Many Expected On Farmers' Day

Congressman Houston and Dr. H. A. McCall Announced As Speakers Next Week Here

Dean C. A. McCue announces that Dr. A. G. McCall of the University of Maryland and Congressman R. G. Houston have been secured as speakers at Farmers' Day to be held on the University farm here, Tuesday, August 10th.

Dr. McCall is a scientist of national and international reputation whose specialty is crop responses to soil treatments. Dean McCue feels that he has been extremely fortunate in securing Dr. McCall.

Congressman Houston is well known to all Delaware farmers and never fails to bring an interesting and inspiring message.

Farmers' Day will, as in time past, be in the form of a basket picnic on the spacious lawns of the University farm. The morning hours will be given over to inspection of the various lines of experimental work going on at the farm.

There will be something of interest for all.

Poultrymen Meet

Poultrymen in particular will be interested in the poultry plant where an interesting and important experiment is being conducted in the use of soybeans as food for growing chicks and laying birds. A special meeting of poultry raisers will be held at the poultry plant at 11 o'clock, standard time, to discuss the feasibility of forming a State-wide Poultry Association which can speak for the poultry interests of the State. Mr. H. S. Palmer, Extension Poultryman, will be in charge of the meeting.

Producers of pork will also find contrasting lots of hogs fed on soybean rations. In spite of unfavorable weather conditions, the plots of corn and soybeans are looking well and should convey a profitable message to the general farmer.

Members of the Experiment Station Staff will be on hand to explain all experimental work.

Afternoon Program

After luncheon the speaking will take place from the porch of the Mansion House beginning promptly at 2 p. m., standard time. The 10th of August should not only be a pleasant outing for farmers and their families; but should also give a good opportunity for them to see what their Experiment Station is doing to aid them in their many perplexing problems.

Last year a policy was entered into of holding Farmers' Day as a biennial event. August 10th is the first biennial meeting on the new plan.

SAILING POSTPONED

Miss Hubert Cancels Return to France on Receipt of Cable

The arrival of a cablegram Friday caused the postponement of Miss Kathryn Hubert's return trip to France in the interests of the Delaware Rayon Company, it was learned yesterday.

The cable was sent by J. P. Wright, president of the firm, who is now in France. Miss Hubert's baggage was at the pier in New York and she was ready to leave for the boat when the news came. Further details have not been received here to date, but it is believed possible that the tension caused by anti-American feeling in France was partly responsible for the postponement until the situation is eased.

CHANGE IN SECRETARIES

Mrs. J. C. Sparks has resigned her position as secretary in the English and History Departments of the University of Delaware and, after her vacation, Mr. and Mrs. Sparks will live in Media, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Joseph Wilson, of Elkton, has been appointed to fill Mrs. Sparks' position.

NEW AMBULANCE HERE

A feature of the big parade of firemen scheduled for tomorrow evening will be the new ambulance purchased by the town of Newark for the community's residents. The new machine will be in the line of march and will later be housed with brief ceremonies.

Carnival Prospers In Spite Of Rainstorms

$1200 Taken In Saturday Night, $700 Monday; Opening Night Spoiled By Rain

FACTS ABOUT THE FIREMEN'S PARADE

Time—7:30 standard time, Thursday Evening.
Route—Form East Main street; proceed on Main to Elkton avenue; to Delaware avenue, to Academy street; disband.
March—John K. Johnston.
Judges—Group of visitors from Wilmington and Chester, Pa.
Probable a? t
Probable Entries—10 companies and 7 bands.
Four valuable prizes will be awarded.

Undaunted by rain which has drifted down with monotonous regularity since Friday, Newark's firemen have pushed their annual Carnival ahead, and to date, have done remarkably well.

Friday last, opening night, was ruined by rain, and the crowd was slow in arriving Saturday, due to threatening skies. However, the big night resulted in a gross income of nearly $1200, according to Chairman J. R. Fulton. Monday found the grounds wet and bedraggled, but toward nine o'clock, the crowd poured in, and at closing time, about $700 was cleared. Last night, the process was repeated. A mixture of torrid humidity and the occasional showers has failed to discourage the promoters of the affair.

Parade Tomorrow

The biggest single event of the week is due tomorrow evening, when the annual Firemen's parade is scheduled for 7 o'clock daylight saving time.

