NEWARK POST PHOTO BY HEIDI SCHEING

Newark residents were asked to nominate couples married 50 years or more for a celebration at the Newark Post Office on Valentine's Day. Postal staff said they received such a tremendous response, they had to narrow the list to the eight couples married the longest. Among the honorees were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Aneda (left), married 62 years, and Mr. and Mrs. Mel Brooks (right), married 57 years. Both of the Brooks graduated from Newark High School and Mel Brooks played on the first undefeated University of Delaware football team in 1941. Celebrants not pictured: Mr. and Mrs. William Limber, married 64 years, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brader, married 60 years, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Somers, married 60 years, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Arnold, married 60 years, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Briggs, married 58 years, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Tressler, married 57 years.

UD gets huge Valentine

Gift will help fund office building/parking garage

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The whopping $25 million pledged to the University of Delaware by MBNA America was a very sweet Valentine's Day gift.

According to University president David Roselle, more than half of the money, $15 million, will be used to support scholarships for students, many economically disadvantaged.

"MBNA support has benefited programs in several of UD's colleges...greatly increasing the amount of scholarship assistance available to our students," said Roselle.

Another $7 million will be used for graduate and undergraduate programs in College of Business and Economics and in the Delaware Center for Teacher Education which supports state effort to enhance education and professional development for teachers in public schools.

Roselle said $3 million will be used for a parking garage/office building already planned on Academy Street in Newark. The Career Services Center funded through MBNA's latest gift will be part of the $13-million project which will also include offices for Human Resources staff, University Police and Security, and faculty in the Professional Theatre Training Program.

In making the gift, MBNA president and CEO Charles Cawley said the University has been a big part of the company's success. "We see the value of a University of Delaware education everyday through the work of graduates who are here at MBNA," Cawley said.

According to Cawley, 1,400 MBNA employees are graduates of the University and another 700 to 800 students currently work for MBNA while attending college.

Incinerator ignites outcry

Legislators to hold public hearing

By PEG BROADWATER

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Residents living near a proposed incinerator site have made it abundantly clear that they do not want it operating on Porter Road in Bear.

This week, the Bear/Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations voted unanimously to oppose the application of PhilPower Corporation to build the trash-burning facility.

On Feb. 7, about 90 civic leaders of the 7&40 Alliance voted 23-0 to oppose the plan citing health and safety concerns.

And nearly 150 people attended a Feb. 2 meeting at the Rose Hill Community Center in New Castle, to state their opposition to the incinerator plan.

According to Deborah Deubert, director of the commu-

Christina redrawing lines

For the third time in four years, the Christina School District is embarking on a realignment of some feeder patterns and assigned schools in the district.

District officials announced this week the staff is considering adjustments in the K-4 suburban attendance boundaries to create a feeder pattern for the new William B. Keene Elementary School in Glasgow.

Keene Elementary is scheduled to open in September 2001 with 840 students on approximately 29 acres near the intersection of Routes 896 and 40.

"Creating the new attendance area is likely to result in changes to the feeder patterns for the other K-4 schools (in the district)," according to information received from district administrators.

In 1996, the Christina School Board implemented a school assignment program incorporating Theme Schools in Wilmington in efforts to allow more students to attend schools close to home in the elementary

Shots fired in road rage incident

New Castle County Police arrested a 21-year-old Newark man after he allegedly fired a gun in a road rage incident on Feb. 13 around 3:30 a.m.. County police said the 18-year-old male victim was traveling on Upper Pike Creek Road near Route 72 when a vehicle began tailgating him.

A witness, who said the suspect vehicle was operating in a reckless manner, managed to get the tag number of the suspect car. As the two cars approached the intersection, the suspect discharged a large caliber handgun into the passenger side door. Officers traced the suspect vehicle through motor vehicle registration records and arrested Andrew Webber at his residence.

Police also seized a .357 handgun which is believed to be the weapon used in the attack, over 65 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. Consumers can take the 'bait' out of rebates

Some manufacturers and retailers entice shoppers with instant cash rebates that can be redeemed immediately at the checkout counter.

But most rebates are of the mail-in variety. They require consumers to pay the full cost of an item at the time of purchase, then to send documentation to the manufacturer or retailer to receive a rebate by mail.

The documentation required generally includes the original sales receipt, UPC code, rebate slip, and the customer's name, address and telephone number. In most cases, this paperwork must be sent to the manufacturer or retailer within 30 days of the purchase. Consumers generally receive their rebates up to 12 weeks later.

But, the Federal Trade Commission cautions consumers against being "baited" by rebates that never arrive or arrive far later than promised. By law, companies are required to send rebates within the time frame promised, or if no time is specified, within 30 days.

When purchasing a product that offers a rebate, the FTC encourages consumers to: follow the instructions on the rebate form and enclose all required documentation in the envelope when filing for a rebate; make a copy of all paperwork to be mailed when applying for a rebate; contact the company if the rebate doesn't arrive within the time promised.

If the rebate never arrives or arrives late, file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission, the state Attorney General or the local Better Business Bureau. Call the FTC's Consumer Response Center helpline toll-free at 1-877-FTC-HELP (382-4357), write to Consumer Response Center, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20580, or visit www.ftc.gov and click on "Complaint Form."

Wilson files to run for City Council

The city council election in Newark got its first new face this week when Garrett L. Wilson filed to run in the 6th District. "I've never run for anything before, although I've run campaigns for other people," said Wilson. "I've always been interested in government."

Wilson

Wilson said state legislators Bill Cloutier and Terry Spence are among his former clients and he has done some lobbying in Dover. "I also lobbied in Washington, D.C., to save jobs at Boeing," he said.

Currently the chief operating officer for the Boeing Helicopter Credit Union in Ridley Park, Pa., Wilson said he is retired from his management engineering job at the aircraft assembly plant.

"I'm running for council because I live in the community and I'm not one to sit back and just complain," he said this week. "If you want to change anything you have to get out and do it."

Among the issues important to Wilson are fiscal responsibility, crime and gun control, and adequate recreation facilities for senior citizens as well as youth.

The six-year resident of Jenny's Run, adjacent to a proposed water storage site in Newark, is also interested in water supplies. "And, hopefully, with all that ground, there will be some room for recreation space," he said.

Development is also one of his concerns. "We don't have adequate roads to handle more new construction," he said.

A native of Wilmington, Wilson has degrees in police science and criminal justice from Delaware Technology and Community College and Wilmington College. He is currently working on an MBA.

He has three sons, one of Architects' rendering of the University of Delaware office building and parking garage to be built on Academy Street near the Perkins Student Center.

MBNA millions educate future business people

► MBNA, from 1

In 1996, the University named MBNA America Hall, the business and economics building at the corner of Orchard Road and Amstel Avenue, for the company to honor their $2.5 million contribution toward its construction.

University officials also noted that the company has committed $60 million for educational grants and scholarships through the MBNA Education Foundation over the next five years.

