Apartments are just around the corner

Main Street Court on old Newark Lumber site is filling rapidly with people and cars.

By KATY CIAMARICONE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The fall semester is right around the corner, which means Newark will soon be brimming with thousands of University of Delaware students, heavier traffic and louder parties.

For residents who live near Delaware Avenue, Chapel Street and other locations in town, this school year also means hundreds of new kids on their block in an abundance of new apartments. Construction of new off-campus housing all will be completed for students to settle in before the new school year begins.

The corner of South Chapel Street and East Delaware Avenue is undergoing a major makeover this summer. By Aug. 22, it will be transformed from a run-down factory site into a five-building apartment complex where more than 480 tenants are already signed up. By January 2001, two additional buildings will be added to bring the complex to its capacity of 880-plus persons.

In September, the University Courtyard apartments will come in two sizes. Units with two bedrooms and two bathrooms are available for $560 per person, as well as four bedroom/four bathroom units for $495 per person. Other sizes will be available in January, Coulbourne said.

Nearly all of the apartments are already reserved for the fall. "Only University of Delaware students, staff and alumni are permitted to live in the complex," said Cindy Coulbourne, assistant property manager for the apartments, "but, there are some still available."

Each will come fully furnished and utilities are included in the monthly fee. All occupants are permitted to use the clubhouse, which features a fitness center, swimming pool and computer lab.

The complex will have parking for all tenants, but when the school year begins, University of Delaware buses will run from the apartments to campus.

University Courtyard, across Delaware Avenue from Main Street Court, will have at least 480 tenants in September.

Despite the large number of college students that will occupy the facility, staff at the complex do not think police patrols will be necessary. "We know mostly students will be living in the complex so we do anticipate a party atmosphere, but we don't expect to have many problems or disruptions," Coulbourne said.

She added that each apartment comes equipped with a security system to minimize burglaries.

Hundreds of students also are moving into the newly-established Main Street Court in September. Located on the former Newark Lumber site between Main Street and Delaware Avenue, the apartment/retail complex opened June 1.

Main Street Court features units with two bedrooms and two bathrooms that range in price from $1200 to $1250. Each apartment includes central air, appliances and wall-to-wall carpeting.

There are currently 42 apartments in a new L-shaped building, and six additional apartments above the former Newark Hardware store on Main Street. Nearly all of the occupants are University of Delaware students, said Brian Locom, who manages the complex.

Locom said the key features at the Court are ample parking and security available for its residents. "I've talked with a lot of people who live in apartments on Main Street who said they have to pay to park on the street because the spaces are owned by the city of Newark," he said. "But here, we have a large parking lot and also a parking garage, so parking won't be a problem."

There is also a security system on the facility which will prevent non-residents from entering without permission and will cut down on burglaries and other crimes, Locom said. "We've seen what happens to apartment buildings without security systems on them, so we're not fooling around," he said.

There are also elevators in the three-story building, so residents with upper-level apartments will have less trouble moving in all of their belongings, Locom said.

There is retail space currently available beneath the apartments. The type of businesses that will occupy the space is unknown as of yet, but they are expected to be open by the end of the summer.

Locom said he anticipates that specialty stores will probably take up most of the space. "We hope, since mostly students are living in the facility, that there will be a convenience store and maybe a video rental store, but no one is really sure, yet,"

Meece to lead charter school

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark native Gregory R. Meece has been named the first school director for Newark's first charter school.

Meece, a graduate of Holy Angels School, St. Mark's High, and the University of Delaware, has spent 20 years working in Delaware schools. In 1981, he was hired as the first director of development at St. Mark's where he was responsible for student recruitment, communications, marketing, alumni activities and fund raising, including a successful $3 million capital campaign.

"Some people might see this move as a departure for me, but it's not," said Meece. "When I went to the Charter School of Wilmington, there was only the two of us and I had to learn to do everything. I've done curriculum, helped students with their schedules, even acted as a counselor."

Meece joined former St. Mark's principal Ronald Russo in launching Delaware's first charter school in Wilmington in 1996. Meece helped increase enrollment there from 240 to 800 students. In 1999, the Charter School of Wilmington became the first high school in Delaware to have a school uniform dress code.

"The Charter School of Wilmington is arguably the best public school in Delaware," Meece said. "When people in Newark wanted to start a charter school, they came to us for advice."

Meece has also worked for Delaware Technical and Community College and provided consulting services for non-profit groups and businesses, as well as acting as an advisor for student activities at St. Mark's and the Charter School. "When they approached me about the job in Newark, I knew getting more into the education side is the direction I want to be going at this point," said Meece. "Being able to give something back to the community I grew up in is especially rewarding."

The Newark Charter School has received more than 1,000 applications even though it will not open until September 2001. During its first year, it hopes to admit 400 students in grades five through seven, reaching a maximum enrollment of 600 by its third year.

Meece, who lives in Newark, will continue as an administrator at the Charter School of Wilmington and work one day a week for the Newark Charter School until it finalizes plans for a site. At that time, he will become the full-time school director.

More than 30 volunteers, mostly parents, are working on the new school. "They are a very enthusiastic group," said Meece. "They are passionate about this school."

The new school is currently under the direction of a board which includes Timothy Boulden, a state representative and Newark resident, Hal Godwin, mayor of Newark, Joan Pierson, a parent and former teacher, and Anthony Wexler, parent and University of Delaware professor.

Technology Park meets the future

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The future looks bright for Delaware at the 7-year-old Delaware Technology Park, even if it rained at a recent dedication of two new buildings.

A partnership between the state's government, academia and leading industries, the DTP was developed by the Governor's 1986 High-Technology Task Force with the goal to develop new high-tech industries in Delaware. The complex at Wyoming and Marrows roads is now home to 30 high-tech businesses which focus on biotechnology, information technologies and advanced materials.