Twenty-five fire companies and several bands have been invited to attend the affair, and prospects point to the largest parade of its kind ever held in Newark. Valuable prizes have been secured for award to winners in various classes. It is hoped that at least a dozen companies and five or six bands will be on hand.

Following the parade, the visiting firemen will be guests of the Aetna men at the Carnival grounds. The freedom of the new firehouse will be given them and everything done to make their visit here a pleasant one.

Boys And Girls Here For Annual Instruction

Short Course At College Enrolls Over 100 Youngsters; Full Program Mapped Out For Week

More than 100 boys and girls are enrolled in the annual short course for members of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Delaware, now in progress. Quarters are provided for the youthful students in Harter Hall and meals are served in the University Commons in Old College.

An interesting program has been arranged by A. D. Cobb, State leader of county agents. A number of members of the extension department of the University of Delaware will also deliver addresses to those attending during the week.

Besides educational activities, there will be provided recreation for the young folk. Chief of these will be a trip to the Longwood estate of Pierre S. du Pont on Thursday.

"Friendly Town" Plans Outings For City Kids For Two Weeks; Start Aug. 17

Meeting Last Night Urges Invitations Sent In Promptly By Various Groups

Prospects for the entertainment here of more than twenty youngsters from the East Side of New York City for two weeks, beginning August 17, were expressed last night following a meeting of the "Friendly Town" committee.

Rev. H. E. Hallman and Messrs. G. W. Rhodes, Warren A. Singles and George W. Griffin attended the meeting and went over details for the fresh air outing arranged through the New York Herald-Tribune. Reports from two of the churches in town were received, showing a hearty response to the call issued by the committee.

Following the meeting, Rev. Hallman stated that all requests for children submitted through the various churches should be in by tomorrow evening, so that definite word may be sent to New York headquarters.

Will Be Gala Outing

"No attempt has been made to cloud the proposition," said the chairman. "These kids are little rough-necks from the crowded streets of the biggest city in the world. They are of many creeds and religions. All we ask is that the people of Newark take a few of them in for two weeks and make the outing the greatest event in their lives. The response accorded our call has been gratifying. The 'Friendly Town' movement is assured of success."

HAD DELIGHTFUL TRIP

Col. and Mrs. Smith Return from Europe

Colonel and Mrs. S. J. Smith returned last Tuesday from a two months' trip abroad. The trip both ways was made on the tourist ship, Minnekahda, and a wonderful time is reported. Colonel and Mrs. Smith spent the time in France, where they visited the battlefields, and in England, where they revisited their birth-places and spent some time with relatives.

ACCEPTS NEW POSITION

Walter C. Anderson, for ten years mechanical engineer for the Continental Fibre Company of this town, will leave on Sunday next to accept a new position in New Jersey. Mrs. Anderson and family will remain in Newark, pending the sale of their home on Orchard Road.

is working hard to bring as many boys and girls here as possible. It is the breathe of life to them, and will, in the opinion of many, result in real pleasure to those who take care of them.

The children are due to arrive sometime on the afternoon of the 17th by train, will be met by the committee, and directed to their "homes." The committee will be in constant touch with headquarters and any dissatisfaction registered by householders during the outing will be promptly acted upon.

Many towns and villages, some nearby, have for some years been making a custom of entertaining poor children from the big cities free. In all such cases, it is said, the plan has worked out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

OIL STARTS BLAZE

Steedle Home Damaged by Fire Friday

On Friday evening of last week, the home of Elroy Steedle, on Park Place, was threatened by fire. Because of the efforts of A. C. Huston and J. Earle Dougherty, with a garden hose, the fire was under control before the fire engine arrived. The kitchen of the Steedle house, where the fire originated, was destroyed. The maid, who lighted the oil-stove, said that the oil fed too fast and leaked to the bottom of the stove, where it ignited from the increasing flame, soon catching to the wood-work.

Mr. Steedle, who was playing golf at the time, knew nothing of the fire until he dropped into a down-town store on his way home.

The loss is covered by insurance and rebuilding is already under way.

UNION SERVICES END

Hearty Response from Congregations Feature Six Weeks Series

With the Rev. H. Everett Hallman preaching the final sermon Sunday evening, the series of summer union services held in the Presbyterian Church came to an end. Collaborating with the Rev. Hallman in the series were Rev. R. B. Mathews, of St. Thomas, and the Rev. Frank Herson, of Newark M. E.

