Several projects causing traffic delays

DelDOT crews are replacing the pedestrian crossing at the intersection of North College Avenue and Cleveland Avenue. The project includes the construction of a new traffic signal and an ADA-compliant pedestrian crossing, which was requested by a citizen. Work will be done from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and will be completed by Aug. 23. Motorists should expect intermittent lane closures on both roads.

It's a summertime tradition in Newark – once the university students leave for the summer, the construction crews come in. Because of the traffic and crowds that come with having 20,000 students in town, city officials often try to get construction projects done in the summer, when their impact on traffic will be felt the least.

"There's a window of opportunity, and we try to use it," City Manager Carol Houck said.

And, as anyone who has driven through Newark recently knows, this year is no different.

Several projects are impacting traffic on Main Street, Cleveland Avenue and North College Avenue.

Inside, you'll find a pictorial guide to the construction locations, as well as information on how the projects will impact traffic.

One arrested, one sought for committing lewd acts

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

A Newark man has been arrested and another man is being sought in connection with two separate incidents of public masturbation in and around the city in the past week.

The most recent came 9 a.m. Monday when a woman driving west on Kirkwood Highway noticed a man – nude from the waist down – masturbating while stopped at a traffic light, said Cpl. John Day of the Delaware State Police.

The man had swerved toward the victim's vehicle near Kirkwood Plaza and then stared at her through his open window, Day said.

The victim dialed police and followed the man's 2002 Volkswagen EuroVan as it traveled west into Newark.

Officers from the Newark Police Department stopped the van on Main Street near Pomeroy Station and took the driver into custody, according to NPD spokesman Cpl. James Spadola.

The man, identified by state police as Matthew R. Greenberg, 33, was charged with lewdness and second-degree indecent exposure and released on $300 unsecured bail.

Two days earlier, a similar incident was reported in the 800 block of South College Avenue. The two

Introducing a new, modern look for the Newark Post

By JOSH SHANNON
Newark Post Editor

By now, you've probably noticed that this week's issue of the Newark Post looks quite a bit different than usual.

What you're seeing is the result of a redesign project we've been working on for the past couple months.

The biggest change, of course, is the front page, which has taken on a much more modern and colorful look. We hope this makes the paper more eye-catching and inviting to readers.

A unique feature is the photo-based story at the top of the front page. We plan to use this space each week to feature a lighter story illustrated with rich photography that depicts the people and places of Newark.

We've also added a side "rail" that gives you an at-a-glance look at what is inside this week's paper.

Inside, you'll notice more modern-looking page headers and some slight changes in fonts and stylizations. In the coming weeks, you'll also see us using more graphic features, such as info boxes, pull-quotes and number breakdowns.

However, our print edition is not the only thing that has seen improvements recently. A little more than a week ago, we redesigned the home page of our website, newarkpostonline.com, to make more stories appear at the top of the page. This should make it easier to find the news you're looking for.

The main change is a new "carousel," which will feature the day's top stories whether they are news, sports or features. Photos are bigger, headlines are bigger, and you can easily find the latest updates at a quick glance.

The redesign should be appealing to both occasional readers and regular readers. If you only come to the website every so often, the "Top Stories" section will show you the biggest stories going on today. But if you're one of the people who visit the site multiple times per day, you can easily find the most up-to-date stories in the Latest Headlines column.

One final note: Just because the paper and website look different, that doesn't mean the contents have changed.

You'll still find the same local news and sports coverage we know you have come to expect from the Post over the years. You'll also still find popular weekly features such as Out of the Attic, police blotter, the Post Stumper and Jon Buzby's sports column.

We're excited for this new chapter in the Post's long history, and we hope you'll like the changes we've made.

Let us know what you think.

Blood Bank in need of donations to meet demand

By ROSE MCNEILL
Newark Post

In the summertime, the Blood Bank of Delmarva usually experiences lower levels of inventory than during the rest of the year, but current levels are even lower than normal for the summer, according to officials.

The Blood Bank is asking the public to make an appointment to donate as soon as possible in order to ensure that hospitals have enough blood to meet the needs of all their patients.

Christine Serio, external communications specialist for the Blood Bank, said that people who might normally donate blood are less likely to be thinking about donating because they are busy with summer activities.

"We usually see a little bit of a dip in our inventory during the summer months and typically that's because people are going on vacations or they're thinking about being outside, enjoying the weather, so it's really not top of mind to them to make a blood donation appointment," Serio said.

