

NON-FRAT LEADERS CONTINUE TO FIGHT

Rebels Still Seek Reform
On Strength of Majority Vote

Non-fraternity men, who gained a majority vote in the referendum on Tuesday but failed to record the required two-thirds majority, promised further action in an effort to break up the power in the matters of student government at the University of Delaware.

The non-attached faction gained even greater edge on the vote to permit Friday voting in class elections, polling a 25-195 advantage, but the two-thirds majority blocks any possibilities of change.

The referendum climaxed a two-week battle ignited by Mike Popitt and Joe Bove, former non-fraternity leaders of the "Review", undergraduate publication, who hurled charges of "corruption" at the fraternities.

Consisting of a minority of the student body, each of the five frats is entitled to two votes, while the majority non-fraternity faction is limited to five votes. This gives the minority group a 19-5 vote on matters of student government.

Bove, the only non-frat leader in Newark on Tuesday, announced that the fight was just beginning and that the results of the referendum would be presented to the faculty for further consideration. Popitt and Al Mock, president of the senior class, went away with the tennis team.

"We were blocked at every turn," Bove said, "and the referendum was supposed to be a last resort in an effort to quell the interest manifested by our group."

He pointed out that it can be established that every fraternity man on the campus voted and that despite this the non-frat group still succeeded in getting a majority vote. "Surely this should entitle us to some change in the present system, even if it only gives equal representation," he said.

PLAYERS TAKE UP CHALLENGE

To Present
"Flight To West"
On May 16

Albert Einstein, freedom-loving scientist of world-renown, saw the Princeton tryouts of Elmer Rice's new anti-Nazi play, "Flight To West." Silently he watched the dramatization of the clash between democratic and Nazi ideologies. "If this play does not succeed," he said, "it is not the fault of the players or of the play . . . but the fault of America."

The E-52 Players of the University of Delaware will take up that challenge on Friday evening, May 16, when they present "Flight To West," Rice's latest Broadway success. The stirring dramatization of an airline flight from the European conflagration will have one of its first productions by an amateur group when the E-52 Players take the Mitchell Hall stage for their final performance of the season.

The drama, which takes a mixed assortment of passengers aboard a Yankee clipper flying west out of Lisbon for the United States, is a piercing indictment of the "irrational madness," from which has evolved the totalitarian dictatorships across the Atlantic.

Included in the cast are a young married couple, a Nazi diplomatic agent, a would-be Nazi spy, a belligerent American lady columnist, and an American oil magnate who would let big business settle everything. These roles are played by Arthur Barab, Edith Counahan, Mina Press, and Walter Smith, respectively.

It is this generous Texan who fancies himself as a good American and yet whose entire conduct gives the most aid and comfort to Fascism. He has met Hitler, Goering, Mussolini, and Franco and has found them to be "regular fellows." They impress the magnanimous American as being plain folks and, although he doesn't subscribe to their viewpoints, he feels sure that he could learn a few lessons from him. It is in this character that Rice symbolizes what he thinks to be the American complacency that lulls a people into a false sense of security.

Directing "Flight To West" is Dr. Alvin Kronacher, prominent European director and drama authority, who is now resident lecturer on dramatics at the University of Delaware. Dr. Kronacher will be directing his first play in this country, the particular theme of the play being especially familiar to him, due to his similar experiences in journeying from Europe as a refugee.

The box office in Mitchell Hall is now open for reservations.

The American Legion Auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. F. Allyn Cooch, Jr., on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

MARKETING QUOTA SEEN BENEFICIAL

Referendum Will Be Held On May 31

The wheat marketing quota for which a marketing quota referendum will be held in Delaware and throughout the nation on May 31 actually offers double protection according to J. Holloway, Delaware wheat producer and member of the State Agricultural Adjustment Administration committee.

Holloway explains that the marketing quota insures plenty of wheat for every consumer in this country year around. A quota on wheat may be proclaimed only when the total supply exceeds a normal year's domestic consumption and foreign exports by more than 35 per cent. Since exports have been practically shut off by military blockade this season, there will be almost two bushels of wheat on hand for every bushel which is likely to be consumed in the United States during 1941.

