Reward offered in Wheeler case

The family of John W. Wheeler has offered a $25,000 award on information that would lead to those who killed him late last year.

Colm Connelly, who said he is now representing the Wheeler family in its dealings with law enforcement, issued the following statement from the family on Sunday regarding the case:

"We are grateful for the outpouring of sympathy and concern we have received over the past few weeks and for the efforts of the law enforcement authorities to uncover the circumstances surrounding Jack's death. We have suffered a heartbreaking loss, and not knowing how Jack died amplifies the devastation we feel. Our hope in offering this reward is to encourage anyone who may have helpful information to come forward so that justice can be served."

Connolly went on to praise the efforts of the Newark Police Department in cooperating with the family and Connelly in the case. Newark Police will distribute a poster announcing the award in Newark.

5-year figures show drop in crime

By DOUG RAINEY

DRANEY@CHESPUB.COM

Crime is still declining in Newark, although the city did see an uptick in a couple of categories last year.

Figures from the Newark Police Department that compare various types of crime over a five-year period show a nearly 19 percent decline in thefts, a 67 percent drop in vehicle thefts, a 53 percent drop in robberies, a 30 percent decline in rape cases and a 9 percent decline in burglaries. Aggravated assaults were the one area to see an increase over the five-period, with a nearly 15 percent rise.

Master Cpl. Gerald Bryda of the Newark Police Department noted that aggravated assault remains a relatively rare crime in the city, with 54 incidents in 2010, compared to 47 in 2006. Bryda also says it is one area where crime-fighting efforts have a limited impact, since the felony assaults often take place during domestic disputes or occur spontaneously. Also included in the felony assault numbers are incidents of aggravating menacing - the act of threatening someone with a gun or other weapon.

According to Bryda, pro-active efforts and technology are have made a difference in combating other crimes. The installation of surveillance cameras is allow officers to keep a close eye on Main Street and other areas. In one case, a lieutenant monitoring

Two officers hurt chasing fugitive

On January 21, Newark Police were dispatched to Ewings Towing, located at 1111 Otts Chapel Rd., where a local fugitive was attempting to retrieve his impounded vehicle from the lot. Employees used a tow truck to block the entrance/exit to the rear yard where the car was located. The suspect, Stephen Grabowski, 26, of New Castle, ran when he saw the police arrive and climbed the fence to avoid arrest. Grabowski is also wanted on charges of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia and resisting arrest.

Both authorities and employees ran after Grabowski in an attempt to capture him. The suspect fled on foot towards the Otts Chapel Rd.

Bridge and continued running parallel to the Amtrak railroad tracks towards the Life Church, located nearby. Grabowski saw that he was going to be cut off and ran up the hill towards Elkton Rd., where he was finally captured behind the Lear Corporation. During the pursuit, one officer sustained a fracture to a finger on his right hand and several cuts as a result of scaling the barbed wire fence at the initial scene. Another officer ripped his uniform and received several small lacerations when he also climbed the same fence.

Grabowski was charged with two counts of Assault 2nd Degree, Intentionally Injuring a Law Enforcement Officer; two counts Criminal Mischief Under $1,000 Damage Property; and one count of resisting arrest. The suspect was processed by Newark Police for the above charges and transported by New Castle County Police for the warrant on his former charges.

Suspects clean out paint shop

Newark Police are investigating last Sunday's break-in at the Nucar Pontiac's paint shop, where several vehicles and the shop itself had multiple items removed.

Employees with the business, located at 250 E. Cleveland Ave., discovered that items such as air guns, paint sprayers, buffers, sanders, and other miscellaneous tools had been taken from their respective stations in the shop. A further inspection showed that several cars that were parked in bays for service had also been rummaged through and had items missing, including a vehicle that had its wheels removed in the burglary. Estimates value all the stolen merchandise at over $4,000.

Police found that a chain securing a rear gate had been cut, leading authorities to believe that this was the initial point of entry. Employees told officers that a rear door might have been left unsecured, allowing the suspects access to the building's interior.

No video surveillance footage has been recovered, so far. The case is being forwarded to the Criminal Investigation Division for further review.