Delaware has always been a place where people raise corn and chickens and a place where businesses like to incorporate and where banks like to issue credit cards, according to Governor Thomas Carper.

"We've added new legs to our economy and we are going to strengthen those legs," Carper said.

Part of those legs have come from the partnership between the technology park and the University City Science Center. According to Science Center president Jill Felix, the two new buildings in the park were the result of a joint effort. "Really it's about strategic partnering, the partnering of private, public and academic communities to create a new environment ... to create a regional wealth," Felix said. "Our partnership has allowed us to create a state-of-the-art environment that supports that goal."

The Science Center, a non-profit corporation based in Philadelphia and owned by a consortium of 30 academic and scientific institutions, was established in 1963.

The next building to be dedicated at DTP will be the largest at 70,000 square feet - the Delaware Biotechnology Institute. With its opening in November, the Park will be two-thirds complete.

Another cooperative effort, the Institute will merge the state government, the University of Delaware, Delaware State University, Delaware Technical and Community College and at least three leading industries into one research facility.

According to director David Weir, the DBI's main focus will be on functional genomics or the function genes perform in organisms. At least 60 faculty from UD, DelTech and Del State will conduct research or be associated with the institute, Weir said.

In addition, Hercules Inc., AstraZeneca and DuPont Co. are expected to play a role at the Institute. Hercules Inc. recently pledged $1 million over a five-year period to UD earmarked for

Fairplay Station opens

By PHILIP TOMAN

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

With the opening of the new train station at Churchman's Crossing, 50 percent of all the active railroad stations in Delaware now serve the Newark area. This statistic entered the record books on July 21, when political, railroad and business leaders gathered near Delaware Park racetrack for the dedication of the state's fourth commuter rail station.

According to State Transportation Secretary Anne Canby, ridership at the station has risen 150 percent since the first train service began only a few weeks ago. Officials expect it to increase at a rapid rate as more area residents find out about the new station.

As an added incentive, rail fares are reduced 50 percent for those using the station for the next week. There are now 18 trains a day serving Fairplay with more to be added as needed.

DART also established Fairplay Station as a new bus center to get area residents and employees of local businesses to and from the station. "This station, the second in this area, shows this state's commitment to a top quality transit service," said Governor Thomas Carper.

The other station is in the city of Newark off South College Avenue.

The new station owes its name to the famous racehorse, "Fairplay," which was bred and trained on the horse farm which once occupied the station's site near Delaware Park.

Locom said.

Also fairly new on South Chapel Street are 41 units at Continental Court Apartments which opened in August 1999. All of the two bedroom-two bath apartments come equipped with a washer, dryer and dishwasher and rent for $1,200 per month.

Angela Tsionas-Matulas, office administrator for the complex, said all the apartments are currently rented.

On the other side of town, The Mill at White Clay still has about 18 apartments available for immediate occupancy. The retail/residential/office complex, located off Paper Mill Road near the site of Newark's oldest standing paper mill, has a total of 48 apartments.

One-, two-, three- and four bedroom apartments are available at The Mill, and prices range from $650 for one bedroom and one bathroom to $1,500 for four bedrooms and two-and-one-half baths. Each apartment comes with ceramic tiling and a washer and dryer, said Kevin Quinn, asset manager for Commonwealth Development, which is handling the development of the complex.

Unlike other apartments going up around town, this complex is occupied by a relatively small percentage of University of Delaware students, Quinn said. "There are some grad students, but most of the renters are not students," he said.

At the last regular city council meeting, Commonwealth president Jeffrey Lang said most of the apartments at The Mill were rented to "professionals - some with families and young children" in them. "We're looking at a new design with revised recreational use to meet their needs," Lang told council.

There are also renovations being done to old buildings near it, where office and retail space will be available by mid-November, Quinn said.

On Monday, city council approved changes to the development plan which will increase office use and decrease the number of apartments originally proposed at the site.

Coming soon will be a day spa, offices beneath the apartments and retail adjacent to White Clay Creek, Quinn said.

Commonwealth is also under a tentative agreement with Timothy's for a restaurant.

Tyre Ave. residents watching &amp; waiting

Residents on Tyre Avenue are not happy while they wait to see if action promised by city officials will reduce worry over an unplanned business in their midst.

According to city planning director Roy Lopata, the problem started when the owners of Barba-Reynolds Insurance consulted his department about zoning at 32 Tyre Avenue in early 1999. As was procedure, the city zoning map was reviewed and showed that the site was zoned for business use. Based on that, the company proceeded to purchase and renovate the property.

Sometime around November 1999, Lopata said he discovered the map was wrong and the property was supposed to be shown as zoned residential. After consulting with the city solicitor, city officials allowed the business to continue to operate but advised the owners they could not alter the appearance of the property from that of a residence.

"But they never contacted the neighbors to let them know what happened," complained resident Tina Jackson. "We didn't have any idea until renovations started recently."

In addition to installing a concrete ramp on the front of the house, the business owners also laid gravel in the backyard and used a city right-of-way for access to the new parking area thus created.

Lopata said the city has advised the business the changes are not permitted in the residential zone. "They have to operate under residential restrictions," he said.

City council debated the options available to restore the neighborhood to its residential character. District 2 councilmember Jerry Clifton urged the city to offer to repurchase the property as well as pay for any renovations or other out-of-pocket costs incurred by the new owners. "We made a fatal mistake...an expensive mistake, but we owe it to the community to try to fix it," Clifton said.

Among the concerns of Clifton and the neighbors is the possibility that other businesses might operate there if the property ever is resold by the insurance brokers. City solicitor Roger Akin said he would have to research the law on that situation.

Among the city's concerns are possible lawsuits with the business owners and/or residents if the city attempts to preserve either side's rights in the matter at the expense of the other.