The large church was crowded on each occasion and the hearty response to the new venture was taken as a mark of appreciation and augurs well for the continuance of the custom next year. Each of the above ministers occupied the pulpit twice during the series. Special music by combined choirs also featured the services.

PLAN TOUR ABROAD

Mr. and Mrs. Durant to Re-visit Wartime Scenes

Mrs. Armand Durant will sail on the Minnekahda from New York City on August 21, to visit Mr. and Mrs. John Theodore Quinn, in Biarritz, France. Mr. Durant will sail on the Homerie, September 3, and join the party abroad for a month's motor trip through parts of France, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, and Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Durant and Mr. and Mrs. Quinn were stationed together at Grenoble during the World War. Mr. and Mrs. Durant expect to return about the middle of October.

AIRPLANE VISITORS

E. L. Miller and Family Drop in on Friends Here

E. L. Miller, wife and daughter, of West Chester, settled themselves in their plane, motors whirled and in a few minutes they were landing near the home of Robert Potts, east of Newark. They arrived yesterday afternoon.

During their visit here, Mr. Miller has planned daily passenger flights for any who want the thrill. The plane is stationed at Eastburn Heights along the Lincoln Highway.

CONTRACT LET FOR DISPOSAL PLANT ADDITION

$30,000 To Be Spent In Tripling Present Size, Says Mayor; Fate Of New Extensions Not Settled Definitely, He Says, In Discussing Problem

OPPOSES BOND ISSUES

Three Tracts Hold Up Sewer, Is Claim

WITH the failure of the recent canvass for signers to a sewer extension program through the southern portion of outlying Newark and protection thereby of the water supply, Councilmen and Mayor have struck obstacles in three owners of large tracts within the sector.

The Newark Development Company, the Improved Order of Red Men, and Charles P. Wollaston have, if reports are correct, refused to sign the petition. The three owners control between them several thousand feet of sewer frontage, and without their participation in the plan, the situation will remain deadlocked.

It was learned yesterday by The Post that a contract had been let for the building of an addition to the town's sewerage disposal plant in East Newark, which will triple the present capacity, and cost approximately $30,000.

The news was confirmed by Mayor Frazer when an inquiry was made to him. The contract was given to the Consolidated Engineering Co., of Baltimore, who drew up the survey and plans for the new sewer extensions in the Depot Road section recently. As far as can be learned, there were no other bidders and no advertisement for bids made public.

The Mayor smiled jovially and waved a deprecating hand when asked what arrangements would be made to meet the cost of the operation.

Sewer Lines Held Up

In reviewing the entire sewerage problem, particularly the extension plans to protect the town's water supply, the Mayor stated that although only half the required footage had been signed up, over 90 per cent of the individual owners of property had come into the fold. There is still, in the opinion of Mr. Frazer, hope of getting the original petitions signed. He intimated that the aid of the State Board of Health may be requisitioned to aid in solving the problem.

No Bond Issues

When he was asked the feasibility of going before the Legislature at its next session with two bills; one, to extend the corporate limits of the town, and second, to ask authorization to issue bonds for the sewer extensions, the Mayor expressed his direct opposition to a bond issue, saying that the town would be dragging along in debt for several years.

In the matter of extending the limits, of which no little interest is being manifest each year by residents, Mr. Frazer was equally reticent.

"The outlying residents themselves have something to say about that," declared the Mayor.

He then went on to explain that in most cases of similar nature, the extension of boundaries is accomplished only when the outlying residents have signified their consent by referendum or other means.

Poultry News Briefly Told

Average No. eggs per bird . . . 13.5

CARE OF MATURING PULLETS

The vast majority of poultry troubles that worry the farmers so much during the fall and winter are due to faulty rearing. Many pullets, especially those that have been bred for high egg production, are spoiled by being forced into production too young. If allowed to lay before their bodies are fully matured they will always lay small eggs, and unless very carefully handled will begin molting after a month or so which will stop production until the following spring.

Increase the Grain

Feed pullets on growing mash (not laying mash) until you have them ready to begin laying. Until they are about three months old, feed a little more mash than grain. Then when they show by their comb development that they are maturing sexually, increase the grain gradually until they are getting all they will eat. A very good plan is to keep the grain before them in hoppers just as the mash is kept. Continue this heavy grain feeding until the birds are 5½ or 6 months old.