She said that although the inventory has not reached a critical level, it is important that the amount of blood donations increases because the Blood Bank of Delmarva is the sole provider of blood for a large area, serving 16 hospitals in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

One pint of blood can save up to three lives, Serio said, so many people are affected if there is a blood shortage. Numerous medical procedures require blood transfusions, including those used for cancer patients, trauma and burn victims, women that have given birth and others.

Because the need for blood is so great, the Blood Bank tries to offer frequent and widespread opportunities to give blood, Serio said.

Donations can be made at one of four permanent centers in Newark, Wilmington and Dover, and Salisbury, Md., or at one of more than 30 established mobile blood drive locations which can be found on the Blood Bank's website.

"For people who haven't donated before, sometimes it's a little intimidating or scary because they're not sure what to expect but once they do it, once they realize how easy and simple it was, they know there's really nothing to be afraid of," Serio said. "They know that they're really doing something great for other people."

Donors can schedule an appointment online or by phone. The entire donation process takes about an hour with reception, review of reading materials and a mini-physical and computer interview to assess eligibility to donate, with actual blood donation lasting only 5 to 10 minutes. Afterwards, donors are sent to the canteen for 15 minutes to eat and hydrate before they are free to go.

"Folks can just come out, roll up their sleeves and save some lives," Serio said.

Christina district schools keep families fed in summer

By NICOLE ROMEO
Newark Post

Newark resident Prudence Capel and her family and friends enjoyed a tasty meal of oven baked chicken, beef and cheese nachos, fish fillet, garden salad and fruit at Brookside Elementary School's Family Dinner Night Wednesday evening.

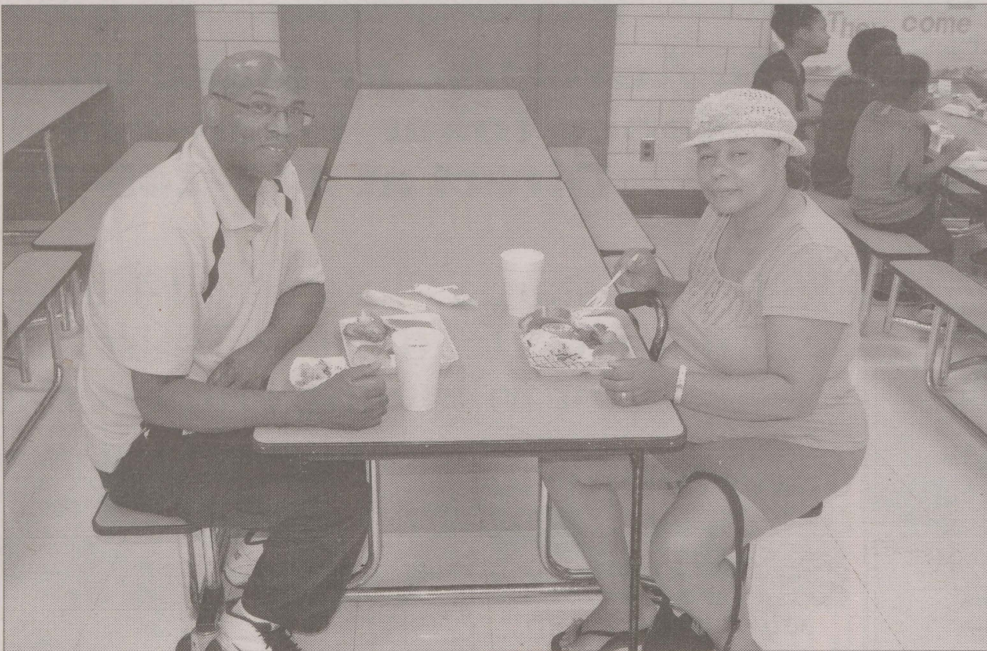

Capel comes to Brookside almost everyday for lunch as well as to the weekly dinners as part of the Christina School District's Lunch Crew Summer Food Service Program, a federally-funded food and Nutrition Services program that offers breakfast, lunch and dinner to lower income families.

The meals are monitored by Child Nutrition Services personnel, and all children 18 and under are eligible to receive free meals. Participants do not need to apply. They can just show up, but all meals must be eaten on site.

"In the summer, the kids will eat you out of the house," Capel said. "It gets you out and saves you money on food at the same time."

Like Capel, Eric and Ceatrice Boulware walk to Brookside every week for dinner.

"It's a very good program," Eric Boulware said. "It brings the community together, even if just for a little bit."

