FASHION!

by Bruce Johnson

Changing as often as the seasons, swinging back and forth between styles, fashion is a whirlwind industry of constant metamorphosis.

Yet, one aspect of fashion remains constant — it always depicts the mood of the day. Historians can search the past and describe the atmosphere and attitudes of the times by the trends and styles worn by the citizens.

The ethics of Puritan society, for instance, can be seen in the high collars, long skirts and head coverings worn by women.

In the roaring twenties, a far cry from the days of Miles Standish, the times were raucous, happy, and prosperous. Short skirts and elegant styles reflected the period.

In the Forties, following depression and global conflict, styles were conservative and structured. The volatile sixties saw people break away from order. There was revolution in the streets and it included Seventh Avenue.

But what about the present? What do today's styles suggest about our society? What is considered the Eighties look?

Today's fashion is a product of past eras. As the world changes so have the attitudes of society.

In America, people have become very independent, demanding choices to satisfy individual needs. Today's fashion reflects that atmosphere.

"The big thing is freedom," said Lem Taylor, president of the University Modeling Association. "People don't look the same. Fashion offers a lot of freedom, so nothing is really out of fashion."

"Fashion allows individuality. You can alter or shape a garment to form fashionable aspects and make a statement. You can stay in normal lines and still try something new and different."

Newark police angry

by Bruce Johnson

Seven months after the Newark police contract expired, Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 4 and the City of Newark still have not reached agreement on a new contract for 1985.

The old contract expired in December 1984 and negotiations have been under way since September 1984. Police say it does not appear a new contract will be signed any time soon.

The FOP and the city have reached impasse, according to police officers Jay Galloway and Jim Weldin.

The officers said the city government believes the Newark police force is comparable to that in Dover and that police should be paid accordingly.

However, the officers believe that pay is inadequate given the type of work required in Newark.

"We feel that we should be compared to the New Castle county police because we do the same kind of work," said Weldin who is a member of the FOP negotiating team. "We're dealing with the same type of people and the same work load."

He said an average of 60,000 cars enter Newark each day, adding, "Newark is the place to go to raise hell. Everyone comes here. People aren't going to go to Elsmere."

According to the officers, the city governments of Dover and Smyrna funded research studies to resolve similar disputes. The findings suggested substantial raises for the police departments, which the city governments granted.

The City of Newark has offered to fund a similar study but the officers believe it will result in inadequate pay increases.

"The city will give us a 3.5 percent raise in 1985 with retroactive pay," said Galloway. "Then 4 percent in 1986 and 1987, but take some Blue Cross concessions. Then they will have a study done on our salaries, but the FOP will have no input and once the study is completed we will have no input to accept or deny. To me, that's ridiculous."

This includes riding westbound on Main Street and eastbound on Delaware Avenue.

Corrections

Michelle Walsh of Hodgson Vocational Technical School was not included in the list of Vocational Industrial Clubs of America winners published in the July 17 issue. She won a certificate of merit for dental lab work in the national VICA contest.

Steve Shortledge, who got the game-winning hit as the Indians defeated the Padres in the Newark National Little League minor league championship, was incorrectly identified in the July 17 issue.

Rick Colbert

City horticulturist likes Newark, enjoys keeping traffic islands in bloom

by Colleen Sheehan

What do you do when you come to a traffic light? You switch the station on the radio, maybe brush your hair. You look out of the window and wait for the light to change, but do you ever really notice?

At nearly every traffic light in Newark there is a miniature garden. Many people drive right by and don't even stop to smell the marigolds.

Rick Colbert has been planting and smelling the marigolds for the past seven years. Colbert is Newark's city horticulturist. He was the first horticulturist to be hired by the city and works for the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Colbert is a graduate of the University of Delaware, where he studied plant science.

He has always been interested in gardening but wasn't sure exactly where he wanted to go with it when he first started school. He began college with an undeclared major but after taking some horticulture classes knew just what he wanted to do.

"I knew deep down my grandmother always wanted me to do something with gardens," Colbert said. He explained that his grandparents had always loved gardening and that his great-grandfather had been a gardener for one of the Du Pont estates for many years.

Colbert takes a lot of pride in his work and this pride goes right down to his tools. "I even have some of the tools my great grandfather used to use," he said with a smile.

Colbert said his wife and two children also like the outdoors and like to garden. "The kids have their own peas and beans," Colbert said. "They're only one and three years old."

Colbert visits other gardens to get some new ideas for the landscaping he does in Newark. In addition to visiting gardens, Colbert said he enjoys golfing, and said he has a "fair average."

He also likes to refinish furniture when he can find some free time. "There's not too much free time though," he added.

Colbert said he has a pretty good work schedule, working 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. most days, but said that the weather can take its toil. "It's all a frame of mind," said Colbert. "After seven years you just have to develop your thinking to get used to it."

Colbert said he and his assistants, who are largely University of Delaware plant science majors, work outdoors from February 1 through November. During December and January they spend time placing orders and repairing equipment.

He said the crew is most busy in the spring because that is when most of the planting is done. Colbert said his Newark plantings are almost complete and he is trying to achieve an environment that is both esthetically pleasing and easily maintained.

Colbert has received numerous awards for his work. He has also won praise from the many visitors who drive through Newark.

His boss, parks director Jim Hall, said the city gets so many letters of compliment that he jokes Colbert must have relatives all over the country.

Colbert said he likes Newark and enjoys making a contribution to his home town.

He plans to stay and keep the city in bloom for quite a while.

Rick Colbert beautifies his hometown.

FOI

Bill signed

A bill, which strengthens Delaware's Freedom of Information Act became law July 19 when Gov. Michael N. Castle signed the measure in ceremonies held in his Wilmington office.

The bill, sponsored by State Rep. Steve Taylor, R-Heritage Park, limits the ground rules upon which an "executive session" can be called when public business is being discussed by a public body.

After Castle signed the bill, Taylor said to those assembled that Delaware now had an enviable law on its books protecting the right of the citizenry to discuss the public's business in an open forum.

Taylor, in a reference to the Red Clay School Board, was critical of public officials who endeavor to discuss the public's business behind closed doors. And, he said, "The citizens of our open society are entitled to observe their elected officials in the discharge of their duties and to demand accountability from them. The signing of House Bill 246 guarantees a new accountability."

Taylor said when public officials fail to be accountable to those they represent, it is "our right and privilege to correct them. In this way we will keep government free to the people it represents."

Taylor introduced his Freedom of Information bill earlier this year after the Red Clay School Board chose to discuss the topic of student reassignment in executive session instead of in a public forum.

Council land actions

Barksdale rezoning, Marrows annexation pass first reading

by Neil Thomas

Newark City Council voted Monday to approve first reading of bills to rezone land on Barksdale Road and annex and zone land on Marrows Road.

The public hearings and final actions on the proposals will be held during the Aug. 12 council meeting.

Council is considering rezoning a 2.64 acre parcel at the southeast corner of the intersection of Barksdale Road and Casho Mill Road from single-family residential to limited business.

Remo Mazzetti is seeking rezoning to construct a 31,000 square foot rental office building.

Preliminary plans call for 31 office suites to be built in a rectangular configuration around a central parking lot.

The office buildings would be constructed to look similar to townhouses because of the residential nature of the surrounding area.

Rezoning has been recommended by the city Planning Commission.

However, there are some concerns about the proposal.

Patricia Harris of Pickett Lane in nearby Cherry Hill told council she opposes rezoning because it will change the character of the area and increase traffic.

Harris estimated the complex would add 300 cars per day to the intersection.

"I urge you to reject the rezoning application and keep the community residential," she said.

Council also passed first reading of a bill to annex 3.26 acres of land located on the east side of Marrows Road about 1,100 feet from the Ogletown Road intersection.

The land would be zoned general business.

It is owned by Fusco Enterprises and Robert Tolliver Inc., and they have tentative plans for a motel and restaurant.

Annexation and general business zoning has been recommended by the planning commission.

In other action during Monday's meeting, council:

• Voted to offer for sale a .89 acre parcel of land located between Prestwick Farms and Windy Hills. The land will be sold to the highest bidder, with a minimum price of $10,500.

City Manager Peter Marshall said the land is of no value to the city. It is being used by neighbors to dump grass clippings and brush.

Marshall said the land can be sold in one parcel or divided up amongst interested buyers.

• Approved an ordinance to lower sewer charges, which are now in line with rates charged by New Castle County.

• Approved an ordinance to establish a parking meter zone along the south side of Courtney Street east from Academy Street for a distance of 164 feet.

• Awarded a $40,800 contract to Premium Janitorial Service to clean the Municipal Building, Municipal Garage Office and George Wilson Community Center.

• Authorized use of $17,000 in state funds to extend the paving of Briar Lane to the west.

• Reappointed Dr. Charles N. Lanier to the city Personnel Review Committee.

• Honored the late Kenneth C. Lambert for his work with Delaware Social Services, the Newark Area Welfare Committee, the Veterans Administration and the Delaware Chapter of the American Red Cross.

POLICE/from 1a

Mayor William Redd and City Manager Peter Marshall declined to comment while negotiations are still in progress.

According to Galloway and Weldin, one of the problems for Newark police is that the department was one of the highest paid police departments in the state 10 years ago but now it is ranked among the lowest.

Since that time, they said the work load has doubled, complaints have risen 111 percent and arrests 120 percent.

