Newark embraces new community center

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The Jewish Community Center has opened its doors in downtown Newark, but its focus is hardly just this small city or just Jewish families.

"Our programs are open to everyone (in the community)," said program coordinator Lynda Bell. "And we're looking for people from Bear, Middletown, Maryland and Pennsylvania."

Prior to November 1999, the only Jewish community center in the area was located in Wilmington. "We want them to know there is something in Newark for them and that we'd like to meet them."

The new center offers programs to encourage Jewish people who are not affiliated with a synagogue to become involved and meet others in the area. Demographics show numerous Jewish families in the surrounding areas who aren't having their needs met, Bell said.

Funded by the United Way of Delaware and the Jewish Federation of Delaware, the center will offer educational and social programs, she said.

"If they're new in the area and would like to meet other Jewish people, I'd be glad to get them involved and introduce them to others," said Bell, who presently is the only staff member at the center.

The first session of classes started this fall, but will be extended and will run again beginning in January. "We have gotten a really good response to our programs, but there is room for more," Bell said.

For instance, the Mah Jongg group filled early for January but has a waiting list started for March. "I know they're there and I want to have interesting programs for them," Bell said.

The Newark center presently offers a quilting class, a kosher restaurant gourmet series, a "Mommy and Me" class, a book club, and a Chavurah, a group of adults with similar interests who create a social community to share activities.

Also scheduled are support groups for divorced adults and children of divorce, a women's group, and interfaith couples.

Most classes meet at the center at 280 East Main St., but some like the book club meet outside the offices. In the future, if the center has enough support, they could expand and offer other services, Bell said.

"For now, we need to find out if the demographics hold true," she said. "Our hope is to get some support and see a lot of people interested. That will tell us there is a need for more."

Brookside will raise dues

Bankruptcy averted by annual increase of $20

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A majority of property owners voted to increase maintenance association dues and avert bankruptcy in the community of Brookside, but not everyone is happy.

Dorothy White, a resident of the Fireside Park area of Brookside since 1959, said she didn't know anything about the dues increase until she received a flier the week before the referendum.

POLICE BRIEFS

Great Blue Heron death questioned

Newark Police are investigating a cruelty to animal incident involving the death of a state and federally-protected species of fowl.

According to Media Officer Mark Farrall, a Great Blue Heron was found dead from apparent blunt trauma on Feb. 8 in a parking lot in the 1300 block of Barksdale Road. "'There is a question of whether the bird's head was crushed before or after it died," said Farrall. "TriState Bird and Rescue is determining the cause of death for us."

If it is found that the animal was deliberately killed, Farrall said the case will be turned over the the Fish and Wildlife Division to pursue state and federal criminal penalties. Anyone with information is asked to call Newark Police at 366-7110, the Division of Fish and Wildlife at 302-739-3440 or Crimestoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

Suspects try to run over police officers

Newark Police arrested two men after they allegedly attempted to run into police officers on Feb. 3 around 3:30 a.m. An officer reported he saw Adam Walls, 20, of Seaford, and Julio Burgos, 26, of Wilmington, break into a parked vehicle at the 100 block of Thorn Lane and try to remove stereo equipment. When officers tired to apprehend them the men got into their vehicle and tried to drive away, nearly striking the officers. Due to ice on the ground, the vehicle did not gain traction and the officers were not struck. Police were forced to break the windows of the vehicle and pull the defendants from the inside while the driver continued to try to accelerate on the slick surface. One officer was treated and released from Christiana Hospital for a sprained knee suffered while avoiding the fleeing vehicle. Subsequent investigation showed the two men were responsible for a second theft from a motor vehicle in the 300 block of Christina Mill Drive. They were charged with reckless endangering, criminal mischief, assault, resisting arrest, theft, burglary, receiving stolen property, conspiracy and possession of burglary tools. Walls was also charged with criminal impersonation.

Information sought in shooting

Newark Police are seeking information about an alleged shooting that occurred on Sunday, Feb. 6. Officers were called to the Newark Emergency Room where Lerone W. Blatch, 32, of Wilmington was being treated for a gunshot wound to the right thigh. Police said Blatch, a black male, told them he was standing by his car when an unknown man described only as having bushy hair and wearing a blue-hooded sweatshirt pulled up around his face and black driving gloves, came up to Blatch and shot him during a brief struggle. The unknown suspect then fled. The man said he began walking and was picked up on Cleveland Avenue by an unknown couple who took him to the hospital. Police were unable to locate the couple or Blatch's vehicle. Anyone with information is asked to call police at 366-7111 or Crimestoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

Arrest made in graffiti incidents

Costs continue for area businesses

On Feb. 5 around 2:10 a.m., Newark Police charged Donald Gary McDermott Jr., 21, of West Grove, Pa., with a graffiti offense after he was observed spraypainting the exterior wall of Wilmington Trust Bank on Main Street. Police chased and arrested McDermott who was also charged with painting the outside of Fatty Patty's restaurant.

Media Officer Mark Farrall said the investigation is continuing and police are devoting a lot of resources to the recent incidents of graffiti and criminal mischief in Newark.

The Newark Post reported on the rash of graffiti incidents with damage of more than $7,300 in the issue of Jan. 28.

Newark Police subsequently reported gold paint sprayed on the guard shack in the parking lot at Wilmington Trust, on two dumpsters owned by Harvey and Harvey at 83 E. Main Street, on the exteriors of Fatty Patty's, California Style Nails, Peace of Pizza and Great Impressions, and on a heating unit at TCBY, all on the night of Jan. 27.

Unknown persons also sprayed blue paint on the exterior of Brewed Awakenings,and Rainbow Records on Main Street on Feb. 1 sometime between midnight and 1 a.m. Damage in these incidents was estimated at more than $300.

On the night of Jan. 29, unknown suspects damaged the front deck at Brewed Awakenings, scratched words into the brick facade at the Newark Train Station, and shot a hole with a pellet gun in windows at Happy Harry's, Perfections, Mailboxes Etc., and Rainbow Records on Main Street. Damage was estimated more than $600.

On the night of Jan. 24-25, unknown suspects broke glass windows and doors with a pellet gun at 90 E. Main street, National 5 and 10, and Save on Sneaks causing damage of more than $800.

Anyone with information about any of these incidents is asked to call police at 366-7111.

Students left alone on bus

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Parents of students at Bancroft Elementary School were reassured by Christina District officials about a bus incident last week but still want a promise it won't happen again.

According to District transportation supervisor Ron Albence, he talked to several parents about the Feb. 1 incident in which a female bus driver left the bus a few blocks from the school. "Apparently she slid into some cars in the snow," said Albence. "She got off to see if there was any damage, which she should, but that left the kids alone on the bus. It's a Catch-22."

Albence said school buses have "taken a lot of mirrors off vehicles" with the snow conditions. "The streets aren't plowed in Wilmington," he said.

One 5th grader told her mother that while the driver was off the bus, two older boys stood outside and displayed pocket knives. "Then they got on and off the bus several times," said the mother who did not want her name used. "Finally, one kid held the bus door shut to keep them out. The kids were scared."

The bus driver was angry when she found the door closed and would not listen to the children who loudly tried to tell her about the boys. "She took the bus back to Bancroft and told the principal the students were out of control," said the mother. "The principal told her to write up the children who caused the problem and they would be suspended."

On Wednesday, Feb. 2, a group of mothers went to the school to talk to the staff. As a result, no children were suspended.

Albence said the district took the complaints and talked to the Murray Bus Company which supplied the bus and driver. "The bus driver was misinformed about what the children were trying to tell her and apparently didn't tell the school what had happened when she took them back there," said Albence.

"However, that driver is no longer driving for the Christina District. I don't know if she's driving for any other district."

According to Albence, he also talked to some of the children who were on the bus. "There is some question as to whether the boys actually had knives or got on the bus or just on the step," said Albence. "There is also some question about how long the driver was gone."

District officials have discussed putting paraprofessionals on the buses to assist the drivers. "We do sometimes on bus routes where there are problems, but this is not one of them," he said. "The parents wanted to have them (on all buses) but the state didn't give us the money to pay them."

The mother was happy no one was hurt but still uncomfortable. "I don't like the kids left alone on the bus," she said. "That's what they have radios for, isn't it?"

