TOWN ELECTION, CLEAN-UP DAY, FINANCES, AND CENTENARY AID ACTED UPON BY COUNCILMEN

Town Council at Regular Meeting Last Monday Night Approves Reports and Decides Upon Spring Work

The regular election of town officers will be held on Tuesday, April 10, from 1 to 5 p. m. Arrangements were made for the holding of the election at last Monday night's Council meeting. William J. Lovett from the Middle District, announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election. Mayor Collins reported that the town members on the University Centenary Committee approved of the town's taking responsibility for some of the decorating in connection with the celebration May 11, 12 and 13. Plans were informally discussed and the Council agreed to the providing of strings of colored lights, flags and bunting on several blocks of Main Street during the week of the centenary.

Mayor Collins explained that the petition being signed requesting a special election to vote on support for the town library, was the proper proceeding under State law. The town charter, he said, did not authorize appropriations by Council for educational purposes.

Upon the report of Town Engineer, Merle Sigmund that the bridge to the dumping ground would be open, Council will act March 21, for the deferred Clean-up Day.

An account of the accident to Grace Sheaffer, the child hurt when she is said to have dashed into a car driven by Hugh Gallagher was requested of Chief of Police Cunningham who was present. Chief Cunningham said his investigation had brought out no evidence to show that the driver of the car could have avoided the child. A Councilman said he believed the little girl intended to dart behind the car and ran head-long into it near the rear as it passed. She did not seem seriously injured at first. The driver came back to the police voluntarily when he heard that the child was in the hospital and is held under $500 bail pending the outcome of the hospital treatment for two skull fractures suffered by the child.

Discussion of this accident led to general discussion of protecting children at school hours. It was suggested by Chief Cunningham that all lights at the school crossing should be either red or green in order not to confuse the children and that if the private officers in the employ of the school would help, a better protection could be given.

Streets Not Injured

Engineer Sigmund reported that Newark streets had suffered very little damage from the thaw and rain. He suggested that a new light weight pump would give cheaper and quicker service in removing water from flooded streets than the present pump which takes several men to load and unload. The question of the pump was left to the future. Mr. Sigmund also reported that the past month had made a high record for water usage, the average pumping for the month being 502,000 gallons per day. Milk test returns were read showing decrease of bacteria during a cold month.

Councilman Herman Wollaston asked for three-wire electric service on East Park Place in order that electric stoves and other equipment might have adequate current. Mayor Collins was authorized to find the lowest cost of this improvement and notify the Councilmen in order that final decision could be reached. Councilman Wollaston suggested also that in fairness to depositors of $5 for installation of electric ranges, interest should be paid on the deposit when it had been held a number of years. There was agreement as to the rightness of the claim. Objection was made to the work involved in computing amounts of interest so small as to mean little to the depositors.

Special parking permission for visitors during the coming Methodist Conference were agreed to and Chief Cunningham was asked to see that this courtesy to visitors was carried out.

Finances

Bills for street repairs and other services were ordered paid upon motion of the Councilmen in charge. The secretary's report showed a balance on hand as of February 1, of $23,342.46. Receipts during February for light, power and taxes and a few minor items amounted to $7,865.41 by the end of the month making the total fund on hand, $31,207.87. Disbursements during February for salaries, labor and appropriations were $6,058.92, leaving the balance on hand March 1, $25,148.95.

Police Report 14 Arrests in February
Driving under the influence of liquor, 3; drunk and disorderly, 3; assault and battery, 3; reckless driving, 1; larceny, 1; no operator's license, 1; discharging firearms in town, 1; carrying concealed deadly weapons, 1.

Seven cases sentenced to the workhouse in default of fines; one case held for the higher court and case dismissed by the payment of costs. Defaulted fines amounted to $255.00.

Fines collected during the month amounted to $126.00; ten dollars of this amount will be included in the Alderman's March report.

The officers recovered one stolen car; and investigated five accidents, and one death caused by exposure.

The officers received 83 red light calls during the month and took care of twenty-two transients during the month.

PARTY FOR ST. JOHN'S

A bingo and card party for the benefit of St. John's R. C. Church Newark, will be held on Wednesday evening, March 14th, at 8:30 in the Century Club. Refreshments will be served.

LEGION TO HAVE NATIONAL HEADS AS VISITORS

Milford and Wilmington do Honors This Year

Arrangements are being completed for the visit of Edward A. Hayes, National Commander of the American Legion, and Mrs. William H. Biester, National President of the Auxiliary, to Delaware on Wednesday evening, March 14th. The committee is arranging a banquet and dinner to be held in their honor.

Mrs. Biester will address a meeting of the Kiwanis Club in Wilmington at noon on the same day, which will also be attended by members of the American Legion Auxiliary and the American Legion, and she will also speak at 2 o'clock in the Hotel du Pont. Reservations for the luncheon should be made with the unit presidents.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Daniel Rutter, routeman for Bricker Bread, had a narrow escape on Tuesday when his truck overturned at Ogletown. He was brought to Newark, where his injuries were treated and later was sent to his home.

ELECTRICAL SHOW IN WILMINGTON TO OPEN WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28

Many New Devices Will Be Displayed

Preparations are well under way for the largest local exhibition yet given of refrigerating and many other electrical devices in the gold ball room of the duPont Hotel from March 28 to 31. The show will be open to the public without entrance charge. Mr. John S. Reburn, representing a committee of various trade representatives, is in charge of the exhibition.

Following plans in the past, the exhibits will be arranged about the gold ballroom, with the various manufacturers combining their selling outlets in individual expositions. Every modern electrical device will be shown on display and through the cooperation of

LEGISLATIVE SESSION OPENS AT DOVER

The adjourned special session of the Legislature reconvened at Dover on Tuesday of this week to deal with the problems of destitution and unemployment which still confront the State as an emergency problem of great seriousness. Governor Buck sent to both the House and Senate a statement of financial facts related to the State's ability to meet the problems. He gave recommendations of the State Emergency Relief Commission, and the information that the Federal Government's aid will not be available unless Delaware adopts a program. Governor Buck proposed $1,500,000 for direct relief. That the Legislature will find ample public support for both an adequate public works program combined with adequate appropriation of direct relief has been clearly indicated ever since the failure of the last session to agree upon the then proposed plans which would have enabled the State to receive a gift of thirty per cent of the cost from the Federal Government.

After the unfortunate misunderstanding and disagreements have had their wholesome airing the Legislature will undoubtedly get down to a real program.

WILL OPEN DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN

Meeting March 20, at Hotel du Pont

Active Democrats are looking forward to the launching of a campaign program at the regular Jackson Day Dinner, to be held in the ball-room of the Hotel du Pont, on the evening of March 20, at 7 o'clock. John Biggs, Jr., will be toastmaster and it is expected that Postmaster-General Farley will be the chief speaker.

JESTER HOPES FOR NAUDAIN SUPPORT

One of the backers of John B. Jester for chairman of the Democratic county committee yesterday said that William T. Naudain, of near Hockessin, has withdrawn as a candidate for chairman and will throw his support to Jester.

DU PONT MAKES REPORT

Collections of State tax from all sources in 1933 show a five per cent decline over those of 1932. The 1933 total is $4,444,446, according to report submitted to Governor Buck by Pierre S. du Pont, State Tax Commissioner.

PETITION FOR TOWN LIBRARY ELECTION WILL BE PRESENTED TO SCHOOL BOARD TOMORROW NIGHT

No Opposition Has Been Met By Promoters Of The Petition

At its meeting tomorrow night the local School Board will receive a petition having more than the requisite number of signers for the calling of a special election which will be a referendum of the voters in the Newark school district, comprising the town and the adjacent rural sections, upon the question of raising by taxation $1000 for the support of the local public library. The tax will be so small to raise this amount of money that it is unlikely to meet opposition on the ground of expense. It is estimated that 2 mills, or slightly more, will be sufficient.

The increased demand of the public for reading matter since the depression has been general over the whole country, and especially in districts inadequately supplied with service, has brought library work to the attention of the people as one of the more important safeguards of the mental and social life of the community. Books, magazines, pictures, music, meet and fill a need of the present enforced leisure without means, say the students of this question, that nothing else can so wholesomely supply. The local groups promoting the development of an adequate town library for Newark, are well fortified with the abundant evidence to support this claim. The New Century Club, the New Castle County Free Library and all the local agencies interested have themselves already contributed to the limit of their resources the service the community has had.

The petition for the election bears the names of residents of all sections and of wide range of activities and interest.

WM. SPENCE, 92, ADMIRER OF WILL ROGERS

Goes To the Movies To See His Friend and Then Starts On Maryland Visit

This town is pleased to have as its long time and honored resident, Mr. William Spence, who is hale and hearty at 92, and who more than keeps up with the younger members of his family. He recently enjoyed a screen performance by his favorite, Will Rogers, at the State Theatre, and immediately afterward departed for a visit to Maryland relatives and friends.

Wilmington Has Newspaper Guild

Charles Lee Reese, Jr., was elected president of the Newspaper Guild of Wilmington, which was organized on March 4. He is on the staff of the Evening Journal - Every Evening. Other officers are: Charles L. Hackett, of the Sunday Star, vice-president; Geo. Shtofman, of the Evening Journal-Every Evening, treasurer; Walter E. Smith, of the Morning News, secretary. The Wilmington Guild will later be affiliated with the Newspaper Guild of America. The first work of the local guild will be to aid in a nationwide survey of salary rates in connection with the Federal Newspaper Code.

Parent-Teachers Hear Local Speakers

Miss Etta J. Wilson Talks At Recent Meeting

Miss Etta J. Wilson, secretary of the State Parent-Teacher Association spoke at the meeting of Oak Grove Parent-Teacher Association.

At the Rose Hill meeting Mrs. Roy Arters, chairman of the Visiting Committee reported that she had visited each classroom during the month.

Dr. J. R. Downes spoke on the "Duties of the C. W. A. Nurse," at the Marshallton Parent-Teacher Association.

PHILADELPHIA FLOWER SHOW

Exhibit Opens Next Week, Monday In Commercial Museum

No flower show that is easily available to Delawareans has given more pleasure than the annual exhibition in the Commercial Museum in Philadelphia during a week in March. Monday of next week, this year's exhibit opens. Gardens, flower arrangements, new plant developments, and fine special collections will delight visitors.

David C. Rose In Hospital Undergoes Grafting Operation

David C. Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lee Rose is in the Wilmington General Hospital, where skin grafting is being tried to overcome effects of an accident suffered in childhood. Young Mr. Rose was burned while playing with matches when he was four years old, and for 18 years has suffered increasing trouble with the imperfectly restored tissues. Since it was decided by Dr. Mencher that grafting of new skin was necessary that method is being tried.

David's friends wish him a speedy recovery.

TRUCK OWNERS ASKED TO HELP ENFORCE RULE REDUCING LOAD ON HIGHWAYS

Notices and Signs Well Distributed

Signs were placed Sunday on all State Highways entering the State and at all important intersections calling attention to the fact that no trucks will be allowed on the State Highway system with axle loadings of over 12,000 pounds.

State Police have received orders to stop all trucks and have the loads reduced to accord with the maximum set by the State Highway Department.

W. W. Mack, Chief Engineer of the Highway Department, stated today that this drastic order had become necessary because of the serious thaw in the last three days of the sub-grade all of the State roads. The thaw greatly reduced the bearing power of the roads and serious damage will result from heavy loads causing a cracking and subsequent crumbling of the pavement or the sagging which will cause depressions and bumps along the roadway.

Every effort has been made to notify truck owners, notices having been sent to all papers in the State and to a number in adjoining states and also to the heavy truck fleet operators. The signs will also give notification.

