Gardner crushes Miller in mayoral race

by Cathy Thomas

Newark Councilman Ronald L. Gardner grabbed the city's mayoral seat Tuesday from fellow Councilman Edwin D. Miller, winning nearly 70 percent of the vote.

Gardner received 2,024 votes to 852 for Miller. University of Delaware student Scott Feller gained 55 votes.

In the only other city race, incumbent First District Councilman Harold F. Godwin easily defeated a challenge by University professor Dave Colton.

Godwin won more than 70 percent of the district vote, 800 to 310.

Unopposed and thus returned to office were council members Allen Smith and Louise Brothers.

Gardner's victory followed a campaign that during the last few days exploded into an intense battle between he and Miller.

The conflict between the two candidates began when Miller alleged a conflict of interest for Gardner, who is employed by a local builder.

"I'm still burned. Quite frankly, I'm still mad," said Gardner Tuesday, as he watched returns at the Newark Municipal Building. "I tried to run a clean campaign from day one. When the mud started, I was really disappointed."

Miller, on the other hand, is trying to put the campaign behind him. He will continue to serve as the city's Third District councilman.

"I'm looking forward to working with Ron," said Miller. "I think he's working for the best for Newark and so am I."

Miller said he fought hard for the mayoral post and that may have "clouded his vision" in the eleventh-hour campaign rhetoric.

"I didn't mean any attacks on Ron personally," he said. "If it was taken that way, I didn't mean it."

Gardner did take the attacks personally, though. "If there are ten votes up there from people thinking my integrity is not what it is, then I'm not satisfied."

Gardner follows Mayor William M. Redd, who officially steps down from office next week after nearly 19 years on council.

"I'm not going to be a Bill Redd," said Gardner. "I'm not going to say I can match him. I'm going to give it my best shot."

Redd expressed pleasure with the voters' selection of his successor.

"I've worked with Ron Gardner for 19 years now. I know his instincts are right," he said. "I'm sure the job is in very good hands."

Referring to the allegations made by Miller, Redd said city voters were able to "distinguish between substance and fantasy."

Gardner will be sworn into office on April 18.

Newarkers prepare to welcome Washington

by Neil Thomas

The historic inauguration procession of President George Washington will be recreated this week, with the entourage stopping near Newark early Wednesday morning, April 19.

Two local stops, at the Cooch home on the site of the Revolutionary War Battle of Cooch's Bridge and at the Hale-Byrnes House near Stanton, Washington's headquarters during that battle, will be followed by a noontime celebration in Wilmington's Rodney Square.

It was 200 years ago when the newly-elected Washington journeyed from his home in Mount Vernon, Va. to the capital in New York to take the oath of office as first president of the young United States of America.

He rode with Charles Thompson, a native of Newark who became second secretary of the Second Continental Congress, and a Col. Humphries.

En route, Washington rode the Old Baltimore Pike through Christiana and on into Wilmington.

The bicentennial ride will begin Sunday, April 16 with Washington and two traveling companions leaving Virginia in a carriage donated for the occasion by Henry duPont of Delaware. The carriage will be drawn by duPont's matched black Morgan horses.

The Cooch homestead will be visited by George Washington and friends.

The procession will head north through Maryland and will reach the Delaware state line, on Old Baltimore Pike, early Wednesday, April 19.

It will reach the Cooch home about 8 a.m. and will stop for brief ceremonies.

Dr. Claudia Bushman, executive director of the Delaware Heritage Commission, said the president will be greeted by members of the Cooch family who "wanted Washington to remember his time there."

Also on hand will be musicians and a regiment of Delaware militia.

Washington and companions will then take Del. 7 and Del. 4 to the Hale-Byrnes House on the banks of White Clay Creek in Stanton, where at 10 a.m. the Delaware Society for the Bad timing for school tax vote?

by Cathy Thomas

Christina School District officials are hoping bad timing won't cost the public school system its property tax increase.

Christina will put the proposed 3 percent increase before district voters in a tax referendum next month.

Unfortunately, the vote will come on the heels of announcements by the City of Wilmington that it would seek a 9.5 percent tax increase and by New Castle County that it would seek an 18 percent hike.

If all tax increases go through, some Wilmington residents will face a triple whammy and many suburban residents will see back-to-back boosts by the county and the school system.

"I think that has to have an effect," said Christina Superintendent Dr. Michael Walls, commenting on the May 9 referendum. "People are concerned about taxes."

The difference between the school proposal and those of the city and county is that the government increases will be decided by councils, while the school increase will be decided by Christina district residents in the voting booth.

"I don't think voters will punish the school district because someone else needs an 18 percent tax increase," said Walls.

He is hopeful that residents will recognize the need for the tax increase, which will partially fund $9.4 million worth of classroom expansion. The state will provide $5.7 million in bond money with the rest raised by the referendum.

"The state will not pay us a cent unless we raise 40 percent locally," said Walls.

Grafton, county planner, tenders resignation

by Cathy Thomas

Wayne W. Grafton, New Castle County planning director, has tendered his resignation.

One of the few top-level holdovers from the Republican administration of former county executive Rita Justice, Grafton's resignation stemmed from a difference in professional objectives with Democrat Dennis Greenhouse, the new county executive.

According to a statement issued Monday by Greenhouse, those differences were revealed during a county investigation into conflict-of-interest charges leveled against Grafton.

The investigation centers on Grafton's job as county planning director and his connections to a Pennsylvania real estate agent.

It is still under way but the Greenhouse statement noted that, "At present, no violations of the county code of ethics have been found."

County Attorney William W. Bowser believes the probe will be completed soon.

Grafton, who was placed on administrative leave during the ethics probe, returned to work Monday.

Despite repeated efforts to reach Grafton by telephone, he was unavailable for comment on the resignation.

An interim director will be named to replace Grafton when his resignation becomes effective April 30.

According to Greenhouse, Grafton has promised to make the transition smooth, thus enabling implementation of the county's new comprehensive development plan.

A permanent replacement for Grafton will be selected through a seven-member committee established by Greenhouse. He hopes to find a replacement within six months.

Castro wooed by Gorbachev, expert says

by Cathy Thomas

Cuban President Fidel Castro will curb criticism of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's political reforms following face-to-face talks last week, an expert on Cuba said Wednesday.

Dr. Wayne S. Smith, formerly with the U.S. Department of State, said Gorbachev went to Cuba to win Castro over, and he succeeded.

"Not that he could persuade Castro to adopt 'glasnost,' but simply that he would knock off his public criticism of Soviet reform," Smith said.

Smith, who was in Newark to visit the Latin American Studies Program at the University of Delaware, said Gorbachev wanted Castro to recognize that the Soviet Union has the right to carry out reform as it sees fit.

"It really isn't helpful for Gorbachev to have a man of Castro's stature sniping at him from the outside," he said. "That causes Gorbachev problems at home, where he is already receiving some pressures for his reforms."

In a speech to the Cuban people, Smith said Gorbachev made it clear that Soviet reforms were not appropriate for all communist countries, including Cuba. Castro practices orthodox communism, which is in contrast to the changes taking place in the Soviet Union.

While Gorbachev will not force political reform on Cuba, Smith said Gorbachev may encourage the reform as a way of lessening Cuba's economic dependence.

"I'm sure he told Castro that Soviet economic assistance cannot continue at such a high level," Smith said. "Over time, there must be some reductions."

The Soviet Union does not want to antagonize Castro by stopping economic assistance, Smith said. Such action would damage the Soviet Union's image in other communist countries.

"The Soviet Union would have abandoned Cuba in the face of U.S. hostility, making them an unreliable partner," he said. "It wouldn't help Gorbachev back home to have that kind of rock hanging around his neck."

Smith also commented on the Latin American "zone of peace" proposed by Gorbachev following last week's Caribbean summit. The concept was first proposed by Gorbachev two years ago, he said, adding, "We rejected it in 1987, and we've rejected it ever since."

Also last week, Gorbachev declared that the Soviet Union will continue supplying weaponry to Nicaragua as long as the United States is sending assistance to Central America.

"If the United States wants to bring about a withdrawal of Soviet and Cuban presence in Central America, then we have to sit down at the bargaining table and come up with step-by-step mutual reduction," Smith said.

One reason why such bargaining does not occur, he said, is because of the American viewpoint that Central America is in our backyard.

Smith is now adjunct professor of Latin American Studies at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C. He is the author of "The Closest of Enemies," which is a personal account of U.S.-Cuban relations since 1957.

4 Newark officers promoted

The commander of the Newark Police Department's traffic division has retired after serving 21 years as a police officer.

Lt. William Widdoes, 41, retired last month. During his career, Widdoes worked in the department's patrol and criminal divisions. He also was the department's bomb expert.

His retirement resulted in promotions for several other officers at the department. The promotions are as follows:

- Sgt. Thomas Penoza, 39, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. A 17-year veteran of the department, he will now command the traffic division. He was previously the supervisor of the special operations unit.
- Cpl. William Nefosky, 14, is now a sergeant and will command the special operations unit. A 10-year veteran of the department, he has served in teh patrol and criminal divisions.
- PFC Samuel Inman, 34, has been promoted to corporal. He will now serve as an assistant shift supervisor in the patrol vision. During the past 11 years with the department, he has served in the patrol division and special operations unit.
- PFC James Weldin, 33, is now a corporal in the department. An eight-year veteran, he will serve as an assistant shift supervisor in the patrol division. He previously served in the patrol division, the special operations unit and in planning and crime analysis.

Godwin retains council seat

by Cathy Thomas

First District City Councilman Harold F. Godwin will serve at least another two years following his victory Tuesday over challenger Dave Colton.

Godwin received more than 70 percent of the First District vote — 800 ballots, compared to 310 for Colton.

Still, Godwin was disappointed at the voter turnout in his district, which traditionally has the most ballots cast in an election.

"I was expecting a little better turnout," he said. "I'm a little disappointed that only 1,100 votes were cast."

Godwin said he had an agressive agenda for his next two years on council. "We've got tons and tons of work to do."

Among the items on his agenda is a proposal to alleviate rush-hour traffic in the city. Godwin wants the Delaware Turnpike Authority to issue stickers to Newark residents so they can get on Interstate 95 at Elkton Road and travel to Wilmington without paying the toll.

He is also calling for representation from the planning commission at the development review hearing at city council meetings.

Colton, a University of Delaware math professor, said it was a difficult election.

"We were running against an incumbent," he said "It was difficult from the beginning."

The election loss does not mean the end of politics for Colton, though. He plans to stay active with the Rainbow Coalition.

"We feel the issues facing Newark are still there," he said. "We plan to continue with them. One election doesn't end the whole program."

Colton said he will continue a grass-roots effort so citizens can get control over what's happening in the community. He will also encourage more people to become involved in local politics.

"Ultimately, my dream is that the city council really represents the diverse people that make up Newark," said Colton. "Right now, it doesn't."

NewArk Post staffers honored

☐ The NewArk Post advertising staff has won two awards in the 1988 Maryland-Delaware-DC Press Association advertising contest.

The entire staff, headed by advertising manager Tina Mullinax, won first place honors in the special section category for the "Just Kids" supplement. "Ad and copy worked exceptionally well together, making this section a winner by far," said the judges.

Also working on "Just Kids" were Jim Lyons, Val Brooks, Rhonda Beamer and Dawn Badger.

Beamer and Brooks won second place in the community service category for an advertisement on cocaine abuse.

Rosenberger receives F.D. Chester Award

☐ Dr. John K. Rosenberger, chairman of the University of Delaware Department of Animal Science and Agricultural Biochemistry, has been awarded the newly-established F.D. Chester Distinguished Performance Award.

The award recognizes scientists whose research benefits Delaware agriculture and adds to national and international scholarship.

Rosenberger is an internationally acclaimed researcher of poultry diseases, and is perhaps best known for developing a vaccine against infectious bursal disease.

30 percent of voters turned out to polls

Almost 30 percent of the city's registered voters cast ballots in Tuesday's municipal election.

The new registration system, which combined the city's rolls with those of the county, swelled the number of eligible voters to 9,980. Still, only about 2,932 people cast ballots.

"It's about the same as the previous election," said Sam Burns, chairman of the Newark Elections Board.

Burns and other city officials had hoped the new registration system would increase participation in municipal elections. This election was the first test of the new registration.

Burns said the general operation of the election was smooth, despite some "nitches" during the day. "It's nothing we can't get cleared up."

The election of Councilman Ronald L. Gardner as the city's mayor leaves a vacancy in the Fifth Councilmanic District.

Burns said council has 30 days to declare a vacancy. An election must be held within 60 days after the vacancy declaration.

The special election will keep the city elections board busy, according to Burns. They will have to hold another voter registration day, and plan the election, which will be costly to the city.

Campaign conduct concern

This year's hotly-contested mayoral campaign was in stark contrast to Newark's traditionally-quiet elections.

It was in the week before the election that the battle heated up between Councilman Ronald L. Gardner, who won the election, and his opponent Councilman Edwin D. Miller. Miller raised conflict of interest charges against Gardner, who is employed by a local builder.

Miller also sought and won the endorsement of Phil Cloutier, the Republican county council president.

That was followed by bipartisan support of Gardner by state legislators from Newark.

Traditionally, city elections have been issue-oriented and non-partisan.

Retiring Mayor William M. Redd is a strong proponent of the city's form of non-partisan politics and wants it to continue.

