Klan, parents protest at Brader

The cause: alleged offensive touching by 6-year-old boy

By Tonja Castaneda
Post Staff Writer

Peaceful members of the Ku Klux Klan joined angry parents outside Brader Elementary School Tuesday morning to protest school officials' handling of a student sexual assault.

Marchers shouted "protect our girls" across the street from the bus entrance to the Four Season Parkway school.

Some parents are angered by the way school officials are handling an incident when a 6-year-old boy allegedly fondled two 6-year-old girls in a first-grade class.

Carol Brooks, whose daughter was allegedly touched, said she has asked the principal of Brader to remove the boy from the classroom or from Brader.

"We have 113 signatures of people who want the boy removed from Brader Elementary," said Brooks. She said she has requested a meeting with the boy's mother and was told "no."

"We were told we could come to a meeting at the school on Jan. 22," said Brooks. "They have never asked if my child needs or wants counseling," said Brooks.

Lori Reed, whose daughter was also allegedly touched, said she wants the boy to be assigned to a different class, placed in a class with problem children or put in home schooling until his problems are solved. "I was told no, that the boy has due process rights," said Reed.

Reed said the subject of counseling for her daughter was never brought up until she claimed that school officials were not concerned with her daughter.

Dr. Terri Klemm, spokesperson for Christina School District, said the school district really wants to do what is best for both sides.

"We don't want to violate anyone's rights," said Klemm. "Allegations have been made about this boy and he is innocent until proven guilty. The young man should get a chance to state his side of the case."

"If he does have a problem, then we will evaluate it and see what best meets his needs," said Klemm. If (the solution) won't be based on allegations but educational facts and study. To take a child out of the classroom or school, based on allegations, isn't fair to either side."

"We have started an investigation and evaluation of the boy," said Klemm. "We have a transitional aide that will be with him when he returns to school."

Klemm said counseling is available to the victims.

Reed said she does not know how the Ku Klux Klan found out about the protest. Reed said the

Veasey, reclining in The Blue Room at The White House

One of Bush's last Points of Light

Dorothy Veasey shines in D.C.

By Nancy Turner

Staff Feature Writer

On Jan. 14, a homemaker from Robscott Manor in Newark shook the hands of President and Mrs. Bush in the White House.

Taking her turn in the receiving line and being delighted by the festivities, she said, "Mr. President, I'd like to thank you very much for..."

"Oh, no," President Bush headed her off.

"We are here to thank you for all you have done. This is your day."

And so it was that Dorothy Biddle Veasey, 62, officially became the 10007th "Daily Point of Light" in our nation's shining force of volunteers.

A "Point of Light" is an individual, business or organization that voluntarily takes direct and consequential action to solve serious social problems in the community.

For 40 hours per week, for the past seven years, Veasey has worked in every facet of Youth at Risk camps all over the country. When she is not on location at the camps, the grandmother of 12 is organizing future camp programs over cups of coffee at her kitchen computer.

The national Youth at Risk Program, entering its 10th year, teaches abused and neglected inner city youth the virtues of sharing, trust, and responsibility in hopes of redirecting their lives. Initially, the young people attend week-long camps in the rural countryside where they concentrate on inner-studies, retrospection, and recreation, away from the negative influences of their city environments. After completing the camp, the youth are assigned to a "committed partner" and other supportive volunteers within their community who monitor their progress for one year.

Veasey was invited to volunteer with the Youth at Risk Program by a group of counselors that she met years before, while rappelling and traversing the heights in a "Six Day" self help/physical challenge camp.

Police: Rapist on loose Rumor mill: He's caught

By Diane Heck

Staff Reporter

Despite the various, wild rumors buzzing all around New Castle County, neither the alleged serial rapist nor the suspect of the attempted rape near Pathmark in College Square have been caught, county and local police departments report.

Dan Eastberg, patrolman for the New Castle County Police, said nasty, vicious rumors have been rampant over the past few weeks. "The phone lines here are burning up with different stories," he said.

A New Castle resident heard from a friend of a friend on the force that the serial rapist was a Delaware State Trooper, and his wife, a police officer with New Castle County, was on the arresting team.

"A lot of people are saying the same thing," she said.

A Newport man along with several Newark residents relate very similar stories. A few say that the trooper wasn't arrested, but instead, he checked himself into a rehabilitation center in Wilmington.

A worker at the East End Cafe on Main Street said she heard the police found a suspect, but that no one has been arrested.

Eastberg said he's not sure how the rumors got started, but it's quite typical. "It's a hot topic that people are going to talk about, but regardless of what people think, there have been no arrests. We will go public immediately as an arrest is made."

Whether it's plain Newark gossip or idle chit chat, people are talking about these wanted men.

Jerry Lehane III, a long-time resident of downtown Newark, has his own theories about the serial rapist. "It has to be someone from out of town," he said. Lehane also said he finds it interesting that some of the rapes coincided with KKK rallies.

Regarding the suspect wanted for the attempted rape and attempted murder incident that happened on Nov. 12 near Pathmark, the rumors are not as numerous, but with his sketch hanging in almost all the stores in the area, people are on guard.

An employee of Rainbow Records on Main Street said a guy came in the store three weeks ago and told her the man had been caught. "He said the man was arrested at the Sunoco on Main Street, and there were a lot of police cars that shied away business at the gas station." She hoped the news was true, but when she didn't hear about it on the news, she wasn't sure what to believe.

NVF fire investigation offers reward

By E. Fine

Staff Reporter

Delaware Crime Stoppers, Inc. is offering up to $1,000 for information about the Jan. 3 fire that gutted the historic National Vulcanized Fibre Co. (NVF) building in Newark. Investigators believe the fire was caused by arsonists.

Newark City Fire Marshal Ken Farrell said he is investigating the fire with the city police department.

They also are in touch with the State Fire Marshal, who is investigating the Jan. 9 fire at the NVF building in Hockessin, Farrell said.

Investigators, though, have yet to link the two fires, which occurred within a week of one another, he said.

The vacant NVF building, located at Paper Mill Road and Race Street, caught fire at 7:30 p.m. and took over three hours to control.

Small flames still smoldered for days following the blaze that brought between 100 and 120 firefighters to the building from seven county fire companies and one from Maryland.

Philip Sereni, a ladder captain and spokesman for Newark's Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, said the fire gutted about 30,000 square feet of the building.

Sereni said Newark firefighters had for years feared a fire starting there because of the building's limited access, its chemical-soaked floors and that the nearest hydrants were 400 feet from the building.

The building's sprinkler system also didn't work, he said.

Another blaze causing nearly $1 million in damages broke out at the site on Christmas morning in 1886, putting about 800 people out of work.

Anyone with information can call Crime Stoppers anonymously at (800) 847-3333.

VEASEY/from 1A

Her first volunteer experience with Youth at Risk Camp came in upperstate New York.

"I remember being very upset to learn what young people are going through," said Veasey. "I raised five children, but I guess I lived a very sheltered life. I heard children's stories about poverty and all the things that they had to do just to live. It really turned my life around."

"Even though my children are raised and out of the house now, there's no way that I can put my feet up on a beach somewhere... not when there are children in the world that live like these children do."

At a time in her life when living can be easy, why does Veasey reach out to young people who are out of control and who have police records and histories of violence?

"I think of my grandchildren," said Veasey. "I would like for them to share a world with kids that at least know that there is love and understanding. I know I can't give all the children in the world the benefits that my grandchildren have had, but I think that I can give them the benefits of knowing that someone cares. Kids want someone to love them and play with them. These kids have never had that."

"I was with a 12-year-old boy in an apartment in Philadelphia where youngsters were kept while they awaited their court dates," recalled Veasey. "I was typing and he was just hanging around. Then he asked me if he could make me something to eat. There was nothing in the kitchen, but I thought there was some instant Cup o' Soup so I said 'thank you, I would appreciate some soup.' He went to the kitchen and after a while he came back with a big plate of peanut butter and crackers, a pickle, a cup of soup and a spoon."

As it turned out, Veasey explained, there was no instant Cup o' Soup in the kitchen. The boy, who most people would label "a Youth at Risk terror" because he was tagging along with a gang, had prepared soup from odds and ends of condiments.

His explanation for his creativity?

"It's good soup, Ma'am. When you are hungry, you find stuff."

Veasey never imagined that her work with Youth at Risk would earn attention from the White House. Making a difference in a few young lives has always been its own reward. She looks at the recognition as another means of getting the word out about this outstanding program.

Veasey says that she is "not young enough to jump off of mountains" like she did when she was repelling camper in the "Six Day" course.

Her work with Youth at Risk is often a lot of paper work, telephone talk and on-location office management. But then there are days when Veasey opens her heart to youth struggling in the urban trenches.

Some might say that those are the days when she is climbing mountains, instead.

PROTEST/from 1A

klan showed up in the morning and asked if they could protest with them.

"We said, if they have daughters too and there are no racial slurs or issues brought up and they stood on their own side and we stood on ours, then fine," said Reed.

"I'm glad they showed us support, no one else did," Reed said. "Mothers were telling us to shut up! That's a shame there's no support for some children."