If they do not eat the grain readily you can get the same effect by adding to each 100 pounds of growing mash, about 20 pounds of corn meal.

Green Food Is Necessary

Pullets must have green food to make the proper growth. Free range on a pasture of clover, alfalfa, or rape is best, but if you have not prepared such a range, you should cut a supply of tender greens each day for them. Now is the time to plant cabbage for use as green food this winter.

Crabbers At War On Lower Bay; Faulty Boundary Declared The Cause

Bullets began flying in the Maryland-Virginia boundary line dispute at Smith Island last week.

The shots, of which it is estimated there were fifty in all, were fired from the Virginia State patrol boat Marguerite, the Maryland crabbers reported. None of the shots struck any of the crabbers or their boats.

The Marguerite, which is in charge of Capt. Thomas Anderton, left the crabbing grounds soon after the affair for Tangier Island. The Virginia captain could not be reached and it was impossible to obtain his version of the affair.

The Maryland crabbers assert the shooting was without provocation. They declare that at no time during the afternoon were they crabbing in Virginia waters. According to the crabbers, no warning was given before the shooting commenced.

"Afraid to Approach"

"Did Captain Anderton hail you to warn you back before he commenced firing?" one of the crabbers was asked.

"No," he replied. "He was afraid to come near enough." Nevertheless, the crabbers assert they have been going out in their boats unarmored and declared no attempts were made to return the fire of the Virginia boat.

Meanwhile, rumors of preparations for armed resistance and even attack on the part of the Smith Islanders are being circulated about Crisfield and vicinity. Many assert the rumors are being broadcast by the Virginia authorities, who, they say, are seeking opportunity to defend their drastic policy.

There is a rumor now current to the effect that the Smith Islanders are preparing to import three machine guns and a number of rapid-fire rifles to be set up on the island for use against the Virginia boats. Many versions of the recent hostilities are extant. All of these differ in every respect, some placing the blame on the Maryland men, others on the Virginia authorities and still others on a boundary commission which fixed the present dividing line a number of years ago.

Blame Commission

Members of the last-named group assert that failure of Maryland members of the commission to obtain Maryland's rightful territory at that time is responsible for the present dispute. The line, they say, should be at least ten miles south of its present location. When the line was first established in Revolutionary days, it was said, a point on the Eastern Shore was selected as the eastern terminus of the imaginary boundary line across the Bay.

With the passing of years, this point came to be known by another name and local historians are at variance as to which of the many points along the Eastern Shore originally bore the name which appeared in the boundary agreement. It is contended, however, that the present point is not the correct one and that the line should have its terminus on the Eastern Shore at least ten miles to the southward.

History of Feud

There are many other ramifications to the problem. The present boundary line, after crossing due east for almost the entire distance over the Bay, bends suddenly northward as it approaches Smith Island and then crosses the island in such a fashion as to include in Virginia waters, the very best part of the island crabbing grounds.

After accomplishing this "steal," as

Thomas Stone, Signer

He rode ten miles to school every day in order to acquire a classical education, and he borrowed money so that he could study law at Annapolis.

Such was the foundation of the life of Thomas Stone, one of the Maryland signers of the Declaration of Independence. His name, with those of Samuel Chase, William Paca and Charles Carroll of Carrollton, are inscribed on the Maryland Memorial column, one of the thirteen pylons unveiled at the dedication of the Sesquicentennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, on Flag Day.

Stone began the practice of law in Frederick, Maryland, and moved two years later to Charles County, where he purchased a farm near Port Tobacco.

He was one of the first to support the cause of his country in its struggles for self-expression, and was elected to the Continental Congress in 1774. The Maryland delegates, notwithstanding their instructions in favor of reconciliation, voted for the resolution declaring the authority of the crown had ceased. Late in June these instructions were recalled leaving them free to vote for the Declaration of Independence.

Of the Committee on Confederation, appointed in 1776, he was the only member from his province. He was re-elected to Congress in February and labored in this committee till the Articles of Confederation were finally agreed to by vote.