"I hope that party pols in Delaware get a better view of how government works in Newark," he said. "The partisanship stops at the city line, and the candidates become important."

This year's election threatened the city's traditional politics, according to Redd, but he said that threat has been repelled by the outcome.

Gardner agrees, saying the vote indicates how people feel about politics in Newark.

"I think there's a message there that we really don't want (partisan politics)," he said.

Miller said he worked hard in the campaign, but did not introduce partisan politics to the city by allegations against Gardner or endorsements from outside politicians.

"I think Newark runs fine the way it is," he said. "I don't want to change anything."

Councilman Harold F. Godwin, who retained his First District seat Tuesday, said he also didn't think the mayoral campaign brought partisan politics.

"I didn't see the two candidates (Gardner and Miller) to be all that different in politics," he said.

Elkton man hurt in crash

☐ An 18-year-old Elkton, Md. man was injured in a two-vehicle crash Saturday morning at the intersection of U.S. 40 and Del. 896.

Delaware State Police said Gerald Doll Jr. was listed in critical conditon Wednesday at Christiana Hospital.

According to police, Doll's vehicle collided with a tractor-trailer rig driven by Robert L. Seibold, 50, of Forest Hill, Md. Seibold was not injured in the crash.

Central America topic of dinner

☐ El Salvador will be the focus of attention during a covered dish supper April 16 in Newark.

Arnoldo Ramos, representing the Democratic Revolutionary Front and the FMLN of El Salvador will speak at the 6 p.m. dinner. Ramos will discuss a new Central American challenge for the United States.

Persons attending the dinner, to be held at the Phoenix Center, 20 Orchard Rd., should bring food to share.

Medical Center update set

☐ Oliver E. Deehan, senior vice president for planning at the Medical Center of Delaware, will address the Civic League of New Castle County annual meeting.

Deehan will provide a Medical Center update during the meeting, to begin at 7:30 p.m. April 18 in New Castle County Police headquarters on the DuPont Highway, New Castle.

Election of officers and directors will follow the program. The public is invited.

Handgun control lobbyist to speak

☐ The chairman of Handgun Control Inc. will speak in Wilmington later this month.

N.T. "Pete" Shields became a crusader for handgun control legislation in 1975 after his sone was killed on a San Francisco street by an unknown man firing a handgun.

A native of Wilmington, Shields will speak at Brandywine College's Polishook Hall on Monday, April 24.

Shiles is a controversial speaker with a negative opinion of the National Rifle Association. He is also the author of "Guns Don't Die * People Do."

Handgun Control Inc., a lobby organization headquartered in Washington, D.C., seeks strict handgun control throughout the United States.

Smoking banned in state offices

☐ Smoking is banned in state offices effective Sept. 1 under an order issued by Gov. Michael N. Castle.

Castle said cabinet secretaries will be directed to implement the "no smoking" policy throughout the executive branch, restricting the use of tobacco to designated areas in state buildings.

The order also instructs the director of personnel to recommend measures which will help state employees quit smoking.

'1968: The Siege of Wilmington'

☐ The longest military occupation of any American city since the Civil War occurred in Wilmington in 1968, when the Delaware National Guard was ordered into the streets to quell rioting.

The story of that 10-month occupation will be told in "1968: The Siege of Wilmington" to be broadcast at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 19 on WHYY-TV Channel 12.

Rioting broke out in black sections of Wilmington following the assassination of civil rights leader, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on April 4, 1968.

In fact, rioting broke out nationwide and the National Guard was called out in 124 cities. By the end of summer, however, Wilmington was the only city which still had troops in the streets.

Godwin: Bury city's utility lines

by Cathy Thomas

The above-ground utility lines in Newark are an eyesore, and City Councilman Harold F. Godwin wants to do something about it.

Godwin is calling for a study to determine the costs of burying the utility lines throughout the city, with initial emphasis in the downtown business district.

"We need to do a study in-house by the electric department to come up with some cost estimates," said Godwin.

He said the city should begin on Main Street. "This is something that has to be done if we're really going to improve the condition of Main Street."

City Manager Carl Luft said burying the lines is an expensive proposition. "I would say Main Street has to be $1 million-plus."

However, he said it is unfair to assess the proposal before it has been reviewed. "We really have to approach council before we do an lengthy analysis," said Luft.

Godwin acknowledges the expense involved in the proposition, but said such concerns were probably expressed years ago when the city wanted to pave Main Street with asphalt.

In addition to enhancing the city's appearance, Godwin said the problems of fire hazards and power outages will be reduced with the lines underground.

One way to reduce the cost of the project, Godwin said, is to have developers pay part of it. "With all the development on Main Street, now is the time to do it," he said.

Currently, those companies developing outside the center-city area are required to bury utility lines.

Christina secretaries picket

About 30 Christina School District secretaries carried signs outside of Wilmer E. Shue Middle School Tuesday night, protesting the lack of a contract.

The 78-member Christina Secretaries Association (CSA) is seeking their first contract.

Prior to the start of the Christina Board of Education meeting, CSA president Charlotte Skinner said their concerns over fair share and vacation are still unresolved.

"The issues are still out there," she said. "We can't resolve anything else until they're resolved."

The CSA formed last year and has been negotiating for a year to get a three-year agreeement.

The negotiations went to a state mediator earlier this year, but the two sides met on their own last week.

Frank Rishel, Christina assistant superintendent for personnel services, said they were moving closer to an agreement.

"Hopefully, we'll be able to reach a settlement," he said.

ICI Electronics unveils new plant

by Cathy Thomas

The latest in electronic technology is being practiced at ICI Electronics' new production facility in Newark.

Company officials hosted an open house Monday to demonstrate production of ICI's three-dimensional molded circuits, which are used in the telecommunications, computer and automotive industries.

"We have opened this facility in direct response to the increasing market demand for 3D molded circuits," said Charles S. Lemak, vice president and general manager of ICI Electronics. "This action demonstrates our commitment to maintain ICI's leadership posture in the industry."

The 3D circuit boards differ from the one-dimensional circuits in that they can offer a combination of electrical and mechanical functions.

Company officials selected the Newark site, located in the Delaware Industrial Park, nearly a year ago because of existing ICI operations in a nearby facility. The new production facility, which occupies 11,000 square feet, can also be easily expanded.

The three-dimensional molded circuit being manufactured in Newark by ICI Electronics.

The new facility has a production potential of 30,000 circuit boards per day.

Currently, the facility is operating on a one-shift basis, employing 20 people. When the plant is fully operational, 100 people will be working on a three-shift basis.

ICI Electronics was formed in 1988 to focus ICI's participation in the electronics industry.

ICI Electronics is an operating unit of ICI Americas Inc., headquartered in Wilmington. ICI products include electronics, thermoplastics, chemicals, pharmaceuticals, fibers, agrichemicals and paints.

Crime Stoppers seek robber

☐ Delaware Crime Stoppers is asking for information to identify the person responsible for an armed robbery Thursday evening, March 2 in Lewes.

The suspect is described as a black male in his early 20s, 5-feet 7-inches tall. Officials say he approached a woman in a business parking lot on Del. 1, just north of the Five Points area of Lewes and threatened the woman with a handgun. He then fled on foot with her pocketbook.

At the time of the robbery, the subject was wearing a multi-colored ski mask and a brown winter jacket.

Persons with information should call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333 inside Delaware or (302) 674-8226 outside Delaware.

Volunteers sought as ombudsmen

☐ Volunteers are needed to help resolve concerns of people living in nursing homes and adult foster care homes.

The Delaware Long-Term Care Ombudsman Program will train and supervise citizen volunteer ombudsman to serve as friendly visitors who provide a helping hand in complaint resolution, or who research projects that benefit those in long-term care facilities or adult foster care homes.

Volunteers will receive training, continuing support, transportation reimbursement and regular updated information on the long-term care system.

Persons who can give approximately four hours each week should call or write: John Reeves, volunteer coordinator, Division of Aging, Delaware State Hospital, 1901 N. DuPont Highway, New Castle, DE 19720, or call 421-6791.

Indy 500 car shown

☐ An Indianapolis 500 race car will be on display Friday through Sunday, April 21-23 near New Castle.

The car, driven by Raul Boesel, can be seen at Oil Change Express, Meinecke Muffler and Precision Tune, located next to the New Castle Farmers Market.

The car is sponsored on the racing circuit by Mobil Oil, Domino's Pizza and Coca-Cola. Following the local showing, it will be transported to Indianapolis to begin time trials.

Councilman seeks commission input

When Newark City Council reviews completed development projects, a representative of the city planning commission should be present, according to Councilman Harold F. Godwin.

It is city policy to review completed developments to ensure that the builder has fulfilled obligations related to public works, and Godwin believes the presence of a commission member would improve communications between council and the commission.

"The purpose is to give the planning commission exposure to their finished work," said Godwin. "I'm not sure they ever see the finished job."

Godwin said the commission representative could take information from the review back to other commission members for discussion.

Margo Perkins, chairman of the planning commission, said the proposal is a good idea.

"I've always thought there's needed to be more coordination between the planning commission and city council," she said. "Particularly, if it's something critical."

Perkins said the commission is an advisory body to the council and could better fulfill it's role through this proposal. She would like to see the two groups work together more, even before a project gets to the review stage.

Although Perkins would like the commission to become more involved, she said it is not necessary on every development proposal. "A lot of things that come in are not that critical."

Job training contracts awarded

☐ More than $5.5 million worth of job training contracts have been awarded to Delaware organizations.

The Delaware Private Industry Council last week awarded 28 contracts, which were funded through both federal and state dollars.

The Private Industry Council is comprised of business, labor, community and government leaders. It administers the Job Training Partnership Act in conjunction with the Delaware Department of Labor.

Under the act, funds are provided to train and employ disadvantaged youth and adults.

Communications officer promoted

☐ Kathleen M. Mahan, 22, of Newark, has been promoted to the position of emergency communications dispatcher by the New Castle County Department of Public Safety.

Mahan was hired as an emergency call operator in 1986. Currently a University of Delaware student, Mahan has completed courses to enhance telecommunication skills.

SBDC: Sympathetic ear, sound advice

by Cathy Thomas

Russ Over and Ralph Donofrio were working for a large distributor of paper goods in Philadelphia when they decided they could do it better.

The two men opened Party Restaurant Outlet in Newark.

That was four years ago and the company has grown into a full-service distributor with annual sales over $2 million.

Still, it hasn't all been easy.

"Everybody thinks about a business and gets the idea that the first year will be tough, but after that it's going to be smooth sailing," said Over. "It doesn't happen that way."

After three years in business, Over wanted to improve management of his finances. He turned to the Small Business Development Center on the University of Delaware campus for assistance.

"I wanted to get a better handle on cash flow," said Over. "We were able to sit down and come up with some graphs and trends. It helped me get the right thing I should be looking at."

ago, the Small Business Development Center has helped thousands of small businesses by providing management counseling, training and information.

"A vast majority of our clients are just thinking about being in business," said Tim Bristow, business analyst for the center. "They want to know what are the details to get them where they want to be."

Bristow advises prospective entrepreneurs to do a lot of planning before they start their business.

"Unless you know what you want to do, you have a hard time doing it," he said.

Probably one of the most common questions they face at the center is, "How do I get the money to start my business?"

"We help them figure it out, but we don't have any money," said Bristow. "I haven't found any client, who had a good idea, who got their situation in hand, and then didn't find the money."

He advises entrepreneurs against thinking there are any government grants to help them in their business. Such grants exist only for a few high-tech inventions, he said, and for a non-profit organizations.

"There's nobody that's going to give you money to make money," said Linda Lucas Fayerweather, director of the center.

Both Fayerweather and Bristow are experienced in small business, having had their own companies.

"Most of the benefit to my job comes from the fact I've been there," said Bristow. "I can tell them about the financial risk."

Bristow and Fayerweather also talk about the loneliness which often happens to people starting a business on their own.

Some of the center's clients often just need someone to listen to them.

"We have some clients come in just to bounce ideas off us," said Bristow.

Fayerweather agrees, saying that there isn't any other place where "they can get quick feedback, much less free."

There are many attractions to owning your own company, Bristow said. He enjoyed the lifestyle and schedule when he operated a picture framing store.

And yet there are great risks.

The record for small business is not good. According to Fayerweather, for every ten businesses that start, eight will fold. The record for different types of businesses vary, with restaurants much less successful.

It should be noted, though, that many of those businesses do not close because of bankruptcy.

"If your're talking about people losing their shirt, that's a different number," said Fayerweather.

Both Fayerweather, who operated a latchkey day care program, and Bristow closed their businesses because of household moves.

With small business totalling 98 percent of all business in Delaware, the need for the Small Business Development Center is evident.

The center, which operates on an annual budget under $100,000, receives half of its funding from the federal Small Business Administration. It is also funded by the Delaware Development Office, New Castle County, the City of Wilmington and the University of Delaware.

At the University, the center works with the School of Business Administration, offering a course called "Small Business Management." Students in the course gain experience solving the problems of an existing business.

"The students actually get to see the dynamics of a business," said Fayerweather.

By being located on campus, the center has access to a variety of information and data for its clients.

Fayerweather and Bristow often find themselves rooting for those clients, gaining satisfaction in seeing a business succeed.

"It's a little hard to separate yourself," said Fayerweather. "I think there's a personal bond that forms there."

