SCULPTURE AND HOW IT'S MADE LECTURE TOPIC

Henry Lewis Raul, Famed American Artist, Speaks Here Tomorrow Night Under Auspices Of Newark Memorial Committee; Will Discuss Memorial Statues; Public Cordially Invited

NO ADMISSION CHARGE

Tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock, in Wolf Hall, Henry Lewis Raul, one of America's most famous and distinguished sculptors, will give a lecture on "Sculpture and How It Is Made."

There will be no admission charge and the public is cordially invited to attend. Mr. Raul comes to Newark through the efforts of Town of Newark Permanent Memorial Committee, and the purpose of the lecture is to stimulate ideas and thought which will assist in the selection of a permanent memorial to commemorate memory of the heroic dead of Newark. In his lecture, Mr. Raul will discuss various types of memorial sculpture.

Negotiations between Mr. Raul and William Rupp, chairman of the Memorial Committee, have been in process for some time. Mr. Raul is personally known to Professor H. K. Preston, who first put the committee in touch with him. Raul has consented to give his lecture gratis, and will bring slides and models as illustrations. He is an artist of broad range and wide perceptions, and has had particularly fine critical comment on subjects he has completed as memorials. One of his latest pieces of work is a medalion head of Lincoln, which has been given place with the Lincoln of St. Gaudens and Barnard.

It was thought by the committee that such a lecture would bring forth definite ideas on the subject of a memorial, so at the next meeting of the Memorial Committee, which will be held in the near future, some decision can be reached as to the type of memorial to be selected for Newark. At past meetings of the committee, various suggestions have been offered. Some have been in favor of a statue or group, and one idea given serious thought was to endow and renovate the Old Academy Building, and have that stand as a memorial.

The Permanent Memorial Committee is composed of representatives of every organization in Newark, with William Rupp, state commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, as chairman.

Monday evening the Faculty Club of the University of Delaware acted as hosts to the J. Allison O'Daniel Post of the American Legion and its Auxiliary in the showing of an official motion picture of World War scenes. The picture, which was shown in Wolf Hall, was called "The St. Mihiel Offensive," and was procured from the U. S. Army Signal Corps by the Military Department of the University. It showed American troop action in the St. Mihiel area, including scenes of combat and a number of shots of German prisoners who had been captured by the American forces.

LIONS CLUB HAS CHARTER NIGHT

Local Service Organization Presented With Charter At Elaborate Dinner Meeting; Dr. Park W. Huntington, Speaker

The Newark Lions Club was presented with its charter, at a Charter Night celebration, held Tuesday night in Old College. 190 persons attended, including Lions from Newark, Wilmington, Baltimore, Kennett Square and Salisbury, Maryland. The program opened with a turkey dinner.

The charter was presented by Bernard B. Gough, fifth governor of Lions International, and was accepted by Dr. Paul K. Musselman, president of the local club. Ira S. Brinser, superintendent of the Newark Schools, was toastmaster, and introduced the speakers. Dr. Park W. Huntington, pastor of St. Stephens Lutheran Church, Wilmington, was the principal speaker, and took as his subject, "Character Building." Mr. Huntington told what was being accomplished in community character building in towns where a Lions Club was functioning, and congratulated the organization on establishing a unit in Newark.

Addresses of welcome were made by Dr. Walter Huihien, president of the University of Delaware, and by Frank Collins, mayor of Newark. J. Irvin Dayett, president of the Newark Chamber of Commerce, also spoke. Several of the visiting Lions gave brief talks. The invocation was given by Dr. Ezra B. Crooks. During the dinner musical entertainment was furnished by the Varsity Four, a quartet from Delaware College, and by Madden's Orchestra. A dance followed the dinner program.

During the dinner 80 door prizes, which included such articles as a man's handsome wrist watch, and an equally handsome vanity case, were given the guests.

The local Lions Club is the first service club to be organized in Newark. It is now about a month old.

The officers of the club in addition to Dr. Musselman, the president, are: Lester W. Tarr, Dr. Wallace M. Johnson and James Hollingsworth, vice-presidents; John R. Fader, secretary; Warren A. Singles, treasurer; Wayne C. Brewer, tall twister; and D. A. McClintock, lion tamer.

NEWARK MUSIC SOCIETY HOLDS SECOND RECITAL

The Newark Music Society held its second recital of the season, last Thursday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Holton, and an unusually rich program was provided. The soloists were Mrs. Julian Adair, mezzo-soprano, of Wilmington, and president of the Delaware Musical Association, and Mr. Carl Budin, pianist, a student at the University of Delaware. The accompanists were Mrs. William E. Holton and Mr. W. Frank Wilson.

