Commonwealth projects on fast track

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The former National Vulcanized Fibre site, long thought to be a developer's nightmare, is rapidly shaping-up off Paper Mill Road.

"We expect to have the 40 apartments on the hill ready to occupy by March," said Jeffrey Lang, president of the Commonwealth Group. "We didn't have to do a lot of demolition on (that part)."

Noting that people who work at MBNA and Gore had inquired about apartments at the site now known as The Mill at White Clay, Lang said a sample apartment would be ready for viewing by March, also.

According to Lang, the company expects to have the commercial area under construction by May and ready for some tenants by July. "It's all moving quicker than we hoped," said Lang recently. "We expect to have the units in the old woolen mill ready by the summer."

Originally Lang stated the estimated $15 million development for the 19.9-acre site would be built in three separate phases. "We now believe the balance of the site will be complete by Spring 2001," he said. "The environmental cleanup has been good and we've gotten a lot of cooperation from the city of Newark."

The city approved a 10-building plan for 176 apartments, 12,000 square feet of commercial space, and an approximately 300-seat

Charter School possible for Newark

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Newark could be home to a new Charter School by September 2001 if a recently submitted request is approved by the State Board of Education.

Just days before the deadline on Dec. 31, 1999, the proposed school's board of directors filed an application for the establishment of a Charter School for grades five through eight in the Newark vicinity.

The founding board, which consists of two Christina District parents along with Newark Mayor Hal Godwin, State Senator Steven Amick (R-Newark) and State Representative Timothy Boulden (R-Newark), was formed after a group of local parents expressed discontent with the current educational practices.

Board chairman Tony Wexler stated, "There are a lot of parents who wanted something different, so we got together and started moving ahead."

Although Charter Schools can be established through either the applicant's home district or the State Board of Education, the directors opted to file with the state since state regulations were in accordance with their plans, Wexler explained.

Newarkers killed in Cecil crash

First hour of 2000 is deadly

Special from Cecil Whig

Alcohol, excessive speed and driver error claimed the lives of three people in an early morning crash New Year's Day.

A little over an hour into the new year, two Newark residents and a Colorado man were killed in a three-car accident on Route 273 in Cecil County, Md., after a driver of a car attempted to pass another car in a no-passing zone.

Maryland State Police said Jeremy S. Bard, 22, of Newark, was driving his 1994 Honda Accord west on Route 273 near Gallaher Road when he attempted to pass a 1992 Chrysler Imperial driven by Pleasant Hill resident Clifford R. Vannoy.

Bard's car crashed head-on into a 1994 Dodge Intrepid driven by Daniel Dacosta of Boulder, Colo. Dacosta was traveling east toward Delaware. After the collision, Bard's car spun around and landed on the hood of Vannoy's car.

Single-car crash kills Hockessin man

New Castle County Police are investigating a fatal accident involving a single car accident around noon on Dec. 30 on Millcreek Road near the community of Belle Terre. Raymond V. Smith, 48, of Hockessin was driving his 1986 Chevrolet Celebrity when it left the road and drove down an embankment and overturned. A passing motorist observed the vehicle partially submerged in a few feet of water and pulled the victim from the car with the aid of some other motorists. Smith was taken to Christiana Hospital where he died.

Man shot outside Elks Club

Newark Police are seeking a suspect who shot an unidentified victim outside the Elks Club on Cleveland Avenue in Newark on Dec. 29 around 11:55 p.m. Newark Police said the victim and a suspect described as a black male, 5 feet, 8 inches tall, 18-20 years old, wearing denim jeans and coat and a red shirt, argued inside the club. The two were separated and the suspect left but waited outside. When the victim emerged, the suspect allegedly shot at him numerous times, striking him twice. He was transported to Christiana Medical Center for treatment. The suspect fled on foot toward the University of Delaware's Hollingsworth parking lot. Anyone with information is asked to call police at 366-7111 or Delaware Crimestoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

Jeep crash closes Main Street

On the morning of Dec. 30 a man driving the wrong way on New London Road entered Main Street at a high rate of speed. Continuing to drive a Jeep Cherokee in the wrong direction, the man struck a telephone pole across from the Deer park Restaurant. The pole was severed and the vehicle then struck a wall of the University of Delaware parking garage. The vehicle traveled along the wall before finally coming to a rest after striking a tree. The driver was transported to Christiana Hospital where he was listed in stable condition. The investigation is continuing and alcohol was possibly involved. Main Street was closed until late afternoon as a result of the accident.

Resident arrested with cocaine at Travelodge

New Castle County Police arrested Jason Ramos, 19, and charged him with felony drug violations after detectives executed a search warrant at his motel room in the Travelodge Motel on Main Street in Newark. The arrest came after a month long investigation. Detectives seized 115 grams of cocaine and more than $1,200 in suspected drug money. The estimated street value of the drugs is over $5,000. Ramos was committed to Gander Hill prisons in lieu of $234,000 secured bail.

Car breakins on College Avenue

On Jan 1 around 3:05 a.m., unknown persons broke into two vehicles in a parking lot on South College Avenue. Property taken was valued at $775 and damage to the vehicles was estimated at $850.

Men assaulted at College Square

Two men told police they were sitting in a vehicle outside Pathmark in College Square shopping center on Dec. 27 around 11 p.m. and talking with two women they had just met. A black 1996 Nissan 300 ZX and a green 1992-93 Eagle Talon pulled up with six males who got out and approached the men in the car. One of the males punched the man sitting on the passenger side of the car while others threw beer bottles at the victims' car. The victims drove to the Newark Police station and reported the incident.

Parked cars damaged

Sometime between 10 p.m. on Dec. 29 and 7 p.m. on Dec. 30, unknown persons shattered the passenger side view mirror on a vehicle parked on Timberline Road. Damage was approximately $150. Around the same time, unknown persons broke a rear view mirror off a vehicle parked on Mill Station Road. Damage was estimated at $250.

Empty store vandalized

Sometime between Dec. 20 at 1 p.m. and Dec. 23 at 9:30 a.m., unknown persons entered and vandalized an empty store space at College Square shopping center. A representative of Fusco Properties told police he was showing the space to prospective tenants when he discovered the damage. Three fire extinguishers had been sprayed and emptied of their contents and there were burnmarks on surfaces throughout the building. Rugs and furniture were damaged and broken glasses and plates were found. Two empty liquor bottles also were found. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

FOR THE RECORD

The name of the boy in the photo on the front page of the Dec. 24, 1999, issue was incorrect. Chris and Abby Lang, children of Newark resident Jeff Lang, performed in the Christmas play at St. Thomas parish.

Speed and alcohol contribute to accident

► FATALS, from 1

Bard, Dacosta, and Maura O'Malley Carberry, 36, were all pronounced dead at the scene. Carberry, of Newark, was a passenger in Dacosta's car. Vannoy was not injured and refused medical treatment. Dacosta was the only person in the accident who was wearing a seat belt. Police believe Bard was driving at a high rate of speed and was under the influence of alcohol. Police said they found open beer bottles in Bard's vehicle. An official determination will not be known until the State Medical Examiner releases an autopsy report.

Vannoy, the only survivor of the 1 a.m. crash, said he was on his way home from Newark when Bard came up behind his car and attempted to pass.