Fayerweather said most of their clients are in their mid-to-upper 30s.

"I think it's just a stage in a person's life when they're ready to do something different," she said. "Most of the time, it's people who have been doing something for a long time and doing it well, and now they want to do it on their own."

GEORGE

Preservation of Antiquities will sponsor ceremonies with Sanford School students and others in colonial dress.

The Washington Society will plant a commemorative tree, a new printing of an historic map of the area will be on display, and Newark brass musicians will perform.

After events in Stanton, Washington will ride into Wilmington for the midday rally.

The rally will feature musical groups, including the New Ark Fife and Drum Corps, costumed Delawareans, officers of the militia, the state's mounted and the Delaware Morgan House Guard.

In the tradition of 1789, young girls will strew Washington's path to the podium with flowers. After the presentation of gifts, the president will deliver a short address.

Washington traditionally served cake and lemonade at his social gatherings, and those refreshments will be available to all who attend.

After the stop in Wilmington, the entourage will head off for Chester, Pa. It will reach New York on Sunday, April 23.

Festivities in Trenton, N.J. are expected to recreate the work of a second Newarker involved in the inaugural procession. The 1789 Trenton celebration was organized by Richard Howell, a native of Newark and a graduate of the well-respected Newark Academy who went on to serve as governor of New Jersey from 1792 to 1801.

Howell also penned a song sung to Washington by 13 maidens bedecked in white gowns. It went: "Welcome, mighty chief, once more. Welcome to this grateful shore. Now no mercenary foe aims the fatal blow. Virgins fair and matrons grave, those they conquering arm did save, build for these triumphal bowers, and strew our hero's way with flowers."

And that they did.

In honor of the visit to Delaware, the University of Delaware Chamber Singers will perform six concerts featuring the "Inauguration Cantata 1789," arranged by Capt. Kenneth R. Force from music of the period, on Monday and Tuesday, April 17 and 18.

The Singers, directed by Dr. Andrew Cottle and in period dress with harpsichord accompaniment, will perform Monday at 10 a.m. in Concord High School, 1 p.m. in Dover Central Middle School and 7:30 in the Rehoboth Art League.

Tuesday, they will perform at 10 a.m. at Delaware Technical and Community College in Georgetown, 1 p.m. at Thomas McKean High School, and 8:30 at the University of Delaware's Loudis Recital Hall on Amstel Avenue.

TAX

The referendum calls for an increase of about 2 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. Taxes on a home with an assessed value (usually much lower than real market value) of $50,000 will increase about $10 a year.

Taxes on a home with an assessed value of $100,000 will increase about $20 a year.

Walls said the expansion is needed to provide classroom seats for about 600 students. If the referendum fails, the district may be forced to establish double sessions or crowd 40-50 students into each classroom.

"That's not a threat," said Walls. "It's my responsibility to let people know what some of the possibilities are."

Should the referendum pass, the following projects are planned:

- $4 million for the construction of classroom additions to Pulaski Elementary School.
- $3.04 million for construction of classroom additions to Drew-Pyle Elementary School.
- $1.06 million to complete construction at Brader Elementary School.
- $1.02 million for the completion of Elbert-Palmer Elementary School.

Several of the district's schools will be open on May 9 so that residents may cast ballots on the referendum. Anyone residing in the district and over 18 years of age may vote in the election. Registration is not necessary.

Disney gives Glasgow $3,000

☐ The wages of acting is lights at Glasgow High School. Disney Productions has donated $3,000 to the school for the participation of its band, cheerleaders and football team in the filming of "The Dead Poets Society" last fall.

Monday, Glasgow High Principal Robert Anderson made a command decision to donate that money to the fund to light the Glasgow High football stadium.

With the money, the school's boosters will be able to go ahead with plans to order poles on which the lights will someday be mounted.

Rose Parade selects AI band

☐ The A.I. duPont High School marching band has been selected to perform in the 1990 Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif.

A.I. duPont was invited to participate during ceremonies Monday in Wilmington.

The 250-member Tiger band will be the sole Delaware Valley entry in the parade, and is the first Delaware representative in the parade in 30 years. DeLaWarr High School participated in the 1960 parade.

St. Elizabeth's Leni Wilson honored

☐ Leni Wilson of Queens Way, Newark, a senior at St. Elizabeth High School, was named Kiwanis Club of West Wilmington student of the month for March.

"To summarize Leni's attributes," said Matthew M. Shipp, Kiwanis spokesman, "she is a scholar, a tremendous individual and blessed with athletic ability."

Wilson was first team All-State and All-Catholic Conference in girls basketball the last two years, scoring more than 1,000 career points and being named honorable mention All-America by Street and Smith, Blue Star Top 80, Dick Vitale's Top 48 and most valuable player of the New York AAU tournament in both 1987 and 1989.

Combining athletic talent with a 3.2 grade point average, Wilson has been granted a full athletic scholarship for basketball by Georgetown University.

"Leni Wilson has a remarkable humility and a very stable personality," according to Susan MacPherson, St. Elizabeth guidance counselor. "Leni is a leader in school spirit. She strives to be a role model for others.

"She is very down-to-earth and able to handle disappointment maturely and philosophically. Leni frequently displays grace under pressure, and is a true diplomat with an excellent sense of humor and disarming charm. These attributes, along with her desire to help others, make Leni Wilson very popular with her peers, her teachers and her coaches."

Heritage Commission honors Newarkers

☐ Three Newark students — Leslie Minor of Christiana High School, Julie Cebrat of Glasgow High School and Kesara Borirakchanyavat of Newark High School — have been named Delaware Heritage Scholars.

The students were honored for their contributions to the Delaware Heritage Commission's annual James T. McKinstry scholarship competition, in which students must complete projects related to the history of Delaware. Each was awarded $2,500.

Minor was recognized for her photoessay on St. James Episcopal Church, Cebrat for an essay on the history of Newark's State Theater, and Borirakchanyavat for an essay on Howard Pyle and the Brandywine School of painters.

The scholarships are supported by Maryland Bank N.A. of Newark.

All-State Chorus to perform April 15

Delaware All-State Chorus will perform at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, April 15 at Dover Central Middle School.

The All-State Chorus is sponsored by the Delaware Music Educators Association, with junior and senior divisions.

The junior chorus will be directed by Dr. Julius Williams of the University of Vermont and the senior chorus by Dr. Larry Dorminy of West Chester, Pa. University.

Tickets cost $3 and will be available at the door.

Newark students in the All-State Junior Chorus are, from Christiana High School, Surita Bhatia, Stephanie Daul and Stephen J. Padbury, and from Gauger Middle School, Laura Emily Naumann, Mark W. Rutt, Craig Vettori and Jennifer Wright.

Glasgow High School representatives are Andrea Henderson and Deanne Reule. From the Independence School is Monica Schierbaum, and from Kirk Middle School are Scott Clavert, Shemika Freeman, Keith Glines, Tairen McCollister, Vinay Tulsian, Michael J. Villani and Lawrence Volzone.

Also, from Newark High School, Owen Braun, Renee Cartwright, Dana Corbett, Robyn Jane Guthrie, Walidah Newton and Carolyn Taylor, and from Red Lion Christian Academy, Lori Phillips.

Representing Shue Middle School are Wendy Chi and Nina Das, and from St. Mark's High School, Brooke Dunston, Emily Hogan, Jorge Rosas and Lisa Toccafondi.

In the All-State Senior Chorus are, from Caravel Academy, Allison Hedges, and from Christiana High, Ed Bara, Christine Glines, Shannon Price, Sharon Taylor and Christine Volpe.

Glasgow High members are Julie Cebrat, Laura Bechous, Michelle Floriolli, Heather Gosnell, Michelle Henderson and Terry Zorich, and Newark High representatives are Raina Harper, Christina Nardi, Chad Nelson, Jodi Pearlman and Minlee Taylor. St. Mark's High sends Stephen Petrucci.

Newark jazz fest Friday

The 19th annual Newark High School Jazz Festival will be held at 7 p.m. Friday, April 14.

Performing will be jazz bands from St. Mark's High School, William Penn High School, Tower Hill, Christiana High School, Salesianum School, Brandywine High School and the University of Delaware.

The host Yellowjacket jazz band will also perform.

Each band will play three selections for a panel of judges, who will award ratings of superior, excellent or good. There will also be awards for the best soloists.

The event will be held in the auditorium of Newark High. Admission is $3 and tickets will be available at the door.

Newark High school music director Lloyd Ross.

Bliey is DuPont scholar

Ernest Bliey, a senior at Christiana High School, has been named a recipient of the DuPont Company's third annual minority scholarship.

Bliey was named recipient from among 172 applicants, and was selected for academic excellence. He is one of only 18 students throughout the country chosen to participate in the program.

Bliey will major in engineering at the University of Delaware, and will receive a $16,000 scholarship over four years to assist with his college expenses.

In addition, he will spend two summers working for DuPont.

Staying Young At Heart Is Child's Play.

Retired people who live at Cokesbury Village don't need the family photo album to recapture their youth. Each day, they enjoy life's pleasures as much as when life was brand new.

There's so much to enjoy at Cokesbury. The enduring pleasure of a cottage or apartment to call your own. And the freedom of designing your calendar around your own plans.

After a day of painting, weaving, or whittling in the community crafts room, step out for a Cokesbury social, or enjoy an evening on the town. Theater and music lovers won't miss a performance, because the community bus is always ready to go. You can take a trip to Longwood Gardens and get inspired to learn flower arranging or cultivation. Or just stay home and enjoy some of nature's loveliest sights at the Village pond.

From playing duplicate bridge with your friends to playing London Bridge with your grandchildren, you'll enjoy each day at Cokesbury Village. And you can put your mind completely at ease about the future, because one of the finest retirement health centers will be in your own backyard.

Pinkham collection opens at Morris Library

This week an invaluable collection of materials on one of this country's greatest painters will open for scholarly use at the University of Delaware Library.

April 17 will mark the opening of the Lloyd Goodrich archives on the noted American artist Albert Pinkham Ryder (1847-1917) at the Hugh M. Morris Library on the University's Newark campus. Ryder has long been known, along with Thomas Eakins and Winslow Homer, as one of the "big three" artists of 19th century America.

Lloyd Goodrich, the key Ryder expert for years and former director of the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York, died in 1987 and bequeathed his research correspondence, files, photographs, interviews and other papers and notes to the University of Delaware.

The archives, housed in the University of Delaware Library's Special Collections, also contain 13 Ryder forgeries, sketchbooks, watercolors, x-radiographs, glass plate negatives, and Ryder's letter and poems.

An exhibition featuring materials from the Goodrich-Ryder Archives will be open to the public from April 17-Aug. 15 in the Special Collections Exhibition Gallery at the Morris Library.

The exhibit has been prepared by 12 University graduate students in Dr. William I. Homer's fall 1988 seminar. "A.P. Ryder and 'The New Movement,'" under Dr. Homer's guidance and with assistance from library Special Collections staff members.

From the 1930s to the time of his death, Goodrich was the primary authority on the life and work of Ryder. He had been working since 1983 with Homer, who is chairperson of the Department of Art History at the University of Delaware, on a major book on Ryder, which has been urgently needed for Ryder scholarship.

Homer has finished the joint project, 40 percent of which was completed by Goodrich before his death. The book, "Albert Pinkham Ryder, Painter of Dreams," will be published by Harry N. Abrams in September.

Born in New Bedford, Mass., Ryder spent most of his life in New York City in an unkempt, lower West Side apartment which was cluttered with newspapers, old clothes, unwashed dishes and uncashed checks.

In this dingy environment, he painted small but groundbreaking evocative moonlight seascapes, pastoral landscapes and dynamic forests and stormy seas on literary and Biblical themes.

His interlocking forms of light and dark masses heralded the abstract works of 20th century artists such as Marsden Hartley and Jackson Pollock.

Ryder paintings were forged more often than those of any other American artist except Ralph Blakelock.

Goodrich noted that there are about 1,000 forgeries, which must be distinguished from the body of authentic works that number about 100, according to Homer. (Twenty or 30 authentic works apparently are lost.)

Many of the x-radiographs and technical reports in the Goodrich-Ryder Archives were prepared by Sheldon Keck, then paintings conservator at the Brooklyn Museum and later founder of two graduate training programs in art conservation.

Keck also wrote the technical appendix for Goodrich and Homer's forthcoming book on Ryder. Cooperation between art historians and conservators is especially appropriate for the works by Ryder because of his unorthodox techniques and continual repaintings that have produced disastrous results as the paintings have aged.

IT'S YOUR MONEY

By BALLARD, THOMPSON & ASSOCIATES, P.A.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE!!

There's still time — right up to April 17, tax filing day — to open a retirement account and deduct your contribution, even if you're a self-employed person who didn't get around to setting up a Keogh account before the December 31 deadline. The loophole is the SEP, the simplified employee pension.

As with a Keogh, contributions to your SEP are deductible and are more generous than for an IRA. You can contribute up to 15 percent of your self-employment income or $30,000, whichever is less. A SEP has other advantages over a Keogh: administration and reporting requirements are considerably easier.

If you have any employees, they must be included in your SEP, too. You will have to make contributions for each employee age 21 or over who has worked for you for three out of the last five years, though you can leave out employees who have not earned at least $313 from you during the year. Check with your accountant on employee contributions.