Grant will not run for City Council again

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Gerald J. Grant Jr., a Newark city councilmember for the past six years, has decided to give someone else a shot at the seat in District 6.

"I'd like to see somebody step forward with some fresh ideas," said Grant. "Sometimes I think council is too conservative."

Since running for his first term, Grant has attended law school and now works at a law firm in Philadelphia. "I'm not burnt out or soured," he said. "I just have too many personal demands on my time – my house is going to hell – and I can't give council that time anymore."

Grant defeated longtime councilmember Olan Thomas in his first campaign and ran unopposed in the subsequent two elections.

He feels his time on the council has been interesting and productive.

"I think the downtown is better, now," he said. "There were a lot of empty storefronts when I first ran and only a few apartments upstairs."

Grant was no stranger to the downtown when he first sought a council seat. He had owned a record store on the site where the Charcoal Pit is now being built. He also managed the National 5 and 10 on Main Street before starting his law career.

Grant

"I got to know so much more about city government," he said. "I had no idea of the communities out along Paper Mill Road and I thought the center of town was still full of owner/residents. I found out it's more like 50-60-70 percent rentals."

However, Grant thinks downtown is where the rentals should be. "I think it's good for the town and good for the businesses," he said. "It doesn't matter that they are mostly students."

Among his successes, Grant noted that he got the time for paying parking meters changed from 9 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday nights during his first term.

At that time, the parking meters only had to be used until 6 p.m. on other nights of the week.

"The downtown was pretty dead then, anyway," he said, "and the people who came down to dinner on Fridays were complaining about tickets when they came back to their cars."

Councilmembers Frank Osborne and Karl Kalbacher, also up for re-election, have stated they will run again.

As of Tuesday, no one else had filed to run. The last day for filing for the April 4 election is March 13.

Residents invited to meetings

▶ BROOKSIDE, from 1

"The flier and newsletter only said they were having a vote to raise the dues by $10," said White. "When we went to vote, the choices were to raise dues $10 or by $20.

"I think they should have told us that in advance."

White also said some residents were not allowed to vote because they were delinquent in their dues and she wasn't sure that was fair, either.

"And what do we get for these dues?" White asked. "They don't plow, we don't have any police – we do use the parkland but everybody does."

White said many of her neighbors are also longtime residents. "A whole mess of houses couldn't get there because of the weather on Friday and not everybody had transportation to get there on Saturday," she said. "Also, a man in front of me was told he couldn't vote because his dues weren't paid but they finally found the payment and let him vote. Maybe there were other people like that."

According to Rose Yannes, president of Brookside Community Inc., the community has 1,338 households and each property has two votes. "About 10 percent of those are not current in their dues," she said. "We have to sue them to and that costs money, too."

Yannes said a "majority" of voters chose a $20 increase.

"Of those voting, 142 wanted a $10 increase, 280 people voted for a $20 increase, and 145 voted for no increase," she said. "We had about 92 households that came out on Friday, Feb. 4, to vote and about the same on Saturday morning."

This is the largest turnout they ever had for a referendum, Yannes said. "People at the informational meeting on Feb. 1 told us Brookside is a nice community and they didn't want it to go downhill like some other communities," she said. "Many of them didn't understand how a maintenance association works or what we do."

The Newark Post published a story on Jan. 21 concerning the financial crisis in Brookside and the referendum for the dues increase.

"We also sent information to all the households, "Yannes said. "We put in phone numbers to call and said 'please come to the meetings and learn what is going on.' The people who said they wanted more information could have called at least."

Yannes said as long as the increased dues are paid, the community is financially secure for another few years. "We beg people to come to the association meetings on the first Tuesday of each month," she said. "You don't have to come every month, but you will find out what's happening in the community and meet the people who do the work."

Library to remain open during renovations

▶ LIBRARY, from 1

Charlesa Lowell, head librarian at the Newark Library, said they are holding a public meeting with the architects on Feb. 23 from 7 to 8 p.m.

Lowell said it is important that the Newark community be proud of the new construction.

"We want people to come and tell us what they think of when they think of Newark," she said. "What are the icons, so to speak, or visible symbols of the community that might be incorporated into the exterior?"

Lowell said public comments were gathered during a month-long poll at the library almost a year ago. "That's what we used to determine the use of the new space," she said.

Former Newark head librarian Yvonne Puffer also was hired as a consultant to help in the building program and space requirements.

The scheduled renovations will almost the double the size of the library from 15,000 to 27,500 square feet. Included in the $4.3 million project are almost 25 percent more collection materials, meeting space for up to 100 people, and a new children's area. Among the innovations is a Reading Loft to provide a special environment for young readers, and a Program Room with storage, sinks and equipment to accomodate crafts and video programs, storytimes and performers.

Improved lighting and updated technology are also in the plans. "The whole library will be to 'wired to the hilt,'" Lowell noted. "A businessman, or anyone else, will be able to come in, plug in their laptop and work here if they wish."

All County libraries currently have computer workstations and patrons can use their library cards to access the Internet as well as browse through library catalogues.

According to Lowell, the renovation and expansion will be phased so the library will be open for virtually the whole time. "When we have to close, I've asked that it be done in one lending period," Lowell explained, "so we can say, 'you can borrow as many books as you want for the next three weeks and then we'll be open when you need to return them."

However, there will be a short time when the library will be open but have to operate in smaller quarters. "I don't know how long that will last," said Lowell. "I hope not long, but that's something else we want people to tell us – what's most imporant to keep accessible and what can we store for a time?"

When completed by the end of 2001, the Newark Library is expected to be more user friendly, open and bright, and will offer a variety of community programs.

"Library facilities have changed drastically over the last 20 years," said Lowell. "Today, we have a diverse group of people using the library for a variety of functions. We want to make the Newark Library an attractive, lively place for all of them."

Heating and cooling your home typically accounts for 44% of your total energy use.

The typical U.S. family spends close to $1,300 a year on utility bills. And a large portion of the energy Americans use is wasted through poorly insulated windows, doors and attics. In fact, all that wasted energy is about equal to the amount we get from the Alaskan pipeline each year.

And with the recent cold spell, you may be using more energy than you realize, which could result in an unexpectedly higher energy bill. So here are some simple energy-saving tips from Conectiv Power Delivery to help you reduce your energy consumption and get the most for your energy dollar:

❄ Turn down your thermostat from 72 to 68 degrees for eight hours a day, and you can save as much as 10% on energy costs.

❄ Inspect your attic or crawl space to make sure it has more than 12 inches of insulation. If not, add another layer. Appropriate insulation can increase the comfort in your home, and reduce heating and cooling costs up to 30%.

❄ When your fireplace is not in use, keep the damper closed so warm air doesn't go right up the chimney. Keeping it open is like keeping a window wide open all winter long.

❄ Wet your fingertips and run them around your window frames. If you feel a draft, seal the moving parts of the window with weather-stripping and the non-moving parts with caulk. Poorly insulated windows can account for 10% to 25% of your heating bill.

❄ Use cold water to wash clothes. By switching from hot to cold water, you'll save about fifty dollars per year. You can also save by putting a dry towel in the dryer with each load of wet clothes. The towel will absorb dampness and help reduce drying time.

❄ Run your dishwasher only when it's fully loaded. According to the Association of Appliance Manufacturers, this will use less energy than washing your dishes by hand.

❄ Use your microwave to cook meals. It uses about half the energy as a conventional oven.

❄ If you have a gas stove, look for blue flames. If you see yellow flames, that is an indication that the gas is burning inefficiently and an adjustment may be needed.

Telling the stories

At Gettysburg on Nov. 19, 1863, in his famous address Abraham Lincoln predicted "the world will little note, nor long remember what we say here." Such may be the case with a bit of information on our front page this week.

If you look carefully at our front-page "flag," you'll notice that we have begun our 91st year of publication. We're proud that we have survived for nine decades. And we thank you for your role in our existence.

The mere survival of a community newspaper for 90 years is itself noteworthy. The Newark Ledger, which was founded in 1876, is long gone. This newspaper as it exists today is, in fact, a derivative of the original Newark Post, the Newark Weekly and the Weekly Post. Delaware's libraries are cluttered with yellowed clippings and microfilm of other newspapers that have died.