The State Highway Department asks for the co-operation of all truck owners in this effort to avert serious loss to the highways over a period that may well last for the next two or three weeks.

As soon as the regulation is removed newspapers will be notified throughout the State but in the meantime the rule will be strictly enforced and if heavy loads are persisted in fines will be asked for as well as the unloading to the proper weight.

Readings In French Poetry Open to Public

Upon request, the Modern Language Department has consented to give a series of readings from French prose and poetry. The first of the series will be given in the Hilarium of the Women's College on Friday, March 9, at 4:15 p. m. Professor Byam will read a few poems of Leconte de Lisle. Students of Delaware College, as well as Faculty members and the public are cordially invited.

IRVIN T. KEPLER NOT TO FACE CHARGES

States Attorney E. D. E. Rollins, of Cecil County, Md., has announced that the remaining indictments against Irvin T. Kepler, former executive vice-president of the Elkton Banking and Trust Company, will not be pressed. Mr. Kepler was tried on two indictments at the December term of court in Elkton, but was acquitted. The charges against Kepler involved alleged illegal manipulation of the bank's funds for his own use.

U. S. BUREAU OF CENSUS IS MAKING PROPERTY SURVEY IN NEWARK

Frank Semple and Leander Webb, Both Delaware Residents, Will Be In Newark Several Days for House to House Canvass

Information Confidential With Uncle Sam

The federal government's Bureau of the Census, through the Delaware division of which Wm. A. Hannigan is supervisor with an office in Wilmington, 110 Delaware Trust Building, is making a real property inventory in this State as part of a nation-wide survey of home owning or home renting, and of the distance of homes from places of work, that will give an accurate basis for improvement proposals, public or private. The figures will be published as statistics regarding each community. No individual answers will be seen by anyone except census officials who must treat the information as confidential.

The resident of Newark who answers the set of questions cheerfully and accurately will be helping the government to have on record at Washington a true account of housing needs, and of the number of families who enjoy modern heating, plumbing and electrical services and the number who do not. The people have already answered a great many survey questions on various subjects, but the Post is sure they are glad to keep right on answering anything that will help the government to assemble useful facts.

Wedding of Miss Catherine Eugenia Townsend Important Social Event for Newark

She Will Be Married to John William Watson, May 26, in St. Thomas' P. E. Church

Miss Catherine Eugenia Townsend, whose engagement to John William Watson, of Federalsburg, Md., was announced recently, has chosen Saturday, May 26 as the date of her wedding. The marriage will take place at 4:30 o'clock in St. Thomas' P. E. Church, the Rev. Andrew W. Mayer, officiating.

Miss Townsend's maid of honor will be her sister, Miss Elinor Scott Townsend. Her bridesmaids will be another sister, Miss Dorothy Townsend, Mrs. Robert Jefferson of Laurel, and Mrs. George L. Townsend, 3rd, of Wilmington.

Alfred C. Watson, of Federalsburg,

Md., will be best man. The ushers will be Thomas B. Watson, of Federalsburg, Donald R. Welles, Charles A. Owens, and George L. Townsend, 3rd, of Wilmington, and William E. Hayes, Jr., of Newark.

A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Townsend, of Kent Way.

Miss Townsend is a graduate of the Friends School, Wilmington, and the Women's College, University of Delaware. Mr. Watson is also a graduate of the University of Delaware.

To Graduates and Friends of The University of Delaware: The Centenary Celebration of The University will be held at Newark, May 11, 12, 13, Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Make your plans now to keep this week-end free for "Old Delaware."

This Week's News Letter From the Centenary Committee

A broken column over a modest grave in White Clay Creek Cemetery, bearing the inscription "Sacred to the Memory of William S. Graham, who departed this life, Oct. 3, 1847," may prove to be of more than passing interest to the casual visitor to Newark this spring. Not far away, the University of Delaware, with the huge columns of Old College shining in the sun, will observe its Centenary on May 11, 12, and 13, while beneath this broken column rests the mortal frame of its first graduate.

He was the first graduate in the sense that he was the valedictorian of the first class to emerge from the portico of Old College, that of 1836, composed of five members. And the broken column fittingly epitomizes his life, for he was born in New London, Chester County, Pa., April 23, 1818, and was thus but halfway between 29 and 30 years of age when he died.

Graham was a man of such brilliant promise that he was immediately elected to the Faculty upon his graduation, and subsequently served as Principal of the Newark Academy, which was at the time the academic department of the college, and its head a member of the faculty.

He married the daughter of the President of Delaware College, Dr. E. W. Gilbert, and devoted his life to teaching with great success. He was so highly esteemed by all with whom he came in contact that a memorial volume was published after his death, edited by Prof. George Allen, for a number of years a member of the Delaware College Faculty, and later a brilliant and much beloved teacher at the University of Pennsylvania.

This volume of 278 pages, entitled "Remains of William S. Graham," may be seen today in the Memorial Library of the University and is also deposited in the Presbyterian Archives in Philadelphia. The frontispiece is a superb steel engraving of the youthful graduate by J. Sartain, in which the subject is revealed as a romantic figure with large, mobile eye, broad forehead, straight nose, and compressed lips, with a wreath of long curly hair in the Byronic tradition. A high black stock is worn with the edges of white linen peeping out beneath the chin.

The book is divided into two parts—a Memoir, prepared by his widow, and his work, divided into Poetical Remains and Essays. Interesting as they appear, the Remains may be said to parallel Graham's all too brief life—they show brilliant promise, yet are still too close to the Latin and Greek authors of his college days. His career was so short and its days so filled with the hard monotony of teaching that he never really came to flowering, as he undoubtedly would have.

Tuberculosis was the dread spectre in the Graham family, and this man who displayed so much high ability that he impressed his personality upon all who met him became its victim.

And thus, at the early age of 29, with college days just behind him, this valedictorian of the first class to graduate from the University of Delaware, 98 years ago, died with seemingly all the prizes of an abundant life ready to drop into his hands. His personality was so brilliant and compelling that it exists for us today in the words of his friends, and, not least, in the romantic engraving by Sartain.

The Eastern Collegiate Swimming Championship meet will bring to Newark on Saturday of this week more than one hundred of the best college swimmers in the east from about fifteen to twenty colleges and universities. Rutgers College holds the championship having won it last year and is expected to make another hard fight to retain it. University of Pittsburgh is expected to give Rutgers the most trouble although there are several other colleges with exceptionally strong teams.

The meet was originally scheduled for Franklin and Marshall but when that college could not have it the University of Delaware decided to entertain the meet. Saturday afternoon the elimination events will be held while the meet itself takes place in the evening. It is expected that one of the largest crowds that has ever been in Taylor gymnasium, Newark, will be on hand.

DEPENDING ON CODES TO STOP FAKE "REMEDIES"

Washington.—Appearing in behalf of the American Medical Association Dr. William C. Woodward assailed a code proposed by the package medicine industry, at a public hearing before NRA. He saw a "joker" in the code's failure to forbid misrepresentation of any remedy's "effect upon the purchaser," and declared that the prohibition of "false and fraudulent" advertising or selling methods concerning curative or therapeutic "effects" should be amended to read "false or fraudulent." He voiced an urgent plea that this industry be "cleaned up," and exhibited a recent copy of a weekly publication issued in Washington which evoked gales of laughter by reading aloud the captions of a number of advertisements. In these the reader was told "you don't have to be operated on for gallstones"; "new hair or no pay." Proposals to "standardize" retail prices

The hearing was indefinitely recessed encountered a barrage of criticism, to consider modifications.

H. K. HOCH BUYS MIDDLETOWN FARM

Harry K. Hoch, former Wilmington solicitor, purchased the Frederick Brady farm at Middletown, consisting of 150 acres, for $10,500, on Saturday. At the time of the sale it comprised part of the Beadenkopf estate which held a mortgage on it. The large and handsome dwelling house years ago was occupied by former Clerk of the Peace Edwin R. Cochran, Sr., from whom it was acquired by Mr. Brady.

The farm is on South Broad Street, not far from the Middletown High School, and has a very beautiful lawn. The farm lies on both sides of the Delaware Railroad.

Mr. Hoch, who has been making his home at Townsend, plans, after alterations, to make use of the Middletown farm for a home.

BRAKES AND WINDSHIELDS IN SAFETY COUNCIL ADVICE

Good Old-Fashioned Courtesy Prevents Traffic Accidents

According to the Delaware Safety Council, do not approach an intersection at high speed and depend upon your brakes for a sudden stop. This is not only hard on your tires and brakes, but it is also very often the cause of a rear-end collision with the driver behind you. Unless you can see perfectly in all directions, approach intersections slowly. When you are sure the way is clear, and not until then, accelerate your speed. This practice will insure your having control over your car when you need it most.

Common highway courtesy—that good old-fashioned kind that existed in horse and buggy days—will prevent many traffic accidents. When you meet another fellow at an intersection, don't insist on the right of way. If he knows you have it, fine, but if he is in an argumentative mood an accident will result unless one of you gives in gracefully.

Give the pedestrian a break. Even though he may be in the wrong slow down and let him cross the street safely. The mildest mannered men are often selfish bores when they get behind the wheel. Selfishness anywhere is a vice, but on the highway, where life and limb are at stake, it is doubly vicious.

Dirty windshields are not only a hazard in themselves, because they decrease visibility, but they also greatly increase the glare from headlights from approaching cars. The windshield wiper is one of the most important safety devices on your car. Keep it in good condition, so that it will be ready in an emergency. It's just too bad to find it out of order when the rain comes pouring down. To reduce the annoyance of glaring lights, make it a habit to clear the glass in your windshield each evening. You will find this a great help.

DELAWARE PEACHES WILL BE IN DEMAND

Says University Extension Director "Don't Neglect Peaches Because of the Freeze"

Realizing the tendency on the part of many peach growers to neglect their orchards because of the loss of this year's crop, due to the record-breaking low temperatures of the past month, Ed Willim, Jr., New Castle County Agricultural Agent, of Newark, today advised moderate to severe pruning of all damage trees and the cultivation of the orchards as insurance against permanent injury.

"Growers are apt to forget that the damage extends beyond the killing of the fruit buds," said County Agent Willim, "and overlook the injury to the inner bark and sapwood. Injury to the wood means that the tree will not make a normal growth this year or produce a normal crop of fruit next year unless the trees are pruned sufficiently to give the roots a smaller area to supply with water and needed nutrients."

The "quickest and cheapest way to reduce the top is to make a few large cuts cutting back the main branches, rather than cutting off a lot of small twigs," he suggested. "Care and attention are vital, for if a grower does not give his trees proper handling this year, the chances are that crop prospects for next year will be materially reduced."

"The future of the trees must concern the grower now. Also, the more severely the trees are pruned, the less nitrogen will be needed to insure satisfactory growth. Vigorous orchards should be able to get along without any nitrogen application at all, while others may need about 50 pounds of nitrate of soda, or its equivalent, to the acre. The application, where necessary, should be made very early, because it will be in the early part of the growing season that the tree will have its most difficult time, as far as water and nitrogen are concerned."

Growers should plan to cultivate or plow their orchards as early this year as they would if they expected to gather crops, although they may stop earlier than usual. Two or three harrowings should be sufficient.

VALUE OF DELAWARE LIVESTOCK ESTIMATED AT $3,833,000

The total value of all livestock on Delaware farms on January 1 was estimated at $3,833,000, according to Richard C. Ross, Federal agricultural statistician for Delaware. This is nearly 11 per cent greater than the value estimated at the first of 1933. Increased values per head of all kinds of livestock, except hogs, account for the higher total values.