Ultimately city council voted to explore the repurchase of the property. In the event that is not possible, they plan to work on an agreement to deed restrict the property to residential use when it is ever resold.

"If they tell us no to both counts, we will have to start studying our legal options," said Mayor Hal Godwin. "But we hope these two (longtime) Newark people will agree to work with us on this."

Surprised, but not disappointed

We are as surprised as anyone that property owners are filling all the new apartments in Newark.

According to the managers of two complexes opening this summer, there is no lack of applications. Over 500 additional people will arrive home at new apartments in the space of two blocks in the heart of the downtown area this fall.

Main Street Court, started two years ago and delayed by environmental cleanups on the old lumber site, finally opened in June. The 48 mostly two-bedroom apartments in a high-rise setting are nearly all filled with University of Delaware students, according to staff.

But across Delaware Avenue is the real thriller everyone has been eagerly anticipating and/or dreading.

University Courtyard expects its first tenants to arrive with the beginning of college classes next month. Since this is, by description and definition, a student housing apartment complex, 99-and-44-100ths percent of the tenants will be students.

Who would have guessed, except the complex developers, that almost 500 young people would agree to live in such a supervised, albeit plush and secure, facility?

But, according to site managers, they have the leases to prove it. They also have space coming for 400 more tenants by January.

Due to the time of year, that may be harder to fill — unless the University's dorms are overcrowded again.

Along with the tenants will come vehicles, of course. Some, hopefully, will be bicycles. A very few people may not have any personal transport at all. But, the majority will have something on four wheels.

However, with classes and campus activities within walking distance, and a University of Delaware bus picking up on-site, those cars may end up spending long, undisturbed periods in the biggest park-and-ride lot in Newark.

Let's face it, there's not a big choice of free parking wherever else those kids may be going in town.

Ready or not, believing or not, Newark is going to see the results of plans made in developer heaven. So far, they appear to be on track, and we're happy if they are.

The developers and property owners did not go into this for the fun of making half the residents in town crazy with anxiety and sleepless nights.

These people expect to do business here by filling apartments, turning them over in a timely and well-maintained manner, and making a lot of money doing it.

So far they have been right. We hope they are right. We hope they will go on being right.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor
From Diane Henker
Newark

I am writing this letter to inform you of a kind deed done by our mayor, Hal Godwin. On July 4, as my husband and I were about to depart on a road trip, we noticed that our car was low on coolant.

We found this surprising as we'd just had a full oil/lube job performed on the car by Godwin Shell the day before. My husband and I drove over to Mr. Godwin's Shell station — in a slight fit of rage, I might add — before leaving for our trip.

We arrived at the Shell station to find Mr. Godwin, the lone mechanic on-duty, faithfully weeding the flowerbed under the blazing sun, sacrificing his only day off in three weeks to keep his place looking immaculate — as always. I'm embarrassed to say that I stomped over, practically accused him of trying to rip us off, and demanded that he fill the coolant.

Not only did Mr. Godwin stop what he was doing to take care of the job, but he inspected every other fluid in the car to make sure that nothing else had been missed (which all checked out fine). He apologized for the mishap, patiently explained how this could have been overlooked in the first place, insured me that he'd take this up with his mechanic, and then wished us a good trip.

Looking back on my poor behavior, I'd like to sincerely apologize to Mr. Godwin and to thank him for being such a reliable, friendly, and hard-working shop-owner and mayor. Newark should consider itself lucky to have him.

Colleges here faced by record freshman classes

The Dean's office at the Women's College reported yesterday that 99 girls had registered up to date, with no means of estimating what the last minute enrollment may add to the total.

Last year, the Freshman class numbered 104 at the opening of the term. In view of possible congestion, no rooms are being assigned until the return of Dean Robinson from Europe.

Dean Dutton's office at Delaware College reported yesterday that 63 men had been accepted and entered in the Freshman class, over 90 applications have been received.

Form this survey, it is evident that the student body at the University will be the largest in its history.

New building on Main Street for Sol Wilson

Another new building for Main Street was confirmed yesterday. Sol Wilson, of the Quality Shop, has practically approved the architect's drawings for a building on Main Street on lot owned by him adjoining the Casho property, recently acquired by the Farmer's Trust Company.

The building will be a combined store and residence, the store occupying the whole of the street floor.

Tax rollback may hurt schools

The decision by the U.S. Third Circuit Court of Appeals to cut the property tax rate set by the Planning Board of Education and to uphold court-ordered desegregation of New Castle County schools met with mixed reactions.

School officials fear the tax cut will adversely affect school operations and cause cutbacks in student services. The tax cut also may affect the district's contract negotiations with teachers, who may not get what they're expecting.

The tax rate has been dropped from $1.68 per $100. This rollback, however, may be temporary.

Police net five in night fracas

Newark police arrested five persons and expect to make more arrests in connection with a civil disturbance near the New London Community Center late Monday night.

At 9:30 p.m., a group of 15 to 18 year olds, armed with sticks, invaded the New London Community Center, where a group of black teens was playing pool in the basement, and a group of dancers was attending class on the second floor, said Newark Police Chief William Brierley.

Grass-cutting neighbors get their reward

Newark city council recently declared a parcel of city-owned land as surplus and agreed to sell it to landowners in the adjoining properties.

At the June 26 council meeting, city manager Carl Luft stated that city officials had determined that the property was owned by the city of Newark but never maintained by them in any way.

The owners of the adjoining properties had maintained the land for 40 years and for this reason it was recommended that the parcel be offered for sale to them rather than the public-at-large.

Make reading part of the joy of summer

By MARY ANN PRY

GUEST COLUMNIST

Summer is a great time to read. It keeps your children learning and thinking and it's fun, too.

Why the extra emphasis on reading? Teachers are troubled by a slight but persistent decline in the number of older children who read for fun.