In the fourth number, a group of songs by Mrs. Adair, Mr. Wilson played obligato solos on the violin. Mr. Budin proved a finished artist, and he is said to be the finest pianist produced from the student body of Delaware for many years.

The program was as follows: Sonata, Op. 27, Number 2, Beethoven, Mr. Budin; group of songs, Mrs. Adair; Pastorale, Scarlatti-Tausig, Mr. Budin; Capriccio, Scarlatti-Tausig, Mr. Budin; group of songs, Mrs. Adair; 4 preludes, Chopin, Mr. Budin.

MRS. CARR IMPROVED

Mrs. James E. Carr, who has been critically ill in the Homeopathic Hospital, has had a considerable improvement in condition, and it is expected that she will be allowed visitors other than her immediate family, on Monday. It is thought that she will be sufficiently improved to come home on Saturday, November 30.

Join the Red Cross in Newark

Mrs. Ernest B. Wright, president of the Newark Chapter of the American Red Cross, reports that the local committee, which is canvassing the community for Red Cross memberships, has met with a splendid and generous response. Due to a delay in the arrival of supplies, Newark's part in the national membership drive, which opened Armistice Day and will close on Thanksgiving, has suffered a shortening of time period. However, the workers are redoubling their efforts and expect to have the territory covered before Thanksgiving. Mrs. Wright particularly urges that Newark people enter or renew memberships through the Newark Chapter so that the town of Newark will receive the credit. In addition to the membership committee, both banks are taking memberships.

PROF. HEIM RECEIVES WATCH AT BANQUET

The Delaware Vocational Association, composed of Trade and Industrial, Home Economics, and Agricultural teachers presented State Director R. W. Heim a beautiful Hamilton watch, chain and knife on the occasion of the tenth anniversary banquet of the Association held at Milford on Thursday evening, November 14th.

The presentation was made by Mr. George Butler, Head of the Agricultural Department of the Caesar Rodney High School, in recognition of Mr. Heim's services during the past decade in promoting the Delaware Vocational program. In part Mr. Butler said, "as the first State Director of Vocational Education in Delaware, Mr. Heim has worked faithfully at all times and has bolstered up the program in times when it needed support. The vocational program now seems well established and the ground work has been well laid for the proper development of this work in the State."

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

On Tuesday night, November 26, nomination of officers of the L. J. Allison O'Daniel Post, No. 475, V. F. W., will be held and December 10th will be election night. All members are urged to come out and vote.

Impression Corrected

Mr. William P. Wollaston has called The Post in complaint of a designation appearing in a display advertisement, which stated that Mary C. Ford, R. N., was owner and director of The Flower Hospital. Mr. Wollaston stated that this was embarrassing to him, inasmuch as he was the owner of the building in which The Flower Hospital is quartered.

While the designation was substantially correct, in that Miss Ford is owner of the institution, which is known as The Flower Hospital, and which owns various equipment and renders various service, Mr. Wollaston has a point of argument in the use of the word "owner." Future statements in The Post will read, Mary C. Ford, R. N., Proprietor and Director.

We make this explanation to remove any misleading impression we may have created, and to alleviate any embarrassment we may have caused Mr. Wollaston. Mr. Wollaston owns the building; Miss Ford is proprietor of the institution known as The Flower Hospital.

NORTHERN TITLE GOES TO NEWARK

High School Team Undeclared And Untied Will Play Seaford For State Crown On Thanksgiving Day; Dover Beaten 25-0 On Saturday

The Northern D. I. A. sectional title was signed, sealed and delivered to Newark High School's undefeated and untied football team, Saturday afternoon, on the school gridiron, following 25 to 0 victory over Dover High School. Before this game was played Newark had a lead over Dover of a game and a half, but Dover was shellacked, on Saturday, just for good measure. Newark will play Seaford, Southern champions, at Dover, on Thanksgiving Day, for the state championship.

Newark played its most aggressive football of the season in beating Dover for the second time. Dover brought a smart, well drilled team to Newark, but it crumpled under the attack of Newark's shock troops in the persons of Captain Frank Mayer and "Rip" Smith. From the kick-off, when Newark made its first touchdown in five straight first downs, the local team had Dover digging in its heels, and the boys from the Capital were never given a chance to make a serious offensive gesture.

Newark depended on straight line plunging for most of its gains, but also completed some pretty forward passes. Smith and Mayer alternated in crashing the Dover lines for gains of from 2 to 12 yards, and on one occasion, Mayer broke through the middle line for a run of 55 yards before he was pulled down from the rear. However, he took the ball over in two more plunges, one for 8 yards and the other for 12. Mayer scored two of Newark's four touchdowns, while Smith made the other two. Mayer kicked the only extra point. Newark was able to get.

