New zoning eyed by city

By MARY PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Neo-traditional land use regulations will be presented for a possible vote at the Newark city council meeting on Monday night.

According to the city planning department, neo-traditionalism is "a series of ideas and concepts intended to create a feeling of old-fashioned community" that is believed to be lacking in modern subdivision developments.

Some characteristics of neo-traditional land use identified by the planning department for application in Newark are: residences above commercial establishments, affordable housing scattered throughout the development, grid design of narrow streets, on-street parking, alleys to garages behind residences, parking behind businesses, bike and pedestrian paths, town/neighborhood "squares" or other open space, front porches and street trees.

Business establishments which would be permitted in residential areas are nursing homes, professional and administrative offices, personal service establishments, restaurants, retail stores, studios, and banks and loan institutions without drive-in windows.

Residential dwellings of all types would be permitted in each zoning district.

Mayor Ronald Gardner, who has attended meetings in recent months to familiarize himself with the concept, said, "One problem with neo-traditional developments is that you need more than just the immediate

Parkland to be annexed

By MARY PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Annexation of the 12.27 acre "Moore" property off Paper Mill Road is likely at the next city council meeting.

According to Roy Lopata, city planning director, although the land is to be zoned for single-family detached dwellings, the land will only be used for parks, recreation, and green space.

"Every property has to be zoned for something and we don't have a parkland category," explained Lopata.

Lopata said city parks director James Hall has indicated the property will eventually be used to provide active recreational facilities, such as tennis courts and ball fields, for the community.

"We have gotten some inquiries from Paper Mill Farms, Creek Bend, and Ridgewood Glen asking the Parks Director when Karpinski Park is going to be developed," said Lopata. "People are interested in more active types of facilities."

The acquisition also furthers the city's longstanding goal to acquire floodplain properties along the White Clay and Christina Creeks according to the planning commission.

Planning commission chairman Jim Smith said that a major part of the park would not be developed in order to protect the floodplain.

At least one-third or up to five acres of the property cannot be developed because "that is the floodplain area," Smith said.

76ers bring show to town

By RON PORTER
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

University of Delaware head coach Mike Brey has signed his best recruit since taking the job a couple of months ago.

Brey and the Philadelphia 76ers announced Thursday that the 76ers will hold their training camp at the university on Oct. 6-12. The arrangement is for one season and may be extended for the additional seasons if both parties agree.

Sixers head coach and general manager John Lucas however said that they wish to expand the fan base and may move somewhere else next year.

Lucas said that Philadelphia is looking to develop a relationship with the Delaware and the Newark community.

"We plan on making ourselves available to the public," said Lucas. "We want to get Delaware involved and get the kids involved."

Philadelphia is moving to Delaware after spending the last 16 years at Franklin & Marshall which is located in Lancaster, Pa.

Lucas, who became interested in Delaware's facilities after speaking at this year's Delaware

Hoop Club Banquet, said that it wasn't the arena that attracted him to Delaware but the people.

"The people are the best thing. When I came here to speak, it was the kind of atmosphere that I liked," said Lucas.

Brey said that he began recruiting the Sixers when Lucas mentioned to him and university president David Roselle about a possible change in camps during the banquet.

From an economic view, Roselle said that the community of Newark should benefit from the amounts of people that the Sixers organization will attract.

Celebrating with

THE ANNUAL Liberty Day Festival drew between five and six thousand people from the area to White Clay Creek. On a day that threatened rain, the skies were dry and the good times were plentiful, as shown in this photographic sampling.

The day began with a visit from Wilmington Blue Rocks mascot Rocky Bluewinkle. There was plenty to sing and shout about as well. On the singing side, the Newark Community Band played some numbers and folksinger Christina Harrison trilled some beautiful notes. On the shouting side, several local politicians took the stump and bent the ears of passersby at the popular "soap box."

But if there was a focal point to the busy day of activity, it was children.

Stevie and Petey Broehl, 11 months and four years old, respectively, took first place in the first Baby Buggy Parade and Contest. Stevie and Petey's dad, Pete, pushed a brilliantly decorated red, white and blue buggy around the park to the winner's circle. Lois Young braved the whipping winds which toppled her set more than once while she was entertaining parents and children alike with her puppet and singing show. Across the parking lot, the Juggling Hoffmans juggled anything they could get their hands on to the delight of the crowd.

If there was a hungry or thirsty person left at the park, they were difficult to find. Several food tents served everything from hot dogs to funnel cakes to cotton candy. The thirsty and the over-heated revelers could treat themselves to snow cones or a Strawberry Smoothie from Strawberry Dan's.

The bubble machine ran all day, filling the air with glistening fun, and the pony rides provided children with a taste of wild-west adventure.

What pervaded the air more than the scent of roasting hot dogs and sun tan lotion, was the sense of freedom. There was the usual freedom from work and the drudgery of the work week, but there was also the sense of how Americans in small towns around this country spend a day set aside to think about our liberty. In Newark, they even called it Liberty Day.

Police beat

7-year old swimmer nearly drowns, saved by CPR

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A 7-YEAR OLD CHILD who nearly drowned in the pool at Strawberry Run Apartment complex in Newark, was released from Christiana Hospital on Monday after an overnight stay.

According to county police officer Elmer Setting, an investigation is continuing into the July 2 incident. "There seems to be some discrepancy about who administered CPR to the child. We would like to clarify this and know who to thank," said Setting.

New Castle County paramedics and Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company were called to the complex at 2:32 p.m. on Sunday after James Lones lost his grip on the side of the pool and became submerged in water that was over his head.

The child was unresponsive and not breathing when the lifeguard removed him from the pool. According to Emergency Medical Services, bystanders administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until he resumed breathing on his own. County paramedics transported the child to Christiana Hospital.

The New Castle County Department of Public Safety reminds adults that it takes just a few minutes for a situation like this to occur.

Adults should never leave a child unobserved around water—including pools, buckets, toilets and bathtubs.

Animal Alley vacates shopping center

ANIMAL ALLEY, the subject of controversy and picketing in recent months, apparently vacated its Newark Shopping Center store without notice sometime over last weekend.

According to Frank Wisniewski, leasing agent for Krapf Management, the storeowners had been notified to "catch up their rent or vacate."

Vincent Mancinelli, founder of the animal rights group, Delaware Animal Rescue, discovered the store was empty on Wednesday. Said Mancinelli, "This is a victory for us." The owners of the store could not be reached for comment.

Newark police had investigated numerous allegations of animal abuse at the store but no violations were found. The store had been vandalized several times and on June 14 a schnauzer dog and an undisclosed amount of cash were stolen, according to police. No suspects were found in these incidents.

neighborhood to support any commercial establishments there."

He adds, "In my opinion, you really need industrial establishments and other employment options in order to make this work."

Gardner said that a lot of people are against mixed housing and people still want single-family houses. The first development in Delaware that incorporates neo-traditional ideas "must be top quality and well-designed because it won't get a second chance."

Roy Lopata, planning director, said Newark city officials "thought it would be nice to have this option" in the future when development is considered here.

According to Gardner and Lopata, there are no areas in Newark at present where the new planning regulations would be applicable.

City manager Carl Luft agreed, adding, "It could still be good for the community in the future if we annex to the north. It's in the best interest of the city to have the regulations in place—if there are creative developers out there to use them."

Stormwater management report suggests action

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

SEVERE EROSION and flooding have taken an ever-increasing toll on the Christina Creek floodplain in recent years. Following five months of study and assessment, the Arbour Park/Christina River "Working Group" recently issued a status report to city council with recommendations for action.

According to the report, erosion has widened and changed the course of the creek with accompanying loss of mature trees. In addition, silt build up at various locations is reducing stream capacity. Incidents of severe flooding (defined as greater than 11 feet) have increased between 1973 and 1994.