NHS reports three missing computers

A librarian with Newark High School told officers that sometime between Friday, January 21 and Monday, January 24, three Apple Mac Book computers were removed from the school library. Each computer is valued at $1,100.

A statement from the librarian revealed that the area was locked when she left at 3 p.m. on the 21st and was still locked when she opened at 8 a.m. on the 24th. She further stated that all computers were secured and locked before she had left for the weekend.

The computers had been kept in place with a locking mechanism similar to a bike chain. The chains were still evident, but police saw that the locks had been forcibly removed.

The school had been locked up for most of the weekend,

Former defense official assaulted, beaten to death

▶ WHEELER, from 1

Connolly is a former U.S. District Attorney for Delaware who prosecuted the case of Thomas Capano, who is serving life in prison for the death of Ann Marie Fahey, a former secretary for then Gov. Tom Carper. Connolly is now at the Wilmington office of the law firm of Morgan Lewis.

"It is our hope that this reward will prompt individuals with information to call the police which may allow us to narrow our focus and hopefully lead us to the person responsible for his death," Newark Police Department spokesman, Lt. Mark A. Farrall stated while sending along a copy of the poster.

The Delaware Office of the Chief Medical Examiner announced on Friday that John P. Wheeler, III, whose body was found at the Cherry Island Landfill in Wilmington, died as a result of blunt force trauma after being assaulted.

Newark Police detectives continue to state that they are investigating new information on the case as it is received and continue to look at video taken during the last hours of Wheeler's life in downtown Wilmington and Newark.

Police reported Wheeler appeared to be confused and was mistaken by some as being homeless as he wandered around downtown Wilmington. He spent a large amount of time in the Nemours building, where he visited the Delaware Small Business Administration office. To date, no footage or other evidence has been reported regarding his whereabouts on Dec. 30th after he was seen leaving the building.

In a weekly city report, the Newark department noted that the "Federal Bureau of Investigation continues to be a tremendous asset in the technological aspects of the investigation."

Wheeler's body was found in a Wilmington landfill in the morning hours of New Year's Eve. The Newark Police Department became the lead agency in the case after it was determined that Wheeler's body was placed in a commercial dumpster in the city.

He was a defense analyst and held positions in the Defense Department. He is also widely credited with being a driving force behind the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Wheeler resided in Old New Castle and at the time of his death was involved in a legal dispute with a property owner who was building a home that blocked his view of the river and other areas.

The lack of suspects in the case has led to intense speculation on who might have been behind his death. The family's involvement in the case has also been puzzling to some observers. Often, in such cases, one member of the family will step forward as a spokesperson or a lawyer is hired at the outset.

Up until the statements by Connolly, the family had released statements through the Newark Police Department asking for privacy and re-integrating that it had no comment on the case.

The Benefits of Cross-Age Teaching

By KAREN JOHNSTON

UD COOPERATIVE EXTENSION

Imagine younger students totally focused on a presenter. There is no shuffling in their chairs, or doodling on the paper, or sidebar conversations. The students are entranced by the teenager delivering the Health Rocks! message. As an educator, I often stand in awe of this sight, as kids aren't always this attentive to adult teachers. But it is true, teens can really help younger children learn and they learn while they are at it with this model of cross-age teaching experiences.

4-H has grown using the concepts of adult mentors, youth and adult partnership, and civic engagement. Many young people launched their journey into adulthood through life skills education and hands on learning. The tradition continues, with young people playing vital roles in their communities as educators and role models. Today we take this teaching and learning experience one step farther with cross-age teaching.

One example of cross-age teaching in the 4-H program is Health Rocks! Local high school students instruct students in grades 3-8 in tobacco, alcohol and drug prevention education. The program promotes positive youth development through youth and adult partnership and older youth teaching younger youth. Students learn life skills that help them make healthy choices and feel good about the decisions they are making.

With Health Rocks! teens serve as role models for younger youth. It is a remarkable concept, as both parties involved have been shown to reap the benefits of learning, friendship, and social growth. Students are more apt to talk with peers about important issues than they are with adults, and the smaller age disparity helps teen-teachers present material in terms that youth are more likely to understand.