A recent national study reported that only one-third of 13-year-olds read for pleasure every day. That's not good news, especially when reading is critical for school success. For more information on reading news, home activities, and reading resources, I invite you to check out www.nea.org/readingmatters.

So how do you make reading part of the joy of summer? First of all, schedule time for it. We make time for swimming lessons, ball games and our favorite TV shows. So, make time for reading, too.

Consider holding a family "Drop Everything and Read" time. Turn off the TV, let the phone machine take calls and everybody pick up a book, magazine or newspaper. Make it a summer tradition you can keep all year.

Be sure to visit the library. There's certain to be a summer reading program chock full of fun at your nearest library.

Get books your kids like. If you want your children to enjoy reading, we must make it fun. Kids read with more relish when they choose their own books.

For middle-school children, often tough to please, hone in on subjects which interest them — fashion, fast cars, skateboards, video games, movie stars. Ask your child's teacher for recommended books, subjects and ideas to stress.

Don't get too fussy. Even if you child prefers "junk" at first, he's still building skills. Comic books can be excellent for reluctant readers. Take care to choose books at your child's recreational reading level — slightly below his "instructional," or learning, level.

For TV addicts, get tie in books. Books, magazines or comic books tied to popular TV shows or movies can spark interest in reading.

Read to your kids, even when they're reading on their own. Read short stories to each other or alternate chapters of a bigger book. You'll be building reading skills... and memories.

Fill your home with inviting things to read. An intriguing magazine article folded open on the bathroom sink, a couple of joke books on the kitchen table, or a travel book about a planned vacation can spark reading and discussions.

For middle-schoolers, help them with books on the issues they face — the changes of puberty, drugs, peer pressure.

Let your child buy a book. For a special treat, visit a bookstore and let your child choose a paperback or children's magazine. Magazine subscriptions make great gifts.

Involve your children in activities that require reading. Try projects where your child must read directions — cooking, crafts, art projects. Even an excursion through the TV Guide includes reading lessons.

Set some limits on TV viewing. Television is the greedy thief of the time your child might better spend reading.

Be sure your kids see you read. The most important thing you can do to encourage your children to read is to share your own love of reading.

Remember discovering Charlotte's Web, Ramona the Pest or A Wrinkle in Time? When you share them with your children, you'll again experience the profound ideas, vivid characters, humor and warmth you loved when you first explored these masterpieces.

Dream becomes reality for Bear author, illustrator

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Bear resident Paul Foley has been reading suspense thrillers by Stephen King and Dean Koontz and thinking up his own thriller stories since he was a kid. His first novel, "A Slice of Heaven," came out this June.

When Foley, age 43, decided it was time to give writing one a try last year, he told his wife, Barbara, who helped him get set up on the computer. "I had no idea what to expect when I started writing," he said.

Foley's sister Margaret Burt helped him with grammatical issues and reading the story. In fact most of Foley's family read it during the writing process, pulling it directly off the printer four or five pages at a time. "They would grab it and read it. Foley said, 'They loved it.'"

Foley said he knew the ending to his book about 10 or 15 pages after he started. Like many writers, Foley felt his characters come alive and he even allowed things to occur which he had not planned. He even found a place to include one of his recurring childhood nightmares.

Foley wrote every day for nine months on the side of his full-time job drilling water wells for the Walton Corporation. That was the easy part. He did not know how challenging it would be to get his book published and distributed.

After six months with an agent trying to sell his book to big name publishers, Foley decided to go with a print-on-demand company, Xlibris Corporation which allows authors to publish themselves. "It seemed to be a real labor of love for him," said Tom Grech of Xlibris.

Foley found an artist for the cover design in the yellow pages. Bear resident Ara Atkinson-Skinner, a corporate graphic designer for W.L. Gore &

Associates Inc., had also started her own business called Lizard Creek Design about two years ago.

"I really wanted to stay local," Foley said. "I've lived here all my life. I love Delaware."

Already with a cover design in mind, Foley called Atkinson-Skinner and discovered she lived just down the road.

Atkinson-Skinner began working with Foley's cover idea, and also read the book for her own ideas. "He had a really good original idea. I just enhanced that," she said. "I made some changes that I thought would represent his idea more."

One of those additions was the ghost-like woman's form on the back of the book. She also took photographs of his father's World War I bayonet and a hunting knife to use on the cover. "She made some great additions, but it was still what I had pictured," Foley said.

Atkinson-Skinner's first published book cover was an exciting project for her. "It was something different from what I do every day," she said.

Borders Books already has the book on its local interest shelf and Foley has been trying to make a deal with Walden Books at Christiana Mall also.

"Delaware does stand by its own," he said. "If you lived in L.A. you're not going to get this kind of backing."

Then why was his first book set in L.A.? "It wasn't a good fit for Delaware," he said.

But, Delaware definitely will be included in his next book already named, "The Gift of Sight."

"A Slice of Heaven" is available for purchase at Borders Books, Amazon.com, online at www.xlibris.com/asliceofheaven.html or call 1-888-795-4274.

Foley and Atkinson-Skinner will sign books at Borders Books in Churchman's Crossing on Aug. 6.

Welsh running for state senate

Paul Welsh announced he is running for a seat in the state senate. Welsh will face State Senator David Sokola (D-Newark), who has served in the General Assembly for 10 years.

"My campaign is about open and accountable state government that delivers real solutions to the challenges facing our families and communities," Welsh said. "It's time to deliver safe and up-to-date roads where needed, and it's time to deliver modern neighborhood schools that offer our children a quality education."

Welsh said fundamentals have been neglected. "It's time to catch up and make things right."

Welsh is vice president of the Lambeth Riding Home Owners Association.

A Republican, he recently retired as partner from a major Delaware law firm. He is married to a former teacher who now serves on the board of Cab Calloway School of the Arts. They have two grown daughters.