Recommended action approved by city council included construction of berms in some neighborhoods to protect homes against severe flooding. Arbour Park residents declined to have berms in their backyards but Newark city officials plan to approach residents of Delrem Drive, Timbercreek Lane, Quail Lane, Gravenor Lane and Rock Lane, as well as some businesses on Route 896, about a possible berm at their locations.

Another concern is sand placed on roads by DelDOT during inclement weather. According to the report, City Manager Carl Luft, Senator Stephen Amick and State Representative Stephanie Ulbrich are working together to urge DelDOT to remove the buildup that has accumulated under bridges and culverts.

Senator Amick and Representative Ulbrich are also working on alternative funding to change the Persimmon Run bridge from a four culvert bridge to a clear span bridge. Councilman Anthony Felicia reported that he has approached the plant manager at the Newark Chrysler plant for possible contribution to this project as well.

Also according to Felicia, Newark city officials are acting on several recommendations in the report, including application to the state of Delaware for funding to place plants and boulders along streams for natural restoration of the banks, increased vigilance in inspecting and clearing debris from streams after storms, and collecting stream flow data once a year from the Delaware Geological Survey.

Finally, the city planning department will consider the pros and cons of applying for watershed status and the public works department will be reviewing future building permits in the Sandy Brae Industrial Park to retard runoff into the creek at that location. Both of these options would give closer scrutiny to construction which aggravates erosion of nearby streams.

Newark City Council recognized and commended all those who participated in this project including: Arbour Park residents Sandy Cloud, Ed Wirth, Bill Day and Chuck Kalbacher; Bernard Dworsky and Jerry Kauffman of the Water Resources Authority; Steve Abbott of the Soil Conservation Service; parks and recreation director Jim Hall; Rich Lapointe, director of public works, and Roy Lopata, director of planning; and the city council members who toured the sites, studied the issue and solicited the support of Senator Amick and Representative Ulbrich.

"Hundreds if not thousands of hours of work went into this project," said Felicia. "which will be very beneficial to all in Newark."

Changes concern Metts

THE PASSAGE OF SCHOOL choice and charter school bills in the state legislature has caused excitement but also raised questions according to Christina School District Superintendent, Iris Metts.

"We have to immediately review our transfer policy within the school district," said Metts. "We will also be looking for some reading back from the courts on the desegregation plan. Children in grades four, five and six are still bound by guidelines."

Metts said the district had hoped for a decision from the court by the end of June but now she is hoping for answers by the end of July. "We really don't know when to expect it," she said.

Under the school choice bill sponsored by Stephanie Ulbrich, state representative for Newark, students will be able to attend any school they choose and not just the one to which they are assigned based on their residence. Charter schools would expand that choice by offering alternative programs run by parents, educators or businesses with public funds.

According to Metts, she supports choice and innovation but the school board was hoping for more dialogue and more time to discuss issues involved.

"It's definitely going to make transportation worse—I don't know how we're going to contain those costs," she said. "And we need to make sure we maintain proper balances in schools and look at our enrollment procedures."

The proposed options for student education will also affect future budget planning and bond referendums.

"Taxpayers in one district will be asked to pay to educate children who go to another district," said Metts. "How can we ask them to approve referendums that way?"

The school choice and charter school programs will not take effect until the 1996-97 school year. The superintendent will make announcements concerning the legislation and future Christina School District plans at the July 11 school board meeting.

Lawyer disbarred by Delaware Supreme Court

A Newark lawyer has been disbarred by the Delaware Supreme Court.

Everett P. Priestly was suspended from the practice of law last year by the Supreme Court, after a petition was filed with the high court from the state Office of Disciplinary Counsel.

The office charged Priestly with stealing over $400,000 in client funds in real estate transactions he had handled. Priestly later pleaded guilty two counts of felony theft and was sentenced to three years in prison.

Following the completion of criminal proceedings, the Supreme Court entered the final disbarment order late last month.

A release from the Office of Disciplinary Counsel noted that the earlier suspension order had effectively barred Priestly from the practice of law.

MVP hits home run for WSFS

WILMINGTON Savings Fund Society (WSFS) has taken a page out of the airlines' book.

The bank's award-winning MVP (The More Valued People) program is what could be considered a bank version of the airlines' frequent flyer programs.

The object of the program is to encourage customers' continued and increased patronage of WSFS by awarding points and awards to them.

Every quarter, customers are awarded MVP points for their average deposit balances, balance increases over the previous quarter, new loans and mortgages settled during the quarter, and customers referred.

With each quarterly statement, the customers receive certificates good for discounts at local merchants and WSFS.

Points are accumulated quarter after quarter and can be redeemed for "Something Extra" awards, which include merchandise and travel and entertainment awards.

The program is also self-perpetuating. Customers earn MVP points by referring others to WSFS who open accounts; and one of the most powerful tools they use to sell WSFS to their friends is the MVP program itself.

Therefore, new customers are attracted to the bank by hearing about the MVP program; those who referred the new customer earn MVP points for the referral; the new customer earns MVP points as a result of opening his or her new account; and the new customer receives MVP points if he or she turns around and sells a friend of his on WSFS.

One customer to take advantage of the program was Dr. Charles Skinner and his family of Newark.

"It was wonderful to have the opportunity to take an unexpected vacation, an opportunity I got for being one of WSFS' most valuable customers," Dr. Skinner said. Dr. Skinner won a special raffle for MVP customers only in which he was awarded a four day/three night vacation to Hilton Head Island.

A good deal for Newark

NEWARK-AREA RESIDENTS should be pleased with the outcome of the University of Delaware's successful effort to increase its capital budget.

The General Assembly last week approved much of the $8.5 million requested by UD.

The Carper administration had earlier trimmed $2 million off the request. This was done by reducing funding of a new facility at the College of Business and Economics.

That cut was restored, along with $4 million for expansion and renovation of the Colburn Laboratory. The laboratory is a key part of UD's chemical engineering department. The Governor's office had wisely kept the $4 million for Colburn in the initial budget request.

One disappointment was the decision to cut the figure for renovation work on the UD campus to $1 million. The university sought $1.5 million as part of a continuing effort to restore historic campus buildings.

We hope that legislators and the Carper administration fatten up the budget next year to reduce the risk of some buildings becoming too decrepit to allow for restoration. Such a prospect seems remote, but cannot be ruled out in the current economic environment.

Despite that lingering concern, the beefed-up capital budget is good news for Newark residents. UD remains the key to continued prosperity in the Newark area. The university is also a bargain for taxpayers.

UD's capital and operating budget is reasonable when compared with other land grant universities. Within our own state, Delaware State University's recently approved capital budget request totaled $5.8 million.

While the funding was badly needed to reverse decades of neglect at Del State's Dover campus, the $5.8 million for a university a fraction of the size of UD demonstrates the reasonableness of the UD budget request.

A difficult, long goodbye to dad

By RUTH KELLY
NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

FATHER'S DAY has just passed and I went home to visit my Dad. He greeted me at the door with a smile and a hug. As I held him, I thought to myself "This can't be my dad hugging me."

Daddy never hugged us kids. He hardly ever smiled and hearing him laugh was so rare, I would make a special entry in my diary reading "Daddy smiled today." I go home year after year as a dutiful daughter should to deliver the customary cards and gifts, but now when I visit I try to make sense out of the feelings and emotions that often times overwhelm me.

My dad is 64 years old and he is in his seventh year after being diagnosed with Alzheimer's Disease. The changes in dad were very subtle at first and when mom and the rest of the family told me that something was wrong with dad, I thought they were just making it up. It was a long time before I began to see the signs that all was not well with my father and I was horrified when reality finally hit.

When I think of my dad, I think about the man who never yelled at me, talked to me instead of hitting me and who was always reading. My dad would read the newspaper cover-to-cover and read lots of novels. Whenever he was not working, you would find him somewhere in the house with a book. I wonder if he realizes what an example he set for me and my brother and sister. We are all avid readers because of him and we all love books.

Hot weather got to everyone

By MARY PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

I DON'T HAVE air conditioning in my house or car. In fact I am old enough to still think of air conditioning as an optional lifestyle innovation.