"I was in no hurry," Vannoy said at the accident scene. "I was just going along at 50 or less."

Vannoy, 60, said he saw the two cars hit head on, and he ducked down in his seat as fast as he could.

"His (Bard's) car spun around in front of me and landed on my roof," he said.

Vannoy's car sustained minor damage.

Mary Simpson, her boyfriend, Leslie Henry of Oxford, Pa., and her sister who was visiting from North Carolina were on en route to Simpson's Fair Hill home when the accident occurred.

Simpson and Henry said they saw a cloud of smoke as they approached the accident scene. "You could tell it just happened," Simpson said.

Simpson and Henry were one of the first motorists to stop and try to help. "We tried talking to him (Bard) to see if he was alive," Simpson said. "At first we thought we heard breathing, but I guess it wasn't."

Simpson said she was impressed by the emergency personnel and police that responded to the scene. "I do have to commend them on how quickly they responded. Unfortunately, there was nothing anyone could do," she said. "I'm so sorry."

'Almost eerie' in Newark on New Year's Eve

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

City manager Carl Luft said Newark was "very quiet" as he and his staff watched through the night on New Year's Eve.

"It was a very peaceful night, here," Luft said. "I was out driving around at one point and it felt like I was the only car on the road."

Luft said the feeling was "almost eerie" as he drove through downtown streets rarely free of traffic.

"The police and emergency people were set up at the command center in the police department but everything seemed to go very smooth," Luft said. "Safety was 'in,' apparently."

Although the city staff had numerous people on call for possible Y2K problems that never came, only the police personnel were actually working during the night.

"Most additional people were out in the field," said Luft. "The police had a major rollcall at 9 p.m. for the officers who worked (through midnight in to early morning)."

Newark Police spokesperson Mark Farrall said he was on duty taking calls from 9 p.m. on Dec. 31 to 3 a.m. on Jan. 1. "It was deadly," he said. "There was absolutely nothing happening."

According to Farrall, the only DUI arrest of the evening came around 12:39 a.m. on Jan. 1. "There were a few loud noise complaints, a couple of fights near the bars and about six disorderly conduct incidents," Farrall said. "Most of those were hooting and hollering around midnight."

Luft said he did hear some fireworks going off as on any other New Year's Eve. "But that was it," he concluded.

Proposal includes school with eight grades

► CHARTER, from 1

Wexler, who has a child in the Christina District as well as one in private school, said that Charter School supporters are striving for high academic standards.

"We hope students will not just pass, but totally clear the (Delaware State Testing Program) in the eighth grade," Wexler said.

A proposal detailing the school's curriculum and preferred teaching methods filed with the application includes a project-based learning method incorporating a common theme throughout different subjects to promote their relevance.

According to the proposal, the school would accommodate 400 students in grades five through seven in the first year, add the eighth grade, along with 100 more students, in the second year, with the addition of another 100 students in the school's third year.

Godwin readily accepted the invitation as a member of the founding board of directors. "I thought it would be helpful for the city of Newark to be involved in education and the independence of a Charter School is fascinating to me," said Godwin. "This can develop into quite a good alternative for families (with school-age children)."

Larry Gabbert, state coordinator for Charter Schools, explained that his office has, by law, 90 days to completely review the applications and anticipates that a public hearing will be held in April regarding accepted applications.

Not all submissions are accepted, however.

"We will be going to the State Board of Education meeting in January to discuss which applications are complete and which are worthy of further consideration," said Gabbert.

Optimistic that the state will give them the go-ahead, the founding board of directors are already considering 16 sites for the alternative school despite the high costs involved. "The largest impediment to establishing a Charter School is finding a building for it," said Wexler. "We need a lot of money for that."

If Newark's Charter School application is approved, the current board would be dissolved in favor of a new board allowing three parents and two teachers to serve.

"The parents would be elected by other parents and the teachers are to be elected by other teachers," said Wexler.

For more information about the proposal for the Newark Charter School, contact Tony Wexler at 831-8743 or go to <http://www.me.udel.edu/wexler/ncs.x>

A SENIOR FEAST

At the annual Thanksgiving feast between the Newark Senior Center and the first grade students of Thurgood Marshall Elementary School, the seniors were greeted with songs of the holiday. Later they were served a luncheon of turkey, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, cranberry relish, bread, stuffing, pumpkin pie, pumpkin ice cream, peanut butter pie, and vegetables prepared by the students, teachers and cafeteria staff. Denise Schwartz, first grade chairperson, said, "The teachers and students had a lovely time eating and sharing their memories of Thanksgiving past and present." The feast was sponsored by the Newark Rotary Club and various supermarkets in the Newark and Bear area.

Education issues facing legislature this week

By ROBERT CONYER

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

A new proposal developed by state house and senate leaders for the hotly debated teacher accountability issue will be among the first items discussed when the Delaware General Assembly reconvenes Jan. 11.

State Representative Bruce C. Reynolds (R-Bear), chair of the House Education Committee, said there are already objections and concerns about the bill's approach.

"There is so much up in the air," he said. "I don't know where things are going."

By covering issues of social promotion, teacher evaluations and two-tiered diplomas — a system by which students can attain a standard diploma by completing course work but need to pass standardized tests to receive an academic diploma — there is still much confusion.

"There is a lot of confusion and disagreement," Reynolds said. "I hate moving forward when there is no consensus."

State Representative Stephanie A. Ulbrich (R-Newark South) said releasing the bill so close to the holidays has not helped.

She said many officials had only just received the documents and she does not believe they will be prepared to vote on the bill by Jan. 11.

But some feel the new bill has addressed many of the earlier problems and legislators should be prepared to proceed.

Based on earlier recommendations, State Senator Steven H. Amick (R-Newark West) said amendments were added to the bill, including the two-tiered diploma and a parent accountability section that many legislators felt was missing.

According to press secretary Anthony Farina, Governor Thomas Carper has not yet had time to go over the bill "word by word" but feels that solid legislation is being developed.

"Leaders in the legislature have been putting together a new proposal which takes previous issues into consideration," Farina said. "It's the governor's hope that a compromise can be reached that serves the needs of our students."

Reynolds said however that there are still issues concerning Spanish-speaking and disabled students.

"I know several parents of special (education) students who said they would sue if their child failed these tests," Reynolds said. "It becomes an issue of 'do you count them differently?' And then, 'who do you test?'"

Ulbrich said well-publicized local forums for all involved, like the town-hall meetings held by Carper in the fall, would help to further address these issues.

"The best move would be to delay action," Ulbrich said. "This is a complex bill with a significant impact on children and families. The public needs to review the bill and offer input."

This rendering shows the proposed Abby Court on the site of the former Happy Harry's across from Klondike Kate's at Choate and Main streets in Newark. If approved, developers plan to add a second story and expand the first floor of the new apartment/retail complex.

Main Street projects shaping up restaurant at the site in early 1999.

Lang said the restaurant as now planned should be "really nice" with an estimated 150-200 seats. "An international company is talking to us about going in there," he said this week.

A distinguishing feature of the development project is reconstruction and adaptive reuse of the existing mill buildings or their foundations, some of which are in the Open Floodway District.

