order issued by Commander-in-chief John A. Logan, of the Grand Army of the Republic, on May 5, 1868, be observed. It has been directed that Commander Logan's order be read at the Memorial Day exercises in addition to the reading of the Gettysburg address of President Lincoln.

In the order issued by Commander Logan on May 5, 1868, he said in part:

If other eyes grow dull and other hands slack and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it well as long as the light and warmth of life remains to us.

Let us, then, at the time appointed, gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of springtime; let us raise above them the dear old flag they saved from dishonor; let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they left among us, a sacred charge upon the nation's gratitude—the soldier's and sailor's widow and orphan.

PROMISES TO BE IMPORTANT

A serum which its discoverer believes gives immunity from tuberculosis has been announced in Chicago. The discoverer is an American scientist, Dr. Karl von Ruck, of Asheville, N. C. First reports of the experiments on which he bases his contentions were given to the Chicago Medical Society in a paper prepared by Dr. von Ruck.

An elaboration of the paper appeared in "The Journal of the American Medical Association," and is to be followed by additional information which Dr. von Ruck hopes will revolutionize the worldwide warfare against the white plague.

Dr. von Ruck has found a vaccine which he says will kill the germs of tuberculosis in a latent stage and make the subject immune from further ravages of the disease. Experiments made on children and counter experiments made on animals are said to have demonstrated the value of the discovery. Dr. von Ruck does not yet assert it will cure consumption in its advanced stages.

"All I feel justified in claiming," says the physician in his statement to "The Journal of the Medical Association," is that I am the first to have made a successful advent in this most important and promising field of specific prophylaxis, in a disease that leads the mortality statistics of the human race."

Dr. von Ruck has vaccinated 339 children since July 1, 1911, including such as had already acquired a tuberculosis infection, but in a latent form. In none of these children has there been any disagreeable effect as a result of the vaccination.

The Chautauque Circuit, established with Swarthmore College in the lead, includes: June 10 to 15, Chestertown, Md.; June 11 to 16, Georgetown, Md.; June 12 to 17, Laurel, Md.; June 13 to 18, Dover, Md.; June 14 to 19, at Elkton, Md.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT OGLETOWN SCHOOL

A number of people were pleasantly entertained last evening by the pupils of Ogletown School No. 42, at the home of Mr. Wilbur Hawthorne of Ogletown.

Ten cream, cake and other delicacies were served and the proceeds were gratifying, about $25 having been cleared.

Miss Elmo Davis, of Newark, graduate of class 1910, Newark High School, is in charge of the Ogletown school and she is deserving of great credit for the manner in which the children were trained.

The program was made still more pleasing by the singing of Mrs. Jane Murray, the recitation of Mrs. Lewis M. Greenwalt and the instrumental music by Mrs. Lewis Cann and Miss Henrietta Slack, and the playing of the "Hayseed String Band," composed of Messrs. Howard De Groot, Clifford Lyman, Jesse Dever and Charlie Goff.

William Carpenter was master of ceremonies and added much to the occasion by his happy introductions of those taking part.

The program followed:

Instrumental duet, by Florence and Albert Walton.

Recitation—St. Stephens at a Football Game, by Margaret Davis.

The Nanticoke Indians of Sussex County Some Interesting Folk Lore

There is, living within the boundaries of Delaware, an interesting people—the Nanticoke Indians, of Sussex county. Surrounded by modern civilization, themselves in full possession of it as far as their physical and industrial life is concerned, they retain in full the primitive customs, beliefs and superstitions of their forefathers. They still cling to their aboriginal beliefs, spells, omens and witch doctors. Their folk lore affords a rich field for investigation which the historians of Delaware have been slow to appreciate.

Throughout the territory which they inhabit, according to Dr. Speck, of the University of Pennsylvania, the remains of the Nanticoke tribe, numbering at present about 1,000, are known as skillful farmers and are held in high esteem by their neighbors.

They have adopted the white man's standard in their daily life, building and supporting their own schools and churches without government aid, equipping their farms and homes with the most modern appliances, and, in general, assimilating the advancing civilization as readily as their white brethren.

