James P. Hartnett Named Mechanical Engineering Chief

University Of Minnesota
Prof Succeeds Lyle Clark
At University Of Delaware

Dr. James P. Hartnett, professor at the University of Minnesota since 1954, has been appointed chairman of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Delaware effective next September. Dean of Engineering Edward W. Comings announced today.

Hartnett succeeds Dr. Lyle Clark, who resigned at the beginning of the current school year to accept a position at the University of Texas.

Dr. Milan H. Cobble is acting department head.

Dr. Hartnett, who also will be accepting a full professorship, is on leave from Minnesota, traveling abroad under Guggenheim and Fulbright fellowships. He is one of six editors of the "International Journal of Heat and Mass Transfer," and has written or collaborated in the publication of some 48 books and papers in this field.

The new department head is completing a five-month trip under the Guggenheim grant to Japan, where he has visited the nation's leading universities and talked with educators in the fields of heat transfer and fluid mechanics.

He has accepted an invitation to attend a symposium, sponsored by the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, in Minsk, Russia, later this month. After 14 days in the Soviet Union he will take up a Fulbright award for four months' study at the University of Alexandria, Egypt.

A native of Lynn, Mass., Dr. Hartnett was employed by General Electric's aircraft gas turbine division there until 1949, when he decided to complete his doctoral work and enter the teaching field.

He received his PhD in mechanical engineering from the University of California in 1954.

Edward Higbee, Author Of 'The Squeeze'
Warns of Rural Landscape Disappearance
Newark's Dr. Edward Higbee, author and professor of geography and sociology at the University of Delaware, was chairman of a symposium on forest and recreational planning at the 127th annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in New York last week.

Dr. Higbee recently returned from a tour of study in Japan.

"The more man's synthetic environment departs from the natural one in which he evolved over eons of time and for which he is organically designed," Dr. Higbee said in addressing the New York meeting, "the more carefully our species will have to watch its step for self-constructed snares."

Research on the problems of human environment has not been matched by constructive action, Higbee warned.

Dr. Higbee repeated some opinions expressed in his recent book, "The Squeeze." He said that our failure to heed the biologist and landscape architect leads us to be "squeezed" into communities without adequate space for recreation, walking, and simple contemplation.

"Today's suburban sprawl is not only smothering central cities but the suburbs themselves are beginning to freeze out the farms between them and to coalesce," Dr. Higbee continued.

"The rural landscape is disappearing. The main reason of contact between major cities. The satellite bedroom towns surrounding one city begin to fuse with the suburban outskirts of others.

"As this uncontrolled squeeze accelerates, the possibility of rational landscape design is eliminated for all time," Dr. Higbee warned.

The chemistry department also has received four other grants, including $37,802 to Asst. Prof. Conrad N. Trumbore from the Atomic Energy Commission. Dr. Trumbore is investigating the effect of nuclear radiation on a variety of organic substances, which may lead to materials of greater resistance to atomic radiation and provide information on how certain chemicals in the body are affected by radiation.

To Asst. Prof. Robert H. Wood the National Science Foundation has awarded $18,700 for a three-year study of heat changes produced when materials are dissolved or diluted, to provide information on forces which hold chemical substances together.

Du Pont Company Offers $1,400,000 For Education Aid

Grants Provided For 159
Universities, Colleges
In Annual Aid Program

Grants totaling more than $1,400,000 have been awarded to 159 universities and colleges in the Du Pont Company's annual program of aid to education, the company announced today.

The University of Delaware received two fundamental research grants of $5,000 each for chemistry and for chemical engineering.

The program is for fundamental research by universities to strengthen teaching of science and related subjects, and for facilities for education or research in science and engineering.

The largest part of the program is to help strengthen the education of scientists and engineers. Grants totaling $854,000 were awarded for the 1961-62 academic year to more than 100 colleges and universities to support the teaching of science and mathematics as well as other liberal arts subjects; for education and research in biochemistry in medical schools; and for postgraduate teaching assistant awards and scholarships for prospective high school teachers of science and mathematics.

Grants for fundamental research in 1961-62 total $475,000 for 37 universities. These are for unrestricted research in the physical sciences, including chemistry, chemical engineering, physics, mechanical engineering, and metallurgy, and range from $5,000 to $20,000.

An additional $30,400 was awarded for 28 research grants to enable individual staff members of 24 universities to undertake research of their own choosing during the summer.

A $250,000 fund was authorized for capital grants for science and engineering facilities. Ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 each, these are grants to help with the cost of new buildings, equipment, or renovation of existing facilities.