While all of these benefits help to improve students' well-being and knowledge, teen teachers are also receiving a life-changing experience. Cross-age teaching provides teen teachers with an opportunity to discover their own creativity and competence, and their involvement provides them with a sense of belonging. Teen teachers also benefit from the review of topics taught during the drug education program, contributing to their own drug-free lifestyle. Some researchers would go as far as to say that it is the most effective way of providing opportunities for positive youth development and encouraging youth to avoid delinquent behaviors.

The teens develop speaking skills, organizational skills, classroom management skills, and increased self-confidence. The Health Rocks! curriculum has been developed so that teens are able to understand and present the material in a fun and engaging fashion. This curriculum focuses on youth as active participants in their own development. It has often been said that when we really want to learn a topic, teach it. That learning occurs for our teen teachers. In addition to helping other young people, they develop their own goal setting and decision making skills, as well as their commitment to avoiding risky behavior.

The Health Rocks! cross-age teaching model includes committed adults working with the teens, opportunities for teens to be creative and to celebrate their successes, and their involvement in the learning and teaching processes.

If you have a teen who is interested in leadership, public speaking, or teaching, there is an opportunity for them to learn about this program. On Saturday, February 12, 2011, a train-the-trainer event is being held at the New Castle County Cooperative Extension Office on 461 Wyoming Road from 9:30 am - 2:00 pm, and a light lunch will be provided. For more information about Health Rocks! visit the website at <http://www.4-h.org/youth-development-programs/kids-health/preventative-health-safety/health-rocks/>. To register for the local training, call Karen Johnston at 302-831-8866 or email krjohn@udel.edu.

iPod Touches taken from local business Employees working at Smart Button on Creek View Road, in Newark reported that two iPod Touch computer devices were taken from desks located in the office. Each device is valued at $299.

A representative with the firm stated that all doors were secured the night before and the morning after the event took place. No employee was suspected by the company, but the representative said that their cleaning service had only been hired a month ago. Police contacted the cleaning company, but have had trouble receiving a list of employees who clean the business. The case is pending active until all possible suspects have been questioned by authorities.

Police: Man brought son on drug run

The New Castle County Mobile Enforcement Team (M.E.T.) has arrested Mark

Mark Cool

Cool, 29, who resides in the unit block of Sheldrake Road in the community of Sherwood Forest in the Ogletown area, south of Newark.

He was charged with drug and traffic offenses after it was discovered that he was attempting to deliver a counterfeit substance and sell it as cocaine, while his three-year-old son was present.

On Wednesday at 4:30 p.m., officers from the Mobile Enforcement Team responded to Cool's home after receiving information that Cool was making drug deliveries from the residence.

When officers arrived, Cool was observed entering his vehicle with his son and leaving the area. A computer inquiry revealed that Cool was driving with a suspended license, and a car stop was conducted shortly thereafter in the Brookside Shopping Center.

During the stop, officers observed a baggie that contained a white powdery substance on the floor in front of Cool's son. Further investigation revealed that the substance located in the vehicle was "fleur" and Cool had taken to the shopping center in an attempt to sell the "fleur" as cocaine. Cool was then taken into custody without incident.

Cool was charged with possession with intent to deliver a counterfeit controlled substance, driving with a suspended license and unlawfully dealing with a child. He was arraigned and committed to the Howard Young Correctional Institute after failing to post $10,550 cash bail and was ordered to have no contact with his son.

Donation bucket turns up missing

Last Sunday, a man collecting money for the Veterans Support Organization at the Acme on Elkton Rd. told officers that an unknown suspect had removed a bucket containing an estimated $150 in donations. The man stated that he had set up a bucket at each entrance to the store and had checked on them periodically throughout the day. Around 6 p.m., he noticed that one of the buckets had been removed from its stand.

Newark Police interviewed store employees and reviewed video footage and determined that the bucket was taken between 5:30 and 6:00 p.m. that day. No persons were seen on film or by employees taking the bucket or placing it in a shopping cart. No physical evidence was left at the scene.

The case is pending inactive until further evidence is found or a suspect is named.

Crime still declining in Newark

the camera detected crime in progress and was able to dispatch officers to the scene.

Car thefts are also down dramatically, although Bryda says there is an "ebb and flow" resulting from demand for parts or particular types of vehicles. He also suspects that technology that can track stolen vehicles is playing a part.