Numbers of cattle, horses, and sheep declined during 1933, the number of mules remained about the same, and the number of hogs increased slightly.

The number of milk cows is estimated to be the same as on January 1, 1933, indicating that the upward trend in milk cow population has been definitely checked. A decrease of more than 15 per cent in the number of yearling milk heifers also supports this indication. The total number of cattle and calves was estimated at 40,000 head on January 1, a decline of about two per cent since January 1, 1933.

The number of horses was estimated at 15,000 head, or about five per cent smaller than the year before. A serious outbreak of Encephalomyelitis caused heavy losses, particularly in the southern part of the State.

The number of hogs was about five per cent greater than on January 1, 1933, being estimated at 25,000 head.

The total number of animal units (the combined number of all livestock calculated by the use of units which allow for differences in size and feed requirements of the different species) was about 2.2 per cent smaller than either January 1, 1933 or 1932.

How the Well-Nourish Child Should Measure Up

By Pearl MacDonald of U. of D. Extension Service

In recent articles, the problems of the "Protective Diet" and "Food for the Undernourished Child" have been discussed.

Since there is such an amazingly large number of undernourished children in our country—according to our best authorities there are as many as 7,500,000, (and Delaware has her share of these), the question arises, says Miss Pearl MacDonald, Extension Service, University of Delaware, as to whether one reason for this may not be the fact that parents, teachers and others concerned do not recognize the condition of undernourishment in children when they see it. If they did, surely the number would be greatly reduced, since methods of improving the condition of undernourished children have been definitely established through work with thousands of children. We have standards for judging many things—automobiles, radios, houses, etc. Should we not then have standards for judging our children, asks Miss MacDonald? The following points are to be noted in the child who is well and growing as he should:

Expression—alert and bright. Disposition—usually happy—good natured—full of life and activity. Eyes—bright and clear—no puffiness or dark circles underneath—no inflammation of the lining of the eyelids—no definite squinting. Breathing—unobstructed—through nose with mouth closed. Tongue and mouth—mucous lining pink—breath—good. Teeth—strong and well enameled—gums firm—no tartar—no cavities. Skin—clear and smooth—slightly moist. Color—checks a ruddy pink—pink color in lips, ear-lobes, finger nails and in lining of eyelids and mouth. Hair—glossy and pliable—not markedly scanty, dry or brittle. Shoulders—even—not rounded forward—shoulder blades flat. Abdomen—flat—not protruding beyond chest. Back—straight—curves not exaggerated. Chest—broad, deep, and extending beyond abdomen. Feet—parallel—arches strong and limber—toes straight—joints not enlarged. Legs—straight. Knees, ankles and wrists—strong and with no enlargements. Muscles—firm and uniform. Fat—plentiful and firm. Weight—desirable for height and age. Sleep—sound and quiet. Appetite—good. Digestion—good—bowels regular—no constipation.

To attain completely the standards for back, chest, feet, legs, knees ankles and wrists, the growth factors must be right prenatally, in infancy, and in early childhood. The other standards are attainable by almost everyone.

On the other hand, continues Miss MacDonald, a child should be given special attention when he shows some or all of the following:

Eyes—dull, with dark circles. Expression—tired and often unhappy, and discouraged. Disposition—may be irritable, fidgety, nervous, restless, difficult to manage. Breathing—obstructed. Teeth—irregular, decayed. Skin—dry, rough, pale, scaly. Hair—dry, brittle unruly.

Chest—flat or hollow or narrow. Shoulders—rounded and often protruding so that they look like wings. Abdomen—protruding, sagging. Legs—may have knock knees or bow legs and enlarged joints. Posture and attitude—that of drooping with fatigue. Muscles—flabby and undeveloped. Sleep—restless and poor. Bowels—irregular, constipated, tongue coated, indicating poor appetite and digestion. Any or all of the above signs indicate something wrong in the child's physical make-up or in his food and living habits.

The first thing to do is to have him examined by a competent physician to see whether there is any physical handicap such as diseased tonsils or adenoids or decayed teeth. Along with the correction of physical defects, there are any, there needs to be established, for the undernourished child, a program of adequate food, good eating habits, sleep and rest, out-of-door life, good living habits as previously outlined.

Surely, we owe such care as this to our boys and girls so that they may have strong, healthy bodies for efficient living in adult-hood.

TEACHERS MEET AT MILFORD FRIDAY

At the thirteenth annual meeting of the Kent County Education Association to be held at the Milford High School tomorrow, Friday, word of welcome will be given the teachers by City Manager Charles Banning, Milford. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Frank Herson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church there. Greetings from the school will be given by Colonel Theodore Townsend, president of the local board of education. Greetings from the Delaware Parent-Teacher Association will come from Howard Ennis, the president. Dr. H. V. Holloway, State superintendent will speak on "What Pays the Bill?" Dr. Norman V. Cameron, president State Teachers College, West Chester, Pa., will talk on "Can the School Develop Character?" Benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. W. S. Irwin.

Music will be furnished by the Frederica school harmonica band under the direction of State Senator Ernest V. Keith. Community singing will be led by Miss Frances O'Brien, Milford.

In the afternoon there will be social meetings.

Newark Academy Orators Had Interesting Subjects In Civil War Period

Young Fellows Today Might Stick at Roles of Grandfathers

The honorary committee in research connected with the University of Delaware has assembled for review many historic items. Among these are two programs of Annual Exhibitions of Newark Academy, one of Thursday evening, March 28, 1861, and the other of Thursday evening, March 28, 1865. It will be recalled that these dates were within the period during which Delaware College was closed, and when the Academy was closed, and when the Academy was closed, and when the Academy was closed.

In the program of March 28, 1861, the Latin Salutatory was given by Kathmet W. Rambo, of Newark. The remainder of the program included "Human Life," by John M. Williams, of Newark; "Vendant Green's Trip," by William H. Cochran, of Middletown; "Courtship Scene, Josiah and Deborah," by William R. Stubbs, of Federalburg, Md.; and William J. Dowling, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The Value of Our Country, an original oration, by Eugene D. Tingle, Snow Hill, Md.; Nobility of Labor, by Charles S. Ellison, Summit Bridge, Del.; A Specimen of Eloquence, by T. Albion Cann, Glasgow, Del.; Church Criticism, the characters of Twist, Squint, Luracious, Lofty, Goodwin, and Twaddle being taken by G. P. Johns, of Kent County, Md.; William Drake, of Roseville, Lewis S. Allen, of Christiana, Del.; Edmund M. Curtis, of Nonantum Mills, Del.; B. M. West, Middletown, and Charles A. Maxwell, Roseville, Del.

Washington, an original oration, by John H. Dowling, Philadelphia; Dickey Mischief, Benjamin M. West, Middletown; Liberty, John Crawford, Newark; Not Ashamed of his Occupation, with Jasper and Stephen represented in the dialogue by John D. Tuft, Newark; and Charles A. Maxwell, Roseville, Del.

The Rising Generation, original oration, by William S. Underwood, Jonersville, Pa.; Evils of Disembodiment, William Drake, Roseville; "Whose Business Is It?" by Edmund M. Curtis, Nonantum Mills.

The Nineteenth Century, an original oration by James L. Vallandigham, Newark; A Western Orator, William R. Stubbs, Federalburg, Md.; The Will, with characters of Swipes, Curin, Frank, and Squire represented by T. Albion Cann, Lewis J. Allen, Charles S. Ellison, and George P. Johns.

Kantakerous Billy Earthquake, by James Kanely, Middletown; Scene for "Merchant of Venice," with characters represented by Eugene D. Tingle, L. Frank Ellison, James L. Vallandigham, William S. Underwood, John H. Dowling, and Kathmet W. Rambo; Concert Speech, participated in by Armstrong, Curtis, Darlington, Donnell, Drennen, Eisenhart, Heald, and Wheeler.

Valedictory Address by L. Frank Ellison, of Summit Bridge. The music was under the direction of Prof. J. B. Stiegler. The summer term of the Academy was announced to begin May 1, 1861.

In the program of March 23, 1865, the Latin Salutatory was given by Alfred A. Curtis, Newark. Time, an original oration, was offered by J. Frank Ellison, Mt. Pleasant, Del.; Downfall of Poland, William G. Platt, Newark; The Kiss in School, Thomas F. Quigley, Marcus Hook, Pa.; Dialogue, An Axe To Grind, William Springer, Loveville, Del., and Charles E. Moore, Port Deposit, Md.

Knowledge, original, by Benjamin F. Coulter, Newark; American Valor, C. B. Voshell, Smyrna, Del.; Hotspur, Bryce McLellan, Washington, D. C.; Logic, Arthur D. Chillas, Roseville, Del.; Dialogue, Not an Uncommon Complaint, Anthony S. Davis, Port Deposit, Md., and George Drake, Roseville, Del.

French Address, original, by Samuel M. Donnell, Newark; Death of Hamilton, Walter B. Sappington, Hartford County, Md.; The Gambler's Wife, Cornelius Davis, Cooch's Bridge; Death of Goliath, Alfred G. Brooks, Christiana; a sketch, Be Courteous, John E. Rickards, Middletown; Francis S. Bradley, Newark; James W. Skirven, Kent County, Md.

Friendship, original oration, by L. H. Webber, Christiana, Del.; Cicero against Cataline, William S. Evans, Rising Sun, Del.; Douglass and Marjion, Edward C. Dimick, Washington, D. C.; The Pen and the Press, a sketch, David J. Murphy, Frank Peters, Arthur Brown; The Church Yard, a dialogue, Thomas Springer, James Smith; The Fatal Brawl, a sketch, Alfred A. Curtis, Newark; Cornelius Davis, Cooch's Bridge; William T. Skirven, Kent County, Md.; James H. Evans, Rising Sun, Md.; Harry Budd, Cecil County, Md.

Taxation, by Fernandez Stewart, Kent County, Md.; Bernardo Del Carpio, Isaac C. Vanheke, Middletown, Del.; The Wind on a Frollick, John E. Rickards, Middletown; Fish Out of Water, a sketch, by Benjamin F. Coulter, Newark; Bryce McLellan, Washington; C. B. Voshell, Smyrna; Jordan A. Wilson, Newark; L. H. Webber, Christiana; J. Frank Ellison, Mt. Pleasant, Del.; Frank S. Brady, Newark; Thomas F. Quigley, Marcus Hook.

Valedictory Address by Jordan A. Wilson, Newark; Prof. E. D. Porter announced that the Summer Session of Newark Academy will commence Wednesday, May 3, 1865.

Benefits Derived from Approval of 10 Codes

Washington.—Under the terms of the code of the drapery and upholstery industry, 1 of 10 codes just approved by National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, all home work is abolished within 1 month from the code's effective date, January 26. Weekly work hours are reduced 15 per cent and earnings increased 7 per cent. Under the pipe organ code, effective January 27, the industry can make no immediate advance. Sales of pipe organs dropped 31.4 per cent between 1927 and 1929 owing to introduction of sound in motion pictures, and demand from churches "has diminished to a very low level." Increase in employment in the ball clay production industry, whose code goes into effect January 23, is estimated at 25 per cent, the same increase estimated for the picture molding and frame industry effective the same date. Minimum scales under the code of the feldspar industry's code, effective January 29, are more than 100 per cent higher than the lowest wages now paid in some sections of the country. And maximum working hours represent a reduction of 25 per cent. The code of the American glassware industry, effective January 31, is expected to increase employment 15.8 per cent and 3,104 wage earners, making a total of all employees in the industry 23,797. Other codes approved by General Johnson are those for the silk-fabric manufacturing trade, robe and allied products, wool trade, and the musical-merchandise manufacturing industry.