While their fields are filled with modern plows, drawn with horses under modern harness, their corn is shelled in old-fashioned wooden mortars, such as their ancestors used before the coming of Columbus. While a modern wagon draws the corn to a neat little frame corner, of up-to-date construction, another ancient wooden mortar is used to grind it. The contrast of the old and the modern is very pronounced.

The Nanticokes of Delaware long since turned from the worship of the warlike Manitou to the peaceful persuasion of Methodism. Yet, without exception, they retain phases of their ancient faith, which, in the light of modern learning among them, seems incongruous.

There is a custom which prevailed for centuries before their conversion to Christianity," Dr. Speck tells us, "which has been retained. It is the burial of their dead beneath the floors of their dwellings.

"They were famous among the ancient tribes for the efficiency of their witch doctors and the accuracy with which they interpreted omens. The formulas for much of their 'magic,' and particularly for their love charms, still remain in the memory of the people and are practiced by them.

"A man who wishes to capture the affections of a girl takes an empty bottle, corks it and places it in a stream which flows east. He ties a string around the neck of the bottle and fastens it to a tree or bush overhanging the stream. After drawing the race of his sweetheart in the sands he departs, and while the string holds the bottle she will cling to him. But when the string breaks her love dissolves and floats away with the bottle.

"If two young men want to know how their love is returned by their sweethearts they boil an egg hard and leave it in water for a day. Breaking it, they fill the yolk cavity with salt, divide it and each eats half. The salt creates an extreme thirst, but the spell will be broken if they either drink or speak. They walk out of the room backward, ascend the stairs backward and get into bed backward. If they speak or take a drink until the following day, the charm is broken. If they do not, in a dream the girl each is to marry appears and offers them water.

"There is another mode of divination practiced by these Indians said to be very trustworthy in finding one's lover. A young man goes to a well with a mirror and holds it in such a way that he will see the reflection of the water below. The image of the girl he is to marry will then appear in the mirror; or, if he is to be a bachelor, the image of a coffin will appear.

"They have many practices to charm away disease. If an infant has the chickenpox, a naive remedy is to carry it to the chicken house and let the chickens fly over it. When whooping cough enters the home the father takes as many ordinary roaches as there are children affected and names a roach for each. Then each child takes his namesake and, placing it in a bottle, corks it tightly. When the roach dies a cure is effected.

"While practicing these odd superstitions, the Indians have adopted every modern contrivance for their home comfort. Nearly every home has a piano; many have telephones. Fortunes of $20,000 are common among them. Yet through it all the natural red man can be seen. His herbs from the woodland, his charms and spells, the lore of his fathers and all that was so real in the childhood of his nation, he is loath to put aside."

When the sky was made in the first great days,

And they fitted the corners so true,

There were bits and tags, and snips and rags,

In the cutting, that just fell through.

They were fresh from heaven and dainty bright,

And, oh, but the bits were blue, And they just took root in the earth that night.

And—thus 'twas the violets grew.

So long as streams run down,

As long as the robins thrill,

Let us taint old Care with a merry air,

And sing in the face of ill.

I think no garden's sweeter

Than its sweetest flower;

I think no life is kinder

Than its kindest hour.

But all the flowering sweetness,

Lie not in one;

Nor all a lifetime's kindness,

In the great things done.

Concerning Your Home

EVERY home should have a modern and thoroughly dependable plumbing system. Defective and unreliable plumbing fixtures in the bathroom, kitchen or any other part of the house, invariably interfere with the comfort and convenience of the whole family and often seriously affect health. It is therefore most important that your home should be as perfect in respect to the plumbing equipment as modern sanitary science can make it.

This is always the case when "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures are installed in a house. These fixtures are unexcelled for quality and sanitary efficiency, hence they are the fixtures we recommend and supply. The plumbing work on every job we do is proof of our high regard for QUALITY. May we estimate for you?

THE THIRD TERM ISSUE

By the request of one of our readers we are giving our space to an article written some months ago by Charles J. Bonaparte, formerly Attorney General in the cabinet of Roosevelt.

Article 11, Section 1, Clause 4, of the Constitution, says:

No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of 35 years, and been 14 years a resident within the United States.