Declining a re-election to Congress, Stone entered the Maryland Senate, where his services were of more use to the Maryland cause. Here he opposed a proposition to establish paper currency. He abandoned his legal practice after the death of his wife, and died in 1787.

Four Lives Destroyed When Express Hits Car

Grade Crossing South Of Blackbird
Scene Of Tragedy Sunday Afternoon; All Young People

Four persons were instantly killed at noon Sunday when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an express train of the Pennsylvania Railroad at King's Crossing, about one mile below Blackbird and about one mile west of the du Pont Boulevard.

The dead are:
Anna Morris, 19 years old.
Marjorie Smith, 19 years old.
Gunter Smith, her brother, 29 years old.

James R. Hills, 28 years old, all of Centreville.
The bodies were carried for a distance of 400 yards, and were so badly mangled that those of the two men were identified only by articles found in their pockets. Practically every bone in the bodies of all the victims were broken. Only parts of the automobile in which they were riding were found and these were scattered along the tracks for a distance of 350 yards.

The party of young people had set out to visit Anna Morris' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shriver of Clayton, who had been notified of their coming and who had made arrangements to entertain them during the afternoon.

In Path of Express

When they reached King's Crossing, approaching it from the east, Smith, who was driving, stopped the machine while a northbound freight train passed. After the freight had gotten by Smith it is believed by the police, thought the tracks were clear and started to cross. In attempting to cross, however, the car ran directly into the path of the 11.15 o'clock express train from Wilmington, which was traveling at about 60 miles an hour.

Thoughts for the Farmer

"Every big industry may tumble into the sea and we shall still live if the soil produces bread and meat. How in the world, knowing this can the farmer, who knows the glorious trade of keeping the world alive feel envy with any living soul?"
—Grace S. Richmond.

"Even the farmer who is out under the great free dome of heaven and working in wonder every day of his life, grows like a clod if he buries his soul alive in the soil. But farming has been tried many thousands of years, and the other kind of farmer is known by everybody,—the farmer who is master over the soil; who, instead of becoming an expression of the soil himself, makes the soil express him."—Gerald Stanley Lee.

Books

There are two classes of books: the book of the artist and the book of the speculator. The artist writes with a sincerity that lends to his work an artistic depth; he produces a book in which "moral truth and human passion are touched with a certain largeness, sanity, and attraction of form." The book of the speculator is not distinguished by artistic presentation and a deep and logical emotional appeal; it is written to sell.

Despite the fact that more novels, short stories, and biographical works are being published in the United States now than in any other period in our national history, contemporary American writing produces almost not a single volume which would inspire one to liken it to "a wrecked argosy on drenched sands, where a great soul's wealth lies all in heaps." One cannot trust books to think for one today as did Charles Lamb in his time.

Modern writers have adopted the "business point of view"; the writing of a book is a carefully considered investment of time; three or four months each year is invested in the composition of a book; it must be a book that will sell; consequently, the authors very carefully turn their backs on life, missing entirely its intensities and its significances, and by consulting what is known as "the popular demand" strive to "turn out stuff that will sell." They employ a card-index and dictate to a stenographer.

The lack of a unifying spiritual harmony of substance, a living sympathy of form, and an aesthetic profundity of emotion in present-day literature is due to "the popular demand."

The public at large appears to pass judgment on a book not according to the delight it affords the intellect, but by the shock it gives. A book is something to be thrilled over; a substitute for the "real thing." It is not considered as a means to "hold high converse with the mighty dead." And although persons will still believe anything that they see in print, the respect and reverence formerly paid to books are gone.

A book has become a device to "kill time with," a means to escape the sordid realities of life by depicting the more sordid unrealities of fancy.

At present the true artistic spirit of America is but dimly conscious of itself. It is struggling, weakly and blindly, against the great undertow of standardization. The result is doubtful.

But then there are always the books of the artists of the Past to which one may turn, in which one may read and forget that there is such a thing as the Past; and, although these books may not always bring us actually to enjoy life, they can always teach us to endure it.

Poultrymen Meet

A series of meetings of importance to the poultrymen of New Castle county will be held next week under the direction of H. S. Palmer, Extension Poultryman, and R. O. Bausman, County Agricultural Agent, both of the University of Delaware. The following is the schedule and dates of the meetings:

Farm of Harvey Johnson, Middletown, Wednesday, August 11th.

Farm of Harry C. Dance, State Road, Thursday, August 12th.