Tax-advantaged retirement accounts are a good deal. Discuss your options with the experts at

BUSINESS

Coop director named

Joyce Hart

Joyce Hart of Wilmington has been named director of the cooperative education program and assistant to the dean of the University of Delaware's College of Business and Economics, according to Dr. Eric Brucker, dean of the college. Her appointment is effective April 1.

She replaces Ron Whittington, who became acting affirmative action officer and is now assistant to the president at the University.

In her new position, Hart will be in charge of the cooperative education program, which oversees the placement of students in the private sector for meaningful work experiences for six-month periods. She will be working with the corporate community, faculty and students.

Brucker said the program not only gives students interview and work experience, but it broadens their perceptions about the business world and helps them develop career goals.

Hart also will act as assistant to the dean, carrying out special projects and handling special events in the college.

Currently, Hart serves as a coordinator in the University's Office of Career Planning and Placement, where she has worked with more than 300 companies in placement activities for graduate students.

A National Merit Scholarship finalist, she is a graduate of Duquesne University, and she holds a master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh.

Furry fills need for electrical repairs

by Cathy Thomas

As an electrician for a large contractor, Bill Furry of Newark saw a need for someone to handle small electrical jobs.

The small jobs, such as repairing an outlet for a homeowner, were too costly for the large firms because it took personnel away from the larger, more profitable jobs.

A licensed electrician, Furry decided to start his own business recently to handle the smaller jobs.

"Serving the homeowner — that's really the target I'm looking at," said Furry. "The indication is there's a need for this service."

Furry said his interest in starting his own business grew when he found out about a man who had been trying to get a switch changed in his home for more than year.

"He could not get an electrician to come out and change that switch because it was such a small job," he said. "I attribute that mainly to the boom in the building trade."

Furry said that boom in the building trade keeps large electrical contractors on new homes and larger projects.

Furry, who is licensed both by the State of Delaware and the City of Newark, has been an electrician for about 17 years. He enjoys the electrical trade, particularly serving the homeowner.

"There's a certain satisfaction at looking at a job, and it's well done," he said.

Furry said he will be able to keep his rates competitive because he does not have a large overhead.

"My rates are very reasonable," he said. "I'm going to supply the customer with quality work at a fair rate."

A native Newarker, Furry serves as an assistant fire chief in the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company.

Homeowners in need of electrical service can reach Furry at 453-8177.

Store layout for small retailer

☐ A national teleconference on store layout and design for the small retail business will be held 7:45-10 p.m. Tuesday, April 18 in the University of Delaware's Clayton Hall.

The teleconference, produced by the Center for Apparel Marketing and Merchandising at Oklahoma State University, will provide information on developing and implementing a good store plan.

Local participants will be able to participate through special telephone hookup. Fee is $15. to register, call the Small Business Development Center at 451-2747.

County Chamber has new home

☐ The New Castle County Chamber of Commerce has a new home.

After 21 years on East Main Street in Newark, adjacent to the Newark Shopping Center, the Chamber has moved to new quarters in the County Chamber Office Park, 660 Churchmans Rd.

A five-year lease there was negotiated by Jack Weaver of B. Gary Scott Commercial Properties.

The Chamber occupies 5,000 square feet on the second floor, and plans to expand its nine-person staff.

In addition to Chamber offices, facilities include a large meeting room, a small conference room and a full-service kitchen.

Other office park tenants are Artesian Laboratories, S and S Distributors, Delaware Clinical and Laboratory Physicians, and Crawford and Company.

Bart elected to notary society

☐ Betty Bart of Knickerbocker Drive, Newark, has been elected to membership in the American Society of Notaries, a national organization of persons who hold the office of notary public.

Bart is employed as human resources director by Rockford Center of Newark.

Starting your own business

☐ The Delaware Small Business Development Center will offer an introduction to the steps necessary to start your own business 6:30-9:30 p.m. Thursday, April 27 in Room 115 Purnell Hall on the University of Delaware campus in Newark.

Participants will learn the different forms of business, what paperwork is required, why a business plan is vital and ideas on funding sources.

Fee is $5. Call 451-2747.

Preserve city's political system

As Newark Mayor William Redd pointed out in his farewell address Friday night, city residents owe a debt of gratitude to the handful of community activists who redrew city government in the mid-1960s.

It was then that Newark adopted a city manager form of government, a form designed to streamline city management and decrease opportunities for political opportunism.

Under the city manager system, the executive branch of Newark government is administered by a professional staff headed by a city manager, currently Carl Luft. The legislative branch, mayor and city council, considers and passes the laws, or ordinances.

The system provides that council members shall not meddle in management and that, likewise, employees shall not meddle in legislative affairs.

This provision has helped Newark maintain a dignified approach to its administration, without the bloody fights one sees in major cities.

Newark's system also provides that council elections be non-partisan, creating what Redd calls a "collegial" rather than an "adversarial" atmosphere on council.

Redd believes that this system has served the City of Newark extremely well.

But he also believes that as the city grows, there will be attacks on the system, and warns that Newarkers must be ever-vigilant to protect their government.

The United States, as a nation, would have done well to heed to advice of President Dwight D. Eisenhower as he warned of the undue influence of the military-industrial complex in his farewell address.

Newark, as a city, would do well to heed the words of William Redd.

For Gardner, a bittersweet victory

POSTSCRIPT
Neil Thomas

Ron Gardner stood before the green chalkboard in the Newark Municipal Building Tuesday night, watching the numbers in district after district grow into the huge margin that would make him the mayor-elect.

A 500-vote margin in the First District, 106 in the Fourth District, 280 in his home Fifth District.

Even a 140-vote margin in the Third, home district of his opponent, fellow city council member Ed Miller.

Gardner should have been elated. He should have been shaking hands and slapping backs. The moment should have been magic.

But it wasn't quite.

The last six days had been among the most difficult in Gardner's long life of public service, and he had not fully recovered.

During those six days, Ed Miller had turned the city's non-partisan mayoral race from an issue-oriented campaign to a mud-spattered mess.

Miller opened his attack by charging that Gardner had a conflict of interest in both serving on council and working for local builders.

It was an attack that plainly ignored the fact that Gardner had taken pains to make that association clear and time after time had abstained from voting on issues which affected that development.

There was also reference to the fact that Gardner paid state real estate transfer taxes on a $32,000 sale when in fact his home is probably worth five times that.

While Miller might not have intended such, Gardner felt there was an implication that he was not above board in his dealings.

Gardner paid transfer tax for the land only because many intelligent homebuyers who have the money in hand find financial advantage in purchasing the land first and borrowing the money to build a house later. It is common practice.

Some who heard the report even misconstrued the reference to mean that Gardner bought the land and the house for just $32,000.

Finally, Miller threw in a partisan endorsement to boot, winning the support of Republican Phil Cloutier, the county council president.

That endorsement was a violation of the spirit of the city charter, which requires non-partisan elections. And for good reason, unless you enjoy the worthless catfights which have become so much a part of county council meetings.

What hurt Gardner was that the attacks were not on his positions, but on himself. To him and to many who heard them, the charges implied that he had done something unethical, something wrong for personal gain.

And that cut Ron Gardner to the quick, because Ron Gardner is nothing if not a decent human being. He gives of himself to the community, working quietly in various clubs, organizations and committees to help make Newark a better place to live.

It was painful because Gardner is one of those increasingly rare people who believe that your reputation means something.

"I can take someone challenging me, even defeating me, on the merits," Gardner said Tuesday night. "But I can't take someone attacking my character."

He looked at the chalkboard as another district, and still another went into his column. A 38-vote margin in the Sixth District, 68 in the Second. A sweep of the districts. And of 2,932 total votes cast, 1,172 for Gardner.

"As overwhelming as that vote is," Gardner said sadly, "if even one vote up there is because someone thinks I did something unethical or wrong, I can't take it."

Still, he said the support of the voters was extremely gratifying, particularly in that it drove home an important message. "I think the thing this says is that the people of Newark really can't tolerate this mud-slinging type of campaign."

Newark's system of government, one which carefully weeds out partisan politics and clearly separates mayor and council from the direct workings of the administration, is a fragile thing.

It has worked well since its adoption in the 1960s, but it can only continue to work well if we pay attention and hold our candidates to high standards.

Tuesday we did.

At 8:51 p.m., election board chairman Sam Burns moved to the chalkboard, scanned the ciphers, and declared Ron Gardner the mayor-elect of Newark.

With that, Gardner was whisked into a whirl of interviews then off to home, where it was time to celebrate.

War on drunks not yet won

To the Editor:

The war against drunk driving has not been won in Delaware. There have been more than 7,000 people injured and 300 killed in the last five years in this state in crashes involved drinking drivers.

Obviously there is much to do if we are to stop these horrible tragedies, and Delawareans Against Drunk Driving has been formed to provide assistance to victims of drunk drivers and to work to prevent drunk driving in our state.

We are looking for volunteers who live in the Newark area to join in the battle.

There are many ways you can help to prevent these tragedies from occuring in the future. We are all potential victims of the drinking driver; shouldn't you get involved before he claims another innocent life?

You can obtain information about Delawareans Against Drunk Driving and means by which to help end the slaughter on our roadways by writing: DADD, PO Box 811, Bear, DE 19701.

There is no fee for membership and your support as a member can help to prevent others from knowing the pain of losing a loved one to a drunk driver.

In support of minimum wage hike

☐ The following report was sent to the NewArk Post by State Rep. William A. Oberle Jr. of Newark, chairman of the House Labor Committee. The legislature is considering raising the minimum wage in Delaware from $3.35 per hour to $4.40 per hour.

To the Editor

As committee assistant for the Delaware Labor and Pensions Committee in the House of Representatives, I was asked to submit a position paper in support of the proposed minimum wage increase. My conclusions follow:

• Raising the minimum wage is a move that is long overdue. At present, the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour constitutes only 35 percent of the average manufacturing wage, as opposed to 41 percent at the inception of minimum wage in 1938.

Also, minimum wage as a percentage of the poverty wage has declined from 96 percent to 78 percent in recent years.

The federal government is discussing legislation that would increase the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.65 by 1991. The legislation proposed for consideration by the Delaware General Assembly suprasses this amount, but recent trends indicate that more and more states are passing minimum wage legislation that exceeds the federal standard. California and Connecticut presently have a rate of $4.25 an hour, and the District of Columbia's minimum wage rate ranges from $3.50 to $4.85, dependent upon the industry.

• The minimum wage serves as a protection against workplace discrimination, particularly against women. Women have entered the workforce in unprecedented numbers, partly due to the increasing number of female-headed households.

Female workers are generally concentrated into the lowest paying professions. To not raise the minimum wage serves to keep a large number of working women in a disadvantaged state, and adversely affects the well-being of children born to such women.

Thirty-five percent of females who are heads of households earned a wage of less than $4 an hour, compared to 19 percent of male heads, and are less likely to be unionized.

It is also interesting to note that male household heads are more likely to have a spouse who works, further supplementing family income.

Although the original intent of minimum wage legislation did not include a protective function, the "feminization" of many low-paying industries has served to make it so.

• Female workers are also twice as likely to hold part-time jobs than male workers, due to family considerations or because full-time work is not as readily available to them. Because part-time jobs are six times more likely to pay minimum wages than full-time jobs, a large gap is created between the wages of part-time and full-time workers, causing a two-tiered labor system. An increase in the minimum wage rate would serve to narrow the gap.

• All groups considered "disadvantaged" (women, minorities, etc.) benefit from an increase in the minimum wage in that these groups are often insulated into a low pay range. In this instance, wages are not likely to improve, absent legislation or union pressure. Many low-paying professions are non-unionized, for example sales occupations and technical and clerical positions.

The argument is often made that an increase in the minimum wage would hurt those who need help the most by causing unemployment and increased prices. However, the costs of increased salaries would cause total costs to increase only slightly in most cases, and the types of employers most affected by minimum wage legislation (large retailers, service and trade industries) should have the resources to cover them.

There are several other economic factors to be taken into consideration when making hiring decisions, such as demand for goods and services and lack of substitutes.

• The low unemployment rate in Delaware indicates that there is a rising demand for low-paid employment, and that a higher minimum wage would do little to adversely affect the situation. Labor force projections for this state indicate that there will be a greater demand for low-paid labor, particularly in the service area.

At present, the demand for such workers exceeds the available supply and the situation is expected to worsen. Raising the minimum wage in this instance would not serve to reduce employment in these areas. Demand already dictates that a wage higher than $3.35 be paid, and a mandated increase would not change wages paid very much. It would merely raise the minimum required standard of pay.

Breeders Cup chase jumps to Far Hills

by David Woolman

After three successful runnings at nearby Fair Hill, Md. the Breeders Cup Steeplechase will be run at Far Hills, N.J. this year.

The $250,000 steeplechase, the richest in the world, was won by Eclipse Award winner Jimmy Lorenzo last year.

The financial burden of putting on the race, coupled with a tardy offer of help from the State of Maryland and a scheduling conflict, led the Breeders Cup to choose an alternate site for the race this year.

For lack of sufficient corporate sponsorship or advertising, the television production of the race ended up costing the track more money than it made on the race, according to Gregg Morris, executive director of the Cecil County Breeders Fair, which operates the scenic race course on Md. 273, about six miles west of Newark.

Despite profits from all other aspects of the race meets, the course has never been able to get out from under that debt.