"This newest commitment is just part of MBNA's exemplary program of charitable support and caring for the general Delaware community," said Howard E. Cosgrove, chairman for the University Board of Trustees.

Roselle said MBNA's donation brings the five-year

Campaign for Delaware closer to its goal of $225 million. Begun in October 1998, the campaign has raised $193 million to date.

MBNA Corp., a bank holding company and parent of MBNA American Bank N.A. has $72.3 billion in managed loans. MBNA, the largest independent credit card lender in the world, also provides retail deposit, consumer loans and insurance products.

WILMAPCO seeks to reduce smog

Within the next year, the Wilmington Area Planning Council will be reviewing strategies to reduce smog-producing emissions by 2005 in order to remain in compliance with federal Clean Air Act policies.

As a first step, WILMAPCO must adopt the 2025 Metropolitan Transportation Plan, which is in compliance with current 1999 emissions limits.

On Wednesday, Feb. 23, at 7:30 p.m., WILMAPCO will hold a special meeting at their offices on Library Avenue in Newark to adopt the 25-year plan and also begin to review proposed air quality conforming strategies.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is expected to put into effect lower emissions limits beginning in May, 2000. WILMAPCO will be reviewing a broad range of strategies, which include:

- Express bus services linking Wilmington, Newark, Middletown, and Bear-Glasgow;
- Bus service in north Wilmington and along Route 4;
- Park and ride lots on US 202 over Delaware state line and Tri-State Mall;
- Shuttle service between hotels in Wilmington and Wilmington Trolley Connector;
- Churchman's Crossing Station;
- Expanded use of rideshare, car- and van-pools;
- Adopt plan for regional Greenway Connectors;
- Pedestrian and bicycle links to transit services, employment & retail centers;
- Attract development toward transit centers and existing communities.

For further information, call WILMAPCO at 737-6205 or visit www.wilmapco.org.

Ulbrich named honorary commander of air base

State Representative Stephanie Ulbrich (R-Newark South) was named an honorary commander of Dover Air Force Base. It is the second time Ulbrich has been chosen for the honor, having just completed her first one-year tour.

DAFB spokesperson Maureen Sealund said Ulbrich is one of a select group of community leaders chosen to participate in the honorary commander program.

Begun in 1992, the program aims to designate unofficial liaisons to facilitate communication between the base and the community-at-large.

"We're not the only base to institute this program, but we're one of the most successful," Ms. Sealund said. "Other bases have copied how we do business here."

Other current honorary commanders are Delaware Secretary of Labor Lisa Blunt-Bradley, Audrey Doberstein, president of Wilmington College, and state Attorney General Jane Brady.

Sealund said people are selected for the program partly for their influential position in the community and partly for their interest in the base and its operations.

"Even though the base is not close to my district, it is still important to my constituents," Ulbrich said. "Some serve at the base, while others are employed by companies that do business there. With about 5,000 active duty personnel, Dover Air Force Base is the state's third-largest employer and has an economic impact that tops $470 million annually."

The base is home to 36 C-5 aircraft, the largest cargo transport planes in the U.S. inventory. The 436th Airlift Wing and the 512th Airlift Wing (a reserve unit) call DAFB home.

The base also acts as one of only two mortuaries operated by the Department of Defense for service personnel killed overseas.

Opening night beckons young actors

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

"How many more days do we have?!!!" prodded Lauren Gerhart, choreographer for Christiana High School's theater group.

The boys rehearsing the first dance in "West Side Story" on a recent Saturday were all too aware of the time remaining until they would be performing in front of a live audience. "This play is in two weeks!!!" Gerhart exclaimed, anyway.

The production is not an easy feat for the teens tackling more than 77 pages of script, 17 songs and 10 dance scenes. The two-and-a-half hour musical will have all the elements of the original Broadway play, said director Wendy Adams, including Jerome Robbins' energetic and demanding choreography.

For senior Dan Sanchez, forgetting his lines has become somewhat of a joke among his peers who laughed with him when asked about how difficult it was to memorize his part of Bernardo.

Beth Wheeler, also a senior, had her own solution. "I use a book of flash cards to help me remember," she said.

Cast members have been practicing after school, on a few holidays and on weekends since December. Recently, they have been rehearsing in costume to help them get into character more easily, said Adams.

Sanchez said he can do that. "It's a switch you turn on and off in your head and you just become the role you're playing," he said.

Participating in the play is a brand new experience for some. A group of ROTC students cast in the play relish the alternative experience and have been praised by the director for their high level of discipline.

Adams, who teaches choir and theater, is thrilled with the camaraderie she sees in this cast. "There are no conflicts, no one fights and there really isn't any competition between the kids," she said. "Every student is on a different level and other kids help to raise the level of acting of their peers."

Senior Chris Jones said, "The greatest things I've learned (since starting theater) is how to deal with totally different people."

Students at Christiana High School helped each other when learning lines and parts for "West Side Story" opening next week.

people and I've learned how to dance with rhythm."

Although a few cast members literally "walked-on" in their roles, some of the more seasoned actors auditioned for their parts. "It was kind of competitive," said Wheeler who plays Anita. "We had to sing and do a dance."

Female lead Jessica Rehm has trained in voice for many years and said acting comes fairly easy. But playing the lead of Maria is a vocal challenge. "The toughest part is singing," she said. "Some notes are extremely high."

Not only are the roles demanding, but most of the cast admitted some stage fright. Wheeler said keeping themselves occupied before making their entrance helps. "Everybody deals with it their own way and everyone is usually hugging backstage," said Wheeler. "When you are with your friends it is not as bad."

Chris Farra who plays the lead role of Tony still experiences "butterflies" and thinks a little anxiety is good.

Drawn to acting when he was 14 years old, Farra plans to make the hard work a career. "It's a way to not only release pressure, it's something that I love," he said, "and it fills me with energy and joy."

A cast of 40 Christiana students, along with 16 musicians and 14 stage crew members, will present Leonard Bernstein's dramatic love story at 7 p.m. on Feb. 25 and 26, and March 3 and 4 at the school. Tickets, $6 for adults, and $4 for senior citizens and students, are available in advance at the school or at the door on the night of the performance. For information, call 454-2123, during school hours.

That plan stalled with only grades 1-4 in most suburban elementary schools. The Theme School program has been abandoned.

In December 1997, the district began three months of meetings to redistrict feeder patterns for the three high schools. As a result, students were reassigned to different middle and high schools in some neighborhoods.

The district is beginning a series of public meetings on Feb. 23 to hear comments and suggestions about the most recent plans.

Meetings are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. as follows: Feb. 23 at Marshall Elementary School; March 1 at Bancroft Elementary School; March 8 at Shue-Medill Middle School; and, March 15 at Bayard Elementary School.

Persons attending the meetings are encouraged to submit their comments in writing as well.

Interested persons also can submit comments in writing to Debbie Rodenhouser at the District Office at 83 E. Main St., Newark.

The public comments will be considered during the development of the Realignment Plan and a draft plan will be submitted to Site Councils, PTA/CAC's and school staffs for review and comment.