The NVF plant is Newark's oldest industrial site. Mills operated at that location beginning around 1715. Prior to Commonwealth's purchase, the buildings had been empty and deteriorating since the last fiber mill closed in 1991.

Commonwealth has also moved ahead quickly with other developments in Newark. The apartments were fully leased last fall at Center Square on Main Street, while tenants were still moving into the retail space.

In October, Happy Harry's signed a 15-year lease for 10,900 square feet of the space. The drug store which operated at Choate Street originally planned to move into the new Capano site where the Charcoal Pit is going up, but reportedly changed their minds when Commonwealth offered a better deal.

Meanwhile, Disc Go Round, formerly on the second floor of the Galleria, decided to move across the street to take 2,425 square feet of ground floor space in Center Square.

Lang said the remaining space at that development will be a "breakfast/lunch restaurant" run by the owners of Home Grown, a specialty store on Main Street.

In its most recent move, Commonwealth purchased the former Happy Harry's site and is currently renovating it for new use.

"We plan to expand it and also could open it up on the Choate Street side," said Lang.

Called Abby Court, the new complex will have space for up to three retail tenants. "We also plan to add a second floor with eight apartments," said Lang.

Subject to approval by the city, Lang expects to have the newest complex ready for occupancy by early June.

Delaware expects to be less taxing in the 21st century

Governor Thomas R. Carper welcomed the 21st Century a few days early on Dec. 30, 1999, by announcing Delaware residents and businesses will see lower taxes in 2000 as a result of the $94 million tax package which was signed into law by Carper earlier in 1999.

The package includes: reducing the top rate below 6 percent for the first time in more than 45 years; eliminating the marriage tax penalty, and removing 10,000 working poor from tax rolls — providing additional incentives for people to move from welfare to work. Carper said the package is "sustainable, fair, simple, and focused on strengthening families, and bolstering economic growth."

As a result of 2000's tax cut package, a two-income family of four with a $40,000 annual income could see a 22.9 percent cut in personal income taxes — saving the family nearly $200 a year. Since 1993, the same family has seen its income taxes reduced by nearly 50 percent.

Details include:

*$4,000 standard deduction for a married couple was increased to $6,500 for a married couple. The tax code already allows single person a $3,250 standard deduction.

*By increasing the personal credit from $100 to $110, nearly 10,000 working poor taxpayers are removed from the tax rolls altogether.

*The pension income exclusion would move from $5,000 to $12,000.

*Business Tax Reductions — $4.6 million

*The gross receipts tax paid by Delaware manufacturers is reduced by 25 percent.

*Eliminating the public utility tax on natural gas consumption for automobile manufacturers will help create greater equity among manufacturers in Delaware.

Peterson goes home after serving sentence in Delaware

Brian Peterson went home to Wyckoff, N.J., on Tuesday after serving an 18-month sentence at Webb Correctional Facility in Prices Corner for killing his newborn son at a Newark motel in November 1996.

Peterson, who had been a freshman at Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania, said he learned he should have confided in his parents or other adults when he discovered that his girlfriend, Amy Grossberg, was pregnant.

Grossberg, a freshman at the University of Delaware at the time of the infant's death, is due to be released in May from Baylor Correctional Center in Wilmington.

The baby's body wrapped in a trash bag was found in a dumpster at the motel. The couple said they believed the child was still-born but the medical examiner said he died of skull fractures.

Reading a prepared statement at his home on Tuesday, the 21-year-old Peterson apologized "for my part in the tragic events that occurred three years ago."

Peterson plans to enroll in college again and complete a required 300 hours of community service.

Who's going to be accountable first?

This week the General Assembly reconvenes and attempts to finally get education accountability into the classrooms.

Although Delaware has been wrestling with this issue in many other places for the past five years, little has changed for the better in the schools.

Students are still graduating without the skills employers believe necessary for today's sophisticated technology, or even the basic reading and writing needed for entry level positions.

Delaware adopted testing standards which are supposed to address these concerns and make the students accountable for their hours of learning. Unfortunately, what they and we are learning is that the more things change, the more they stay the same.

Despite the new legislation and tests, the process looks like it will be delayed for at least a year while everyone involved argues over teacher and parent accountability.

These integral pieces of the puzzle should have been ready to install when the playing field was laid out.

No one ever believed students were not learning simply because they didn't have to produce measurable results in a standardized test. Many already learn to excel, graduate and go on to distinguish themselves in careers of every description. Others are lost in the corridors of learning, without the direction or motivation to succeed even when they find the door to the real world.

Parent and teacher accountability are not novel ideas. The entire community always had a responsibility and a part in the education of their children.

Parents in some areas are now trying to take control of the destinies of at least their own children.

The Coalition for Neighborhood Schools wants to rework a decades old arrangement to establish racial equality which placed facilities and students at bus length from each other. This is not the first time this has been challenged – and Delaware is not the only place parents are fighting it.

Another group is trying to insert themselves into the accountability process by setting up mentoring and tutoring programs in one school. An excellent idea, but one that needs to be expanded to entire school districts and one that already is feeling the pinch of not enough community support.

And this week, another group of parents and teachers has announced they are abandoning traditional fields to set up their own Charter School with public funds. In recent years, this has looked more and more like the only way to guarantee a good education for all the students in a school. We suspect there will be many more such groups this time next year if the legislature and public school officials do not find a workable solution.

Time is not on anyone's side here. Failing to find the will to change in the General Assembly, will only send the worst kind of message to our students and families: our legislators don't know what they are doing.

We will remember that, all right, when the time for election rolls around.

GUEST OPINION

Alcohol and College Life-Anytown, USA

By LLOYD W. KLINE

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

I entered college during the years of peak GI Bill enrollment not long after the end of World War II. At the time, no Americans in their right mind expected the 21-to-30-year-old veterans who swamped campuses nationwide to hold an alcohol-free party. Many had drunk their first champagne out of combat boots as prematurely hardened teenagers in devastated France or sipped fermented coconut oil in South Pacific foxholes – while they saved Western civilization for the world.

I was too young to serve in World War II. My baptism of fire – hardly so earth-shaking but nonetheless challenging – came during my senior year as president of my fraternity. Most of the ex-GIs had graduated, so the college reinstated its pre-war ban: No college-related alcohol any time, any place, for any reason! When an alumnus asked me where he should unload the keg at our Homecoming party, it fell on me to tell him to take it back where he got it or the school would pulverize our fraternal relationship and obliterate our chapter brick-by-ivied-brick.

Then, for the rest of the evening, I chose prudently not to notice the steady stream of foot traffic bearing sundry vessels of consumption between our fraternity house and the blind side of a convenient lilac bush behind the house.

With or without the sanction of town or gown, alcohol has long been associated with college and university life. In much of that association there is a certain romance, even nostalgia. Witness one of the songs in Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince," circa 1924: "Drink, drink, drink, my fellows!" Or, the plaintive "Whiffenpoof Song," an old college chorus revised slightly from a Rudyard Kipling ballad: "Gentlemen songsters off on a spree, / Doomed from here to eternity!"