With the large supply of wheat available, the marketing quota becomes more important because it has the ability to protect the income of all wheat farmers. During the past two years, the AAA wheat program has held the United States wheat price at from 38 to 40 cents above the world price. But on the basis of the large supply is prospect for the coming year, the AAA needs the added protection of the marketing quota. And because wheat is an uncontrolled surplus would involve too much risk, they are prohibited by law when a wheat marketing quota is voted down.

New Castle County wheat producers who have questions about the marketing quota referendum can obtain information from county AAA committee members or from agricultural agent George Warlow, secretary of the county AAA committee.

GASOLINE USE SHOWS INCREASE

Greater Use Of Vehicles Is Cited

The trend toward a greater use of motor vehicles in Delaware is dramatically reflected as substantial gains in gasoline consumption and taxes, H. V. Daniel, secretary, Associated Petroleum Industries of Delaware declared today.

"According to official reports from the Delaware Department of Transportation, January consumption of gasoline was 15.54 per cent above January 1940, while February showed an increase over the same month of 1940 of 12.18 per cent," Mr. Daniel pointed out.

"This is a most substantial increase and almost entirely due to the fact that motor vehicle owners are using their transportation facilities to a greater extent than ever before," Mr. Daniel continued. "True, there is an increased ownership of motor vehicles but great individual use is an undisputed fact. If these gains continue, it is evident that gasoline taxes will reach a new imposing high in 1941. As these taxes grow, the necessity for adequate protecting these funds against borrowings, transfers and diversions becomes imperative. More use of the highways automatically sets up greater and more pressing demands for construction, reconstruction and adequate maintenance. Otherwise motor vehicle owners will be denied the benefits they have every right to expect."

"The Highway Fund must be excluded from the drastic provisions of the 'One-Fund Act'. This fund must not lose its identity. Otherwise, the doors are wide open to what promises to be greater diversions of motor tax revenues than have ever existed in the past. The responsibility of the General Assembly is recognized by highway users and pressure is being exerted for legislative relief from what may be an intolerable condition if Motor Funds are not protected against diversion."

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK

Americans who for many years have been talking about the burden of taxation, are shortly to discover that they "ain't seen nothing yet." They are about to learn, in short, that to live in a world whose main energies are being given to preparing for war and waging war, is an incredibly expensive business.

The new Administration tax plan to add $3,500,000,000 to the government's annual income, was announced on April 17. Both Republican and Democratic congressional leaders approved it, in general, almost automatically. It has long been evident that the moderate tax increases adopted by the last session amounted to little more than a drop in the bucket. Our defense and aid-to-the-democracies program is likely to cost upwards of $40,000,000,000, even if we don't become involved in war ourselves. Much of the cost will be deferred for future payment in the form of national debt. But it is universally recognized that we must pay for as much of it as possible as we go, and that substantial tax increases, reaching almost every income group, are no longer avoidable. Surveys show that the American people at large are grimly willing to shoulder the additional burden. It is a strange time indeed in which advocating higher taxes has actually become "good politics," even as it is good economics.

Key to the new tax program is found in a statement of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, in which he said it would be "an ideal thing for everyone to pay one-third more next year than he did in the last year." It is probable that one of the first steps taken by Congress will be to up income taxes, on corporations and individuals both, by at least one-third. Some advocate doubling the base rate, which is now four per cent, and increasing surtaxes and lowering exemptions for full measure.

Higher income taxes will not be all of it, by a long shot. While there seems little likelihood of a general sales tax being adopted now—the President is against it—it is considered sure that some new sales taxes will be put into effect, and existing sales taxes increased. The taxes, for instance, on liquor, tobacco and gasoline are likely to go up. And there is talk of levying taxes on such hitherto overlooked items as soda pop, the humblest of beverages.

Some government officials have also been considering the possibility of a general payroll tax, to be levied against all employers. That tax, in a period such as the present, would be a gigantic revenue producer, and would be comparatively inexpensive to collect. Main objection is that it would be a tax on expense, rather than a tax on income. A concern might have a tremendous payroll and still be earning little or no profit, or even operating at a loss. At any rate, the payroll tax still lies in the future, and is not apt to be considered at this time.