These are the restrictions and the only restrictions, imposed on the eligibility of any citizen for the Presidency; they have been retained in the Constitution, without addition or subtraction, for 123 years; although meantime numerous suggestions looking to further restrictions have found expression in Presidential messages, party platforms and proposed Constitutional amendments; thus indicating that the American people probably see no good reason to artificially increase the difficulty of finding a fit man to be their first public servant.

A good many intelligent and fairly well informed people believe that, in his farewell address, Washington warned his countrymen against any man in the Presidency longer than eight years; and that he refused a third term himself to give this warning the sanction of his example; in fact, there is not a word in the farewell address which can be thus construed. Washington says:

The acceptance of and continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me, have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped that it would have been much earlier in my power consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement from which I had been reluctantly drawn.

He then explains that he had prepared an address announcing his intended withdrawal from public life before his second election, but the critical condition of the country's foreign relations at that time and the unanimous advice of prominent public men had led him to relinquish this purpose. He then adds:

I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty or propriety, and am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that, in the present circumstances of our country, you will not disapprove my determination to retire.

It appears clearly from Washington's words that he wished and intended to refuse a second term from precisely the same motives which led him to actually refuse a third term—namely, his distaste for office and longing for private life, and it is a fair inference from these words, that if the country had seemed to him to need his services at the end of his second term, as it seemed to need them at end of his first, he would have accepted a third term, impelled by the same sense of duty which led him to accept a second.

It is obvious that no President could establish any precedent on this question unless he both wished a second re-election and could certainly or very probably obtain it; and, whatever may have been the case with respect to the first of these conditions, no President could have felt assured or reasonably confident of getting a third term, if he asked for it, after Washington and before Jackson.

The prodigious popularity of "Old Hickory" caused some serious suggestion of a third term for him; and it was generally conceded by the well informed in politics that, if he would take one, he could get one. "My opinion," wrote Mr. Wirt, "is that he may be President for life if he chooses." Whatever may have been President Jackson's personal views on the subject, the failure of his health obliged him to abandon all thought (if he really ever had any thought) of a third candidacy. He retired at 70 to the hermitage, as Washington retired at 67 to Mount Vernon, feeling with somewhat better reason than Washington, that his work as a public servant was done.

There has been just one President who established an unequivocal, well-considered precedent on this subject; that President is Theodore Roosevelt himself. He alone among our Presidents has refused a third term when it was as nearly certain as any future event can be that, if he consented, he would be nominated, he would be elected, and persisted in this refusal although in the prime of life, full of bodily and mental vigor, profoundly interested in the problems of government he had sought earnestly to solve and undisputedly attracted by the incidents of power and public life. Unquestionably President Roosevelt's action involved a recognition on his part, a recognition made with all due deliberation, of what he called "the wise custom which limits the President to two terms," and, whatever may be the legitimate weight of mere precedent on a question which has been determined by the Constitution itself in express words, such weight must be given to the precedent thus established.

But beyond all reasonable doubt this precedent applies only to a third consecutive term; no President has ever refused a nomination after an interval. It is true that in only one case has the question arisen; but this fact is of very slight relevancy, for very few ex-Presidents has been young enough or strong enough physically to make their resumption of so arduous an office possible, and, in nearly all of those few cases, the course of our politics, after their retirement from office, has been such as to render their re-nomination altogether impossible, quite independently of any question of eligibility. In 1880 General Grant sought a re-nomination, but failed to obtain it, although he made a very formidable showing in the republican convention. This incident has, perhaps, no great significance either way; but the question involved would seem to be almost too clear for argument as a matter of common sense. All that can be said against a third term is embodied in Article 34 of our Maryland Declaration of Rights, which asserts:

"That a long continuance in the executive departments of power or trust is dangerous to liberty; a rotation, therefore, in those departments is one of the best securities of permanent freedom."

Whether this doctrine is or is not sound we need not now discuss; it is, at least, an intelligible doctrine. Obviously, however, it can have no application to a third term obtained after an interval of retirement; when the incumbent has been duly "rotated" out of "power" and "trust," it surely cannot be dangerous to liberty, if, sixteen or twelve, eight or even four years later, he shall be "rotated" in again. The most visionary doctrinaire, if he were also sincere, could hardly try to sustain such a proposition, and the plain man who lives in a workaday world must surely hold it little better than a criminal folly for a free people to deny themselves the right to fill their highest office with a man whose only fault is that he has already filled the same office, and filled it well, for eight years; this were as silly and Aristotelian because he was called the Just.