Vanessa Gallaher and her family usually go to breakfast and lunch at McVey Elementary School and then to dinner at Brookside, she said.

"We love it," Gallaher said. "It's a very nice program and very helpful. The food's great."

Aside from these regulars, Brookside welcomed many new faces this week.

Maria Gonzalez said her children usually go to Leasure Elementary School for lunch, but this week was the first time they tried the dinner.

She is very fond of the program because it provides great food as well as time for her family to spend together, she said.

Mary Anne Sammy, of the Christina School District's Child Nutrition Services, said Brookside is a great community participation site with a lot of residents coming from within walking distance.

The Christina School District has been participating in the food services program since 2006, Sammy said. Brookside was first used as a dinner site three years ago. Last summer, the site served only breakfast and lunch, but was reopened for dinner this summer with expectations of having a good turnout.

Brookside is just one of the many Newark sites. Brookside and Brader Elementary Schools offer dinner every Wednesday from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. These schools, along with Christiana High School, Gauger-Cobbs Middle School, Glasgow High School, Leasure Elementary School, McVey Elementary School, Smith Elementary School and Shu-Medill Middle School, provide breakfast and lunch Monday through Thursday. Breakfast is served from 9 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. while lunch is provided from noon to 1 p.m. The program runs until Aug. 1.

"They always serve very good food," Amanda Saltenberger said. "It's something that keeps you full."

Gov. Jack Markell speaks to students from The Governor's School of Excellence last week at the University of Delaware. Markell spoke about how he is helping to secure jobs for people with disabilities.

Students from The Governor's School Of Excellence work on a group project at the University of Delaware. The week-long course brings together academically and artistically talented high school students from around the state.

Markell visits with students in Governor's School

By JACK COBOURN
Newark Post

When Conrad School for the Sciences junior Bryce Fender's guidance counselor picked him to apply for The Governor's School For Excellence, he did not know it would show him what life in college was like. "I really liked that they've showed us what college lectures are like and the concept of teaching," he said. "For me, it makes you reflect on what you're talking about, what you're discussing rather than a teacher in high school handing you information and saying 'go study it.'"

Fender is one of the many rising juniors from Delaware high schools who were chosen as a result of their academic or artistic talents. The program is a week long and students live on campus in some of the University of Delaware's dormitories.

On Thursday, the school had an extra special visitor as Gov. Jack Markell appeared at Memorial Hall to talk about the increasing globalization in both industry and education in the state. He said he is working on special multilingual schools, where half the day's learning is in English and half of it is in Chinese or Spanish. Those schools would start at a young age. "We're starting these kids in kindergarten," Markell said. "They should be proficient by the fourth grade, and by ninth grade, they'll be taking the AP tests."

In keeping with the theme of globalization, the school was going to have a seminar on Chinese culture with members of the university's Confucius Institute later on in the day, lead resident assistant Blayze Lewis said.

Markell also said he was working on securing more employment for individuals with disabilities in the state after being asked by one of the students.

Caesar Rodney High School junior Rebekah Mills, who asked the question, said she was pleased with Markell's answer.

"I was excited," said Mills, who works with the Brain Injury Association of Delaware. "It's always great to find out more information and the National Empowerment Act is very interesting."

After Markell left, Associate Professor of International Relations and Political Science Jason Mycoff taught a lesson on economics and world trade.

Students watched the documentary "Costco Craze: Inside the warehouse giant" and worked on a group project where they designed their own big-box store's business plan.

Overall, the highlight of the day was the governor's visit, Lewis said.

"It's always great to have the governor come and meet a whole bunch of kids, talk to the kids and get some face time, being that it is the only Governor's School For Excellence," he said. "I like that he comes to a session like this to speak with them rather than a ceremony at the beginning or end. This feels a lot more personal."

Fire rips through Iron Hill home

By JOSH SHANNON
jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Flames ripped through a Newark-area home Sunday night, causing heavy damage, fire officials said.

The blaze broke out at approximately 7:40 p.m. in the 1500 block of Iron Hill Road, just outside city limits, according to John H. Farrell IV, a spokesman for Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co.

"The fire department arrived to find a bi-level, single-family dwelling with heavy fire in the house and through the roof," Farrell said. "Damage to the house was extensive."

One Aetna firefighter was treated and released at Christiana Hospital.

Three dogs and one cat were rescued from the home.

Farrell said the high heat and humidity caused "terrible conditions for the firefighters" and made battling the blaze more difficult.