Still another suggestion is to have taxes paid by the month instead of quarterly or even by the year, on the theory that it is less painful to pay a relatively small amount at frequent intervals than a large amount at long intervals. Some have also proposed that the employer deduct employees' taxes from pay checks. This may be urged in the interest of simplification and of reducing collection expense.

Whatever the details, it seems certain that the new program will go through in jig time and with a minimum of debate. It will place upon the American people, in all brackets reached, a tax burden unprecedented in our history. It will bring grim visions of the possibilities of our eventually reaching England's tax level, where a man earning $5,000 a year pays more than a quarter of his gross earnings in income taxes alone. Soon some twenty-five per cent of this country's national income will be going out for war materials and military expenses in one form or another. Mars is a costly visitor.

SOME SAFETY RECORDS

In a nation-wide traffic safety contest for 1940, in which all 48 states and 1,281 cities participated, awards were announced a few days ago by the National Safety Council. The board of judges was headed by Thomas H. MacDonald, commissioner of the U. S. public roads administration.

Connecticut had the best safety record among the states, while Kansas City, Mo., and Dallas, Tex., tied for safety honors among the cities. Other states winning highest awards in their respective geographical groups were Oklahoma, Minnesota and Oregon. Other cities standing highest in their respective population groups were Washington, D. C., Chattanooga, Tenn., Lakewood, O., Watertown, N. Y., and La Grange, Ill.

An exceptional achievement, to which the judges called particular attention, was that of La Grange, Ill., 10,416 population, which went through both 1939 and 1940 without a single motor vehicle traffic death. As the judges pointed out, this record is all the more remarkable because La Grange is a suburb of Chicago, and has to contend with heavy metropolitan traffic in addition to that which would ordinarily be encountered in a city of its size.

Among the town's safety efforts commended by the judges were the maintenance of 11 policemen devoting full time to traffic duty, safety patrols in every school and safety material supplied to all teachers, and the whole-hearted cooperation of the local weekly newspaper, the La Grange Citizen, of which W. W. Loomis, former president of the National Editorial Association, is editor.

More than 40,000 suggestions for combatting night bombers have been received by the British Air Ministry. One proposed spotting enemy planes by using trained cats, "because they can see in the dark."

CONSTRUCTIVE PLAY

"I hope you don't mind that noise," said Mrs. Smith to her friend. "It's only Bobby playing in the kitchen with a hammer. He didn't know what to do, so I let him take the hammer and break up an old box."

"Perhaps he will make a neat little woodpile for you," suggested the visitor.

"Oh, he just likes the fun of smashing the box," answered his mother. "I think it is better for him to do that than to destroy useful things, and children do like to play with a hammer."

Mrs. Smith had glimpsed only part of a great truth. Although she was giving Bobby the opportunity to work off his destructive energy harmlessly, she had not suggested a constructive activity as a substitute for the destructive idea. He needed to work off his energy happily and safely but also creatively.

It is wise not to let a child take something apart merely for the fun of destroying it. A toy, game, a household article or piece of machinery may be taken apart for investigation purposes, to find out "what makes the wheels go round," how the object is made, to repair it or make it more efficient, for this is using energy constructively—destroying only in order to rebuild. Bobby might have taken the box apart for the use of the wood in games, or the wood might have been used to build a small boat, to make furniture for a doll house, or to make two small boxes, or even to provide firewood if Mother needed it. Any of these ideas would have substituted creating for aimless destroying and added zest and interest to the child's activity.

"Come down cellar and we'll have fun making things," said a little boy to his new playmate. "Dad saves all the things that are 'no good' and we all try to make them over into something new. Dad is helping us make toys from old wire and tin and the wheels from a broken engine. We are going to paint them, and some of them we shall send away to children who don't have many playthings."

Using energy constructively sets in motion the right impulses and gives vent and expression to the forceful emotions of childhood. Making something from practically nothing, changing a worthless article into useful equipment, working towards a definite plan on an interesting project, using ingenuity to perfect some original achievement, are all advance steps in the development of thrift, joyous living and self-expression.