I spent the first 14 years of my life as one of more than 100 children living in 40 rowhouses on a tiny street in Southwest Philadelphia. Everyone in our neighborhood had one fan which stood in the living room of their house and only got turned on for a few hours a day.

In the summer, my mother would leave all the windows open in our house until about 11 a.m. Then, as the heat rose inexorably and even the street tar began to melt, she would go around closing windows and pulling down shades until the house was enclosed in a warm gloom.

Mothers and babies lulled by the hum of the fans dozed away the afternoon in living rooms up and down the street.

Those who were lucky enough to have a wading pool in their pocket-sized backyards filled them with water and endured an afternoon of shrieks and whines from too many children confined in too small spaces.

Older children spent their afternoons under the awning on front porches, playing cards and reading vast collections of comic books. The quiet was only broken periodically by shouts of "cheat! cheat!" or when uninvited younger children were forcibly ejected from the literary groups.

Around 4:30 in the afternoon, fathers would start coming home. Some arrived home in the family car and fitted into their saved-by-custom spots along the block. But the majority trudged up the street from the avenue where trolleys clacked by night and day.

After dinner, mothers and fathers sat on the porches while older children ran wild in the street playing stickball, riding bikes, and picking fights. Younger children trundled tri-cycles on the sidewalks and played Simon Says on their frontsteps.

The first indication of nightfall was signaled by the arrival of the lamplighter. Children followed him from lamp to lamp as he ignited the gas flames behind the glass globes.

When darkness descended, smaller children were put to bed in rooms where windows were reopened wide in hopes of some slight coolness. The older ones began their nightly hide and seek game up and down the street. Sometimes the more daring boys would first climb the lampposts to blow out the flickering lights if a parent didn't stop them.

Late at night, putting off the muggy sleep waiting inside, parents talked and rocked, calling comments from porch to porch and even across the street. This is when fathers would get out their garden hoses and water the minuscule plots of grass we called our "lawns."

On one of those nights when the temperature was still 85 degrees at 11 p.m., one father absentmindedly

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week's "Out of the Attic" photograph shows Waldo Lovett, a local airline pilot who began his career 70 years ago giving airplane rides from the tract of land now occupied by College Square Shopping Center. In 1946, he and his wife, Betty, founded Lovett's Airport in the rural area between Newark and Elkton, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Lovett are now deceased but the airport still operates next to Interstate 95 and is called Cecil County Airport. The photograph is from the collection of the Newark Historical Society with research provided by Jeanette Ayars. In an effort to provide more complete descriptions of our "Out of the Attic" photographs, volunteer historians of the society are identifying and researching the historic shots. Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark, DE 19713. Special care will be taken. For more information, call 737-0724.

Issue of July 7, 1920

Service men to receive medals

Plans are being formulated for the presentation of medals to the young men in this vicinity who were in any branch of the service during the World War.

This will be held at the Armory.

Three weeks' lecture course in progress at summer school

The three week lecture course in connection with Delaware College Summer School, of a grade unparalleled in the history of a Delaware community, opened in Newark with an evening lecture on the value of Music Appreciation in the School Curricula.

"Pages from the Past" is compiled from early editions of the Newark Post and its forerunners by staffers Mary Petzak and Gayle Hart. Efforts are made to retain original headlines and style. The "Pages from the Past" reflect the years of dedicated community service by the former staff members at the Newark Post as well as those staffers of today. The "Pages from the Past" keep us working in the present and connect us to the future.

Potholes to be patched

With uncommon and unexpected haste a Heritage Park resident who last week wrote State Highway Department Director of Operations Ernest Davidson has gotten a reply pledging the resurfacing of East Riding Drive.

James W. Linehan, in his letter to Davidson, as chairman of the maintenance community of the Highlands Civic Association had traced the history of the short stretch of road that was first beset with drainage problems and then heavy traffic to boot.

Bird lover is killed

A 31-year-old Stanton man who loved pigeons was electrocuted near his home Monday night as he was chasing his brood back into their coops with an aluminum pole. County police report Robert P. Albanese was found dead in the rear yard of his home by his father at about 7 p.m.

Police said Albanese previously had used a wooden pole but had just fashioned the 20 ft. aluminum pole and was trying it out.

The pole struck a 7200-volt power line while Albanese was handling it.

Issue of July 5, 1990

Parking meters bagged

The Newark police have decided to bag Main Street.

The department last Friday bagged parking meters on the strip as part an initiative to curb weekend night crowds.

"This is an experiment to see what kind of impact the lack of parking will have on the people who cruise and park on Main Street," Chief William A. Hogan explained.

The cut-down on parking should not affect area businesses, Hogan said, adding that the Newark Business Association has expressed its approval of the plan.

Appeals board OKs bridge

The state environmental appeals Board has voted 3-1 that the secretary of the Delaware Department of Natural Resources properly approved a permit for a project to build bridge on Hopkins Road in Newark. A Bailey bridge, meant to be temporary, spanned a creek on the road until it was washed away by last July's floods.

Michelle Ackles said, "We've had a fair amount of people who have contacted who are in favor of the bridge."

Summer music festivals are plentiful

SUMMER MUSIC Festivals! From the time I was a child through this very day, those three words bring joy to my heart. Our country has such a proliferation of great festivals open to us which bring great music in a relaxed atmosphere — with nary a white or black tie in sight!

There weren't as many choices when I was young. My parents took me to Tanglewood, the one I still think of as "the granddaddy of them all." True, Robin Hood Dell was operating, but, if you had been to both, you know why an active boy would fall in love with the Berkshires. Then there was the chance to see and hear Koussevitzky!

But, before you think this column is a recounting of "The Adventures of Young Phil," let me hasten to assure you it is not. There, now you can relax and read on.

I want to share with you some of the festivals running this summer, festivals which you, or you and your whole family, might find enjoyable. It is amazing to see the number of youngsters at these festivals. Yours won't be the only one there. When it was time for Marie and me to begin taking our children to festivals, I wondered about that, but then I reflected that in my youth there were many of my peers in attendance. All one need do is remind the children that indoors or out, concert manners are required.

The cast is certainly different, but Tanglewood is still running in

THE ARTS

By PHIL TOMAN

Lenox. Seiji Ozawa is now in charge but the Boston Symphony is still holding forth. The music shed still stands and people still enjoy the concerts in seats or on the lawn. There are still those in boats on the lake! For information, 413-637-5165. Accommodations in many price ranges around Lenox.

Closer to home, the Baltimore Symphony is holding forth with two festivals, Summerfest and Oregon Ridge concert series. Summerfest includes Mozart, Viennese waltzes and even dancing and refreshments after the concert. Oregon Ridge features the classics and Broadway favorites. David Zinman is at the helm and James Levine will be in for a guest stint. Information? 800-442-1198. An easy drive.

New York has a number of great festivals. Two of my favorites are at Saratoga and The Finger Lakes. The Saratoga festival is certainly the more famous. It is the summer home of The New York City Opera, The New York City Ballet and the Philadelphia Orchestra. There is something here for everybody! Charles Dutoit runs this show. 518-584-9330. It is very handy to the New York Thruway. Prices are high for rooms in Saratoga, but plenty of places to stay outside, and east of the city.

Further to the north and west, in the lovely Finger Lake region, the Rochester Philharmonic has its summer home. Located in Canadigua, Peter Bay directs a program of both serious and light music for the relaxed listener. Plenty of great family places to stay in the area. One word of caution if it is your first trip to the Finger Lakes. The word is "spring." The lakes are spring fed and cold when you step in! For information, 716-454-2620.

Colorado is another state with some great festivals. The most famous is the Aspen Festival. Director Ara Guzelimian has announced that this summer they will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the end of WWII, the 50th anniversary of the death of Bartok and the centennial of the birth of Hindemith. That should be an interesting amalgam. Guest conductors include Sergiu Comissiona and James Conlon. Krzysztof Penderecki will be the composer-in-residence. The Rockies and the music surround you at this one. If you go, sit in on some of the recitals featuring the students studying there at the institute. 970-925-3254 for more information. The overnight accommodation costs in the area are high but the ambiance is delightful.