Then, fast-forward to National Lampoon's "Animal House," the 1978 spoof of campus life in the riotous '60s – hardly romantic, totally hilarious, and brimming with Delta House drunkenness. How the culture of alcohol on campus had changed! It's interesting that Dartmouth, where creation of that film was inspired, is today taking steps similar to those at the University of Delaware to change the culture once again – not necessarily to turn drinkers into teetotalers, but to build responsibility into those who choose to drink and strong support for those who don't.

The prime movers in the Delaware effort recognize it as their duty to do so, with or without participation by the surrounding community. The first order of business for a responsible educational institution, after all, is the welfare and nurture of its customers – that is, its students.

Council finances in good condition

With all street improvements bills paid, totaling well over $19,000, and a balance of $2,457.71 with which to begin the new year, the finances of Town Council appear to be in good shape. Talk was rife of an 8-foot walk running from Main street north, under the B. and O. embankment and on to Cleveland Avenue. If such an improvement is seriously contemplated, it will meet with the approval of the entire north side of town, at least.

Still in operation found by police on farm near Newark

Ira Steel, 25-year-old man living on the Richard Wilson farm, a few miles west of Newark on the Kemblesville-New London road, was arrested by Officers Ellison and Lewis of Newark last Saturday and arraigned before Magistrate Thompson charged with operating a liquor still. Officers found a small five gallon boiler made of copper, a condenser consisting of a coil of small bore piping sunk in a keg, various other items of equipment, and about 10 gallons of alleged "mash" from which liquor is distilled.

Food plant delays spark dispute

A Milford developer is charging the city of Newark with blocking the construction of a frozen food plant on Elkton Road over a "parochial" issue. Hugh Martin has accused the city of taking a position that is "arbitrary and insulting to potential industry" by insisting on annexing the plant site if the city is to provide the plant with sewage service. The general partner of the U.S. Warehousing and Freezer Group is proposing to build the packaging and distribution plant on a 44-acre site across from Stine Laboratories.

Hello '78: The year of tax increases

Area bankers and apartment owners are becoming concerned over the school property tax rates, which could double or triple to pay for the costs of county-wide school desegregation. U.S. District Court Judge Murray M. Schwartz could order the merger of the 11 involved school districts into a single superdistrict.

City eyes power switch

At Monday's meeting, Newark City Council will decide whether to give its "notice of termination" to Delmarva Power and Light Company so it can consider a new contract with PECO Energy Company (based in Philadelphia), which is offering 10 percent more savings than Delmarva.

Prosperity ahead, UD expert says

Dr. John Stapleford, director of the University of Delaware's Newark-based Bureau of Economic Research, said, "I would say that everything we can see, all data we track, indicates that the economy in Delaware is continuing to perform above its long term average."

This may not sound like much, but Stapleford says it means more because the economy didn't reach this level until the end of 1993.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From: Joy W. Read

In December, my husband and I had the pleasure of helping with the Newark Area Welfare Committee's Christmas Basket Program and it was a most uplifting experience.

The time, energy and organizational skill which goes into putting together some 350 Christmas food baskets by the two organizers, Beverly Stoudt and Kathleen Davis, (who both take a week of vacation from their full time jobs to dedicate themselves to this program) has to be seen to be appreciated.

They organize teams of volunteers to gather food donations from the local collection points, sort it into categories, pack into baskets according to the size of the recipient family, and arrange for its collection by the families ready for Christmas. The whole operation is run with military precision. They even make the effort to see that their helpers are fed!

But although they are the organizers, they could not achieve all they do without the support of many other helpers:

Newark United Methodist Church; Newark Area Welfare Committee; Val Nardo; Newark High School Key Club; Local Girl Guide Troop; Local Schools; University of Delaware Society; University Dorm Donations; NVF; Gaylord Container Corporation; Louis Dreyfus Distribution Center; Bank of New York employees; W.H. Gore; Copy Maven; Cecil Whig employees; Newark Senior Center; The generous donation of more than 350 turkeys from local residents.

Today, when there is so much trouble and strife in the world in which we live, it is very rewarding to see how people can work together to help each other. Long may this program continue into the 21st Century.

AYUSA Director

Thank you so much for all the help you have given AYUSA (Academic Year in the USA) in the past. As you know, we are a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting world peace and understanding through student exchange. Printing our press releases in your newspapers has been an invaluable aid to us in our search for host families. There are so many families among your readers who would like to host an exchange student but don't know how to get one.

This year, 15 high school students were assigned to our region for the second semester, which starts in January. We have found host families for all but three of them who, of course, will not be able to come unless we find homes for them. They are Bruno from Ecuador, Vicente from Brazil, and Federico from Argentina.

All three like to play sports, speak very good English, and make excellent grades in school. Any of your readers who would like to make one of these boys happy by opening their hearts and homes should call 1-800-251-4938.

Alcohol abuse can be stemmed

► KLINE, from 6

If binge-drinking contributed either to student welfare or to academic nurture, the institution's policy on alcohol abuse would be simple: Do nothing or laissez-faire.

For the past three years, however, the University's policy has been just the opposite. Fueled in part by a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, a Campus/Community Coalition has been working to "change the culture" of alcohol abuse that for years propelled the University toward widespread perception as a "party school."

It is not easy to change such a culture. The long and generally accepted association of college life and alcohol runs deep in the American psyche. Party animals of the past return to campus recalling and expecting to re-experience more of the same.

Alcohol-related businesses abound near campus, anxious that the culture not be changed to put them out of business. Archaic liquor laws are difficult to enforce and sometimes contradictory.

Townpeople look for quick, easy solutions to, and immediate prosecution of, obvious incidents of student alcohol abuse. Enrollment competition demands that institutions allow prospective students a certain measure of what they're looking for in this regard.

But, Coalition participants remain optimistic about their mission, and they point to possible gains: Enrollment for two years in a row has exceeded the University's own expectations. A mixed blessing from almost any point of view.

But, it just might suggest that a "certain measure" of what many prospective enrollees are looking for has nothing to do with the availability of alcohol — legal or illegal.

The number of reported on-campus, alcohol-related violations, suspensions, and medical emergencies over the past two years has dropped significantly.

The University's policy of notifying parents of students who violate regulations governing the use of alcohol — a policy officially illegal when the University first announced it — has instead impelled other universities to follow suit and led to federal legislation that makes parental notification legal again after a 30-year hiatus.

Can a culture of alcohol abuse be changed? Probably — with the willingness and effort of all who are involved or affected. And in a college town, that's just about everyone.

Kline is a proud and loyal resident of Kells Avenue in Newark and a strong enthusiast for living next to, but also distinguishable from, the University of Delaware.

It's the time of year for viruses

A couple of weeks ago we had a virus going through our house. One of the kids brought it home. With three teenagers in the house, some things come in that shouldn't. Anyway, this wasn't influenza, the common cold or even bronchitis. This was something called a "Trojan horse virus."

The first indication that something was wrong was when I got a call at work from my daughter asking me to come home right away because "something was wrong."

What ended up being wrong was that none of the passwords on our AOL account worked. I called AOL and was told that they had frozen our account because the night before someone using my son Mark's user name and password had sent 18 e-mail messages to 317 people in three minutes.