Extra crews were called to the scene to act as reinforcements, and in total, 75 firefighters from eight companies in Delaware and Maryland participated in the effort.

"Crews had to be continually rotated because of the heat," Farrell said.

The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

Newark Free Library project honors founders

By JACK COBOURN
Newark Post

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, a group of four women, nicknamed "The Bookends," shared a dream of having better library service for Newark. Their efforts paid off when they built the first library on the present site of the Newark Free Library in the early 1960s.

Now, The Friends of The Newark Free Library are paying tribute to these women by naming the latest meeting room at the library after them.

Community Services Administrator for New Castle County Diana Brown said many of the people who were helped by "The Bookends" work made this idea happen.

"Only one of the four is still living," Brown said. "So the people who benefitted from their work and their relatives wanted to raise funds in their honor to do a project for the community and this is what they decided to do."

The room will be used as a study room and meeting place for non-profit groups, Newark Free Library Manager Pat Birchenall said. It will be housed in the library's former café, Brown said.

Brown said the café closed due to all the coffee shops around the library, among other factors.

"The competition for coffee services is pretty stiff," she said. "As McDonald's expanded their offerings beyond the typical burger into coffee products, they were the competition and then everything that goes down Main Street."

The Friends of The Newark Free Library raised $48,000 in funds to pay for the construction, Brown said. Brown said the construction will be done by the county and starts in the fall.

Birchenall said the Friends added honorary chairpeople to the board

Countertop braces are the only reminders of the former café in the Newark Free Library. The café will become a third meeting room and study space, Library Manager Pat Birchenall said.

and they showed the space off to others to help get funds in addition to a letter-writing campaign.

"The Friends named two honorary chairpeople of a fundraising campaign," she said. "One was Betty Hutchinson and one was Elaine Markell. They and the Friends' board members hosted several informational sessions to describe the project and give people a tour of this space."

Brown said the work should be completed by winter, with an opening shortly after. She also said this was a good project to show how the county cares about libraries and is committed to help them flourish.

"I think for the community it's important for them to see how much New Castle County cares and supports their libraries," she said. "We are very fortunate in that we have had the support at all levels for library service."

Newark songwriter succeeding nationally with music competition win

By ROSE MCNEILL
Newark Post

As a teenager nervously strumming his guitar and rushing through songs at the birthday party of a family friend – playing to a crowd he wasn't even sure spoke English – Rory Sullivan's first real gig was not the most auspicious start.

As the recent winner of one of three Hertz Movin' With Music Original Song Contests for his song "Ride The Rails," he's come a long way since then.

Sullivan, 26, a Newark native, beat out more than 2,000 competitors in the contest, which country music artist Sara Evans judged. He scored a multitude of prizes, including a mobile recording package worth more than $2,000, promotion through Hertz and a feature on Evans' Facebook page.

"I got this email saying, you know, 'Congratulations! You've won the grand prize for this contest!' and from there I just went to the website and saw my name and kind of freaked out a bit," Sullivan said.

This contest was the second one put on by Indaba Music that Sullivan has won, the first being the CD Baby Songwriting Contest last summer.

Sullivan chose to submit his contest-winning country track, "Ride The Rails," because he thought that it would appeal to Evans specifically. His instincts paid off when he took first place, and Evans commented about why she picked his song on the online contest page.

"Ride The Rails' by Rory Sullivan really struck me the first time I heard it," Evans wrote online. "It reminded me of a song that I recorded called 'Restless' a few years ago. I didn't write 'Restless' myself, but was immediately drawn to it and the feeling of traveling and just heading out into the unknown. I get that same feeling when I listen to 'Ride The Rails.'"

SPECIAL TO THE POST

Newark singer/songwriter Rory Sullivan recently won a national award.

Since he first picked up a violin at age 11, he knew he had a passion for music. Soon after, he started to play guitar and developed what he calls his "roots/pop" style. Musical influences like The Dave Matthews Band, James Taylor and The Beatles inspire him as "songwriting heroes."

Up next for Sullivan will be the process of putting together his second full-length album, which he hopes to release some time this coming year.

Despite the advantages Sullivan has received from his winnings, he said pursuing his music career will still be difficult due to changes in the music industry in the past 10 to 15 years.

"The hardest part is maintaining the career by yourself," Sullivan said. "You don't have to be playing with a major label anymore to get your music out there. Independent musicians, this is the time for them, so I'm kind of embracing that. But it takes a lot of work and it takes a lot of time and effort to uphold the business side of my music career."