Brooks said she also does not know how the klan became involved with the demonstration. "I was very upset about the klan being there, because people who are ignorant of what is happening to our girls assumed we were causing trouble," said Brooks.

"I don't belong to the group and I tried to get them to leave," said Brooks, "but half of them (the klan demonstrators) had children that go to the school."

Klan members said they represented the Territorial Klans of America. "I have three children in the Christina School District," said Klan member Robert Tweed. "There are serious racial problems and the media never covers them. We're also here to support the parents in any way."

Although the boy is black and the girls are white, Dr. Klemm, director of information services for the Christina School District, said "This is a children's incident and will be dealt with the way any child would be according to the student code of conduct book."

Klemm said the school is taking action right away and not trying to down-play the incident. She said the school will be doing some evaluation of the boy.

According to Brooks, her 6-year-old daughter came home from school and asked her if she could tell her something. "I knew it was important because she's six and usually she tattles, not asks to tell me something."

Brooks said she has discussed good and bad touching with her daughter. Brooks said her daughter told her a boy attempted to grab her in her privates.

Brooks filed a police report on Jan. 12 with Delaware State Police Troop 6, Prices Corner, for offensive touching.

"My daughter had to explain what happened to two male officers and was totally humiliated," said Brooks.

Jeff Hale, public information officer for Delaware State Police, verified there was a police report filed. "Right now, we're leaving what action is to be taken up to the school district," said Hale.

Brooks said the same boy two days later "punched my daughter between her legs and pulled his arm up."

Brooks said when she went to Brader and asked her daughter to point out the boy who touched her, "the boy grabbed his crotch and shook it at us," Brooks said.

"Six or 60, you don't touch my daughter," said Brooks, "and you don't do it repeatedly and get away with it. The school keeps telling me this boy has rights, but so does my daughter."

"I'm protesting the fact that my little girl can't go into her classroom and feel safe," said Brooks.

"I have to peel my daughter off me to go to school," said Brooks, "and she didn't do that when she started kindergarten."

Reed also says her daughter has been violated by the same boy.

Reed said she found out about her daughter being touched on Jan. 13 when her daughter came out of school hysterical.

"My daughter told me that a little boy had taken the wand from the triangle (musical instrument) and was jabbing it in her private area," Reed said.

Reed said her daughter wanted to wear a skirt to school and she couldn't let her.

Reed said she told her daughter to defend herself if he tries to touch her again. "I was told if my daughter lays one hand on him, she will be suspended," said Reed. "They won't condone hitting but condone offensive touching."

From Brader Elementary School, the parents went to protest at the Christina School District Building on Main Street. The Ku Klux Klan were also there and wore their traditional white hoods and gowns.

"The Klan took it on themselves to go to Main Street," said Brooks.

Klemm said the school district won't be taking action against the demonstrators because what they were doing is legal.

"People have the right to demonstrate," said Klemm.

Brooks said the school responded to the demonstration by sending a note home to her and the other parents saying they were dealing with the inappropriate behavior.

At a gathering Tuesday night of members of the Newark Business Association, Newark Police Chief William Hogan disclosed that Chester Doles, a leader of the active Ku Klux Klan chapter that is based in Cecil County, Md., was part of the demonstration.

Hogan said that he learned of the klan's planned participation in the march late Monday night and speculated that the klan was notified of the protest by some parents at Brader.

He said that no arrests were made and there were no incidents involving the klan.

Bear/Glasgow Jaycees looking for a few good people to recruit

By Alfred T. Erskine Jr.

Special to The Post

BEAR — The Jaycees may not be for everyone, but it may be for you.

Ann and Ken Weiford of Springwood are looking for a few good people. They are two of a small group of people trying to keep the Bear-Glasgow Chapter of the Jaycees alive.

The Bear-Glasgow chapter has shrunk to six members, well below the 20-member minimum required by the Jaycees charter. The Weifords are trying to recruit individuals between the ages of 21 and 40 who have a desire to improve their business skills and want to involve themselves in community volunteering.

Jaycees provides members the opportunity to enhance their business skills through the training opportunities offered.

"The Jaycees is a training organization for the young people in the community," said Ken. He then went on to describe the organization. "We (Jaycees) train you and then give you the opportunity to use those skills to raise money for different charities or for food baskets or whatever you (the chapter) want to do."

Each chapter dictates which direction they wish to go. They decide on what their own community projects will be and set their own goals. The Bear-Glasgow chapter has been involved with such projects as child identification and helping with the distribution of Christmas gifts in local neighborhoods.

Their child identification project entailed the fingerprinting of children. The prints were then given to the parents as a means of identifying the child. This took place in a local shopping center in Bear.

Ann and Ken come by their enthusiasm for the Bear-Glasgow chapter naturally. Ann is the past president of the Wilmington chapter and Ken is the past president of the Smyrna-Clayton chapter. The Weifords said the local chapters like to gear their efforts towards helping the local community. They take up worthwhile projects and channel their energies towards aiding neighbors.

That does not mean that the local chapters only concentrate on charity or community activities. They also have fun. One of the recent projects that the Bear-Glasgow Chapter involved themselves in last year was a map reading excursion. They started below the canal and through the aid of maps, traveled into Pennsylvania.

In the past, the main focus of the Jaycees has been in raising funds for charities, but that has been changing. Now Jaycees get involved in such areas as children literacy, child abuse and the environment.

The Bear-Glasgow Jaycees meet on the 2nd and 4th Mondays of the month at the Glasgow Medical Center. Ann Weiford is the contact person for the chapter and can be reached at 843-3042.

Gallagher parents get opportunity to grade their children's school

By E. Fine

Staff Reporter

Report cards belonging to pupils and students are a right of passage across America, whether kids ride to school by way of bumpy country roads or a sleek four-lane highway.

But in at least one Christina School District primary school, parents have a chance to grade the school in almost the same manner.

As part of a district-wide evaluation of schools and curriculum, parents, teachers and students have been encouraged to participate in decision-making.

"School is not a natural experience for some," said Dr. Paul Gor-icki, principal of Gallagher Elementary School in Newark. Not all kids learn in the same way or at the same rate, he said.

The goal of having parents grade school performance is to enlist them as "partners" with the teachers in their children's education, Goricki said.

The form sent to homes last week mimics pupil and student report cards by listing a single column of subjects, including reading, writing, social studies, math and science with space for parents to mark the school's grade in teaching each subject.

To the right of the column is space for parents to decide where instruction in a particular subject should come from, be it the school, the home or both.

Below the report card, the form asks parents two questions dealing with the effectiveness of the school and family at working together and whether or not the school is meeting the overall needs of the child.

The forms were designed to be simple enough for parents to fill out in five to 10 minutes, Goricki said.

He said by Jan. 15 the school's staff already had received grades from about 200 parents. That the school's teachers didn't shy away from opening themselves to criticism signals that growth will occur, he said.

A staff survey also is planned, Goricki said.

Phone book recycling project needs your old directories

Diamond State Telephone officials did some calculations about the telephone directories they issue each year to residents all over the county.

A ton of old directories that is collected and recycled saves about 17 trees.

And if Diamond State authorizes 350,000 new directories for county residents, there must be at least that many taking up space in people's homes.

And face it, last year's telephone directories serve little purpose when children are old enough to get by without booster seats.

By recycling a mere 10 percent, Diamond State figures they can save nearly 1,500 trees.

Moreover, a ton of recycled directories also represents the saving of 3 cubic yards of landfill space.

Lacking the resources to handle the job themselves, Diamond State is teaming up with the Delaware Solid Waste Authority and BFI Recycling Services for this purpose.

In Newark, the drop-off site is at the Newark Municipal Maintenance Yard at Phillips Avenue and B

Street on Jan. 29 and 30 and Feb. 5 and 6 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., rain or shine.

The directories must be dry and free of plastic.

The books will be moved to Lancaster, Pa., where they will be used for hydro-mulch, game boards and animal bedding.

If the program is successful here, the authority is planning to try it in both Kent and Sussex counties in the spring.

Development interest rates on rise in Bear/Glasgow area

By Alfred T. Erskine Jr.

Special to The Post

BEAR — The interest rate is beginning to rise in the Bear-Glasgow area. This is due to the increased interest by residents in the rate of new developments appearing in the area.

The Bear/Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations (BGCCO) has been holding a series of meetings with representatives of Wilmington Trust. The area of concern has been the development of Brennan Estates.

This new development has been proposed for a 500-acre parcel of land located near Glasgow. Located off of Del. 896, between Denny Road and the Delaware Veterans Memorial Cemetery, this new development will add upward of 1,150 new "units" to the area.

Interest from local residents has increased noticeably with every meeting. Each gathering has brought out new participants with new areas of concern. The latest meeting, held in Glasgow Jan. 12, was attended by more than 65 vocal residents. Many of those present aired their concerns about the new development.

They've expressed their fear of over-population of the area, increased traffic, the impact on local wells in the area and the influx of townhouse/quadrplex housing in a predominantly single family home area.

Wilmington Trust Attorney Larry J. Tarabicos represented the bank at the meeting. He reviewed a list of restrictions that Wilmington Trust has proposed to satisfy the local residents. Some of the restrictions dealt with the concerns that people had aired in earlier meetings.