We thank those before us on the staff for their hard work and diligence. We appreciate the readers who have plopped their nickels and dimes down through the years to buy the Newark Post. As well, we offer our appreciation to many advertisers through the years, large and small alike, who have supported our news-gathering efforts and seen the value of sending their message via our pages.

Equally important to the survival of this newspaper is the vitality of Newark itself. Since 1910, the citizens of Newark has placed importance on their sense of community. Residents are interested in their hometown. Good and bad, they've given us much to write. While some areas in Delaware, some of which are not very far away, have had their identity gobbled by suburban sprawl, Newark has remained very much an important universe to those who live and do business here.

The founder of this newspaper, Everett Johnson, was quick to speak his mind in editorials and publicly dictate the policies that would guide this newspaper.

Seventy-five years ago this month, he described the Newark Post's news philosophy:

"We feature news of Newark... We advertise our town, tell its story and try to reflect the spirit...of the good folk living here... Every organization, society or individual with an idea that would seem to help the town has our support. This policy is ours always... Whether we agree personally or not makes no difference in our news columns. Every one is welcome to tell his story..."

Some things never change.

AMUSED, CONFUSED, BEMUSED

The Saga of Wounded Knee – or never on Sunday!

By MARVIN HUMMEL

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

An eight-stairs fall (backwards to make it quirky) has taught me some lessons that many millions already knew, but you have to learn them from your own debacle.

HUMMEL

Once it was obvious after the fall that "Something Big" was wrong with my knee and that ice wasn't deflating its balloon size nor was aspirin remotely touching its pain, I reconnoitered.

It was Sunday afternoon, and I recognized my stupidity immediately: you should only get hurt during doctors' office hours! Remorsefully, I thought of all the thousands of times I had traversed those stairs during office hours! Not one fall at a convenient time! Dummy!

ER was a possibility, but I see their TV show on Thursday nights: a knee is a terrible thing to waste, and with their long work hours, fierce political infighting, and sexual romps in the linen closets, I could end up stumped! I'd wait until Monday.

There were no bullets to bite, so I shredded my tongue/cheek/lips complex. Sleep was not possible, but I had a companion during those nasty hours before medical receptionists get to their phones on Monday: my knee.

It was a separate entity, like some puffy, poisonous barnacle that had attached itself to my lower thigh and upper calf for the sole purpose of disseminating pain all through me. My teeth ached; my toes were in extremis.

On Monday, I started phoning Doctor Number One's receptionist at 8:45 a.m,.and at 9:15 a.m. made it to "Hold!" And hold I did, nearly ad nauseam! When my big moment came at 10:15 a.m., I had no idea where my "dirigible" fit into the categories offered! Then I got to hold some more. I reminded myself that it wasn't "their" fault I chose to fall on a Sunday. That wisdom kept me going.

Do you ever get a hunch? After waiting another hour, I began to sense that things weren't going well. Reluctantly, I surrendered my place in electronic limbo and called another physician who had absolutely no obligation to me, Hippocratic or otherwise. Within five minutes, he told me to get my big fat knee into his office!!!

Stick shifts and one usable leg don't make it. (I have since bought an automatic transmission!) I mooched a ride and was taken by Doctor Number Two on a "crash" basis toute suite! Doctor Number Two drained my knee: he had hoped for fluid, I for air; it was red stuff! Immediate X-rays. Two breaks: one in the plateau of one knee bone and the cap of another. It was pretty interesting: I had never known knee bones

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This photo of a solar eclipse was made on the morning of Jan. 24, 1925, by L.R.Detjen and G.F. Gray at the University of Delaware through an open window on the third floor of Wolf Hall. The time of the exposures was (L to R): 7:55, 8, 8:10, 8:20, 8:30, 8:40, 8:50, 9, 9:10, 9:20, 9:30, 9:40, 10, 10:10, 10:20 and 10:25 a.m. According to a news report in the Newark Post of Jan. 28, 1925, the two men used an ordinary camera in the test, with no appliance save a light filter in front of the lens and smoked glass. The picture ran on the front page of the newspaper. During the event, "a tiny slice of light from the sun kept people from bumping into one another in the dark for the two minutes of almost totality...(when) an abnormal purplish light blanketed the earth."
Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark 19713. Special care will be taken and photos can be returned. For information, call 737-0724.

Questions answered by Mr. duPont

At a number of the meetings held recently to discuss the school building program suggested by Pierre S. duPont, people in the audience have asked Mr. duPont who would decide what schools were to be built, the kind to be built and whether a school district could be compelled to erect a new building if it did not desire to do so.

In each case, Mr.. duPont has replied that the State Board of Education, outside of Wilmington, would decide. No district could get a school until it had provided twenty per centum of the total cost by a bond issue and no bond issue can be made without it is approved by a majority of the people of a district at an election held for the purpose.

Bill offered in Senate to widen Depot Road here

Senator L. Heisler Ball, on February 3rd, last offered bill to the United States Senate to convey to the town of Newark, Delaware, land facing on Depot Road for the purpose of widening said road, in exchange for the same depth of land in the rear of said lot."

The land in question lies along the east boundary of Depot Road between Delaware avenue and Main street. The street will be widened at this point providing the bill goes through, to confirm with the balance of the street line. Since the Treasury Department owns a part of this frontage, held for a possible Federal Building here, such a bill is necessary to effect the change.

BLIZZARD...things were tough, everywhere

The Newark area struggled Tuesday to dig out from Monday's crippling blizzard that left Delaware virtually paralyzed.

Schools, government offices, banks and many businesses closed in the wake of the storm which left 15 inches of snow on the ground and caused drifts as high as five feet, severely hampering crews trying to re-open snow-clogged roads.

By yesterday afternoon, some main roads in the area were open but state officials remained grim about the possibility of opening secondary roads.

And as of 4 p.m., the state emergency declared by Governor duPont Monday night was still in effect.

Chrysler, Ronson workers brace for rough times.

John T. "Pete" Waller says, at 56, thinks he's too young to retire and too old to look for work."

And yet that's the situation facing this Glasgow Trailer Park resident - one of 200 workers who expects to leave his job in June, when the Ronson corporation closes its appliance manufacturing plant along Interstate 95 in Christiana.

Waller's situation isn't too much different from the one facing Daniel and Deborah Mounet of Brookside Park, who are workers at the Chrysler assembly plant on S. College ave. in Newark, which closed down for two weeks Monday - laying off 4000 workers for the short span and 800 workers permanently.

Plan in works to ward off absentee landlords

In an effort to prevent single-family homes here from becoming absentee-owned rental units, twelve Newark neighborhoods soon may be eligible for mortgage assistance.

Dubbed the Mortgage Assistance Program, it provides financial incentives to University of Delaware personnel to move into certain Newark neighborhoods, which are now primarily single-family, owner-occupied homes.

Round 3 for Paper Mill Road rezoning Monday

The owner of 74.12 acres, located near the William Redd Park off Paper Mill Road will go a third round with Newark City council members Monday evening and ask that his property be rezoned to residential.

Richard duPont, who makes decisions concerning the land owned in trust by Wilmington Trust, originally proposed 200 single-family homes last year but council members wanted a "more creative" plan. They sent duPont's plan back to the planning commissioners who had previously recommended against it.

Telling the stories

At Gettysburg on Nov. 19, 1863, in his famous address Abraham Lincoln predicted "the world will little note, nor long remember what we say here." Such may be the case with a bit of information on our front page this week.

If you look carefully at our front-page "flag," you'll notice that we have begun our 91st year of publication. We're proud that we have survived for nine decades. And we thank you for your role in our existence.

The mere survival of a community newspaper for 90 years is itself noteworthy. The Newark Ledger, which was founded in 1876, is long gone. This newspaper as it exists today is, in fact, a derivative of the original Newark Post, the Newark Weekly and the Weekly Post. Delaware's libraries are cluttered with yellowed clippings and microfilm of other newspapers that have died.

We thank those before us on the staff for their hard work and diligence. We appreciate the readers who have plopped their nickels and dimes down through the years to buy the Newark Post. As well, we offer our appreciation to many advertisers through the years, large and small alike, who have supported our news-gathering efforts and seen the value of sending their message via our pages.