Burglaries was one area that saw an uptick between 2009 and 2010, reflecting an increase in such activity in the region. The department has focused on analyzing burglaries and patrolling areas that are tempting targets, such as student housing over the holidays. It has also arrested suspects in recent weeks tied to a number of break-ins, Bryda noted.

Murder and manslaughter remain rare crimes in Newark. After seeing no murders in 2006 and 2007, the city has seen one murder a year since, with two homicides in 2010. By contrast, Wilmington has seen two dozen or more murders per year.

Legislator hails foreclosure change

A court-ordered change to the state's Residential Mortgage Foreclosure Mediation Program could help families facing foreclosure stay in their homes, a Newark legislator said this week.

The changes to the state's foreclosure mediation program take effect immediately and double the amount of time a homeowner facing foreclosure can enter the mediation program from 15 to 30 days, a change that Rep. John A. Kowalko said might seem simple, but makes a huge difference. Kowalko has been active in efforts in foreclosure mediation efforts.

"People who are eligible for this program are at their last gasp, holding on to a fraying rope while hanging over a cliff," said Rep. Kowalko, D-Newark. "Two weeks can go by in the blink of an eye. Doubling the time for a person to enter this mediation program gives people who are on the verge of homelessness a few more precious moments to settle their thoughts, focus and hopefully work out a solution to stay in their homes. It provides stability and will increase the accessibility and effectiveness of the overall program."

An administrative directive issued on January 20 by Superior Court President Judge James T. Vaughn Jr. made some modifications to the state's mortgage foreclosure mediation program, which was created in September 2009. The program was designed to provide assistance to homeowners and lenders, via a trained mediator, to help negotiate possible alternatives to foreclosure actions.

When a foreclosure action is taken against a homeowner, notification is sent to the homeowner advising them to seek counseling with a Housing and Urban Development-certified counseling agency. Under the former rules, a homeowner had 15 days to seek counseling. A steering committee of attorneys for borrowers and lenders, bankers, advocates and housing counselors recommended the change, which Judge Vaughn said was the right decision.

"The Superior Court continues to fully support the Mortgage Foreclosure Mediation Program," Judge Vaughn said. "When the program was created, we were aware that changes may be needed to improve it. The changes now recommended by the committee do that and the decision to approve them was an easy one for the Court. The program continues to be committed to give homeowners the opportunity to negotiate an alternative to foreclosure, without affecting substantial rights of lenders."

The new administrative directive also adds an additional mediation day in New Castle County.

According to Community Legal Aid Society, since the program's inception in September 2009 through June 30, 2010, 100 homeowners have qualified for the mediation program. Seven have worked out agreements to avoid losing their homes, while another 18 have reached an agreement outside the program. Another 31 homeowners have agreed to continue the mediation so the parties can collect and exchange additional information. The parties often exchange the information prior to the next mediation and resolve the matter outside the mediation program.

"We very much welcome the actions taken by Judge Vaughn and the Steering Committee which improve the Residential Mortgage Foreclosure Mediation Program and, specifically, increase access to homeowners by changing the application time from 15 to 30 days," said Delaware State Housing Authority (DSHA) Director Anas Ben Addi. "We strongly encourage anyone facing foreclosure to take full advantage of this program, as well as other innovative foreclosure prevention resources. Governor Markell, DSHA and our many partners continue working hard to expand programs like mediation, housing counseling and DEMAP, and to develop new tools that will create more positive outcomes and keep Delaware families in their homes."

Tyler Hrycak's time at Valley Forge pays off

By JON BUZBY

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

It's not easy being patient. It's especially not easy for a high school senior with aspirations to play Division I football.

But St. Mark's graduate Tyler Hrycak was left with no other choice when, following a stellar senior season when the 6-foot-2 quarterback led the Spartans to the 2009 championship game, he received no scholarship offers from Division I-A programs.

Instead of accepting one of a few offers from division I-AA and II schools, Hrycak instead chose to enroll at Valley Forge Military Academy (VFMA) and play for coach and former NFL quarterback, Glenn Foley.

"I learned a lot from all my experiences at Valley Forge and from Coach Foley," Hrycak said during a recent interview. "I feel everything happens for a reason and you end up where you're supposed to end up."