Rep. Lofink seeking re-election

State Representative Vincent A. Lofink (R-Carvel Farms) of the 27th District will run for re-election to a sixth term.

Lofink is a member of the Joint Capital Appropriations (Bond Bill) Committee.

He is also vice chairman of the Land Use Committee; and a member of the Transportation; Labor, Gaming and Parimutuels; and Desegregation committees.

Lofink was the primary House sponsor of Senate Bill 280 which restricted the location of incinerators throughout the state, as well as lead sponsor of dam safety legislation which remains pending in the Senate.

"House Bill 669 is an extension of local concerns over drainage and stormwater management issues in Pencader Hundred," he said.

In addition, as a member of the Nursing Home Task Force, he sponsored legislation to expand the definition of nursing home abuse, and to reform nursing home procedures and policies.

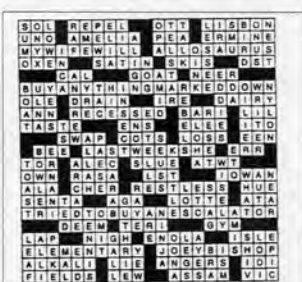

A native Delawarean, Lofink is a member of St. Margaret's Catholic Church in Glasgow.

NEWARK OUTLOOK

Trampolines: Fun but Risky

While driving around Newark, I've noticed that many backyards have become playgrounds for trampolines, which are a great way for families to mix exercise and fun. However, trampolines introduce a risk that you may not have thought about to your family's well-being.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) estimates that in 1996, 83,000 hospital emergency room-treated injuries were associated with trampolines. Almost all of the injuries attributed to trampolines occurred at private homes, usually in backyards.

About 75 percent of victims of trampoline injuries were under 15. Even more alarming, 10 percent were under 5 years of age. According to CPSC reports, since 1990, 6 deaths are directly linked to trampolines. Most of the injuries were on full-sized trampolines.

These injuries and deaths were caused by:

- colliding with another person on the trampoline;
- landing improperly while doing stunts on the trampoline;
- falling or jumping off the trampoline; and
- falling on the trampoline springs or frame.

Because the use of trampolines for at-home recreation has increased, the CPSC is alerting parents about the dangers and precautions.

Adults can ensure safer play by always supervising children while they are on the trampoline. Other steps adults can take to prevent serious injuries, such as sprains and fractures, are:

- allow only one person on the trampoline at a time;
- do not allow somersaults to be performed;
- make sure trampolines have shock-absorbing pads that completely cover the springs, hooks and frame;
- place the trampoline away from other structures;
- do not use a ladder with the trampoline. A ladder provides unsupervised access by small children; and
- do not allow children under 6 years of age on a full-size trampoline.

While trampolines can provide old-fashioned fun in your own backyard, take the time to make certain the activity stays safe. To report a hazardous product or product-related injury, call the CPSC toll-free hotline at 1-800-638-2772.

This is strictly for the birds

Summer on the lookout for pink-painted egrets

By KATY CIAMARICONE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

For five young researchers living in Delaware for the summer, Pea Patch Island is strictly for the birds.

The team from the Manomet Center for Conservation Studies, a non-profit organization based in Massachusetts, want to see what must be done to help local bird species that are on the decline.

Teammembers are living in a house just outside Lums Pond State Park while they conduct surveys at the island off Delaware's coast.

"We are here to monitor birds' health on the heron colony to determine why some species are doing well and others are doing not-so-well," said Jan Yacabucci, assistant manager for the four-month project.

Many local residents are unaware that the island is not only a historical landmark and the site of Fort Delaware, but also a warm-weather home to seven major bird species, including great egrets, cattle egrets, yellow crown night herons and black crown night herons.

The Pea Patch Island heronry is the largest on the Atlantic Coast north of Florida. It is a designated nature preserve, managed by the Division of Parks and Recreation, where between 5,000 and 12,000 breeding pairs settle down each year.

"Heron are highly visible birds, meaning they like to be in a living situation where they can see others of their kind," said Beverly Prosseda, who graduated from the University of Delaware earlier this year. "They thrive in noisy, crowded areas, and they have found a perfect home on the island because it is a series of open spaces that are surrounded by trees."

The researchers take a ferry to the island several times each week. There, they monitor specific wetland sectors of the island and determine which wetlands are used by which species of birds.

"We watch to see how many birds fly from a specific sector of the colony to another," Prosseda said. "This way, we can find out where they are foraging and determine whether their diet is causing some species to have a greater death rate than others."

Manomet researchers recently conducted a census of cattle egrets and results showed that the population has decreased since 1993. Though the reason for this decline is, so far, up in the air, scientists believe that a prime suspect is the food the birds are eating, said researcher Nathan Farnau.

The group previously took blood samples from selected bird species in hopes of finding a link between chemicals in the blood samples and chemicals that exist in agricultural fields and wetlands where the birds forage. If specific organophosphates are found in the blood samples once the results are in, Farnau said, then the researchers can conclusively say that the birds are eating fish and insects that have been exposed to deadly chemicals.

Then, wildlife conservationists can determine what proper action must be taken to decrease the death rate.

The group is also conducting a related cattle egret survey in which 30 of the birds were tagged with radio transmitters and dyed reddish-pink. Officials from the center have sent notice of the study to local residents, asking them to call if they see the pink birds flying near or foraging on their land.

Some of the researchers are also scouring the area from airplanes to look for the brightly-colored birds. "We are up in the air two times a week," said Brian Hiller. "We go up in a four-seat, small craft, and fly from Dover up the Delaware side of the Delaware River to Pea Patch Island, then circle and listen for radio signals from tagged birds through antennas on either side of the airplane wing."

Once they have contact with a tagged bird, or landowners call and say they have seen one on their property, the team can take soil samples from land where the birds were spotted and determine whether it contains the harmful chemicals, he said.