Carnival Plans

The ladies of the town met in the Council Chamber last Tuesday evening, to talk over plans for the coming carnival. The chairman of the committee were named and arrangements made for a meeting at the home of Mrs. E. C. Wilson next Friday, when the complete committee will be named.

PEOPLES' COLUMN

MUNICIPAL BOOKKEEPING

QUESTION

Reprinted from last week.

Editor, Post: Town Council makes quite an advertisement of their expenditure of $12,000 for macadamizing a back street, but where is the $12,000 to come from?

Cast your eye over the last town report and find, if possible, the gold mine. Are they trying to lead us to believe that this is to come from water and electricity? We presume they are, as the entire amount derived by taxes is only $7,000 to $8,000.

The water and electric department is no doubt given credit in the last statement for everything possible to credit to them. As our recent council came into power on the wave of indignation which followed the leasing of these utilities by the preceding council, and they doubtless have tried to show during the past year how much these departments could make under real scientific management.

This must be assumed, and it must also be remembered the statements made as to the vast amounts of money the town could make out of the plants, as they were affectionately termed.

It was also freely stated the plants were worth $80,000—don't forget the price, $80,000. We believe this price was set by Mr. Hossinger, who has had the general direction of the plants, assisted by the Dark Committee and the Water Committee for the last year.

Council figures show as follows: Receipts from sale of current $5,740.99 Receipts from water 4,924.34

Total $10,665.33 Paid light dept. $ 7,871.59

Less note paid 1,000.00

..... $6,871.50 Paid water dept. 3,940.15

Total paid $10,811.65

Less Note paid 1,000.00

..... $ 9,811.65

Then receipts $10,665.33

Less payments 9,811.65

Apparent earnings ... $ 853.68

So far, so good, but every manufacturing plant, we believe, charges at least 5 per cent. for depreciation; if council made no provision for this it makes no difference, the depreciation exists and equals by all authorities 5 per cent. So if the plant is worth the price set of $80,000, the depreciation would be $4,000 or by subtracting the apparent profits of the magnificent sum of $853.68 the town really lost last year on the water and electric departments, the sum of $3,146.32.

This is the real condition of the finances of the water and light department, taken from council's published statement and as it is, it must show to everyone that the town had better give away this $80,000 beloved plant or apply for a receiver forthwith.

Well, where will the $12,000 back street come from? Hey?

Thankfully,
Not a Big Taxpayer.

ANSWER

Editor of Newark Post, Dear Sir: The article in your last issue headed, "Criticism of Municipal Bookkeeping," seems to be aimed at me, and as it is more or less misleading, I will attempt to explain, although I believe that such articles should go unanswered. I further believe that anyone having the best interests of the town at heart will cease this agitation, and I trust your policy of harmony of a year ago still holds good, and that you will not see fit to publish any more articles criticizing either those in favor of or against the lease. I will ask you to again publish the figures of your last issue, showing apparent earnings, $853.68.

To show the real earnings of the plants, should be added as follows: Paid Newark Water and Electric Company, in settlement to recover plants, $446.22. Unpaid bills of previous Council, $512. Water and light rents due in 1911, $715, making a difference of $942. Fire protection and street lighting, $2,500; interest on debt, $1,997.92, making a total of real earnings of the plants, $7,251.82.

As to my stating that the plants were worth $80,000, I made affidavit during the proceedings in chancery, that I believed the plants cost the town upwards of $80,000, for new work and material, not counting any repairs. This statement I stand ready to prove.

It is true that nothing has been charged off for depreciation of plants, but why should it be? Certainly we are making improvements each year which make the plants more valuable, and I think everyone will grant that they are in better shape now than they were when they were first installed, as the water mains and light lines have been extended to all parts of town. We have new machinery at the power plant and pipe wells to replace an open well, which was always in danger of contamination.