"Meeting the TV production cost has put a burden on the races for three years," says Morris, a successful artist and steeplechase rider. "We don't have the wherewithal to host that event without any help."

The racecourse sought monetary help from Maryland through the state agriculture board in a bid to keep the race. Delays in assuring the aid led the Breeders Cup to explore alternative offers, and by the time the state agreed to help, Far Hills had already been choosen as the host of this year's race.

Fair Hill's problems in hosting the race this year were exacerbated by the scheduling of the race, which would have led to conflicts in the traditional fall hunt meet schedule.

The Breeders Cup Steeplechase was originally conceived to rotate among different hunt tracks, just as the rest of the Breeders Cup day races rotate host tracks every year.

However, the first year worked out so well at Fair Hill the decision was made to hold the race there every subsequent year up until this one.

This change could revive the original idea of rotating courses. Much depends on how smoothly things go at Far Hills, particularly how NBC — which favored Fair Hill for convenience in their coverage of the event — likes it at the other tracks. If the race comes off well elsewhere, the chance of the race coming back to Fair Hill to stay are not very good.

"From now on, we'll be competing with every course that wants the race," says Morris. "We're definitely going to make a serious pitch for the race. I'm fairly confident we'll get it back."

The quality of the steeplechase course at Fair Hill, as well as the convenience and success of the first three runnings, works in its favor.

The loss of the race has led Fair Hill to alter its racing schedule. The traditional Memorial Day card will be run as always, but the two fall days will be different from the past.

The first half of the fall meet will be run as an abreviated twilight card Wednesday, Sept. 6 with post time at 4 p.m. The feature will be the Maryland Million Steeplechase.

The Million is to be kicked off that Monday at Timmonium Race Course, and the Wednesday card is seen as a continuation of the festivities. The 4 p.m. post is to accomodate working fans.

The second half of the meet will be run Saturday, Sept. 30 and will feature the American Grand National steeplechase, this year a major prep race for the Breeders Cup, which will be held the last Saturday in October.

Spartans top Newark, 5-2

by David Woolman

Friday's cold rain just made the soft ground that much worse, but while most spring sports were cancelling their already once-cancelled contests, the St. Mark's and Newark high school lacrosse teams slugged it out.

St. Mark's, 2-0, topped host Newark 5-2 to take a 3-2 advantage in lifetime meetings with the Yellowjackets, 0-1.

The conditions and a non-interruptive approach to officiating made the game an all out physical affair for all four quarters, the last three and a half of which were controlled by St. Mark's, a club team in its fifth year of existence.

"We were very intense," said Spartan captain Doug Donovan. "We practice in the rain. Newark's our biggest rival. We had to be ready for them so we practice in any weather."

The 'Jackets made St. Mark's look very unready, scoring two transition goals in the first few minutes of the game.

"They jumped out early with two goals," said first year St. Mark's coach Joe Thomas. "They had the momentum and they were going hard. We thought they were going to take the game away from us early, but we fought back and got ahead and went with our game."

But the St. Mark's defense stiffened as the game wore on, not allowing Newark to set up its offense or get past them in transition.

On the other end, the Spartans defied the conditions and the free checking to set up their offense and maintain ball control.

Steve DiGennaro garnered a hat trick, with a goal in each of the last three quarters to go with the four goals he had in the season opener against Cape Henlopen. He was assisted by Kevin Kennedy for the first, and scored the last in the game's only man down situation.

"Doug (Donovan) got all the face offs right away, we settled in, ran our plays and everything worked," was how DiGennaro explained his team's success. Thomas agreed, crediting Donovan with 75 percent of the faceoffs, and also crediting his defense with a fine effort.

"I told the defense that since the game was lightly called to lay on the checks," said Thomas. "(Newark) didn't get set up at all. They're a good team. We just took them out of their game."

"We didn't have any control at all," said Newark coach Pete Griffith, who has coached the club team through all three years of its existence. "We didn't have ground balls, we didn't have faceoffs. They had possession most of the game.

"They had a (previous) game — they had field sense. A few games and a little experience and we'll get them next time."

'Dogs nip Newark

Some good defense, surprisingly effective pitching and late found offensive power almost-but-not-quite gave the Newark High School softball team a victory against visiting Brandywine Tuesday afternoon.

The Yellowjackets (0-2) dropped their Blue Hen Conference Flight A opener 5-3, despite giving up just one hit.

"It was a game of inches, and it just went against us today," said Newark coach Kermit Greer. "A couple of feet one way or the other and we win the game.

"The kids played very good defense, which I thought we could do. The pitching was better than I thought. We hit the ball better than I thought we would. I was very pleased with the performance."

Though hardly the fastest pitchers in the conference, Lisa Schaeffer and April Crook combined for a one hitter, walking 11. The pair walked Brandywine's leadoff batters in the first, second, fourth, fifth and sixth innings — all subsequently scored, aided by seven stolen bases and three passed balls.

Fine defensive plays by second baseman Kim Burke, shortstop Jessica Keppel and third baseman Donna Welker, including a pair of double plays, helped to prevent further scoring by the Bulldogs.

Newark High pitchers combined for a one-hitter.

After putting runners in scoring position in the second and third innings, the 'Jackets scored in the fourth. Tammie Deighan (2 for 3) and Pam Wisniewski hit singles, and Welker walked to load the bases.

Keppel lined out to second baseman Beth Miller, who doubled up Wisniewski at second, but an errant throw by Brandywine shortstop Karen Marshall allowed Deighan to tag up and score to make the score 3-1.

Newark pulled within two in the sixth inning, when Tammy Ferguson led off with a triple over the head of rightfielder Brandi Carero and Wisniewski knocked her in with a home run over the head of centerfielder Lexie King.

Bulldog pitcher Betsi Zalarico put the 'Jackets down in order in the seventh for her team's second win.

From the very beginning, Greer has believed defense would be the cornerstone of his team, and so far that confidence has not proven to be misplaced. For lack of dominant pitching, such will have to continue to be the case.

Diamonds win skating title

Some local skaters who don't make a career of competition earned national renown during the National Precision Skating Championship March 30-31 in Warwick, R.I.

The Delaware Diamonds, an adult team skating out of the University of Delaware, won the National Challenge Cup, the most important competition of the year. It was the first national honor for the team, which has been in existence for just six years.

The Precisionnaires, a team made up of high school and college students also skating out of the University, received a bronze medal for its performance in the National Silver Cup Finals at the same competition.

Precision skating is pretty much what it sounds like, a form of group skating focused on a variety of steps and formations to music that stresses precision.

"The judges look for accuracy in footwork, how it matches the tempo of the music, and the quality of the formations, like lines, circles and pinwheels," says Jane Koehler, a member of the team from the beginning. A performance is also judged on the number and difficulty of formations, the total speed of the performance, and the fulfillment of a minimum requirement of ice covered. The routine must have at least three music changes.

The Delaware Diamonds are part of the community skating program at the University skating center on South College Avenue. Many of the skaters are participants or graduates of the badge programs the skating center also runs. Backround and experience vary, making choreography and coordination difficult.

The 20 members of the team, one third of whom have been around from the beginning, hail from Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

They practice about an hour a week Wednesday nights in the arena, more before competition.

The Diamonds compete half a dozen times a year, outside of the regional, national and international competitions. They also participate in exhibitions and are always part of the big University ice shows in December and May.

The team is coached and choreographed by Elaine Ahern and Pam Welch, who also coach the University team. Alice Rakowski is the assistant manager.

Calling all girls: Track teams need runners!

by David Woolman

Though his team has lost only six meets in the last seven years, Newark High School coach Pat Walker will have the same problem as the rest of the local girls track coaches: Numbers.

Like the others, Walker only has two dozen or so out for a program that not so long ago drew three times that. It's too bad, because the Yellowjackets have the makings of a powerful team, one that with a little depth could improve on last year's 8-1 record and second place finish in Blue Hen Conference. Instead, they might just be happy to hold their own.

"With 22 kids, it's going to be tough to compete with the best," says Walker. "We're going to struggle this year."

Walker brings back eight letter winners, including Tonya Fussell, state champion shot putter and bronze medalist in the discus. Other upperclassmen returning are Jennifer Ferguson in the high jump and distance runner Jennifer Taggart.

Then, of course, come the sophomores. The four fleet, fabulous freshmen who finished second in the 4x100 relay last year — Shelly Butcher, Deanna Harden, Catena Evand and Christine Penn — return along with triple and long jumper Dannielle Grinnage. Those five figure to continue in those events and begin to sprint individually on a state championship level to form a strong core for the next three years.

Joining that group will be another sophomore, Laura McDowell, who has made a tremendous improvement over last year which showed in winter track. She will high jump, run the hurdles, and hopefully be an inspiration to the other young runners on the team, says Walker.

The sophomores are unusual in that Newark's strength in the past generally was in the distance events. As it is right now, the sprint relays are less than a second off school records in the 4x100 and 4x200.

"We work on baton passing every day," says Walker. "There are a lot of great sprinters out there, but in the 4x100 the whole thing is in the baton.

"Considering that, we should place. I think they should shoot for first place. The talent is there.

"With the limited number of kids we have, we'll be able to work more individually than in the past."

Christiana's Charles Michael has only a few more runners out, but his solace is that one is the best. Fresh off a record setting winter track season, Diana Pitts comes into the season with a few new goals. One of them in the 800.

As far as the rest of her sprinting is concerned, she will defend her state championship in the 200 and 400, as well as run in the 4x400 and the 100, in which she finished third in the state. The goals in her strong events are just times, 55 seconds in the quarter and 24 in the 200.

"I'm not looking for any state records," says Michaels. "As long as she progresses to those goals, we'll be happy. She's ahead of her competitors at this point anyway."

Pitts will never see the competitors Michaels refers to. They are just memories in Delaware high school track, with names like Combs, Huber and Dendy, owners of state records, and phrases like "the best to ever run is Delaware."

Others returning to the team are Wanda Brown, fourth in the state in shot and disc, distance runners Traci McMillan (also a triple jumper) and Cathy and Patty Cleveland, and hurdler Karen Reese.

New additions to the team will include Jane McKee, a distance runner from Ireland, Kim Clark and Heather Viprusky, also in the distances, hurdler and long jumper Dana Crampton and sprinters Angie Washington, Nicole Johnson, Alicia Holland and Natasha Dorsey. As of yet, the team has no high jumper.

Christina Penn of Newark High clears hurdle.

The team was 8-2 in dual meets last year, but may have a problem duplicating that feat without enough runners for the relays.

"Our depth is going to hurt us," says Michaels. "A lot of other teams have a lot of kids."

The St. Mark's freshmen contingent is like that at other local schools, and the newcomers will make up the bulk of coach Hilda Kraiss' team.

Gone are Maila Madric (on scholarship to Temple), Kristine Hamburger, Kelly Timmons and Julie Dombroski, the latter now running at the University of Delaware). Pam Leffler, last year's state 300 hurdle championship is injured and is a question mark for the season.

Among the returning are the ubiquitous Melanie Avenarius, who runs all the time and in just about every event, Kathleen Fitzgerald, a middle distance runner who with Avenarius and Dombrowski and Leffler finished second in the state in the 4x400 and fourth in the 4x200 and 4x800.

Also back are Jen Klemaszewski in the high jump and discus, Kathleen McManus in the high jump and Danielle Dorsey in the distance. Filling in the team will be Tammy Lazarski, Sandy Gallo, Kelly Costello and Liz Ruppersberger in the sprints, Rosana Lombardi in the distance events, and Tracey Johns and Gretchen Fairweather in the shot put. Costello will also high and triple jump.

"We're very young but ve / enthusiastic," says Kraiss of her team, which could very well follow after last year's over .500 record. "I'm impressed with their talent. The freshmen are going to get a lot of experience this year."

Glasgow is another team with but two dozen runners out, and coach Ron Hull will be working with the smallest returning group of letterman of all: two.

After losing a large senior class, which included state champion triple jumper Bernetta Brown, Hull comes back with self-made runner Morgan Icenogle, fresh off a fine season indoors. Icenogle figures to be a mainstay in the middle distances and relays. The other letterman is Jen Watkins, who will be used in the triple and long jumps, the hurdles and in the relays.

Of note on this year's team are Heather Wintermantle, a hurdler who will be joined in the middle distances by Jennifer Olson and Bev Bond. Olson, Cyndi Radford and Shelia Jackson will do the throwing, Kelly Bruno will run the hurdles, Kara Poludniak and Julie Pyne will sprint, with Pyne doing some jumping, and cross country letterman Mindy Stayton will be the lone distance runner for the team.

Hall notes that the team has never quite been the same since the strong group of runners that led the team to an 8-2 record three years ago graduated. The team was 2-8 last year.

Hull, Taylor lead Dragons

by David Woolman

The continued growth of the winter track program at Glasgow High School is beginning to pay off for the spring programs as well, Dragon coach John Reinholt has begun to find. Many of the runners who will be important to his team received conditioning and experience this winter and set this season up as a potentially positive one.

The team loses distance runner Andy Kirk and shot and discus thrower Mike Lambert, but brings back a number of seniors. Leading that group are Kris Hull in the hurdles, the team's total point leader last year, and sprinter Tony Taylor, fourth in the state in the 100 and 200.

Other returning seniors are Al Williams, Derek Horne and Tim Bishop, all hurdlers, Paul Thomas, a middle distance utility man, and Chuck Purnell, a long and triple jumper.