Many of those present were angered by Wilmington Trust's desire to create a high density development, with low acreage lots. One resident challenged Tarabicos by saying, "Earlier you asked the question, 'What is wrong with Wilmington Trust protecting their investment?' We can ask [you] the same question. What is wrong with us protecting our own investment, our homes?" Tarabicos replied, "I don't know what your concern is, I really don't."

Tarabicos then said, "You folks have a different idea about the class of people and who belongs in your back yard." This caused a heated exchange with one resident saying, "That is the big problem. You keep bringing up this class of people stuff...There is no objection to any class of people. The objection is to the area. We did not move down here to have townhouses."

Tarabicos then asked the gathering, "Where should town houses be built in the country?" To which another resident replied "Up on [Routes] 52 or 100...in Centerville."

"We've asked after every meeting, that if somebody wants write down what you want in here [the restrictions]. We'll put it in," said Tarabicos. He then went on to say, "I've asked for that repeatedly and I haven't gotten anything yet." Janice Hawkins, the BGCCO Planning and Zoning Committee chair, said that her committee was going to finalize its standing at its next meeting.

Hawkins said, "What we, the BGCCO, will be doing, is we will put our position in writing. We will send that to Mr. Tarabicos and we will send also a carbon copy to the Planning Board and the County Council."

Raphael's product offers security

By Diane Heck
Staff Reporter

After fighting the crowds at the mall all day, the last thing a shopper needs is to come out to a large, dark parking lot carrying several packages and be afraid. And how many people decide not to go to a theatre performance or concert in a nearby metropolis simply because they don't feel safe going into the city anymore?

Newark resident Cathy Raphael does not have the solutions to the elevated crime rate, but she is selling a product that makes people feel safer wherever they go — PAAL, the personal attack alarm.

The devices, manufactured by Quorum of Scottsdale, Arizona, are small enough to keep in a coat pocket, but are loud and irritating enough to scare off a purse-snatcher or call attention to a dangerous situation.

Raphael has two designs for the choosing — a black model that resembles a beeper ($30) and a waterproof, yellow sports model ($33). Both work in the same fashion.

The alarms have a hand grenade-like pin to pull in order to set off the alarm. "You won't believe it. It's a very high sound that will kill your ears," Raphael says.

The alarms have short cords so they can be easily carried or they can be clipped onto a belt. Many women like to keep it in their purses or in a coat pocket, she says.

The PAAL is powered by a 9-volt battery guaranteed to make it scream for two hours. Raphael suggests to pull the pin out just a little bit periodically to test it.

"People feel comfortable with this type of protection device because they are not harming anyone," she says.

A report in the September 28 issue of U.S. & World Report compares PAAL with other devices, and states the problem with tear gas, pepper sprays and stun guns is "close physical contact with an attacker is required. The user is also forced to inflict pain; that is difficult for many people, even when acting in their own defense."

In addition to PAAL, Quorum also markets an alarm called Eleret that can be attached to personal items, and will sound if the property is moved in any way, she says. The company has house and car alarms as well that can be ordered.

Raphael has only sold the alarms for about a month now, but she has found success. "I thought it was exactly what Newark needed."

If interested in purchasing an alarm or helping distribute the products, call her at 368-3969.

THE POST

Now's the time to clear the air

A RECENT REPORT ISSUED BY the Environmental Protection Agency confirms what many of us already suspected: second-hand tobacco smoke can be deadly. According to the report, second-hand smoke is responsible for killing approximately 3,000 non-smokers each year, and also impairs the respiratory health of hundreds of thousands of children.

Labeled as environmental tobacco smoke (ETS), the deadly pollutant is defined as a mixture of the smoke exhaled by smokers and the smoke that comes from the burning end of a cigarette, cigar or pipe. ETS contains more than 4,000 substances. Many of them are dangerous poisons and can cause cancer. This type smoke is so dangerous, in fact, that the EPA has classified it as a Group A carcinogen — the same category shared by asbestos and benzene.

And as for how children are affected, the EPA report blames ETS for increasing the risk of lower respiratory infections such as bronchitis and pneumonia in our youngest members of the population. The report states that between 150,000 and 300,000 of these cases occur annually in infants and young children up to 18 months old are attributable to exposure to ETS. Apparently, children exposed to second-hand smoke in the home are more likely to cough, wheeze and to have middle ear problems. Also, approximately 200,000 to 1,000,000 asthmatic children have their condition worsened by exposure to ETS.

What can be done to combat the effects of ETS?

At home, we encourage those who smoke to do so outdoors to reduce the risk of having children inhale the pollution.

When it comes to protecting those of us exposed to ETS in public places, several cities in Delaware have taken the lead in providing safer environments. The City of Wilmington passed a no-smoking ordinance in 1989 that prohibits smoking in art galleries, libraries, museums, classrooms and lecture halls, health care facilities, public transportation, large retail stores with more than 25 employees, along with theaters and sports arenas.

The City of Dover has adopted a similar ordinance.

In Newark, progress in has been a bit slower in coming. On Jan. 1, 1992, as a personnel policy, smoking was banned in city hall. So far, that's the only official step that's been taken.

The danger of ETS will always be present as long as there are smokers in our midst. Now that it has been proven that ETS is killing people, we encourage local business owners, as well as members of the Newark City Council, to take steps to eliminate the risk by joining Wilmington and Dover in prohibiting smoking on a larger scale. It's one thing for smokers to inhale cancer-causing smoke. They've done so by their own volition. Unfortunately, non-smokers usually don't have such a choice, and that's unfair.

Superman's legacy alive in Newark

By Shirley Tarrant
Post Columnist

Let me assure you: Superman is NOT dead. He is alive and well. He lives in the hearts and minds and spirits of many folks I know personally.

One Superman is my friend who is paralyzed from the neck down. It has been two years since a massive stroke put him in a wheelchair, where he sits daily and listens and responds with his eyes.

He cannot eat or speak, but he knows what he wants and lets you know what he thinks. And "think" he does! The stroke did not take away his brainpower or his love of life and family. His emotions are still intact.

His wife (Superwoman) reads and talks to him and keeps him advised of current local and foreign affairs. She asks for his opinions on issues or family decisions, and he responds.

Now that a specially equipped family van is available, my friend visits home several afternoons each week. He even spent Thanksgiving at his sister's house in Maryland with the whole family. A fairly new granddaughter is the "apple of his eye" these days. What a Super Man!

Another Superman of my acquaintance is a friend who cared for his wife, a victim of Alzheimer's, for about eight years in their home. She had a habit of walking away and getting lost on a regular basis. Although her memory disappeared, the sweet and kind personality remained.

This eased the burden, somewhat, for my friend to maintain their home, meet her needs, keep his sanity and deal with every day living, for as long as he could. Even after placing her in a long-term nursing facility, he has continued to visit her regularly. She does not recognize him and they cannot have any kind of meaningful dialogue, but he is there. What a Super Man!

Superwoman is very much alive, too, even though she never had her own comic strip. One Superwoman I know is confined to her bed with terminal cancer. Whenever I visit her and ask how she is doing, she answers "fine." She talks about everything except

A SINGLE SPIRIT

An anniversary to celebrate

By Diane Heck
Post Staff Writer

Ever since Nov. 3, my fighting spirit has taken a holiday. After a long, exciting campaign in which I fiercely debated with friends and family, and with Bill Clinton secured as President, I felt my protesting soul could relax a bit. A woman's right to an abortion would not be taken away, at least for the next four years. I've just been going through life routinely — working, sleeping, working, sleeping. And it's been incredibly boring, so I'm waking up.

Friday, Jan. 22, marks the 20th anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision, declaring that states may not prohibit the right to have an abortion during the first six months of pregnancy. It's really a shame to think it's only been around for that short a time. It's not like unplanned pregnancies have only come about over the last 20 years. Before the 1973 decision, brave women had to face many unnecessary pains and dangers. Many lost their lives.

On the other hand, it is quite amazing Roe vs. Wade made it to its 20th after 12 years of Republicans in power. In 1985, the Justice Department, with Ronald Reagan's approval, asked the Supreme Court to reverse the ruling. Reagan's argument: "The textual, doctrinal and historical basis for Roe vs. Wade is so far flawed and is a source of such instability in the law that this court should abandon it." Well, I guess Nancy was well past menopause and his daughters weren't that important to him.

And just this year at the Republican National Convention, George Bush cried out his concern for the "unborn" while his cronies spouted their anti-homosexual beliefs. Do these guys care about anybody not white, male, healthy and wealthy?

The years of stacking the Supreme Court with ultra-conservatives and lying womanizers didn't help either, but, somehow we made it through.

And just because a Democrat will be in the White House doesn't mean the overwhelming number of people who think women cannot make educated decisions about their own bodies will simply go away. These men and women give priority to a cluster of cells over the life of a woman — a human being who has friends and family and who makes contributions to society. It should be her choice to decide. The woman should ultimately come first. If it were the man who got pregnant, would he also be considered second?