Sullivan remains optimistic and said he is excited to perform back in his hometown area this summer.

He will play at Home Grown Cafe Friday at 10 p.m. and at the Cecil County Fair in Fair Hill, Md., Saturday at 7 p.m.

Gun pulled in road rage incident

A road rage incident on Christina Parkway ended with the suspect displaying a gun early Sunday morning.

The incident happened at approximately 12:30 a.m. near the intersection with Elkton Road, said Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The victim told officers she was in the car with her four-month-old child and was driving west on Christina Parkway when a tan Jeep Grand Cherokee sped past her and cut her off.

The woman honked her horn, enraging the driver of the Jeep, who then stopped in the left turn lane onto Elkton Road, exited his vehicle and yelled expletives at the woman, Spadola said.

Once the man got back in the Jeep, he flashed a handgun and then drove off. The woman called police and followed the Jeep as it crossed into Maryland and turned onto Fletchwood Road.

The driver of the Jeep is still at large.

Copper wire stolen from truck

A Newark resident awoke Saturday morning to find copper cable missing from the back of his truck, which was parked outside his North Fawn Drive home.

The theft occurred sometime in the early morning hours, said Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

The two cables are valued at $700 each.

Xbox stolen in Cherry Hill Manor

Someone broke into a home in the Cherry Hill Manor neighborhood Friday and stole electronics.

The burglary occurred sometime between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. in the unit block of Ethan Allen Court, according to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

Stolen was a custom-designed, yellow-and-black Xbox, a Wi-Fi adapter, an HDMI cable and $20 in cash.

The victim returned home to find a rear door unlocked but told officers the door had been locked in the morning.

Home Depot thief sought

State troopers are hoping the public can help identify a man caught on surveillance cameras stealing tools from the Home Depot store on Churchman's Road, east of Newark.

The man is wanted in several shoplifting instances, the most recent coming

July 16 at approximately 9:21 a.m. In that incident, the man stole a Dewalt Combo Kit, slipped out a back door and fled in a black Hyundai Sonata driven by someone else.

The suspect is described as a white man, between 20 and 30 years old, 6 feet tall and 175 pounds.

Anyone with information in this case is asked to call Delaware State Police at 302-660-3804.

Newark man cited in crash

A Newark man is facing several traffic charges following an accident that dumped gravel all over a New Castle roadway last week.

State police say John A.

Rodek, 22, was driving his 2006 Volkswagen Jetta south on West Basin Road just after noon July 18.

Rodek he attempted to make a left turn onto Creekwood Road from the right lane, authorities said.

As he did so, his vehicle was struck by a 2009 Peterbilt dump truck traveling in the left lane.

The dump truck overturned, dumping gravel on the road and causing a two-hour delay as the mess was cleaned up, said Cpl. John Day.

The driver of the truck, Michael Segers, 53, of Bear, was treated at Christiana Hospital for minor injuries.

Rodek was not injured, but was cited for improper lane change, inattentive driving and operating an unregistered vehicle.

Three arrested in armed robbery of UD students

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

Police have charged three teens in connection with an armed robbery of two University of Delaware international students last week.

Surveillance cameras captured the four suspects in the July 15 incident, and multiple police officers recognized three of them, according to Lt. Mark A.

Farrall, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department.

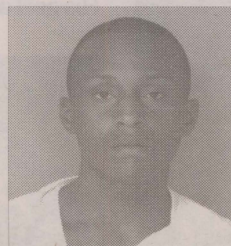

Malik Wilson, 18, of the 100 block of Madison Drive, is charged with first-degree robbery, second-degree conspiracy and a weapons offense. He was arrested at his home July 19.

A 16-year-old male resident of Thorn Lane turned himself in to police July 18 and is also facing robbery and conspiracy charges.

On Monday, a 13-year-old boy from Madison Drive, also turned himself into police.

The fourth suspect has been identified as a 12-year-old boy also from Madison Drive, but has not been located.

Wilson

The robbery happened at the West Knoll Apartments, 260 South Main St., just after 7 p.m.

Officers and a K-9 unit combed the area, but the four robbers escaped.

Police say the victims, both 18-year-old men enrolled in UD's English Language Institute, were sitting on a bench outside the apartment complex when the four bandits approached them. One of the robbers showed a handgun and told the victims to turn over their belongings.

The victims complied, and the four men escaped with cash, two cellphones and a passport. They were last seen running toward Madison Drive.