The Chicago Symphony will again be "at home" this summer at the Ravinia Festival just north of the Windy City. This is another old favorite and Christoph Eschenbach will be on the podium. Their list of guest artists includes Luciano Pavarotti, Andre Watts, Pinchas Zukerman, Itzak Perlman, etc. There are places to stay in all price ranges and lots of family type fun in the area. Only a short drive to Chicago! Information: 708-433-8000.

If you are an opera buff looking for the top vocal-instrumental festival of the year, may I suggest you turn your attention to the "upper-left corner" of our country as once again The Seattle Opera Company plays host to the world for three cycles of Richard Wagner's monumental tetralogy, "Der Ring des Nibelungen." Simply put, there is nothing like it in the world! There will be four nights of the ultimate in romantic music with days, and other evenings filled with fun and musical adventures. For information, 206-389-7600.

I hope there's enough to whet your appetite. There are many more festivals to be sure. If you have never attended one, make this the summer you do. If you have attended them before, what are you waiting for? Enjoy!

Difficult, long goodbye

and she looked wildly to see where dad was and said "don't whisper around dad; he thinks we are conspiring against him!"

I have always thought that cancer was the most devastating disease, but Alzheimer's disease is very scary to me and very sad as I watch my dad decline. One thing that never ceases to amaze me though is that Dad can recall in detail things that he did 20 or 30 years ago, but can't remember what he had for breakfast five minutes ago.

My dad is in the mid-to-late stages of this disease. He can no longer read or write, he doesn't know how old he is, or the month or year. He can't name the president of the United States or remember how to unbuckle his belt. He eats constantly because he forgets that he just finished eating and he needs help getting dressed now because he puts his clothes on backward. He wanders a lot during night and gets nights and days mixed up.

There are times when we can find humor with dad's condition. For example, he calls every member of the family Charlie. He says its so he won't forget anyone's name. I am Charlie No. 2. Sometimes, when he can recall something and we look at him in amazement, he'll grin and say, "I may have Alzheimer's but I ain't crazy." He has such an outgoing, pleasant personality now. He laughs and makes jokes and he hugs all of us all the time. These moments are ones we cherish.

We all know what is coming and although he is living at home right now, we know that the disease is progressing and soon daddy won't be able to stay at home and will need nursing care round-the-clock. My sister is doing a wonderful job caring for him. She has some nursing training and really knows how to handle him especially when he gets in an agitated state. I am grateful for all she is doing because my brother and I both live away from home. I am also afraid of what I see, wondering will this happen to me. I try not to think about it, but when my mind goes blank or I forget something, I can't help but wonder will this be my fate too.

I am trying to get all of the information I can about Alzheimer's so that I know what to expect. I know that eventually this disease will take my father's life, but in the meantime, me and my family are enjoying the time we have with him. We all realize that the day will come when he will no longer recognize us.

When I say goodbye to dad after a visit, I always feel sad for I feel like this might be the last time I get to say goodbye and have him know it's me, "Sugar" his oldest daughter.

and casually flicked his hose at neighbors sitting on their porch. In an instant, husbands and fathers up and down the block were hosing each other with wild abandon while wives and mothers shouted encouragement and directions from the porches.

Children who rose up to see what was the matter, peeked out and looked in amazement on the spectacle before them. Usually exhausted fathers ran amuck, sopping people, porches and cars with gay indifference. Normally stable mothers dashed indoors to bring out buckets so they could join their spouses in the street and assist in dousing themselves and others. They screamed and laughed and splashed. Only failing energy and lowering water pressure slowly brought the frenzy to an end.

The hoses were rolled and carefully hung by the steps. Towels were brought out to dry off the players. One by one the house lights all went out and true night fell on the baking asphalt.

We didn't have air conditioning. We never imagined the day would come when we couldn't live without it. Instead we tolerated the heat and each other—and sometimes overlooked occasional madness like the night the parents played.

Dancers learn, teach culture

By LYNETTE SHELLEY
SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

TO A FOREIGNER'S EYE, the dances are merely pretty. The young dark-skinned girls swirl in jewel-toned saris of emerald, orange and gold. Between the folds of bright cloth and flame, the 6-year-old's onyx eyes outshine the candle she holds and her feet move quickly under her long skirt, dancing to the strains of high-pitched voices and alien drumbeat.

Around her, five others dance in unison, stretching bare arms to the sky, to the goddess, to each other. Every move is symbolic, every hand gesture, every raised eyebrow. The dance is a worship for the goddess of love, Santoshima, who is said to grant wishes to those who pray to her with a sincere heart.

The children are of Indian descent, but saris notwithstanding, they are Americans. As members of the Newark-based Indo-American Association of Delaware Dancers, they and their parents hope to share and teach Americans their customs, their culture and beliefs.

"The world we grew up in back home, the world ... we learned, we are trying to recreate here to some extent," said dance choreographer and board member of the Indo-American Association of Delaware (IAAD), Bharti Parikh.

Eleven years ago, the IAAD was formed by a few members of the Indian community to promote a dual purpose to be both a political and social forum for the families. Political in that it would serve to teach Indian customs to their American-born children, and social in that the families would be able to celebrate and have fun together.

According to Jitu Asthana, one of the founding fathers of the organization, "our purpose is to educate our children and give the local community an appreciation of our culture."

What started as a few families meeting in the basement of a house has grown to over 600 families from the tri-state area who belong to the IAAD. And not just Indians belong to the organization. All are welcome. In fact the board members themselves consider the group more of a sub-continental association consisting of many nationalities, from Indian to Asian to Pakistani.

Their range of programs are diverse as well. From dances performed at Longwood Gardens to First Night in Wilmington, the IAAD also has an Indian film series at Cinema 141 in Elsmere once a month. They also hold India Day, an annual cultural program and bazaar held at McKean High School.

Everyone, it seems, has something to offer and something to learn. Shabana Mohamed, 13, one of the dancers who performed at Longwood recently, said that her friends from Tatnall High School would see her dance and ask her to teach them the movements. Mohamed has learned about her Indian identity as well.

"It's important to know where you come from," she said.

Her mother agreed. Seena Mohamed got her daughter involved with the dancers one year ago because "I felt there was a need for her to know her own people and heritage." She said she saw that the children were not learning enough about their Indian past. "They know more about American culture than their own," she said.

In her high school, Mohamed celebrated both Christmas and Hanukkah, as well as participating in Indian customs with her mother, and, if that weren't confusing enough, celebrated different traditions with her Pakistani father.

"By doing these things she's getting a richer experience," her mother said. "She gets the flavor of every different culture."

Members of the IAAD certainly get an international education. According to Anuj Parikh, who just completed his freshman year at the University of Delaware, and is a dancer in the organization, the dances "serve a dual purpose because it teaches the kids."

"The performers themselves, they're used to rock 'n' roll and MTV," he said.

But the parents involved don't want their children to abandon all ties to American culture and only cling to their Indian heritage. What they are looking for is an acceptance of both worlds. Kumud Tandon, another founding member of the organization, said that "for parents it is a hard adjustment. We already have a lot of baggage—we have to adjust a lot."

"It's hard for us to give them that balance and it's hard for them to want that balance ... One day they want to be American and one day they want to be Indian," she added.

This harmonious equilibrium, however hard to obtain, is the most important lesson these parents want for their children to learn.

"It's a very difficult balance to achieve," said Anuj's mother, Bharti, while sitting in the family room of her suburban home which seems to reflect this ideal balance with its picture of a blue-skinned Indian god on one wall, a bust of an Egyptian god by the other wall, and a player piano in the corner with the sheet music for the "Sound of Music" dominating the third wall.

"You don't want them to feel like outsiders but you want them to know where they come from," she said.