And to those who respond that the fetus will also be an important addition to society, I say that some women, for any reason, possibly emotional or financial, are not prepared to have a child. I remember Whoopi Goldberg once saying, "... all those people protesting outside abortion clinics — I say when all those girls have the babies, we'll bring them over to your house."

Now, women from both sides of the issue are attempting to get together to discuss unwanted pregnancies, the cause of abortion, and how they may be

• Ex-President Taft To Visit Delaware Men

Ex-president William Howard Taft has accepted the invitation of President Mitchell to be present at the commencement exercises of Delaware College, to be held on the Campus on Monday, June tenth, and deliver the annual address. Ex-president Taft makes a powerful appeal to college men everywhere. A Yale man himself, he returned to the University as professor after leaving the White House, and is intimately acquainted with the big educational movements of the country. "His letter of acceptance," President Mitchell declared today, "glows with enthusiasm for the Delaware College."

• Attractive Apartment Completed: To Be Home of George W. Rhodes, on Main Street

Finishing touches have been added to the residential section of the Rhodes building on Main Street, where Dr. G.W. Rhodes will make his future home. The modern apartment which occupies the entire second floor of the building, has developed into one of the most beautiful residences in Newark. The apartment includes six rooms, with bath and store room. The entire suite is finished hard wood — quartered oak and mahogany.

One enters the apartment from a door to the right of the store entrance, a flight of stairs in natural oak finish, leading to the hallway and den, the latter featured by a French window, which floods the space with sunlight and leads to the loggia overlooking the new Delaware College campus and Main Street.

• Colburn Hall Fire Damages Reported At Est. $75,000

A fire in Colburn Hall at the University of Delaware campus last Sunday caused an estimated $75,000 damage and routed 145 male students into the chilling rain. All students were able to return to their rooms later in the day, however.

Newark fire marshal William M. Donahue said that he was conducting his investigation into the fire which swept through the 150-ft. long lounge area of the dormitory across from the Student Center.

One student was injured slightly in the blaze and Dr. John E. Hocutt, vice-president of student affairs, sustained minor cuts and bruises after he slipped and fell running from his home to the fire scene.

Raymond Lynch, a junior from Milford, said it was the fourth time this semester that there has been a fire in the 10-year-old structure.

• Senior Citizens Rejected

Editorial: Newark City Council rejected a request for $8,000 in municipal funds to continue operation of the Senior Center this year, and although the 4-3 vote of rejection was close, it was decisive — and the rejection ridiculous.

The Senior Center project was initiated by the Newark Soporist Club to "serve and enrich the lives of older people — to teach and revive skills; aid with solution of problems for the elderly; and as a senior citizen said with real feeling concerning her contemporaries, "Above all, to provide them with the opportunity to serve the community."

Interim should be eliminated

Editor: I would like to put forth the idea that we do away with this interim period when changing presidents. Supposedly, it is here so the new one can get a staff together and get ready for the move and the old one can hold down the fort in the meantime. In actuality, though, it allows the one leaving to cover his butt for any wrongdoings and to throw immeasurable wrenches into the next guy's plans. Take this interim period, for example. First, we hear of the possible pardons to those involved in some previous Republican scandals. How convenient. While I can appreciate that the president would be nervous about ultimately having to answer any questions about his behavior, should his name come up, once he's left unprotected by his "throne", is it right that he should be able to quickly pardon all his "buddies" just to make sure that doesn't happen? I get nervous sitting on the edge of my chair waiting to see what last minute thing this guy on the way out will do to cover himself, glorify himself, or what he'll do in attempt to put as many kinks in the next guy's agenda as possible. Take all this overseas stuff. I've been reading for many, many months that they've had a hard time enforcing the no-fly zone over Iraq, and that people are starving in Somalia while food is not reaching the needy, but when do we actually fire on an Iraqi plane? When do we actually plan to put troops in Somalia? In the interim. Now, maybe it's all legit and exactly like we've been hearing. But the Republicans have much to gain by muddying the waters as Clinton comes in. If they put him in enough "fixes" by activating troops, etc....Now they are determining the agenda for his first 100 days and beyond. Four years down the road when Clinton goes against a Republican, you can hear how no budget or health care problems were taken care of right away because he was busy sending troops overseas to be killed by Somalis and Iraqis. Oh, no matter what we may think of it now, you know how it will sound during campaign mudslinging. As I say, this could all be legit and the timing just a coincidence. But it makes me very nervous. And, I personally don't like having to squirm for several months. Do any of us really know for certain if the timing of the necessity of these actions now, as opposed to before the elections, or after Clinton's inauguration, is legit, or if it's just part of the game? They say Clinton backs the president's decision regarding Somalia and Iraq; but what is his choice even if he doesn't? Risk further tainting of his first months in office by having an all-out brawl with Bush on a topic that is supposedly Bush's strong point? Maybe he'd chose that course, maybe he wouldn't. All during the campaign those running for president have plenty of time to chose their staffs, and have enough of the important things figured out that they could take over immediately. Let's end this interim period where the current president can do enough "tidying and muddying" that there's a possibility of guilty persons going free, and the new president so tied up he can't get working on his new agenda right away. It's just the possibilities that make me nervous.

prevented. I think it's a great idea if the meetings can be more than a yelling match.

It was also silly for me to think just because a Democrat was to be the country's leader, that there was nothing left to fight for. Clinton is pro-choice, but he does seem to favor restrictions for minors, such as parental consent, a parent's permission before an abortion, and/or notification, a parent being notified afterwards.

Twenty percent of minor girls become pregnant at least once, and many of those girls may have fear of physical abuse, being kicked out of the house or being forced to marry if they tell a parent about their situation. Minor pregnancies resulting from incest are also on the rise. These obstacles basically limit the rights of young women.

Fortunately, Delaware, at this time, has no restrictions, but until there are no hindrances whatsoever on abortion, and until it is termed a medical procedure covered by insurance, there is no time to stop fighting.

Ironically "Jane Roe," a young, poor, divorced waitress in Texas, never did receive an abortion. She carried the child to term and gave it up for adoption in fear an abortion would weaken her case. She is a symbol of self-sacrifice and greatest to all women.

her problems. There are no tears or complaints from her.

There were 29 family members at her house for Thanksgiving. Of course, she didn't eat very much. But, it was wonderful. She was surrounded by her loved ones. Her seven children whom she had raised as a widow were surrounded by her love. What a Super Woman!

Some other Super People from my past are a couple who adopted a retarded baby. When I first met the family, the child was three-years-old, with the mind of a three-month-old.

He was born with cerebral palsy. The "baby" was in diapers, had to be spoon-fed, could not sit up and, certainly, did not recognize his name. As with any retarded child of such low I.Q., this child required ever-present love, attention and extra-special care. What a Super Woman and Super Man!

One of my friends cared for her elderly father-in-law in her home for years. The man lived into his 90s. He received wonderful home-cooked meals, medical attention when needed, love and the knowledge that he had a good home until the end of his days.

As fate would have it, some years after the father-in-law passed away, the husband became a victim of Alzheimer's. My friend, the magnificent caregiver, rose to the occasion and was there though all of the hateful, difficult and sometimes embarrassing scenes, which and Alzheimer's patient can bring into a family's life. She was always there for him, even though he was not aware of her existence. What a Super Woman!

Many other people are coping every day with the heartbreak of a drug-abusive child or a family member's suicide or the death of a child. These are the times when life is at its worst.

These are the times when a person wonders if he/she can face another day, under such abysmal circumstances. There is an infinite number of life's abysmal circumstances. This column cites only a few. The people to whom I refer here are real people, living real circumstances. They are facing their days with courage and strength and dignity.

That is how I know Superman/Woman lives!

The decisions can be very painful. Suddenly, you're forced to put aside your feelings—strong feelings of duty and even guilt—so you can concentrate on getting your parent the kind of care he or she really needs.

We can help. Not only will we provide highly-skilled nursing care, 24 hours a day, we will also extend our care to you. With over 30 years of experience, we can help you get through this confusing and difficult time.

'Emotional Overload' tells of Redden's struggle, hope

By E. Fine
Staff Reporter

When Newarker Joe Redden started his forthcoming book, "Emotional Overload," he was about two years removed from an illness that nearly wrecked his life.

Redden was 18 and had just started studying photography at Cecil County Community College. Though he saw potential for a book, he had no publishing ambitions.

Now 28, Redden said the writing served as therapy, as something he had to do at the time.

After filling three spiral notebooks with the novel's first draft, he switched to his father's computer and spent entire weekends writing. The book chronicles Redden's recovery from an emotional disorder that made him dependent on linking rituals with everyday activities like turning off the TV and brushing his teeth.

The book takes place in a Philadelphia hospital. Mundane chores taking most people no more than a few minutes took Redden hours. These rituals included counting in a certain way or staring at a rug design for a prescribed period of time before he could start or finish a task. Sometimes the compulsion necessitated repeating the ritual over and over.

Redden was a sophomore in high school when the illness started. "The hardest part (of recovering) is being able to say you have a problem," he said. "I was stubborn."

At 16 he said, "Things had gotten out of control. I ended up begging my parents to send me somewhere...It was really a nightmare." He spent nearly three months in a hospital where he was put on medication.