Reinholt has a dozen juniors he calls the core of the team, led by pole vaulter Jim McDade, third in the state last year, and state finalist John Thomas, in the 800 and 1600. Mike Kane will be a utility man, Bryan Bowers and Dave Campbell will throw shot and disc, Rob Riley will run distances and Jeff Vidal will run the quarter mile.

Football halfback Pat Williams will sprint if healthy. Two other football backs, Peyton Shephard and Tinielle Spicer, will also do some sprinting.

"I look for us to get stronger as the season goes on and the juniors and sophomores mature," says Reinholt, who looks for the team to improve to .500 or better this year. The Dragons host the Glasgow Invitational April 21-22.

Christiana loses some of the members of its fine 1988 relay teams, but doesn't lose the relays. Though small, coach Paul Ramseur's team should be able to put together some successful quartets at times this season.

The Vikings will compete without sprinter Johnnie Newson and middle distance runner Howard Gray, gone to graduation, but return, among others, sophomore Jason Jeffers, who Ramseur calls "one of the best half milers in the state."

Also back are Jason Williams in the hurdles, Everett Pringle and Karl Hairston in the sprints, and the man who defines utility, E.J. Bliey, who will compete in the long, triple and high jumps as well as run the 200, 400, 800 and the relays.

Paul Issacs will join the distance crew of Danny Farren, Dave Zeigler and John Ramirez. Other new runners will include utility man Tim Stevens, and middle distance runners Dave Moyes and Hairston Jameson. Brian Reeder will throw the shot and disc.

"I'm in a building phase," says Ramseur. "I'm not going to lose much. This year, we're going to concentrate on individual talent that will give us a good basis for next year.

"We'll hold our own in the dual meet season. We have some individuals who can make the state meet."

As far as the relays are concerned, it's business as usual at Christiana.

Says Ramseur, "If we can pass the baton like we've done in the past, we'll be OK."

Newark is in a rebuilding process as well after graduating much of last year's speedy sprinting crew. The core of this year's team will lie with the distance runners, specifically cross country stalwarts Brian Conley, John and Lee Brannon and Dave Winter.

Chuck Cowan returns to do the pole vaulting, along with David Duke and Mike Hall. Brian Pruitt, Mal Ward and Joe Rimmer will throw shot and disc, and Brian Jenkins, Derrik Jackson and Jeff Taylor will hold down the jumping events.

Newark's Brian Conley will run distance events.

The sprinting events are wide open at this point, with only Jeff Taylor, Curtis Douglas and Glenwood Jackson stadning out as of yet. Freshman Jermain Jones should make his presence felt on the team, as will first timer Dwayne Langston.

An unexpected addition to the team will be English import Spencer Dunkley, who's 6' 11' frame is said to be able to negotiate the 800 meters in under two minutes. Dunkley says he is enthused about the season.

"I definitely look for Conley and Brannon to do something in the distances, and Cowan in the pole vault," says coach Frank Smith of his state meet expectations. "There might be a couple of surprises. They're all competitive. But it's about a year before it will match up with last year's team."

St. Mark's coach Joe O'Neill has no Mike Murphy (state shot and disc champion currently at Virginia on scholarship) ready to take the state by storm, but does have some elements on his team that could signal a rebirth of Spartan track fortunes.

"We're strong in the throwing events and we have a lot of experience in the distance, but we're kind of thin in the sprints," says O'Neill. "We're inexperienced in the jumps, but we show promise."

Brock Gaither and Marty McCarthy make a strong tandem in the shot and disc, while Dan Keefer, Ted Milyo, John Ormsby, William Cummings, Vin Houck and Clark Miller all return to head up the distance events.

Jason Green, state placed in the 200 last year, will run hurdles

Newark golfers are above par

by David Woolman

If successful was not the word to describe the Newark High School golf team's 1988 season, fun would be. In a manic sort of way.

After carving out a respectable 8-4 record in Blue Hen Conference, the Yellowjackets went on to finish sixth in the state after freshman Jason Burns won the conference championship and freshman Matt Gordon came one stroke short of winning the state tournament.

If not for a number of last year's strong teams returning most of their players, Newark would be a favorite to improve its team finish, as coach Richard Skovronski returns seven of the top eight from last year.

The top five return, with a slight shakeup. Gordon, 10-2 in conference in the number two position last year, moves up to number one. Co-captain John Stritzinger, a junior, made improvements from last year's 10-1-1 conference performance in the third spot to move up to number two.

Burns, 6-3-3 in conference as number one last year, drops down to number three, though all are very close in ability.

Co-captain Ty Tomashek, 6-4-2 in conference last year, has shown Skovronski the greatest improvement, though he remains at number four. Dave White, 7-3-1 last year, remains at number five.

The remaining position, played last year by John Ludman, will be a tossup between Dan Jordan, Chris Murray, April Milstead, Russell Brill and John Murray.

"It should be interesting to see who will be (number six) at the end of the year," says Skovronski.

"We'll be one of the top teams, with the top four as strong as we are. We'll be a good tournament team. That's what we're geared to."

Tournament format, with only the top four scores counting, particularly suits the 'Jackets, whose strength lies in having number three and four players who are nearly as strong as the top two. Indeed, much could depend on Tomashek, the team's lone senior.

Newark opened the season with a 5-4 loss against Wilmington, one of the top five teams in the state.

Christiana also returns a number of top players, as well as adding Spanish exchange student Haime Rodriguez. Rodriguez belongs to the same club in Spain as touring professional Seve Ballesteros and could challenge Korey Johnson for the top spot during the year.

Presently, Johnson retains the number one position he had last year, and Rodriguez is in the two spot. Bob Ziegler, Brian DeGrave and Eric Crozier, all returners, will man the three through five spots, and Tom Copeland joins the team to be the sixth man. Coach Bill Perdew feels this team can imporve on last year's under .500 finish.

"It's hard to say, but I think we ought to finish .500 if we win the ones we're supposed to," says Perdew. The turnout for the team, 16, is the highest in years.

St. Mark's coach John Fiorelli also brings back a number of players, chiefly number one Kyle Mahew, runner-up in the state Junior Amateur last year.

"That gave him a lot of confidence," says Fiorelli of Mahew, who lost only one match in team play last year. "I really look for him to do well in the state tournament."

Kevin Heitzenroder returns at number two, and Sayjal Patel moves up from four to three to replace John Morneau. Jason Mazanek jumps from five to four.

Matt Rosa, who just took up the game last year, has made great strides to become the number five man, and Mike Fiori will take the sixth spot.

While the team won't be a contender for the state title, Fiorelli says, "we'll be really good in match play. Over nine holes we can stay with anybody."

Phil Deweese's Glasgow team is the only local squad to face rebuilding, having graduated Mike Miller, Chris Barton and Ken Brevoort. Miller will be hardest to replace, having been the number one man for the team all four years.

Reid Hubbard and John McLaughlin, number two and three last year, are a tossup for the top spot this year. The other returnee, Rich Mikus, who played five and six last year, moves up to number three.

Three sophomores and two freshmen will fight it out for the remaining three positions. They are sophomores Mike Hall, Craig Huffman and James Valencourt, and freshmen Jason Prodgers and D.J. Morrin. Hall is likely to take the number four postion.

Glasgow finished sixth in the conference tournament, led by McLaughlin's sixth place finish, though they had losing record in matches. Losing his top player doesn't make Deweese optomositic for the season, but the young blood looks good so far.

Says Deweese, "From what I've seen so far, we have a lot of potential."

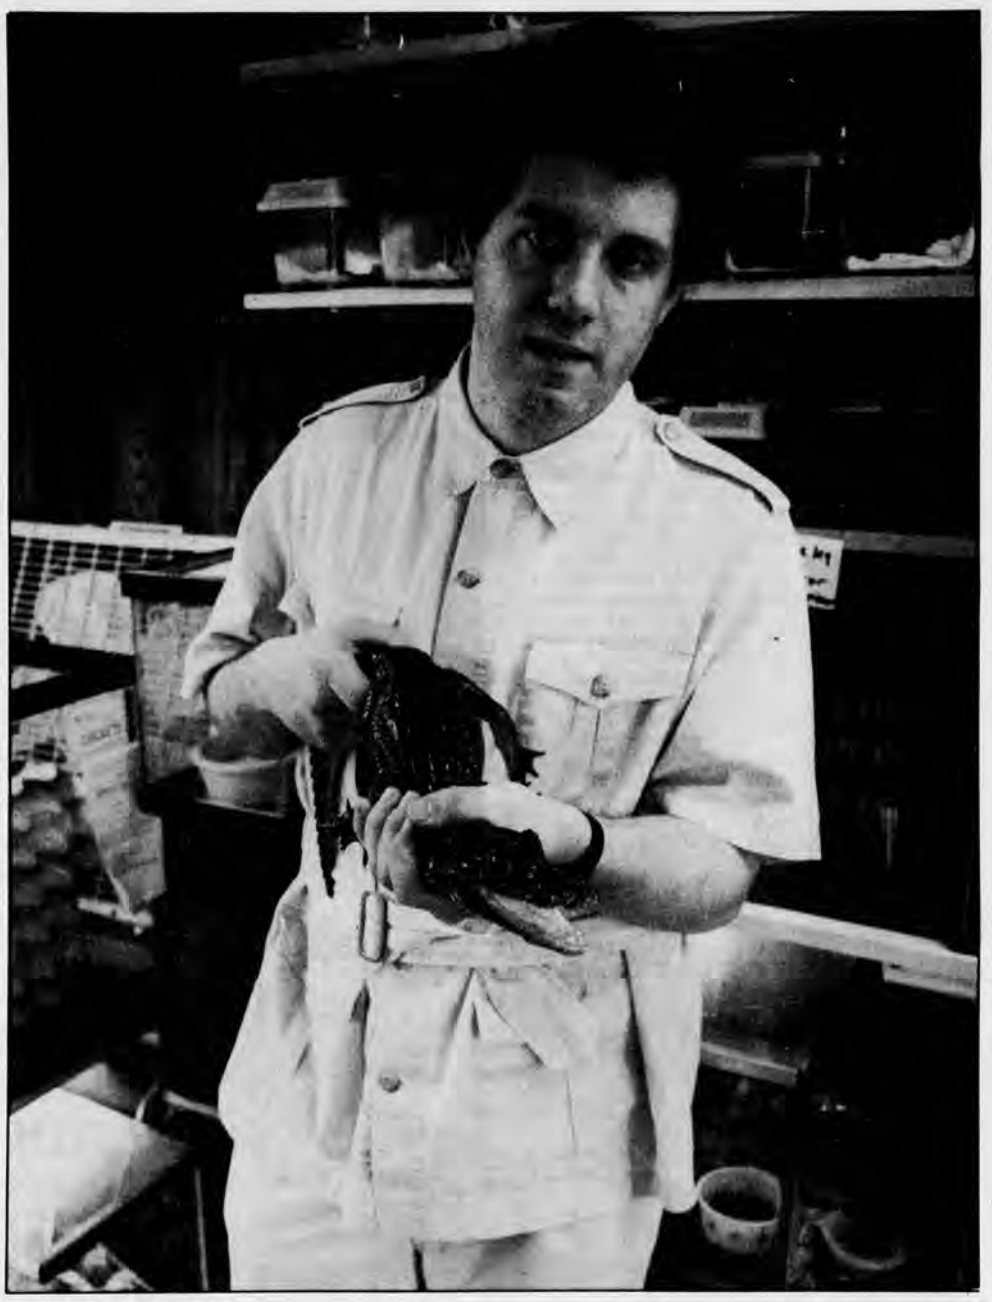
Leapin' lizards! It's Jungle John!

by Christine Reinhardt



John LaMedica, better known as Jungle John, shows a cayman. Photo/Robert Craig

Have you been thinking of putting Elliot the labrador retriever or Monique the Persian cat out to pasture and replacing him or her with a snazzier, less urbane pet? If so dial 655-FROG and ask for Jungle John. He'll take care of everything.

Jungle John, officially John LaMedica, owns John's Jungle at 209 W. 4th St. in Wilmington. This hip pet store specializes in reptiles and amphibians, and as LaMedica puts it, "It's a one of a kind pet store."

The store is a temporary home for more than 100 different varieties of snakes and scads of frogs and lizards and turtles.

It is even the scientific site for the research and breeding of rare snakes, lizards, and frogs. One up and coming project involves breeding a prized albino turtle.

"It's an adult male and we're going to get him some girlfriends," LaMedica jokes.

LaMedica, 30, opened John's Jungle last April. He rents the space from Fell's Pet Store, which provides the business' other star attraction — fish.

The reptile entrepreneur even offers medical advice should a purchased reptile become ill. And if he cannot solve the problem, he knows veterinarians throughout the country who are in the know on such maladies.

His expertise stems from a zookeeping degree from Santa Fe Community College in Gainesville, Fla., and from six and one-half years of experience as supervisor of the Brandywine Zoo.

Yet where did the fascination for frequently spurned creatures originate for this Newark resident?

LaMedica's earliest reptile recollection is at age five, when his great aunt and grandmother took him to New York's Bronx Zoo and The Museum of Natural History. That was the catalyst for his current lust for lizards and other cold-blooced creatures.

"As a little boy I would catch all kinds of snakes and turtles and keep them in kiddie pools," he remembers. "My mom said 'no more animals' and I'd still sneak them in in the middle of the night."