For additional information, call the Student Assignment Office at 454-2000, ext. 259.

DelDOT crews are working on Interstates this weekend

Traffic will be restricted or delayed on some areas of I-95, I-495 and I-295 through 5 a.m. Monday while the Delaware Department of Transportation begins work in preparation for the upcoming I-95 reconstruction project and closure from April through October.

DelDOT crews will be working in the area of I-495 just north of the I-95 split and on the I-295 ramp coming from the Delaware Memorial Bridge.

The left lane will be closed on I-495 while crews paint under the Naamans Road Bridge.

The ramp from southbound I-495 to westbound Naamans Road will be closed for patching with a detour posted. The ramps at Philadelphia Pike will be open during this detour.

Residents unite against plan

nity center, there has been a fight against incinerators for the last 15 of her 20 years as director. An incinerator operated just up the road from the center on Lambson Lane until 1990, when it was finally shut down.

"The truck traffic, the stench, the noise - it just goes on and on," said nearby resident Tom Gifford. "When you listen to the project it looks good on paper, but what comes out of those stacks is not good for your health. I remember times when we tried to barbecue outside and the odor was so bad, we had to go in."

Deubert, who lives in Bear, said she can attest to the stench and doesn't want to see one built. "(PhilPower) thought we were sleeping. It's the same game, different place."

Alan Muller, executive director of Green Delaware, told residents that four states testified against PhilPower's application for a permit in a coastal zone area of Delaware. Sites in Wilmington and now Bear are under currently consideration.

According to permit applications, the proposed incinerator would burn "construction and demolition debris" at 10,000 pounds per day through a 215-foot smokestack.

"We learned PCB's converted into dioxins and furans which will come out of the stack are the most toxic known to man," said Bear resident Jim Bryant.

John McMichael of Bear said he realizes some trash needs to be burned somewhere. "We all make trash, (but) we're going to have to recycle more," McMichael said.

The Cooper Family from Bear expressed concerns that water use was not mentioned and would be a factor. They too support recycling which is not mandatory in Delaware. Family members also said they have seen an increase in trucks already on Porter Road since a new concrete plant came in so trash trucks would be an additional problem.

State Senator Dorinda Connor (R-Penn Acres) also spoke out against the project and urged people to call their legislators about their concerns.

Proposed state legislation, S.B.280 and H.B.467, deals with an increased buffer zone, environmental and land use impact of power generating facilities. "It is not of the magnitude of what Green Delaware is supporting, but it is a starting point," said State Senator David McBride (D-Hawks Nest). "Talk to your friends and family. If you let it go, it will happen. You have to be vigilant."

McBride said a public hearing on the matter before the Senate Natural Resources Committee will be held on March 9 at William Penn High School in New Castle.

Boilermakers support plan to build incinerator

Some boilermakers support the plan to build an incinerator in New Castle County if done with union labor and state monitoring.

According to a union-member boilermaker at the public meeting held at the Rose Hill Community Center to discuss the proposal, that toxins are "all around us" no matter how the trash is removed.

"If not the incinerator, then trash would need to be buried," commented the man.

Another man stated the technology has come a long way and there is a difference between incinerators and "biomass recovery systems."

Shortly thereafter, the boilermakers left in a group half way through the meeting.

Lou DeSeta, a union boilermaker from Bear, spoke by phone later saying, "We don't want anyone's health to be in danger, but if a job is going to be built, we want it built with union labor which is always done better."

The proposed project would be done by non-union workers.

According to DeSeta, other members have studied up on the proposed project and are comfortable with the process. "This type of boiler, from what I have been told, as far as they know it is just for wood and burns low. We also support clean air and this project."

"But if the state isn't monitoring a project like that and they take shortcuts, they are going to have problems," continued DeSeta. "As citizens we want it to be as good as it possibly could be."

University of Delaware is fortunate in its friends

The gift of $25 million from MBNA America to the University of Delaware is big news any way you look at it.

Even for a company which describes itself as the largest independent credit card lender in the world, it is "putting your money where your mouth is."

At the very least, it shows a lot of interest - in more ways than one - coming to Newark and Delaware as a result of a business operating here.

Both the University and MBNA can be justly proud of the partnership they have formed to boost their fortunes and futures together. MBNA officials were quick to note the number of well-educated employees they are getting from the University - a good deal they foresee indefinitely.

But the University, together with the town and state, are fortunate to have more than one such caring friend in the community.

Almost every year we hear of a business or individual giving substantial gifts to the college. And not all of them are the largest or the only.

The Gore family, operating a business headed by a University of Delaware graduate and continually based in Newark since its founding, gave $18 million to the University in 1996.

The Longwood Foundation, created from the estate of Pierre S. du Pont, gave $10 million in 1998. And one alumnus, Hockessin resident Chaplin Tyler, has contributed $3 million by himself.

The University publicizes these notable gifts in a noteworthy manner - to their credit.

But they also note that they are closer to their five-year fundraising goal of $225 million than they thought possible after less than two years.

That a lot of pocket change and pin money, too. Many, many businesses and individuals have pledged support for their alma mater and the community at large.

Only a few of them will ever make the front page of newspapers no matter how proportionate the donation is to their assets.

We think you all deserve a round of applause together with MBNA. Thank you from Newark. It's all a big deal to us.

EDUCATIONAL PERSPECTIVES

Base-ic Accountability (Fundamental Foundations First)

By JACK BARTLEY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

I awoke one frosty winter morning to the sound of construction equipment in the vacant lot next to my house. I knew that someone had purchased the empty lot, but it had been quite some time since that news had traveled the grapevine, so the appearance of builders seemed sudden. As I peered out my window, I saw two men in business suits giving directions to the construction crew. I decided to walk over and take the opportunity to welcome them to the neighborhood.

As I crunched across the frosty dirt, I noticed that no hole had been dug for the foundation. In fact, the concrete truck had just arrived and was about to pour cement into a four-inch high wooden form that was sitting on the dirt. I extended my hand to the taller of the two men and introduced myself.

"Hi, I'm Tom, and this is my partner Paul," the tall man responded, nodding his head in the direction of the other individual. "We figured it was about time we got started on our house."

I looked doubtfully at the foundation being poured. "So, you decided to go with a slab rather than a full basement," I said. "That'll save you some money, but I'm not sure a four-inch foundation is going to cut it around here. This area is going to go through a lot of changes and I'm not sure it will take the stress."

"Don't worry about that," Tom said with a wave of his hand. "We're going to put a world-class building on top of it and things will be just fine. It will look just great!"

As it turned out, Tom was right. The house was beautiful, but as the years went by, the house was unable to withstand the changes in the neighborhood. As the exterior weathered, Tom and Paul would frantically nail new boards in place. Not boards of the same quality as the original, but they looked good.

The foundation cracked and parts of the house began to sag dangerously, but Tom and Paul simply put up new additions on even thinner slabs. The place soon became an eyesore and everyone had opinions about what was wrong and how to fix it. Unfortunately, no one paid much attention to the people trained in the art of construction: the builders with the knowledge and tools to do things right the first time.