But by his senior year of high school, Redden was back at West Nottingham Academy, a private secondary school near Rising Sun, Md., and received his diploma on time.

Redden earned an associates degree in photography from Cecil in 1987, then spent nearly three years shooting pictures for two weekly newspapers, The Whale in Lewes and The South County Courier in Middletown.

In the meantime, Redden finished the book and decided he wanted to publish it. But he had to decide whether to market the book as non-fiction or fiction and, later, figure how to cut the manuscript from over 200,000 words to about 80,000.

He entered the University of Delaware in the fall of 1990. After numerous rejections, his parents edited the book down to a size publishers found more appealing.

They did this in early 1991 while their son, the author, was spending a semester in Europe. Redden said it made the cutting process easier on him.

"I couldn't see what they were doing."

This month has been especially rewarding for Redden. He graduated from UD with a degree in English and journalism on Jan. 9. A week later was a celebration for the book's acceptance by a Nashville, Tenn. publisher.

The celebration was indeed hard-earned.

"(Through the book) I wanted to tell other people who had the same problems that they're not alone," he said. "I felt really alone and didn't know what was going to happen."

Redden recalled how frightened both he and his family were driving to Philadelphia where he was hospitalized. What they found out, though, was that seeking help isn't as scary as people think it is.

In the hospital, he met other young people suffering from drug problems and depression. He saw his peers there as normal young people who just needed some help.

Fusing actual events from the author's life with fiction, "Emotional Overload" mirrors Redden's experience through the eyes of a character named Geoff Derickson. Besides the unique subject the book deals with, Redden acknowledged that he wrote the book from his gut, without falling back on the influence of other authors.

"I'm glad about that."

Cascade Garden livens Longwood

By Diane Heck
Post Staff Writer

As you enter, you immediately begin to feel the heat. Moist air fills your lungs as you brush past lush, thick greens. Leafy plants with bursts of red and pink that remind you of pineapples line your way down a winding mountain path. Bubbling sounds of waterfalls echo in your ears. Tropical air plants cling to the faces of surrounding cliffs. Tree-trunk-like columns covered with plants rise against the mist. If you think you are escaping the winter blues in a South American jungle, you're close.

Internationally known Brazilian landscape architect Roberto Burle Marx brings a chunk of his native land to Kennett Square with the opening of the new Cascade Garden at Longwood. The new spectacle opened to the public on Jan. 15.

This is the first permanent garden by Burle Marx to have been installed in the United States. Working with Philadelphia landscape architect Conrad Hamerman, a long-time collaborator with Burle Marx, the two planned over the years with other Longwood gardeners, making trips back and forth to Brazil, to create the special site.

The new display features a wide range of bromeliads, which are found almost exclusively in the Americas. Spanish moss and pineapples are probably the best known. Many of the decorative types are grown in Brazil.

Other plants widely used are from the arum family. Some aroids are native to open areas and require bright light; others, including philodendrons ("the friend of the tree"), have become popular house plants because they tolerate the low light levels found under dense jungle canopies.

In all, the Cascade Garden features nearly 150 different types of tropical plants, most of them from Brazil or Florida.

The tree-trunk-like columns are very original. They are the regular metal columns that hold up the greenhouse, but these had wood built around them on which the bark of tree fern was placed. Plants were first anchored on to the poles, but now they have taken root.

Another important feature of the garden, that gave it its name, are the cascading streams of water that seems to mysteriously come out of the walls.

Burle Marx likes to use strong geometric elements that seem to resemble a jigsaw puzzle, and some of these waterfalls are an example of that.

Trained at the National School of Fine Arts in Rio de Janeiro, Burle Marx is a member of the Modern Movement and has been called the "Picasso of gardens." He was born in 1909 in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and his family moved to Rio de Janeiro in 1913. In 1928 they made a year-long visit to Europe, where Burle Marx studied art and music in Berlin where he was amazed to find Brazilian plants in the European conservatories. This

Chinese appetizers make some exotic treats

CHINESE APPETIZERS

The first course in a formal Chinese meal is always to be seen as an anticipation of what is to come. Thus, an elaborate opening dish, made up of a wonderful assortment of delicacies, is a great compliment to the guests — and a signal to "get serious."

When you read these recipes, some of which are very old, think of the table and the people you wish to entertain.

Some of these dishes may take a little more time than usual, but they are worth making and will give you an idea about some foods the ancient Chinese prepared and enjoyed.

CHINESE BRINE PICKLES (makes 4 cups of pickles)

These pickles are so easy to make it is almost embarrassing. While the recipe is common, this one comes from the Dragon Kilo people, who import wonderful and inexpensive cooking pieces from China. This recipe comes from their Chinese pickling jar.

2 tablespoons salt
1 tablespoon Szechwan peppercorns (find in any Chinese market)
2 to 4 small dried red chili peppers
1/2 cup boiling water
3 1/2 cups cold water
4 to 5 slices fresh ginger, each the size of a 25-cent piece
1 tablespoon vodka or dry sherry
4 cups total of any combination of the following, cut into bite-size pieces: broccoli stems, Napa or Chinese celery cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, daikon, green string beans, red sweet bell peppers

In a mixing bowl combine the salt, peppercorns, chili peppers and boiling water and stir until the salt dissolves. Stir in the cold water, fresh ginger and vodka or sherry.

Put the vegetables of your choice into a Chinese pickling jar or 2-quart glass jar. If you use a Chinese pickling jar seal with water according to the instructions. If you use a regular glass jar simply cover with plastic wrap. Do not wrap tightly because gas must escape.

Allow the pickles to sit, unrefrigerated, for 24 hours and serve.

The pickles will keep for several days if sealed and in the refrigerator.

PEAS AND EGG SOUP

(serves 4)

This is the common "egg flower" soup you find in Chinese-American restaurants. It is a good dish if you use good soup stock.

1 quart chicken soup stock, fresh or canned
1 10-ounce package frozen peas
1/4 cup sliced water chestnuts
3 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon Chinese red vinegar
Salt and white pepper to taste

GARNISH

Green onions, chopped
Sesame oil

Bring the stock to a simmer and add the peas and water chestnuts. When all is hot add the beaten eggs very slowly in a stream.

Count to 10 and stir the pot slowly. You should have lovely thin streams of egg. Add the remaining seasonings and garnishes and serve.

BEAN CURD SOUP (serves 4)

This should probably be called "peasant style" because it is so very common in China, but I love the stuff and make it often.

1 quart chicken stock, fresh or canned
1/2 pound pork, trimmed and cut julienne
1 cake bean curd, firm Chinese style, cut into 1/2-inch cubes and drained
1 cup bok choy or mustard greens, chopped (find in supermarket or Oriental market)
Salt and ground white pepper to taste
1 fresh egg

GARNISH

Green onion, chopped
Sesame oil

The Frugal Gourmet

By Jeff Smith

Bring the stock to a simmer and add the pork. Cook for 6 minutes and add the bean curd and the bok choy or mustard greens.

Bring to a boil and add salt and white pepper. Pour into a serving bowl and crack the raw egg into the bowl. It will cook on the way to the table.

Garnish with the sesame oil and chopped green onions. Stir the egg into the soup at the table and serve.

SPICY PORK TRIPE (serves 6-8 as an appetizer)

This is a favorite dish of mine — even though it takes a long time to cook.

1 1/2 pounds pork tripe (hog maws)
2 green onions cut into 3-inch pieces
1 dried turnip ball, chopped and rinsed well (find in Chinese markets)
2 tablespoons peanut oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
1 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
1 tablespoon fermented black beans (dow see), rinsed
2 green onions, chopped
2 tablespoons light soy sauce
2 tablespoons Chinese rice wine or dry sherry
1/2 tablespoon garlic and red chili paste (find in Oriental markets, or substitute garlic and Tabasco)
1/2 tablespoon sesame oil
2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with 3 tablespoons water (optional)

Cut the tripe into strips about 4 inches long and 1/2 inch wide.

Blanch in boiling water for 5 minutes and discard the water.

Cover the tripe with fresh water and add the green onions cut in 3-inch pieces and the dried turnip. Cover and simmer until the tripe is tender, about 1 hour. Longer if you prefer, of course.

Drain the tripe well, discarding the water.

Heat a wok and add the peanut oil, garlic and ginger. Chow (stir-fry) for a moment and add the tripe. Toss in the oil, then add the remaining ingredients, except the cornstarch solution.

Cook to your taste, then thicken the sauce if you wish with the cornstarch and water, stirring as you add. To reheat, simply steam in small bowls.

CHICKEN AND CHINESE CHIVE HU-MEI (serves 6 as an appetizer course)

You can use regular chives for this, but the Chinese chive has a much brighter garlic flavor. It is sometimes found in the Chinese markets listed as "garlic chives." I think it is worth the search.

1 pound ground chicken (find frozen in your supermarket)
1/2 cup finely chopped Chinese garlic chives
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon dry sherry or Chinese rice wine
1 tablespoon light soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
1/2 teaspoon MSG (optional)
Pinch of sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons sesame oil
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground white pepper
Additional whole chives for "belts"
24 Shu-Mei wrappers (find in supermarkets)

Mix all the ingredients together, except the chives for the "belts." Whip by hand, using your hand, until the mixture holds together very well.