The banquet to be held Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Newark Country Club, is open to non-members as well as members of the Newark Chamber of Commerce, and registrations are being accepted by Secretary Bob Rowlands.

Dr. Neal Bowman, educator, lecturer, and a staff member of the National Association of Manufacturers will be the guest speaker.

Dr. Ray E. Keesey, associate professor of dramatic arts and speech at the University of Delaware, has been named assistant dean of arts and science.

Dr. Keesey, who has been special assistant to Dean G. Bruce Dearing for the past year, will continue to teach courses in speech, but will devote an increasing amount of his time to administrative duties in the university's largest school.

A graduate of Ohio University, Dr. Keesey received his master's degree there and completed work on his PhD at Ohio State University in 1950. While at Ohio State he served as an assistant in the department of speech, but his work on his doctorate was interrupted by three years of service as assistant communications officer on the staff of the aircraft commander, Seventh Fleet.

Dr. Keesey has taught at the University of New Hampshire, Whitman College and Dartmouth. He joined the faculty of the University of Delaware in 1951.

Dr. Keesey has been responsible for establishing an intramural debating program among residence halls and fraternities on the local campus, and under his direction the university debating team participates in intercollegiate competition.

Trustees Increase Admission Deposits,
Rename College Inn "Raub Hall" At U. D.
In an effort to help the University of Delaware eliminate "ghost" admissions, the board of trustees authorized increases in non-refundable deposits required of both resident and out-of-state students seeking admission to the freshman class. For Delaware residents, the deposit will be increased from $25 to $50-out-of-state students will pay $100.

Crittenden Heads Soybean Development With New Type Bethel Of High Quality

A new high-quality, high-protein soybean resistant to a troublesome species of root-knot nematode, has been developed by scientists in the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station.

Bethel, the new variety, was developed by Dr. H. W. Crittenden of the university's department of plant pathology.

Dr. Crittenden made thousands of individual plant selections, searching for strains resistant to the root-knot nematode, a tiny organism found in large numbers in certain soils of Delaware, which is particularly damaging to potatoes, tomatoes, lima beans, cantaloupes and cucumbers.

Bethel not only meets the criterion of resistance, but is a bean of excellent appearance and quality, and high in protein, making it a potentially valuable crop for the export market.

The bean is an erect, branching variety, averaging 44-in. in height, with medium-sized yellow seeds. It averages 41.8 per cent protein and 21 per cent oil on a dry basis.

Yields in 1958 and 1959 Delaware tests averaged 43.8 bushels per acre.

It matures four to six days earlier than the Dorman and Hill varieties currently grown by many farmers, but six to 10 days later than Wabash and Clark.

It is resistant to "pod and stem blight disease" and the soybean disease known as "frog-eye."

Agronomists at the university say that taking everything into consideration—yield, quality, appearance, disease resistance, maturity and ease of harvesting—Bethel is better than any variety being grown in any quantity by Delaware farmers.

Seed supplies of the new bean are available for commercial planting and farmers interested may obtain seed by contacting county agricultural agents.

Following Dr. Crittenden's selection of the experimental variety UD-321, later named after Bethel, Del., site of experimental work on the farm of Harley Hastings, the bean was tested and approved by 10 different state agricultural experiment stations and the USDA, as a part of the procedure established for evaluating new crop varieties.

Newark School-Community Cooperation Provides Close Tie For Mutual Benefit

It would be difficult to find a town in which there are closer ties between the community and the school than in Newark.

Newark's citizens support activities of their young people through civic organizations, industry and business, the clergy, the police, the Newark Recreation Association and local sports clubs.

Service organizations have their committees on education. In most cases this is more than a committee in name only. The Rotary Club, for example, each year provides two $300 scholarships for two seniors planning to attend college. This same club provided necessary funds for a Newark graduate attending the University of Delaware to accept an opportunity to study abroad last summer.

In addition, the Lions, Kiwanis, Business and Professional Women, Knights of Pythias, Newark Business Women, Optimists, Janesville, Soroptimists, Loyal Order of Moose, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Newark New Century Club, and the Ladies Auxiliary of the Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder Fire Company give real recognition to outstanding graduates at commencement, and have come to the financial aid of such student activities as the trip to the Herald Tribune Forum for six juniors and seniors.

During the summer months and after school hours, local business men extend dozens of helping hands to students interested in finding part-time or regular employment. Not only does local business advise and recommend but it works with the high school to locate job opportunities.

Members of the clergy, working in rotation, officiate at such religious observances as Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter services at schools, and at baccalaureate.