I grew up and live in Pennsylvania. My neighbor is Delaware, the place where I teach. I have had the opportunity to compare how the houses of education work where I live and how they have fallen apart where I work.

The foundations of education, good teachers, small class sizes, and well-equipped classrooms are highly valued in Pennsylvania. From top to bottom, teachers receive higher salaries in Pennsylvania,

A Presidential candidate visiting Newark is one thing, but in 1923, U.S. President Warren G. Harding stopped here and chatted with townspeople on the campus of the then Women's College. According to information which appeared with this photo on the front page of the Newark Post on June 13, 1923, the Chief Executive is shown talking to Ex-Gov. Did propellants cause Avon blast?

Investigators looking for the cause of a February 1, explosion at Newark's Avon plant believe the blast was related to the destruction of aerosol cans using flammable hydrocarbons as propellants.

The explosion took the life of 25-year-old Marta O'Connor, who died February 9, of internal injuries she suffered in the blast. Four other Avon employees are still hospitalized for treatment of burns suffered in the fire which followed the explosion.

Avon plants across the nation have discontinued grinding aerosol products until the Newark investigation is completed.

Police work to stamp out this ugly crime.

Statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare reveal that as many as 3 million American children suffer physical or emotional abuse at the hands of their parents.

Patrolman Jeanne Lloyd of the New Castle County Police Crime Prevention Unit believes that child abuse is "much more prevalent than anyone's aware of" here in New Castle County. She's researched and written an awareness building program on child abuse - and she's ready to start bringing the message to county residents.

DeIDOT letter dulls bumper sticker mania

Newark Citizens Against Trucks (CATS) presented Newark City

Council members Monday evening with bumper stickers promoting a bypass around Newark.

City Manager Carl Luft read aloud a Jan. 31 letter from Anne Canby, secretary of transportation. The letter was in response to Newark's bypass resolution, adopted a few months ago, which asserts the city supports a bypass.

Canby wrote, "It would be irresponsible on our part to build a road which would spur increased development thus further compounding the problem. With the help of local government, the public, and WILMAPCO, we will proceed with caution."

For the second year, Newark Police report the most accidents occurred at the intersection of Library Avenue and Ogletown Road.

Help is on the way, however, City engineers will use a $13,000 accident grant from the State of Delaware Highway Safety Department to study and make improvements to the intersection where 37 accidents occurred in 1994. Design, landscaping and cause of accidents will all be considered.

The second highest number of accidents, a total of 30, occurred at the intersection of Christiana Parkway and South College Avenue.

University of Delaware is fortunate in its friends

The gift of $25 million from MBNA America to the University of Delaware is big news any way you look at it.

Even for a company which describes itself as the largest independent credit card lender in the world, it is "putting your money where your mouth is."

At the very least, it shows a lot of interest - in more ways than one - coming to Newark and Delaware as a result of a business operating here.

Both the University and MBNA can be justly proud of the partnership they have formed to boost their fortunes and futures together. MBNA officials were quick to note the number of well-educated employees they are getting from the University - a good deal they foresee indefinitely.

But the University, together with the town and state, are fortunate to have more than one such caring friend in the community.

Almost every year we hear of a business or individual giving substantial gifts to the college. And not all of them are the largest or the only.

The Gore family, operating a business headed by a University of Delaware graduate and continually based in Newark since its founding, gave $18 million to the University in 1996.

The Longwood Foundation, created from the estate of Pierre S. du Pont, gave $10 million in 1998. And one alumnus, Hockessin resident Chaplin Tyler, has contributed $3 million by himself.

The University publicizes these notable gifts in a noteworthy manner - to their credit.

But they also note that they are closer to their five-year fundraising goal of $225 million than they thought possible after less than two years.

That a lot of pocket change and pin money, too. Many, many businesses and individuals have pledged support for their alma mater and the community at large.

Only a few of them will ever make the front page of newspapers no matter how proportionate the donation is to their assets.

We think you all deserve a round of applause together with MBNA. Thank you from Newark. It's all a big deal to us.

EDUCATIONAL PERSPECTIVES

Base-ic Accountability (Fundamental Foundations First)

By JACK BARTLEY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

I awoke one frosty winter morning to the sound of construction equipment in the vacant lot next to my house. I knew that someone had purchased the empty lot, but it had been quite some time since that news had traveled the grapevine, so the appearance of builders seemed sudden. As I peered out my window, I saw two men in business suits giving directions to the construction crew. I decided to walk over and take the opportunity to welcome them to the neighborhood.

As I crunched across the frosty dirt, I noticed that no hole had been dug for the foundation. In fact, the concrete truck had just arrived and was about to pour cement into a four-inch high wooden form that was sitting on the dirt. I extended my hand to the taller of the two men and introduced myself.

"Hi, I'm Tom, and this is my partner Paul," the tall man responded, nodding his head in the direction of the other individual. "We figured it was about time we got started on our house."

I looked doubtfully at the foundation being poured. "So, you decided to go with a slab rather than a full basement," I said. "That'll save you some money, but I'm not sure a four-inch foundation is going to cut

it around here. This area is going to go through a lot of changes and I'm not sure it will take the stress."

"Don't worry about that," Tom said with a wave of his hand. "We're going to put a world-class building on top of it and things will be just fine. It will look just great!"

As it turned out, Tom was right. The house was beautiful, but as the years went by, the house was unable to withstand the changes in the neighborhood. As the exterior weathered, Tom and Paul would frantically nail new boards in place. Not boards of the same quality as the original, but they looked good.

The foundation cracked and parts of the house began to sag dangerously, but Tom and Paul simply put up new additions on even thinner slabs. The place soon became an eyesore and everyone had opinions about what was wrong and how to fix it. Unfortunately, no one paid much attention to the people trained in the art of construction: the builders with the knowledge and tools to do things right the first time.

I grew up and live in Pennsylvania. My neighbor is Delaware, the place where I teach. I have had the opportunity to compare how the houses of education work where I live and how they have fallen apart where I work.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

A Presidential candidate visiting Newark is one thing, but in 1923, U.S. President Warren G. Harding stopped here and chatted with townspeople on the campus of the then Women's College. According to information which appeared with this photo on the front page of the Newark Post on June 13, 1923, the Chief Executive is shown talking to Ex-Gov. Miller, chairman of the board of trustees of the College. To the left is Senator Ball. George Christian, the president's secretary, is shown with his back to the camera - next to the dust-coated chauffeur of the open touring car.

Did propellants cause Avon blast?

Investigators looking for the cause of a February 1, explosion at Newark's Avon plant believe the blast was related to the destruction of aerosol cans using flammable hydrocarbons as propellants.

The explosion took the life of 25-year-old Marta O'Connor, who died February 9, of internal injuries she suffered in the blast. Four other Avon employees are still hospitalized for treatment of burns suffered in the fire which followed the explosion.