Distinguished Visitors For Osceola Lodge

On Monday evening a large delegation from Adelphi Lodge, Knights of Pythias, visited Newark to pay an official visit to Osceola Lodge. Among the delegation were two past Grand Chancellors, Boyce and Wilhelm, and Grand Master at Arms Willis. They pledged their cooperation in the formation of an "Albert T. Abernathy" Class, which was sponsored by the Newark Lodge in honor of the memory of a past Grand Vice-Chancellor. The Osceola Degree Team initiated two candidates into the rank of Page. They were Roger Atticks and Walter Seydell. It was decided to give these candidates the second degree next Monday evening at the lodge rooms. It was decided that the Lodge meet in a body at the Lodge Hall next Sunday to attend the Sunday School at the invitation of the Methodist Mens Bible Class. The meeting will be in charge of Professor W. A. Wilkinson. An invitation is extended to all Pythians to be present.

GROW AUTO PARTS ON FARM

A Champion of the Soy Bean Tells Some Of Its Uses—and Political Complications

Japanese aggression in Manchuria was caused by a desire for control of her soy bean crop.

This is only one of the several startling statements made by Dr. A. A. Horvath, chief research chemist on the staff of the United States Experimental Station at the University of Delaware, Newark, Del.

Dr. Horvath also said:

"Some day some automobile parts will be grown mostly on the farm: 'A demand in this country for products of soy bean content may be the way to peace and prosperity for our farmers!'"

Dr. Horvath was born in Kazan, Russia. His father was a professor at the university where Dr. Horvath was educated. During the World War Dr. Horvath served in the Russian Army and in Kerensky's force.

After eight years of investigation of the soy bean in China, Dr. Horvath was employed by the Rockefeller Institute for scientific and medical research at Princeton and later by the United States Bureau of Mines in Pittsburgh. Now at the University of Delaware, he is in a position to preach more of his soy bean gospel, since Delaware, the second smallest State in the Union, produces one and a half times more soy beans per acre than any other State.

In his laboratory in Newark, Dr. Horvath has an exhibit of soy bean by-products with which he mystifies visitors. He has a chart showing the various flours and oils made from the little bean.

"The soy bean," he said, "gives the most nutritious food in the world. It is 40 per cent protein, 20 per cent oil and 1.6 per cent lecithin. It has twice the amount of protein found in beef more oil than any other bean, and more lecithin, which is the food of the brain and nerves, than anything else except eggs.

"On the vast plains of Manchuria one finds the world's largest supply of what eventually will be its most valued possession—the soy bean. Lacking food for her large population, Japan looks on Manchuria and her soy bean with greed. If she has the immense resources of food and money Manchuria can give her, she has most of what she needs.

"The human being can thrive on a diet of soy beans, and most of the things we use in our everyday lives can be made from its by-products. Today we have all sorts of canned foods made from this little vegetable. We have salad, lubricating and varnish oils from it; gasoline, paint oil and oil for linoleum processes, liquid and solid soaps, soluble in both soft and hard waters, lard by hydrogenation of fats and absolutely pure lard substitutes.

"Soy bean flour, which is not used alone but is blended with wheat and rye flours, is the most nutritious.

"In the long list of soy bean by-products are artificial rubber, floor pads for automobiles, rubber soles and erasers that erase absolutely clean. Soy bean oil and spices in the fermented state are the sole constituents of Worcestershire sauce."—Public Ledger.

TAX DEDUCTIONS ALLOWED MOTORIST ON INCOME TAX

How motorists can save money through income tax deductions is told in a statement prepared by the Legal Department of the Delaware Automobile Association, A. M. A., 1223 Market Street, Wilmington, Del.

The following deductions are allowed in any case, no matter whether the vehicle is used for business or for pleasure, or both:

1. Registration fees, which are classed as State taxes. They include the cost of any license plates bought during 1933.

2. Operator's license fees, which also are State taxes. Where one member of a family pays for license issued to other drivers in the family, he may deduct the fee.

3. Loss by accident is deductible except where the owner has been reimbursed. This covers damage to the vehicle in traffic accidents, total or partial loss through fire or theft, and even damage due to freezing.

4. Interest paid on personal indebtedness, including the interest paid on loans carried by a finance company.

There are no other deductions available to a taxpayer who uses his car for pleasure purposes only. No allowance is made, for example, in the case of fines or court costs paid as penalties for violating the traffic laws; damages paid to others by the taxpayer; upkeep or depreciation.

Operating cost, which includes fuel, cost of fuel; maintenance and repair, garage rent, insurance premium and automobile club dues.

Depreciation is allowed at the rate of 25 per cent on the original purchase price. This figure is accepted by the Government on pleasure-type cars used solely for business, but it varies from 10 to 30 per cent on trucks. The purchase price of a new car used in business is not deductible, but allowance is made for loss accepted by the purchaser in trading in an old car, together with full financing charges on the new car.

Where a vehicle is used partly for business and partly for pleasure, a proportionate deduction is allowed for the business use. Warning is given by the association that full or fractional deductions for business use must be provable.

FEED THE BIRDS

During the fall of 1929, standardization of turkey breeding flocks was commenced. At the present time there are five flocks of turkeys that meet the prescribed requirements of a Certified Meat Production Flock. These flocks are owned by Joseph Kirby, Milford; R. J. Hope, Milford; and Mrs. Jennie T. Simpson, Milford. The turkey standardization program is also described in the bulletin.

A Double Nasturtium

By Charles Wilson

One of the most fascinating things about flowers lies in the development of new kinds. Many startling results of breeding and hybridizing have come from the gardens of the professional horticulturists in recent years. One of the most interesting and most recent to make a sensation in the flower world is the double hybrid nasturtium evolved at the California farms of W. Atlee Burpee Company. An idea of what it takes to accomplish these floral feats may be gathered from the fact that some forty thousand crosses were made between Golden Glean double nasturtiums and dwarf single nasturtiums to bring forth these new flowers. Through this process, all of which was by hand pollination, a color range from pearly lemon to brilliant scarlet was attained. And through all this the growers have been able not only to retain but to enhance an outstanding sweet scent. Such developments make one wonder whether there are any limits to what flower creators can do.

MARCH 8, 1934

A Man-Sized Program At Last

There is reason to believe that the million dollars of direct relief proposed at Dover—plus the five million dollar public works program about to be presented—plus the share of aid both may bring from the federal government—may well create enough local buying power to advance greatly the present Delaware upturn of employment and trade. And it just might happen to be the one example of vigorous action needed to give impetus to the nationwide sweep of cooperation that will assure recovery not only for Delaware but for the country. The program comes late and many of us will have reservations of approval concerning details, but no one can be justified in an attempt to hold back such a necessary combination of relief and public works. We shall have a better State for both the relief and the public works; and we shall be a better people for having pulled together to adopt and carry through the only kind of State program that now promises better times for all of us.

It is not necessary to cry down relief in order to cry up public works. Relief has been and will be necessary, for no program of public works can absorb quickly all kinds of service. But the public works are equally necessary and on a much larger scale than relief, for public works is, as its backers claim, the quickest means to normal healthy employment of the greatest number.

The Roosevelt Year

This is one anniversary in the recognition of which much greater emphasis has been put upon the future than upon the past. Therein lies a very significant change compared with the political and economic history of several generations past. Excepting for the World War period when most of us responded emotionally and unthinkingly, though sincerely and sacrificially to what proved to be the bitter jest of our own ignorance,—definite plans and ideals for the future of national and international life have been lacking. We were nourished, consoled, and supposed to be inspired, not by the red meat of past traditions, and their spirit, but by the hollow chanting of names and the worship of forms as such. The chant and the loud wails of those who would preserve the good old free-for-all are still heard and under their cover the selfish ply their power to the confusing of the public mind. But from all ranks, even from those of the capitalists, comes increasing evidence that the principle of planning, and the truth that we all prosper together or even the still prosperous lose what they have, are being widely accepted and acted upon.

History Sources

It is well-known, of course, that many original sources of Delaware's history have been destroyed through carelessness as well as accident, or have been allowed to be sold out of the State and scattered beyond hope of complete collection. Those facts give a keen edge to the appreciation of Delaware history lovers for newly discovered sources, however slight, and a special gratitude to writers past and present who have made the written record, as to those who have preserved the sources.

The work of Mrs. B. G. du Pont, whose latest book, Du Pont de Nemours 1739 to 1817, was reviewed in last week's Post has been based upon thousands of letters and papers kept by the du Pont family through many generations, supplemented to some extent by those kept in other families, by individuals, and preserved in community or national records. Before writing The Life and Letters of Eleuthère Irénée du Pont (eleven volumes), and the story of Victor Marie du Pont and his wife, Gabrielle Josephine de la Fite de Pellport, Mrs. du Pont read nothing but French, for five years, while she was reading the letters, in order to perfect her understanding of race and tongue before she attempted final translation.

Only the student of original sources in a foreign tongue knows the greatness and the difficulty of this undertaking. Out of her labor and art in selection, translation, and writing, Mrs. du Pont has provided present and future generations of the du Pont family with a clear, accurate, unsentimentalized yet richly human account of the adventure in living made by their ancestors. In so doing she has provided new sources for the study of French history, especially new to Americans in the field of "manners and customs"; and has made a distinct contribution to the original material both of Delaware history and of our national history. And besides there can be enjoyed in all these volumes delightful incident and revelation of personality.

Preserving Wild Life In Delaware

It is the impression of many Delawareans that the State Game Commission "feeds the birds," or that it is the duty of the Commission to protect wild birds, including song birds, by all the well known methods of providing food and shelters. This not only is not true in regard to songbirds, but the Commission is not even well equipped to make food available to game birds at the very time when the game birds suffer most, as in the recent heavy snows and freezing weather. The few wardens, three in New Castle County, with some unpaid deputies, are held up by bad roads and deep snow as is the ordinary citizen, and are without special equipment or the means to employ labor that is necessary at the one time when the birds most need help. Grain can not be thrown on the snow to do any good. Feeding places must be cleared, shelters provided, and a great extent of territory covered in bad weather. What the Commission is able to do as at present authorized and equipped is a mere drop in a bucket. Concerning songbirds, the whole responsibility falls upon the people. If it were not for the schools, Scouts, park boards, town dwellers, and farmers, the wild birds would suffer more than they do. Song birds and game birds, too, are still mainly the responsibility of the people until the State Game and Fish Commission can be given the necessary backing and cooperation to extend and perfect its work.

"Life Begins At Forty"

We congratulate the Sunday Star upon the beginning of its fifty-fourth year. The Star grows in grace, wisdom, and effective state-wide publicity—with the years, and since the middle years of life and what were once called the "declining years" are now coming into their own in the public recognition, and in inspiring stimulus that makes added years bring added richness of life and service, we can regard the Star's years of best achievement as now at their beginning.

The Waiting List

Nothing can be more appealing to the feelings of those who know and understand old people, than the report of the State Old Age Welfare Commission, that hundreds are on the waiting list, of whom the report says, it is indeed unfortunate that State relief should be withheld from them. Delaware can be proud of having assumed a practical responsibility for the care of the dependent aged and of its provision for 1,586 on the active list at the beginning of this year, but the extension of this work must come, immediately, to meet an amount of need as great as that already cared for.

Themes of the Thoughtful

"The only really effective way parents may influence their children is by example."

"You are not guilty when you are ignorant, but you are guilty when you resign yourself to ignorance."

—Mazzini.

"The heart of man is of itself but little, yet great things cannot fill it: it is not big enough at one meal to satisfy a bird, and yet the whole world cannot satisfy it."