Yet, the police force has decreased by about 8 percent despite requests for more personnel.

According to Galloway and Weldin, the city has a $1.3 million surplus that could be used for pay increases and added personnel, but the city has earmarked that money for emergency use.

"The city has said that it's not a surplus but some extra money for problems that might occur down the road," said Weldin.

"Now I don't know about you, but when I balance my checkbook at the end of the year and I've got money left, that's a surplus."

According to the officers, in the past ten years half of Newark's officers have left to find more lucrative positions, often joining other police departments.

The officers said a New Castle County corporal makes more money than a Newark lieutenant, and a State Police corporal with 13 years experience makes more than the captain of Newark's police force.

That's outrageously inadequate," said Galloway. "A captain runs the police department, the day-to-day activities. A state corporal is out on the road running radar."

Weldin said, "We've got guys who don't take the sergeant's test because their's not enough incentive."

"It's very frustrating," Weldin said. "A rookie state trooper can come out of the police academy and make more than I do with ten years experience. That's a raw rookie right out of school."

According to Galloway and Weldin, 75 percent of Newark's officers are supplementing their income by doing some type of part-time work on the side. Holding down two jobs is causing fatigue, family problems and jeopardizing job performance, they said.

"Police work is an awesome responsibility that we don't take lightly," said Weldin. "We have to make quick decisions and you never know what can happen. We have a lot of close calls. We make decisions that are a matter of life and death, not only ours but others. I don't think the city realizes that."

According to Galloway and Weldin, the department's morale is low and the level of frustration is high.

"Our problem is that we don't have any power to sway their judgment," said Galloway. "They can just say 'no.' We're not able to strike and we wouldn't want to do it even if it was legal. We don't want to leave Newark unprotected."

Neither officer could say when the two sides would reach agreement.

"I really don't know," said Weldin. "You sit there and try to reason with them but you get nowhere. They don't care. They know they are getting excellent police protection. What is going to force their hand?"

Learning Center

GED classes

The New Castle County Learning Center is offering two courses to help adults improve their education.

• General Educational Development classes enable adults to pass the GED examination. GED is a high school equivalency program and students who pass the examination receive a state certificate of endorsement.

• Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) classes prepare adults for entrance examinations at specific skills training programs.

To enroll in Learning Center classes, students must reside in New Castle County, be older than 17, be economically disadvantaged and read at a sixth grade level.

For information, call 368-0318.

Newark Co-op

Limited openings

The Newark Co-operative Preschool has a limited number of openings for students.

The preschool, which is located at 701 S. College Ave. near the Chestnut Hill Road intersection, has also begun an afternoon class for four year olds.

For information, call Kathy Carnes, vice president for admissions, at 731-0407.

Newark Co-operative Preschool has been in existence since 1969. It provides a family preschool experience in requiring that parents take an active role in their children's education.

Rush

Dean's list

Arthur Rush, who recently finished his first year of studies at Widener University's Brandywine College, has been named to the dean's list in recognition of academic achievement for coursework completed during the spring semester.

Rush, who is majoring in management, earned this award by maintaining an academic average of 3.5 to 3.9. He is the son of Mrs. Carol Rush of Newark.

Brandywine College is located on the university's Delaware campus near Wilmington.

Summer school attracting students

"What, me go to summer school? Give up six hours a day of soap operas and Three Stooges reruns to study gerunds and fractions? No way!"

Over the years summer school has gained a bad reputation among fun-worshipping youngsters, but the Christina School District is working to change that.

While the district does offer those old familiar courses, English and mathematics, it also provides students a chance to spend their time exploring music, computers, puppets, astronomy and flying machines.

Enrichment and music courses now stand side by side with make-up and original credit courses.

"The purpose of offering those sorts of courses is to get away from that negative point of view, to give a more positive feeling to the summer school program," says Hellmut Bab, Christina's summer school principal.

"Students used to feel summer school was just for losers. It isn't. Not anymore," he said.

More students realize that, judging by Christina summer school enrollment figures. Enrollment has climbed steadily from 1,091 in 1982 to 1,148 in 1983 and 1,178 in 1984. This year, enrollment hit 1,358.

Christina's program is open to all area students and Bab said there are enrollees from "54 schools in and out of Delaware."

A number of students from local independent schools such as St. Mark's and Caravel Academy are enrolled, as are students from Avon Grove School District in Pennsylvania and Cecil County Public Schools in Maryland.

"And," said Bab, "the last time I looked, we had students from Texas, Alabama and Majorca, Spain." Those students are spending time in Delaware this summer and wanted to keep up with their schoolwork.

Bab said the increase in interest and enrollment can be attributed to three factors. "Part of it is the enrichment program, part of it is a very high level of interest in the music program and part of it is kids just realizing that if they want a high school diploma, they better keep level with everyone else," he said.

The purpose of the summer school program, said Bab is to serve educational and human needs of students.

The educational aspect is obvious. The program offers:

- Remediation courses in reading, writing and arithmetic for grades 1-6.
- Make-up courses in English, mathematics, social studies and science for students in grades 7-8.
- Make-up courses in all required subject areas for students in grades 9-12.
- Courses for state-mandated mastery of basic skills in reading, writing and mathematics for grades 7-12.

• Original credit courses in English for students in grades 10-12 who want to accelerate their studies.

• Driver education courses.

• Enrichment courses and a music program.

But just as important as the educational aspects are the human ones, Bab said.

Enrichment programs "meet an interest the kid has" while make-up courses give "a second chance to kids who were not successful the first time around the horn."

Bab said the Christina administration and school board has been very supportive of the summer school program.

Summer school classes meet in a number of schools, with main programs in Newark High School, Bayard School and Wilson Elementary School. Program chiefs in those schools are Rolando Toccafondi and Dan French at Newark, Marion Gibbs at Bayard and Steve Lee at Wilson.

Summer school employs 54 teachers.

COVER STORY

FASHION/from 1a

"You can do anything now," said Leora Briggs, owner of Tiger Lily, a vintage clothing and jewelry store on Horseshoe Lane in downtown Newark. "There's not a style in the world that you can't wear."

The new independence can best be witnessed on any major artery where people gather. On Main Street, one can see so many various styles that it is nearly impossible to describe one particular outfit as the paramount Eighties look.

But there are several lines of fashion which are considered trendy. The Yuppie, New Wave and the Madonna looks are quite popular.

But do these trends reflect the independent lifestyles of modern America or are they examples of conformity?

"Fashion expresses some type of feeling that you're trying to project," said Don DelCollo, owner of Genre on Main Street and The Gypsy Trader in Newark Mini-Mall.

"People use clothes to identify themselves. Some people wear clothes to conform, to be accepted into traditional roles. It's when people leave the mainstream of fashion that it gets hard," he said.

"People want to be cool or in," said Taylor. "They see Cyndi Lauper and think she's great. Stores start selling reflective lipstick and stuff, and you've got a definite movement."

"Fashion is a big business.

There are subtle ways we express individuality, but we are told what to wear."

A perfect example of current trends or fads is the recent phenomenon with the Madonna look in which loyal fans dress like their idol.

"The Madonna fan is expressing her individuality by expressing the identity of Madonna," said Taylor. "But would she have looked like that five years ago when it wasn't popular?"

But fads are nothing new. Each year new trends arrive forcing old ones out. Whatever happened to designer jeans and the Michael Jackson look?

"The death of a fad comes with saturation of the market," said DelCollo. "It comes in style and gets so big that the major manufacturers flood the market and get into low-end, imitation cheap junk, and it becomes unfashionable."

"I always wonder about something that comes in with a bang and everyone picks up on it," said Del Collo. "My prediction is that it will be around for one more year."

But what do fads say about our culture? Are we independent or is it all a facade?

"The trend is individualistic," said Briggs. "But we have so many choices in our society that we can do anything. All the doors are open to us and no one is going to dictate what we should do."

"People get confused. Back 30 years ago everything was ordered, it was a simple life and very comfortable. With our freedom, we need a sense of belonging and that's why trends are so popular. The fact of being with a group."

As with all businesses, the consumer demands a product and the manufacturers provide it. But fashion has always been cyclical. Even though the designers supplement the customer's needs, the consumer is ultimately affected by the designer's final decisions.

"Fashion styles have been decided two and one-half seasons ahead of time," said Taylor.

"What we are going to wear next year has already been decided and they've begun working on it."

"The market designs styles," said Audrey Boys, public relations director of Christiana Mall's Bamberger's store. "The stores decide what their image will be and the consumer decides what they want through magazines and TV. But the market picks up what the consumer wants from what people on the street are wearing."

What are the people on the street wearing? What will be tomorrow's fashion?

Most people agree that the Sixties style of dress will be the line for the next few seasons.

"The obvious trend is the so-called psychedelia, gawdy rendition of what people classify as the Sixties," said DelCollo. "We just went through a Fifties phase and that's what's kind of happening now with the Sixties, Paisleys and old styles are going to come back."

Boys agrees, and said that consumers can anticipate a return of bell-bottoms, go-go boots, crushed velvets, turtlenecks and mini-skirts.

But, she added, the preppie look will remain big, vintage and classical styles are resurging, and letter sweaters and the varsity look will be popular as well.

Loose fitting clothes, which include a satin "big shirt," promise to be big sellers, Boys said.

As well, stirrup pants and knits will be popular and a new sense of romanticism will return. "In European trends, femininity is the big message," said Boys. "There will be more emphasis on the feminine shape than ever before. There is an overriding emphasis on romanticism and elegance."