Equally important to the survival of this newspaper is the vitality of Newark itself. Since 1910, the citizens of Newark has placed importance on their sense of community. Residents are interested in their hometown. Good and bad, they've given us much to write. While some areas in Delaware, some of which are not very far away, have had their identity gobbled by suburban sprawl, Newark has remained very much an important universe to those who live and do business here.

The founder of this newspaper, Everett Johnson, was quick to speak his mind in editorials and publicly dictate the policies that would guide this newspaper.

Seventy-five years ago this month, he described the Newark Post's news philosophy:

"We feature news of Newark... We advertise our town, tell its story and try to reflect the spirit...of the good folk living here... Every organization, society or individual with an idea that would seem to help the town has our support. This policy is ours always... Whether we agree personally or not makes no difference in our news columns. Every one is welcome to tell his story..."

Some things never change.

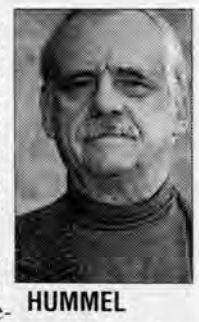
The Saga of Wounded Knee – or never on Sunday!

By MARVIN HUMMEL

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

An eight-stairs fall (backwards to make it quirky) has taught me some lessons that many millions already knew, but you have to learn them from your own debacle.



HUMMEL

Once it was obvious after the fall that "Something Big" was wrong with my knee and that ice wasn't deflating its balloon size nor was aspirin remotely touching its pain, I reconnoitered.

It was Sunday afternoon, and I recognized my stupidity immediately: you should only get hurt during doctors' office hours! Remorsefully, I thought of all the thousands of times I had traversed those stairs during office hours! Not one fall at a convenient time! Dummy!

ER was a possibility, but I see their TV show on Thursday nights: a knee is a terrible thing to waste, and with their long work hours, fierce political infighting, and sexual romps in the linen closets, I could end up stumped! I'd wait until Monday.

There were no bullets to bite, so I shredded my tongue/cheek/lips complex. Sleep was not possible, but I had a companion during those nasty hours before medical receptionists get to their phones on Monday: my knee.

It was a separate entity, like some puffy, poisonous barnacle that had attached itself to my lower thigh and upper calf for the sole purpose of disseminating pain all through me. My teeth ached; my toes were in extremis.

On Monday, I started phoning Doctor Number One's receptionist at 8:45 a.m.,.and at 9:15 a.m. made it to "Hold!" And hold I did, nearly ad nauseam! When my big moment came at 10:15 a.m., I had no idea where my "dirigible" fit into the categories offered! Then I got to hold some more. I reminded myself that it wasn't "their" fault I chose to fall on a Sunday. That wisdom kept me going.

Do you ever get a hunch? After waiting another hour, I began to sense that things weren't going well. Reluctantly, I surrendered my place in electronic limbo and called another physician who had absolutely no obligation to me, Hippocratic or otherwise. Within five minutes, he told me to get my big fat knee into his office!!!

Stick shifts and one usable leg don't make it. (I have since bought an automatic transmission!) I mooched a ride and was taken by Doctor Number Two on a "crash" basis toute suite! Doctor Number Two drained my knee: he had hoped for fluid, I for air; it was red stuff! Immediate X-rays. Two breaks: one in the plateau of one knee bone and the cap of another. It was pretty interesting: I had never known knee bones

This photo of a solar eclipse was made on the morning of Jan. 24, 1925, by L.R.Detjen and G.F. Gray at the University of Delaware through an open window on the third floor of Wolf Hall. The time of the exposures was (L to R): 7:55, 8, 8:10, 8:20, 8:30, 8:40, 8:50, 9, 9:10, 9:20, 9:30, 9:40, 10, 10:10, 10:20 and 10:25 a.m. According to a news report in the Newark Post of Jan. 28, 1925, the two men used an ordinary camera in the test, with no appliance save a light filter in front of the lens and smoked glass. The picture ran on the front page of the newspaper. During the event, "a tiny slice of light from the sun kept people from bumping into one another in the dark for the two minutes of almost totality...(when) an abnormal purplish light blanketed the earth."

Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark 19713. Special care will be taken and photos can be returned. For information, call 737-0724.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To: The Editor
From: Sherry Weleski
Newark

In the early hours of Wednesday, Jan. 26, I called the Newark Police Department because I was stuck in a snow drift at the foot of my driveway and I didn't know who else to call. I could not leave my car which was partially blocking the road.

Cpl. John Palka responded within five minutes and worked pushing my car until it was out of the snow drift. He could have easily given up after a couple of tries and told me to call a tow truck. Instead, he persisted in pushing until I was clear. It was bitterly cold and he did not have on any boots, a coat, gloves or a hat.

I was grateful for this "rescue" and am glad to know we have such a special officer in our police department. While it is part of their jobs to help citizens in distress, Cpl. Palka went above and beyond what was expected.

Just like the good old days had caps or plateaus! One should never stop learning!

Crutches! I had to get crutches and pain pills. In the slashing rain, we gimped into three pharmacies, two of which had claimed they stocked crutches. But when we got there, oops! They used to – they didn't anymore. They forgot!

Home, both soaked and crutchless, I was greeted by two phone messages: Doctor Number One couldn't see me and I should go to an ER, presumably far from his office! Doctor Number Two had made an appointment for me with a surgeon; but by the time I received the message, I had missed my very special "crash" appointment!!! And was still crutchless!

The surgeon gave me another "crash" chance the next day; I missed that one, too! I had to take my X-rays to him, but they weren't available in time for me to make the new special appointment! I was given still another "crash" appointment, while an X-ray technician drove my X-rays to the surgeon! The third time was the charm – and he and his entire staff proved to be charming!

I like my new car; I now have four pairs of borrowed crutches; and I have a cap and plateau that are healing fine, thank you!

Thank you Doctor Number Two, your staff, the X-ray person who chauffeured my vitals to the surgeon, and the surgeon and his staff! All of them were right out of a movie about the good old days when people "crashed" themselves and their schedules for another person who had big trouble at an inconvenient time! My knee thanks you – and I do too! (Even more than my knee does!!!) And from now on – Never, Never on Sundays!!!

FORBES VISITS NEWARK

Steve Forbes is the only Presidential candidate so far this year to actually visit Newark. Forbes brought his conservative message to town on Sunday, Feb. 6, when he met with campaign workers and others in the communty at the Embassy Suites on South College Avenue. Forbes came in third in Tuesday's GOP primary here when George W. Bush won all 12 of Delaware's delegate votes for the Republican national convention. John McCain came in second.

Technology project brings reading and math scores up

Reading and math scores increased "significantly" among first- and second-grade students in the statewide Delaware Challenge education technology project, according to a University of Delaware report.

Delaware students achieved double-digit gains in their reading and math scores on the national Stanford tests after participating in the innovative technology initiative in 36 elementary schools in 16 school districts.

Although it was the first state in the nation to wire every public school classroom for Internet access, Delaware also has the lowest ratio of students to computers in America.

The project funded by the U.S. Department of Education uses instructional programs created by the Lightspan Partnership. Parents also participate in a training program that helps them set up equipment in the home and use the instructional program effectively with their children.

"Analysis of student achievement data suggest that the program has worked best for underachieving students," said Dr. Susan P. Giancola, a senior associate for evaluation at the University. "That is, students who initially test below the 50th percentile appear to benefit greatly from using the Lightspan software."

Focusing on children from low-income families is practical since less than five percent of students from low-income families have computers, compared to roughly 50 percent of students from high-income homes. By contrast, 99 percent of homes have a TV set.

. The project includes a set of free Internet services that further support instruction in the home for students and parents who have Internet access. Teachers, students and parents can also use e-mail for communication between schools and homes.

Other positive results showed parental involvement in the education of their kids increased, parent/teacher communication improved, and kids spent more time learning and less time watching TV.

"When viewed in the context of our other initiatives – early childhood education, school discipline, raising student achievement, and bringing education technology to every Delaware public school classroom – this project is an important element in preparing our students for a lifetime of learning," said Governor Thomas R. Carper.

Beware of Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day is Monday. For most of us, that's not a real problem. For kids however, especially pre-adolescents, Valentine's Day can be a day of dread and foreboding.