—Thomas Dekker, 1609.

"I think poetry should surprise by a fine excess, and not by singularity; It should strike the reader as a wording of his own highest thoughts, and appear almost a remembrance."

—John Keats.

"A Persian carpet or piece of Sheraton makes a distinguished end and bears itself with dignity to the last—as aristocrats before the guillotine. But a Brussels or bit of mid-Victorian will be found to grovel, show its unlovely wounds and scream for pity."

—Eden Phillpotts.

"The pedigree of honey
Does not concern the bee;
A clover, any time, to him
Is aristocracy."

—Emily Dickinson.

"What a paradise of wild flowers the early pioneers must have found. . . . Yet now many native species are facing extermination. If some of them are to be saved, it must be through prompt action of our people. We must learn how to propagate and grow all worthwhile species."

—George D. Aiken.

WHAT WE READ

Pioneering With Wildflowers, by George D. Aiken, Putney, Vermont, published by the author, 1933.

Anyone who has had a copy of this book during this winter's storms and stretches of extreme cold has had a delightful buffer against despair with the elements. The author is the same George Aiken whose fascinating catalogues of wild plants for sale have served during previous milder seasons to relieve the tedium and impatience of the last weeks of winter. One could turn the pages and feel from names and illustrations, vivid anticipations of woods, fields and stream borders in all their delicate spring pungence and color. The book is many times more absorbing than the catalogues. In short chapters with abundant fine illustrations the writer refreshes all our youthful and mature interest in the wildings and creates new pleasure besides.

He tells that his own first interest began as a small boy when he was sent daily with the farm dog to bring in the cows from a pasture, in the far corner of which was a wood lot where wild flowers were abundant. One night he dug up a clump of Dutchman's-breeches and transplanted it under a lilac bush where it grew and thrived for twenty years, after which the suckers from the lilac choked it out. It was only in recent years, however, when wild flowers were being exterminated over great areas of the country that Mr. Aiken began experimenting with their propagation on a scale that would furnish stock for replenishing this growth.

Beginning with "Who should grow wild flowers," the chapters lead (after "Soils and environment," "Propagation and Planting") through such titles as "The Ladyslippers," "Little Bog Orchids," "Two Months of Trilliums," "Along the Woodland Pathway," "Color on the Hillside," "Roadside Neighbors," "The Glory of the Bogs," "Nature Lays a Carpet," "Fringed Gentians," "Wild Lilies."

And besides all our outdoor enjoyment of wild flowers the book tells that many of them, left dormant till December, may be brought indoors and by proper treatment brought to bloom in "from two weeks for Hepaticas to two months with some of the Ladyslippers." The following paragraphs are like incantations bewitching the reader by sound and by conjured visions:

"Among the rarer plants which force readily indoors are Wild Ginger, Calypso, Ladyslippers, Trailing Arbutus, Shooting-star, Hepaticas, Crested Iris, Twinleaf, Showy Orchis, Rattlesnake Plantation."

"Many wild flowers, such as Phlox, Asters, Sunflowers and Trilliums, are more beautiful when planted in clumps and masses. Other plants such as Cardinalflower, Thermopsis, Fringe-orchards, Gayfeathers and Lilies are more satisfactory if the plants are permitted to develop their full individual beauty by being planted singly or in small groups."

The book is a guide to the enjoyment of wild flowers in their native haunts, actually, and in their propagation practically, in addition to being a delightful entertainment for spare or what would be bored moments without it. It is dedicated "To Peter Rabbit in the hope that flattery will accomplish what traps and guns have failed to do and that the little rascal will let our plants alone from this time on."

Next week we expect to review the most pleasing and entertaining magazine we know—an English Quarterly, The Countryman, edited and published by J. W. Robertson Scott at Idbury, Kingham, Oxfordshire. Meanwhile we print some choice bits from the section of the magazine called The Countryman Club, to which subscribers send in such items:

Queer Behaviour of a Rabbit.—I was walking round the back of this house where there are wood stacks and rabbit ears, hoping to shoot a young rabbit. I noticed movements behind a bank of nettles, and considered whether I would shoot and perhaps get several rabbits. I did not do so, and, moving quickly on to where I could get a better view, I found to my surprise seven runner ducks in a row, facing a half-grown rabbit which, on his hind legs, was giving them an entertainment by pirouetting, in fact dancing, from side to side. The ducks showed their appreciation by low quacking. I was at last observed and the show came to an end.—H. L. W. (Our subscriber is a justice of the peace.—EDITOR.)

The Pope's Hens.—The identity discs on the legs of His Holiness's hens, to which reference was made in your last issue, are, you may be interested to know, stamped with the Papal emblem. Could St. Peter ever have envisaged hundreds of Rhode Island Reds bearing the keys of heaven on their lower extremities?—Roma.

Wild Birds In New Castle County

Flocks of wild geese were heard early this week east of Delaware City, as they traveled through the fog on their way north. One robin has been reported this week as singing cheerfully from the topmost branch of an apple tree near Newark. Song sparrows have begun to sing and can probably be heard in all the many places throughout the county where they have stayed all year. And in spite of this spring-like sound the snow falls steadily again today. Readers will find in another column on this page the reason full responsibility falls upon all of us for feeding the song birds in winter.

The Post will be glad to print the record of birds seen and identified by readers who feed wild birds in town and county. Feeding trays should be of wood and if nailed to posts or trees should have cat guards underneath. When food is thrown on the ground cats should be kept in doors.

Cardinals like sunflower seed, crumbs of cake, bread and crackers, apples (cut in half and anchored on nails driven in a tray); smaller birds also like these things, and ground nut-meats, small seeds of millet and hemp and fine chick feed. All birds need suet or some animal or vegetable fat, either shaved and put on trays or fastened in the lump with wire meshes to trays and tree trunks.

DELAWARE HAS JUNIOR RED CROSS HONOR FLAG

National Speaker at Newark High School on Tuesday. Miss Maude Lewis Explains Work

That Delaware has the Junior Red Cross Honor Flag because of the proportion of schools enrolled is a fact that gave special interest to the address of the Assistant National Director, Miss Maude Lewis, at the Newark High School on Tuesday of this week. Mr. Channing Wagner is the State chairman of the Junior Red Cross, and a new State Committee has been formed of the following: Mr. Frank M. Heal, principal of Emalea Pusey Warner Junior High School, representing New Castle County; Miss Ella J. Holley, Supervisor of Eastern New Castle County; Mr. Virgil B. Wiley, superintendent of Dover Public Schools, representing Kent County; and Mr. E. Paul Burkholder, supervisor of Southern Kent and Northern Sussex Counties, representing Sussex County.

Junior Red Cross Roll Call (to date):
1933—Pupils, 29,277; schools, 147.
1934—Pupils, 31,957; schools, 141.
Miss Lewis, who is spending two weeks in Delaware, has had experience in every field of Junior work—that of public and private schools, city and rural schools. She joined the headquarters staff at Washington in 1925. She put into her talk in Newark the information and enthusiasm that accounts for her success.

Miss Lewis said, "In America alone we have a membership of over six and one half million ranging from children in kindergarten to high school graduates. In Syracuse, N. Y., a Wacode Club has been organized by students who have graduated from High School and are still interested in carrying on the program of the Junior Red Cross. This Club has proven so popular that similar organizations have been started in Boston and other cities throughout the United States. On April 9th The Red Cross Annual Convention will be held in Washington. The four days following, high school students from every section of the country, Porto Rico, and the Indian Reservations will meet for the purpose of deciding upon the Service Program for the coming year. It is to be hoped that several of the High Schools in Delaware will find it possible to send student delegates to this meeting.

There are 31,957 members in the State and for the past two years the Junior Red Cross Honor Flag has been awarded to Delaware because it has had the largest percentage of its schools enrolled in our organization of any State in the Union.

Mr. M. Channing Wagner, assistant superintendent in charge of secondary schools is the Junior Red Cross chairman for the State of Delaware. Any child of school age is eligible for membership whether he be in a public, private or parochial school. A membership fee is not required. Rather the students earn the right to become members by expressing the desire to serve. The motto of the Junior Red Cross is "I SERVE" and the creed reads in part, "We believe in service for others, in health of mind and body to prepare us for better service and in world-wide friendship."

PRIZES OFFERED FOR FARM BUSINESS RECORDS

Boys and Girls Will Compete In National Contest

The First National 4-H Club Farm Accounting Contest was announced today by the National Committee on Boys' and Girls' Club Work, in cooperation with the International Harvester Company. According to County Club Agent G. M. Worrlow this farm accounting project is very timely in view of many adjustments that are now being made in the various farm operations and enterprises making it more necessary for the careful keeping of farm accounts, and it is expected that this project will be of particular interest to the older 4-H Club members of New Castle County.

The following regulations apply to the contest:

1. Any bona fide 4-H Club member working under the supervision of the Extension Service during the club year of 1934 is eligible to compete.
2. The prizes are offered for the best kept farm business records in 1934-1935. The records can be kept in any suitable account book which provides space for the following:
(a) a complete inventory of all farm possessions at both the beginning and end of the 12-month period;

(b) a record of the money received and paid during the year in operating the farm and what these receipts and expenditures were for;

(c) a record of working time spent and expense incurred in producing each principal farm crop or other product (approximate figures will suffice, and working time can be estimated on a basis of hours per week devoted to each item); and

(d) a balance sheet showing how much money the farm made or lost during the year.

3. The records must run for any period of 12 consecutive months between January 1, 1934, and February 28, 1935, but preferably from March 1, 1934, to February 28, 1935, inclusive.

4. A record of the year's business on the contestant's home farm or a neighboring farm will be acceptable, but records of any one farm will not be accepted from more than one contestant.

5. The records must be kept by the contestant in his or her own handwriting. The help of parents, club leaders, and others, however, is permitted and encouraged.

6. Each record must be accompanied by a story of not more than 500 words, telling in the contestant's own language his or her opinion of the value of keeping farm records and how they can be advantageously used.

7. The record book and story of each contestant will be submitted to the County Club Agent who will judge the same, determine the county winner and send the credentials to the State Club Leader.

8. The State Club Leader will arrange for the judging of the farm account books and stories of the county winners and determine the State winner.

9. All records of State winners submitted to the National Committee will compete for sectional and national prizes.

10. All records will be considered confidential, and record books will be returned to the contestants after judging is completed.

County Prizes
A county prize of a $10 International Harvester Company Merchandise Certificate will be awarded in each county where five (5) or more contestants complete the project.

State Prizes
In each State where county prizes are awarded in ten (10) per cent or more of the counties the State winner will have the choice of:

McCormick-Deering 750 pound capacity Cream Separator No. 3 with stainless steel disks, or $100 International Harvester Company Merchandise Certificate.

Sectional Prizes
In each of the four Extension Sections the winner will have the choice of:

McCormick-Deering Double-Unit Milker complete with 70-pound pail and single-cylinder pump power unit, or $225 International Harvester Company Merchandise Certificate.

National Grand Prize

Choice of:
McCormick-Deering Farmall 12 Tractor, or International Half-ton Truck with cab and pick-up body, or $500 International Harvester Company Merchandise Certificate.

HEALTH PROGRAM PRESENTED BEFORE ELEMENTARY ASSEMBLY

The Assembly Program given on March 5, 1934, was presented by Miss Meixell's section of the third grade. Mae Porter acted as chairlady. The program consisted of the following:

Song by the Elementary School, "It is Monday."
 Story, "Old Giant Toothache," Eugene Robinson.
 Dramatization of story by the third grade.