Form into shu-mei by placing about 3/4 tablespoon of filling in the center of each noodle wrapper and bring up the corners so you form what looks like a little money bag. Leave the top open so you can see some of the meat.

Blanch the whole chives in very hot tap water for a moment. Tie one chive around the neck of each chicken-chive dumpling so it looks as if it is wearing a little green belt. Steam in an oiled bamboo steamer for 15 minutes.

HINT: A bamboo steamer for properly steamed food can be found in most gourmet shops or Oriental markets. The steamer racks are placed in a wok with water in the bottom. Several dishes can be steamed at once, because steam does not carry flavors. The advantage of bamboo over metal is that bamboo will not cause water to condense on your food; a metal lid will.

Arts growing at Longwood

When you mention Longwood Gardens to most people in our area they conjure up visions of one of the world's most beautiful botanical gardens with indoor and outdoor displays that rival any on our planet. Of course they would be correct — as far as their thoughts went — but there is more, much more!

Longwood Gardens is also the site of about 350 concerts every year. Some are in the lovely outdoor theater with its stage fountains, others are on the terrace of the main conservatory with a vista of the central gardens and fountains, but most are in the conservatory of the main building, especially this time of year.

There is a wide variety in the programming which Priscilla Johnson, performing arts director, brings to Longwood. There are superb organ concerts on the custom built 10,010 pipes of the organ in the conservatory. There is chamber music, family entertainment, shows just for kids — the whole spectrum of the performing arts.

Most of the programs are free with your admission to the gardens and that makes a trip a real bargain! There are exceptions, of course, but a call to Longwood at (215) 388-6741 will bring you all the details.

Since the youngsters are often suffering from cabin fever at this time of year, I asked Priscilla about some of the upcoming children and family events. From the dozens on the calendar, she wanted me to tell you about these three.

On Saturday, Feb. 6, at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., a Kevin Roth Family Concert is set. Roth, whose photo appears with my column today, is a delightful singer, songwriter and dulcimer artist. He has more than 30 albums on the market and he will perform favorites from these albums.

The Longwood "Wiggle Club" (the name refers to the short attention span of some of the very young audiences, ages 3 to 5) will be in session Feb. 20 at 10 and 11 a.m.

and 1 p.m. The show will feature the Longwood debut of Dave Sadaah in "Circus Comes Alive."

On Saturday, March 20, the "Kool Kids" (ages 6 to 10) series will offer shows at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Featured will be The Touchstone Theater of Bethlehem, Pa. in "On the Wild Frontier." Great folk heroes such as Johnny Appleseed, Davy Crockett and Deadwood Dick will be center stage.

I have been there to see, and enjoy, the children's programs for myself and the acts so a truly remarkable job of targeting the young audiences. There really aren't many wiggles when the "Wiggle Club" is in session at Longwood Gardens.

If you are a chamber music buff, I would suggest two from the myriad of offerings for this winter and spring. One is next month, the other in April. Both of these are reservation required concerts. They fill up quite fast so a word to the wise. . .

On Sunday, Feb. 21 at 2:30 p.m., the world famous Mendelssohn String Quartet will perform. The program will include Mendelssohn's String Quartet in e minor Op. 44, No. 2; Schubert's Quartets in c minor, D. 703 and Turina's "La cacion del torero."

Sunday, April 18, will find a different type of quartet in the conservatory. This one will feature Trach Richardson, harpsichord; Joan Sparks, flute; Lloyd Shorter, oboe; and Douglas McNames. Their program includes Vivaldi's G minor Flute and Oboe Concerto and a Cello Sonata. Also on the bill are works by Scarlatti and Handel. This concert is in honor of the reopening of the Italian Water Gardens at Longwood.

Longwood Gardens is nearby, Route 1 near Kennett Square Pa., and family admission won't add to the post-Christmas budget blues. While you are there, be sure to browse the gift shop. There are things of interest, including recordings made on the grounds at various concerts.

Longwood Gardens, a great place to fight the winter doldrums!

Dulcimer artist Kevin Roth performs at Longwood Gardens next month.

led to his life-long passion with plants. He has undertaken many expeditions into Brazil's interior to study plants in their natural habitats and to find new subjects for his gardens.

During the course of a 60-year career, he and his associates in Rio de Janeiro have worked on more than 2,000 landscape projects.

Structural renovations began in the indoor garden in February of 1992. For two days last June, Burle Marx supervised the planting of the garden, frequently departing from his plan to select examples from the rich palette of colorful specimens assembled by the Longwood gardeners. He and Hamerman would lapse into Portuguese, the language of Brazil, as they discussed all the possibilities.

"It was like building a small cathedral," Burle Marx said.

Paintings and drawings by Burle Marx are also on display in the Music Room, not far from the Cascade Garden. His paintings are reminiscent of brightly-colored stained glass.

The art exhibition can be seen daily through Jan. 24, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Longwood's Cascade Garden as well as 19 other gardens are open every day of the year from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. (until 6 p.m. April through October) and on many evenings during the summer and in December. Admission to the Gardens costs $10 for adults, $2 for children ages 6 to 14. Children under six are admitted free. Longwood is located on US Rt. 1 near Kennett Square, Penn., in the historic Brandywine Valley.

Hen hoops make for fun winter

Basketball will certainly not be dull at the University of Delaware this winter.

The Blue Hens displayed their wide spectrum of potential last weekend in struggling past woeful New Hampshire (1-9) but pounding supposedly powerful Maine. The two wins enabled Delaware to extend several streaks. The Hens have now won eight straight games; they have won 17 straight home games, 17 consecutive home games over North Atlantic Conference opponents and 22 straight over NAC teams home and away.

Following the 65-54 over New Hampshire, the Wildcats' Coach Gib Chapman said that Delaware wasn't head and shoulders above the rest of the league. That seemed to be an accurate statement as of Friday night, especially when one considers that the Hens had turned in three subpar performances in a row against UMBC, Towson State and New Hampshire. However, the Blue Hens did win all three and then came out and pounded the Black Bears on Sunday.

Maine entered Sunday's game after defeating Drexel in its NAC opener in Philadelphia Friday night. That coupled with the fact that the Black Bears were picked first in several preseason publications and second in the Coaches' Poll seemed to give Maine an advantage. Delaware, however, dispelled any thoughts that it wasn't capable of winning the league by downing Maine 93-71 in a game that really wasn't as close as the score indicated. Maybe the Hens are head and shoulders above the rest of the league. Stay tuned for the rest of what should be a very interesting college basketball season.

Wrestling season gears up

High school wrestling season is just coming into its own as January winds down.

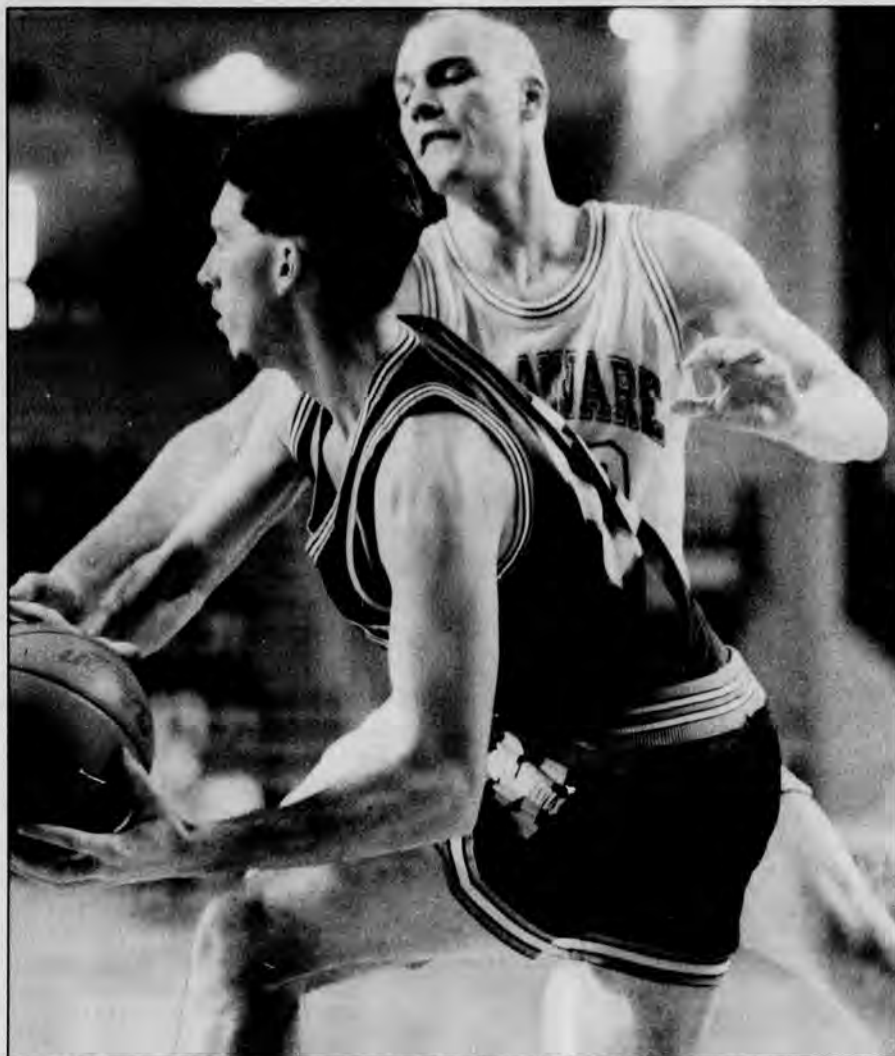

Last week saw two big dual meets in the county as teams from Division I and II vie for spots in the first-ever state tournament. Hodgson fell to Middletown in an exciting Flight B matchup. The Cavaliers have now defeated both Dickinson and the Silver Eagles to all but wrap up the Flight B championship and a berth in the Division II team tourney.