In elementary school, many teachers handle Valentine's Day quite simply. They make sure that every child gets a Valentine from every other classmate, boy or girl.

Those of us who either have or have had young children can remember going to the drugstore or supermarket and buying those Valentine cards in packs of 30 or so, and then sitting home and helping our child sign them.

by Mark Manno

As kids get older, they become more aware of not only who they are, but also how others feel about them. There will always be popular kids who get lots of Valentine cards, but how do you handle it when your child gets only a few...or perhaps none at all.

Explain that it's not the quantity that you get, but rather, the Valentines that your child receives are from their true friends.

Sometimes, just the opposite problem can happen. Your child might receive a Valentine from someone they don't particularly care for. This really doesn't need to be a big problem.

Just explain that maybe that person was just trying to be polite or friendly, or that they might have sent Valentine cards to every classmate.

As children enter middle school, girls often mature more quickly than boys do. Relationships and feelings become more important to them.

Boys, on the other hand, are often just merrily skipping though life, completely unaware of the turmoil those girls all around them are going through.

The best thing that parents can do is to sit down and talk to our children about their expectations for Valentines Day. You can head some of these problems off at the pass.

One thing you can do for sure is to make sure that your child gets a Valentine from you.

I guarantee that will mean more than any other card they receive that day.

Reunion Relief

Janice Masciarelli is co-owner of a unique company which can take care of all the hassle involved in organizing class reunions.

Handling high school reunions just isn't what it used to be. In an increasingly mobile society with the average graduating class growing from about 150 in the 1950's to more than 1,000 in the late nineties , rounding-up old classmates and making suitable arrangements becomes overwhelming for an alumni committee typically made up of less than 10 people.

Relief is available, however. Reunion Central, a 4-year-old company based in Bear, makes a business out of taking the stress and worries off of the high school committee's hands by conducting all of the behind-the-scenes tasks that precede the final event.

"It is something that is really needed these days and it's something that is greatly appreciated by the people who tried to do it once and realized that it is way too overwhelming ," said Gary Evans, co-owner along with partner Janice Masciarelli.

This unique company, which will staff the event, put up all front-end costs, pay any balances due and manage all of the leg work related to holding a reunion is growing in popularity in an area where no one else is offering such services.

According to Masciarelli, it was much easier for reunion organizers to contact their former classmates, get RSVP's and set up a hall and entertainment when class sizes were significantly smaller.

These days, people are spread out around the world, large deposits are required to reserve party halls and most alumni do not respond to their invites until two weeks before the date. In fact, Evans reported that 20 to 40 percent of class reunions wind up being canceled due to lack of response. Handling a high school reunion, he said, has become a major production.

As a result, groups of high school alum with upcoming anniversary dates are calling on Reunion Central. Graduates from Brandywine, Christiana and Concord high schools each have sought their services.

Ideally these alumni are notifying the professional organizers at least nine months to one year in advance. This amount of time, said Masciarelli, is required to locate long lost graduates, send them an invite and allow those that are far away to have enough time to make arrangements to attend their reunion, especially during their busiest seasons.

"The sping and fall are the busiest times of year for us because people in Delaware tend to go to the beach on weekends during their summer," said Masciarelli.

Once the company is signed-on, Evans and Masciarelli start their detective work. First they attempt contacting the school and also people with out-of-the-ordinary last names via the phone book from their high school community. Additional names and contacts develop from there. A more high-tech method is used to track down those that are very difficult to find. Evans described a sophisticated computer system that aids his search. The internet, however, is no help at all, said Evans, unless the more savvy graduates, who are expecting information on a possible reunion, begin searching the web for their high school website. From there a link would connect them to Reunion Central.

Aside from locating graduates, mailing preliminary post-cards and special invitations, setting up entertainment and finding the perfect party hall all become the responsibility of Reunion Central.

Adding to the allure is a sentimental memory book that includes high school photos along with up-to-date photos and a bio written by alumni themselves.

"It's fascinating for people to find out what their classmates ended up doing," said Evans. "Having updated information on them in their own handwriting adds a nice touch as well."

An attractive bonus to the whole arrangement is that committee members receive credit, along with Reunion Central for organizing the event.

Reunion Central is a member of the National Association of Reunion Managers. Through this association, the partners have learned how to best handle certain situations in their business and have gained new ideas to create top-notch gatherings.

"More people really should attend their class reunions," said Evans.

"People actually develop new friends by going and it's a chance for some to realize that they can hold their own amongst their peers and be happy for others, where they couldn't before."

Just explain that maybe that person was just trying to be polite or friendly, or that they might have sent Valentine cards to every classmate.

As children enter middle school, girls often mature more quickly than boys do. Relationships and feelings become more important to them.

Boys, on the other hand, are often just merrily skipping though life, completely unaware of the turmoil those girls all around them are going through.

The best thing that parents can do is to sit down and talk to our children about their expectations for Valentines Day. You can head some of these problems off at the pass.

One thing you can do for sure is to make sure that your child gets a Valentine from you.

I guarantee that will mean more than any other card they receive that day.

Handling high school reunions just isn't what it used to be. In an increasingly mobile society with the average graduating class growing from about 150 in the 1950's to more than 1,000 in the late nineties , rounding-up old classmates and making suitable arrangements becomes overwhelming for an alumni committee typically made up of less than 10 people.

Relief is available, however. Reunion Central, a 4-year-old company based in Bear, makes a business out of taking the stress and worries off of the high school committee's hands by conducting all of the behind-the-scenes tasks that precede the final event.

"It is something that is really needed these days and it's something that is greatly appreciated by the people who tried to do it once and realized that it is way too overwhelming ," said Gary Evans, co-owner along with partner Janice Masciarelli.

This unique company, which will staff the event, put up all front-end costs, pay any balances due and manage all of the leg work related to holding a reunion is growing in popularity in an area where no one else is offering such services.

According to Masciarelli, it was much easier for reunion organizers to contact their former classmates, get RSVP's and set up a hall and entertainment when class sizes were significantly smaller.

These days, people are spread out around the world, large deposits are required to reserve party halls and most alumni do not respond to their invites until two weeks before the date. In fact, Evans reported that 20 to 40 percent of class reunions wind up being canceled due to lack of response. Handling a high school reunion, he said, has become a major production.

As a result, groups of high school alum with upcoming anniversary dates are calling on Reunion Central. Graduates from Brandywine, Christiana and Concord high schools each have sought their services.

Ideally these alumni are notifying the professional organizers at least nine months to one year in advance. This amount of time, said Masciarelli, is required to locate long lost graduates, send them an invite and allow those that are far away to have enough time to make arrangements to attend their reunion, especially during their busiest seasons.

"The sping and fall are the busiest times of year for us because people in Delaware tend to go to the beach on weekends during their summer," said Masciarelli.

Once the company is signed-on, Evans and Masciarelli start their detective work. First they attempt contacting the school and also people with out-of-the-ordinary last names via the phone book from their high school community. Additional names and contacts develop from there. A more high-tech method is used to track down those that are very difficult to find. Evans described a sophisticated computer system that aids his search. The internet, however, is no help at all, said Evans, unless the more savvy graduates, who are expecting information on a possible reunion, begin searching the web for their high school website. From there a link would connect them to Reunion Central.

Aside from locating graduates, mailing preliminary post-cards and special invitations, setting up entertainment and finding the perfect party hall all become the responsibility of Reunion Central.

Adding to the allure is a sentimental memory book that includes high school photos along with up-to-date photos and a bio written by alumni themselves.

"It's fascinating for people to find out what their classmates ended up doing," said Evans. "Having updated information on them in their own handwriting adds a nice touch as well."

An attractive bonus to the whole arrangement is that committee members receive credit, along with Reunion Central for organizing the event.

Reunion Central is a member of the National Association of Reunion Managers. Through this association, the partners have learned how to best handle certain situations in their business and have gained new ideas to create top-notch gatherings.

"More people really should attend their class reunions," said Evans.

"People actually develop new friends by going and it's a chance for some to realize that they can hold their own amongst their peers and be happy for others, where they couldn't before."

Beware of Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day is Monday. For most of us, that's not a real problem. For kids however, especially pre-adolescents, Valentine's Day can be a day of dread and foreboding.

In elementary school, many teachers handle Valentine's Day quite simply. They make sure that every child gets a Valentine from every other classmate, boy or girl.