Little boys and girls like to cut and tear, bang and pound, hammer and carve, and this impulse is natural and normal, but instead of letting it loose, unrestrained and unguided, the child should be encouraged to direct it to accomplish worthwhile things and happy results. There is a thrill about the act of destruction that children enjoy because it is dramatic, but it is a short-lived thrill and its influences and climaxes are of questionable value. Far-seeing parents will help their boys and girls to know the greater, more lasting and satisfying thrill of construction, using energy to conserve and create, to vision and build.

FOOD for THOUGHT

"Dietitians Offer Services"

Do you wonder how the scientific findings about normal nutrition needs for health can be translated into every day's meals?

The Delaware Dietetic Association is offering its services to clubs and societies of Delaware for programs next year. Dietitians because of their four years college training in Home Economics and their postgraduate training and practical experience are well qualified to discuss the application of nutrition and to answer questions for you.

Letters are being written by the secretary, Miss Eleanor McKnight of the Milford Memorial Hospital, to service clubs, the Parent Teacher Association, and professional organizations to suggest that they include nutrition in their fall program, either with a panel discussion group of dietitians or with nutrition exhibits.

The Delaware dietitians want to be of service to our state in this national emergency. It seems that dietitians can be of especial value by teaching nutrition since they have a practiced knowledge of healthful feeding.

Dietetics is a relatively new profession for women. The American Dietetic Association was organized immediately after the last war with a membership of about fifty. Today its national membership is well over 4,000 and that is not enough graduate dietitians to fill the growing demand for women trained in this branch of Home Economics. Standards for membership in the American Dietetic Association are the accepted standards for government, army and Red Cross dietitians.

The Delaware group is affiliated with the American Dietetic Association. Miss Henrietta Fleck, instructor in Home Economics at the University of Delaware, is the local president. Delaware membership includes hospital dietitians, cafeteria managers and nutrition workers throughout the state.

Safety Hints

WHO IS TO BLAME for traffic accidents? You—the drivers and pedestrians of America!

Who can stop them? You—the drivers and pedestrians. The Delaware Safety Council reports that traffic deaths are going up at an alarming rate. In February alone, they rose 22 percent throughout the country.

To meet this threat at a time when the total manpower of the country is needed for the all-out program of defense, the Automotive Safety Foundation, the National Safety Council and fifty other national organizations have joined in a special, intensified effort to get safety back on the highway.

So won't you—when you drive and when you walk—do everything you can to avoid an accident? If you do, the traffic toll will no longer be one of our defense problems!

A ROBIN in the yard . . . a budding tree . . . yes, the signs of spring are beginning to appear. But there's one sign of spring the Delaware Safety Council would like for you to notice particularly this year.

Children start playing outside . . . shooting a game of marbles in the alley . . . getting up a game of scrub in the street . . . zipping around on their bicycles . . . roller skating in the street.

Of course, youngsters shouldn't play in such places, but you know how kids are. They think of the fun—not the danger. It's the job of you parents to caution them, and you motorists to watch out for them.

So be especially alert when you drive on city streets, won't you? You never know when a child will dart out in front of your car!

RED DEVILS DEHORND IN 19-0 FIASCO

Jacket Tossers Open Season With 12-Hit Batting Splurge

Ralph (Irish) O'Connell's Newark High School baseball team opened its 1941 campaign by handing an ineffective Wilmington nine a 19-0 drubbing on the local field, Tuesday afternoon. Bob (Fuzzy) McCormick went the route for the Jackets, scattering nine safeties to shut out the invaders.

The locals went right to work in the opening frame, pushing across five runs in the first, two in the second, six more in the third, two in the fourth, three in the fifth, and one in the sixth. Red Devil errors also contributed to the landslide defeat as the invaders were charged with seven miscues, all of which were converted into scores by the Jackets.

McCormick, who sent eleven men down via the strikeout route, was never in danger after the second inning, although Wilmington threatened to score in the early frames when the Newark hurler momentarily lost control. For the most part, however, he was complete master of the situation, and brilliant support in the field was afforded him at just the right time.