Avon plants across the nation have discontinued grinding aerosol products until the Newark investigation is completed.

Police work to stamp out this ugly crime.

Statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare reveal that as many as 3 million American children suffer physical or emotional abuse at the hands of their parents.

Patrolman Jeanne Lloyd of the New Castle County Police Crime Prevention Unit believes that child abuse is "much more prevalent than anyone's aware of" here in New Castle County. She's researched and written an awareness building program on child abuse - and she's ready to start bringing the message to county residents.

DelDOT letter dells bumper sticker mania

Council members Monday evening with bumper stickers promoting a bypass around Newark.

City Manager Carl Luft read aloud a Jan. 31 letter from Anne Canby, secretary of transportation. The letter was in response to Newark's bypass resolution, adopted a few months ago, which asserts the city supports a bypass.

Canby wrote, "It would be irresponsible on our part to build a road which would spur increased development thus further compounding the problem. With the help of local government, the public, and WILMAPCO, we will proceed with caution."

Voters want tobacco funds to support controls

The American Cancer Society recently conducted a statewide public opinion survey of registered voters in Del. to measure voters' attitudes regarding the best use of the tobacco settlement funds in Del. The poll, commissioned by the American Cancer Society, was conducted on behalf of the IMPACT Del. Tobacco Free Coalition. The Coalition will release recommendations to the Del. Health Fund Advisory Committee, which is the group charged with making a recommendation to the Del. General Assembly regarding the use of the settlement funds.

The survey uncovered the fact that 96 percent of Del. voters feel that youth smoking is a "serious public health issue." In regard to allocation of the tobacco settlement funds, 76 percent of Delaware voters agreed that a "significant portion" of the money should be spent on efforts to reduce tobacco use among young people.

The public opinion survey was conducted from Nov. 17-19, 1999 and focused on the attitudes of Del. voters in regard to public health issues and policies related to the use of tobacco, youth smoking, and use of Del.'s share of the tobacco settlement. For the survey, 408 registered voters were interviewed by phone and chosen from a list of randomly generated phone numbers for the survey.

Forty-six states settled lawsuits filed against tobacco companies in Nov. 1998. Officials from these states suggested that the main purpose of these lawsuits were to protect kids from addiction to tobacco and to set aside a generous portion of the settlement funds to reduce tobacco use, especially among children. Delaware is one of five states that have created trust funds to house their tobacco settlement funds to be used for a variety of projects. Settlement funds housed in these trust funds could be used for tobacco prevention and cessation, but this is not required. The American Cancer Society urges the Del. Health Fund Advisory Committee and the Del. General Assembly to take note of these survey findings and consider them when dispersing funds from the tobacco settlement, hopefully toward tobacco control initiatives.

Legislators also need to be accountable competition for jobs is intense, and high quality is maintained.

Where I grew up, school districts were small in size, test scores were tops in the nation, and interference from politicians and business (in spite of recent proposals by Governor Ridge) in the process of education was minimal. This is not the case in Delaware.

The influence of politics on education in Delaware is powerful and, unfortunately, destructive in its negligence. Although Dr. Floyd E. McDowell, in a recent letter to the Newark Post, states that "Delaware tax payers have kept annual per student expenditures at 5th to 8th from the top," the money seems to have failed in its trickle-down route to the student in the same way the Colorado River turns to dust in its futile quest for the Gulf of California.

Funding from the state has not been provided to increase staffing and reduce class size. In my school alone, I can cite many cases of classes of over 35 students. I had 42 in a science laboratory class last year, and an English class this year, with a newly hired teacher, was assigned 40 students.

Inferior "world-class" technology is purchased on low bid contracts without the staffing to maintain and service the equipment. In the off chance that it does work, teachers have not been given the opportunity to discover how to best utilize these potent tools in an educational environment.

Money and time (most teachers teach five to six periods out of seven, with a duty period) has not been provided. How does a teacher get 42 students to use two computers in the classroom?

Finally, recent proposals in the state senate would give larger raises to new teachers and offer slap-in-the-face percentages to experienced teachers who have labored at lower salary levels than surrounding states for years. The long lines at the desks of districts from surrounding states at job fair interviews indicate that new teachers seeking employment can see through the thin political veneer of this educational patch job.

Since the accountability issue has been raised by politicians, I believe it is time for them to accept the responsibility for providing the weak foundation of the educational house. Legislators and the governor should be held accountable through letters, phone calls, and e-mail. And most of all, the foundation architects should be held accountable in the next set of elections.

This is kNOw fraud week

This week is National Consumer Protection week and I thought I'd focus this article on telemarketing fraud by telling a story. A few months ago I was visiting with my neighbor who told me that she was looking forward to a big check coming in the mail. I asked her for more details and she proceeded to tell me that she had received a call from a gentleman who spent lots of time on the phone with her and who told her that if she sent money to him, he could get her money back.

I asked, get your money back from where? She said that she had given her credit card to someone over the phone who offered a free travel package. The first caller offered a "free" vacation that ended up costing her a bundle in hidden costs. In the end, it would have been a lot cheaper to book it herself. As it stands now, she has not recovered her money and she still gets calls weekly. I was concerned and decided I'd call my friend at the Department of Justice who works in the Fraud Division. It turns out this is one of the newer scams. People who fall for scams the first time are the put on a "Sucker List" that is shared with other scam artists who will try to prey on these folks again. The newest scam is the promise of recovery of losses from the first scam.

So what can you do? Federal, state and private agencies have joined together to create "kNOw Fraud," an effort to help you avoid being victimized by telemarketing and mail fraud operators. Unlike most other crimes, telemarketing and mail fraud requires one essential element: victim participation. We are all potential targets, unscrupulous promoters go after anyone with a phone or mailbox. The best way to protect yourself is to know the differences between legitimate offers and fraudulent ones. Cold calls, direct mail, and Internet, broadcast and print advertisements are all methods that scam artists use. You may place a call in response to a television, newspaper or magazine advertisement. The fact that you initiate the call doesn't mean the business is legitimate or that you should be less cautious about buying or investing on the phone.

Rochelle Bazil, born with a rare skin disorder, is still a typical 7-year-old enjoying life with her younger sister Renee, and parents Sandra and Ronald Bazil.

Getting a fresh start at age seven

By SHARON R. COLE

It is not hard to see the beauty in Rochelle Bazil, a typical 7-year-old who attends elementary school, loves to run and enjoys playing with her friends. In fact, this somewhat reserved little girl has a warm smile and eyes that will brighten any room.

But, since birth, Bazil has been living with a condition called congenital nevus, a rare skin disorder that has left a 90 percent coverage of dark colored markings on her body.

For New Castle County residents, Ronald and Sandra Bazil, the markings were an unexpected intrusion that could possibly harm their daughter and would definitely change the course of their lives.

"These spots started showing up on her right after we brought her home as a baby from the hospital," said the mother. "It was like a new mark appeared every week and we knew something was wrong."