"This comes from having a little more financially. The Yuppies are able to afford more and they want more in clothes and detail."

The Sixties trend makes for some interesting speculation, not only about fashion but about society.

Recently, the nation underwent a resurgence of interest in Fifties music and dress. During that time, conservatism and a general atmosphere of "Happy Days" swept America.

But the fabulous Fifties evolved into the psychedelic Sixties. DelCollo suspects "the Sixties thing is going to evolve into a whole new subculture. It is going to pick up momentum and go, sort of like what happened in the Fifties return in which New Wave grew strong."

However, will the trend foreshadow any broader changes in society?

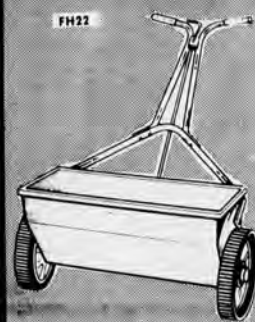

Only time — and fashion — will tell.

The classic look never goes out of style.

Wheels

Drivers needed

In New Castle County there are hundreds of senior citizens who cannot get to the doctor or clinic. Their health care depends on volunteers willing to drive them to their appointments.

The New Castle County Department of Parks and Recreation's program organizes up to 600 such trips a month.

However, more trips and volunteers are needed.

Currently, Wheels has 50 volunteers where 100 are needed. Next year, the program will need even more.

The parks department's Senior Services Division is actively seeking volunteers. The only requirement to be a volunteer is to give two hours of time per month using your automobile.

Wheels has been in operation for 11 years. Since its inception, the older population has grown larger. From 1970 to 1980, the number of people over 60 years of age have increased 50 percent. By 1990, figure is expected to grow another 34 percent.

By 2000, it will increase 47 percent. From 1970 to 1980, the under-60 population increased only 3 percent.

For information, contact the department at 995-7610.

Coin club

Meeting Aug. 12

The Newark Coin Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 12 in the New Castle Engineering Building on Kirkwood Highway at Meadowood.

The meeting will be held in the building's lower level.

There will be a hobby update and free refreshments. Admission is free.

Our house

Troubled youths find refuge in Pike Creek program

by Colleen Sheehan

It looks like an everyday house. A song by "The Doors" plays as four kids sit in the room, listening to the music and talking among themselves. One makes an adjustment to his fishing pole.

But it is not just an everyday house. It's special. It is a rehabilitation treatment center.

Program director Tim McFeeley said the home-like, family-oriented environment of the house in Pike Creek Valley seems to be more conducive to treatment of the young people who live there.

They have some problems, most behavior-related, McFeeley said.

He said he hopes the assistance provided at the center will help steer the youths in the right direction and get them back together with their families.

"It's their house, and we want them to feel that way," said McFeeley. He said many of the residents have "been in the system a long time."

He explained that they have problems with school truancy and relationships with peers and family members. He added that some have minor delinquent records and have had contact with drugs and alcohol.

McFeeley stresses that, with help, these problems can be corrected.

Denise Wunderlick, clinical supervisor at the center, said the main goals of the program are to help the children on individual and group levels with social skills, peer and family relationships, and to understand their own feelings.

She said parents are encouraged to come to the center. They hold family dinners and the youths go home on weekends to work on their family interactions.

When the youths first come to the center, they work out individual goals and contracts with the staff. These contracts vary according to the needs of the individual. The youth accomplishes these goals and by doing so gains privileges.

Each youth begins the program at the entry level and has restricted privileges. As they grow and work toward their goals, things like bedtime and free time are extended.

The youths can earn up to $10 per week in allowance. They can also be fined for bad behavior.

McFeeley said there are certain house rules which must be obeyed.

The children must respect one another's property. They cannot use any physical violence, abusive language or drugs of any kind.

Staff prefers, however, to stress the more positive aspects of the program. They plan group activities and recreational trips, which McFeeley believes are important for peer relations.

The youths go swimming, play volleyball and "use just about everything in the community."

The youths seem to be particularly fond of a program known as "the Chef of the month Club."

"We get to make what ever we want," said one of the youths. "At the end of the week we vote on the best meal and the person who gets the most votes at the end of the month wins. The winner gets to go out for dinner with one of the staff to whatever restaurant they want."

The youths do a lot of their own cooking and nearly all the other chores to keep the house running, according to McFeeley.

They agreed that the center was a nice place to be. One of them said that all the staff were nice and treated them well, but said she wanted to get back to her family. She admitted she was afraid at first about going to the center.

Another said he had only been there a short time but felt the center was a much better place than either Bridge House or Ferris School.

The youths are placed through the state or are voluntarily sent by parents or guardians who are unable to handle them.

This particular facility, located at 112 Upper Pike Creek Road, has been in existence for a little over one year.

"We have our bad moments," said McFeeley. "Don't get me wrong, but a lot of the bad moments turn into good ones."

The staff at the center said they like to concentrate on these good moments and try to build on them. McFeeley emphasized their purpose is to help the youth and to do so by setting good examples.

He said he hopes the youths could grow to develop trust in people so that they will be better equipped to cope in society.

How many ways can you pay for dental services?

By Roy H. Blomquist, D.D.S.

A great concern of many patients is how to pay for quality dental services.

We learned that some patients were even reluctant to ask, and therefore missed the opportunity of a payment plan best suited to their financial life style.

Believe it or not, at Family Dental Center, there are at least six payment methods:

1. Cash or check as treatment proceeds
2. Cash or check before treatment begins (and you save five percent!)
3. Senior Citizen Reward... additional five percent savings on prepaid services or a total of ten percent!
4. Credit Card... the major ones.
5. DDS Credit Plan... based on a bank loan
6. Dental Plan of your company or organization

Just call for your appointment and you're on your way to an affordable dental health program.

Norwegian 4-H'er visits Delaware

For a young woman who speaks three foreign languages, loves traveling and is good at meeting people, the International 4-H Youth Exchange program seems like a natural. Marit Gresseth fills the bill.

The 22-year-old Norwegian recently spent nearly a month in Delaware with the Cliff Moore family of Bear. She will now visit farms in Iowa for three months.

Marit arrived in Delaware on June 19 and spent her first full week at 4-H camp. She is especially interested in American 4-H because she was active in the Falken 4-H club in Norway for seven years, and served as a professional leader.

She says that some camp activities were the same, but the emphasis on group experiences is much greater here. Dividing the Camp Barnes campers into Indian tribes seemed to encourage a sense of cooperation and teamwork that impressed her. She saw the oldest 4-H'ers help the younger ones and join with them in sing-alongs and games that would probably not appeal to older teenagers in Norway.

Norwegian 4-H'ers don't sleep in cabins or eat in a dining hall, either. Campers bring their own tents and provisions and cook meals outdoors. But the friendly spirit is the same both places, Marit says. "Everyone made me feel at home."

Her Delaware hosts, Cliff and Angela Moore, were well qualified to help Marit learn more about American farming and 4-H. Not only have they served as 4-H club leaders, but they've also raised four children who attended 4-H Congress as award winners.

Valerie, age 20, lives at home and enjoyed being Marit's IFYE sister. The daughter of dairy farmers, Marit is anxious to observe dairy farming in the U.S. She visited one operation in Delaware, and hopes to see a variety of others in her travels throughout the country.

Her impression so far of American farms is that they are much larger than those in Norway. A typical Norwegian dairy farm would average 12 to 15 Norwegian red cows — multi-purpose animals well suited to the colder climate there. Equipment may also be bigger here, though it doesn't differ much in style or use from farm machinery in her country.

She watched Cliff Moore shear sheep, and says the procedure in Norway is exactly the same.

Another new cultural experience for Marit in Delaware was shopping at the Christiana Mall. She also spent a day waiting Valerie at the restaurant where she works.

Marit and her hosts camped in a camper near Rehoboth for several days. Although she enjoyed the beach, she says that resort life was not part of the picture of America she had imagined. "I think Norwegians picture America as big and flat, with fields, corn and hogs," she explains. "Maybe it's because most Norwegian immigrants settle in the Midwest and that's the kind of photo they send back."

Marit is taking many slides so that she can give the people at home a more complete picture of the U.S. When she returns to Norway she will present programs on her trip, particularly to the 4-H groups, farmers' organizations and farm machinery companies that helped her with funding. Another condition of her exchange visit is that she write a formal report on American dairy farming and 4-H.

One of the biggest differences she sees between the two countries is that Americans often use cars when Norwegians would walk or bike. Americans eat more in general, and go out to eat far more than Norwegians do. Fast food and the convenience of drive-through restaurants and banks are not part of their lifestyle.

According to Marit, a typical day on a Norwegian farm begins and ends with baking heavy, dark bread. Breakfast consists of fresh bread and "lots of coffee." The family has its hot meal in the middle of the day and eats bread again for supper.

Before coming to Delaware, Marit and three other Norwegian exchangees went to West Virginia to visit an American friend who spent last year in Norway with IFYE. They traveled over much of the state, and she remembers mountains, coal mines, and a national park. Her IFYE orientation was in Washington, D.C.

"Everything I saw there was beautiful," she says, "but my favorite place was the Air and Space Museum."

Marit and another former American IFYE exchangee drove from Delaware to an IFYE conference in Michigan, touring the Great Lakes area and Toronto. Then she was off to Iowa. Following her stay there she hopes to see some of the West, too, before returning home.