Characters—Old Giant Toothache, Henshaw Steedle; Cho-Cho, Paul Kirkley; Dentist, William Gray. Nurse, Marie Pemberton; Gnomes, Frank Sanborn, Robert Wollaston, Irvin Williamson.

Children playing games—participation of entire class; song and toothbrush drill, "Clean, Clean, Clean, Your Teeth;" Recitation, "Toothbrush Village;" Luxenborough George; group of songs by the third grade, Ch-Ch-Ch-Chores, Snowflakes, Jimmy, Our Puppy.

Old Giant Toothache lived in a cave on top of a hill. He was always howling and making a fuss the whole day long. When he saw the children playing and having a good time, he tried to find a way to make them as unhappy and miserable as he was. After calling all his little gnomes together, he told them his plan.

The gnomes sharpened all their instruments and went down into the meadow to play with the children. They were so tiny that they hopped into the children's mouths without their knowing it. Achey Gnome and Too-Much-Candy helped the other little gnomes. They found cushions of meat and candy which were in Johnnie's mouth. These cushions made it easy for them to work.

When the old giant called to the gnomes, they worked much faster. They made great big holes into those pretty white teeth and Achey Gnome thrust his ax right into the room where the Fairy Nerve lived.

The children began to cry and Cho-Cho heard them in Fairyland. He came to see what was the trouble with the children. At his suggestion, the children went with him to kind Mr. Dentist. The Dentist very carefully chased those naughty gnomes right out of the children's mouths and patched up the pretty teeth, while Cho-Cho stood on his head and made the children laugh.

Cho-Cho told the children a way they could beat Old Giant Toothache. He gave each child a magic wand with bristles on one end and a tube of white paste. He told the children if they used magic wands twice every day and did not allow Too-Much-Candy to creep into their mouths, they would never be bothered with Old Giant Toothache again.

Elda Harrington, Grade 3-B.

ON THE ICE

"Well, Brownie, old boy, I guess I'll go skating on the lake. Dad said that the lake might be hard enough. Mother, I am going skating and I'll be home in time for my supper."

Flinging his skates over his back, Tom Jones, a youth of twelve years, started down the road leading to the lake, followed by his dog, Brownie.

In an hour he reached the edge of the lake, and putting on his skates, started for the center of the lake. His dog acted in a peculiar way, seeming to try to tell Tom that something was wrong. Running up to Tom, he would pull at him and then run in the direction of the road. When Tom paid no attention, the dog sat down on his haunches and pointing his nose up to the sky, gave several long howls that would send shivers down your back. This annoyed the boy very much. Perhaps he didn't notice the weak spot in the ice that he was headed for in the center of the lake. After the dog found that he could not drive the boy off his course, he tried snapping at his heels.

"Stop that," demanded the boy, "what's the matter with you anyhow? You certainly are acting strange today. Stop! Stop!"

Still the dog continued on in his actions. Taking a stone which he found, Tom threw it on the bank. Immediately the dog chased after it. With the dog away, Tom skated on towards the center. Within a short time he was upon the soft ice, and in an instant he plunged into the cold, black water. With a cry of fright the boy sank. Coming up to the surface, he sank again. The second time he held on to the floating ice and gaining consciousness, called for Brownie.

"Brownie! Brownie!"

An idea struck him. Taking his necktie, he tied it to the dog's collar. Gradually the dog pulled the almost frozen boy to the bank.

"Go get help, Brownie! Get someone quick!"

With an understanding look the dog bounded away, carrying the hat in his mouth which Tom had given him.

It seemed like hours to the boy. Would some one be home? Had they missed him? Would they understand Brownie? Would they reach him in time? Falling into a daze, these questions pounded over the boy's mind.

Why was he warm now. Brownie was licking his face. He was in his mother's home. The doctor was feeling his pulse. Everything came back to him. He was safe and alive!

NEWARK UPSETS

CLAYMONT 27-22

A bit of fast action was witnessed at the Claymont Gymnasium on the night of March 2. The Newark invaders surprised Claymont by beating her on her own floor. The game was exceedingly well executed by both teams; the lead coming to Newark in the first quarter and held by her throughout the game.

The score stood 9-5 at the end of the first quarter. Out of a possible 16 points, at the end of the half, Daly had fifteen—the other point going to George's credit. The half-time score was 16-13.

The second half started mid a whirl of flying feet. Claymont striving desperately to overcome the three point lead, and Newark "freezing" the ball to worry Claymont. In the third quarter Newark scored 4 points to Claymont's 3, making the score 19-15. Before the whistle blew for the end of the game, Newark had added another point to her lead—the score being 27-22.

A SNOWY NIGHT

I turn out my light
 On a snowy, winter's night
 And from the window watch the snow
 Falling gently to the ground
 And over the blanket of brown
 Place a blanket of white
 In almost one night.

Gertrude Knightnin, 7-D.

WHAT THE BIRD DID

One cold, snowy day
 When I couldn't go out to play
 I put out some crumbs of bread
 So the birdies would be fed
 A little bird came fitting
 To the window sill
 And seeing everything so still
 He knew it only fitting
 To eat while he was sitting
 So, he took his fill, of the bread
 With his bill,
 And flew away over the hill.

Gertrude Knightnin, 7-D.

RIDDLES

What has ears but cannot hear?
 Answer—A corn stalk.

What has hands but has no legs?
 Answer—A clock.

What is a pane but never gets a pain?
 Answer—A window pane.

NEWARK SCORES 38-22 WIN OVER NEW CASTLE RIVALS

New Castle conceded the third and final game of basketball to Newark last Monday night at the Taylor Gymnasium in Newark. Led by their scoring ace, Jack Daly, the Newark team romped up and down the floor to almost double the score on the New Castilians, led by McIntyre.

Newark started the scoring and at no time during the game were they in arrears. New Castle put up a game fight but the strong offense and defense of Newark was too much for her. At the end of the first quarter the score was 10-7 in Newark's favor. By the end of the second quarter Newark had advanced the score to 25-14.

The second half started with both teams striving to increase their score. While New Castle was held scoreless the third quarter, Newark increased her count to 20. The last quarter saw the New Castle Boys using every chance possible in a vain effort to win the game. The fray ended with the referee's whistle; the score being 38-22.

THE SUGAR-PLUM DISASTER

"Will-yam! your mother wants you!"

These were the words uttered by Hattie, our colored maid which had broken so rudely into my pleasant day-dreams. I had been reading "The Three Musketeers" and was deeply absorbed in one of its numerous incidents when thus addressed.

"Billy," asked my mother as I later stood before her, "will you please go to the store and get me a dozen of eggs?"

So it was that I walked into the store, still fondly dreaming of the days of D'Artagnan and his friends. In the store I saw and spoke to Tubby Burns, my particular fun-loving friend.

In return to my greeting Tubby turned to Mr. Kauffner, the smiling grocer, and said in deep, important tones, "Presenting Mr. William Sugarplum."

Sugar-plum! How I hated that name! You see, my name is Seger-blame, and on the first day of school, my teacher mispronounced making it sound like "Sugar-plum." It has been "Sugar-plum" ever since, much to my disgust.

When I started for home, Tubby went with me. We were both soon discussing the qualities of my book when suddenly I stepped on a small patch of ice, slipped and fell, eggs and all.

All Tubby could say was, "Oh Sugar-plum, how funny you look!" I barely managed to groan, "Disaster!" because there were eggs all over my new pair of pants.

In this way plus the circulating power of Tubby's tongue, the accident was ever after referred to as "The Sugar-plum Disaster," and my horrible nick-name made sure forever.

Thomas Ingham.

DID YOU EVER?

Did you ever get an A?

I did, once.

And that was in Drama.

For acting like a dunce.

Did you ever get a D?

I did, twice.

That was for writing my name

To spell "Microbes Lice."

Did you ever do anything wrong?

I did, lots.

I got in loads of mischief

Just as thick as clots.

Did you ever do anything right?

I never did.

And that's why I'm such a fright

From toe to lid.

Mary Lee Boggs.

FUN SLEDDING

One day I put on some old clothes and went sledding. Some bumps were on one part of the hill. I fell off my sled when I went down the bumpy side, so I went where it wasn't bumpy. It was so slippery I went into many snow drifts. Soon daddy called me which meant I had to leave the snow. I had great fun sledding that day.

Dorothy Daugherty, Grade 5.

SLEDDING

One day Anne Richards and I went sledding on Hullahill's Hill. The hill was very steep and slippery. I sat up on my sled to go down. I did not steer correctly and went into a snow drift. I looked like a snow man when I got out. I went down again and a girl bumped into me. We landed together in a pile. Anne and I rode on top of each other. We started so fast we went clear across the road. We had many other tumbles in large drifts.

Jane Eissner, Grade 5.

SKATING

One Saturday I went up to my uncle's home. I just got there as the boys were going ice skating. They got me a pair of skates, too. Boy, what a time I had! I would get going good and fall down. The boys taught me how to skate without falling down. It was great fun. Just as I was learning well, mother came to take me home.

Harvey Gregg, Grade 5.

SLEDDING

Last Sunday Frank, Fred, Jimmy and I went over to the college. On the way back we discovered a long piece of smooth ice. Fred is big and clumsy. He came down the hill so fast that he fell off the sled and slid across the ice. We had races to see which one could go the farthest. Fred would always fall and we would fall over him. We put snow on the ice to make it look more slippery and have more fun. We looked like snow men when we went home.

Robert Sauserman.

SKIING

My father and I went skiing one day. We put on our skis. My father started first and then I started. I was about to take off when one foot went one way and the other the other way and I sat down. My father laughed at me but that did not bother me any. I got up and started off again. Of course you knew what happened. I did the same thing.

Thomas Lilley, Grade 5.

EARNING MY FIRST MONEY

I had a very exciting time earning my first money. One day the lady next door came over and asked me if I would keep her canary until she came home the next week. I said, "I should be glad to." When she had been gone one day I thought I would give the bird a bath. I put too much hot water on the bird and hurt it. When the lady came home that afternoon she told me her bird was looking fine. Then I told her about burning him. She said it was all right. Then she gave me a dollar. I put it in my bank. I hope she asks me to keep the bird again when she goes away.

Louise Hawkins, Grade 5.

SLEDDING ON THE HILL

Naudain Slack and I went sledding on a big hill. I didn't have a sled so we both had to use her sled. She gave me a push and then jumped on. I was steering it. When we got half way down the hill, I steered the sled into a tree. We both rolled into the snow, but were not hurt. My stockings were wet so I had to go home.

I had a nice time sledding until I ran into a tree.

Marjorie Rittenhouse, Grade 5.

A NEAR TRAGEDY

At noon, February 19, 1934, snow began falling in large flakes. It continued to fall until late in the night. Forced by a nor-west gale, the snow drifted in deep banks.

The temperature for Tuesday was about five above. The land was like a fairland, the white of the snow in contrast with the black limbs.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Trina scowls Bill, the man she's living with in Vagabond-on-the-Hudson, a cold, settled, Bill is a very cool person who loves his freedom. He has met Fay La Rue, a Broadway star, and has been going with her secretly for a short while. Bragg, a seamy fellow around the camp, is the only one who knows about it. Bill takes one of Trina's precious flowers to give to Trina, even after Trina, a former preacher and now a nightwatchman in a toy factory from where Bragg was fired for dishonesty, had told him not to. Trina isn't angry when he finds out it's for Trina, whom he thinks highly of. Bragg tries to get Bill to rob the toy factory safe with him, but Bill refuses and knocks him down, primarily because Trina has said the man was becoming objectionable to her. Flossie, a prostitute, and Trina, who is always trying to turn her from her evil ways, have just left Bill's shack, after having come to inquire about the flowers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

After Trina and Flossie had left Bill lay down on the bed and stared up at the sky through a trap door that was cut in the ceiling. He never could get enough of the freedom of the outside world. Trina sat and watched him as he lay there. She spoke to him timidly, asked him about his constant staring at the sky. And he told her of his passion for that "hunk o' blue" called the sky. Suddenly he looked at her and discovered that in each of her eyes there was a "hunk o' blue" too. Bill looked at her for a moment.