Up until 1997, the Bazil's were residing in Queens, N.Y., where they sought treatment from many doctors, including experts from Mt. Sinai Hospital, to no avail.

Originally from Guyana, the Bazils said they had never seen anything like this and were suddenly searching for answers while also adjusting to unmindful reactions from strangers.

"It took us many years to deal with this," said Sandra Bazil. "I would be on a subway with Rochelle and people would keep looking or pull away from us. It was so bad that in the middle of summer I would dress Rochelle in long sleeved shirts and long pants."

Suddenly, the Bazil's prayers for help were answered. A close relative just happened to be watching television at just the right time.

"My aunt saw people with similar conditions to Rochelle on a talk show who had gotten help, so she called us to tell us about it," said Sandra Bazil.

On the talk show were doctors offering small miracles through an organization called Fresh Start Surgical Gifts Inc. A non-profit agency based in San Diego, Calif., Fresh Start provides life-altering free reconstructive surgery to young people living with physical deformities caused by birth defects, accidents, abuse or disease.

To date, the agency has coordinated and performed over $5 million worth of free surgical procedures to people around the world who do not qualify for state or federally funded programs.

Founder Dennis Nigro, M.D., conceived Fresh Start after he found himself lacking surgical resources during a medical trip to Mexico. He realized it would be easier to bring patients to his office.

"Plastic surgery is one of the specialties suitable for this type of program," said Nigro.

"The procedures we perform generally don't require lengthy hospitalization."

The Bazil's learned that Fresh Start would perform surgery on Rochelle. "We sent them pictures and within a few weeks they called back saying they were willing to help," said Ronald Bazil.

So, last April, the Bazil's packed their car and headed south to Tennessee where they spent one week in a hotel, free of charge. Within the first two days of their stay, Rochelle was operated on and in recovery.

"They put this thing on my nose that knocked me out," said Rochelle shyly.

So far, Rochelle has had marks removed from the left side of her face, her hands, nose and lips as well as removal of excess tissue mass from her back.

The Bazil's decided not to have all of the marks removed right away since Rochelle is so young. "When she is a teenager the doctors said they would need to see her again because she will be growing until then," said Ronald Bazil.

Sandra Bazil is hoping for further developments on the skin disorder in the meantime.

"I'm praying they will come up with something to take it all off without (any trace of) scarring," she said.

For now the Bazil's will go on about their lives in their new home in Delaware. Here, they said, they found a comfortable environment where people don't seem to pay attention to their daughter's skin.

Looking back to the days before Rochelle had surgery, Sandra Bazil recalled worrisome times, but quickly exclaimed, "It's amazing to see how she looks today!"

Teaching the moves in ballet

By TERRI GILLESPIE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

It's a flurry of leg warmers, leotards, tights, sweatpants, T-shirts, water bottles, backpacks, and teenage chatter at the New Century Club in Newark. A dozen or so slim, lithe ballerinas, their hair pulled back in buns, take to the barre for warm-ups.

Among the dancers is Sara Taylor Warner, founder and artistic director of Mid-Atlantic Ballet. But you'd be hard-pressed to pick her out without a second glance. At 27, Warner is practically indistinguishable from her students until she steps up to start classes.

Warner runs the sessions with good-humored authority, and everybody works hard. She paces the room and watches in the full-length mirrors, stopping to align a shoulder or demonstrate a delicate hand position.

Or she'll perch on her stool, calling out commands in French and encouragement in English.

"Change! Show your strength...show your control! That's it - don't let that leg dangle in the wind!"

There's a lesson to be learned here. "Ballet's like chess," Warner explains to the class. "While you're doing a step, I want you to think about what you're supposed to do eight counts from now."

Dancing is activity with a purpose, and it's good for kids. "The discipline transfers over to their school work, too," Taylor said. "Ballerinas don't get F's. It makes them intelligent physically and strong mentally."

In addition, Warner believes ballet class gives the students one of the things they have control over in their lives. "That control is important, especially for teenager girls," she said. "It empowers them, gives them a feeling of self-worth."

Warner started dancing at age 7 and "I hated it. It was boring. I didn't want to get up early on Saturday morning, put on tights, and pull my hair back in a bun."

Three years later, she danced in a performance of The Nutcracker and "was hooked."

Getting up in front of an audience is a central part of the dance experience, Taylor said. "Performing is the payoff. You spend several hours a day in rehearsal, and that's your reward."

The next "payoff" will be Delaware Dance Festival: Performance 2000, scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 26, at 7 p.m. at Pearson Hall in Newark. Her troupe will be among the 17 dance groups participating.

Warner is also offering her students training in choreography. It's available only to those who demonstrate their interest by submitting a proposal. "Creating dance makes them better dancers," she said. "And I find that the more I create, the more I want to create."

Gillespie is a member of the Newark Arts Alliance.

Arts Alliance gets second Longwood grant

The Newark Arts Alliance has received a second $20,000 grant from The Longwood Foundation. The NAA received a Longwood grant in 1997 which was used to create a photography program and facilities to serve at risk youth.

The new grant will provide funds for equipment and supplies. "We'll be able to improve our operations dramatically with this financial support," said staff coordinator Terry Foreman. "With better equipment and supplies, we'll be able to reach more people."

Foreman said $3,500 was previously received for the scholarship fund. Scholarships are available for all classes offered by the NAA.

The scholarship fund is still in need of support from NAA members, other grant givers and members of the community. "The revival of our scholarship fund is encouraging to young people in our community who wish to take art and photography classes," said Foreman. "The Longwood Foundation's generosity has kept us moving forward by helping us to build a stronger education program."

The Newark Arts Alliance operates the Art House, a gallery and meeting place, and the Art Warehouse, a workshop/teaching space, both in downtown Newark.

Seniors lead Hens down the stretch

Six University of Delaware seniors punctuated the most impressive four-year stretch in Blue Hen basketball history Monday night. Now, those same players want to end their careers with an exclamation point.

Mike Pegues led the senior contingent with 34 points as the Hens blew out over-matched Hartford 90-72 in a game that wasn't as close as the final score indicated. The contest marked the last regular season home game for Pegues, John Gordon, Madou Diouf, Kestutis Marciulionis, Ndongo Ndiaye and Darryl Presley.

The group has won two America East championships and has posted two straight 20-win seasons. The work, however, is not finished yet.

This year, Delaware is on the cusp of another 20 victory (19-6 after Hartford) campaign and a third-straight trip to the NCAA Tournament.

It's that last possibility that is the primary focus of this year's squad and it may not be as easy as the previous two. Maine and Hofstra are tied atop the America East standings, two games ahead of Delaware. All that really means is that Delaware may have to play the conference championship game on the road — something it hasn't had to do the last two seasons. It's also something that may make this potential championship the sweetest one yet.

The Hens will get quality road-game practice in as their last three games before the conference tournament are at Towson (Saturday night), at Vermont (Feb. 24) and at Hartford (Feb. 26).

Vermont has already beaten Hofstra and Maine at home.