If you see a medium-sized, usually white bird which has been painted pink, you may not be hallucinating. Record the date, time and bird's location where spotted, and contact Stephanie Schmidt at Schmidts@manomet.org.

POST GAME

UD does efficient job in hiring Henderson

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The University of Delaware was quick and efficient in selecting former Duke assistant coach David Henderson as its new men's basketball coach.

As with any important decision there was some second guessing that came with the decision. However, it was quick and very mild compared to what other schools have gone through recently.

The fact is, UD President, David Roselle, and Athletic Director Edgar Johnson did a good job of identifying some quality candidates and then selecting one. It helps that the Delaware job has blossomed into a fairly high profile one. One ESPN report called it the top mid-major job on the East coast. That's pretty amazing when you think about it.

I also believe that Roselle did the right thing in looking for assistants at top programs. In addition to Henderson, Florida's John Pelphrey, Indiana's Mike Davis and Boston College's Tim O'Shea were interviewed.

Moving quickly was also a good idea. Taking a long time and interviewing more people may sound like a nice thing on the surface. However, the longer the decision took, the longer the players would be in limbo. The longer the new recruits would have second thoughts.

Delaware handled this very well. Roselle knew he had a successful formula with Mike Brey and tried to duplicate it. David Henderson is from a very successful program at Duke, learned a great coach in Mike Krzyzewski and is personable like Brey.

Now, all Henderson has to do is win.

But he will also need time. Brey did not win over night. And Henderson, with six seniors gone from last year's 24-8 team, will have his work cut out for him to win big right away. He does, however, have the benefit of a great recruiting class and some highly touted transfers.

Now he has to get all those people used to him and his system.

Interest in Delaware basketball is at an all-time high. Season tickets are sold out. Fans flock to big away games. This decision will do nothing in the short run to temper that enthusiasm.

While there are obvious similarities between Brey and Henderson, it wouldn't be fair to expect the new coach to be like the old one.

Henderson will have his own style, his own personality and his own way of doing things. Media and fans alike became spoiled with Brey. There will be an adjustment for everyone.

I do believe one of the reasons Roselle thought so highly of Henderson was because — in addition to his basketball and coaching experience — of his personality. That will definitely be

Hens hire Henderson

Former Duke assistant to follow Brey

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The University of Delaware wasted no time in replacing Mike Brey as men's basketball coach.

One week after Brey departed for Notre Dame, Delaware introduced David Henderson as the Blue Hens' next coach. Henderson was a three-year assistant at Duke under Mike Krzyzewski. He also played at Duke, co-captaining the 1986 Final Four team. Henderson, 36, continued his playing career professionally, playing in the Continental Basketball Association, the NBA (Philadelphia) and then in Europe.

"Coach Henderson is highly respected in collegiate coaching circles and has been identified as a rising star," said Athletic Director Edgar Johnson. "He comes to us highly recommended and it was obvious to us that he had all the qualities and abilities needed to help our basketball program continue to grow and flourish. We are very pleased he agreed to join us."

Henderson inherits a program that lost six seniors from last season's 24-8 NIT team but will get three transfers and potentially the best freshman class Delaware has ever had.

"I am excited about being part of the University of Delaware," Henderson said. "After interviewing with President Roselle, Edgar Johnson and Mary Ann Hitchens, there was not a decision for me to make. I had already chosen Delaware and was hoping they would choose me."

Delaware has become a perennial winner in the America East conference. Brey posted a 99-52 record in his five years at Delaware. That included two trips to the NCAA Tournament and the NIT bid.

"I love to win," Henderson said. "That's all I know how to do. I got started under a great coach and have always been very passionate about basketball."

"I've been fortunate to see Delaware at one of the regionals we were at. I know they have great support from their fans. This school and the fans really support the basketball team and I love that."

Henderson, like Brey and Krzyzewski, says defense is the key to winning and he also plans to run an up-tempo motion offense.

"I am excited for David, but I am more excited for University of Delaware basketball fans," Brey said in a university release. "David is a great fit and will certainly continue the UD basketball program's success."

Newark National Seniors win District 2 crown

Will try to defend state title this weekend

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It wasn't as easy as many predicted, but Newark National finally captured its second straight District 2 Senior Division Baseball championship Sunday afternoon at the Canal Little League complex.

Newark National, after losing Saturday night to force Sunday's tilt, defeated a game Canal team 13-8 to advance to the state tournament, which began Wednesday night at the Midway Little League complex.

Defending district and state champion Newark National has a team comprised mostly of the same 16 year-olds who went to the Eastern Regional last year as 15s. It came into the district tournament as a heavy favorite but was pushed to the limit by a Canal team that was entirely made up of 15 year-olds.

"I think it helped us to lose a game to a good team," said Newark National manager Dick Vitek. "It made us a little hungrier and let these guys know that they're not going to win by just showing up and throwing their gloves on the field."

Newark National scored five runs in the sixth inning to stretch its lead to 9-1. Canal, however, answered with five runs of its own in the bottom of the sixth to pull within striking distance.

The winners, buoyed by back-to-back home runs by R.T. Plumsy and Mark Rash, came back with four more runs in the top of the seventh to seal the victory.

In addition to those home runs, Rash and Plumsy were heavy contributors to the victory.

Plumsy pitched six innings and earned the victory. He also scored twice. Rash pitched the seventh inning and reached base and scored all five times he batted.

"That Rash is something else," said Canal coach Ernie Spence. "He is phenomenal."

Tim Doherty and Andrew Swarter also blasted home runs for Newark National, who benefited from playing with the relatively short 300-foot fence at Canal as opposed to the bigger dimensions of Frawley Stadium Saturday.

"Yeah, we knew that's an advantage to us," said Plumsy of the smaller field. "Really, some of those home runs were just pop ups that went out of here."