After checking alibis and determining innocence, we figured out that we had a problem. What had happened was that someone (probably Mark) had downloaded a file from somewhere that contained the Trojan horse virus. When he logged on, an e-mail with his account name and password was automatically sent to someone, who then used it to send out bulk e-mail, sometimes called "spam." Once I ran an anti-virus program, I discovered a total of nine Trojan horse viruses on the hard drive.

With so many people just having set up new computers that they received for Christmas, it's important to be aware of computer viruses. Most viruses are little more than a nuisance, but some can prove harmful to your computer system. It's important to know how you can and can't get a computer virus.

You can get a virus from opening a document or executable program that you received as an e-mail attachment or downloading and running a program from the Internet. You cannot get a virus from opening an e-mail message. However, you can get a virus from opening a file attached to an e-mail message. You can't get a virus by reading a webpage. You can get a virus only by downloading and running a program. Usually your web browser will warn you when you begin to download a program from the web.

You can't get a virus by downloading a file. Downloading a file will not infect your computer with a virus. However, installing or opening an infected document or a software program will infect your computer.

The best way to keep your computer clean from viruses is to make sure you have a good anti-virus software program on your computer and you use it daily. Mine runs automatically, but they can be set up to run as soon as you turn on your computer.

It only takes a few minutes to install this software, and there are many good ones on the market. Use them and save yourself a great deal of aggravation down the line. Just as sure as the kids will bring home the flu from school, they'll certainly eventually leave the door open for a computer virus, too.

Going into a trail spin

By Sharon R. Cole

Newark Post Contributing Writer

Riding up and down steep inclines through wooded and rocky terrain with white-knuckle grips and intense concentration offers the ultimate rush for some locals who yearn for a little more than a leisurely bike ride. For the past six-and-a-half years, those who share the desire for such a thrill have been able to join together to create new opportunities for riders through a club called the Delaware Trail Spinners. The mountain bike organization that now consists of about 80 members, was founded by Bill Bowen of Bear in 1993. Bowen, who raced motorcycles for 13 years, picked up the sport of mountain biking after retiring from his 38 years with Diamond State Telephone. "I started the club with a 17-year-old biker who is not a member now," said Bowen. Since its inception, the group has been run as a non-profit organization through the State of Delaware. As such, said Bowen, all money raised by the group is given towards trail maintenance and other charities.

With no club dues, the only way the Spinners raise any funds is by holding mountain bike races. Through 1995, an annual race was held at the C&D Canal. That changed in 1996, however, when members decided to shift gears to the Fair Hill race grounds located just over the state line in Maryland. "We've constructed and maintained 40 miles of new trails at Fair Hill where there are more than 70 miles of bike trails," said Bowen. An estimated 500 cyclists register each year at Fair Hill to race their rugged bikes on racing trails of up to 30 miles in length that wind through the Maryland grounds that are better known for accommodating horses. In 1998, donations from this race and others totaled over $12,000. Aside from trail maintenance, funds went to recipients that include the Fair Hill Nature Center, Delaware Greenways Inc., and the Sunrise Residents Council Fund in Maryland. An additional $1,700 in proceeds from the club's most recent Iron Hill bike race went to the Delaware Chapter Sierra Club.

When not conducting a race, members organize trail rides all year long in parks like Brandywine State, Middle Run Valley, Iron Hill, Fair Hill, Elk Neck, French Creek State and Blue Marsh throughout Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Being a Trail Spinner is not just about riding. As stated on their website at www.trailspinners.org, members are mountain bicyclists of all abilities joining together to enjoy and promote the sport and privilege of mountain biking with a commitment to preserve access to trails through education and advocacy. In fact, one of the conditions for becoming a member of Delaware Trail Spinners is to dedicate at least 12 hours during a six month candidacy period to help maintain trails and run races.

The most recent call for major trail clean-up was just after Hurricane Floyd reaped havoc in our area. "We came out with chain saws to help clear the trails and we put back at least three bridges that floated away," Bowen said. It doesn't take a huge hurricane to block bike paths, though. According to Bowen anytime there is a lot of wind, fallen trees and branches need to be cleared.

For those with little to no experience, the club offers training sessions that include teaching individuals how to do such tasks as changing tires and properly aligning the bike seat. "We used to teach a boys bike camp in the summer where we would take them out on a trail and then tell them to let the air out of their tires so they could learn how to change them," said Bowen.

Proper biking gear is also promoted by the organization. A helmet and water bottle are required when riding trails, and special clipless pedals are recommended by members for offering the best riding conditions. One cardinal rule, said Bowen, is to never ride on a trail less than 24 hours after rainfall. Not only is it more dangerous, but it ruins the trails, making them more difficult to ride on and maintain. Most importantly, the Delaware Trail Spinners enjoy connecting with nature while getting a great workout. "You're in the woods, you're out with nature, and you see a lot of animals and wildlife," said Bowen. "You can't beat it for exercise."

For those interested in learning about the Delaware Trail Spinners, you can visit their website or the meetings held the first Tuesday of each month at 8 p.m. at McGlynn's Pub in the Polly Drummond Shopping Center, Newark.

A celebration of the soul

Art, music and the spirit combined in one venue

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Connect with your soul and connect with others at Soulstice, the artist's den.

Owned by two Maryland natives, Lance Davis and Candice Holleran, along with Delaware native Teri Nolan, the secluded meeting place located in Market East Plaza off Main Street in Newark is touted as a celebration of the soul through art, music and spirit.

The celebration begins with the den's interior which is an entire work of art created by the minds and hands of its owners. Its purple, blue and red walls accented by gold and white lighting and mood provoking paintings, create a relaxing, subdued and inspirational atmosphere. Intimacy is also apparent from the abundance of burning candles to the soft drapery, throw-pillow seating, comfort couches and tall and short tables.

"I've always craved a venue with stimulating people and a chilled atmosphere which complemented music," stated Davis, the trio's musician. This same vision ultimately brought Nolan, Holleran and Davis together to open Soulstice.

With aspirations to blend differing art forms into one mystical weave, the owners of the spiritual venue offer workshops, classes and special events all enhancing the limitless creativity of an artist's life.

"We wanted to create an environment to display our strengths while being an inspiration for others to expand their creativity," explained Holleran.

Weekly workshops include yoga, transcendence and belly dancing which is taught by Maya, a dancer from the Moroccan restaurant Casablanca on Route 13.

One of the events receiving the biggest response, said Holleran, is the open expression nights held every Friday from 7 to 11 p.m.

"We've had people perform poetry, music, drama, Reggae and even meditation," said Holleran. A few well-known local artists making appearances for the open mic format at Soulstice include poet, Rich Boucher, singer/songwriter, Jenny Bostick and musician Lou Lasprugato (formerly of Juliet's Wishing Well).

"Friday nights are really spontaneous," Davis said. "You don't know what is going to happen."

As performances go on, audience members who feel so inclined, are encouraged to add some of their own artwork to a blank canvas that rests on an easel towards the back of the room. By the end of the night, said Nolan, an entire painting has been completed by the hands of many and the piece is raffled off.

"We tend not to be conservative," said Davis. "We wanted to offer an alternative way for people to escape from the everyday, run-of-the-mill life."

"We've heard a lot of people say that a place like Soulstice was so desperately needed in Newark," said Nolan. "They keep asking 'Where have you been?'"