The Council in trying to approximate the money that would be available for the ensuing year figured as follows: Amount in treasury, $2,000; taxes for 1912, $8,500, total, $10,500. Debt reduced last year, which would be available if necessary, $2,000, total, $125,000. A reporter was at this meeting and probably got the figures.

Yours truly,
Joseph H. Hossinger.

The above letter was left at this office during our absence and did not reach our attention until too late for the necessary reply.

Although the letter is an answer to a communicated article, it implies that the editor of this paper is involved.

We shall explain further in the next issue. Ed.

Issue Booklet On Corn Culture

That the Pennsylvania Railroad is determined to use its influence to increase the quantity and quality of the corn grown on its lines is indicated in a booklet just issued by its freight department on the subject of "Corn Culture."

The railroad calls to the attention of farmers that the profit from an acre of corn in the immediate territory traversed by its lines exceeds that of any of the great corn growing sections; it states that in pursuance of its policy to place with the farmers the benefits of the most scientific research and experience in agricultural development, it arranged with the Pennsylvania State College for the treatise on corn culture. The company says it hopes and believes that this effort toward education will prove of mutual benefit to the farmer and the company.

Other pamphlets issued by the Freight Department of the company devoted to agricultural development and farm operation are as follows:

The Essentials of Soil Fertility.
Alfalfa.
Orchard Development.
Potato Culture.
Seed Grain Suggestions.
Beef Production in Pennsylvania.
Use of Dynamite on the Farm.
Farming Possibilities of the Delaware - Maryland - Virginia Peninsula.
Good Roads at Low Cost.

"THE CIVIL WAR THROUGH THE CAMERA."

"Every Evening" is Distributing the Famous Brady Pictures With Elson's History of the War.

The famous Brady War Pictures and Prof. Elson's History of the Civil War constitute the most intensely interesting story of the conflict between the States that has yet been given to the country. Every Evening, Delaware's leading newspaper, has arranged to distribute the two, known as "The Civil War Through the Camera," for the entire State of Delaware.

Matthew Brady, the photographer, who went to the front in '61 by permission of Lincoln, secured hundreds of pictures that make up a priceless collection at this time. With Prof. Elson's History of the War, they furnish a word and pen picture that should be in the hands of every person in the State, young or old.

Every Evening is sold by every newsdealer in Delaware. All that is necessary to secure the War Portfolios is to buy the paper from your nearest dealer and save the coupons printed daily. Six coupons and 10c to cover cost of handling, with an additional 3 cents for mailing, secures One Part of these handsome War Portfolios. One is issued each week—16 in all.

The youngster was very nervous and fanned three out of four times up.

Delaware lost games to Swarthmore, A. & M. of North Carolina, Albright, Johns Hopkins, Fordham, Maryland A. C. and two to Lebanon Valley.

Little, the wee southpaw, who pitched such a masterful game against Delaware last week, did equally as well against Albright on Saturday, allowing but four hits and scoring a shutout.

Delaware has just one more hope, which is to win the annual game from the alumni during commencement week.

NEWARK HIGH SCHOOL

Newark High School Baseball. Newark High School team journeyed to Dover on Saturday and did the same as all the other Newark teams on that day, got lost. The Dover High boys scored a 6 to 0 shutout. Green did the work in the box for Newark and Bolton caught him.

This ends the Newark High season, unless Elkton is played at Iron Hill. Those two teams have each won a game and arrangements are being made to play the third game on neutral grounds.

The High School boys claim that Dover run in a couple of ringers on them last Saturday. One of them was the pitcher, who had the local boys at his mercy, allowing but two hits.

Newark High has won three and lost five games. They won from Central Academy, Elkton and duPont Academy and lost to Elkton, Oxford, St. Aloysius, Chesler Academy and Dover High.

Bad Day for Newark Clubs

Saturday proved to be a disastrous day for Newark as far as baseball is concerned. All four of the teams in the town played and all lost. Newark Tri-County lost to Port Deposit, 4 to 3; Newark Field Club lost to Iron Hill, 10 to 7; Delaware College was defeated by Maryland A. C., 8 to 5, and Newark High was trimmed by Dover High, 6 to 0. That was pretty bad, but still it might have been worse. Just think of it, they might have all been shut out.