Newark National also proved it could do the little things right as well.

"We hit the home runs late," Vitek said. "But we played small ball to get the lead. We advanced runners, stole bases and played smart baseball. It's the kind of game I thought we would have played on the bigger field, but we didn't do it. I was glad to see we did them [Sunday]."

Newark National took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Brandon Farmer singled and eventually scored on Swarter's ground ball. Rash also scored as Ryan Thompson drew a bases loaded walk.

Canal's Sean Joyce ripped a home run over the left-center field fence in the second inning to cut the lead to 2-1.

Rash, who singled, scored another run for National in the third as Thompson picked up his second RBI with a single. Rash

National Juniors fall to Canal

Controversial ending to a great series

By MARTY VALANIA
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It was fitting that the District 2 Junior Baseball Division championship between Canal and Newark National came down to the last inning of the final game. The two teams split their first two meetings — one of them an extra-inning affair — and now it was down to a third and deciding nail biter.

Canal held a two-run lead with

Newark National batting in the bottom of the seventh inning. There were two outs and bases were loaded. Butch Covey hit a blooper over the pitcher's head that bounded toward second base. Canal second baseman Mike Mundy charged in to make a play on the ball. Newark National runner Justin Bittner was on first base trying to get to second base. The two collided on the edge of the infield grass before second base. After a discussion between the umpires, Bittner was charged with interference and ruled out.

It was the third out of the inning, the game was over, the tournament was over.

Canal won 4-2 and advanced to the state tournament, which begins Saturday night in Millsboro.

The ending, however, caused a bit of controversy with Newark National protesting the ruling. A call was placed to Little League's Eastern Regional headquarters in Bristol, Conn. where the umpires' decision was upheld.

Newark National manager Rick Ellis, upset with the call, held back comment on the ruling. "It's difficult," he said of losing in such a tough way. "But this team showed something, coming back to force this game and then battling down to the last out. This is a true championship team."

For Canal, the final out sparked a celebration of its district title.

"It was a great series," said Canal manager Jody Lewis. "You

Newark American 13s win District 2 championship

The Newark American 13 year-old All-Star team came out of the loser's bracket to defeat Brandywine twice and capture the District 2 championship.

Danny Ryan pitched into the sixth inning and Eli Turkel finished up as Newark American beat Brandywine 6-1 in the deciding game.

Chase Darden scored two runs and had three runs-batted-in to help lead the offense. Ryan and Mike Ingram contributed two hits apiece.

Catcher Evan Walker had a strong game and tournament behind the plate, throwing out potential base stealers.

"This was just a great group to coach," said Newark American manager Jimmy Darden. "The kids did a great job and we really got great support from all the parents and many other families in the league."

Turkel pitched a complete game five hitter with nine strikeouts to give Newark a 3-0 win over Brandywine and force the final game. Walker and Darden scored in the first inning to get Newark off to a good start. Walker and Turkel had two hits each while Ryan Maggioli and Mike Pace also had hits.

Newark American won six of the seven games it played in the tournament, most of them tight contests.

The tournament began with a 1-0 victory over Newark National. Turkel pitched a two-hitter and Rory Barczewski drove in Pat O'Donnell in the bottom of the sixth inning for the game's only run. Justin Newhard made a big running catch in the sixth to preserve the win.

"That was a big win for us," Darden said. "It was Newark National that knocked us out of the tournament last year when these boys were 12. That was a great way to get started."

After its win over National, American topped Canal 5-3. Michael Cooper and Ryan pitched for American, combining for nine strikeouts. O'Donnell had three hits to lead the offense.

The next game, Darden thought, was the turning point in the tournament. Trailing 7-1 in the third inning against Naamans, Newark American fought back to earn a 10-8 extra-inning victory.

"You could just feel it and see it in their eyes," Darden said. "I could tell from that point on they really wanted to win this tournament."

Turkel and Ingram combined to shut down Naamans over the last five innings as the offense mounted its comeback. Pace drove in the tying run in the fifth inning. Darden had two hits and scored three runs to help lead the offense.

Newark fell to Brandywine 4-3 in the winner's bracket final, setting up another game with Newark National.

Barczewski, who had the game-winning hit against National in the opener, again got the game-winner in the bottom of the sixth to give American a 6-5 victory. Turkel had four hits while O'Donnell and Darden each had three.

The win set up the final two games against Brandywine.

"Everybody was a part of this championship," Darden said. "Everybody on the team came up with big plays."

Barczewski, Chase Darden, Jeff Carr and Mike Pace.

Darden was assisted by Harry Cooper, Mike Newhard, Mark Barczewski and Vic Maggioli Sr.

again scored in the fifth as Eric Spiese plated him with a sacrifice fly.

Doherty's and Swarter's home runs were the key blows in the five-run sixth inning that also saw Mike Booth, Plumsky and Rash score.

Canal's five run sixth-inning began with Mike Potts hitting a home run. Bubba Sattaman singled and scored, Ryan Buckland doubled and scored, Joyce walked and scored and Matt Pettinato singled and scored. Billy Harris also had a run-scoring single.

Kyle Cannon hit a two-run home run in the seventh inning to draw Canal within 13-8.

"I never thought this team would be able to get this far," Spence said. "They're all 15 and every other team has 16 year-olds. I'm real proud of these guys. They did a great job and did a great job against a very good team."

National majors edged by Capitol

Newark National's Cody Vantrese pitched a three-hitter but the Capitol Major All-Stars were able to hold on for a 3-2 victory Thursday evening at Newark American's Little League field.

The loss, combined with their first-round 3-1 loss to Naamans, knocked the Newark National All-Stars out of the District 2 Major Division Tournament.

Trailing 3-0 entering the sixth inning, National made a last-ditch rally.