It turns out Hrycak, who quarterbacked VFMA to an 8-0 season this past fall, will end up playing Division I football after all, at Western Michigan University on a full scholarship.

"I was excited to get the offer," he said, "but now I feel like I need to work even harder than before so that I am ready to compete at the D-I level."

The members of Western Michigan's coaching staff are no strangers to Delaware high school football. Head coach Bill Cubit is a University of Delaware graduate and defensive coordinator David Cohen was an assistant under former UD coach Tubby Raymond.

"Western Michigan was the best fit for me," Hrycak, who also had an offer from Temple, said. "I really liked Coach Cubit and the rest of the coaching staff and other players."

A three-sport athlete at St. Mark's, Hrycak felt one of the reasons that he didn't get any Div. I offers last year was because he only started for one season. St. Mark's coach John Wilson was thrilled for his former quarterback.

"It has always been Tyler's goal to be a Division I quarterback," Wilson said in an e-mail. "He's worked hard for this, he deserves it, and I wish him the best."

Hrycak is quick to credit Foley for taking his game to another level and preparing him to take this next step.

"[Coach] broke down my mechanics and told me exactly what I needed to correct," he said. "He taught me how to push myself whether we were on the field at 6 a.m. running gassers or throwing routes."

Bill Harman, a local high school coach who said in an interview last summer he felt Hrycak had the ability to play at the next level, couldn't be happier for his former pupil.

"I am excited for him and think we all trusted the process would work out for him,"

Harman said. "I thought his parents did a great job supporting him and now he has fulfilled his goal to compete in a Div. I program."

"There's a saying by a French philosopher I live by: It's good to have an end to journey towards, but it is the journey in the end that matters. ... He has grown up not only as a football player, but as a man. And that, to me, is the most pleasurable part of this."

Hrycak plans to major in exercise science with a minor in management. Although he will not be enrolled in spring classes at Western Michigan, he does plan to attend spring practices and meetings. He'll enroll in the fall of 2011 and report to practice in August along with other elite Div. I athletes from around the country. And when he packs his bags and heads to Kalamazoo, he'll not only fulfill a personal goal of his own, but one that his parents couldn't be prouder to see him achieve.

"We are thrilled that Tyler's hard work and perseverance paid off for him," said Julie Burns, Hrycak's mother. "He worked very hard to overcome adversity in pursuit of his dream, which was to play quarterback for a Division I university. I am so proud of his athletic accomplishments, but even prouder of the person that he has become."

For Hrycak, patience proved to be a virtue.

Quarterback Tyler Hrycak is headed to Western Michigan, after leading Valley Forge Military Academy to a perfect record.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

Car in House, January 1, 2008

Life in Newark is interesting, enriching, exciting, and sometimes has its unusual moments. This week's Out of the Attic item is a W. T. McLain picture of a New Year's Day 2008 uninvited "guest" in a home at the corner of Apple Road and Dallas Avenue. The car had been traveling east on Chrysler Avenue onto Dallas Avenue when it went out of control, cut across the intersection, and slammed into the house. Despite being a holiday, Newark's volunteer first responders were soon at the scene as the Aetna Hose, Hook, and Ladder Co. sent fire, rescue, and ambulance units. In addition, the Elsmere Volunteer Fire Company sent a specialty unit with the equipment, the material, and the manpower trained to stabilize and shore structural damage. This unit is part of the intricate mutual support network among the volunteer companies in the tri-state area.

Visit the Newark History Museum located at the historic passenger train station on South College Avenue. Tax help offered Free tax assistance and preparation for taxpayers with low- and moderate- income, with special attention to those age 60 and older, is available from AARP Tax-Aide from February 1 through April 15. You do not need to be a member of AARP or a retiree to use this service.

AARP Tax-Aide volunteers, trained in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service, will offer help with personal income tax returns at numerous locations around the state of Delaware.

The following sites are available in Newark: Marydale Retirement Village (March 3 Only- CALL for Times), the Newark Free Library 302-731-7550 (Wednesdays 5-9:00 p.m.) and Newark Senior Center 302-737-2336 (Fridays 8 a.m.-12:00 noon).