According to Asthana, he hoped his children would be able to learn from the best of what each culture had to offer. "We want them to learn from our culture, our family values and discipline. What we want them to learn from America is hard work and taking advantage of opportunities."

Perhaps what these parents really want for their children can be best expressed in the sculpture Parikh has displayed in a prominent corner of her living room. It is made of polished wood and depicts a mother cradling her newborn baby in her arms. In the seamless smooth curves and lines of the design, the woman could be of any nationality, her child of any race.

The gift she gives this child transcends all borders: the gift of love.

Perhaps the parents aren't so foreign after all.

Pen pals continue 30-year correspondence

Sheila Anderson and Angela Gusterson, longtime pen pals, during Gusterson's recent visit to Anderson's home in Newark.

"Dear Sheila, I received your letter asking for a pen pal." Thus began a correspondence between two friends which spanned three continents and has lasted more than 30 years.

Sheila Bobbs Anderson of Fair Oaks, California, was trying to earn her girl scout badge for letter writing in 1958 when she first wrote to Angela MacLeod Gusterson on the Isle of Lewis in the Outer Hebrides of Scotland.

Since then they have written hundreds of letters. "We try to never let more than a year go by and often write three or more times during the year," said Anderson. "We try to save up news and then write," adds Gusterson.

According to Anderson, they wrote on many topics over the years but mostly "it was the daily life and not politics or philosophy."

Anderson went to Brigham Young University where she met her husband, Lee. They lived in Seattle, Wash. and Miami, Fla. before coming to Newark in 1974 with their two children.

Anderson, now a teacher at St. John the Beloved School in Milltown, resides in Oaklands with her family. Her husband is a professor at the College of Marine Studies at the University of Delaware.

In 1968 Gusterson married her husband, Charles, another native of the Isle of Lewis. Depending on his British Forces assignments, they traveled with their two children to Edinburgh, Germany, England and Hong Kong before returning to England. For the past 13 years they have lived in Chesterfield, near Manchester, England where she is a general practice manager for a physician.

"We always tried to send the new address as soon as possible each time we moved," said Gusterson.

In all that time the two friends have only met three times. The first meeting was in 1969 when Anderson and her husband visited MacLeod in Scotland while she was still single.

The next visit came in 1985 when Anderson and her husband went to Wales and stole some time to see the Gustersons in England. "My husband always promised to take me to America to visit Sheila some day," said Gusterson, "but with the children, it just never seemed to happen."

On June 22 the dream finally came true. The Gustersons flew into Philadelphia International Airport where they were met by the Andersons. Everyone then embarked on a whirlwind tour of New York City, Washington, D.C., Annapolis and the Amish country, with points in between, including Newark.

"Everything has been wonderful," said Gusterson. "But Sheila's neighborhood is much quieter than I expected." The Gustersons returned home on July 5.

Anderson and Gusterson say "you have to want to be a letter writer" to maintain such a long correspondence. Anderson mourns the fact that people are "losing that documentation in modern life" that comes with letter writing.

Without ever actually discussing it, the friends somehow never talked by phone. "It was almost like it would break the code of a pen friend," said Anderson. Gusterson agreed. "Using the telephone would have made our letter writing not so special. There's nothing like a letter from a friend."

Democracy lives in Republic's kids

NEWARK OUTLOOK

FROM THE STAFF OF THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION OFFICE AT UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

some "democracies," freedom of the press is still a dream. In the United States, we complain about the excesses of the media with the O.J. Simpson trial, political scandals and more. At least here, we can turn the television off and throw the paper away. People in many countries only dream about having those kinds of opportunities. The most indignant thing about traveling in central Asia however, is the constant presence of the militia. In cities, military personnel are on every corner. Soldiers randomly flag down vehicles for no other reason than to check the papers of the driver. Any deviation from the norm requires a bribe to settle. In the countryside, the militia maintain roadblocks for the same reason. On one day long trip to the mountains, our party was stopped seven times and searched four times. The ostensible reason for the searches was to make sure we weren't trying to smuggle in guns or drugs. Needless to say, I'll never complain about our police again after experiences like that.

The remarkable thing about these countries in transition is the kids. Put simply, they are quite remarkable. Kids all over the world are very aware of American language and culture, and they know that the world is full of opportunities for them, if they can only get out of their present situation. I met and talked with more than 300 teenagers, and every last one said that they wanted to come to America to live and study. Kids overseas take education seriously and complain because they have only a half day of school on Saturday, and not a full day like the rest of the week. Of course, that does differentiate them a little from their American peers.

These teens are remarkably curious about their American counterparts. Everywhere I went I was asked "what are American kids like?" The truth is, I couldn't see any appreciable differences. Kids of all cultures like the same music and clothes and have the same dreams for their futures. They all want a world where everyone can live in peace and harmony, and to pursue their dreams without hindrance from others. And most kids, no matter where they live, still love their families and want to be independent from them without being far away from them. Kids everywhere want to be able to stretch their wings and explore the world, yet be able to come home for comfort when they need it. Most Uzbek and Kyrgyz kids didn't want to believe that American kids were the same as they are. They think American kids have few problems of their own, and that issues like drugs, guns and teen pregnancy are just for the movies and MTV.

I really admire the remarkable

determination of these kids who are struggling, not only live in a new world, but to reinvent it as they go. They really believe that they will succeed, and so do I.

I know that I'm much more appreciative of democracy than I ever have been before. I've driven the same two miles to and from work every day for nearly 16 years, and not once have I been stopped and searched.

It's what we don't see sometimes that is more important than what we do see. Democracy really is a remarkable invention, flawed as it sometimes is. The next time you complain about Rush Limbaugh or Newt Gingrich, think about how lucky we are to live in a society where we can complain at all.

By James C. McLaren

A noise-loving Crow
Pecked at cans in a row,
And was always at odds with the law.
He piled bells in his nest,
Banged on drums - what a pest!
Then, he raucously scared with his caw.

A sadistic old Flea
Plagued nice ladies at tea.
He hoped he could get them to scratch.
He flittered on cakes
And sugared cornflakes,
And trusted his hair plants would hatch.

Why were the Russian Czars never short of space?
They had Romanoff.

When should we question Militias?
When they are malicious.

The somersaults of little folks need not rule out straight and narrow paths in their future.

It is always cruel to dismiss the notion that marathon athletes can be both breathless and joyful in the long run.

■ Author's note: Lunacies like these have been inflicted on my poor wife, children and colleagues for years. I hope Newark Post readers will tackle this word-play nonsense with zest, thereby assuring them Eternal Joy and a letter from Ed McMahon.

A SPECIAL ADVERTISING FEATURE ABOUT NEWARK EATERIES

MAKO'S

An oasis of food & fun in Newark center

AFTER CROSSING the Sahara-like stretch of the Newark Shopping Center parking lot, local diners will come across an oasis of food and fun called Mako's Bar and Grill Restaurant. There's even a marooned ship outside to signal that this is the right oasis.

Co-owners Richie Bryan and Jay Ellis have brought their ideas together to bring that just off the beach feeling to Newark. Whether patrons desire large portions for their dining dollars, a cool, fruity Margarita, or a game of pool, they've got it at Mako's.

The restaurant has been open for a little over a month now, and Bryan feels it fills a niche in the food business in Newark.

"What separates us from the rest is our portions," Bryan said. "We serve a ten ounce, lean burger. It's a monster burger."

Newarkers who haven't been able to make it to the beach will be able to bring their big appetites and big thirsts to Mako's. The restaurant serves a comprehensive lunch menu from 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and dinner from 3:30 to 9 p.m. on weeknights, 10 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

Bryan and Ellis felt that a restaurant big on food would work in Newark. Once inside Mako's the decor will excite the senses. The downstairs bar runs 50 feet along one wall and a row of cozy booths stretches down the opposite wall. In the back there is a gameroom with two pool tables, air hockey and video games.

Upstairs in back, a mellow cocktail lounge helps patrons get away from the hustle and bustle of Newark. It's as if the ocean was gently shushing against the shore in the distance.