Marit left a job in Spain as a guide for a travel company to come to the U.S., and she hopes to continue working in the travel industry. "I like to travel and work at the same time," she says. "And I'd rather talk with people than sit at a typewriter."

Family concerns priority

The 1986 action plan for the United Way of Delaware assigns top priority to programs that strengthen family life, help youth who may get in trouble, provide in-home support for the elderly and handicapped and help the unemployed prepare for jobs.

United Way board chairman Nicholas Pappas announced July 17 that the board had adopted its planning committee's program priorities and assessment of community needs.

United Way allocations and membership committees will be guided by the new priorities program, Pappas said.

In summarizing the priorities for 1986, planning committee chair Imogene B. Geoghegan said the rankings recognize efforts that are most effective in preventing problems and that service the most needy groups.

Geoghegan noted that the needs assessment prepared by her committee is "only the beginning... we need to explore the underlying contributing factors that promote the existence of these problems and take action."

She urged community-wide efforts involving United Way agencies and other private governmental groups.

Input from the general public to the community needs assessment came through the 1985 "Stop the Hurt" survey, in which a random sample of Delawareans chose ten problems they felt were "hurting people the most in their community." Questionnaires were also included in local newspapers.

To provide additional perspective, all United Way agencies and 30 outside groups, governmental and private, were also asked to select the most significant problems.

Geoghegan reported that reviewing the three samples shows some "consensus... about what are the most critical community problems."

Three themes were common in the various samples, Geoghegan said. They are:

• Stress on the family, with particular concern for the problems of single parents.

• Lack of values-building for teenagers, with drug and alcohol abuse, unemployment and pregnancy as prime concerns.

• The inability of elderly and handicapped people to live independently.

Pappas pointed out though funding priorities assigned to some programs have been changed from past years' practice, the changes are few and relatively minor.

"That tells us that we are generally on the right track in evaluating the needs of the community," he said. "But it also reminds us that we have to stay in constant touch to stay right on target."

Teddy bear

A teddy bear tea party was held on Sunday, July 21 at the Nottingham, Pa. Inn. The party was sponsored by the inn and by Claire's Bears and Collectibles of Newark.

The party held lots of events for bear-lovers. There was a bear repair clinic conducted by Thomas Tear of the Bar Harbor Bear Co. In addition to repairs there was also a bearique and a film on the making of Steiff bears.

The highlight of the party was a contest composed of many different categories with many winners for each.

Dianne Scheuer of Wilmington won for the tiniest bear and was followed by Laura Dieffenbach of North East, Md. Pam Czarnotta of Wilmington came in third; Jennifer Dawkins of Bear took fourth; Donna Arning of Elkton was fifth and Jennifer Dawkins of Bear also took sixth.

Felix Cartegena of Newark won the largest bear category. Other winners were Blanche McFall of New Castle, second; Tammy Cox of Nottingham, Pa., third; Nancy Storm of Media, Pa., fourth; Donna Arning of Elkton, fifth; and Eleanor Hoopes of Perryville, Md., sixth.

The best dressed bear was entered by Tammy Cox of Nottingham, Pa. Other snappy dressers were submitted by Juefen Theilker of Wilmington, second; Ellen Grace of Parkside, Pa., third; Katie Faul of North East, fourth; Paula Higgins of Newark, fifth; and Randy Tink of Hockessin, sixth.

Natalie Smith-Briggs of Montville Pa., had the most unusual bear. Other winners were Iris Bellafiore of Unionville, Pa., second; Pam Czarnotta of Wilmington, third; Melissa Lee of Perryville, Md., fourth; Francis Sweet of Havre de Grace, Md., fifth; and Jody Sisson of Wilmington, sixth.

Child care

New program

The Child Care Connection, a new community service, will be developed by the United Way of Delaware.

United Way board chairman, Nicholas Pappas, announced the new resource and referral concept at the July 16 board meeting.

The new program will connect parents and child care providers through data collection, consultation and development of increased child care resources. It is aimed at reducing stress on working parents who find it difficult to make satisfactory day care or after school care arrangements for their children.

For 1985, United Way allocated more than $600,000 to 12 member agencies that provide child care services. These and other community groups will help guide the development of the new service.

Pappas also said that the Du Pont Co. has made a grant of more than $35,500 for the establishment of the new program.

Imogene B. Geoghegan, chair of United Way's planning committee, said United Way and Du Pont identified the community child care need in separate research conducted recently. She said Du Pont will provide leadership and assistance to identify and commit the remainder of community support needed to launch the program.

powder flasks and over 200 powder canisters was prepared and presented by University of Delaware graduate students as part of their course, "Exhibition of Artifacts."

University students learn by copying the Old Masters

If Rubens, the great 17th century Flemish painter, walked into Prof. Hilton Brown's class at the University of Delaware he would find the students trying their best to copy his paintings.

Each would be hunched over an empty canvas next to a printed facsimile of an original, intent on making the two look exactly alike.

Copying, you say? Isn't that a bit unethical, if not illegal? Not in this case—there's a legitimate reason, and besides, Rubens would understand. In fact, he did a bit of copying himself throughout his career.

Imitating the Old Masters is not just a form of flattery; it has been used for centuries by both novices and professional artists as a method to learn and perfect painting skills. What better way to learn how to do it right than to painstakingly reconstruct the "successes" of the past.

Yet these particular students have another reason for making the effort. Many of Brown's students are graduates enrolled in the Winterthur-University of Delaware Program in Conservation of Artistic and Historic Objects sponsored by the Henry Francis du Pont Winterthur Museum and the University of Delaware, where they are studying the craft of preserving and restoring art and historic objects.

Their training also includes classes that take advantage of the university's Ralph Mayer Center for Artists' Techniques, where students gain knowledge of art objects through study of the techniques and materials from which they are made.

So, as they sit there recreating Old Masters, these students are trying to think like Rubens or Vermeer or whomever they have chosen to imitate. The point is not who you imitate, but to understand how an artist worked with particular mediums and tools and then to reconstruct that process.

Eventually, some of these students will apply the skills they have learned to priceless art treasures around the world as museum staff conservators.

"An art conservator needs to know intimately how a work of art was made before he or she can treat it successfully," says Brown, the Ralph and Bena Mayer Professor and coordinator of the Mayer Center.

"By learning to reconstruct, my students become acquainted with the materials and tools that were used in creating the original artwork. Then they can make intelligent decisions on how to treat a painting when a problem occurs."

A responsible conservator does not repaint a work of art he is treating, explains Brown. "There are numerous schools of thought about how a conservator should apply his craft. Some would say that a repair should completely blend in with the original work so that it is indistinguishable; others advocate stabilizing the art object, yet leaving the repaired area visible so the viewer would know what is original work and what has been treated.

"Regardless of the treatment philosophy, the sensitive art conservator must always use materials that are reversible so that the next time the artwork requires treatment, his repairs can be removed without damage to the original."

The Mayer Center offers unique services. Other programs exist in the country that study artists' materials and techniques for the conservation of art objects, but none offers education and research on the materials and techniques for the working artist, providing a focus on the concerns of producer rather than collector.

The center, founded "to provide a service whereby artists can obtain authoritative answers to their questions about technical matters of their craft," honors the late Ralph Mayer, the foremost art technologist and author of the definitive Artist's Handbook of Materials and Techniques, first published in 1940.

The center's information resource center and computerized data file on artists' materials and techniques are based in part on Mayer's accumulated archives, which were donated to the university in 1983 by his widow, New York painter Bena Frank Mayer.

Mrs. Mayer also has made a provision in her estate plans for financial support of the center.

The center's activities are divided into three distinct but interrelated areas within the Winterthur-University of Delaware's graduate art conservation program. An educational program of courses is perhaps the most visible function.

Students are offered classes in Old Master and contemporary materials and techniques, including the study of historic print-making techniques, the manufacture of paper, drawing, egg tempera encaustic, fresco and indirect oil painting. A course about color as pigment, dye, ink and paint is also offered.

In addition, the Mayer Center functions as a collector of information on artists' materials and techniques, which is compiled in a computerized data file for reference by artists, art historians and art conservators.

Finally, the Mayer Center will eventually function as a research unit. The staff plans to study the durability of artists' paints and other art materials for, among other subjects, lightfastness, structural stability, working properties and environmental conditions.

The center's staff works with the artists' materials committee of the American Society for Testing and Materials, a society which writes voluntary commercial standards for the manufacture of artists' materials among many other products produced by American manufacturers.

Women illustrators featured

The Brandywine River Museum will be featuring "America's Great Women Illustrators: 1850 - 1950" in an important exhibition from Sept. 7 through Nov. 24.

More than 70 works on loan from museum and private collections will bring to light examples of 38 of the more influential female artists of the period 1850 - 1950.

Among the prominent artists to be displayed are Alice Barber Stevens, Ellen Bernard Thompson

Pyle, Elizabeth Shippen Green, Violet Oakley, and Sarah Stilwell Weber. The exhibition was organized by the Society of Illustrators of New York City.

"If this exhibition helps to elevate women illustrators to the place they deserve in the history of illustration it will have achieved its purpose," says Art Weithers, director of the Society of Illustrators' Museum.

The era covered by the exhibition begins with Francis Flora (Fanny) Palmer's watercolor painting of The Narrows and New York Harbor for Currier and Ives and ends with appealing illustrations of children by Maud Torrey Fangel.