Wilson was committed to Howard R. Young Correctional Institute in lieu of $32,000 bail. The 16-year-old was committed to New Castle County Detention Center in lieu of $16,000 bail. The 13-year-old was committed to People's Place in Townsend in lieu of $24,000 secured bail.

Maryland motorcyclist injured in hit-and-run near Newark

By CARL HAMILTON

cahamilton@cecilwhig.com

A hit-and-run crash near Newark on Tuesday night left a motorcyclist from Rising Sun, Md., in critical condition at a local hospital, according to Delaware State Police.

Investigators identified the motorcyclist as 26-year-old Bryan T. Adams, who remained in Christiana Hospital on Wednesday morning, police reported.

Meanwhile, investigators are looking for the driver of the vehicle that sped away after Adams struck it at about 10:40 p.m. on Capitol Trail, east of Polly Drummond Hill Road, according to Cpl. John Day, a Delaware State Police spokesman.

"Troopers are asking the public for help identifying the fleeing driver," Day said, adding that investigators believe that that vehicle is a truck or a sports utility vehicle and that it likely would have rear damage.

Adams was riding a 2005 Harley-Davidson motorcycle in the left lane of westbound Capital Trail and, as he approached Polly Drummond Hill Road, the westbound vehicle in front of him slowed, police said.

His motorcycle smashed into the back of that vehicle, ejecting Adams from the Harley-Davidson, police added.

Adams, who was wearing a helmet, was transported by ambulance to Christiana Hospital, according to police officials, who reported that, by the time troopers and paramedics arrived, the vehicle he had struck already had left the accident scene.

The DSP Collision Reconstruction Unit is continuing its investigation.

Anyone with information that might help investigators is asked to contact the Troop 2 Collision Reconstruction Unit at 302-834-2620, ext. 278, or by using the Delaware State Police Mobile Crime Tip Application available to download at <http://www.delaware.gov/apps/>.

Tipsters also can provide information by calling the Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333, by internet at www.tipsubmit.com or by sending an anonymous tip by text to 274637 (CRIMES) using the keyword "DSP."

Motel sting leads to attempted rape charge

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

An undercover sting at a South College Avenue motel led police to charge a Delaware man with attempting to have sex with a child.

Kirk Simmons, 59, who lives in the Stirrup Farms neighborhood in northern New Castle County, communicated several times with a detective posing as the father of a 13-year-old girl, said Jason P. Miller, a spokesman for the state Department of Justice.

"During multiple communications with the detective, Simmons indicated that he wanted to have sex with the child," Miller said.

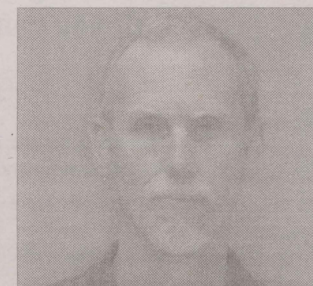

The detective arranged to meet with Simmons July 18 at the Newark motel, which Miller did not identify.

When Simmons arrived, he was arrested by state police.

Officers searching his home seized several computers and digital storage devices.

Simmons was charged with third-degree attempted rape and released after posting $60,000 secured bail.

Food and Brew Fest expected to draw 5,000 people

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@newarkpostonline.com

A record 19 restaurants will participate in Saturday's Food and Brew Festival on Main Street.

The annual event, which partners downtown eateries with craft breweries, celebrates its 10th anniversary this year and is expected to draw upward of 5,000 people.

"We're expecting a big crowd, especially based on the popularity of craft beer," said Ricky Nietubicz, administrator of the Downtown Newark Partnership.

The event runs from 2 to 8 p.m., and attendees can wander between the restaurants at their leisure. Each restaurant will offer a particular craft beer, as well as food specials.

No tickets are needed; attendees pay as they go at each restaurant. Beer samples will cost $1 each.

The first 2,500 attendees will receive a commemorative tasting mug.

Four new restaurants will be a part of the event for the first time, including Taverna, Café Ole, The Greene Turtle and 16 Mile Taphouse.

The 16 Mile Taphouse, which had a soft opening last weekend, is housed in the former Stone Balloon Winehouse. Dustin Gros, who opened the Winehouse four years ago, said he changed the theme as a way to expand his customer base.

"It's not just a special occasion place anymore — you can come in and just have a beer and a burger," Gros said, noting that the restaurant still offers the same wine list as before.