But downstairs, the walls are busy with activity. The friendly wait staff is always willing to offer suggestions from the lunch menu, and to point out the most tempting dishes on the dinner board. The dinner board allows for a greater flexibility and freshness of food items.

The food drives Mako's. Bryan and Ellis hired experienced Newark chef John Cecchi to be their executive chef. Cecchi's menu offers a wide variety of meals at good prices.

The appetizer menu is as long as an arm with fried mozzarella sticks, nachos, burritos, chicken wings and chicken, shark and grouper fingers. The appetizers are so appetizing, a whole meal could be made of them. But dinner is what makes Mako's the oasis worth arriving at.

The dinner menu ranges from soft shell crabs, to alligator tail, to mahi-mahi. On the more traditional side of the menu are steaks and chicken.

Cecchi hasn't been resting on his laurels while in the kitchen. His chicken and crab sauce dish is drawing raves

NEW BITE ON FOOD SCENE

Mako's Bar and Grill Restaurant opened a little more than a month ago in the Newark Shopping Center. Co-owner Richie Bryan and executive chef John Cecchi confer along the bar in the brightly lit and wildly decorated new restaurant. Bryan promises food and fun with a visit to Mako's and repeat customers. Cecchi combined his five-star white crab soup with a boneless breast of chicken for a taste that Richie Bryan says makes customers "go ballistic."

Cecchi's menu offers alligator tail which he describes as having a texture like sirloin.

More people have given it a try than we thought would," Cecchi said. "People seem to like it."

With adventurous diners, there's no telling how far Cecchi's taste will go. The mahi-mahi is another dinner favorite. Customers can order it blackened or broiled. Almost every dish on the dinner menu can be served in the spicy Cajun style they call blackened. With just one bite the customer knows the most important thing: it's good.

The dinner board often includes steaks, prime rib, hard and soft shell crabs, grouper, flounder, shrimp and the home-made crab cakes. The crab cakes are a house specialty and no amount of prodding could win the secret recipe.

If Newark has diners who feel deserted, they'll find their oasis at Mako's. Open 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. in the Newark Shopping Center, Mako's is sure to fill the appetite for food and fun, and there's no need to cross a desert to get there.

Home runs key Canal win

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

TIM CORRELL'S three run home run in the bottom of the fifth inning gave Canal a 7-5 lead and helped it on its way to a 8-5 win over Newark National on Wednesday night. The win advanced them to the third round of the double-elimination District II All-Star Senior League Tournament.

"I thought that we would hit the ball well," said Canal manager Ernie Spence. "I knew that there wasn't any pitching that could stop us."

Canal, who was playing its first game after a first-round bye, trailed 5-4 after Newark National's Robbie Bonvetti hit a sacrifice fly to right field and scored Justin Suchanec, breaking a 4-4 tie.

Correll's bomb came after John Kennard and Cortlen Argo teamed up to hit back-to-back homers in the third to ignite the Canal offense and stun a Newark National team who played with confidence.

"They hit three home runs to get us out of our game," said Newark National manager Pete Zarzycki. "We hit all our balls at somebody and they hit all theirs over our heads."

Newark National jumped out to a early 3-1 lead after three innings as two runs scored off an error in the first, and one on a bases loaded walk in the second.

"We were a little shaky in the beginning. Errors got us in trouble early and we fell behind 3-1," said Spence. "These kids are usually pretty good fielders but they were excited because it was the first game."

After Newark had scored on a double down the left field line to make the score 4-1, Kennard hit his home run.

Then Argo, after getting hit by a pitch, stayed in the box after the umpire missed the call and put Bryan Chatman's next pitch over the fence at Canal Little League Field pulling Canal within one.

"This team has four or five kids that are capable of hitting home runs. This is a strong bunch of kids," said Spence who is in his 18th year in the Little League system.

Canal's last run came in the bottom of the sixth as Brent Creese hit a single to score Nick Murphy and seal the win.

Canal's next game is against Midway, a 17-2 winner over Newark American in the other second-round game on Wednesday. The two will square off at Newark American Field on Tuesday July 11 at 5:30 p.m.

Skaters carve new edge in concrete

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

IN 1971 A MINOR LEAGUE hockey player named Scott Olsen founded a company that economic experts thought would only produce a fad.

Today, the Rollerblade company now has 16 million customers. The fad is one of America's quickest growing sports.

Rollerblading, or in-line skating as extreme-sport enthusiasts like to call it, is performed on a pair of skates that look like ice hockey skates with wheels.

In fact, that's what they are: molded boots with four to five rubber wheels in a line on the bottom.

Before Olsen's discovery, Dutchmen use to nail wheels to the bottom of thin pieces of steel to develop skates. Olsen incorporated that idea into the in-line skates for the sole purpose of having a way for him to practice during the off-season for hockey.

Now, skaters both young and old strut their stuff by sliding along on asphalt.

Mike Miller, who works for The Ski Bum in Newark, says that the sport has exploded since its introduction in 1971 and now everybody is involved.

"Everyone from families to hard-core punks with attitudes can skate," said Miller. "Nobody is left out of this sport."

Mark Vought, owner of The Ski Bum, said that in the past year, they have more than doubled their orders for the popular product, and that prices range from $100 to $1500 for the more high-tech skates.

The prices are all determined on the type of bearings that are inside the wheel. The $1500 skate has the high-grade bearing and produces a smoother, quicker glide.

With all the popularity that the sport has received since being invented, many department stores now carry models that cost less money, but are also of lesser quality.

The skates that once started out as an off-season training method for hockey players and skiers now have a sport of their own in the collection of new and rare sports called Extreme Games.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, recently featured a whole week of coverage of Extreme Games competition from Newport, Rhode Island.

Among the sports that were introduced to the public were ski surfing which features a jumper and a cameraman as they jump from a plane some 10,000 feet above the ground — one with a snow board, or ski board, attached to their feet and the other with a camera attached to his head.

Other games were mountain biking, street luge, slalom skating and speed skating in which skaters reached speeds close to the world record of 72 mph.

But the sport that received the most coverage, and seemed to be perfected by these athletes, involved in-line skates.

Miller, who said that he loves the whole concept of extreme games, demonstrated some of his moves earlier last week and described some of the more popular stunts.

"Rail slides, and steps are big now, but you can do almost anything on them," said Miller, who skates backwards and down steps, does hand stands, and jumps off anything that will propel him into the air.

Miller suggests wearing the appropriate protective gear which includes helmets, elbow and knee pads as well as wrist supports when learning to do such stunts.

Miller tells of a skater who took off his wrist guards before taking the skates off. The skater lost his balance and broke one of his wrists.

Going down steps is just as it sounds. Skaters simply roll down steps and hope for the best. Miller said that it doesn't take too long to learn how to skate on steps, but admits that he did suffer from some bumps and bruises while learning to do it.

From the time when the sport was developed for practicing hockey and keeping in shape for skiing, in-line skating has developed into a sporting giant.

Newark has extreme athletes. No steps or railings are immune from them. But these are not just street rats; they are athletes pushing the limits of a new sport.

Special Olympians take on World

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Just one look in Stanley Borecki's eyes and anyone could have seen that he was nervous.

As he looked around the Delaware Special Olympics facility at the University of Delaware, he crossed his arms over his chest and breathed a deep sigh of relief.

Borecki and the rest of Team Delaware were on their way last Friday to Connecticut, and the 1995 Special Olympics World Games.

"I'm very excited. This is my first opportunity to be a part of something so big and exciting," said Borecki.

Borecki, of Newark, is one of four athletes participating in the games this week who are residents of Newark and he said that his sole purpose is to win for his state.

"I want to win for Delaware," he said. "This is the biggest thing I've ever been in."

He has been competing since he was 12 years old and was in the last World Games in 1989 which were held in Minnesota.

Borecki said that the idea of meeting new people, especially those from other countries, is something that he doesn't mind.