Also included are Grace Drayton, whose image of Dolly Dingle was later interpreted in the advertising art for the Campbell's soup kids; Rose O'Neill, who gained considerable fame with her illustration of the Kewpies; and Mary Petty, whose marvelous New Yorker covers had a witty style all their own.

Important women illustrators from the Howard Pyle School in Wilmington will also be included in the exhibition. Jessie Wilcox Smith, Bertha Corson Day, Clara Peck and Katherine Pyle created many commissioned works and were in the forefront of illustration trends.

May Wilson Preston and Charlotte Harding, also of this generation, played an important role in the mass market magazines as illustrators of popular styles and fiction.

Jill Bossert, who organized the exhibition, says, "The quality of the art will speak for itself. That all of the works were by women, will be a subtle reminder of their place alongside their male counterparts."

The Brandywine display will be open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults; $1.25 for students, senior citizens, and children 6 to 12. Guided tours can be scheduled in advance. An illustrated catalogue will be available from the Museum Shop.

ENTERTAINMENT

THE ARTS

by Phil Toman

The University of Delaware Summer Theater Season is so many things it is difficult to know where to start writing about it.

I suppose that because "the play's the thing," I should begin with the fine performances these professionals, students at the university and high school students enrolled in the program, bring to us.

That would be enough for any theatergoer, more than enough. However, there is much more.

Each year members of Actors Equity are brought down from New York to work with the young college and high school students. Their role is really to teach by example, to give the younger thespians a chance to work closely with the pros to see how it is done. By the way, they teach their lessons very well.

A good case in point is Rhonda Farer in the first of the works presented, "They're Playing Our Song." Farer came to Delaware in good health and then quickly succumbed to our Delaware climate and came down with a voice problem. No stopping her; she went on despite the problem, gave it all she had and the audience loved her. I did too.

Four of the university students appearing with the summer troupe are Namoi Bailis, who appeared in Spoon River Anthology, An Italian Straw Hat and "Merrily We Roll Along."

Deborah DeHart, a 1976 cum laude grad was back. Barclay Jeffers who did so very well in the same three plays as Bailis joined us. Last, but not least, Robert H. Osborne III, who pleased audiences at Mitchell Hall so well in "The Wake of Jamie Foster," "The Skin of Our Teeth," "Coming Attractions" and "The Comedy of Errors," joined in the fun.

Two others made their university debut. They were Allen Salod and Susan M. Zaleski.

All six of them presented fine performances in both of the summer offerings, "They're Playing Our Song" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Certainly the two works make different demands, but these young people were up to them.

Nine high school students also participated in the plays; they were Kelly Lynn Farmer, Donald A. Graves, Danielle Gribbins, Allison Hedges, John Mingus, Matthew C. Murray, Amy Pinto, Leena Shrivastava and Cathleen Octavia Trigg. I hope we see more of them at Mitchell Hall when they join the university group in regular seasons of the future.

A special tip of the Toman Topper to the professors at the University of Delaware who work to make this all possible; people like Dr. Peter Vagenas, department chairperson, Dr. Dale Hearth, Joseph Patton, Michael Greenwald and Allan Fanjoy. We are in your debt.

Three actors (left) rehearse a scene from Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Barclay Jeffers as Puck (behind) works with high school students Donald Graves and Kelly Lynn Farmer. Professional actors (bottom left) Rhonda Farer and Allen Fitzpatrick have also been working with the students.

Members of the trio are Hal Shene, Brian Nalepka and Steven Katz.

Film

'Passport to Pimlico'

The Delaware Art Museum's English comedy film series will continue on Tuesday, July 30 at 8 p.m. with "Passport to Pimlico".

"Passport to Pimlico," directed by Henry Cornelius, stars Margaret Rutherford, Stanley Holloway, Hermione Baddeley, and Basil Radford.

When a buried antique bomb explodes at Pimlico, it not only creates a huge pile of debris but reveals a charter, buried centuries before in a time capsule stating that Pimlico was always to be a portion of Burgandy, never of England.

The cost of admission is $3 ($2 for museum members) payable at the door. For more information on this and other films in the series, contact the museum's education department, 571-9594.

Follies

Newark couple's business features horse-drawn fun

by Colleen Sheehan

There's a new way to travel down Main Street. It's the old-fashioned way — a horse-drawn carriage.

Ted and Jo Ann Dawson own and operate Fairview Follies, a buggy services similar to the handsome cabs seen riding through Central Park in New York. They rent carriage rides for special occasions.

The Dawsons have been in business since July 1983. "It was Ted's idea," said Jo Ann Dawson. "We had the facilities to keep horses and I've been around them all my life, so we thought we'd try to work up a business."

The Dawson's carriage is nearly booked solid with weddings until October.

Jo Ann explained that it took nearly nine months to find the right carriage. "We didn't have lots of money so we did a lot of looking. Carriages are expensive," she said. "We got an original. It's 100 years old and it still has the same seats in it."

Dawson said they finally found their carriage in Pennsylvania in an Amish man's barn. She said they paid $1,200 for it and, at the time, the carriage was in terrible shape. She said they put a lot of elbow grease into it.

The Dawsons also had to buy a carriage horse. Ted Dawson said that not all horses know how to pull a buggy.

Jo Ann explained that the horse has to be calm and easy to control. She added that it was also important that the horse was used to walking on the street for safety's sake. The horse also has to be shod with special shoes designed for the street.

In addition to be available for weddings, for which the Dawsons charge $125, they also participate in Liberty Day and other area fairs. They give hayrides and pony rides, too.

Jo Ann said she hopes that in the future they might also have a ride that starts out at the Fairview Farm, 1210 Ogletown Road, and runs the distance of Main Street.

She said she thought it might be a nice treat for a special occasion like a birthday or an anniversary.

Ted proposed to his wife in the carriage.

The Dawsons got a lot of business at first by placing their card in bridal salons and from there the business grew by word-of-mouth. Jo Ann said she hopes to find "another dilapidated one" that they could fix up so that they can accommodate more people.

Besides running the carriage service, the Dawsons are full-time farmers. They live on Jo Ann's grandmother's farm, where they raise produce and keep livestock. They have horses, geese, ducks, and more than 100 rabbits.

The Dawsons also take a wagon filled with produce to the Newark Senior Center each week in order to assist the elderly of the community.

Ted graduated from the University of Delaware with a degree in business. Jo Ann modeled for a while in New York but said she's happier on the farm.

"It's nice here," she said. "I got tired of the hustle and bustle of the city and I love this farm."

Ted said, "Now that I'm a full-fledged farmer I'm going to stay one as long as I can."

The Dawsons said they both love the outdoors and the animals. They also said they like the independence they have being their own bosses.

Their lifestyle is not necessarily typical of Newark, and they like it that way.

CAMPUS

Colleges to survey services provided

The Council of Presidents of Delaware's state-supported institutions of higher learning has commissioned a study to assess the educational services provided by Delawareans by Delaware State College, Delaware Technical and Community College and the University of Delaware.

The Task Force to Study State-Supported Higher Education in Delaware was announced July 10 at a press conference in Wilmington by the Council of Presidents, composed of Dr. John A. Kotula, president of DTCC; Dr. Anna I. Mishoe, president of Delaware State College; and Dr. A. Trabandt, president of the University of Delaware.

According to Trabandt, who announced the formation of the task force, "Delaware's three publicly supported postsecondary educational institutions have distinct and appropriately different educational missions. However, the three of us do share a common commitment: a commitment to excellence in providing educational opportunities to the residents of our state."

"Therefore, we have commissioned a task force and have asked the task force to review the programs of the three institutions and to assess how well, with resources provided, we are meeting our stated educational, service and research goals."

Kotula said that the task force "will provide a non-biased, objective evaluation that will guide the design of future College policy to maximize the educational benefits which Delaware Technical and Community College can make available to all Delawareans."

"We not only want to know if we are doing the job, but also, and more importantly, how the job can be done better."

Delaware Technical and Community College "exists to serve the citizens of Delaware by offering day and evening programs to expand and upgrade present skills of students," Kotula said.

As part of the task force's evaluation, he said he would like answers to the questions: "Is the College in step with the constantly changing educational needs in a constantly changing community?" and "Does the College provide courses closely related to the economic realities of the community?"

In light of the recent task force study of public education from kindergarten through grade 12 in Delaware, Mishoe said it is "timely and desirable that the Council of Presidents examine public higher education in Delaware to determine how well we are serving the people and what we should look forward to in terms of future programs and support."

Moreover, he said, "the fact that both Delaware State College are in the final year of implementation of the state's five-year Title VI Plan makes it all the more pressing that we closely examine public higher education in our state as we look beyond 1986."

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 requires states to eliminate all vestiges of segregation in their public higher education systems. In 1981, Delaware was one of seven states named by the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights as having "racially identifiable" institutions of higher learning.

The seven-member task force appointed by the Council of Presidents includes representatives of education, business, government and the professions. Dr. Gordon K. Davies, director of the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia in Richmond, will serve as chairman.

At the press conference, Davies said he was "honored to play a role in this assessment of Delaware's state-supported higher education."

"In the largest of states and the smallest," he said, "these are interesting times for those of us who care about American higher education. Having made noteworthy progress in the last 30 years toward systems of colleges and universities in which there is a place for every woman and man who wants and can benefit from study beyond high school, we find ourselves in the midst of change."