Delaware 1000 had different party animals

As the year 2000 begins, it's interesting to consider what the Delmarva region was like 1,000 years ago. Keith Doms, anthropology lab coordinator at the University of Delaware, offers some insight into the region's inhabitants, climate and plant and animal life.

Long before European settlers made the tristate area their home, the Lenape Indians walked among the dense forests and clean rivers of the Delmarva Peninsula, which they shared with the Tockwogs and the Nanticokes, Doms said.

"To the north, beyond the water gap, the Lenape lived in villages and maintained gardens where they grew corn, beans and squash," he said. "There were other farming groups in the Susquehanna valley and in tide-water Virginia, but the Lenape tribe here on the Delmarva Peninsula maintained its semi-nomadic hunter and gatherer way of life, traveling in small extended family groups."

The Lenape moved about the landscape on foot and by canoe to take advantage of the seasonal availability of different food and resources. They would come together periodically to exploit particularly plentiful resources such as fish runs. Their simple houses consisted of low 3 to 4-foot-high domes, about 12 to 15 feet in diameter, and made of bent saplings and branches tied together. This dome was covered with bark and reed mats. The floors were often dug down another foot or two to increase headroom. Pits were dug near the houses to store excess food.

The Lenape hunted with snares, bows and arrows and nets. Stone tools were made from quartz, quartzite, jasper and chert, Doms said.

"Most of these were found in the cobbles of rivers and streams, while jasper could also be quarried around Iron Hill," he said. "Stone axes allowed them to make dug-out canoes and to strip the bark off of trees but not cut down the mature hardwoods."

The forest in this area teemed with life, he said. Squirrels, raccoons, opossums and turkeys were abundant. While deer were less numerous than today, further north, small herds of bison and elk grazed. Predators included wolves, black bears, cougars, gray fox and bobcats. Hawks and eagles plied the skies.

"For the most part, the rivers were deeper, narrower and cleaner," Doms said. "In the fall eels gathered in large groups as they began to swim downstream to the sea. The bottom of the bays and marshes were almost lined with oysters and other shell fish."

The climate was similar to modern day, but probably a little wetter, he said. Most of this region was a dense forest with oak, hickory, chestnut and walnut trees predominating on all of the high ground. While gum, sycamore, sassafras and pine thrived in the lower marshy area, bald cypress trees were found in the lower portion of Delmarva, as there are today.

"During the summer the upper canopy was so dense that little sunlight penetrated to the forest floor except where one of the mighty trees had died or fallen," Doms said. "Early colonists say that you could drive a wagon from one end of the peninsula to the other without hitting, a tree or ever seeing the sun."

Girl Scout cookie sale begins tomorrow

The Girl Scout cookie sale program begins tomorrow and runs through Sunday, March 5. Proceeds from the sale of a package of cookies provides funding for various troop activities in the local community. The cookie sales also teach girls a valuable set of life skills, including learning how to set goals, creating a plan, taking responsibility, practicing money management and following through on commitment.

Customers can choose from eight traditional Girl Scout favorites, including Thin Mints, Samoas, Tagalongs, Do-si-dos, Striped Chocolate Chip, Trefoils, Low-fat Apple Cinnamon and Lemon Drops. Girl Scout cookies are $3 per package.

The Girl Scout Council receives a portion of the proceeds to fund recruitment and training of adult volunteers, maintain camp grounds, and support Council-wide initiatives including science programs, career workshops and financial assistance for girls.

On Jan. 17, 19, and 21, volunteer guide training will be held at the Ashland Nature Center in Hockessin.

Orientation for interested new guides is offered Jan. 11. This highly diversified group of men and women are responsible for teaching environmental programs

Topics include maple sugaring, Lenni Lenape life, pond and geology studies, birding with binoculars, insect safari, monarch butterflies, mining and minerals, animal homes and nature photography.

Guides have the opportunity to handle replicas of Native American artifacts, use scientific equipment and develop new interests through monthly natural history meetings and field trips. For information, call the Delaware Nature Society 239-2334, ext. 22, or e-mail web-page@dnsashland.org.

Hockessin Library book sale rescheduled

Because of Hurricane Floyd, the booksale by the Friends of the Hockessin Library, originally scheduled for September 1999, was rescheduled for Jan. 14-15. The sudden rise and subsequent flooding of Red Clay Creek in Yorklyn destroyed 1/3 of the books that had been sorted for sale. The residual mud and downed trees made entrance to the sale unsafe.

The new sale will be held Friday, Jan. 14 from 10 to 9 and Saturday, the 15 from 9 to 3 at the Center for the Creative Arts on Rt. 82 in Yorklyn.

Past years proceeds have been used to purchase a mural for the children's section, to enhance the landscaping, and to sponsor special programs. Most recently, the Friends purchased two major art works: a sculpture by local artisan, Charles Parks and a mobile by Daniel Goldstein. These were dedicated on Nov. 13, 1999.

Spartans lose first of season in final

The St. Mark's girls basketball team came across one guest too many at the William Penn Cup of the Diamond State Classic as the undefeated and top-ranked Spartans fell to St. Frances Academy (Md.) 65-57 in the championship game last Thursday night.

The Spartans, who entered the game with an 8-0 record, were paced once again by junior guard Michelle Albanese. She led all scorers with 24 points and was selected as the recipient of the Lou Moser Sportsmanship Award, recognizing her leadership throughout the tournament.

St. Mark's also got 11 points from Lindsay Hageman, while the Panthers were led by Kia Coady with 16 points, Keila Evans with 14 and tournament MVP LaTanya Blue, who added nine points to go along with a dominating defensive presence.

St. Mark's advanced to the championship game after back-to-back wins over North Catholic (Pa.) and Elizabeth Seton (Md.). St. Frances' path to the title game included victories over Caravel and St. Peter's (N.Y.), which came into the tourney as USA Today's No. 6 team on the East Coast.

"Athletically, they were just a step ahead of us all night," said Spartans head coach John Fiorelli. "We were a little sluggish in the beginning, but we tried as hard as we could. But sometimes the feet just didn't move as quickly as they should."

The Spartans grabbed the first basket of the night as Albanese hit a three pointer, but it would prove to be their only lead as the Panthers answered with the next 10 points of

Mills enjoying tough new course at UD

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

For five years, Kristin Mills toiled on the playing fields and in the gyms of Caravel Academy, setting standards at the varsity level for the school and statewide that may never be surpassed.

Now, as a redshirt freshman for the University of Delaware's women's basketball team, Mills is in the unfamiliar position of having to watch instead of play; learn from new coaches and teammates instead of teaching and leading younger teammates.

But some things haven't changed, like her competitive drive. On Monday, although it was just another practice and there's no chance of playing until next season, Mills was the first player to walk out onto the practice floor at the Bob Carpenter Center.

"It's been great so far," Mills said of her first few months of classes and practices. "I'm not taking (January classes) this winter, so I'm taking a little break. But the first semester went great, school-wise."

Mills, who finished as the all-time leading scorer for high school girls in Delaware history with 2,131 points, came to the university on an academic scholarship. And basket-weaving probably isn't in her future - she was an honor roll student four years at Caravel and is currently a secondary education major with a minor in computer science.