LaMedica, who personally owns approximately 200 snakes, no longer keeps this obsession under wraps. In fact, he takes it on the road as many as 10 to 12 times per week as part of his reptile show.

Donning a beige safari jacket and a pith helmet, he addresses children's birthday parties, company picnics, elementary schools, and even family reunions in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and Delaware.

Jungle John displays and discusses everything from giant boa constrictors to crocodiles to iguanas, charging from $65 for birthday parties to $250 for corporate events.

LaMedica used to do the travelling zoo show for the Brandywine Zoo, and when he opened John's Jungle he decided to create his own show.

He hopes to eventually have his own children's television show focusing on reptiles, but in the meantime he is content to guest star on others' shows.

On Feb. 25 he performed a three-minute children's segment on Philadelphia's "Captain Noah" show, which he describes as "a dream come true."

LaMedica's family moved from New York City to Newark when he was 11 years old, and he grew up watching Captain Noah. "I was like a little boy in awe of everything that was going on around me," he says of his moment in the limelight.

He also appeared on Channel 6's "Perspective" talk show in December, and both the Johnny Carson Show and the David Letterman Show await videotapes of his reptile act for consideration.

LaMedica especially enjoys working before children to dispel myths surrounding reptiles. For example, at birthday parties and schools he often lets the children touch the tamer animals.

"Unfortunately, many times parents have said 'Oh, snakes are bad; they'll bite you and hurt you,' and that's not necessarily true," he explains.

Jungle John's interest in children carries over into his personal life since the birth of his son four months ago. "He's basically Jungle John Jr., and he's my newest pet," he says.

Oh no, will there be two LaMedica reptile afficionados soon? Better make that three instead!

His wife Susan shares his interest, and he insists he held that as a prerequisite for marriage.

"We go to international herpetolgical (reptile) symposiums every year, and she talks shop with the best of them," he boasts. "She didn't do it on purpose; it just kind of rubbed off."

Despite his years of experience with reptiles, LaMedica cannot pinpoint why they intrigue him.

"I guess somebody had to do this job and I was the appointed one," he muses.

The house that George built

by David Woolman

In its scant eight years of existence, the baseball diamond on the southwest corner of Barksdale and Casho Mill roads has become the stuff of local legend, approaching if not quite equalling the story of how Edgar Allen Poe got booted from the Deer Park.

Known as Peter Marshall Field by some, and as Doubleday Field or Doubleday Gardens by others, the 6.2-acre swath of green and chain link fence has spawned its own mythology. Questions abound, such as:

- Why is it named after the former host of the Hollywood Squares?
- Why is it called "the house that Thorogood built?"
- Is it in fact built to the exact dimensions of Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox?

Paul Lynde fans would no doubt be chagrined to learn that the field is not named after a game show host, but for Newark's former city manager who was for the most part responsible for the field becoming a city park.

That Peter Marshall has left Newark for State College, Pa.

The field was in fact built by Thorogood, the rock 'n' roll star and a baseball nut who previously played on Newark's Kells Avenue fields, and who presently works out in professional ballparks while on the road with his band, the Delaware Destroyers.

Newark baseball guru Leroy Hill, part-time scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates, knew Thorogood through his children from way back in the pre-Destroyers time, when the guitarist would come by the Hill household to discuss Thorogood's favorite subject, baseball statistics.

Before 1980, the City of Newark lacked a true baseball field, outside of the one at Newark High School.

According to Hill, Thorogood wanted a place to play, and after a windfall of sorts, bought the site of an old warehouse. Doubleday Field was born.

"It was originally to be in the same constraints as Comiskey Park," says Hill.

However, Bert Talley, former president of the Newark Amateur League, changed the design slightly, bringing in the right field fence. Talley, it should be noted, is a left-handed hitter.

With the opening of the field around 1980 came the creation of the Newark Amateur League. Its two most famous teams, the Destroyers and the Chiefs, were sponsored by Thorogood. As the name implies, the Destroyers consisted of Thorogood's band.

Et tu, Julius?

I used to have something in common with Julius Caesar: neither one of us looked forward to the Ides of March. When the government moved the date taxes are due to April 15, I was disheartened and disappointed. That makes one less famous person that I could identify with. Although there were always two things that Julius and I never had in common: a fear of ending sentences with prepositions and an infatuation with a certain queen from Egypt.

Returning to the present, my panel of fiscal and financial experts maintains that the government postponed the day taxes were due to two reasons: 1) People owing Uncle Sam money needed more time to raise the money, and 2) Uncle Sam could delay paying tax refunds.

Here's my explanation: it takes at least four months to develop a barely hanging on by the fingernails grasp of the new "simplified, easy-to-read tax forms." These latest tax changes were supposed to bail out the middle class. If I read my tax return correctly, I am paying more than I did before the taxes were reformed. Thanks a lot, guys.

The tax reformers also have it in for kids. Any hard-working kid who saves his paper route money is penalized by paying taxes on the interest; whereas, the kid who spends all his money at the mall isn't. Sounds to me like the government is rewarding the grasshoppers and punishing the ants.

Then I learned that the newest edition of the Internal Revenue Manual promises that the IRS will be collecting taxes within 30 days of a nuclear attack. The only concession to the hapless victims is that IRS won't try to collect delinquent accounts in the "most adversely affected areas. However, in areas where the taxpaying potential is substantially unimpaired, enforced collection of delinquent accounts will be continued."

Why am I surprised? This is the very same government that declared catsup a vegetable.

Question: Who spends the money that the IRS collects?

Answer: Uncle Sam and his male minions.

Solution: As any housewife worth her window cleaner can tell you, it is as clear as the reflection in her mirror that saving money is the best way to cut taxes, and do I know the person to be put in charge of that. And if George Bush were a regular reader of this column, he would know, too: my Aunt Elizabeth.

Last year I suggested that people send their taxes to Aunt Elizabeth instead of Uncle Sam. Not only would she send them a handwritten thank you note, she would never spend $4,000 for an airplane toilet seat. Remember, this is the frugal lady who was still serving Thanksgiving turkey soup on Christmas Eve.

My grandmother came from the same thrifty stock. She was such an expert at unwrapping presents that she never had to buy wrapping paper. With this heritage is it any wonder that I have trouble tossing out old poinsettias, unmatched socks or grocery bags?

Last week as the ladies of the lunch table discussed the government's sad fiscal state, I discovered that almost every family has an Aunt Elizabeth, and any one of them would

Delaware Art Museum hosts sculpture exhibits

THE ARTS
Phil Toman

Two outstanding sculpture exhibits are now on at the Delaware Art Museum at 2301 Kentmere Parkway. They have been on since last month and will be ending soon, but I did want to tell you about them and not to be as lax as I was getting to see them.

The James Edward Kelly exhibit closes in ten days. It includes small versions of Kelly's equestrian statues and figures of Civil War generals as well as bronzes of characters from Charles Dickens and Washington Irving.

The Delaware Art Museum show is really a re-discovery of the work of an important designer of public sculpture of the late 19th and early 20th century. Kelly was well known as an artist, sculptor, poet, writer and engraver. He truly was one of our great American versatile artists.

If you have lived here very long, or ever lived in Wilmington, you have probably seen one of Kelly's best known works, the statue of Caesar Rodney in Rodney Square in front of the du Pont Building. Other commissions have included the famous plaque on Wall Street that shows George Washington praying at Valley Forge, statues of Generals Buford and Devlin at Gettysburg and Oliver Howard at Howard University.

With famous works like that, you see why I refer to this exhibit as a re-discovery. We have all seen many of his works, but his name may have escaped us. The next ten days are a wonderful opportunity, to get to know Kelly for the first or second time!

The second scupture exhibit now at the Delaware Art Museum will be on view through the end of the month. It is "Tom Bostelle: The Crossing." This is the premiere showing of this series of sand cast bronze sculpture figures by the nationally known artist from Chester County.

Though best known as a painter, Bostelle worked with bronze sculpture as early as 1960 when he made a group of small figures entitled "Dark Crowd." The idea of using crowds first came to him when he was stationed in Japan at the end of the war and observed large gatherings of Japanese soldiers at Osaka being dismissed from the army. He remembered them as "a wretched mass of humanity, dirty, disheveled, with nothing but a few remnants of clothing."

Bostelle is very adept in the use of shadows in his paintings. He began using them with his oil "Shadow, Self Portrait" in 1947. In the work now at DAM, "The Crossing," the figures are three dimensional and the artist has in effected lifted the shadows off the canvas and given them sculptural form. The horizontal photo with this column demonstrates my point.

Each life size figure is a completely realized sculpture with a persona of its own. Collectively, the figures can be arranged to fit the space the artist selects for them to occupy.

Right now there is a superb opportunity to see both exhibits at the museum with one trip. The hours are: Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Wednesday to Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday noon to 5 p.m. The DAM is closed Monday. Admission is always free.

Go and enjoy!

The Delaware Art Museum is hosting two different sculpture exhibits. Above, "Dr. George Hope Ryder," a 1926 work by James Edward Kelly. Left, "The Crossing," 1987, by Tom Bostelle.

Ensemble concert features premieres

Delaware Horn Ensemble, directed by Francis Orval, will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 20 in the University of Delaware's Loudis Recital Hall, Amstel Avenue.

The program features the world premiere performances of James Chlebak's "Lullaby" and J. Pehrson's "Hornucopia."

It also includes works by Kerkorian, Oldberg, Chattaway, Rossini and J.S. Bach.

Delaware Horn Ensemble represents the University of Delaware throughout the northeast in performances of music for French horn.

A charter member of the International Horn Society, the ensemble performed at the 1988 International Horn Convention in Potsdam, N.Y. It is composed of students of Orval, associate professor of music at the University.

Orval is well-known internationally as a French horn soloist and appeared in the summer of 1988 at both the Bartok Festival in Hungary and the Festival in Stavelot, Belgium.

Also in 1988, Orval made his New York recital debut at Merkin Hall.

The concert is free and open to the public. It is sponsored by the University of Delaware Department of Music.

Internationally-known horn player Francis Orval directs the Delaware Horn Ensemble.

Gelbart's 'Sly Fox' to open April 20

"Sly Fox," a madcap comedy by Larry Gelbart of "MASH" fame, will be staged this month by University Theatre.

Shows will be held Thursdays through Saturdays, April 20-22 and 27-29 in Mitchell Hall on the University of Delaware campus in Newark. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. for all shows.

"Sly Fox" is the story of Foxwell J. Sly, a scheming, rapacious miser who pretends he is on his deathbed to extract riches from a trio of equally greedy opportunists.

The opportunists try to lay claim to Sly's fortune, and one ever offers the "dying" man his wife.

Featured in the role of Sly is Peter Campbell of Wilmington. Other key roles will feature Joe Anthony, Jon Cooper, Michael Gry, Beth Henderson, Janet Milstein, Thomas Shade and George Tietze.

James Cunningham, professor of theater, will direct. Costumes are being designed by Andrea Barrier, and scenery, lighting and properties by Peter Vagenas. both of Newark.

All seats are reserved. Tickets cost $5, $4 for University faculty and staff, and $3 for students and senior citizens. To make reservations, call the Mitchell Hall box office at 451-2204.

Delbeau piano recital

Pianist Marie-Christine Delbeau of the University of Delaware will present her faculty debut recital at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 16 in Loudis Recital Hall on Amstel Avenue.

The recital is free and open to the public and features work by Franz Josef Haydn, Sergei Prokofiev and Johannes Brahms.

Delbeau, who joined the University music department as piano instructor in fall 1988, is an accomplished soloist and chamber musician.

Harrington Arts to stage hit musical 'Grease'

Saddle shoes and poodle skirts will be de riguer when the University of Delaware's Harrington Theatre Arts Company stages its production of the long-running Broadway hit "Grease."

"Grease" will open Friday, April 21 in Room 100 of Wolf Hall. It will continue April 22-23 and 27-29. Tickets will be available in Perkins Student Center on Academy Street and at the door.

Harrington Theatre Arts Company is a student-theater group marking its 15th anniversary.

"This is a really special show to do for our anniversary," said director Kristen Ratliff, a sophomore, "because it is not only fun to watch but also fun to work on."

Cast members agree. "Even though the show requires a major time commitment, I'm really having a good time so I don't mind too much," said Jerry Suissa, a biology major who will play Sonny.

While the acting and singing is fun, the set for "Grease" poses technical problems, primarly in arranging for a car to be driven onto the small Wolf Hall stage. "I don't know exactly how yet," said senior Joe Blasko, the show's technical director, "but we'll do it."

In conjunction with the show, Harrington Theatre Arts Company has planned an alumni weekend of activities to celebrate its conception in 1974.

The company began as a group which produced skits for the University's housing and residence life department and performed in dormitories.

Although the company now has enough money to stage major productions, its commitment to campus housing is as strong as ever, according to Laurie Lyon, programs coordinator. "The residence hall projects benefit everyone," she said. "The performers get acting experience, the residents get an entertaining program, and Housing gets a valuable resource."

☐ Borderlinks, a program to assist Central American refugees, will be discussed during a presentation Sunday evening, April 23 at Newark United Methodist Church, 69 E. Main St. Covered dish supper will begin at 5:30, with the presentation at 6:30. Guest speaker will be Ric Chase, northeast coordinator of the Tuscon, Ariz.-based Borderlinks program.