COUNTY FINANCES—ENGINEER WILSON MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

County Engineer Wilson made his report to the Levy Court last week. The total receipts during the year were $80,331.84; the disbursements, $52,313.46, leaving a total balance of $28,018.38.

The following will give the items of the report of the three local hundreds:

White Clay Creek hundred—The receipts during the year were $4,752.43. There has been spent $2,657.89, leaving a balance of $2,094.54.

The last debt of $400 has been paid and we start the new year with a working balance of $2,094.54. Nearly 18 miles of road were scraped into shape, 30 miles dragged and five and one-quarter miles of ditches dug and cleaned.

We repaired 19 bridges and built 10 new ones, besides putting in 11 plank trucks and three metal ones. The hills at Christiansburg, Back Mills and Smalley's Mills were cut down considerably and were cut down considerably.

The following material was used: $68 worth of metal pipe, 4,500 feet of lumber, six tons of coal, six barrels of cement, 125 pounds of dynamite and three kegs of spikes. This hundred suffered many washouts during the storms, and most of our time was taken up in repairing them. There are several very bad roads here, the territory is large and the road tax comparatively small, so that we cannot do as much as we would like to each year, but as we would like to be in much better shape soon.

Receipts, $4,752.43; balance, $2,094.54. No liabilities.

Mill Creek hundred—The receipts were $11,286.72. With $8,775.56 spent, leaves a balance of $2,511.16.

"This hundred starts a new working year with a balance of $2,511.16, and no debts. This is one of the hundreds that suffered so much from the heavy rains, or rather cloud bursts, of last summer. The roads are steep and narrow, and there are so many of them, every hill being crossed by at least two roads, that it is only by the utmost care on the part of the supervisor that they are kept in a passable condition. We scraped some 20 miles of road, dragged five miles and cut 1,200 feet of ditches. Ten bridges were repaired and six were replaced with new concrete ones. Thirteen new metal culverts were put in and several repaired. About three miles of road were rounded and gravelled and one mile surfaced with stone. Elliott's Hill and the Meannon's Church road were cut down, graded and surfaced, and the Mt. Cuba hill was partly finished. This work had to be abandoned last summer on account of the many washouts over the other roads, which needed our more immediate attention. Receipts, $11,286.72; balance, $2,511.16. No liability."

Pencader hundred—Pencader gives receipts amounting to $3,848.28. The amount spent totals $2,119.76, leaving a balance of $1,728.52, with three bonds unpaid of $300 each.

The report of the engineer is as follows: "We have still three bonds of three hundred dollars each left to pay in this hundred, but we have in hand to start the new year's work $1,728.52. As we began last year with only $19.20 not very much work could be done last spring but we hope this season to make a good showing. Pencader is one of our poorer hundreds in the point of taxes, but it has some very difficult roads to keep in repair and many small bridges and culverts. Several miles of road were scraped and dragged, and many ditches opened. Some twenty bridges were repaired and twenty plank, four metal, and one terra cotta culvert put in. A short distance of stone road was built and many ruts filled. We hope this year to put in good condition the dirt road from Glasgow to Summit Bridge. Receipts, $3,848.28; balance, $1,728.52. Liability, April 1st, 1912 bonds, $900."

Absence makes the heart grow fonder but the memory of the absent one becomes vague and dim. You long to picture in your mind just how "HE" or "SHE" would look, but there's a mysterious something which makes the mental picture impossible.

But if you had a photograph before you, then you could recall the forgotten face, yes, even the kind acts, the gentle words.

Go To White Clay

Where shall I spend Thursday evening of this week? Of course, I shall go to that festival in the basement of the White Clay Creek Presbyterian Church. We always have such a good time there. They are going to serve strawberries, ice cream, cake, etc., and give us an opportunity to purchase at the fancy table, if we want to. I hope to be there, and I shall not be alone, either. Remember the evening of Decoration Day, the 30th.

"SEE DELAWARE FIRST"

A STRANGERS IMPRESSION OF NEWARK

Delaware City, May 28, 1912.