"Climb in here," he said, and made room for her in the bed.

Trina got in beside her man, curling up to him.

"You're all right—a swell kid," he blame for it." His face was a mask of woe. She immediately sensed his mood, and a note of despair came into her voice as she continued, "I didn't mean to tell you at all. But pretty soon you'd know anyway and it's just too—too grand and wonderful to keep to myself. You must understand it, Bill—you're a man. You needn't look at me like that. I'm not afraid of you, darling. I've changed a lot. Only a little while ago I was all alone. Then you came along and there was two of us. Now there's three of us." She couldn't suppress that hysteria any longer. "You kin never leave me now, Bill—never! Even if you go away I've got you now. No matter where you go—no matter what you do—I've got you—I've got you—I've got you! You're a prisoner inside of me!"

Bill looked at her dazedly. Slowly he got off the bed, picked up his hat and coat and left the shack without another word or a backward glance.

He went direct to the theatre that housed Fay La Rue's successful musical. He had no trouble entering the stage door. The doorman knew him well, now. Fay was on the stage when he got there, but he waited in her dressing room for her return.

Fay's face lighted with delight when she saw him waiting. "Hello, Hard-to-Forget!" She started to change her clothes for the next number. "Another week and I'm through. I got great news for you, Bill. I'm going to have a month off before I open in London. That'll give us a few weeks to make our plans—France and Italy—or maybe just Italy. How does that sound to you, Baby?" she said as she lifted her arm to give her maid an order to get it.

"Great," said Bill directly. "I can't go with you."

"The star looked up quickly. "What?"

"I told you my trademark, didn't I? 'Subject to change without notice.'"

"I know," she said, puzzled. "But I've arranged everything—my passage on the boat for you."

"I'm sorry, but I can't go with you."

She begged him to tell her what was wrong, why he had suddenly changed his mind. Naturally, Trina refused to reveal what his reasons were. Fay all of a sudden stopped her dressing and looked over to him.

"I know what it is," she said, accusingly. "It's a girl."

Bill grimaced. "You're a business teller."

"It is—isn't it?"

"Search me. I won't know a word for a day or two."

"Oh!"

"An' I won't be around here to find out."

"I see," she said slowly. "It's a bicycle."

"A motorcycle."

"Well, I got a Rolls," said Bill sturdily. "I'm broad-minded."

There was a knock on the door, and the call-boy called the names. Name. She came over to him and put her arms around him. "That's my boy," she said, "and you're in can be fixed. There's always ways and means to get money you need. I got plenty. Hard-to-Forget, you want to go travelling—you know you do. And I got itchy feet myself."

THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

TEXT—Matthew 13:1-43.
THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM
The kingdom of heaven is like unto a man who sowed good seed in his field. As he slept, his仇人 came and sowed tares among the wheat. And when the wheat was sprung up, and the tares were also sprung up, the owner of the field went out, and gathered up the tares, and bound them in bundles, and carried them away to be burned. The wheat he left to grow, and at the harvest he will say to the laborers, 'Bring forth, my friends, the harvest, for the time is come.' And he will bind the wheat in bundles, and carry them away to the barn. And he will say to the laborers, 'Bring forth, my friends, the harvest, for the time is come.' And he will bind the wheat in bundles, and carry them away to the barn. And he will say to the laborers, 'Bring forth, my friends, the harvest, for the time is come.' And he will bind the wheat in bundles, and carry them away to the barn.

QUALITY CHICKS
By P. L. Sanford, Formerly Professor
Poultry Extension, Pennsylvania
State College
Baby chicks are an investment and the purchaser of chicks should watch this investment with the same care he would exercise if investing in real estate, stocks or bonds. The price of baby chicks should not be the main consideration in purchasing them, but rather the value that is received per dollar expended. Two or three cents more in the cost of each pullet is insignificant, yet two or three cents per chick frequently seems a major consideration. It is not meant to infer that high priced chicks are necessarily the best, but thought may well be directed in purchasing chicks to the production that may be expected from them. Looking at chick purchases from the standpoint of an investment frequently clarifies the purchaser's mind as to the type and kind of chicks he will buy. Well bred chicks, free of disease, that are offered at a fair price easily become a good investment, while inferior chicks are a loss from the first day on.

KEEP OFF
"Oh, ma, may I go sledding for awhile?" asked Johnnie.
"No, son, I can't let you go. I am afraid you will get hurt," answered ma who was very busy with the dinner table.
"Oh, I am not baby. I won't get hurt," said Johnnie, downhearted.
"All right, don't bother me. Go ask your father," exclaimed ma.
"Oh, dad," may I go sledding until dinner is ready?" said Johnnie.
"All right, son, but don't get on the back of any cars along this road. Do you hear me?" called pa who was upstairs reading a newspaper.
"OK," called Johnnie running out the door, sled in his hand.
Not long after that Johnnie thought that it wouldn't harm him so he got on the back of a horse and wagon. After riding for about a half hour Johnnie let go and shot out in front of the horse. This startled the horse and he reared up on his hind legs. When he came down his front foot stepped on Johnnie's left hand. When Johnnie looked he found that his thumb was missing and blood was pouring all over the road. What a feeling it was to see that you had a hand without a thumb!
Johnnie never hung on the back of cars or wagons any more.

A SNOWBALL ACCIDENT
"Don't you think snowballing is a very dangerous sport?" asked Janet.
"Snowballing is all right in its place. It is, however, a very dangerous proposition out of its place," replied practical Anna.
This conversation had developed out of an incident we had witnessed the other day. It happened as follows:
As we were walking home from school we noticed a crowd of boys up the street throwing snowballs at passers-by. They were boys between the ages of ten and fifteen and were certainly old enough to know better.
As we came nearer, we saw a small boy come out of a nearby house and start up the street. When he approached the alley, the boys jumped out and threw snowballs at him. He began to run but all in vain, because they ran after him. They had just run a few yards when the small boy fell down on a slippery piece of ice. He tried to get up but could not.
"Let's get out of here," shouted one tough-looking boy of about fifteen.
"Yeah, I guess we better," replied another.
After they had retreated into the alley, Betty and Janet, who had run on ahead, had just reached the boy. By this time he was crying and complaining that his foot hurt him. He told us through his tears that he lived up the street.
Supported by Betty and Blanche, whose father was a doctor, and who had some experience herself, immediately began to examine the boy's leg. She found that he had sprained his ankle pretty badly, which meant that he would be unable to walk for several days at least.

This had been brought about through utter carelessness and rudeness on the part of the boys who had thrown the snowballs and then run away. This, although it is quite serious, could have been worse.
This has been a description of snowballing out of its place. As for this particular sport in its place I would say that a snowball fight between a crowd of boys or girls would be quite logical.
Doris Sheaffer, Grade 9.

FOR JOURNALISM COMMITTEE
Once upon a time there was a little boy whose name was Billy. One day he went to the woods to pick flowers. He heard a strange noise. It was a little Elf. A big white bird was flying toward him. Billy said I will drive the bird away. After he drove the bird away from the little Elf, the little Elf said, "I will take you to my house, it was one big dream. Just then he awoke from a big dream. ENERGY
Energy is the power to do work. We have proof that all energy comes from the sun. There are three types of energy, light, heat and chemical energy. This energy comes to us in the form of waves of varying lengths. Light waves are from .0004 to .0005 mm. long, while heat waves are about 2 mm. long.
Another source of heat (which comes indirectly from the sun) is the burning of various kinds of fuel. We also produce heat by mechanical methods. Savages produce heat by rubbing sticks together.
Heat is a form of energy needed by machines and animals. When an iron bar is pounded it will expand and grow warm because of molecular motion. Iron is made up of molecules. The molecules begin to hit each other harder and spread farther apart. This causes the iron to expand.
The law of the conservation of energy, energy can be transformed, but can neither be created nor destroyed, is one of the fundamental laws of nature.
Heat must often be transferred. This is done by means of conductors. Objects which won't conduct heat are called non-conductors. Other ways of transferring heat are:
1. By convection, in which the circulation of some of the water distributes the heat throughout the water.
2. By molecular motion.
3. By radiation, in which a non-conductor gives off heat when struck by a heat wave.
When gases are heated, they expand. This is true of air. Balloons and dirigibles are able to stay in the air because of this fact.

AN ACCIDENT
With two friends Jane went sledding without her mother's consent. They went out to Brown's hill. At first they were having quite a lot of fun. What they didn't like was climbing up the hill with their sleds. Janet, one of Jane's friends, suggested that they go down to the corner and hook on to some cars.
This suggestion was seconded, and they were soon down at the corner. When the cars stopped for the red light, Jane, Janet, and Louise were hooked on to the back of a car. They all thought that this was much more fun than sledding down the hill. After some time Janet remarked,

"Let's go home now. It's almost ten o'clock."
Let's just take one more turn before we go," answered Louise.
Again they hooked on to a car. As soon as the car that Jane was in back of started, it seemed to be going very fast. Crash! Bang! The car had suddenly stopped, and Jane went under it.
The next thing that she knew was that she was in the hospital with a broken leg and other scratches.
"Oh! if I had only followed mother's advice and stayed at home," sighed Jane.

RECENT STATE NEWS

Recovery Program Helps Delaware

Gerrish Gassaway, manager of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, and Chairman, Delaware Committee N. R. A., in a statement issued March 5, said that employment and business conditions in the Wilmington Area are very much better now than a year ago and are steadily improving. From a report covering 311 payrolls he found an increase of 4000 workers during the year, and that 947 persons had been added to the payrolls within the past 30 days. The following paragraph is part of Mr. Gassaway's statement:

Eliminating any partisan consideration, it must be admitted that conditions in our nation are materially better than we experienced a year ago. These conditions are reflected in Wilmington and Delaware the same as throughout the length and breadth of our land. Recovery measures, which have had the unqualified support of the majority of our people, irrespective of party affiliation, are in a great measure to be given credit for much of this improvement. There is yet much to be done. We are not entirely out of the woods. The courage and determination that has been expressed so vividly by Americans during the past year will continue to carry us forward.

500 Delaware Homes Kept In Owners' Hands

Thomas Baker Young, manager for Delaware of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, a federal recovery agency reports that the Corporation has saved 500 Delaware homes from passing out of their owners' hands since September 1, 1933. This was done partly by purchase of mortgages with bonds and by securing reduction of liens against the properties. The properties already saved represent approximately $750,000 in value and applications still to be handled represent probably $2,000,000. President Roosevelt's immediate plans for improving the service are expected by Mr. Young to increase its effectiveness. The Delaware work has brought expression of approval from Washington authorities.

Georgetown Elects New Mayor and Council

The recent town election in Georgetown became spirited when opposition crystallized to what is said to be unpopular decisions of the mayor and council about street repairs and other town interests. These officials were candidates for re-election. Other candidates were filed and without much warning the voters supported the new candidates two to one. The new town officers and votes received are: Mayor, Elton R. Wood, 157; councilmen, Herman Roach, 185; John F. Kaiser, 183;

Andrew J. Lynch, 181; Joseph G. Green, 168; Benjamin Faucett, 168; assessor, John W. King, 188; collector, George R. Workman, 155; treasurer, Howard J. Cooke, 253; auditors, Walter P. Townsend, 262; Edward B. Green, 253.