HOUSE WARMING

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lloyd entertained a number of invited guests Saturday night and were pleasantly surprised by being presented with a beautiful reed fernery. The occasion was the house warming of their new home on the Lincoln Highway, four miles out of Newark.

Bridge and 500 were the diversions, prizes being awarded to Mrs. Jessie Scott, C. C. Hubert, Catherine Shellen, Abe Geist, John S. Hopkins and Jackie Hopkins. Covers were laid for twenty.

The annual Thanksgiving Eve Union Services of the Newark Protestant Churches will be held at 7.45 next Wednesday evening in the Presbyterian Church. Everett Hallman, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. All are invited to attend the services.

A BAKE SALE

A bake sale will be held in the lobby of the Methodist Church on Saturday, November 23, beginning at 10 o'clock, by Mrs. Lewis' Sunday School class.

CORDELIA GIBBS GETS 5 YEARS FOR FATAL STAB

Allowed Plea Of Guilty Of Manslaughter, After Indictment For First Degree Murder; Had Killed Her Common Law Husband, McKinney Towson, With Knife In Altercation

FIND STATE JUSTIFIED

After a plea of guilty on a charge of manslaughter, Cordelia Gibbs, colored, was sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment by Chief Justice Pennell and Judges Richards and Harrington, Tuesday morning, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. She had been indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of first degree, but the state, in reconsidering evidence, concluded that no conviction could be obtained on charges of either first or second degree murder, and accepted her plea of manslaughter.

The defendant fatally wounded her common-law husband, McKinney Towson, with a knife, during an altercation on October 5. The stabbing took place in the road in front of the house where the couple lived on Purgatory road. Towson died several hours after the chest wound was inflicted.

Evidence for the defense disclosed that the Gibbs woman had been keeping up the premium payments on her husband's insurance, and that she had made funeral arrangements for him, when she was held in the Workhouse awaiting a hearing by the Grand Jury.

In passing sentence, Chief Justice Pennell remarked that from the evidence in the case, it was unlikely that a conviction for either first or second degree murder would be warranted, and that the attorney general's office had been justified in accepting a plea of guilty of manslaughter.

MOTHER OF THREE FACES BIGAMY CHARGE

A romance between a Cecil county mother of three children, who thought she had obtained a divorce in the courts of that county, and a Port Deposit man has struck rocks in Kent county, where the woman is accused by her husband of bigamy and the man is charged with perjury.

J. Norman Bannon, about 40, and Mrs. Margaret I. Jack, nee Bannon, about 35, both of Port Deposit, are the accused, while the accuser is George A. Jack, also of Port Deposit, who charges that his wife married Bannon in Chestertown after her divorce plea was refused by the court at Elkton. The pair were taken to Chestertown Friday night by Sheriff Thomas Hadaway and Magistrate Olin B. Stafford, of Kent county, after the two officers, on Jack's plea, had come to Elkton and Port Deposit to check up on the man's charges.

The woman contends that she has a letter from her counsel, Henry A. Warburton, of Elkton, which states that her divorce had been granted, and that it was on this information, and that she married Bannon in good faith at Chestertown on July 3. The Rev. E. A. Sexsmith, pastor of Christ M. P. Church, performed the ceremony.

Due to the fact that there seemed to be grounds to back the woman's contention, and that she may be the victim of a mistake, the magistrate released her, along with Bannon on Saturday on $100 bail for their appearance at a hearing to be held later. Bannon, who is charged with having perjured himself in giving information about the woman's marital status, said that he only answered the question that the woman was "single" when he was asked the question by the court clerk.

Inquiry at the office of the clerk of the court at Elkton, disclosed from officials that the woman had been refused divorce. The records also show that Jack, about the time he was sued for divorce, filed a petition for an injunction to restrain his wife from taking their children out of Cecil county. The writ was dismissed, the records show, according to the court officials.

Attorney Warburton, whose letter to the woman is alleged to have led her to think she was free, could not be located Saturday.

The woman before her marriage was Miss Margaret I. Jackson.

The hearing which was set for last Monday night before Magistrate Stafford, in Chestertown, has been postponed until next Monday evening, when Police Justice William B. Usilton of that town will give the parties a hearing.