"These three road games are really important," Pegues said. "It can give us confidence. We know we'll probably have to go to Maine or Hofstra to win the conference championship. So, it'll be good to play in a place like Vermont."

Delaware has dropped conference road games to Northeastern, Maine and Hofstra this season.

"If we were fortunate to get past the quarterfinals and the semifinals, there's a good chance we'll have to go on the road for the title game,"

Area athletes pool talents for UD

By CHRIS DONAHUE

The competitive waters get a lot deeper when a swimmer or diver takes the plunge from high school to college-level competition.

But several local athletes have successfully made the transition to help the University of Delaware's men's and women's swimming and diving teams into two of the best squads in the America East conference, which will hold its league championships Feb. 18-20 at the Carpenter Sports Building pool.

The Hens' men's team is trying to win its fourth consecutive conference title, while the women's team is seeking its first since 1997. Both teams are coached by John Hayman.

On the women's side, local swimmers are sophomore Kate Poore, a graduate of Glasgow who is excelling at breaststroke and individual medley races; two-time letter-winner Meagan Schuster, a junior from Newark High who is the team's No. 2 diver and the daughter of the Hens' assistant coach, John, and sophomore Jennifer Haus, a native of Newark who went to

Hodgson, WP win state wrestling titles

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

Top-seeded William Penn ended St. Mark's' three-year stranglehold on the Division I Dual Meet state championship by beating the No. 2 Spartans 25-23 Wednesday night at Delaware State University.

While that match was going on, top-seeded Hodgson was winning its fourth consecutive Division II title. The Silver Eagles cruised to a 44-16 win over No. 2 Milford.

William Penn (16-0) beat No. 4 Sussex Central in the semifinals, while St. Mark's (8-4) beat No. 3 Caesar Rodney 34-21.

Hodgson (13-1) recorded six pins en route to a 60-6 win over No. 4 Smyrna in its semifinal, while No. 2 Milford topped No. 3 Howard 39-24.

Hodgson junior Mike Welch (130 pounds) was one of three Silver Eagles to record pins in both matches.

"It's pretty cool because when I was younger I used to always look up to Hodgson and saw them progress and become a powerhouse," said Welch, who improved his record to 34-2 this season.

"I'm just glad to be a part of it and help out."

William Penn last won the Division I title in 1996 and has now captured it four times since the tournament began in 1993. St. Mark's has won the other four titles.

"It's really fun to see a great group of kids who are, by the way, outstanding students... achieve something through a lot of hard work against a quality opponent," said William Penn Coach Jack Holloway.

"When you do it against St. Mark's, who's always there, it makes it special. I think we have a great rivalry and I hope it's a mutual respect. I know we respect them a tremendous amount. I think that always makes for a great, great, great rivalry."

Over 2,000 see state's best rivalry

It wasn't a victory by a huge margin and it was a nonconference triumph with the state Division I Dual Meet Championships six days later.

But for at least for those six days, William Penn High could call itself the best wrestling team in the state after the visiting, second-ranked Colonials rallied from a 12-3 deficit to knock off No. 1 St. Mark's before more than 2,000 spectators last Saturday.

The victory ended the Colonials' four-match losing streak to St. Mark's, which last lost to William Penn in the 1996

Division I Dual Meet title meet.

The victory improved the Colonials, dual meet record to 13-0 this season and sent them into the duals as the top seed in Division I.

The win also boosted William Penn's all-time record against St. Mark's, including dual meet finals, to 14-9.

St. Mark's, the three-time defending state champion whose record slipped to a deceptive 6-4, had finished higher than William Penn at two tournaments this year.

"There was a lot of good wrestling," said William Penn Coach Jack Holloway. "There was nothing to celebrate here tonight except good times; fun, good wrestling. It's nice to see a good crowd for high school wrestling. It's nice to see two good teams wrestling."

Bobby Shaw put the Spartans ahead 6-0 when he pinned Matt Weber one minute, 36 seconds into their match.

At 112, William Penn's Ken Krygier trailed Ryan Ball 6-3 before rallying to win 7-6.

But Pat Atkinson (119) and Matt McConnell (125) earned decisions to put the Spartans ahead 12-3.

Atkinson's 6-5 win came in overtime when his opponent, state champion Gregg Quales, who was wrestling with a sore ankle, was penalized a point for stalling.

At 130, William Penn's Harry Kettner outdueled Chris Collins to make it 12-6, and Shemarr Thompson scored a 20-10 major decision over A.J. Cessario to make it 12-10.

St. Mark's' Andrew Donofrio blunted the Colonials' momentum by gaining a 5-2 decision over Joe Ferrara at 140, but James Fromal responded for William Penn with a 7-2 win over Tyler Bastianelli.

In one of the best matches of the evening, Stoney Graves gave William Penn a 16-15 lead by beating Shawn Willis at 152. Graves used a last-second escape to tie the bout 6-6, then won it with a takedown in overtime.

St. Mark's Coach Steve Bastianelli then tried a strategic move by forfeiting at 160, which put the Colonials ahead 22-15. But William Penn's 171-pounder, Mark Harmon, thwarted the tactic by defeating Jeff Grieder, who was originally penciled in at 160, by a 6-4 score to make it 25-15.

The Colonials were able to hold on to win because Spartans Geoff Ashford (189) and heavy-weight Nick Meyer were only able to manage decisions.

"This isn't the match that really counted," said Bastianelli. "We figure that the team is pretty good and you're probably going to have to wrestle them again."

"So, we wanted to see some things. I hate to forfeit people, but I got forfeited, too, when I was younger and it was something I felt I had to do today. We wanted to see Jeff Grieder wrestle Harmon."

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

DANIELLE BAILEY - CHRISTIANA

The scary thing, at least for opponents, about Christiana High's Danielle Bailey is that she's only a junior.

A couple days before the State Indoor Meet on Saturday at the University of Delaware Field House, which begins at noon, Bailey slowed down long enough before practice began to talk about her dominating season as a sprinter and career.

So far, after five meets of the six-week indoor season, all Bailey has done is win the 55, 200 and 400 meter runs almost every time. Last Saturday, she won all three events and set a meet record in the 55 at 26.02 seconds in the process.

Bailey, who will soon begin training for the outdoor track season, won the 100 last year at the outdoor state championships and ran the anchor leg of the winning 400 and 800 relays.

"It's just the thrill of running," Bailey said about when asked what she likes most about the sport. "I wanted to run track ever since I was little. Ever since my brother (Rashad) ran track at Christiana. So I waited until I got to high school."

"I pretty much knew I was a sprinter when I came out here. My coach (David Jones) automatically put me in the 55 (meters) and the 200 and then he put me in the 400 at first just to get faster in the 200. And then (the 400) just became one of my events."

Despite her success indoors, Bailey, a resident of Newark who also runs cross country for the Vikings in the fall, said she enjoys competing outdoors more. Bailey also runs the 200 and 400 in the spring.

But she's still looking forward to this weekend.