The Delaware Special Olympics offers a year-round program of sports training and athletic competition in 15 Olympic-type sports to children and adults with mental retardation and other significant learning impairments.

Promising to be the largest sporting event in the world, the 9th Annual Special Olympics World Games showcases over 6,500 athletes from 130 countries. Selected were 50 athletes and 12 coaches who represent all areas of Delaware.

Another one of those athletes is Kristine Kolling. Kolling, who will participate in bowling, said that since she found out that she would be participating in the games, her life has changed.

"I've been going crazy for months," said Kolling. "When my dad told me that I had been selected I said 'O.K., now I have to pack.'"

Some athletes have partners who help them in their sport. One of the partners is Newark resident Michael Miller.

Miller is also a volunteer with the Delaware chapter, and said that the partners are a lot like the Hand-In-Hand program that is featured in the Delaware High School Football All-Star Game.

"In a sport like unified running, it makes the athlete feel better to have someone running beside them. It's someone they can be a friend with," said Miller who will be participating in unified bowling.

Miller said that for him, it will be interesting to see how the other countries operate and what the people will be like.

The games are held in the United States because no other country that offers Special Olympics has the facilities that the U.S. has to handle this many athletes.

Miller said that next year's games will be held in Maryland and that the television coverage this year has more than doubled. In the previous years, Miller said, the coverage would be one day that would encompass the whole week. This year many different networks have decided to get in on the action and allow for a whole week of viewing, just like the Olympics.

The sports that are featured in the games are athletics, aquatics, bocce, bowling, unified bowling, powerlifting, rollerskating, sailing, tennis and unified volleyball.

Borecki admitted that he had butterflies before boarding the bus to Connecticut, but once he grabs that bowling ball he will be going for the gold.

Wizards to face Express

By ERIC FINE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

THE DELAWARE WIZARDS had a seven-game winning streak snapped after the Philadelphia Freedom pinned a 1-0 shutout on them.

The good news is the Wizards (12-4) only need to split their remaining six games to clinch second place behind the Long Island Rough Riders in the U.S.I.S.L. Northeast Division Coastal Conference.

The streak included a thrilling 4-1 upset of the Rough Riders and star goalkeeper Tony Meola, who was in the net when the U.S. World Cup team upset Columbia last year.

Now Delaware has to learn a little English for its upcoming inter-regional match against the Cocoa (Fla.) Expos. Wizards coach Joe Brown said the Expos, which are undefeated in the Eastern Division Premier League, play a wide-open style influenced by several English players on its roster.

The Wizards lost a shootout against the Expos last year after finishing the game in a 0-0 tie.

"They have some experienced players," Brown said. "We owe them one from last year. Plus they're a team on a roll and we're a team that needs to get back in shape after a loss."

Wizards center mid-fielder Chris Morgan agreed.

"We need to all give a good effort from all around the field. We can't rely on one player to score all our goals. ...Everybody's got to pick their levels up a little bit," said Morgan, 25 and one of the team's original players.

Morgan, who attended McKean High, compared English soccer to fast-break basketball.

"There's more runnin' and gunnin' in the English style. The English open things up. ...A half-court offense you could compare to the Brazilian style" which relies on "a lot of short, little, cute passes," he added.

"It all depends on where you grew up and what you've had success with."

You know it's going to be a long night when the PA announcer jokes that fans can tryout at half time. This actually happened during the Wizards-Freedom match at the German-Hungarian Club in Oakford, Pa., last Sunday.

Or should we say bout. Officials slapped four players with red cards before the first half ended. Delaware and Philadelphia each lost two players. At the time, neither team had scored.

Forward Brad Smith, one of the Wizards' scoring leaders, and sweeper Omid Namazi, a key defender, were Delaware's casualties. The Freedom finally pushed one past rookie goalkeeper Peter Pappas with 22 minutes left in the game.

Center mid-fielder Chris Morgan said the officials may have overreacted.

Midway, Canal advance

Midway defeated Brandywine 12-10 in the opening round of the District II Junior All-Star Little League Tournament.

Midway rallied for four in the top of the seventh to take the lead for good. It scored three in the sixth to get to within 9-8. Brandywine held leads of 5-1 entering the fourth and 9-5 entering the sixth, but Midway took advantage of 20 walks and some spotty defense.

Midway plays Capitol/Stanton-Newport this Monday at Newark American Field.

Mike Connor, who started the game at shortstop, replaced pitcher Adam Marshall in the fourth to earn the win. Connor and catcher Matt Buckley each had two hits and three RBIs. First baseman Brett Underwood had two hits and two RBIs.

"It was an ugly win, but we won," said Midway manager Chris Marshall.

Canal opened the District II Junior All-Star Little League tournament with a 5-1 loss against Naamans.

Monday's loss at Naamans Field was as disappointing as it was surprising. The nucleus of the team Canal fielded against Naamans took home both the District II and Delaware state championship trophies last year in the two tournaments for 12-year-olds.

"It was a case of first-game jitters," said Canal manager David Blake, whose team received an unexpected bye Saturday after Wilmington Optimists withdrew from the tournament.

Canal scored its lone run in the first on a home run by pitcher Nate Huser. But Canal's gloves needed some oil as errors accounted for Naamans' five unearned runs.

"We've got the talent," Blake said. "Instead of having to win four, we've got to win six (in the losers' bracket). That's basically what I told them."

Pitching propels Newark National

By ERIC FINE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

PITCHING ENABLED Newark National to breeze to wins in the opening rounds of the District II All-Star Little League Tournament.

Newark National blew-out crosstown rival Newark American 13-5 in the first round last Saturday behind five strong innings by pitcher Keith Schuck.

On Monday, the Nationals overcame the loss of pitcher Robby Hines to post an 8-3 decision over Suburban. They next play Naamans at St. Edmund's Academy in Wilmington this Monday at 5:30 p.m.

Schuck struck-out eight Newark Americans in five innings before the heat got to him. His teammates built up a 13-0 lead in the meantime to push the Americans into the losers' bracket of the double-elimination tournament. They played the Brandywine all stars Thursday, who lost to Midway 12-10 on Monday.

"Keith Schuck...was a dominating pitcher," said Nationals manager Doug Maloney. "We could afford to bring in two relief pitchers for the sixth and seventh because we had such a big lead."

Schuck said he relied almost entirely on fastballs: "I threw only a couple curves. When we got our first run, it helped me coast a little. The team looks good."

And it should. Schuck's White Sox ended the regular season 1-14 in a league that included 15-year-olds, but Maloney said it gave the young pitcher valuable experience to take into the tournament.

Newark American manager Duane Siders also praised Schuck.

"Schuck basically beat us by himself. He's probably one of the top three pitchers in the tournament. He really overwhelmed us the first three innings," Siders said.

The Nationals broke the game open with a six-run fourth to take an 8-0 lead. Duben Word and Matt Swarter started the inning with walks and moved into scoring position on a passed ball. Mark Dempsey's ground-out to first scored Word to make the score 3-0. Bo Hollyday singled in the next run.

Then Jim Ashton reached base on an error and Matt Mondell walked.

Dave Maloney singled in another run to make the score 5-0. Schuck's single coupled with another error accounted for the other three runs in the inning.

Newark National slapped on a four-spot in the seventh behind hits by Hollyday, Ashton, Hines and Swarter.

The Nationals struck early in the second game against Suburban, scoring four in the first. They loaded the bases after Mondell reached base on an error, Maloney walked and Schuck legged-out a slow grounder down the third-base line.

Word then hit a grounder that went under the second baseman's legs to score the game's first two runs. Swarter followed with a single to drive in Schuck and Word.

Adversity struck in the second inning after starting pitcher Hines injured his left wrist trying to beat out a bunt. Hines tripped over the first base bag to avoid a collision with Suburban's first baseman. He was taken to the Newark Emergency Center.

But Maloney came on to pitch the final five innings for the win. The Nationals relied on defense and good fortune in the second game.