Farm of P. T. Pierson and Son, of Hockessin, Friday, August 13th.

The meetings will begin at 2 p. m., standard time. Mr. Palmer expects to discuss topics which are important to poultrymen during this season of the year. Among the subjects that he will discuss are: Culling, Brooding and Rearing of Chicks, Poultry House Instructions, Laying Out of Poultry Yards, The Growing of Green Food. Mr. Bausman will discuss problems of Poultry Management.

Successful Franciers

Mr. Johnson's farm affords an example of success in the brooding and rearing of chicks. Mr. Johnson has installed in his laying house the most modern idea in the construction of a dropping board.

Mr. Harry C. Dance has one of the best flocks of Leghorn chicks in the northern part of the county. Mr. Palmer will demonstrate the essential points in culling the flocks.

The farm of P. T. Pierson and Son affords an opportunity for the farmers of the community to observe at first hand the brooder house that is modern in every respect. Mr. Pierson is remodeling his laying house, arranging for the double yarding system and a system of providing green food. The poultry enterprise has been the weak link in Mr. Pierson's system of farming. Those who attend the meeting will have the privilege of seeing Mr. Pierson's plans for developing one of the strongest poultry enterprises in the community.

These will be the only three meetings that will be held in New Castle county this fall. The farmers and their wives are invited to attend the meeting which meets with their convenience.

Calvin Starts a New Fashion

(National Press)
All the Isaak Waltons of the country are coming into their own by reason of the interest which the President has displayed in fishing. A canvass made the other day at the sporting goods stores in Washington, revealed the fact that boys, girls, young men and young women, as well as a number of the old folks, aroused by the success which the President has had, were flocking to the stores for the purpose of purchasing tackle. The Potomac which is a river composed of water with very little fish, that is at least within the District limits, has always been whipped by a certain number of enthusiasts and stalwarts, who secure their pleasure in playing at fishing, wholly apart from their success in running a catch.

District policemen, however, report that there has been a very substantial increase now in the number of people, who from bridges, ledges, canoes, dugouts and skiffs, have taken up the pursuit of fishing. New York and Chicago sporting goods houses report also a very substantial increase in their sales of fishing tackle. It is rather interesting, and evidence how closely after all, the people of the country are interesting themselves in the activities of the President.

ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE

The Dreamer

A pedagogue, a lonely sage.
Who all his long unmarried life
Had lived in lives of other men—
In books—sat by his glowing hearth
One winter night and seemed to dream.

He dreamed his little three-room flat
Was changed into a cottage white
Where rose vines rambled o'er the walls
And breathed a perfume day and night.
He dreamed near him a cradle was
Which held a sleeping child; his son,
A sweet soft babe with lips apart
As if an angel'd kissed and gone.
He dreamed he wrote in living verse,
Sublime with truth, with beauty rich,
All that that in the long, long years
Had gathered in his heart and which
Till now he ne'er could put in words.
'Twas late at night he lived this dream;
The mother of his babe had gone
To rest in room next door. His theme
Deserted, he gazed at the door,
Behind which slept his wife-sweetheart,
And smiled—a tender smile, a smile
That one must learn from Love; no art
Can teach man such a smile as that—
And then he looked down fondly on
The slumbering child.

Then softly chimed the hour of one.
The dreamer came awake to find
Himself but staring open-eyed
At vacant space. He scratched his head,
He blinked his eyes, and then he sighed
With weariness, "I must correct
Those papers for tomorrow's class."

If gold is sent, fasten it to a bit of thin paste-board, of the size of the letter when folded; for otherwise it may slip out. Tell nobody your letter contains money. Do not register it. SUN DRAWS NO WATER

"Jacob's Ladder" is but One of the Names for the Ray Phenomenon You See

No feature of a sunset or sunrise sky is more beautiful than the fan-like rays sometimes seen crossing the sky above the horizon where the sun has set or has not yet risen.

Reddish beams alternate with blue or gray; the latter being the shadows cast by distant clouds, or sometimes mountains, lying in the direction of the sun.

These beams, which are known as "crepuscular rays," appear to converge toward the position of the sun below the horizon, writes C. T. Talman of Washington. They are really parallel, the apparent convergence being the effect of perspective. This phenomenon gave rise to the familiar Homeric expression, "rosy-fingered dawn."