Twelve hits were credited to Newark batsmen as Henry Brooks, with a triple and a circuit clout, and George Schaen, with a double and two singles, starred on the offensive.

The Jackets combined three walks, one hit, a wild pitch, and two errors to rack up a commanding five-run lead in the first frame. Weldin drew a pass, stole second, and was promptly doubled home by Schaen, who was caught trying to reach third. Aiken drew another free ticket, was safe on a play at second as Thorpe reached first, and both men advanced a base on a wild pitch. Brooks drew the third base on balls to load the sacks and Dunsmore lofted a high fly to centerfield, scoring Aiken. Robinson was safe on Al Clark's miscue at second as another run crossed the plate, and the scoring was completed when Shortstop Jim McCullin bobbled Law's grounder, permitting two runs to tally.

The Jacket's second big splurge came in the third frame when they combined one hit, Brooks' four-base blow, with two walks and three errors for six runs.

Robinson led off and drew a walk. Laws reached first on Walt Grabowski's error at first base and after McCormick had whiffed, Weldin loaded the sacks when McCullin bobbled again. Lewis, who had replaced Sidowski the fourth, walked Schaen to force in a run, and Aiken sacrificed to score Laws. McCullin again miscued on Thorpe's ground ball, permitting Weldin to tally. Brooks then connected into deep right field for the circuit, scoring Thorpe and Schaen ahead of him. Dunsmore grounded out to close the frame.

Blue Hens Make Strong Bid For Lead At First Turn

Norm Lord, University of Delaware lead-off man, is pictured showing the way around the first turn in the Mason-Dixon Conference one-mile relay at Franklin Field, on Saturday. The Blue and Gold runner, off to a good start, lead, while the high-stepping individual closing fast on the outside is wearing Catholic U. colors. The Washington, D. The Johns Hopkins runner is clearly pictured, while on the extreme outside is Western Maryland. Randolph-Macon, out of this picture, finished third.

OFFICIALS HERALD RACE PLAN

Pleased With Program Set Up By Teter

Philadelphia, Pa., April 30—The importance of Lucky Teter's program of automobile racing every Sunday at his Langhorne Speedway was heralded here this week when officials of the American Automobile Association came here to draw up final plans for the most thrilling speed schedule ever seen on the world's fastest mile speedway.

Out of that important meeting came complete endorsement of the national governing body of the speed sport. Ted Allen, secretary of the AAA Contest Board, approving Teter's plan of every Sunday racing looked toward "a summer of unprecedented programs demonstrating the speed and stamina of the modern automotive designs".

The first of the weekly events, offering ten individual races each Sunday, will be held during the track's gala opening on May 11. Langhorne Speedway, purchased by Teter last fall from Ralph Hankinson for a reputed $100,000, is located on U. S. Highway No. 1 between Philadelphia and Trenton, N. J.

The AAA also approved Teter's rich prize schedule for drivers. Some $80,000 is budgeted by Teter as prizes for the season's purse distribution and is expected to bring to Langhorne the greatest drivers ever to risk the hazards of high-speed racing which has made Langhorne history for several years.

HENS WIN SIXTH

Defeated Saturday afternoon by Washington College in a poorly-played contest, the University of Delaware baseball team bounced right back into the win column against Haverford on Monday to hand the Pennsylvania team a 5-0 defeat. The triumph raised the Hens' total victories to six against five reverses.

Bill Tibbitt, working on the mound for the Blue and Gold, was credited with his first conquest of the season as he kept nine hits well scattered to shut out his opponents.

Bill Hogan connected for a circuit clout in the seventh inning with two men on base to put the game on ice for the Hens. Prior to the four-bagger, Amos Crowley and Conrad Sadowski had singled successively.

Delaware's earlier scoring came in the third and fourth frames. The first tally was unearned, while Tom Skripps accounted for the second run when he lofted a long fly into left field that scored Tibbitt, who had singled and gone to third when Gerry Doherty singled.