WILL FACE TRIAL ON TWO MURDER CHARGES

The Circuit Court for Talbot County convened its November term at Easton Monday and one of the principal cases that will be tried next Monday is that of Edward F. Smith, 35, of Philadelphia, a prisoner in Elkton jail since April 4, who was indicted by the September grand jury of Cecil County for the murder of his 83-year-old aunt, Mrs. Sara J. Mahoney, and the latter's 56-year-old son, Edward J. Mahoney, in their home at Pleasant Hill, on the night of March 30.

The accused was also indicted by the same grand jury for arson in setting fire to the Mahoney homestead.

Smith, in company with Mrs. Howard Scarborough, also of Philadelphia, was arrested on the evening of April 4 as the couple were getting off a train at Newark, Del. They were brought to Elkton jail.

While police were working on the case a $10 gold piece, said to belong to Edward Mahoney, was found in the back seat of Sheriff Logan's car, in which Smith and the woman rode to Elkton.

Smith will be defended by Henry A. Warburton of Elkton, while State's Attorney Henry L. Constable will prosecute the case.

AUXILIARY MEETING

under the existing conditions. Section 44 of Article 4 of the Constitution provides, with respect to the office of sheriff, that

"In case of a vacancy by death, resignation, refusal to serve or neglect to qualify, or give bond, or by disqualification, or removal from the county, the Governor shall appoint a person to be sheriff for the remainder of the official term."

"There is no law in this State which provides that the arrest of a Sheriff under such circumstances shall render him disqualified for the performance of his duties, and no agency of the State government is authorized to compel his retirement or suspension at that time."

"If the Sheriff should be convicted of the pending charge against him and sentenced to a penal institution, I think the above constitutional provision should be interpreted to mean that he thereby becomes disqualified for his office and that the Governor would be authorized to appoint a person to be the Sheriff for the remainder of the official term."

STRIKERSVILLE

Mrs. Ella A. Ragan entertained at her home, near Strikersville, Pa., over the week-end, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Benner, of Atlantic City, and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Benner, Jr., of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Phillips, Jean Virginia Thomas and Geo. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Null, Mrs. Pusey Pemberton and Mead Ragan, all of Newark, Del.

FREE VERSE

Free verse is not a bad thing, provided it is really verse,—that is to say, provided it has a measurable movement, a rhythm, a cadence of its own, even though it may not fit into any of the recognized, orthodox meters. English poetry has a right to make metrical experiments and adventures in search of new rhythms. Often the result has been something quite wonderfully musical, like some of Milton's and Tennyson's new metres; like the unrhymed verses of Charles Lamb; like the subtle harmonies of Whitman in his inspired moments when he escapes from the fetters of his own theory of formlessness.—Henry Van Dyke, in "The Man Behind the Book."

Arrogance is the outgrowth of prosperity.—Plautus.

Sheriff Logan May Stay In Office, Attorney General Rules; No Maryland Law Can Bar Accused Cecil County Official

In the opinion of Attorney General Thomas H. Robinson, there is no Maryland law which provides that the arrest of a sheriff for homicide disqualifies him for the performance of his duties.

Mr. Robinson's opinion was in answer to a letter from Henry L. Constable, State's Attorney for Cecil county, who requested a ruling on the legality of Sheriff G. Clinton Logan's holding the office while charged with shooting and killing Harvey Crew, November 12.

The Sheriff is under $2,500 bail pending grand jury action. Crew was killed by Logan as he was fleeing across a field pursued by the official. The Sheriff said Crew ran after he had been placed under arrest for refusing to show his automobile driving license.

In submitting his opinion Mr. Robinson said in part:

"I know of no provision in the Constitution or laws of this State for the suspension or removal of a sheriff

Hear This Lecture

Tomorrow night, in Wolf Hall, Henry Lewis Raul, one of the most able and famous of American sculptors, will take the people of Newark behind the scenes of an artists' studio, and tell them "How Sculpture Is Made." Mr. Raul has been distinguished by the versatility of his work in both subject and medium, and his talk should prove not only interesting, but broad and enlightening. His lecture will be illustrated with slides and models.

Mr. Raul is giving this lecture, gratis, and there will be no charge of admission. He is coming here as the guest of the Town of Newark Permanent Memorial Committee, and the purpose of inviting him is to stimulate thought towards the selection of a memorial to commemorate the memory of the soldier and sailor dead of this town. Mr. Raul has created a number of outstanding memorial masterpieces, and in his lecture, he will cover the conception and design of appropriate memorial sculpture.