"I still get nervous running against the competition I've had all year," Bailey said. "My goal this weekend is to break the 55-meter record

(7.15 seconds). I've already tied it, and I want to break it now."

"In the 200, (Bailey and Dover's Camethia Baker) push each other a lot. She's got the record for the 200 and we're always neck-and-neck. So I'm always working hard."

Jones said Bailey's ascension to the elite class of sprinters is no accident. In addition to having her older brother as an inspiration, her sister, Latisha, also ran on the state champion 400 and 800 relays last year. Latisha is now at Radford University.

"(Danielle's) whole thing is that she loves it," Jones said. "She's always in practice. It's not like some kids who do well and you always have to drag them to practice. She's a big plus for the team because she works harder than anybody on the team even though she's winning all these things."

"The kids see her at practice every day, working hard every day, and it inspires them. Everything she's getting she works hard for."

Jones added that another source of inspiration for Bailey, and the other Vikings, is Lynn Harris, who graduated last year. Harris, who won the 1999 indoor track Outstanding Athlete Award and ran with Bailey on the winning 400 and 800 relay teams, is now about to compete in the long jump at a major meet for the University of Maryland.

"When these kids were freshmen I talked to their parents and said they have a lot of potential," Jones said. "I told them if we can just keep them together and give them some confidence; and it just took off and blossomed. And last year it all started to come together and now the past is pushing down to the other kids. And seeing them do it, they're falling in right in line."

Local swimmers buoy University of Delaware team

► SWIMMING, from 13

St. Mark's.
"The diving that we see, (Schuster's) real competitive," Hayman said.

"(Poore) has just blossomed. Last year as a freshman, she was swimming good, but not at the big step you need to go to when you're swimming Division I. She's one of our good utility people that's always going to do the good times. Just not quite fast enough to win. I rely a lot on her."

"Jen's pretty much a freestyler and she can run the gamut from sprint all the way up to distance. What makes her so valuable is that very few programs have kids who can go the whole distance. She was our Outstanding Female Athlete last year. She was our only conference champion (in the 200 freestyle) last year. She's a very smart swimmer and I don't think she's been beat (in dual meets) this year."

"I think I like college swimming a lot better than high school swimming," said Haus, who would like to pursue a career in physical therapy. "I think the biggest difference is you have to push yourself a lot harder in dual meets. You have to do a lot more (in practice)."

"I actually like (swimming) a lot better now than I did in high school. I wasn't sure I was going to do it in college. But I'm glad I did."

On the men's side, joining Troskey are senior Brian McGillen, freshmen Jon Kaczmarczyk and Andrew Tokarsky, all of Newark and graduates of St. Mark's, and freshman diver David Troskey, a graduate of William Penn, who won the state title as a senior and is now the Hens' top diver.

McGillen is America East Scholar Athlete of the Year who intends to pursue a career in medicine. He's a three-time letterman and tri-captain of the team along with diver Brian Aston and freestyler Jim Reichart.

McGillen, who has a 3.89 grade-point average in pre-med, is a backstroker and sprint freestyler.

"Brian, I always know what he's going to do," Hayman said. "He's going to give you 100 per cent every single time and I can predict how fast he's going to go. So he's helped us out in a lot of relays and obviously in sprint freestyles and backstrokes."

"And he continues to drop his times even as a senior."

"I think it's more fun (in college) because we all go to school together," McGillen said. "Back in high school, they don't all swim for St. Mark's. Some go to (other amateur teams). Here, you all swim for the University of Delaware, you all practice together. It has its ups and downs, but it's much more fun."

"I think that's one of the best things about swimming here. Is that over the past three years we've won the America East and we're starting to bring some recognition to this side of campus and not what goes on on the other side of the (South College Avenue) bridge."

McGillen's sister, meanwhile, Katie, is a junior currently swimming for St. Mark's.

Kaczmarczyk, who competed in one meet this season, is a transfer from Washington College.

"He's one of our cerebral swimmers," Hayman said. "He wants to know why he's doing something. But he needs time. He's not at our level yet."

Tokarsky, whose older brother, Greg, swam for four years at UD, also needs seasoning, Hayman said.

"He'll probably need about two years to get up to the level he needs to, but I'm very strong in freestyle," Hayman said. "But another great kid."

As for the America East championships, Hayman said winning a fourth consecutive men's title would be especially gratifying.

"That's why this is a special year for us," Hayman said. "No university team has won four championships in a row since maybe field hockey probably did it back in the late 70's."

"Now, women's lacrosse has three in a row and baseball has three in a row, but our season finishes first."

"On paper, we're probably the best men's team," Hayman added. "But that doesn't mean a whole lot."

The women's team finished fourth in last year's swimming championships, and Hayman is expecting them to finish no higher than second.

"We don't have the top-end people," Hayman said. "The men are not scholarship; the men are, but it's a really low amount. If we're getting kids, we're not getting them because of money. We're getting them because they want to come to Delaware. Then we try to help them out with books and stuff."

Hens prep for stretch drive

► HENS, from 13

said Delaware coach Mike Brey. "We have to use this as practice. We actually did a good job in our road trip to Drexel and Hofstra. We just didn't go 2-0."

Brey is happy with the way his team his playing offense as the 90 points and 25 assists against Hartford attest. He is, though, a bit worried about his defense and rebounding.

"I thought we've played really well offensively since the Maine game (a 71-56 loss on Jan. 29). We've really concentrated on that during practices and we haven't done as much on defense. That'll change now."

"We have to get better rebounding the ball too."

One player that could help both the defense and the rebounding is Presley. However, the 6-6 forward is battling a turf toe injury that kept him out of all three home games last week.

"We hope to have Darryl back against Towson," Brey said. "But the reality of the situation is that we may never have him back. We'll have to get used to playing without him."

TOURNEY TID BITS - The winner of next week's Hofstra-Maine game (at Hofstra) will most likely get the top seed in the America East tournament. That means that Delaware (the probably third seed), if it wins its quarterfinal contest, would play the loser in the semis. If the Hens do get that third seed they will play in the night session of quarterfinal Saturday (March 4). Tickets for individual sessions of the tournament go on sale Monday (Feb. 28).

Ed Loper documentary TO AIR ON TELEVISION

As part of Black History month, a half-hour long documentary about a Wilmington painter will air on Sunday, Feb. 27, at 5:30 p.m. on WHYY-TV (PBS) Channel 12.

"Edward L. Loper: Prophet of Color," is the second in a series of artist biographies featuring prominent Delawareans. Told in the artist's own words, this program paints an intimate portrait of the young African-American man from Wilmington who began drawing and painting on his own in the mid 1930's. Now, some 60 years later, his uncommon talent is recognized at the national level. His intensely colorful canvases are testament to his deep pursuit into the use of color. His influence is evidenced by his immense student following. The program follows Loper in his hometown and on his annual pilgrimage to France where he continues to instruct students each summer. For additional information, contact Stefanie Taylor at Teleduction at 429-0303.