"I really enjoy volunteering for AARP Tax-Aide. The taxpayer is so appreciative of having this resource," said John McKiernan, AARP Tax Aide State Coordinator. "Tax law can often be confusing. AARP Tax-Aide volunteers can make the process of filling out tax returns a whole lot easier." John added that he has met many new people through volunteering.

Last year, 110 AARP Tax-Aide volunteers helped more than 10,000 people file their federal, state and local tax returns. The program is offered at approximately 58 E-File sites in the First State including senior centers, libraries and other convenient locations.

Call this toll-free number, 1-888-AARPNOW (1-888-227-7669) or visit our Web site at www.aarp.org/taxaide, during this tax season, to locate an AARP Tax-Aide site near you.

AARP Tax-Aide is a program of the AARP Foundation, offered in conjunction with the IRS.

English Language Institute's garden a taste of home

The University of Delaware's English Language Institute (ELI) helps to improve the English language skills of scores of students each year, some who are seeking a U.S. degree, others who need English for jobs in their home countries. The institute's host families, International Culture Club and other programs work to alleviate culture shock.

And now a community garden at the institute offers the students a fresh-grown taste of home. Located in the backyard of the institute, on West Main Street in Newark, the garden had its first harvest this fall, says Chad Nelson, one of the garden's organizers and a UD assistant professor of landscape design.

"During our first season, we planted bok choy, escarole, garlic, root vegetables and other crops used in some of the countries that ELI students hail from," says Nelson. "We're mapping out our 2011 plant list now and plan to grow even more international favorites, perhaps snow peas, or chrysanthemums for their edible leaves."

"The garden brings together not only ELI students, tutors and staffers but anyone in the UD community who's interested in local, sustainable food production," adds Nelson.

"Right now, our most active volunteers aren't from the institute but we expect to see more international students involved this spring."

The garden threw a harvest party at the end of the fall semester that attracted throngs of international students. Richie Colliss, chef at Newark's Cucina di Napoli, used the garden's freshly harvested veggies to whip up cold chicken salad with peanuts and other tasty fare. Like everyone else involved, Colliss volunteered his time.

"The ELI garden has been a real team effort," notes Nelson. "Mike Popovich with the Garden for the Community provided a lot of help. Bill Barts, UD's greenhouse manager, started our seeds. And Master Gardeners have volunteered their time, including Meloria Davis, who had already been active at ELI as a tutor."

Garden organizer Dan Kasper has devoted hundreds of hours to the project. A doctoral student at UD's Center for Energy and Environmental Policy, Kasper's dissertation research focuses on community and home gardening.

"I am a strong advocate, both personally and academically, for growing your own food," says Kasper. "Personal food production has environmental, economic, social, health and energy benefits, and some would even say spiritual benefits."

A view of the gardens from last year. Work is now under way to expand international offerings.

The 40-foot by 30-foot-long garden recently received a grant from UD's Sustainability Task Force that will fund a rain harvesting system, composting system and other eco-friendly enhancements.

Garden organizers also are working with ELI staffers to incorporate the garden into the institute's curriculum. Language tutorials will take place amidst the cucumbers and tomatoes.

"The garden provides an immersive, hands-on approach to learning English, nutrition and ways to help the environment through gardening. It's also an opportunity for second language English learners to connect with the broader UD community," notes Carol

Williams, an instructor at the institute. "If ELI students may be somewhat shy and reluctant to walk up and introduce themselves to someone on campus, planting cabbage or bok choy with UD students might spark conversation and lead to new friendships."

Future plans include possible production plots for local restaurants. And Kasper is hoping to grow perennials, including asparagus, blueberries, strawberries and raspberries. "One of the great things about this project is that decisions are made on a collaborative basis," says Kasper. "I'm excited to see what others want to grow."

Program aims to cut Newark energy costs

The City of Newark announced a partnership with Honeywell to implement a Guaranteed Energy Savings Improvement Program, intended to assist Newark in upgrading infrastructure while reducing its energy and operational expenses. The upgrades will provide Newark with the opportunity to reduce utility costs and carbon emissions.

Once improvements are fully identified, work will be funded through the guaranteed energy savings generated.