His goal all along was to open in time for the Food and Brew Festival, he said.

"It's our unveiling to people," Gros said.

Free parking for the festival is available in all municipal lots, at city hall and in the University of Delaware lots behind the Academy Building and behind Pearson Hall. A free shuttle bus will run in a loop between the restaurants from 4 to 8:30 p.m.

Information booths will be located on the Academy Lawn and in front of The Greene Turtle.

For kids, there will be a soda tasting booth on the Academy Lawn from 2 to 6 p.m.

White Clay Creek continues tradition of summer music with bands from tri-state area

By DARA MCBRIDE

dmcbride@cecilwhig.com

There's plenty of room to enjoy the music at White Clay Creek State Park.

Each Wednesday since the beginning of June, concertgoers have turned out to listen to music on the park's outdoor stage. Even on days where thousands come to the concert, Angel Burns, who helps organize the concerts, said it doesn't feel like there's a crowd in the field surrounding the stage.

"People are spread out all over the place and bring picnic dinners," Burns said.

She said she's seen people cart in tables and hold dinners with family and friends while listening to the music. Water ice is also sold at the events and children can play on a playground or with a bubble machine, Burns said.

The summer concerts have been happening in the park for 25 years. Volunteers review bands in the winter and also collect information from comment cards to see if any bands should return. Most groups that perform are local bands from the tri-state area.

On average, about 800 people attend a concert, but that number can go into the thousands depending on the weather, Burns said.

"It's a real community event. People come week after week and really get to know each other,"

Burns said.

This summer, sounds of folk, pop rock and R&B play at the park.

The Vel Crows and Nice Like Dat finish up the month of July. Coming up this August are bands The Swinging Swamis, Almost Fab, Beats Walkin and the Larry Tucker Band.

A special Monday concert will be held on Labor Day at 3 p.m. with band Love Seed Mama Jump to close out the summer music season.

Concerts are always held at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesdays at the Carpenter Recreation Area.

Concerts are supported by the Friends of White Clay Creek State Park, local sponsors and grants from the Delaware Division of the Arts. The concerts are free, but there is a $3 fee for Delaware vehicles and $6 fee for out of state vehicles to enter the park.

Local AAU hoops team wins national championship

By JON BUZBY
Newark Post

The Lady Sharks AAU team that plays out of the Greater Newark Boys and Girls Club flew to Orlando earlier this month with hopes of having some basketball success in the Happiest Place on Earth.

They flew home happier than they ever thought possible ... as national champions.

Emma Matthews' buzzer-beater with two seconds to play in the title game secured a 60-58 win over the Kentucky Shining Stars, capping the Lady Sharks' 8-0 run through the 11th-grade division of the national championship tournament, held July 9-13 at the ESPN Wide World of Sports complex.

"To go 8-0 in a national tournament takes extreme focus and determination," said head coach Amber Hickman-Taylor, who serves as athletic director at the club. "These girls had both and mixed it with excitement and enthusiasm. My Lady Sharks were focused on the goal of winning a national championship for their team and creating their own legacy. It was a true team victory with every girl stepping up and shining. We have battled through a lot of adversity this year and to finish with a national championship is absolutely amazing."

Matthews finished with a team-high 19 points in the championship game, and what made the feat even more spectacular was the fact that she arrived in Florida just one hour before tipoff after flying back from her brother's wedding.

"Some want it to happen, some wish it would happen, and others, like the Lady Sharks, make it happen," Matthews said.

Matthews missed two games while attending the wedding and so when she wasn't on the court, Jasalyn Denkins took over, averaging 15.5 points and 5 rebounds.

"Our heart, hustle and all-out determination won the championship for us," Denkins said. "I absolutely love playing with this team."

Playing as a team is the core philosophy of the Lady Sharks' program, which also won national titles in 2007 and 2008.

"Every player bought into their role and played it well," said Hickman-Taylor, a three-sport star at Christiana High who went on to play basketball at Millersville University. "The girls understood that three people needed to be in double-digit scoring each game and that other players' roles were to rebound or play defense and get steals, and that is just what they did."

Benaysia Mojica was one of those unselfish players, crashing the boards and leading the team with seven rebounds per game.

"Heart and hustle have to be action words on the court," Mojica explained of her relentlessness on the boards. "We acted upon our wanting this championship more than our opponents."

The players' willingness to sacrifice personal statistics for the sake of the team is what attracted Hickman-Taylor to this team.