Four free throws by Albanese and a basket by All-Tournament selection Erin Calloway brought the Spartans to within one before St. Frances went on another run to pad their lead to 20-11 behind a rotation that featured four different players six feet or taller.

The gritty Spartans continued to hang in and when Tracee Mosch hit a three pointer at the top of the key and a jump shot for two it cut the deficit to 23-17. The Panthers reacted to every run by St. Mark's with a run of their own, but after Albanese hit a jumper and then a finger roll (as much as any 5-2 player can finger roll) at the end of the half, the top ranked Spartans were within four at 30-26.

"They were really tough," said Calloway, who finished with six points on the night. "They were physical, but were used to it. The whole tournament was physical."

It was that physical play that set the tone for the second half as the two teams contested every dribble, let alone every shot. The Panthers style was an attacking one, and while many of the fans in attendance thought that style bordered on rough play, Fiorelli was well aware of what to expect.

"They're aggressive, but a good aggressive," said Fiorelli, who led the Spartans to state titles in 1996 and '97. "They get lots of fouls called against them, but it's because they're always going after the ball. I like the way they play."

The two teams alternated baskets in the third quarter, with the Panthers extending their lead to seven early in the quarter. But while the Spartans couldn't seem to get any closer, St. Frances couldn't shake their opponent either. After Lisa Kryzwicki grabbed a rebound and drove the length of the court for a lay-up, St. Mark's was within eight at 45-37.

The fourth quarter featured more of the same as a pair of baskets by Hageman were matched by Coady and Blue. But after two more free throws by Hageman and a jumper from Albanese, the Spartans found themselves within four at 52-48.

However, with the crowd sensing a typical St. Mark's comeback, the magic was not to be as Coady, a 5-4 sophomore guard, hit a pair of buckets, including a three with 1:15 to go, to push the Panthers lead to 61-52. Albanese, who was the leading scorer of the entire William Penn Cup, hit two more baskets down the frantic stretch run, but it was not enough.

"We are a short team but quick and we play together, which makes us good," said Calloway when asked what she thought her team could learn from its first loss.

"But this will be our only loss all season."

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

MICHELLE ALBANESE - ST. MARK'S

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

If you attend a St. Mark's girls basketball game for the first time, it might take a few seconds to remember that you're not at either a track or gymnastics meet when you see what Spartans junior guard Michelle Albanese does with the ball.

Last week in William Penn Cup play of the Diamond State Classic, Albanese needed all of her skill and savvy as the Spartans faced some of the best teams on the East Coast. Albanese rose to the occasion, as she proved she's not only one of the best players in the state, but far beyond its borders as well.

In the Spartans' three games, Albanese, scored 16 points in a 53-43 first-round win over North Catholic (Pa.), 15 in a semifinal-round victory over defending tournament champion Elizabeth Seton (Md.), and 24 in the title game, which was won by St. Frances (Md.), 65-57.

Albanese's three-game total led all scorers for the tournament, and her other assets helped her win the Lou Moser Sportsmanship Award.

Her worth to the team is also shown in the fact that she's one of the team's three captains as a junior. St. Mark's Coach John Fiorelli, whose top-ranked team left the tournament with an 8-1 record, said he expects Albanese to be a leader, because in addition to her talent, she's been starting since she was a freshman.

"Because of her ability and her confidence and her real mature way about things, she is a leader along with the other two seniors," Fiorelli said. "She's a very intelligent player who is confident in her ability and continually tries to make the team better."

Fiorelli said he has little worry about what Albanese will do with the ball, even when something starts out looking like it's ill-advised, because something good usually comes out of it.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the time she makes the right decision," Fiorelli said. "We were down nine (to St. Frances) with like 30 seconds to go and I wanted us to shoot threes. She made a drive and tried to push it into someone and she came over and said, 'I'm sorry.'"

"I said, 'That's the first bad decision you made all night so you don't have to apologize.'"

"I'm pretty satisfied with the way I'm playing," said Albanese, who began playing basketball in fourth grade for St. John's. She started as a guard then and hasn't played anywhere else.

"It's a little more control of the game," she said about why she likes the position.

Another asset Albanese possesses is endurance. Fiorelli said it's not a problem now, but might be later in the season if he can't find more rest for the energetic Albanese.

"Not really," Albanese said about getting tired when she plays and entire game. "I'm used to it."

Staying in shape through soccer also helps build her stamina, she added.

Albanese, an honors student who may pursue a career in athletic training, said her team's success this season is really no surprise, because it lost only on starter from last year's semifinal-round team.

"We've had a lot of big wins so far and it's been tons of fun," she said.

"We're fairly experienced. We have pretty high expectations," she added. "We want to be a tough competitor in March (in the state tournament)."

Spartans knock off Maryland team to advance to title game

St. Mark's hosted the William Penn Cup of the Diamond State Classic last week and proved to be inhospitable as they knocked off Elizabeth Seton (Md.) 49-46 to advance to the championship game of the tournament for the third time in five years.

The Spartans, ranked No. 1 in the state, were paced by guard Michelle Albanese, who had 15 points and Erin Calloway, who had 10 on her way to being named to the All-Tournament team.

The Roadrunners of Elizabeth Seton were led by six foot, three inch tall center Lenette O'Reggio, who had 15 points, and senior Katrina Martin, who chipped in with 10.

"They had the size advantage, but we rotated seven girls today who all did well," said Spartans' head coach John Fiorelli. "Lisa Kryzwicki did a fantastic job defensively on their big girl matching up or taking her out of the play."

The Roadrunners came into the game with three players 6-2 or taller, while the Spartans tallest starter was the 5-10 senior Krzywicki, who had 11 points of her own and held her own against the talented O'Reggio on both ends of the court.

With the score tied 17-17 at halftime, the Roadrunners began to demonstrate the skills that had brought more than a few Division I recruiters to the tournament when they shut down the Spartans offense and hit five consecutive baskets to take their largest lead of the game at 29-21, before St. Mark's launched their comeback.

"This game was pretty intense, but we also wanted to have fun out there," said Kryzwicki.

Albanese hit a pair of baskets sandwiched around free throws by Hageman and Calloway to put St. Mark's back up 32-31 early in the fourth quarter.

The two teams continued to exchange baskets spearheaded by Hageman, who on three possessions hit a driving lay-up, dove on the floor to cause a jump ball and a change of possession and finally, grabbed a rebound to start a fast break that ended with a Mosch basket that knotted the score at 38 as the crowd erupted.

The two teams continued to trade shots until 1:30 remained. Then, Calloway snared a rebound and put it back in to give the Spartans a lead they would never lose at 43-42.

family, including her parents, Bill and Carol, to attend the university.

The decision to sit out her first season was made the summer before her senior year at Caravel, and both Mills and UD Coach Tina Martin agree it was the right decision.

"It's worked out fine so far," Mills said. "I can see improvement in myself already, which is nice just as far as things like quickness go. Having to guard (Hens starting guard Cindy Johnson, the team's leading scorer), that will make anyone get quicker."

"We were very strong at the guard position," Martin said. "I think for Kristin to be successful at this level, she has to get stronger and she has some concepts, as most kids do when they come out of high school, that they have to pick up and learn at the college level."