Those of us who either have or have had young children can remember going to the drugstore or supermarket and buying those Valentine cards in packs of 30 or so, and then sitting home and helping our child sign them.

by Mark Manno

As kids get older, they become more aware of not only who they are, but also how others feel about them. There will always be popular kids who get lots of Valentine cards, but how do you handle it when your child gets only a few...or perhaps none at all.

Explain that it's not the quantity that you get, but rather, the Valentines that your child receives are from their true friends.

Sometimes, just the opposite problem can happen. Your child might receive a Valentine from someone they don't particularly care for. This really doesn't need to be a big problem.

Just explain that maybe that person was just trying to be polite or friendly, or that they might have sent Valentine cards to every classmate.

As children enter middle school, girls often mature more quickly than boys do. Relationships and feelings become more important to them.

Boys, on the other hand, are often just merrily skipping though life, completely unaware of the turmoil those girls all around them are going through.

Toy exhibit opens at Old Library Museum, New Castle

The New Castle Historical Society is sponsoring a new exhibit at the Old Library Museum, 40 E. Third St., New Castle. "Small Wonders: Artifacts of Childhood," examines the changing nature of childhood in the last 200 years.

Objects which children in the past used and enjoyed, such as dolls, books, toys, clothing and nursery furniture, tell the story of how parents in the past viewed their children. The toys and games played by children were a vehicle to teach children their adult and gender roles. Children's items elaborate on the historical traditions of childhood.

"One of the treats for Delaware residents," said Historical Society director Bruce Dalleo, "is the opportunity to see toys, books, and dolls loaned to the society of this exhibit by New Castle townspeople. There are beautiful and fascinating objects for visitors to enjoy!"

In addition to the artifacts loaned for this exhibit, there are a number of items from the collection of the New Castle Historical Society.

A highlight of the Society's collection is a set of parlor doll furniture made by an African-American prisoner at the New Castle jail in 1898. He fashioned the Victorian parlor set out of cigar boxes, using velvet for seat cushions. He presented the gift as a thank you to a young girl of 9, Nellie Hanna, who had taught him to read and write. Additionally, the exhibit includes a doll house replica of the Dutch House, a historic house museum in New Castle, run by the New Castle Historical Society. There are early 19th-century tea sets, tin toys, a French fashion doll named for the Empress of France in the 1860's, among the over 100 objects on view.

The Old Library Museum is open to the public on weekends, Saturdays and Sundays from 1 - 4 p.m. Admission is free. The exhibit runs through February 2001.

Blood Bank of Delaware's 'Halfpint' thanks blood donors

Dustin Donovan, who was diagnosed with acute lymphatic leukemia at the age of 8 helped kick off a statewide blood donation awareness campaign recently with Governor Thomas R. Carper.

"I want to thank everyone who gives blood,"said the 10-year-old. "If I didn't get blood all of the time, I wouldn't be alive today."

The promotion, called "Pints for Halfpints," is the Blood Bank of Delaware's first campaign to focus solely on the needs of children who require blood transfusions. Last year, patients at A.I. duPont Hospital for Children in Wilmington needed more than 2,700 blood products to survive an illness or an accident. Dustin has needed numerous platelets and whole blood transfusions during his chemotherapy treatments.

Newark continues to swim in fast lane

Veterans, youth help Yellowjackets' girls and boys teams remain among state's powers; Glasgow swept in Blue Hen Conference meet Monday

By CHRIS DONAHUE
NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

Despite being decimated by graduation, Newark's boys and girls swimming and diving teams have used an infusion of youth and improvement by some returners to remain among the state's elite teams.

On Monday at Glasgow, the Yellowjackets' boys team improved to 9-3 overall and 8-2 in Blue Hen Conference meets by beating the Dragons 109-67.

Newark's girls team improved to 8-3-1, 6-2-1 by winning 105-71.

Garrick Grube and Jon Ellis highlighted the boys' effort by winning two events each and helping two relay teams to victory.

Grube won the 200 individual medley and 100 backstroke and swam on the victorious 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams. Ellis won the 100 butterfly and 500 freestyle and helped in the 200 freestyle and 400 freestyle relay winners.

Newark boys coach Bart Dryden said he's pleased with how his team has regrouped. "Actually, w',re doing better than I thought we would," Dryden said. "We lost about half our team (to graduation). And we've qualified a number of swimmers for the state meet, which is a couple more than I expected."

In addition to Grube and Ellis, Dryden also cited the efforts of several other key performers. One is freshman Joe Hitchcock.

"He's had a fantastic season," Dryden said. "He swims the 50 and 100 freestyle. He had stiff competition tonight, but he's usually one of our top swimmers.

"(Senior) Steve Matsumoto does really well usually in the longer events, and (junior) Geoff Hunter - he can pretty much swim anything."

Matsumoto, Hunter and Trevor Davis, also a junior, are team captains.

Rob Poore highlighted Glasgow's boys' effort by winning the 50 freestyle and tying Hitchcock for first in the 100 freestyle. Poore also anchored the winning 200 freestyle relay team that included Addison Yanito, Mike Ruggiano and Ben Toole.

"Too many good kids," summed up Glasgow Coach Bill Deweese about why Newark won the meet. "They were ranked fourth (by The News Journal) and we were ranked ninth, and that's about right."

Glasgow's boys record slipped to 7-6 overall and 3-5 overall.

Newark sophomore Cassie Connell sparked her team by winning two events and helping the 400 freestyle relay team win.

Newark stings fading Vikings

Newark High's boys basketball team served notice last week that despite its less than sterling record, they're a squad to be reckoned with.

Terry Alls scored 20 points and J.C. Hodges had 17 points and 12 rebounds to lead the Yellowjackets to a 56-39 victory over Christiana in a Blue Hen Conference Flight A game.

"I was just trying to score a few points and be a team player like everybody else," Hodges said.

Donnye Caldwell added nine points and a game-high 19 assists for Newark, which improved to 6-8 overall and 4-5 in conference play. Teammate Brandon Haman had four points and 11 rebounds.

Christiana, which entered the game ranked seventh by The News Journal, fell to 8-8, 4-4. Virgil Rush and Maurice Rogers each had 10 points for the Vikings.

"Christiana's a tough team, but my kids played one heck of a game," said Newark Coach Greg Benjamin.

"I have the utmost respect for Newark's coaching staff and team," said Christiana Coach Ron Hollis. "Newark did a good job against us. They came to play. . .We weren't the same team we've been all season."

After the teams fought to an 11-11 tie after the first quarter, Newark was able to forge a 28-16 at halftime.

"We were able to play our disciplined game where we dictate the type of game we want to play, not the way the other team wants

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

JON ELLIS – NEWARK HIGH

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark High's boys swimming and diving team had to fill quite a few holes if it wanted to remain one of the state's top programs.

But although coach Bart Dryden said he lost about half his team through graduation, several returning varsity members have kept the Yellowjackets afloat beyond his expectations. One of those who has continued to make an impact, despite his youth, is sophomore Jon Ellis, who won two events and also helped two relay teams to the winner's circle in a 109-67 victory over Glasgow on Monday.

Ellis, a resident of Oaklands who began swimming for Oaklands Swim Club when he was four years old, has already qualified for the state meet in three events

Last year, Ellis qualified for the 100 butterfly and 500 freestyle. He finished 12th in the latter event.

"Jon brings a lot of versatility," said Dryden, whose team improved to 9-3 overall and 8-2 in Blue Hen Conference action after Monday's win. "He has a very strong work ethic and very good sportsmanship. He really is one of our leaders on the team. He's very good in the water, but he's also very good out of the water, too.

"He seems to have stepped it up a lot this year. Hopefully, by the time he's a senior, he'll be very strong."

Ellis, who won the 100 butterfly and 500 freestyle against Glasgow, has also added the 200 individual medley to his portfolio this season.

"This year I'm concentrating a little bit more on the 200 IM," Ellis said. "Some of my other strokes are pulling through a little bit. That's why I'm able to combine all the strokes. It's kind of balancing out.

"Probably the 500 (freestyle) is my favorite. But I'm not too sure if I'm going to swim that at the state meet. It all depends on how many seniors have left from the year before.