Hodgson still has a good chance to make the tournament. It seems as if Hodgson's fate could be decided in a February match against nemesis Dickinson. The Rams have been the only obstacle between Hodgson and Flight B championships in years past.

Many people in the state seem to be conceding the Division I state team title to the Colonials this season - especially with the new format. However, don't be too quick to count out perennial power St. Mark's.

The Spartans (7-1), ripped Newark 62-3 last Saturday. The impressive thing about Saturday's victory was that the Spartans recorded six pins. This shows a different tact geared toward dual meets and could help the Spartans in a big meet. Stay tuned for the William Penn match.

Delaware jumps to NAC lead

Delaware point guard Brian Pearl had eight assists in the Blue Hens' rout of Maine Sunday afternoon.

Hens freeze Maine, stagger by UNH

The University of Delaware basketball team displayed that it was still the team to beat to the in the North Atlantic Conference Sunday with a 93-71 thrashing of Maine before 3,242 at the Carpenter Center.

The Blue Hens (11-3 overall, 2-0 NAC), which had struggled past NAC doormat New Hampshire last Friday night, broke open a tight game with an 18-0 run near the end of the first half to break the game wide open. The Black Bears (6-5, 1-1), who were picked to finish second in the league in the preseason Coaches' Poll, had knocked off Drexel Friday night and were looking to take an early lead in the conference race by winning on the defending champion's home court. Delaware, which looked less-than-impressive against UNH, came out eager to show it wasn't going to give up its title easily.

"This was to answer all the questions," said senior guard Ricky Deadwyler who scored a season-high 18 points, most coming on outside jumpers. "We weren't the top dog, supposedly, anymore. But, we beat the top dog. We just got it going and did what we had to do."

With Delaware leading 24-23 and the game in a see-saw mode, the Hens exploded for 18 straight points in the last six minutes of the first half. Strong inside play from forward Anthony Wright and center Spencer Dunkley, three-point shots from Deadwyler and Blackhurst and scrappy defense which forced Maine turnovers (14 in the first half) buoyed the barrage. Ed Jones' shot at the buzzer ended the run and closed the halftime gap to 42-25.

"We came out pumped," said Dunkley who had 20 points and 11 rebounds. "There was a lot of talk about who was the best team in the conference. We came out ready to go out and prove we were the better team."

The onslaught continued in the second half as the Hens scored 15 of the first 21 points after the intermission to stretch their lead to 57-31. Following another run (this time 12-2), Delaware had its biggest lead of the game at 73-41. By this time the Hens had secured their eighth consecutive and 17th straight home-court (tying a school record) victory and its status as the conference's best team. The remaining 10 minutes was garbage time.

"Everybody came to play today," said Dunkley who was in double figures in rebounding and points for the 13th time in 14 games. "And when everybody comes to play, we're an unstoppable team."

Besides Dunkley's 20 and Deadwyler's 18, Wright added 17 points and sophomore guard Brian Pearl 10. Delaware shot 51% from the field, well above its 42% season average and garnered a school-record 20 steals.

"[Maine and New Hampshire] play two totally different styles," said Delaware Coach Steve Steinwedel whose team has now won an impressive 21 consecutive games over NAC opponents. "New

Hodgson wins mini-tourney

GLASGOW — Hodgson Vo-Tech's wrestling team showed up at its own mini-tournament in a maximum way.

The Silver Eagles produced eight undefeated wrestlers and captured their second straight title Saturday at the Hodgson Vo-Tech Mini-Invitational four-team Tournament.

Hodgson finished with 164 points, Indian River was second with 114, Christiana third with 90, and Archmere Academy finished last with 30 points. Against individual teams, Hodgson outscored Christiana 50-13, Indian River 54-10 and Archmere 60-12.

"We're pretty well pleased with the way the tournament went," said Hodgson Coach Jerry Lamey. "Right now we feel like we're hitting on all cylinders. We feel we wrestled well."

"We got to see Indian River; we knew we had to wrestle a good match against them," Lamey said. "And it's always nice to win against a Flight A team like Christiana. We knew we had to wrestle tough and couldn't give up any pins."

Christiana had two unbeaten wrestlers. At 103, state tournament hopeful Lateace Neal defeated Hodgson's Kirk Scott by technical fall and won a major decision over Archmere, and Larry Volzone (145 pounds) won three matches, including a 7-6 double overtime victory against Hodgson's Jeff Boyd.

"Mini-tournaments are fine; we have to rise to a different level," said Christiana Coach Drew Yeager. "But we have to do some things to get three wrestlers in. Some wrestled good, some didn't."

Hodgson's Mike Bennett (112) pinned the Vikings' Jason Gonzales in 2:39 and Christiana's Brian Rovels at 1:19 scored technical falls over Mark Lane (Hodgson) and Archmere. At 125, the Silver Eagles' Steve Hampton recorded a 22-11 major decision over Christiana's Jason Zayakowski.

Rick Bourne (Hodgson) went unbeaten at 130 with a pin over IR and a 7-4 decision against Christiana's Tahanh Tran, and Jeff Jones (135) won two decisions, including a 10-4 victory over Eric Cherry (Vikings).

Eric Robertson (140), who finished third in last year's conference meet, recorded three victories, one a 14-2 major decision against Christiana's Andy Palese, to extend his season record to 8-0.

"Our strength is in the middleweights," said Lamey. "We've worked out butts off this year and our main interest is looking for pins; that's what we've been preaching."

Newark girls five tops Glasgow, 31-22

By Marty Valania
Post Sports Writer

The Newark High girls basketball team took another step toward its goal of a state tournament berth with a 31-22 victory over cross-town rival Glasgow last Friday afternoon at Newark High.

The Yellowjackets used an 11-4 third quarter to break open a close game and secure their fifth victory of the season. Sophomore guard Isha Watson, who had been held scoreless in the first half, scored nine of her game-high 12 points during the period to spark Newark.

"[Glasgow sophomore guard] Laurie Brosnahan did a good job on [Watson] in the first half," said Glasgow Coach Larry Walker whose team fell to 5-4 on the season. "But she broke loose in that third quarter."

The 'Jackets, behind a Watson three-point shot, built the lead to 31-18 in the fourth quarter before the Dragons closed the game with two baskets.

"I think we played them tough early," said Walker whose team played without leading scorer Tomacine Rahming. "They knew they were in a game anyway."

Besides Watson's 12 points, Newark was led by LaTanya Washington's six and Tyra Webster's four points.

"It takes this team time to get going," said Newark Coach John Holland whose team improved to 5-6 overall, 3-2 in Flight A. "We had a big height advantage and took advantage of it; plus we were just able to play better in the second half."

NEW CASTLE — Lenny Brown scored a game-high 24 points, including 16 in the first half and Mike Terry added 19 to help William Penn High defeat Christiana 80-68 Friday night in a Flight A boys basketball game.

The Vikings pulled within five points 39-34 late in the second quarter and trailed 41-35 at halftime, but the Colonials outscored Christiana 39-33 over the final two periods and extended their record to 10-1, 4-1 in the conference.

"William Penn is a very good basketball team," said Christiana Coach Ron Hollis, after the Vikings slipped to 7-5, 3-2. "They outplayed us totally; they did an excellent job."

"They have an outstanding game," Hollis said. "They shoot well outside, they shoot well inside, they're quick and fast. They deserve to be right at the top (of the state-wide standings) where they are (No. 2). I have nothing but respect for them."

The Vikings slid behind 9-1 early in the first quarter, rallied behind Michael Winchester's four points and pulled within 11-8 midway through the period. But William Penn's William Davis scored nine of his 17 points the next 3:29 minutes to give the Colonials a 25-15 second-period lead.

The Colonials led 41-35 at the half and inched out to a 57-49 lead after three periods. Christiana never got closer than nine points during the final quarter as William Penn outscored the Vikings 23-19 to seal the victory.

"We've been troubled with injuries since the Indian River game," said Hollis, noting that star-

The Caravel girls basketball team ripped The Tome School (from North East, Md.) 49-21 Tuesday night to even its season record at 6-6.

Amy Pointer led the way for the Bucs scoring 17 points. Pointer, a senior guard, has been a catalyst for Caravel all season.

"She's really playing well this year," said Caravel Coach Bill McCartan. "Her senior leadership is showing and she's really taken over."