"It's a quicker game. All the athletes are stronger and quicker and she's got a big adjustment to make. And I think this year will help open up her eyes and see the bigger, stronger athletes."

"And also we play a little differently than what her high school team played. Our defensive schemes sometimes are a little bit more detailed than what they are at the high school level."

"And again, that's a normal adjustment for any kid that's coming into our program. So I think this year is very good for her."

Mills' path, however, won't get any easier next season, as three experienced guards will return - Johnson and Danielle Leyfert, who are both juniors, and sophomore Megan Dellegrotti.

Those three are also a major reason why the Blue Hens were 8-3 overall and 2-1 in America East conference play before their game Tuesday against Maine.

In addition, there are two other UD guards who earned letters last season who will be back next season, along with three red-shirting guards.

"It's going to be really tough for Kristin," Martin said.

"She knew that coming in. I think the tradition of her family coming to this university is something that really attracted

"It's worked out fine so far."

UD FRESHMAN BASKETBALL PLAYER

her. Plus the fact that our basketball program has been turned around."

"I think it's a great situation to have a local kid who wants to be here and just wants to be part of the program."

"Knowing that, she saw Danielle and Cindy as freshmen and saw Megan Dellegrotti when she came in as a freshman. She knows that those kids are very talented and it's going to be tough for her to overtake them."

"But I think she's got a great attitude, she's a terrific student and I think that she just wants to work hard and contribute in any way that she can. Is she going to step in here and set the world on fire? No, I don't think so. Because those other kids have more experience, they are older. She's going to have to wait her turn as far as playing time and that kind of situation goes."

Martin said that what will make Mills a good college player will be her intelligence.

"She's going to have to out-smart people," Martin said. "Her foot-speed, her jumping ability and all those kinds of things, to be honest, right now are probably average."

"But she's got to use her head and her smarts and her basketball senses to overcome some of the other people that she'd play against in our league. Because their athleticism is better than hers."

Included in Mills' new practice regimen is weightlifting, which began in the preseason and continues three times a week.

"A lot of my family members and people that I see think that I've gotten thinner," Mills said with a smile when asked if she's changed any physically.

Mills played several sports at Caravel, and in the summer, there were always more, especially basketball. Having to watch from the bench this season is sometimes hard, she said, but the presence of the other red-shirt players have helped.

"It makes it a lot easier, and we still feel like we're part of the team, practicing and doing everything else," Mills said. "So it's not bad at all."

Mills said the increase in intensity of play is the most noticeable difference between high school and college play.

"It's just a level above, which I love," Mills said.

Another benefit of sitting out this season is the possibility of still playing four varsity seasons, since she plans to obtain a master's degree.

"I miss (the high school competition) a little bit, but I'm really enjoying this," said Mills. "It's definitely a new challenge and I love it so far."

Glasgow girls knock off Caravel

By JOE NYE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

In a tournament filled with out of state teams, two local schools found their most exciting game came against a cross-town rival as Glasgow defeated Caravel 47-44 last Wednesday in the William Penn Cup of the Diamond State Classic held at St. Mark's.

The Dragons were paced by senior LaShanda Simpson with 15 points and an all-around game that gave the Bucs fits in the second half. Kristin Hines added 11. Caravel was paced by Tiara Malcolm, who had 18 points, and Davenia Payne, who added 14.

Caravel took an early lead, going up by 12 at one point in the first half before Glasgow stormed back in the second half, spearheaded by a coaching decision to put the talented Simpson at point guard where she could control the action more.

"We made some defensive adjustments at the half, putting LaShanda at the point because she makes things happen," said Glasgow assistant coach Eileen Smith, who was filling in for head coach Larry Walker because of a family emergency. "We started slow but I'm very proud that we changed the pace towards the end and beat a very good Caravel team."

Both teams had lost their opening game in the tournament, Glasgow to St. Peter's (N.Y.) and Caravel to eventual champion St. Frances Academy (Md.), before squaring off in the consolation round. The Bucs looked worthy of their recent No. 2 ranking in the state by taking an early 10-4 first quarter lead behind three baskets by Malcolm, who along with Simpson was selected to the All-Tournament team, and two by Payne, the talented sophomore.

"We got down on ourselves a little bit at the start," said Simpson, who recently added an All-State selection in volleyball to her basketball All-State pick of last year. "But coach Smith gave us a good talk at halftime and we started to play better defense and hit some pressure shots."

The Dragons, who have been forced to make adjustments in wake of All-State candidate Kellye Hines' season-ending knee injury, made a key move at the start of the second half by putting Simpson out front, giving her the chance to make plays.

She used that new position throughout the third quarter to wreak havoc on the Bucs, hitting a jumper to open the scoring and then after a Payne free throw, she nailed a three pointer from the right side to bring the Dragons to within 24-20.

The Dragons continued their comeback in the fourth quarter with another Dyal jumper to take the lead. After free throws by Payne and Malcolm gave the Bucs their last lead of the day, Simpson hit two more free throws and fed Brown for another basket inside to put Glasgow up 42-38.

The Dragons attempted to run out the clock over the final two minutes behind the dribbling of Dyal and Simpson, but after a missed free throw from Brown, Caravel's Jessica Bogia hit a three pointer to bring the Bucs within one.

Simpson then hit three more shots from the charity stripe down the stretch to give them a four-point lead.

PUBLIC WORKSHOP

DNREC

Auditorium

February 1, 2000

5:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.

STATEWIDE ACCESS MANAGEMENT POLICY & CLASSIFICATION MAPS

The Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) is announcing the release of the Statewide Access Management Policy (Policy) and Statewide Classification Maps (Classification Maps) for public review. The Department will also hold a public hearing on these items prior to adopting them in their final form.

The Policy, developed in accordance with Delaware Code, Title 17, Chapter 146(a), provides a combination of regulatory and administrative actions that will help determine how and where connections are made between land developments and the transportation system. The Classification Maps show how the Policy will be applied to individual state-maintained roadways.

The public hearing will be held on February 1, 2000 at the DNREC Auditorium, 89 Kings Highway, Dover. DelDOT staff and court stenographer will be available starting at 5 p.m. to provide background information and take statements for the record. The formal auditorium portion of the hearing will start at 7 p.m. with a short presentation by DelDOT staff and testimony from the public taken immediately after. Written comments on the Policy and Classification Maps will be taken through February 21, 2000 and may be submitted along with questions or other written material, by mail to the Office of External Affairs, DelDOT, P.O. Box 778, Dover, DE 19903 or by telephone at 1-800-652-5600.

After receipt of comments at the hearing as well as receipt of any written comments on or before February 21, 2000, the Department will issue a final regulation adopting the Policy and Classification Maps, in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act (29 Delaware Code, Chapter 101 et. seq.)

For more information on the public hearing, or to receive advance copies of the Policy or Classifications Maps beginning after January 1, 2000, please contact Mr. Joseph Cantalupo at (302)760-2121.

In accordance with Subsection 8409, Chapter 84, Title 29 of the Delaware Code, our public meetings are designed to ensure that the public has ample opportunity to participate in the transportation planning process. If requested in advance, DelDOT will make available the services of an interpreter for the hearing impaired. If an interpreter is desired, please make the request by phone or mail a week in advance through the office of External Affairs as noted above.