"This year, we're also ranked pretty high in the 400 relay, so we'll do pretty good in that."

Ellis said winning as a team has provided a great deal of enjoyment.

"It's been a lot of fun to do," Ellis said. "We lost a lot of seniors from last year and we were kind of worried about if we were going to do as well.

"But it turns out through the first three-quarters of the season we were ranked higher than we were last year. Then against Mount Pleasant (one of Newark's losses), they had a good meet against us. But we've hung in there pretty well."

injury, during which Newark tied Mount Pleasant. Her presence would have given the Yellowjackets a victory, Polaski said.

In addition, Newark was missing two of its top swimmers to an amateur meet when it lost to McKean, and two others because of the flu in a loss to Brandywine. Their presence would have also provided victories, Polaski said.

"And I have to say, the kids, because they knew the other kids couldn't swim, they really pulled out a lot," Polaski said. "It's what I call 'gut swimming.' They really brought it from the heart and did the ultimate best.

"And we had seven straight tough meets. There was no break. Against Mount Pleasant, which was our last tough meet, I told them from the bottom of my heart, "I couldn't love a team any better.' "

Other key performers cited by Polaski were seniors Kristin Early (50 and 100 freestyle, 100 butterfly), and Carissa Beatty (50 and 100 freestyle). The two have been swimming for Polaski since they were freshmen and have qualified for the state meet in all five events.

Beatty is also just shy of qualifying for the 200 freestyle and should do so in the next couple meets, Polaski said.

"As freshman, just to give you some idea, these kids were doing (one minute, nine seconds), a 1:10 for the 100 free," Polaski said. "Now, as seniors, they're doing 1:01, 1:02. And these are not year-round swimmers. These are strictly high school swimmers. The only time they practice is here with me."

Newark's 400 freestyle relay team of Connell, Stephanie Baird, also a sophomore, and seniors Erin Colbert, and Jill Buccos hold the best time in the state at 3:46.65.

Colbert, Buccos, and senior Amy Trushiem are the captains.

Polaski, who lost eight to graduation, is also ecstatic over her team's resurgence.

"Because of the power that we lost, I thought if we ended up with a .500 season we would be doing well," Polaski said. "We're definitely well above a .500 season and I'm very pleased."

Glasgow's Stephanie Raezer, meanwhile, won the 200 IM and the 100 butterfly. She also combined with Erin Young, Megan McCullum and Jill Walker to win both the 200 freestyle relay and 200 medley relay.

The Dragons, coached by Dave Kohan, saw their record fall to 5-8, 3-5.

Hodgson grapplers fall to Wm. Penn

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

William Penn High's wrestling team looked to the past for inspiration when the Colonials squared off with Hodgson last Saturday.

William Penn Coach Jack Holloway told his team before the match that the program hadn't beaten a quality opponent since it last won the Division I state dual meet title in 1996.

To do that, the Colonials were facing a relatively new nemesis in Hodgson, the three-time defending Division II state champ which had beaten the Colonials the past three seasons, which comprises the entire series between the two schools.

William Penn can now consider itself back beyond any doubts, as the visiting Colonials forged a massive lead en route to crushing Hodgson 41-24.

For the Colonials, who entered the match 9-0 and ranked third by the Post, two major hurdles remain to solidify their ascension once again to the summit of high school wrestling - its Feb. 10 match against No. 1 St. Mark's and the Feb. 16 dual meet championships.

William Penn, a virtual annual Blue Hen Conference Flight A champ, won the dual meet state title in 1993, '94, and '96, and finished second to four-time defending champ St. Mark's last season.

"This is a big win for our program," said William Penn Coach Jack Holloway. "We needed to beat somebody who was a top-caliber team. It really takes a big weight off us. We knew we could do it, but saying it and talking about and then going out on the mat is two different things."

For Hodgson (8-1), which was ranked second, the loss was the first to an in-state team in a dual meet since it lost to Smyrna in the 1996 dual meet finals.

"I think (the Colonials) just have such a strong balance," Hodgson Coach Jerry Lamey said. "Every weight class they have a strong wrestler. It's hard to move around (weight classes) against a team that has that much strength.

"They deserved the match," Lamey added. "They outwrestled us. I think the (turning points were) the 130 (pound) overtime match; it was two good wrestlers and they got the takedown. They had already had a couple wins, and I think that helped the momentum for those guys. They wrestled real strong through the middle. I thought (William Penn's James) Fromal wrestled outstanding (at 145).

"We were hoping to come back in the upper weights and we had a couple wrestle well for us."

The match featured a plethora of state individual and Blue Hen Conference champions, runner-ups and placers. Hodgson returned five of its nine conference champs this season, including state champs Jordan Sianni (103 last season), and runner-ups Mike Welch (119) and Ryan Smith (145).

But William Penn could boast of state champ Gregg Quailes (112) and runner-ups Joe Ferrara (130) and Ray Callaway (152).

Before a huge crowd, William Penn sophomore Ken Krygier got his team started at 103 pounds with a 3-0 decision over Brian Welch.

Sianni then pinned freshman Nick Lagarelli to give Hodgson a 6-3 lead. But Quailes won the first of six consecutive matches for the Colonials with 17-5 major decision over Kevin Woodland.

Junior Shawn Taylor recorded a 15-3 major decision over Kris Remedio to make it 11-6, setting up one the premier matches of the day at 130 - Mike Welch and junior Harry Kettner, who finished third in the conference last season at 125.

Welch led 2-0 after the first period, but Kettner scored a late takedown to tie the score 4-4 and send it into overtime. Kettner then won the match with another takedown, setting off a deafening roar of cheers from the William Penn fans.

William Penn senior Shemarr Thompson (135) extended the lead to 20-6 by pinning Justin Mendick, and then sophomore Joe Ferrara made it 26-6 with a pin over Tyler Smith.

With six matches left, William Penn junior James Fromal (145) virtually put the contest out of reach with a 19-1 technical fall over Marc Rispoli.

Hodgson's Ryan Smith then stopped the avalanche by pinning Stoney Graves at 152. But Callaway sealed the outcome by posting a 16-4 major decision over John Kerr at 160 to make it 35-12.

Hodgson's Derrick Davis (171) and heavyweight Wayne Zenorini, and William Penn's Willie Singleton went on to record pins to create the final score.

Holloway, now in his 24th season with the Colonials, called it the best dual-meet match he's seen his team have since 1996. Part of the reason for that, as well as his team's 10-0 record, is focus.

"We have a very good group of young men,' said Holloway, "and they've got very good leadership from the senior group. And then James Fromal, Harry Kettner and Joe Ferrara are great leaders for the youngsters, too. They're very together and I think they seem to be committed.

"I thought the key to the match was going to be from 125 through 152."

Glasgow boys fall to WP

By JOE NYE
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Two of the top-ranked teams in the state battled in a boys Blue Hen Conference Flight A basketball game last Friday, but it was rarely a battle as a fired up William Penn team defeated visiting Glasgow 65-36.

The third-ranked Colonials raced out to a 41-15 halftime lead and never looked back. William Penn was paced by a balanced attack, getting 13 points from Devin Smith, 12 from Bruce Davis and 10 each from Von Homer and Jamaal Manlo·e.

The No. 6 Dragons were led by junior guard Aaron Walker, who had 13, and his twin brother Alvin, who chipped in with five.

The game was a track meet from the start as both teams feature small, fast line-ups. The Colonials' courtside announcer actually introduced the entire William Penn starting line-up as guards and the Dragons have a small roster as well, but the Colonials defensive pressure was too fast and opportunistic for Glasgow.

"We came out quick, both offensively and defensively," said senior guard Brock Donovan, who helped lead the Colonials to the state championship last yea. "We were really hitting on all cylinders." It was Donovan who got the scoring started for William Penn by hitting a three from the right side and after sophomore Shane Hairston slashed through the Dragons defense for a lay-up, Donovan stole the ball on the inbounds pass and went back up for a 7-0 Colonials lead.

The Dragons kept up with the frantic pace early on as junior Shane Mundy hit a jumper and Aaron Walker hit a pair of baskets to cut the lead to 7-6. But it would prove to be the closest Glasgow came all night as Davis, who quarterbacked the Colonials during the football season, began to take over the game with his speed and quickness.