"The number of young people is declining nationally and some colleges and universities must prepare for smaller enrollments. The federal government appears to be retreating from its fundamental commitment to insure that financial need is not a barrier to college-going."

Davies said the task force was being "asked the right questions at the right time," adding: "We shall answer them as well as we are able, hoping that this work will be the start of a constructive discussion about higher education in Delaware."

Millers

Mattresses donated

Four water mattresses, along with specially designed bed linen, have been donated to the Little Sisters of the Poor in Newark by Miller's Furniture and the National Floatation Health Care Foundation.

The waterbeds were donated for use in the Jeanne Jugan residence of the Little Sisters of the Poor on Salem Church Road.

They were presented by Jason Kraft, manager of Miller's University Plaza showroom; Bill Goode, the store's sales manager; and Gary Donohue, manager of the waterbed division of Miller's Furniture.

Waterbeds are important to people such as the aged and infirm who spend a great deal of time in bed because the beds reduce extreme pressure points which contribute to bedsores.

WSFS

Raise $4,352

Delaware's March of Dimes poster child Eric Cake was a recent visitor to the main office of Wilmington Savings Fund Society.

Cake was there to accept a check from WSFS president and chief executive officer J. Walton St. Clair Jr. in the amount of $4,352.01, which represented the total donations collected by WSFS employees who participated in the 1985 WalkAmerica.

The funds will aid the March of Dimes in its fight against birth defects, the nation's number one child health problem.

St. Clair presented the check in the name of the more than 70 WSFS employees who walked 30 kilometers each during WalkAmerica weekend. Also on hand for the presentation was Leo Vadala, WSFS community relations officer, who organized the bank's efforts in the event.

"We're happy to do everything we can to help the March of Dimes in their work," said Vadala. "We, like so many others, hope to see birth defects defeated in our lifetime."

Six-year-old Cake is the son of John and Patricia Cake of Canby Park. As the poster child for the Delaware State March of Dimes, he represents the thousands of children who hope to benefit from research in the cure and prevention of such childhood crippers as muscular dystrophy, cystic fibrosis and spina bifida.

Louviers

Cecelia Jackson, Joanne Watson, Barbara Banks and Rayfield Cornish, known as the "Ladies and Gents," held a buffet fashion show at the Ramada Inn on Sunday, July 14.

Twelve specialty shops provided clothing, jewelry and accessories. Two beauty shops made sure each hair was in place.

Managing to coordinate all this at one dress rehearsal, 10 men and 10 women modeled clothes for children and adults ranging from playwear, to dressy to bridal fashions.

Trends are funny things, and heaven help you if you become one.

Take Michael Jackson. One year he's the biggest music star since the Beatles, the next he's back in rock-n-roll Siberia with a suite next to Barry Manilow.

The only place you can catch poor Michael's act now is on reruns of the "Jackson 5" cartoon show. His doll is even selling for $4 less than Mr. T's.

It makes you wonder about trends, about public fickle enough to acclaim you a genius and then turn its back and walk away.

Perhaps it has always been that way: perhaps human beings are just easily bored.

Something catches our fancy, we prop it up then forget about it. Years later, we ask "whatever happened to..." It's the "whatever happened to" scrap heap.

As my aunt found out when she dug into her record collection to retrieve a dusty "Hair album, that scrap heap is a good place to go if you want to feel old.

Many kids have never even heard of the things that those of us who grew up in the olden days — the Sixties — are asking "whatever happened to" about.

That was the case in our newsroom in Kentucky, where reporters fresh out of college had only vague memories of Vietnam and were born after John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

The newsroom's elder statesmen, the hard core Baby Boomers, began compiling a list of "whatever happened to" items to educate the younger generation.

What follows is just a partial list. If you have any favorite "whatever happened to" items, from any era, let me know.

•Mexican jumping beans.
•Trolls, those little dolls with no clothes and orange hair a mile long.

•Musical bird whistles.
•Pet rocks.
•Crusader Rabbit. Beany and

Cecil. Clutch Cargo. Speed Racer. Johnny Quest.

•Clackers.
•Clam diggers, those calf-length pants which always came in red, white and blue and had matching rope belts.

•Movie stars on Dixie Cup lids.
•Murray the K. Jerry Blavat.

•The Monkees. The Cowbells.
The Dave Clark Five. Paul Revere and the Raiders. The Electric Prunes. The Blues Magoos. Strawberry Alarm Clock. Question Mark and the Mysterions. The Archies. Ohio Express.

•Tom Terrific and Mighty Manfred, the Wonder Dog.

POSTBOX

(Following is a copy of a letter sent to U.S. Senator William V. Roth Jr., R-Del.)

I am writing to you on behalf of the Republican Caucus of the House of Representatives seeking your support for S.R. 82. This legislation calls upon the President to drop his proposal to eliminate the federal deduction for state and local taxes.

It is the opinion of this caucus, that, if enacted, the President's proposal might result in a series of undesirable social and financial disturbances in our state. For example, it is likely that eliminating the deductibility of state and local taxes might be the catalyst for an exodus from our cities.

Taxpayers would move to the suburbs to seek relief from this new tax burden. If that happened, we might have to deal with tangential problems like sagging real estate values and shrinking city revenues.

If taxpayers moved to the suburbs and revenues decreased, how would cities balance their budgets? Would essential services have to suffer? Probably. When cities and towns are already being asked to shoulder new financial responsibilities under the New Federalism policies, the President's proposal is a heavy additional burden. Equally important is the fact that when it comes to its personal income tax structure, Delaware already has one of the worst reputations in the nation. The Republican Caucus is very proud and protective of the initiatives we've accomplished to improve this reputation. Enactment of the President's plan would leave us back where we started — behind the pack in terms of tax modernization.

As you know, we have already passed and sent to the Governor a bill that increases the personal exemption from $800 to $1,000. We've passed another bill that abolishes inheritance taxes for married couples and a third bill that cuts personal income taxes 9 percent. This third bill is awaiting Senate action.

This caucus believes that Delaware taxpayers, who are already paying more than their fair share, should not be further penalized with this new tax burden. They have been told we are working to reduce their taxes, not increase them, so let's continue our efforts to reduce taxes.

In closing, it is our hope that you lend your support for S.R. 82. It is a measure that works for Delaware taxpayers and promotes continued financial integrity.

Protecting Delaware's inland bays

By Rep. Tom Carper

Usually, when I speak in Rehoboth, I'm addressing controversial, headline-grabbing issues: coal-barging, ocean dumping or ocean incineration. But recently, I had the opportunity at the Inland Bays' Conference to discuss an issue just as important, just not often in the headlines. They might be small in size, but in the overall scheme of things, Delaware's inland bays — Rehoboth, Indian River and Little Assawoman — are vital.

These bays are the nurseries of the shellfish that we relish. Wildlife and plantlife abound in the inland bays' environment. Boating and fishing are part of their offerings. And there is special appeal in living near the bays. But there are problems as well.

The continuing problems surrounding the inland bays — contaminated shellfish and drinking water, leaking septic tanks, loosely controlled land development, agricultural runoff and others — touch us all. To resolve these problems is going to require not just cooperation between local, state and federal authorities, but cooperation among families and friends, neighbors and strangers. I recently co-authored legislation to develop a national estuary program that would replace a patchwork, piecemeal approach with a central program for consolidating local, state and federal officials' expertise in protecting prime estuaries.

All said, cooperation is indeed the key to protecting our bays, and the challenge is to stick together, sacrifice together and benefit together.

Newark Babe Ruth stars capture state title

by Bruce Johnson

Ask most Delawareans where Canandaigua is and you'll probably get a blank stare.

If you ask the coaches, parents and athletes of the 13-year-old Newark Babe Ruth All-Star team, they will be happy to give you directions.

By defeating the New Castle All-Stars 9-6 on Saturday, July 20, the Newark team will be representing Delaware in the mid-Atlantic Regionals in Canandaigua, N.Y., near Rochester, July 26 to Aug. 2.

Newark's 13-year-old squad went undefeated in the double-elimination tournament thanks to a powerful pitching staff that gave up only one earned run in four games.

After the game, Manager Jim Nolan was extremely proud of the young champions.

"I've coached, managed and played on a lot of championship teams in the past 30 years and I say this with all sincerity, that this is the finest experience I've ever had and the finest group of people I've ever been associated with," Nolan said.

The road to New York began with a 5-0 win over the Mill Creek All-Stars in the opening round of tournament play. Brian Kirchmer pitched a two-hit shutout and key hits were supplied by Marty Rodriguez, Craig Klockers and namant was not a good display of

In the second game, Newark defeated a very tough Mt. Pleasant team 2-1. Newark pitcher Mark Hendrix did not give up an earned run and Tommy Hurst made a game-saving, shoe-string catch in the seventh to seal the win. Brian Kirchmer got the game winning hit.

The third game was an 8-0 victory over the same New Castle team they beat on Saturday to clinch the state championship. Kirchmer pitched a five-hit shutout with Kevin Kennedy, John Dumas and Pete Trotto coming up with key hits.

The final game of the tournament was not a good display of the Newark All-Stars' talent, according to Nolan.

"They were tight because they knew they could play tomorrow if they lost," he said.

After the infielders had made several errors to load the bases and allow a run, Hendrix got an important strike-out and an easy ground-out to squeeze out of the jam.