Mr. Editor: "See Delaware First" would not be an inappropriate motto to be hung on the walls inside our public schools, that the idea the motto conveys might be instilled into Delaware school children by instructors and teachers. Every part of Delaware is well worth seeing and as the State is small, in this day of varied and improved modes of travel, we can easily traverse her entire borders, from the broad ocean view at Rehoboth to the romantic hills, giant rocks, rippling waters and wooded groves extending a short distance beyond the delightful summer pleasure grounds at Brandywine Springs, to the Pennsylvania line. Although it has been said, "What is so rare as a day in June?" your correspondent did not wait for that particular season but chose one fine May day last week, to see a small but interesting part of Delaware.

Leaving Delaware City over the Newark and Delaware City branch of the P. R. R., on both sides of the railroad stretches the finest farming section to be found anywhere in this country.

On one of these farms known as Hill Top, owned and farmed by ex-Governor Lea, there was given before a representative audience a demonstration of farming by dynamite, and a series of talks by ex-Gov. Lea as to his methods of planting, cultivation and the selection of seeds. The scientific efficiency generally applied by him along farming lines was also touched upon and it was evident to all present that these are the things that count most in contributing to the superior yield that ex-Governor Lea's farms are bringing forth.

At Porter, the Newark and Delaware City line crossed by another branch of the P. R. R., the Delaware Division which in itself is a great railroad, constituting one of the main arteries of trade and travel on the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia Peninsula. Between Porter and Newark is a most excellent view of Delaware's highest point, Iron Hill, where at one time in the early history of this Republic, it was thought would be built the future city of Washington, the capital of the nation. Senator Lodge in his life of George Washington gives a very interesting account of this once possibility, and of how Alexander Hamilton snatched this possible victory from the very jaws of Iron Hill and placed it upon the Potomac in order to secure the establishment of the National Bank of North America at Philadelphia.

Just beyond this view of Iron Hill is the Delaware State Experimental Farm, making a most excellent showing, with its young, healthy-looking peach orchards, fine buildings and good, practical farm work, under the supervision of Professor H. Hayward.

On reaching what is known as the old station at Newark, the terminus of the Newark and Delaware City branch, the spirit of liveliness and competition in trade is in evidence as you are courteously solicited to patronize one of three independent bus lines, operated by Strahorn, Stiltz and Whittingham from the station to the town over what is known as Depot road.

Newark proper, to say the least, is a live town. The first and foremost of her institutions inviting one's attention is the State College and all in connection therewith bespeaks tidiness, thoroughness and progress. On this particular day the college boys were out on drill, with music and military air. Their parade was attractive and interesting.

The wall paper manufactory alone would do credit to any country town, but this is only one of the many manufacturing plants that go to make up the "hustle" of this town. To do justice in description to these hives of industry, is far beyond our reach. It is sometimes used as a dodge, even by able editors when vested in a controversy to declare that, had they the time and space they would go deeper into this subject and do it further justice, but we are frank to admit that no amount of time or space would enable us to do justice to our theme.

The commercial and home life justifies the pride of the college town. There are shady streets, handsome residences, good hotels, two lively weekly newspapers, all worthy of only commendation.

One needed improvement which might be brought about by agitation and which is necessary to correspond with the improved surroundings, is a new railroad station at Newark Center.

We boarded the train on the Newark and Pomeroy branch of the P. R. R., and were soon winding around curves among hills by the side of flowing waters, through a prosperous section, crossing the Mason and Dixon line into Pennsylvania. At Avondale we changed cars for Kennett Square. The trolleys were brought into service, carrying us very soon over the line into Delaware again. This included a run through Mill Creek hundred, an exceedingly rich agricultural region. One of the interesting points here is the large new building on a summit, the Hope Farm. This is to be a home for persons afflicted with tuberculosis and bids fair to be a lasting benefit and great monument to Delaware charitable institutions.

Brandywine Springs, the popular pleasure ground, was bustling with preparation for the opening season. From here we passed through a section worthy to be considered the suburbs to Delaware's metropolis—Wilmington. Few cities exceed the possibilities of Wilmington, from a manufacturing point of view. She promises not only to hold her own in this line, but to surge steadily ahead. Her commercial life is on the increase; her educational institutions are becoming more and more noted, her banking institutions continue to make an admirable showing.

Again the trolley, and we were soon back to the one real place on the map—Delaware City—after having seen a small part of Delaware.