Tax or other funds will not be used. Honeywell conducted a preliminary energy audit to help Newark secure Energy Efficiency Conservation Block Grant funding (stimulus money), which has since funded three energy saving projects — the installation of energy efficient windows, lighting retrofits and occupancy sensors in the Municipal Building and the purchase of LED street lights for Main Street.

“We’re very excited about the possibility of implementing additional energy conservation measures within our facilities in the near future. Making these changes always made sense, but it wasn’t until Delaware’s Sustainable Energy Utility (SEU) brought its expertise and guidance to the process that made moving forward on a larger scale possible for Newark” said Carol Houck, assistant to the City Manager.

The Guaranteed Energy Savings Improvement Plan will include a detailed analysis of facilities to identify areas for improvements. The analysis will be conducted at the Municipal Building and Police facility, the George Wilson Community Center, the maintenance facility, at water plants and pump stations. The plan will focus on upgrading heating and ventilation and air-conditioning (HVAC) equipment, mechanical, building envelope improvements, lighting systems, as well as building automation systems.

Elkton Rd. info session slated

The Department of Transportation (DelDOT) announces an informational session on construction activities for improvements to Elkton Road from Casho Mill Road to Delaware Avenue. The session will be held on Feb.22 in the City of Newark Council Chamber. The public is invited to attend any time between 4:00 pm and 7:00 pm.

Construction began in October 2010 and is anticipated to last until the Fall of 2012. The improvements include:

- Reconstructing the pavement, improving pedestrian, bicycle, transit facilities, and intersection improvements.

- Improvements to the Elkton Road/Casho Mill Road intersection include adding a second eastbound left-turn lane on Elkton Road, and providing a left-turn from Casho Mill Road onto eastbound Elkton Road.

- Improvements to the Elkton Road/Apple Road intersection include adding a westbound right-turn lane on Elkton Road and a southbound right-turn lane on Apple Road.

- Elkton Road from Apple Road to Delaware Avenue will be reconstructed to provide one-lane in each direction with a center-turn lane.

At times, there will be nighttime construction to address traffic and safety issues. Detours of some streets adjacent to Elkton Road during some of the construction phases are also planned.

This location is accessible to persons having disabilities. Any person having special needs or requiring special aid, such as an interpreter for the hearing impaired, is requested to contact DelDOT by phone or mail one week in advance.

For further information contact Public Relations at 1-800-652-5600 (in DE) or 302-760-2080.

DOWNTOWN POSTINGS

So far, one candidate has filed for council seat

So far, only one candidate has emerged to run for the 1st District seat vacated by Newark Councilman Paul Pomeroy, a vocal advocate for Main Street and economic development in the city.

Robyn Harland of Ethan Allen Court has filed papers with the office of City Secretary to serve as a council member.

If elected, Harland would be the only woman on the council. The district includes the west side of Newark and includes a small portion of Main Street, above the Deer Park.

Earlier, a former city worker took out papers for the council post, but later returned to city employment and is barred from running. Harland attended the most recent council meeting.

So far no one else has taken out papers in the district. Candidates have until March to file. If no other candidate emerges, an election will not be held.

Last year, Pomeroy, an advertising agency executive, announced he would not seek another term on the council, citing a desire to spend more time with his family and his job duties.

New lunch options

Klondike Kate’s has upped the ante on Sunday brunch offerings. In January, the Main Street establishment rolled out an expanded Sunday brunch menu. Offerings include French Texas Toast; strip steak and eggs; a breakfast pizza, with scrambled egg, sausage and bacon; and waffle and chicken. The most unusual item has to be the egg nachos that include jalapeno peppers, chopped bacon, cheese etc. The most expensive item is $12.95.

The number of Sunday brunch spots has expanded in recent years and restaurants are tweaking their menus to appeal to that crowd. At least one Main Street restaurant, Home Grown, offers a Saturday brunch.

Meanwhile, Mojo Main, the former East End Cafe has expanded its menu by 25 entries. Added was vegetarian fare, as well as some new items.

Finally, the Deer Park has ended its frequent dining program, after winding down the promotion in recent months. Signs and notices, throughout the Newark landmark, apologized for the decision. The explanation - it was simply too good a deal and was hurting the bottom line.