Pointer is averaging 14 points per game this season in leading the Bucs on a path toward the state tournament. If Caravel can make the tourney, it will be the first time in several years.

"It's been great this year," said Pointer. "We've been struggling for the past couple of years but now it's time for us to pay back some of the teams that were pounding us."

With the toughest part of their schedule already behind them, the Bucs have a great chance to make the state tournament this season.

"I think we have a good shot," said Pointer. "If we play like we can, we should be able to win a lot of the games we have left."

"Some of us have been playing together for four years. We know what each other is going to do on the court. We know to look for Kim (Jones) inside and Cara (Lightfoot) to shoot the three. We've been playing hard and hustling real well."

That kind of team play, led by Pointer, should find Caravel playing in the post season.

St. Mark's prepares for big in-state duals in Newark rout

by Marty Valania

MILLTOWN — The St. Mark's High wrestling team just keeps getting better and better as the season goes along.

The Spartans, perennially one of the best wrestling teams in the state, were supposed to be rebuilding this year. However, midway through the season, St. Mark's is 7-1 in dual meets as it preps for the big in-state meets with Salesianum and William Penn as well as the first-ever dual-meet state championship.

The process continued last Saturday as the Spartans dominated Newark 62-3. St. Mark's wrestlers won 12 of the 13 weight classes including six pins, two technical falls and a forfeit.

"I think we're coming along real well," said St. Mark's Coach Steve Bastianelli. "A lot of the guys didn't have a lot of varsity experience coming into the season. But with the tournaments and the dual meets, they are more seasoned now. They're starting to wrestle like a veteran team."

The Spartans are coming off two big victories in the prestigious Virginia Duals two weekends ago. The lone loss came to Neshaminy (Pa.) in a match in which St. Mark's won eight of the 13 bouts but lost 30-29 when a team point was deducted.

In that match all five St. Mark's wrestlers that lost were pinned.

Saturday revealed the Spartans' new dual meet strategy. While always having superior wrestlers, St. Mark's has never been known as a pinning team. This year, however, with the team state title being determined in dual meets, Spartan wrestlers realize the importance of pins and not getting pinned.

"In big dual meets those points from pins and not getting pinned are big," said Bastianelli. "We've refined our style a little bit."

Kevin Butswinkas, St. Mark's 125 pounder who holds an 18-1 record thus far into the season, recorded one of the Spartans' pins in 2:46 over Joe Marro.

"We have a little different style," said Butswinkas. "We have to wrestle differently for the dual meets."

Others who recorded pins for St. Mark's John Jacob (103), Joe Amon (112), R.J. George (130), Phil Manalacos (160) and Rick Houck at heavyweight. Max Matthis (140) and Stan Spoor (145) each recorded third-period technical falls.

The most exciting match of the afternoon came at 135 between Newark's Bob Hart and Mark Bosick. Bosick was able to tilt Hart in the last 15 seconds of the third period to earn an 8-6 win.

VIKINGS/from 1B

ters Calvin Copeland and Jamie Duncan, and reserve Kakawanna Chandler are not 100 percent. "You can't win against a team like William Penn with five players. You need at least eight."

Calvin Copeland and Anthony Laws each scored 15 points and Kip Remsburg sank seven of his 12 points in the second quarter for Christiana. Duncan scored seven points, Prince Williams and LeRon Roane added six each, Winchester scored five and Chandler had two points for the Vikings.

NEWARK/from 1B

Brosnahan led the Dragons with 11 points while Chas Friant added 16 rebounds and Shamarra Mason chipped in with 14 rebounds.

"As a whole, we're a young team," Walker said. "If we were healthy, I think we could've played better. But I expect us to be able to compete with teams like Brandywine, Christiana, Concord, Delcastle, Mount Pleasant and Newark. I think the program's coming along and a .500 team is a reasonable goal."

Newark hopes to get back to its familiar position in the state tournament.

Silver Eagles fall to Middletown

by Marty Valania

Sports Editor

MIDDLETOWN — Hodgson's Flight B heartbreak continued last week.

The Silver Eagles, always a top contender in the conference, have never been able to capture that championship. Last week Hodgson traveled to Middletown to try and take a big step toward this year's championship but were dealt a 39-22 setback by the powerful Cavaliers.

Middletown had already beaten Dickinson, the Eagles' nemesis over the past few years. A win over Middletown would've almost certainly guaranteed Hodgson at least a piece of the Flight B title.

In front of the packed gym, Middletown recorded five pins to help lead it to the victory.

"They just beat us," said Hodgson Coach Jerry Lamey. "I learned long ago, that you can't beat a good team by giving up pins."

The Cavaliers jumped to a 12-0 lead recording falls in the first two weight classes. Hodgson's Roger Bennett came back with a pin in 1:01 at 119 to cut the lead to 12-6. The Silver Eagles pulled to within 12-10 after Steve Hampton's 17-4 major decision at 125. Hampton, though, was unable to record the pin or the tech fall.

"To win, we had to have 125-135," said Lamey. "When we didn't get the tech at 125 it just kind of snowballed."

Indeed. At 130, Hodgson's Jeff Jones led Middletown's Chris Vick 4-3 when time apparently ran out in the third period. Jones, however, was called for his second stalling warning before the buzzer giving Vick the tying point. Vick won the sudden death overtime with a takedown 20 second in.

Rick Bourne then lost a tight 8-7 bout at 135 to Middletown's Dominic Savini giving Middletown an 18-10 lead.

"I think we lost our composure after those matches," said Lamey. "We did some things we don't normally do."

"We knew going in we had to be successful in our middleweights."

Hodgson's Eric Robertson came back to win 15-2 at 140 while Dave Jones earned a tech fall at 171. Greg Lennox picked up the other Hodgson win with a 2-0 victory at heavyweight.

With the new Division II state tournament format in effect this season, the Hodgson-Dickinson match, while not for the Flight B title, will be very big again this season. The winner could be an at-large team in the state tourney.

"We're a little young," said Lamey. "We graduated over 100 career wins last year and a lot of these guys haven't been in the pressure of a big match."

"Our goal is still to make the state tournament. Hopefully, we can go as an at-large."

Caravel's Sheets given high honor

by Marty Valania

Sports Editor

BEAR — Caravel Academy soccer Coach Greg Sheets was named as head coach of the 1993 Under-16 Girls State Select team for the Olympic Development Program last week.

Sheets finished his first year as the Bucs coach last season after spending a year as an assistant and several years as a coach in Beaumont, Tex.

"I was stunned," Sheets said. "I'm very excited. When I found out that it didn't conflict with my high school job — I said yes right away."

Sheets will select the girls for this year's team from a tryout that will be held Saturday, April 3 at the Western YMCA.

Once the team has been selected, the players will practice several times a week and will play in tournaments on weekends in preparation for a week-long (July 13-18) tentatively scheduled for Edinboro (Pa.) University.

The camp, called the Region I camp, will be comprised of players from all over the Northeast. At the end of the week a team will be selected to represent Region I and go on to the national tryout camp. According to Sheets, no Delaware player has ever made the Region I team, let alone the national team.

In the past, according to Sheets, 20 girls have shown up for the tryout. The coach hopes for more this year.

"The more opportunities to play the better off the girls will be," said Sheets who realizes that many other states have girls' soccer on a varsity level — something that Delaware doesn't have yet. "There is a lot of good talent in the state. I think one of our goals will be to have someone make the Region I team."

Sheets will spend the rest of the winter and the early spring scouting and talking to many of the soccer people within the state.

"I want to thank Caravel and Athletic Director Lou Bender for the support they have given me," said Sheets. "I wasn't sure how they would react to this situation but they have been great. I'm really appreciative."

Sheets will be expressly involved in the coaching while the administrative part of the team will be done by Starkey Gregory and Willa Clair.

HENS/from 1B

Hampshire wanted to slow the game down and play half court. I thought we'd have a tougher time against New Hampshire.

"Maine, on the other hand, plays how we like to play. They like to get up and down the court."

That seemed to play right into an inspired Delaware's hands Sunday.

"Our game is to get the ball of the boards and run the floor," said Pearl who recorded eight assists for the game. "If not, we can play good half court as well, but we like to run."

The Black Bears entered the game with an all-out effort to stop the inside game of Dunkley. The sagging defense left room for the Blue Hen backcourt to shoot open jump shots and it was able to take advantage for one of the few times this season.

"With Spence inside they were sagging in," said Deadwyler the main beneficiary. "They said 'we're going to stop Dunkley inside'. Unfortunately for them it left us open."

The senior was able to connect on four of seven three-point attempts and hit on 7-of-11 attempts overall.

"I know I missed a couple of shots tonight," said Deadwyler who is now in a sixth-year after starting the first five games of the season. "But in my mind I hit them all. That's the way you have to think. You have to think that you're going to make them all."

All 13 Hens on the roster got into the game and all 13 scored.

Delaware will now turn its attention to two games in Boston against Boston University on Friday and Northeastern on Sunday before returning home for a Jan. 29 NAC game with Vermont and the much-anticipated Jan. 31 matchup against Hartford and possible lottery pick Vin Baker.