Newark's YMCA and YWCA and the Newark Recreation Association make it a point to establish close ties with the schools; and the American Field Service program helps Newark's high school students to come to Newark for a full year. Together with the Student Council, the AFS gives an annual dance at which foreign exchange students from this area are present.

Newark's United Towns Organization with the Newark-La Garde Freinet twin city project, is another activity in which a community committee works with the school in a common cause.

Close relationship between the University of Delaware and the Newark High School is particularly advantageous to high school students, with participation in such organizations as Future Teachers of America, and those that have to do with international relations, guidance services, dramatics and various schools of the university.

Newark supports its school's athletic teams and has an active Touchdown Club which honors senior members of the football squad with an annual banquet and presentation of trophies. The "Moms" get into the act, too, with their annual mothers' banquet for the football squad. For the student body and the administration to have such enthusiastic backing for the school's entire program of activities is, in the minds of those working with young people, a basic factor in the success of any school.

Farm-Home Week Campus Program Planned Feb. 7-9

Sam Gwinn, Don Crossan Head Program At Ag Hall For Rural, City Dwellers

The University of Delaware annual Farm and Home Week program will be conducted Feb. 7-9, in Agricultural Hall on the Newark campus.

Dean George M. Worrlow, school of agriculture, states that the traditional winter event will offer attractions for both farm and city people.

University agricultural scientists will report results of their research for more effective plant disease and insect control; reduced losses and increased efficiency in poultry and egg production; improved crop, livestock and dairy production, and better marketing practices.

Agricultural topics will include broilers, alfalfa, egg marketing, forage harvesting; milk production; farm partnerships and corporations; estate planning and insurance; fruit, vegetables, sheep, swine, and beef.

Homemakers will have discussions and demonstrations on home decorating, fashions, and special table settings.

That portion of the program designed with urban and suburban dwellers in mind will include topics on fish cooking; investing in securities; insurance and real estate; insect control, flowers and other home gardening topics, and pleasure horses.

Dr. Sam M. Gwinn, assistant director of the University's agricultural extension service, is general chairman, and Dr. Donald F. Crossan, department of plant pathology, is program chairman.

Returns From Israel

Grace E. Elliott

Delmar's Grace Elliott has returned home from a six-month stay with farm families in Israel as an International Farm Youth Exchange delegate.

James O. Baker, state 4-H Club leader at the University of Delaware reports that Miss Elliott stayed with people who owned their own farms and with others on community-operated farms.

She worked with the people harvesting a wide variety of crops including olives, citrus, small grains, peanuts and livestock, and with housewives in farm homes.

Retail deliveries of Chrysler automobiles in 1960 will top 80,000 units, an increase of more than 22 per cent over the 65,748 delivered in 1959, reports C. E. Briggs, vice president and general manager of Chrysler division.

The division is increasing its manufacturing schedule to meet demand. Plans call for production of 8,800 Chryslers during January, the biggest monthly output for the model year and the biggest monthly production since last February.

All Chrysler cars are built at the corporation's Jefferson assembly plant in Detroit.

U. D. Trustees

It had been decided to name one of the two married student apartment buildings on Elkton Road and Amstel Avenue for President Raub, but these buildings will henceforth be known as Conover Hall A and B.

Raub Hall has been completely renovated and houses the university placement office. Ultimately, it also will be headquarters for the university extension division.

The former National Guard Armory now housing the departments of philosophy and political science will be known as East Hall.

The trustees also announced that the site between Mitchell Hall and Delaware Avenue, directly opposite Wolf Hall on the central campus, has been selected as the location for the new mathematics-physics building. Construction will begin early next year.

In accordance with the changing nature of its research interests and support, the name of the Fels Group Dynamics Center has been changed to Center for Research on Social Behavior.

The history of the center dates to 1955, when a research program in group dynamics transferred from Temple University to Delaware under the sponsorship of the Samuel S. Fels Fund, a Pennsylvania non-profit corporation established by its founder to support "projects of a scientific, educational or charitable nature which tend to improve daily human life."

Last year the directors of the Fels Fund notified the university that their support would be discontinued in 1960, but by this time the work of the center's research staff had become so vital that industrial and government sponsors seemed willing to support it.

Its professional staff members and student research assistants under the direction of Dr. John T. zetta are conducting psychological studies for the Office of Naval Research, the U. S. Army, the Air Development Center of the Foundation and the National Institutes of Health.

The annual report of President John A. Perkins covering the 60 academic year was accepted by the board.