"I knew from the first practice that they were something special," she said. "We had all of the pieces needed in order to be successful. I have a team of all varsity starters so when we sub, there is no drop-off, and teams had a hard time matching that."

Hickman-Taylor also was quick to credit the club's alumni, an impressive list of current and former college players that includes former Blue Hens Kayla Miller and Jaquetta May, both members of the Sharks' 2007-08 championship teams.

"All our alumni make an effort to come to practices when they are home and help the girls out on the court and give them lots of advice off the court as well," Hickman-Taylor explained. "The night before the championship game, Kayla and Jaquetta called the girls and gave them encouragement and told them how proud they were of them."

The Lady Sharks have more than 50 girls in the program, fielding teams in the sixth, eighth, 10th and 11th grade

SPECIAL TO THE POST

Front row, left to right: Allison Schwandt (Middletown), Jasalyn Denkins (William Penn), Traneigh Triplett (Wilmington Christian), Kyasia Stafford (Caravel), Ariana Fleming (Hodgson). age groups during its 12th season. The primary mission of the program is to provide the highest level of youth AAU basketball while assisting athletes in reaching their life goals, such as attending college, according to Hickman-Taylor. She and her coaching staff — Tracy Howell, Richard Hickman, Alan Wedgewood, Jordan Elgart, Julia Allshouse and Miller — help guide players through the recruiting process, which includes constantly reinforcing the importance of getting good grades.

"Because we are a program within the Boys and Girls Club we have resources available to us, like tutoring, to help the girls academically," Hickman-Taylor said.

The list of former Lady Sharks who went on to college is impressive, but what's even more impressive is the atmosphere surrounding the program that Hickman-Taylor and her staff have created. "We are family here," Hickman-Taylor said proudly. "All of our coaches genuinely care about the well-being of each and every one of the girls in our program."

Newark High grad selected for national leaders program

By JACK COBOURN
Newark Post

Having just graduated from Newark High School and preparing to attend University of California, Berkeley, in the fall, Diana Advani wanted to help a local non-profit.

Her English teacher emailed her an application for the 2013 Student Leaders program, set up by the Bank of America Charitable Foundation. Advani was selected, and is currently working at the Bank of America-supported Latin American Community Center in Wilmington.

Advani has helped create a curriculum for the adult education program, as well as developed a poetry slam for incoming middle and high school students. She said she likes working there because of all the assistance the center gives the community.

"I just really love how diverse the Latin American Community Center is," she said. "They tackle so many problems, and we really get to see how you can help a community in lots of different ways."

Advani is one of five Delawareans who were selected to the Student Leaders Program. Three other applicants to the program also work at the center.

Connie Montana, corporate social responsibility manager for the center, said the program gets many applicants each year.

"We select five Delaware teens, and it's very competitive," Montana said. "We get on average about 100 applications each year and then we have a local market selection committee that views the applications and selects the five."

In addition to the paid internship, Advani got to go to Washington, D.C., to discuss current issues as well as work with more than 220 teenagers at the week-long Bank of America Leadership Summit.

Advani said it was great to see students just like her who were ready to become leaders.

"It was really amazing to kind of see people my age who were already doing such great things in their community and were so optimistic about the future," she said. "There's kind of a stigma towards youth that we're apathetic and we don't care, so it's kind of really nice to see students who really, really care."

One of the highlights of the summit this year was that participants went to Capitol Hill and met with the office of Sen. Tom Carper and Rep. Robert Brady of Pennsylvania, Montana said. In addition to the meetings, Advani said there were speeches by people such as Barbara Bush, daughter of former President George W. Bush, as well as mock Congress and city council meetings.

Advani said her favorite part of the summit was getting to see the documentary "A Place at The Table" about the hunger problems facing the United States, and got to talk with the filmmakers. Advani said the summit helped open her eyes even more to the world around her.

"It really inspired me to be really aware of what's happening around me, especially with politics, and what kind of influence I could have and just keep on serving the community in some way," she said.

ARREST

cases are not thought to be related, Spadola said.

In that incident, a woman and her 12-year-old daughter were going through the McDonald's drive-thru when they noticed a man standing near a dumpster with his shorts pulled down to his ankles at approximately 8:50 p.m. Saturday.

The woman originally believed the man was urinating, but she later realized that he was holding his shirt up with his right hand and masturbating with his left hand. He then ran off toward McVey Elementary School.

Police and K-9 units searched the area around the school but could not find the man.

The suspect is described only as a white man with collar-length brown hair.