Sadowski collected three hits in four trips to the plate to lead the Hen sluggers, while Crowley and Tibbitt connected for two each.

Flowers Get Hungry

Beautiful gardens cannot be obtained and maintained without proper feeding of the plants.

A little attention paid to the proper fertilization of flowers, shrubs, and other ornamentals will frequently give great satisfaction in better and more lasting plantings. Many flowers are rapidly growing plants and therefore must be assured of a plentiful supply of plant food to take care of their needs during the intense growing period.

The application of a nitrogen fertilizer will produce a rapid and lush growth. The use of this fertilizer on new beds frequently gives good results for a year or two. Then the plantings do not do so well, to the disappointment of the gardener. What he does not realize is the drain on the phosphate and especially the potash in the soil made by the plants, most of which are removed each year as trash or prunings. A number of growers use bone meal, which takes care of the phosphate, but potash is often very much the neglected child in the fertilizer family.

With the tendency to use large amounts of nitrogen to get large growth, the use of potash is particularly important. These two plant foods complement each other, and each does best when used in proper ratio with the other. The potash balances the rapid-growth-producing qualities of the nitrogen, and gives the plant strength, vigor, and the ability to resist diseases and unfavorable weather conditions.

A flower growing on a rich bed often starts off with a fine growth, makes a big plant, then bends over and produces a disappointing, small, and dull bloom. Roses winter-kill and suffer from black spot in the summer. Bulb plantings do poorly after the first year. The cause in many cases is unbalanced fertilization.

The proper fertilizer to use varies with the plantings and the soil. In most cases, a complete fertilizer should be used. This is one containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. A good general purpose fertilizer is one containing the nutrients in a 1-2-2 ratio. Such analyses as 5-10-10, 4-8-8, 4-8-7, and similar grades fall in this class. In many sections, a potato or tobacco fertilizer makes a good flower fertilizer. In the analyses, the first figure refers to the percentage content by weight of nitrogen, the second to the phosphoric acid, and the third figure to the potash, the analyses always being given in the same order. In buying fertilizer, more attention should be paid to the analysis than to the brand name, since it is the content not the name that does the work.

Fertilizer should be used during the spring and summer. When making new beds, it should be evenly spread after spading, but before working down the soil. In old beds the fertilizer should be spread before working them up, so as to mix the fertilizer well with the soil, and prevent burning the seed or roots of the plants. A good rate of application is 3 or 4 pounds per 100 square feet.

On plantings of roses and other perennials, the fertilizer should be spread around the plants several times during the season at about half a handful to the plant. Care should be taken that very little or none of the fertilizer comes in direct contact with the plant. The plants should be dry when the material is spread, and it is a good practice to water well after applying the fertilizer.

Complete fertilizer should not be applied after Labor Day. In order to harden perennials and make them go through the winter in better shape, it is a good practice to apply one or two applications of a fertilizer such as 0-10-10, or 0-14-14 during the fall.

Questions relative to what can be done about evergreen plantings turning brown are often asked. This browning usually is due to a rust organism, and so far no effective direct remedy has been found. The best thing to do is to fertilize as suggested for perennials, so as to increase the general vigor of the plant.

Mrs. Stewart Beck and daughter Louise of Delaware City, and Mrs. Alex Stewart of Norwood, Pa., spent this week-end with Mrs. Nellie Bennett.

Mr. Joseph Barney and Mr. Newell Reed left Tuesday for Ardmore, where they have accepted positions with the Auto Car Company.

Miss Reggin of Hickory Hill is visiting her sister, Mrs. Raymond Phillips.

Mrs. George McCafferty and son of Philadelphia were the week-end guests of Mrs. David Chalmers.

Miss Hannah Kirk of Middletown is the guest of Miss Leila Herbener.

Miss G. E. Downing and Miss Florie Romo of Wilmington were guests during the Shakespeare Festival at the home of Mrs. W. H. Evans.

Miss Grace Romo of Wilmington and Miss Marian Underwood of North East, were the week-end guests of Miss Mildred Ferguson.

Miss Swayne of Wilmington, was the week-end guest of Miss Miller of the Women's College.