Robert Van Heest started the inning by reaching first base safely on a hard hit ground ball up the middle. Ronnie Eckert followed with a double down the right field line to score Van Heest. Two batters later Eckert, who moved to third base on a passed ball, scored on Ben Farley's sacrifice fly to left field.

Capitol pitcher Ritchie Shuler, however, was able to end the threat and preserve the victory. Shuler allowed just three Newark National hits.

Capitol took a 1-0 lead in the third inning as Nick Saienni scored on a first-and-third double steal. Vantrese's throw to shortstop Eckert was nearly in time to get the runner, who delayed stole from first, but the runner was ruled safe and Saienni was able to scamper home from third.

Capitol tacked on two more runs in the fourth inning behind Steve Latham's double and Jeff Kaczmarczyk's walk.

Vantrese limited Capitol to just three hits and struck out three.

have to take your hat off to [Newark National]. That's a team that never quit. They kept battling us. They're a great team.

"I know how it feels to finish second in these tournaments. I've done it twice with many of these same kids. I know it hurts."

"But I'm proud of my guys too. They did a great job of coming back [Sunday after losing Saturday]."

Canal pitcher Rich Lewis gave up just five hits and picked up his second win over Newark National and third win of the tournament.

"He wanted it out there," said Jody Lewis of his pitcher and son. "He was able to get the job done."

Canal took a 1-0 lead in the third inning when Tom Moffa walked, stole second, advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored Mundy's ground ball.

Newark tied the score in the bottom of the third when Adam Verrill tripled home Pat Dempsey.

Canal struck for two runs in the fifth inning to take a 3-1 lead. Nick Pruitt, Moffa and Mundy all singled to load the bases. Chris Lewis then drew a walk to drive in Kevin Murphy (who entered the game to run for Pruitt) and Rich Lewis walked to plate Moffa.

Newark National answered with one run in the bottom of the fifth as Mark Agnew scored on Bittner's ground ball.

Canal tacked on another run in the sixth inning when Murphy doubled home Ryan Walsh.

"Kevin Murphy had a big hit for us," said Lewis. "He came through as did Tom Moffa. He had a hit and scored twice for us."

National pitcher Justin Bittner also pitched a strong game giving up just five hits and striking out nine. Bittner's effort came on the heels of a five-inning stint just three days earlier.

"That boy did a great job,"

Lewis said of Bittner. "He threw a lot of pitches on Thursday and then came back and was still throwing hard against us. He was amazing."

Sunday's deciding game was forced when Newark National rallied from a six-run deficit Saturday to win 8-7 in eight innings.

National scored three times in the sixth inning to tie the game as Agnew had a two-run single and Ellis had an RBI-single. Newark scored the winning run in the eighth inning when Ellis knocked home Dempsey with a single to right field.

"I thought we had it turned around," Ellis said of Saturday's comeback. "I thought that would carry us into [Sunday]. We were right there and had a chance to win."

National defeated Suburban 26-13 Thursday to advance to Saturday's contest. Bittner hit three home runs in that game while Kevin Ellis and Eric Trent both hit grand slams.

an asset — especially coming on the heels of Brey. It would have been much more difficult for somebody that is not as dynamic as Henderson.

Questions arose and people worried when Brey took the Notre Dame job.

The university's process and the ensuing hiring of David Henderson should go a long way in keeping the program headed in the right direction.

CRYSTAL CLEANING

June 28, 2000

Dear Sir:

I am pleased to let you all know how happy I am with the display ad done in the 2000 edition of The Big Blue Book. Not only was the sales staff more than willing to accommodate my needs, but also they were willing to meet me at my convenience.

Upon inquiry to new clients as to where they located Crystal Cleaning, overwhelmingly the response was from The Big Blue Book produced by Chesapeake Directories. New clients were asked as to why they used The Big Blue Book, and they responded that The Big Blue Book had larger print to read, it was easier to find businesses within the yellow pages, and it was inclusive.

In just a few short months since our ad has come out in The Big Blue Book, my professional cleaning business has tripled in volume. Thanks Chesapeake Directories for producing The Big Blue Book.

CHS student wins $500

Christiana High School student Beth Wheeler was the local grand prize winner of a $500 scholarship in Comcast of New Castle County and American Movie Classics' "Behind the Screen Test" talent search. Christiana High School also received a new VCR courtesy of Comcast and AMC. The contest, which was open to all high school students in the Comcast of New Castle County service area, was inspired by AMC's weekly series, "AMC Behind the Screen," which takes viewers behind the movies to explore the lifestyles, fashions and attitudes of both classic and contemporary Hollywood.

The contest called for high school students to submit video presentations which highlighted the student's talent, charisma and overall performance. Entries were judged by a panel of Hollywood-based entertainment professionals, including actors, managers and agents, to determine the winning entry from each local community.

Bunions are more than unsightly. They are potentially crippling structural foot deformities that appear at the first joint of the great toe. Initially they cause sensations of burning, tingling and numbness and in time can lead to chronic pain from bursitis and degenerative arthritis. Often genetic in origin, bunions commonly plague people with flat feet, but no one is immune—even children can have them!

If you are one of the six out of every 100 Americans who has bunions, you probably know it. They are hard to ignore. The good news is, with proper intervention in the early stages, bunions can be halted and corrected before serious damage occurs. At the Advanced Foot and Ankle Center, Doctors Raymond A. DiPietro, Jr. and Linda L. Lawton employ the most advanced techniques to treat bunion deformities. When surgical intervention is required, they use state-of-the art, patient-friendly procedures to realign the position and restore proper function of the great-toe joint. By targeting and correcting the root cause of the bunion, patients experience real and sustained pain relief.

To learn more about the latest advancements in the treatment of bunions and other common foot disorders, or to schedule an appointment, call the Advanced Foot and Ankle center today.