Lewes Has Flood When Snow Melts

Cellars and low first floors in several parts of Lewes suffered from flooding when last Friday's rain swelled the overflow of streets and drainage ways. The factory district, Kinnytown, had three feet of water in the streets, while the houses had as much as 14 inches of water above the first floor level. The fire department opened street outlets and pumped water from streets and cellars. The W. J. Warren Canning Company had just bought several thousand bushels of vegetable seed for spring planting, part of which was water-soaked. Firemen saved a maltese kitten which was marooned above deep water on top of a wooden post. Kitty urged them on with loud meows.

Seaford To Have City Manager

T. Scott Pures, head of the A. S. Woolley Company, fertilizer manufacturers, and prominent in Masonic and other lodge circles in lower Delaware, was elected mayor for a term of one year without opposition. Howard F. Callaway is the retiring mayor and George E. Warrington, merchant, and Karl K. Brown, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, are the retiring councilmen. Albert J. Lank and Sorin E. Thompson were elected in their places. The new mayor and council will elect a city manager to fill the offices of secretary, city treasurer, water superintendent, tax receiver and assessor, all these offices, now filled by separate citizens, being combined into one by council. The city manager will have his office in the city hall.

School Boy Runaway Brought Back Home

Throught the efforts of the local police, Thomas Baker, aged 16 years, who attends the Newark High School and lives near Landenberg, was found at Laurel, Md., Tuesday evening, only a few hours after word was received that he had run away. He is the son of Arthur Baker. The boy came to school as usual at 8.30 Monday morning. He put his books in his desk and then left. When he did not return after school, his father notified the Newark police and they notified police of Maryland, it being learned that Thomas would probably try to go south. He hitch hiked as far as Laurel, Md., where he was found Tuesday night. He will be returned to his home.

Newark M. E. Church Notes

Preparations are going forward for the coming of the Conference April 4th. The Housing Committee has been doing its work and reports a fine response, with a spirit of cooperation manifest to meet the needs in a fine way. Mr. W. F. Lindell is the Chairman of this committee.

The Church Building is being put in shape for the visitors; floors are being cleaned, new chairs added to the equipment; tables, and other accessories are being provided; a flood light has been installed to illumine the Parking Space in the rear of the Church. Mr. E. F. Dawson is the Chairman of the Committee on the Building. Consent has been secured to use the Campbell lot, adjoining the Church, and the "School Lot" adjoining, and the lot between the Old Academy and the Fire House, for parking space, and this will relieve the congestion on the streets of the town. Mr. Herman Wollaston is the chairman of this part of the work.

The dining hall and kitchen will be a busy place during the session. Meals will be served at dinner and supper each day from Wednesday noon 'till Monday noon inclusive. The helpers will work in relays, according to a schedule being worked out. This service will be for the Ministers, the Laymen, and all visitors. Mrs. George M. Phipps is the chairman of this department.

There will be an office set up; stenographers and typewriters will be available; a post office will be provided; a pay station telephone will be installed for the convenience of the Congress; and there will be also a "checking department" for hats, coats, and belongings, of which Miss Edna Campbell is the chairman.

The examinations will be held in the Church, beginning on Tuesday morning, April 3d, at 9:00 and running through the day. On Tuesday night there will be a "Fellowship Hour" with an organ recital and musical numbers by the Hanover Presbyterian Glee Club of Wilmington, Miss Sarah Hudson White, organist and directress. To this and to all the services and activities of the Conference the Public is cordially invited.

Notice to Federal Income Taxpayers

A representative of the Federal Income Tax Office will be at this Bank daily until March 15th to assist Taxpayers in preparing their Income Tax Returns.

You are cordially invited to use this service.

STYLE SHOW COMING

College Girls and 4 H Club Members Will Act As Models; Mitchell Hall, March 22; Open to the Public

The Home Demonstration Clubs of New Castle County are planning a Spring Style Show to be held in Mitchell Hall, Thursday, March 22. The Style Show will be staged by Miss Catherine Cleveland, of the Cotton Textile Institute of New York City. Miss Cleveland will bring with her 40 to 45 complete costumes made up especially for this occasion from the new spring cotton fabrics. These costumes will be modeled by the college girls, 4-H Club girls and adults. "There will be styles suitable for all of these ages," states Mrs. Kate Hendley Daugherty, Home Demonstration Agent for New Castle County. "The Style Revue will begin promptly at two o'clock," continues Mrs. Daugherty, "but a very interesting program has been planned for the entire day beginning at 10.30 in the morning. Miss Cleveland will give an illustrated lecture on the 'Uses of the New Spring Cotton Fabrics.' She will show material suitable for curtains, draperies, slip covers, luncheon sets and clothing.

"World War Veterans in Government Hospitals are adopted by groups throughout the country and receive gay and gifts on each holiday season throughout the year. In one of the Massachusetts' Hospitals a Cookie Jar is kept filled with home made sweets which have been baked by the high school girls. The same group of high school students keep the recreation room attractive with bright colored cotrone sofa cushions and table runners. The boys in their shop classes make bridge lamps and cribbage boards for the men.

"The Junior Red Cross is not a program for the United States alone. We have a membership of over eleven million in forty-nine different countries in the world. All of the boys and girls are carrying on worthwhile services in a similar manner to those in the United States. Through International Correspondence the pupils in all these countries are given the opportunity to exchange school and handwork. Hundreds of portfolios pass through National Headquarters in Washington each year. Not only albums are exchanged, but collections of minerals, dolls and school-work in general are sent from one group to another. This exchange grew out of the sending of Christmas boxes, which originated following the war.

"Students in other countries would have been without gifts on Christmas if the boys and girls in the United States had not taken it upon themselves to supply these boxes. Thank you letters were of course written by the recipients of these gifts. The letters were so interesting that the American boys and girls answered them, and in this way, a friendship was begun which now reaches to all countries enrolled in the Junior Red Cross. The Christmas boxes are still sent. Just this past year, a school in Poland wrote to a school in Iowa, and in thanking the pupils for their gift said they enjoyed them very much, but they asked, 'What are these glass balls you call marbles? What do you do with them? How are they used?' In answering this question the Iowa school told about the marbles and asked what games were played in the Polish School. This school sent the diagrams for various types of athletics carried on in their country.

"And so it goes. Through the Junior Red Cross the opportunity of breaking down barriers is presented to all countries. Some years ago we received a short poem in one of our portfolios which read, 'I thought that foreign children came from far across the sea, until I had a letter from a boy in Italy. Dear little foreign friend, it said as plain as plain could be, now I wonder who is foreign, the other boy or me.' There is an old saying which reads, 'Love makes the world go round,' but we have changed it to say, 'Junior Red Cross makes love go round the world.'

Newark New Century Club News

The Newark New Century Club enjoyed a delightful meeting on Monday of this week. The Club hostesses were Mrs. Harvey Steele, Mrs. C. M. Myers, Mrs. S. A. Slack and Mrs. George D. Plummer.

The first enjoyable feature of the afternoon was a covered Dish Luncheon which was planned by the Ways and Means Committee under the capable leadership of Mrs. George Rhodes, chairman and with her aides, Mrs. Leonard Rhoades, Mrs. R. Heim, Mrs. J. Q. Smith, Mrs. W. A. Wilkinson, Mrs. G. D. Plummer, Mrs. Paul Lovett, Mrs. W. J. Barnard, Mrs. Harry Davis, Miss M. Elsie Wright, Mrs. Louise Hendey, Mrs. Donald Armstrong, Mrs. R. T. Jones, Miss Anna Frazier, Mrs. Harold Tiffany and Mrs. C. E. Ewing.

The tables were daintily arranged with candles and decorations of green, reminders of St. Patrick's Day. Seventy members and guests gathered around the festive board.

The business meeting was held in the Club room with Mrs. F. A. Wheeler presiding. Mrs. Donald Armstrong was welcomed as a new member.

Mrs. Warren Ellis, chairman of the nominating committee, for the new officers, urged that club members send at once to her their lists of nominees as election time is near.

Mrs. C. W. Rhodes announced that $15 was realized from the days' Luncheon fees. Her committee, the Ways and Means, is greatly encouraged by the ready cooperation of the members to help raise the $100 needed before the end of the club year. Fifteen more members volunteered to make or give money: Mrs. C. A. McCue, Mrs. G. W. Schuster, Mrs. C. M. Myers, Mrs. J. F. Daugherty, Mrs. Wm. Lyman, Mrs. Louise Hendey, Mrs. Wm. Hayes, Mrs. Weihe, Mrs. C. E. Ewing, Mrs. G. S. Skinner, Mrs. Lewis Darrell, Mrs. G. R. Sinclair, Mrs. R. T. Jones, Mrs. W. A. Wilkinson, Mrs. Daniel Thompson, Mrs. J. P. Cann, Miss Elsie Wright, Mrs. Ed. Richards, Mrs. Alice Larson, and Mrs. Arthur Hauber.

The Welfare Committee, Mrs. Ed. Richards, chairman, gave an excellent report of the work which their committee was doing the past month. During the month of February, her committee provided food for 5 families ($15.66) and milk for 2 families (53c) coal for 7 families ($27.19) paid bill for tooth brushes placed in Christmas baskets ($3.00). These items totaled $49.38. In addition to the above good work, the Pythian Sisters and Eastern Star supplied a large basket of provisions to one of our Newark families. A family in which there were six children was furnished with blankets, stockings, underwear, sleeping garments and a dress from the Needlework Guild. A child's snow suit was given by a member of the club. Two suits of clothing were donated. Shoes were donated from the Needle Work Guild, underwear, shirts, stockings and a jacket were donated by the Town Council and were given to a family of four boys. On recommendation of the Committee, 3 families were taken over by the State Emergency Relief Committee.

An invitation was received from Mrs. Kate Hendley Daugherty inviting Club members to attend the Achievement Day Exercises at Wolf Hall for the 4-H Clubs on March 22nd. An afternoon attraction will be a lecture by Miss Cleveland on "Spring Textiles." There will be a style show in connection with her talk. Mrs. Chesley Stewart announced a movie benefit would be given by Women's College on March 7 and 8 and the afternoon of the 10th at the local theatre. On March 7 and 8 the picture is "Design for Living" and on the 10th it will be "Sitting Pretty." She announced that the money raised would be used to pay worthy student's college tuition.

After the general business meeting, a treat was in store in the form of a play, "A Lady to Call." The play was cleverly enacted by three members of the Dramatic Committee, Mrs. E. B. Crooks as "Eliza," Mrs. H. S. Gabriel as "Ann," and Mrs. Paul Lovett as "The Lady."

Mrs. R. T. Jones, chairman of Education, presented Miss Etta Wilson, Executive Secretary of the Delaware Citizens League who gave a talk urging the club to mobilize for the protection of our Delaware Youth. For the purpose of focusing the attention of thinking citizens upon the educational needs of the State, Miss Wilson said luncheons had been planned when brilliant speakers, familiar with Delaware problems, would discuss questions of the day. All club members were invited to these luncheons. Club members were especially asked to join the Delaware Citizens Association. The fee is only $1.00.

As a pleasing coincidence, Miss Wilson's talk was given accent by a group of school children singing. Miss Johnson, principal of the elementary school presented Miss Vallance and Miss Werner, two of the elementary school teachers whose 5th and 6th grade boys and girls rendered lullabies and folk songs in a pleasing manner. Their musical program proved to the listeners that music is vital to school life and must be kept in the school system. Songs rendered: Fifth grade, "Fairies," "Fox and Grapes," Sixth Grade, "The Tempest," "Night Song," "Tally Ho."