The Nationals added a pair of runs in the second inning without the benefit of a hit. After Mondell walked, Schuck reached base on a pop-up to the left side that no one caught. Word followed with a walk to load the bases.

Mondell and Schuck crossed the plate after Swarter hit a grounder that got by Suburban's third baseman. Swarter's fourth-inning single scored Schuck and Word to finish off Suburban.

"Our fielding was excellent," Doug Maloney said. "We didn't have a lot of strikeouts like in the first game." Or hits.

After pounding 14 against Newark American last Saturday, the Nationals settled for a mere six.

"I don't know what their pitchers were doing," the manager said. "They weren't throwing real hard, but they did a pretty good job."

Americans save face

Newark American's four-run rally in their half of the seventh atoned for a tough loss the team endured as 12-year-olds in '94.

"(Newark National) beat us 10-0 last year. That comeback was real important," manager Duane Siders said. "It's something for us to build on. It was a real good way to end the game. It showed the team it could score some runs."

Pinch hitter Mike Focht singled and Jon Gagliardino doubled to start the rally. Co-captain Sean Callahan drove them both in with a double to the right-field gap.

Steve Hauer drove Callahan in with a single. Hauer went to third on Micah German's single and scored when the Nationals tried to throw German out as he stole second.

Siders said he and his coaches selected the team "not just on ability but attitude." And the team's perseverance proved they made the right choices.

"They didn't give up. Everybody in the dugout was cheering on their teammates. Nobody had their head down."

Perfect season in reach, but Time Out plays it cool

By ERIC FINE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

ONLY GUARDIAN Construction stands between Time Out Sports and its quest for perfection. But going 36-0 in the Gold League is a small feat next to making some waves in the upcoming post-season tournament.

Time Out played Guardian (7-27) Thursday in a game it figured to win easily. But Time Out manager John Slack Sr. and John Hermes, one of several all-stars on the team, expressed relatively little excitement over the accomplishment.

The two spoke mostly of how the team would fare against its Blue League rivals in the double-elimination tournament which starts next Wednesday.

"It's no secret the Blue is a stronger league," Slack Sr. said. "Over the years we have not played well on a regular basis against that type of competition."

"It's a nice accomplishment."

That's a real nice feather. It takes some luck too. And quite frankly, we've been lucky a few times, especially against Fair Hill," he said, citing the three games their longtime rivals have held them under 10 runs.

But pitting a Gold League team against one from the Blue is "like going undefeated as a flyweight and fighting Mike Tyson," Slack Sr. said. "It's not the record. ...It's the home run power."

Hermes, an outfielder, agreed. "But unless you do something (in the post-season) it really doesn't mean too much. If you go 0-and-2 in the playoffs, it kind of feels like you missed something," he said.

Another difference in the two leagues is the intensity requirements for each game. Fair Hill manager Mart Lukk said.

"It's just a matter of trying to get at a play-off level," said Lukk, whose team entered the week in third at 25-9. "It's a different brand of softball. It's basically do or die. You can't afford to have an average day because that won't cut it against

Blue League competition." Down to Gold wire

Time Out belted four homers in its 19-5 rout of Master Acoustical (14-21) to ebb closer to a perfect regular season. Hermes (3-4, 3 Rs, 4 RBIs), Brian Niekamp (2-3, 2 Rs, 3 RBIs), Matt Krawczyk (2-2, 2 Rs, 2 RBIs) and John Slack Jr. (2-4, 2 Rs, 4 RBIs) all did their impression of the Sultan of Swat.

Time Out also pulled off a rarity of sorts when it shut out Canada Dry (19-16), a pretty good rookie team which will finish fourth. Its closest rival, Master Acoustical, is under .500.

Henry Wagner (4-4, 3 Rs), Mark Schroeder (2-4, 3 Rs, 4 RBIs) and Joe Gutowski (3-4, 4 Rs, 3 RBIs) led the way for Time Out.

Fair Hill also took advantage of its chance to pick up a couple W's with a 10-4 whipping of Guardian and a forfeit against Master Acoustical. Mike Hadley (2-3, 2 Rs, 3 RBIs), Jeff Asti (3-3, 3 Rs, 2 RBIs) and Joe Goodwin (2-3, 2 Rs,

East End, which pounded 28 hits, exploded for six in the third and 10 in the fifth en route to a 20-13 win in the Deer Park game. All-stars Pat Bonk and Bill Baker slugged home runs in the sixth. Craig Callahan (4-4, 3 Rs, 2 RBIs), Butch Simpson (4-4, 2 Rs, 2 RBIs) and all-star Bret

East End could wrap up another regular season trophy after playing one with Newark Auto Buffs (9-23) and three with last-place El Sombrero (4-28). Crab Trap's road is tougher with three against dangerous Taylor's Ink (16-16), which reached the post-season tourney finals in '94.

"These are teams we should beat," said East End manager Mike Brogan. "And we can't take them lightly. At this point we're using everybody on the roster. I worry more about 10 guys showing up for a game."

Veteran pitcher Dale McClelland has re-enlisted with East End for the post-season tourney. McClelland, who has been slowed by knee problems in recent years, will give the defending champs depth behind all-star Al Gunter.

Crab Trap nearly watched its 9-3 lead evaporate against Concord as the former Irish Pub team cranked out six straight hits during a five-run rally in the seventh.

But the Trap's lead held up. Steve Fratacelli (2-2), Curt Geeseman (2-3, 2 Rs), Jeff Vickers (1-2, 3 RBIs) and Brian Singleton (1-3, 2 RBIs) were productive at the plate.

"East End is in the driver's seat," said Crab Trap manager Chuck Sullivan, the mantra he's repeated throughout the season. "We have to win out. Got to hit the ball if we want to beat Taylor's. It's not easy to beat them three times."

Midway blasts away

Midway broke open a tight game in the last two innings to scorch Newark American 18-2 in the District II Senior All-Star Little League tournament.

Midway pitcher Steve Ryan gave up single runs in the second and third frames at Newark American Field Tuesday. Ryan, Midway's No. 2 pitcher, struck out 10 while surrendering only four hits in six overpowering innings.

He retired 11 straight Newark Americans between the fourth and sixth innings before Newark American's Jeff Bartkovich broke up the hitless streak with a single. Ryan struck out Jim Knight and coaxed Danny Basara into a ground ball to end the inning.

"I just felt loose and in control," said Ryan, who is entering his junior year at McKean. Nonetheless, he claimed his fastball lacked some of its usual pop.

"It felt like it was there (but it was) more accurate than overpowering."

Midway led 4-2 when Basara took the mound in the top of the sixth. Some bad luck apparently followed him there from Newark American's dugout on the first baseline.

Michael McCallister reached base on a bad-hop grounder to the shortstop, and Michael Good's bunt skipped past Basara. Brian Hudock (3-5, 4 RBIs) singled in McCallister giving Midway the first of the 16 runs it would score in the sixth and seventh innings.

Ryan Minsker and John Warren each had two-run singles in the six-run sixth. Only a nice running catch by Mike Sturgis on a liner that the left-field foul line provided a merciful ending to Midway's onslaught.

Errors and walks - Newark American served up 11 free-passes for the game - led to eight more Midway runs in the seventh.

Newark American manager Paul Anderson praised both Ryan and his team afterward.

"I thought (Ryan) was great. He must have been around 80-miles-per-hour and he has good control," Anderson said. "They've got a lot of talent. I don't want to make any excuses. They just outplayed us," Anderson said.

Midway manager Tom Hudock also praised the Newark American team, Basara and Sturgis in particular.

"Danny did an excellent job. And Sturgis is a very good player. I think he's one of the best hitters around," Hudock said.

"We got lucky. They ran out of pitching, and our kids started to hit the ball," he said.

Anderson said his team took the loss reasonably well.

"They weren't real down afterward. You go out and see how the ball bounces. Not to be trite, I just think every game's a new game. We were in it for five innings. For most of the game we played well."

-Eric Fine
