

Winter

. . . Now it's winter on the campus . . . with red brick buildings against a black and white landscape, frozen and slippery with snow . . . bare bleak trees against a dull grey sky . . . and winds pushing and pulling on the walks . . . days of bright clear coldness when the snow is firm and the freshmen build a snowman that the little boys pull down . . . Inside, the study lights burn late for work past its beginnings, for reports near their completion . . . There are games of basketball and tumbling for exercise . . . There are days at Thanksgiving for rest and relaxation . . . Then back again for classes . . . a formal before Christmas . . . the holidays and home again . . . Soon there is a new year with review for mid-year exams before a new semester and a coming spring . . . with rains to wash the snow away . . .

Winter Sports

Cold weather and November and the athletic fields are deserted in favor of the gym . . . where there are the clang of locker doors and the thuds of gym-shod feet running in the locker room, on the stairs, on the basketball court . . . stiff muscles and hard breathing . . . the unexpected lucky basket that drives one into tossing balls at any basket from any place on the floor . . . collisions and sudden balancing too close to the out of bounds line for comfort . . . frantically waving arms . . . pinnies and gym suits still . . . games . . . and referees' whistles . . . goals . . . and yells of advice and grunts of disgust . . .

One day there is a net or two across the gym and teams of flexible sizes are playing volleyball . . . with the inevitable mixup when it's time to change positions . . . upturned faces waiting for the ball to come down from the balcony . . . more collisions . . . the ball on the floor too often . . . scores that sometimes balance and sometimes don't . . . the excitement of finding a prowess-giving name for one's team . . . Jeeps vs. Wildcats . . . well-earned points.

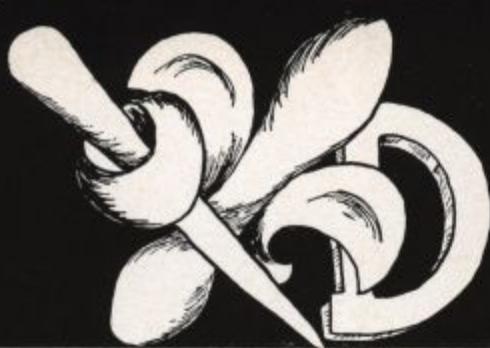

Soon there are no more games, and the athletically minded begin to worry about backstroke . . . the showers are full of girls shivering under cold drenchings before entering the pool . . . there are tank suits that are too small and tank suits that are too large and very seldom any that fit . . . In the pool people are swimming up and down and crossways . . . and diving . . . Someone is always learning to swim under the well-meant but contradictory instructions of six classmates . . . There are people turning somersaults and choking . . . Legs wave wildly as someone tries hard to stand on her head at the shallow end . . . Finally there are swimming meets, where someone is always behind and too many other people claim to have come in first . . . A sound of cheering fills the gym . . . the starter's chant is always interrupted by two or three people jumping in too soon . . . The end of the meet means eyes smarting from chlorine . . . and wet hair . . . and hair washing . . . and towels . . . and the whirr-rr of dryers . . . and the clang of locker doors.

And there are plunge hours after school and in the evenings for those who haven't time to come out for the whole season . . . and there are weekly recreational evenings when seniors and juniors remember P202 by swinging on apparatus and forgetting how to do it correctly . . . when everybody wants the badminton court at once . . . when the pingpong table is surrounded . . . when everybody forgets her lessons for an hour of fun.

Press Club

The organization, Press Club, has the aim of fostering and stimulating literary interest among the students.

Membership is attained by presenting a satisfactory report before the club on the topic of most interest to the prospective member.

Staff members of the "Cauldron" are chosen from students who belong to the Press Club.

Meetings are held once a month, at which talks by members of the faculty, and people not connected with the college are given. Open discussions are held by the students at meetings also.

Officers of the Press Club this year are: president, Anna Franczkowska; vice-president, Alice Ward; secretary, Miriam Tanzer; treasurer, Nancy Brown.

Science Club

One of the most original and entertaining programs presented by the club in years was the novel laboratory party the girls held in October. Tea was drunk from beakers with trick sugar cubes that floated, and stirring rods were used instead of the old stand-by, spoons. Those students present claim it was barrels of fun; it's quite easy to imagine there were giggles and laughs galore. The girls have planned some spectacular demonstrations for the year. Mr. Lytle L. Jenne spoke to the girls; Mr. Jenne is secretary of the American Chemical Society. About thirty girls are members; faculty advisers are Dr. Quaesita Drake and Dr. Elizabeth Dyer. Officers are: president, Mildred Hank; vice-president, Betty Betts; secretary, Betty Wahl; treasurer, Mildred Trimble.

Le Cercle Francais

Members of the French Club felt extremely fortunate this year when Anne-Marie Max, an exchange student from Paris, France, enrolled at the Women's College and promptly joined the French organization. At the November meeting, Anne-Marie spoke to the girls in her native language. Two open meetings are held each year. This year, as a project, the members are dressing dolls of different provinces of France which will be distributed among the high schools of the state. The club has given aid to the French Relief. Twenty girls belong to the organization, and Dr. Edna Frederick is the sponsor. During the second semester the club produces either a play or sponsors a French movie. Officers are: president, Patty Henderson; vice-president, Ruth Kraye; secretary, Serena Weggenman; treasurer, Mildred Morrison.

Phi Kappa Phi

Phi Kappa Phi is an honor society devoted to the interests of scholarship, and a chapter was established at the college in 1924. Students eligible for membership are drawn from the upper quarter of the senior class; the faculty elects the students to the society.