☐ "Daniel," a story of courage, 7 p.m. Sunday, April 23 by the Cherub and Junior Choirs of White Clay Creek Presbyterian Church, 15 Polly Drummond Hill Rd. The presentation is directed by Beverly McFarland and Kathi Busch. The public is invited.

Young people from Newark's St. John's/Holy Angels and Holy Family parishes attended the annual Nexus Conference for Youth, held recently at St. Mark's High School by the Catholic Diocese of Wilmington. Speakers included Rev. Don Kimball and Philadelphia television personality Ray Murray.

Borderlinks topic of presentation

Ric Chase, northeast coordinator of the Borderlinks program which assists Central American refugees, will speak Sunday evening, April 23 at Newark United Methodist Church, 69 E. Main St.

Chase will make an audio-visual presentation on the plight of the refugees and activities to help those refugees on the borderlands between the United States and Mexico.

Chase has spent much time in Central America and Mexico. He has worked extensively in Tuscon, Ariz. and other cities through which refugees enter the United States.

The evening will begin with a covered dish dinner at 5:30, followed by the program at 6:30.

Borderlinks is an educational program which provides an opportunity for people from around the country to visit the borderlands and learn more about the complex situation that exists in this unique part of the country.

It is an ecumenical project designed to inform and educate a broad-based and diverse church community about Central American refugees.

Faith communities, with their denominational and ecumenical networks, provide the only existing institutional foundation for building a lasting volunteer response system at the local level.

Borderlinks is a project of the Tuscon Ecumenical Council Task Force on Central American Refugees and the Synod of the Trinity of the Presbyterian Church, USA.

It is funded ecumenically from a variety of sources, including churches, church agencies and judicatories.

Faith Baptist hosts missions conference

Faith Baptist Church of Pike Creek is holding its annual missions conference this weekend.

The conference will open at 7 p.m. Friday, April 14 with presentations by Bob Kilgore, Ralph Cavanaugh and Jurgen Matthia.

Kilgore is a veteran missionary now service as chairman of the missions department at Philadelphia College of Bible. He was once president of the CAM International Seminary in Guatemala.

Cavanaugh will report on Outreach of Delaware, an organization ministering to persons in prisons in the state, and Matthia on the work of he and wife Joanie in West Germany through the Gospel Fellowship Association Mission.

Saturday activities will begin 8-10 a.m. with a father and son breakfast. Raymond Peters, vice president of Grace Missions of Haiti, will speak.

A mother and daughter luncheon, featuring speakers Roberta Eakins and Joanie Matthia, will be held 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Eakins has been serving as a missionary in Puerto Rico for 23 years, and is currently working with Grace Independent Baptist Mission.

Saturday evening, at 7 p.m., there will be presentations by Kilgore, Jurgen Matthia and Eakins.

Guests will work with Sunday School classes at 9:45 a.m. Sunday. Joe Kadtke of Outreach of Delaware will speak with the combine adult class, Peters with junior and senior high school students, Eakins with fifth and sixth grade girls, and Cavanaugh with fifth and sixth grade boys. Jurgen Matthia will be "roving missionary."

A GUIDE TO AREA WORSHIP SERVICES

LIFE FILE

Delaware seafood directory available

☐ The new Delaware Seafood Directory, listing outlets for such local specialties as black seabass and blue crab, is now available.

The directory, compiled by the University of Delaware Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service, is designed to introduce consumers to the products and services of seafood markets in the state.

Each of the 52 market listings include name, address, telephone number, seafood products and retail or wholesale services. A map is included to locate the general area of each market.

The directory includes a seafood availability chart which indicates the general availability of finfish and shellfish native to Mid-Atlantic waters.

For a free copy of the book, contact the University Marine Communications Office, 263 E. Main St., Newark, or call 451-8083.

Miss Delaware appreciation gala

☐ Second annual Miss Delaware Appreciation Gala will be held 2-5 p.m. Sunday, May 7 at the Newark Country Club.

Laura Kathleen Ludwig, Miss Delaware 1988, will be honored and the 15 young women vying for the 1989 title will be introduced.

Tickets cost $12 and may be ordered by calling 738-4303. Deadline is Saturday, April 29. Proceeds benefit the Miss Delaware scholarship fund.

Trail Club canoe outings

☐ The Wilmington Trail Club offers a wide range of paddle sport activities for people of all ages and abilities, including a canoe training program in which even the most sedentary of persons can learn to handle a paddle with aplomb.

The Wilmington Trail Club's canoe division paddles regularly on many of the local streams and rivers, including the Brandywine, Octoraro, Susquehanna and Delaware.

It also ventures onto more far flung streams, including the New River in West Virginia, the Shenandoah in Virginia and the Hudson in New York. Trips range from one day to one week.

For information, contact Judy Patton at 995-1217 (evenings).

Newark Rotary inducts new members

☐ The Newark Rotary Club inducted five new members, including its first two women members, during a meeting held April 3, according to Stanley Einhorn, club president.

The new members are Katie Jones, Gilbert Mahla, Tony Piovoso, Ray DiClemente and Dr. June Costin.

Costin is with the Catholic Campus Ministry at the University of Delaware and Jones is with Brown and Bigelow Inc.

Newark Rotary recently celebrated its 50th year of service to the community and to Rotary International. Through the Rotary's Polio Plus campaign, Newarkers have raised more than $28,000 to immunize children the world over against polio, tuberculosis and diphtheria.

Locally, the club sponsors several projects, including scholarships to top high school seniors in the Christina School District.

Delaware PEO plans convention

The Delaware State Chapter of the Philanthropic Education Organization (PEO) Sisterhood will hold its 10th annual state convention Saturday, April 29 at the Du-Pont Country Club.

There are 11 local chapters with more than 400 members in Delaware. Chapter A of Wilmington, this year's convention hostess chapter, anticipates an enthusiastic attendance.

The convention theme is "PEO: A Gift of Love." To open the festivities, a pre-convention banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. Friday, April 28. It will feature the entertainment of musical duo Charles and Norma Reed.

Kids missing out on nursery rhymes

CHILDREN'S BOOK BAG
John Micklos

Sadly, teachers report that many children today start school without ever having been exposed to the nursery rhymes that have delighted generations of youngsters. Children love nursery rhymes and poetry, and the books listed here represent some of the best in these areas.

• "Tomie dePaola's Mother Goose," selected and illustrated by Tomie dePaola, published by G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1985, 128 pp.

This collection of over 200 Mother Goose nursery rhymes includes all of the well-known favorites, as well as some of the more obscure ones. The rhymes are enhanced by dePaola's bright, cheery artwork. The book inlcudes an index of first lines for easy reference. Parents and children may also enjoy sharing "Tomie dePaola's Favorite Nursery Tales" (Putnam, 1986).

• "The Random House Book of Mother Goose," selected and illustrated by Arnold Lobel, published by Random House, 1986, 176 pp.

This treasury of 306 timeless nursery rhymes features the elegant artwork of Arnold Lobel, who won the prestigious Caldecott Medal for illustration in 1981.

The book, which took three years to prepare, was a highlight in Lobel's long and distinguished career. It also includes an index of first lines.

• "The Mother Goose Book," illustrated by Alice and Martin Provensen, published by Random House, 1976, 60 pp.

This book provides yet another collection of Mother Goose favorites, lovingly illustrated by a pair of award-winning illustrators. This book, too, includes an index of first lines. It is interesting to compare these various Mother Goose books in terms of the minor variations in the rhymes themselves and in the ways they are illustrated.

• "A Visit to William Blake's Inn: Poems for Innocent and Experienced Travelers," by Nancy Willard, illustrated by Alice and Martin Provensen, published by Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich, 1981, 44 pp.

This award-winning book features poetry of the sort written by 18th century English poet William Blake. The book consists of poems about life at an imaginary inn run by William Blake himself. The poems are reminiscent of Blake's style, and the wonderful illustrations depict London as it was during Blake's time.

• "Click, Rumble, Roar: Poems About Machines," selected by Lee Bennett Hopkins, photographs by Anna Held Audette, published by Thomas Y. Crowell, 1987, 40 pp.

Children are fascinated by machines, and this collection of contemporary poetry focuses on the operation of machines such as cars, escalators, helicopters, and trains. The book features selections by a number of popular poets, and striking black and white photos augment the text.

• Tip of the Month: Poetry and rhymes help children learn about language, as they learn to love the beauty and fun that language can offer.

GEORGE

The Chiefs, however, were a motley amalgem of lonesome George's drinking buddies from the Deer Park who were so inept that they were 0-28 in their first season.

(Which is as good a time as any to explain the apocryphal story about how Edgar Allen Poe, after a poor reception of his work at Delaware College, is believed to have drunken himself silly and been tossed out of the Deer Park, hence the tavern's use of the raven as its symbol. Actually, the tavern became the Deer Park sometime after Poe's death.)

Thorogood refused to play with the Chiefs, holding down second base for the Destroyers until Hill warned him that he could hurt his guitar hand — and sacrifice his livelihood — at that position. Thorogood played outfield from then on.

"One of the guys on the Chiefs owned a cigar store Indian," recalls Hill. "They used to put him in the corner of the dugout, sort of like a mascot, and when they got down by 10 runs they'd turn him around so he couldn't see how bad it was."

After a few years, Thorogood asked Hill, who had helped take care of the field from the very beginning, to straighten out the Chiefs. Hill became the manager of the team, which eventually turned into the Buccos team that still exists today.

Hill takes pride in the fact that 17 players received full or partial scholarships in part due to their association with the team.

When Thorogood married and moved to California in 1986, he sold the field to the City of Newark, which under the aegis of Marshall bought it with the proviso that the city not have to provide upkeep.

Currently, the land is being leased to the Newark Babe Ruth League, which is responsible for the grounds.

"It's kind of unique," says Jim Hall, director of the Newark Department of Parks and Recreation. "It's the only piece of land leased this way."

As has always been the case, much of the work is done by Hill along with Max Walton and Bill Bonds. Hill oversees the use of the facility, which is currently being used by the Newark Babe Ruth division for 14-15 year olds, along with the new Vic Willis League, the Newark High School junior varsity, and Immaculate Conception School from Elkton, Md.

And it can be used by just about anyone who wants, as long as they organize it with Hill.

There's only one restriction — no softball, only baseball. Lonesome George would probably like it that way.

JULIUS

make a splendid addition to the President Council of Economic Advisors.

Lydia said that her Aunt Elise kept the same red bike (with and without training wheels) functioning for five children and seven grandchildren. Her winter-coat-hand-me-down-policy could be a model of efficiency and practicality for the Defense Department.

But the prize goes to Esther's Aunt Hilda who has one of the most extensive collections of warped plastic refrigerator dishes in the Pacific Northwest; moreover, she has kept all the lids and can get the lids on the containers. Which means that she gets my vote for putting the lid on taxes.

LIFESTYLE

This is a great time to start an indoor herb garden

By the first day of spring, many home gardeners are ready to get out of the house. Unfortunately, early spring doesn't always provide warm gardening days. One way to get through this in-between time is to plant an indoor herb garden, says Maggie Moor, Delaware Extension garden agent.

If you start an herb garden indoors now, the seedlings should be ready for transplanting outside just in time for warmer weather, Moor says. (For apartment-dwellers and people who don't like the heat, an herb garden can also be kept inside during the summer.)

To decide which herbs to grow, select those that you often use in cooking or that are difficult to find in local stores. If you plan to keep your herb garden indoors, the best choices are low-growing, compact varieties such as caraway, coriander, chives, mint (apple mint, peppermint, spearmint), oregano, parsley, sage (garden, golden and pineapple) and thyme (common and lemon).

You can start your herb garden in clean containers that have enough holes in the bottom for proper drainage. Use a loose soil mix that won't become packed after watering. "Any commercial soil medium should do nicely," Moor says, "but you can add peat moss and perlite to increase the pore spaces."

Fill planting containers with soil up to three-fourths of an inch from the top, and firm this down with the palm of your hand. Then place herb seeds into the soil and cover with more soil. Check the seed packet for recommendations on seed depth, Moor says. And don't bury fine seeds. Just press them lightly into the soil's surface.

Don't forget to label each container. If you mix different types of herbs in one container, plant one type to a row. For an ideal way to keep track of them, you can mark the rows with popsicle sticks labeled with magic marker, Moor suggests.

Water the seeds carefully with a fine spray, taking care not to wash them in deeper or out of their original spot in the container. Or you can water by soaking the bottom of the container in a dish or a sink filled with water so that moisture is drawn up into the soil, says the garden agent. "Either method is fine, but for seed germination, the soil should remain moist, not soaking wet."

The newly sown seeds will also need warmth to germinate. According to Moor, an ideal temperature of about 75 degrees Fahrenheit will usually give you sprouts in just a couple of days.

After germination, continue to keep the new seedlings in a warm location, such as a windowsill, where they will receive light, Moor says. But remember that direct sunlight may be too hot. Turn the containers every other day to give the seedlings equal light exposure.

When your seedlings have two sets of true leaves, they're ready to be thinned. Pull out and discard any weak seedlings. You can also transplant a few healthy seedlings, especially if you have a lot of plants in one container. "This transplanting will give the herb plants more room to develop," says the garden agent. "It may also provide you with another windowsill herb garden to share with a friend or to give as a Mother's Day Gift."

Once the weather is warm enough, usually around mid-May, you can move your herb plants outside, Moor says.