The senior guard scored back-to-back baskets inside and after Smith hit a jumper from the corner and knocked down two free throws, the Colonials were up 15-9 at the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter was played at an even faster pace as the two teams ran up and down the court as if looking for a winning Powerball ticket. William Penn opened the quarter with a 13-2 run, getting three baskets from the six foot, four inch tall Smith, and a pair of baskets from Hairston, including a three, to take a commanding 28-11 lead.

The Dragons, who had scored a big victory earlier in the week by beating No. 7 Christiana, got their second basket of the quarter from 6-5 center Glen Veit on a 10-foot jumper, but it proved to be a short revival.

The Colonials ended the half with another 13-2 run, including eight more points from Smith, highlighted by a thundering dunk that saw William Penn go into the locker room up 41-15 at the half.

"They are a very quick team, and they did a good job of taking away our outside game," said Glasgow head coach Donald Haman. "Our leading scorers are our perimeter shooters, and when that got taken away our inside players didn't respond."

William Penn opened the second half the same way they opened the game, with a basket from Donovan, who ended up with seven points on the night. The Dragons came back with a free throw and a basket from senior Jermaine Jacobs, who gave Glasgow tough inside play throughout the game. But it was too little, too late, as the Colonials unleashed yet another run with one more weapon.

Homer, who starred for William Penn as a halfback during the football campaign, came off the bench and hit for nine points over the last four minutes of the third quarter to give the Colonials a 51-24 lead, including a jumper with no time remaining from the left corner.

Both teams emptied their benches in the fourth quarter, but the style stayed fast and aggressive as the two rivals refused to back down even after the game's outcome was no longer in doubt.

With Manlove and Homer striking for two more baskets each, and the Dragons getting a pair of baskets from Travis Baldwin and Aaron Walker, the Colonials posted a key 65-36 win and continued to set their sights on repeating as state champions.

"We're not there yet," said Donovan. "But we're getting there."

William Penn continues its schedule on the road Friday night at McKean, while the Dragons hosted Delcastle Tuesday night.

to play," Benjamin said.

Christiana came out running in the third quarter and managed to cut the deficit to 32-29 with second to play. But Newark turned a missed shot into the final basket of the quarter for a five-point lead.

"We played hard in the third quarter, but just couldn't pull even," Hollis said.

Newark used its disciplined, ball-control offense in the fourth quarter to outscore the Vikings 22-10.

"We got in foul trouble in the fourth quarter with our key players," Hollis said. "We had to substitute our inexperienced players and that made the difference. We just couldn't get back in the game."

Newark dedicated the game to Caldwell's uncle, Don, who died Feb. 2, Benjamin said. The elder Caldwell had been taking care of Donnye because the boy's father died at a young age.

Benjamin said several times during the game, he had to remind his players to stay disciplined and to remember the dedication.

"We have probably the toughest schedule in the state," Benjamin said. "But we need to win at least three or four more games to make the tournament. That's what we hope to accomplish."

Newark played Glasgow Feb. 10, then faces Brandywine (Feb. 15), Alexis I. du Pont (Feb. 17), Ferris (Feb. 21), Elkton (Feb. 22), and Howard (Feb. 24).

Christiana's schedule concludes with William Penn (Feb. 8), Brandywine (Feb. 11), McKean (Feb. 15), Glasgow (Feb. 18), and Concord (Feb. 23).

Diamonds shine again

The Delaware Diamonds (under-17) girl's volleyball team is once again making an impact on the national scene with the help of some area players.

Last weekend, the Diamonds won the Silver Division Championship at the 2000 Early Bird Extravaganza at the Convention Center in Baltimore.

The Diamonds played 12 matches (30 games) and finished seventh overall in the 98-team, three-day tournament.

The roster includes Kristen Mitchell of Newark High and Laura Colosi, Leah Denhoed, Kayte Hall, Lindsay McDonough and Kelly Papili of St. Mark's.

In their first tournament (Jan. 9), the Diamonds went undefeated in the Chesapeake Region Fellowship. The second tournament (Jan. 15) was a qualifier to make it into the Elite Power League. They went undefeated in that tournament, too, despite having to face teams that included 18-under teams.

MBNA America Bank and Comerica form Alliance

MBNA America Bank and Comerica Bank announced a strategic alliance to provide MBNA credit card and check-accessed line of credit services to Comerica customers.

Comerica will sell its $500 million credit card and Cash Reserve portfolio to MBNA. The two companies will offer Comerica-branded credit cards, and MBNA will service the accounts.

The transaction is expected to close in the first quarter of 2000, subject to regulatory approvals. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

"The credit card industry has changed dramatically in the past several years, and Comerica no longer has the economics of scale to profitably grow our portfolio," explained John R. Haggerty, an executive vice president for Comerica Bank.

John Cochran, chief marketing officer of MBNA, said the acquisition will allow MBNA to offer our financial services to a very desirable audience.

"Comerica is a premier financial institution that has been serving its customers for over 150 years," said Cochran.

Comerica Incorporated is a diversified financial services provider headquartered in Detroit with banking subsidiaries in Michigan, Texas and California, banking operations in Florida, and businesses in 10 other states. Comerica reported total assets of $39 billion as of Dec. 31, 1999.

"The credit card industry has changed dramatically in the past several years, and Comerica no longer has the economics of scale to profitably grow our portfolio," explained John R. Haggerty, an executive vice president for Comerica Bank.

John Cochran, chief marketing officer of MBNA, said the acquisition will allow MBNA to offer our financial services to a very desirable audience.

"Comerica is a premier financial institution that has been serving its customers for over 150 years," said Cochran.

Comerica Incorporated is a diversified financial services provider headquartered in Detroit with banking subsidiaries in Michigan, Texas and California, banking operations in Florida, and businesses in 10 other states. Comerica reported total assets of $39 billion as of Dec. 31, 1999.

MBNA Corporation, a bank holding company and parent of MBNA America, N.A., has $72.3 billion in managed loans.

MBNA, the largest independent credit card lender in the world, also provides retail deposit, consumer loan, and insurance products.

Conectiv Communications introduces Internet service

Conectiv Communications has officially introduced its Internet service, Conectiv.net (www.conectiv.net).

With more than 200 local dial-up access numbers throughout its four-state territory, customers who have typically paid toll charges for Internet access should now be able to connect with a local call. Conectiv Communications' state-of-the-art, all-digital network supports all types of dial-up modems, including the latest 56k (V.90) modems, and ISDN Internet access.

In addition, Conectiv Communications provides nationwide coverage to accommodate customers who travel, by providing more than 700 local access points in major U.S. cities.

Conectiv Communications' Internet customers have access to a wide range of services, including dial-up and dedicated access, individual and local area network (LAN) high-speed data connections, and website application development and hosting.

Monthly fees for unlimited regional dial-up access are $19.95 for business and residential customers, with discounts for prepayment.

Customers also have the option of limited-access plans starting as low as $9.95 for 10 hours of access, plus $1.00 per additional hour.

Conectiv.net also comes with a unique "Kids Safe" content filtering option that helps protect children from exposure to unsafe or inappropriate Internet messages and sites.

Road edges to be stabilized

The Delaware Department of Transportation announced that A-Del Construction Inc. was the low bidder for the slope stabilization project along Upper Pike Creek Road in the Pike Creek region. The Bear-area based company was awarded the contract with a bid cost of $1,928,009.84.

The project will involve the construction of a retaining wall structure and necessary roadway improvements from Old Coach Road north to Paper Mill Road where the edges of the road are falling away towards the creek in certain areas.

The project is scheduled to start by mid-March of 2000 and be completed within 150 calendar days.

Wolfe will head 2000 United Way Campaign

James A. Wolfe, plant manager at the Newark DaimlerChrysler plant, will serve as chair for United Way of Delaware's 2000 campaign.

"Jim's acceptance of the chairmanship for our 2000 campaign is indicative not only of his own personal commitment to United Way, but of DaimlerChrysler's local and national support for our organization," said Charles W. Anderson, United Way of Delaware president.

Wolfe, who has headed Newark's DaimlerChrysler plant since 1992, ialso serves on the boards of the Delaware Business Roundtable, the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce, the Delaware Manufacturing Association, and the Board of Visitors at Delaware State University.