On rare occasions crepuscular rays can be seen extending entirely across the sky and converging toward a point directly opposite the sun. Similar beams, devoid of color, are often seen radiating from the sun when above the horizon and partly obscured by clouds. The bright beams are made visible by the presence of dust or haze in the atmosphere, when the intervening dark places are cloud shadows.

When the beams extend downward, the appearance is popularly described as "the sun drawing water," though no such process actually takes place.

Sailors sometimes call the beams "the backstays of the sun," while in the folklore of Polynesia they figure as "the ropes of Maui," in allusion to the story of how the great hero of South Sea Isle mythology once captured the sun with snares of coconut fiber. In parts of rural England, the beams are known as "Jacob's ladder." Among snow-capped mountains sunrise and sunset phenomena assume a particularly beautiful form, which is known as the "Alpenglow," because most descriptions of it relate to the Alps, and especially to its appearance on the huge snowy mass of Mont Blanc.

Industrial Review

HOOP SNAKE A FAKE!

Here goes another "tradition." The Hoop Snake is a Nature Fake. There is no such animal, according to the editor of Nature Magazine of Washington.

"We get many inquiries as to Nature's oddities," says Mr. Ridsdale. "The latest is the Hoop Snake. As the man, looking for the first time at the giraffe in a circus, said, 'there ain't no such animal.' It is odd how some things get into the public mind and are passed along from one generation to another.

"The origin of the hoop snake story is unknown. In the imagination of the story-teller, the snake picks out a good steep hill, puts his tail in his mouth and gives a perfect imitation of a wild automobile tire on a joy ride.

"Another query has come in about Nightshade berries. Nightshade pie and Nightshade jam are two of the best tasting dishes you can eat. If you want a recipe for Nightshade pie or Nightshade jam just write to Nature Magazine for them. This black Nightshade is a member of the tomato family. Your great grandmothers supposed the tomato or "love apple" to be deadly poison, but that idea has been exploded long, long ago. The Nightshade berries are rich in sweetness and in the west they call them Dakota Blueberries."

Starts New Fashion

Although Grover Cleveland, in the hey day of his time, fished industriously, effectively if not pugnaciously with Joseph Jefferson, the famous actor, in the Buzzard Bay territory of Massachusetts, there is no record that there was any revival of fishing by reason of his activities. Grover Cleveland, of course, had the habit of eating at first hand, nearly all the fish that he caught, and at that time the news movie man had not been invented. As a result, however, of the general publicity which has attended the President's activities, his problem now frankly is to fish without a gallery, because almost on the instant he appears the boats of well wishers and earnest watchers gather around him.

THE NEWSY WEEKLY PAPER

TALK about your literature
And papers up-to-date,
About the legislature
And the doin's, through the state;
To me they ain't comparin'
Though I look the world around,
To the newsy weekly paper
From the old home town.

Ma comes into the settin' room
And lets the dishes go,
And listens while I read about
The folks we used to know:
For births and deaths and land deals
And wedding's, too, abound;
All are mighty interestin'
From the old home town.

I know it ain't so classical
As these big dailies are
That tell about the world court
And latest movie stars;
But jist for my enjoyment
There's nothin' I have found
Like the little newsy paper
From the old home town.

—Mrs. Effie Crawford.

PLAYS DAY. LIGHT SAVING

Irving L. Dempsey, militant foe of daylight saving time, spoke at the opening meeting of the Harmony Grange fall and winter season Monday night. The excessive heat kept a large number of members away.

Mr. Dempsey attacked the alleged flagrant violation of the law of the State with regard to setting up the clocks, and asked for support of Harmony members in continuing his fight. The support was given, and he was warmly applauded for his stand.

A short program, which followed the reading of resolutions on the death of Mrs. Sara Mitchell, was in charge of Helen Pennington. Those who took part were Annie Dennison, Mildred Porter, Ruth Ball and Paul Mitchell. Refreshments were served by the hospitality committee. The grange will convene regularly for the balance of the year following a month's suspension.

Plan Lawn Fete

Great interest is manifested in the August peach festival which will take the form of a large lawn fete on Monday evening, August 11th, at the Grange Hall. Cards announcing the event have been distributed and a host of good things to eat are promised. The plans are being made for a record crowd.