Two girls were elected in November of this year, Mary Jean Sturgis and Ellen Marjorie Foster. Later in the school term, in March, the following girls were elected as members of the society: Sarah Feeney, Anna Katharine Franczkowska, Anna Hayes, Alice May Hazelton, Gwinnett Hopkins Jones, Rejane MacIntosh, Ruth Anne O'Daniel, and Jane Elizabeth Stephens.

Music Club

A small group of girls interested in music perform for each other at the meetings of the Music Club, and at the end of the program constructive criticisms are made of the performance. Several open meetings are held during the school year to which both faculty and students are invited. Professor Loudis and Miss Jean Bryan are faculty advisers. Nancy Lee Green is president; Marcelle Skinner is vice-president; and Katherine Gray is secretary-treasurer.

Members of the club attend the organ recitals, programs of visiting musical artists, Newark Community Concert functions, and Curtis Concerts.

Frequently the girls usher at these important events.

Art Club

This is one of the most active clubs on the campus, its purpose being to bring the student's attention to various points of interest in the Art World that are separate from the teaching in the classroom. The meetings are open to all students, which allows the girls in other courses to pick up a few interesting bits of information about what's going on in the field of art. In October, Miss Baily and Miss Gardner spoke on the Gaspé, while in November Anne-Marie Max told the girls about life in Paris, France. In December Nancy Brown spoke on Japanese Prints. Miss Baily is the faculty adviser, and Maryanna Kieffer is president. Nancy Brown is secretary-treasurer.

Members of the Art Club also help in giving teas in honor of distinguished visiting artists at the Art Gallery.

Forum

The Forum, sponsored by the Department of History and Political Science, is an organization for the discussion of problems—national and international—of current interest. The members express their honest opinions at the meetings; then open meetings are held at which members of the faculty or outsiders speak to the girls. A banquet at the end of the year for the new members is the organization's social event. Then, too, the fourteen members are co-sponsors with the Athenæan Society of Men's College of a college hour program. Dr. Francis Hagar Squire, Associate Professor of History, is the sponsor. Officers are: president, Jeanne Harkins; vice-president, Jean Sturgis; secretary, Alice Ward; treasurer, Matilda Wisk; librarian, Dorothy Cann.

Mathematics Club

The club began the year's activities by making a trip to the Franklin Institute and Planetarium in November with Miss Edith McDougale, faculty adviser, accompanying the girls. Aims of the club are: to present interesting programs and increase the membership, to make mathematics play a more important part in campus life, to introduce mathematics in such a way as to make it appear interesting, worthwhile and fascinating. Approximately forty-one members belong. Meetings are held once a month at which outsiders, students, or faculty members act as speakers. Officers are: president, Doris Gibney; vice-president, Alice Ward; secretary-treasurer, Dorothy Eagleson; corresponding secretary, Mildred Trimble; chairman of teas, Doris McIlvaine.

Home Economics Club

Aims of the Home Economics club are: to have interesting programs, to have good attendance at all meetings, to help in all ways with national defense, and to have all members take active part. Each Christmas, the girls fix a basket for a needy family in the town, and in the spring they sponsor a fashion show with clothes from Bird-Speakman Incorporated. About fifty-five girls belong, and Miss Florence Holmes is the adviser. In addition to these programs, the girls sell Berea goods, present a Lenox china demonstration, have a cosmetician speak to the members, and hold a Christmas party in the Home Management House. Jean Allen is president; Norma Hollis is vice-president; Sara Short, secretary; and Alice Douglass, treasurer.

Social Committee

The social committee consists of four seniors, four juniors, and two sophomores. It is in charge of the ever-popular Freshman Get-Together, Hallowe'en Dance, Christmas Formal, Valentine Dance, Spring Formal, May Day Dance, Farewell Hop, "Openhouses" and Barn Dances. Each girl has a definite job to do, and when the decorations have been planned, all the girls help to put them up. Miss Rena Allen is the faculty adviser. Virginia French is the chairman of the committee and the members are: treasurer, Jean Allen; refreshments, Bettie McGee; programs, Janet Balster; orchestra, Betty Jo Painter; decorations, Helen Kaiser and Jeannette Trice; hall, Helen Wilson; chaperones, Constance Headley; publicity, Miriam Lewis.

Outing Club

This organization is one of the most interesting in Women's College in that it seeks to create a greater interest in the outdoor life and to develop a spirit of comradeship which comes only by being close to nature. The overnight hike on the Horse-shoe Trail last year was an exciting and cleverly-planned adventure. The girls spent the night on the trail at Kring's Youth Hostel at Chester Springs, Pennsylvania. In March, nearly forty girls went on an eventful skating party at the roller rink. Other activities of the club include breakfast hikes, supper hikes, and moonlight hikes. Professor Hartshorn is the faculty adviser, and Martha Brandriff is president. Doris Ostrander is secretary-treasurer; Agnes Cordrey is vice-president.

Athletic Council

The Council is another busy, functioning organization on the campus. It provides recreation for the students and gives each girl a chance to participate in the sports in which she is intensely interested. Every girl in Women's College becomes a member when she enters here, but there are about sixty active members in the association. This year Constance Coffman was chosen freshman representative. Other girls on the Council are: president, Barbara Plumline; vice-president, Martha Brandriff; secretary, Betty Hearne; treasurer, Ruthann Tease. The girls in the association also give a tea for the freshman class students, a Hallowe'en Party, and a co-recreational party. Miss Beatrice Hartshorn and Miss Suzette Ealy are faculty advisers.

About the Campus

While lessons call on the individual effort of each girl, the student organizations call for group cooperation and leadership. Throughout the fall, the winter, the spring, students work together in groups . . . to produce a play . . . to publish a yearbook or a magazine . . . to express themselves through discussions of art, music, literature or national affairs . . . With each group activity there are individual responsibilities of leadership and representation . . . in clubs . . . in each class . . . and in the Student Council.