Hendrix pitched well through out the tournament, especially considering that he was pitching with a pulled muscle in his side that forced him to alter his pitching style to a sidearm delivery.

"He's had a muscle pull on his side from the first game of the tournament," said Nolan. "It's not dangerous, he just can't throw overhand."

Although the team looked nervous and pensive on defense in the title game, offensively they looked confident and aggressive.

Kirchmer was the epitome of a lead-off hitter, going 3 for 3. He scored three runs and stole several bases. Second baseman Klockers went 2 for 4 with three runs scored and Kevin Scannell went 2 for 3 with two RBIs.

But the player who really frustrated the New Castle team was centerfielder Kevin Kennedy, who had three successful suicide squeeze bunt plays and knocked in the game-winning run.

"We got three runs out of the squeeze and I think it really hurt them," said Nolan. "We wanted to use it in the first couple of games but we didn't bunt well. We said before the game that if a situation came up where we needed some runs we would use it."

Besides the players, Nolan also applauded the parents and his coaching staff of Bill Ellifritz, Bob Kirchmer and son Tom Nolan.

Although Nolan is looking forward to the regionals, he is also aware of the problems of controlling a team of excited 13-year-olds.

"The biggest responsibility and the biggest concern is knowing where the kids are and that they are being taken care of and you know what they are doing."

Although the responsibilities are great, Nolan realizes that for the kids the benefits are worthwhile.

"It's just like a party now, but I remember when I went to a tournament 33 years ago. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity that they will remember forever."

For the kids, the world now revolves around a place called Canandaigua.

Suburban League championship Saturday

Newark area swim teams fared well during regular season

by Bruce Johnson

Twelve hundred swimmers converged on four area pools to compete in the Suburban Swim League time trials July 21-24.

The top 12 qualifiers will compete in the championship finals on Saturday, July 27 at Wilton-Wedgewood Swim Club starting at 9 a.m.

The championship final will field 552 swimmers competing in 46 events, with individual trophies going to the top boy and girl swimmer in each age group.

The final is the culmination of a season that began on June 22, with practices starting after Memorial Day.

The league is made up of 19 teams from Newark, Hockessin and New Castle areas. It is divided into three categories based on the number of swimmers and records. The Red division is considered the strongest with white second and blue third.

Area teams that performed well during the season are Persimmon Creek, which won the Blue Division title; Drummond Hill and Wilton-Wedgewood; and North Star, which finished second behind Yorklyn with a 4-1 record in the tough Red Division.

In age category competition, area teams fared well. Nottingham Green girls 8 and under, North Star girls 15 and over and boys 12 and under, and Fairfield boys 15 and under all finished in first place in the Red Division.

In the White Division, Skyline placed first in the girls 14 and under, and boys 10 and under and 12 and under. Maple Valley shared the boys 14 and under title with Wilton-Wedgewood and Drummond Hill placed first in the girls 10 and under and boys 15 and over categories.

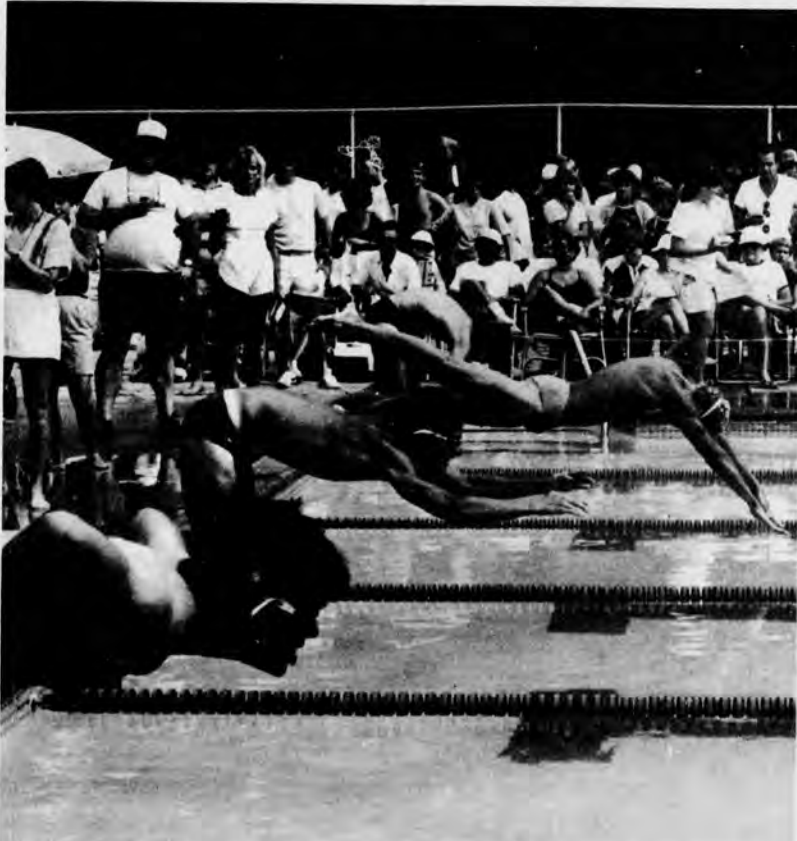

In the Blue Division, Persimmon Creek captured the girls 14 and under and boys 15 and over titles, while Oaklands took first place in the girls 10 and under and shared first place in the 8 and under categories.

According to Drummond Hill coach Pat Desmond, whose team shared the White Division title, the secret to success is bodies.

"You need bodies," said Desmond. "You've got to be able to fill in your roster. You recruit kids and no matter how well they do the first couple of meets, they will improve."

Desmond complimented Bart Dryden, Chris Petrillo, Natalie

Di Tonna captures title

Dan DiTonna captured the title in the first Right Way Body Building contest held Saturday in Newark.

DiTonna, who in May placed third and was voted best back in the Delaware State Body Building Championship, was pleased with the victory despite the small turnout of just four body builders.

The contest was one of many that Polly Smoot, owner of The Right Way by Polly, plans to organize. After writing an article about body building for Life Sports magazine, Smoot decided that such a contest would be a good way to promote her business.

"I felt that we could sponsor a best body contest for the Right Way person which accents body contour and not muscle. We didn't want this contest to be judged solely on muscle, but about their life and personality as well because the Right Way is a way of life," Smoot said.

Although the turnout was small, Smoot was undeterred and plans to have more contests.

Joe Fulginiti, winner of the Delaware State Body Building Championship, judged the contest.

Cooking with wine enhances flavor, aroma of foods

Americans today are becoming bolder cooks, experimenting with new recipes and ingredients. And according to University of Delaware extension foods specialist Dr. Sue Snider, more people are cooking with wines and liquors than ever before.

Snider gives several reasons for this trend. Wine adds subtle flavor and color, enhances existing flavors and aromas, and provides acidity and smoothness.

In cooking, alcohol evaporates at 172 degrees F and the flavoring that's left doesn't appreciably increase the food's calorie count. Wine does, however, add calories to food prepared without heating.

Since alcohol is flammable, the specialist advises several precautions for cooking:

•Don't cover baking dishes or other containers while heating foods containing alcohol. A build-up of pressure can cause an explosion. Snider says larger ovens usually have better ventilation.

•Don't double recipes containing wine or liquor, especially those with only small amounts of other liquid.

Luckily, there are more doses than don't for cooking with wine. Snider offers the following tips:

•Experiment with small amounts. Wine, like herbs and spices, should fortify the flavor of the food, not mask it.

•Add wine at the beginning of cooking so that flavors can blend and alcohol can evaporate. The wine shouldn't emerge as a separate taste.

•Select a good wine with robust flavor that won't dissipate during cooking. While it is not necessary to use an expensive wine, Snider says, one that isn't good for drinking won't be good for cooking.

•When using cooking wines adjust recipes to allow for their greater salt content. Sold in grocery stores just for cooking, they have a high salt concentration to gain immunity from alcoholic beverage taxes.

•Stick to dry red or white wines for cooking, the food specialist advises. Rose' lacks definite character and is used less frequently.

•Substitute wines for conventional liquids in fruit compotes, cakes, salad dressings, marinades, frostings, puddings, jellies, pie fillings, gelatin salads and desserts, sauces and gravies. For a unique flavor, try wine for poaching (pears, salmon, fish) and basting (chicken, ham, pot roast).

Tests

Pressure canner gauges

The Delaware Cooperative Extension Service will be testing pressure canner gauges from 9 to noon Tuesday, Aug. 6, at the Cooperative Extension Service office in Townsend Hall on Del. 896 in Newark.

Pressure canners with a dial gauge or weight with a sliding core type gauge should be tested each year before using to preserve food. The Cooperative Extension Service provides this service free of charge.

Sodium

Deadline extended

The deadline for listing sodium content with other nutritional information on food labels, originally set for July 1, 1985, has been extended to July 1, 1986.

According to University of Delaware extension nutrition specialist Dr. Sue Snider, the Food and Drug Administration has extended the deadline to give manufacturers more time to use up their inventory of labels and to prepare for compliance with the regulation.

Under the new regulation, sodium content will be indicated in 5 milligram increments for foods containing up to 140 milligrams per serving, and in 10 milligram increments above that level. There are five official designations which food manufacturers may use:

"Sodium free" indicates less than 5 milligrams per serving; "very low sodium," 35 milligrams or less per serving; "low sodium," 140 milligrams or less per serving. "Reduced sodium" foods are processed so that the usual level of sodium is reduced by 75 percent, and "unsalted" foods are processed without added salt.

Only products to which salt would usually be added may be advertised as "unsalted." Comparative claims on labels may only be made between products which differ in sodium content by at least 25 percent.

Under current regulations, Snider says, Manufacturers must provide nutrition information only if nutritional claims are made or if nutrients have been added to the product. However, many companies provide nutrition labels voluntarily.

According to the specialists, 55 percent of all processed foods carry nutrition labeling.

Institute

Youth attend

The Delaware Council of Farmer Cooperatives and the Interstate Milk Producers Association have selected three Delaware youth to attend the National Institute of Cooperatives, July 29 to August 1, at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan.

Local delegates include Janelle Taylor of Seaford, Richard Swartzentruber of Greenwood and David Hudson of Milford.

They are being sponsored by the following local agricultural cooperatives and the William Vanderwerde family of Greenwood: Agway-Newark, Agway-Dover, Agway-Crops Center, Southern States-Milford, Southern States-Dover, Southern States-Smyrna/Clayton, Eastern Milk Producers, Delaware Electric, and Interstate Milk Producers.

The institute, which is held annually under the auspices of the American Institute of Cooperation, attracts 1,500 people from across the nation. Taylor, Swartzentruber and Hudson were selected—along with several other youth from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey—on the basis of achievement, leadership and communications skills as well as their interest in cooperative enterprise.

In all, approximately 450 youth between 14 and 20 years of age will attend.

During the meeting the three Delaware delegates and other youth scholars will learn about business community organization, basic cooperative principles, the structure of agricultural cooperatives and ways to use cooperatives. Career opportunities in cooperatives will also be explored.

STEER THIS WAY

By: John Mascher

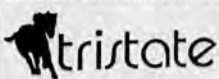

Two seconds' distress between cars may not be enough to avoid accidents, a German study found. It takes as much as another 2/3 of a second or more to react when you're behind the wheel.

Never use leaded fuel in a car designed for unleaded fuel only. That's likely to ruin your catalytic converter.

If your auto air conditioner isn't getting out the cold you need, the problem's likely to be a refrigerant leak, most probably at fittings where lines are joined or where they meet another component.

Check tire pressure periodically. Too low pressure increases rolling resistance, with two bad results: tread wear is increased, and gas mileage is decreased.

It's smart to have windshield wiper blades changed every 6 to 12 months. Don't wait for streaks that interfere with vision.

UNIVERSITY

Faculty addition

Plant physiologist Dr. Janerette welcomed

The College of Agricultural Sciences of the University of Delaware has added nationally renowned plant physiologist Dr. Carol Janerette to its faculty.

Janerette comes to the university from the Washington, D.C., area. As a researcher for 13 years with the USDA's Forest Service, she spent several years at their Burlington, Vt., laboratory and then continued her work at the Forest Physiology Laboratory of the Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Md.

Since the closing of that facility she has been an associate professor at the University of the District of Columbia and an environmental consultant for Analysis Group, Inc.

After receiving her bachelor's degree from Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N.C., Janerette began her career teaching junior high school science classes in the Philadelphia public schools. Her master's work at Howard University took her to Washington, after which she joined the forest service.

She completed her doctorate at North Carolina State University in 1977.

Her duties in the plant science department will include both teaching and research. This year she will coordinate and help teach a team-taught botany course. She also hopes to pursue research in both her major fields of expertise, seed physiology and mycorrhizae.

She explains mycorrhizae as the beneficial relationship between certain fungi and plant roots. "Increased understanding and application of mycorrhizae technology could play a major role in plant biotechnology for the future," she says.

The most apparent result of the mycorrhizal association is a significant increase in plant growth. The fungi seem to somehow help the plant absorb and utilize nutrients from the soil, and have been suggested as a biological replacement for fertilizer.

Her pioneering project on genetic engineering concepts with mycorrhizal fungi won government funding.

Janerette is best known, however, as an expert on seed dormancy and germination. She hopes her research will reveal ways to control germination or break down barriers in order to improve the growth and development of plants.

While working at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center on such projects, she published many journal papers, gave numerous seminars, and was consulted by international scientists.

The plant physiologist says she was attracted to the University of Delaware because of the strong reputation of its plant science department, and an academic setting that would allow her to work in her field.

WE'RE LEARNING HOW TO PREVENT DIABETES IN ANIMALS. AND THAT'S MIRACULOUS NEWS FOR THE HUMAN RACE.

"Imagine where we'd all be today if wood didn't burn."

Wood is a little older—and a lot poorer. With plentiful supply, people have turned back to wood to produce delectable, inexpensive heat for woodstoves and fireplaces. This new demand is coming at a time when we're losing a thousand square miles of forestland each year to urban expansion and other people pressures. So we've got to take extra good care of the forests we have. Our job is growing. For information on how you can help, write:

Survey

Ground water

The Delaware Geological Survey at the University of Delaware has released a new report on "Sources of Ground-Water Contamination in Delaware."

The report, written in response to concern expressed by many Delawareans, presents information on how ground water becomes contaminated.

Delaware's ground water, which provides more than 75 million gallons per day for all uses, is particularly susceptible to contamination because of favorable hydrologic characteristics and the position of the shallow water-table aquifer with respect to land surface, according to the report.

Although the amount of contaminated ground water in Delaware is thought to be relatively small at this time, the most severe problems occur in areas where the present demands for ground water are greatest and where future requirements will be largest, the report concludes.

The 20-page report is available from the Delaware Geological Survey office in Penny Hall on the Newark Campus of the University of Delaware.

Montoya

Guitarist to perform

Renowned flamenco guitarist Carlos Montoya will perform at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Aug. 2 at the University of Delaware.

The performance will be held in the Loudis Recital Hall of the Amy E. du Pont Music Building, located on the corner of Amstel Avenue and Orchard Road in Newark.

Admission is $6 for the general public and $3 for university students with identification.

Born in 1903 to a family of Spanish gypsies, Montoya has performed in almost every country in Europe and the Far East, in addition to yearly transcontinental tours of the United States and tours of Latin America.

On a single guitar, he duplicates many of the effects usually produced by a flamenco.

A critic in The New York Times noted that his playing suggests "such picturesque noises as tambourines, the stamping of heels in a dance, the clatter of castanets, snapping fingers and even the snare drums of a military band."

In his concerts, Montoya creates as he goes along, playing all his own arrangements and original compositions based on the Spanish gypsy tradition.

Banking school moves to U.D. campus

The American Bankers Association has decided to relocate its prestigious Stonier Graduate School of Banking from Rutgers University to the University of Delaware, beginning with its 1986 session next summer.

In announcing the decision to move from Rutgers University, the Stonier Advisory Board cited the "superior facilities" of the university, including classrooms wired for the use of microcomputer terminals and mainframe hookups. Microcomputers are an integral part of the school's curriculum.

In addition to the physical facilities, other factors leading to the decision to relocate were the quality of the College of Business and Economics program and faculty and the University's location in the Northeast quadrant of the United States, with access to and from major urban areas.

The school's initial commitment is through 1991, with options to extend.

From June 15-27, 1986, approximately 1,200 bank officers and invited bank regulators from throughout the United States will attend courses on the campus, studying modern banking operations, including bank management simulation utilizing the University of Delaware's computing system.

Recognizing the importance of microcomputers in banking, the Stonier program utilizes microcomputers in classroom training, case studies, lab work and simulation events.

For example, first-year students in the three-year program receive six hours of instruction in the use of an electronic spreadsheet. For second-year students, microcomputer models have been developed to support course assignments in asset/liability management and investment analysis.

A course in spreadsheet analysis also is an option for the Banking II class.

In the final year, the program includes the use of microcomputers for case studies. A computer simulation game, dubbed "BankSim," involves students in the operation of a hypothetical bank, making decisions and determining the effect those decisions will have on profitability and productivity.

The Stonier School, which has been located in New Brunswick, N.J., since its founding 50 years ago, is the banking industry's quality standard for advanced study for bank officers and the professional development of financial leaders. The intensive and demanding program focuses on the concepts and tools needed by managers to deal with the challenges of the future.

The Stonier faculty includes more than 150 experienced bankers, professionals, government officials, and academicians.

Students at the Stonier School, primarily mid-level to senior officers of ABA member banks, attend two-week, on-campus resident sessions each June for three years, and they complete 10 between-session extension problems, in addition to a formal thesis or applied research and writing projects related to performance areas of banking.

The school's objectives are to:

• Provide a broad banking educational experience that will contribute toward effective leadership in the banking industry.

• Sharpen analytical aptitudes and management capabilities.

• Create a better understanding of the economic and political environment in which the banking system operates.

• Stimulate among students an exchange of ideas on issues related to the banking industry.

The school is named in honor of Harold Stonier, an important figure in banker education, who died in 1957. In 1959, the ABA donated $600,000 to Rutgers to help finance construction of a $3 million dining and assembly hall on the campus, which has been used by the Stonier School as well as in the university's regular schedule.

At the University of Delaware, students will be housed on the north campus, in the Christiana Towers residence halls and, if necessary, in the Pencader complex.

Lower-division classes will meet in Purnell, Smith and Kirkbride halls. Upper-division classes, which are smaller, will be accommodated in Clayton Hall.

Students will be encouraged to take full advantage of the summer cultural events on the campus as well as recreational facilities.