The Newark Permanent Memorial Committee is composed of representatives of every organization in town, and its ultimate duty is to select and erect a permanent memorial to the heroic dead of the community. The task of selecting the type of memorial and its design is one of the most confusing with which the committee is faced, and it is depending on the sentiment of the community at large for aid. This lecture was planned as a means of crystallizing thought on the subject, and of bringing forth definite ideas on the type of memorial to be erected. It is hoped that not only every Newark organization will be well represented at the lecture, but that all interested non-organization members will attend.

Have You Joined?

The Red Cross Roll Call will be sounded for one more week. Newark has always gone over its quota, and this year the local committee is making a particularly intensive drive. The appeal of the Red Cross is modest considering the extent and scope of its work. It deserves to expect more than it does. Every good citizen should be eager to join this great organization and know that he or she is having a part in its work.

During the past year the American Red Cross hurried to the rescue of victims of 120 large catastrophes in the United States, and has responded to calls for help from eleven foreign nations, where earthquakes, floods and other disasters caused distress to large populations. These were spectacular services, with the Red Cross on the way to the rescue before the first news of the disasters was cold. In a quieter way, the Red Cross has brought health and sanitation to thousands through its corps of nurses, working in disease ridden insular possessions; has carried on civilian health activities in rural sections throughout the country; has given first aid, nutrition and hygiene instruction to hundreds of thousands. It has transcribed 1,849 volumes into the Braille system of raised letters for the blind. During the past year, the Red Cross has spent $738,000 in the hospitals for relief work for World War veterans. It has spent $1,963,000 for relief work outside of hospitals for wounded veterans and for men still in service.

No other organization in the world accomplishes such immense good in the service of humanity. It asks a membership fee of one dollar from every member, and no other organization spends a dollar to a greater advantage to mankind than the Red Cross. Become a member or renew your membership before this week passes. Join through the Newark Chapter. If you are not approached by a member of the local committee, either the Newark Trust Company or the Farmers Trust Company will enter your membership.

The Lions Club

On Tuesday night, Newark's first service club, the Newark unit of the Lions International, was presented with its permanent charter. The local Lions Club was organized over a month ago, and has been operating under a temporary charter.

The chartering of this organization in Newark is an indication of growth of community spirit; and it is a forecast of further and more definite development in civic activity and enterprise. The Lions Club is a good organization for any community to have at work, for its program is one of progressive character building in all phases of community life. The six fundamental objects of the Lions International, and of its individual units, stated briefly, are as follows:

1. To create and foster a spirit of generous consideration among the peoples of the world to a study of problems of international relationships from a standpoint of business and professional ethics.
2. To promote the theory and practice of principles of good government and good citizenship.
3. To take an active interest in the civic, commercial, social and moral welfare of the community.
4. To unite the members in the bonds of friendship, good fellowship, and mutual understanding.
5. To provide a forum for the full and free discussion of all matters of public interest; partisan politics and sectarian religion, alone excepted.
6. To encourage efficiency and promote high ethical standards in business and professions; provided that no club shall hold out as one of its objects, financial benefits to its members.

The initial membership of the Newark Lions Club is composed of progressive and public spirited men. Organized and with definite objects to attain, this group should prove a large benefit to the community.

The Boy Who Doesn't Like Literature

Address Delivered at State Teachers' Association Convention by Kent Pease, Head of English Department, Newark High School

The topic, "The Boy Who Doesn't Like Literature," is especially challenging and interesting. There are two reasons why this is such a vital subject. In the first place, there are so many boys and girls who don't like literature, and secondly, there is a real reason for the attitude.

Much of our educational thinking suffers from not taking due account of the materials with which we are working. By that I mean we develop some fine sounding idealistic schemes and then find our results seriously crippled when we meet with inattention, lack of concentration, lack of interest, and so on, in our pupils. I like to think of a teacher, especially a teacher of literature, as a sort of advertisement writer. He doesn't write the books which are his business to sell, but it is pretty largely his duty as a teacher to create a demand for this product in the market at hand. The efficiency of an advertisement and of its writer is judged by its ability to sell the product. In our particular corner of the market, the efficiency of the advertiser is measured by his ability to overcome for a time the absorbing interests which detract from the boy's pleasure in literature.

I have long been interested in the fact that many great retail stores operate on the law that the customer is always right. Irrespective of that customer's obviously foolish demands or thoughtless attitude, the clerk and indeed everyone connected with the institution must recognize that the customer is always right. I do not want to say that the child is always right, but I do want to stress the idea that just as the store has recognized the necessity of viewing everything from the standpoint of the customer, so I think we should judge literature from the standpoint of our customer; in this case, the boy who doesn't like it.

There seem to me many reasons why a boy should lack a genuine interest in literature. I have no new ones to offer, but we might consider the old ones again, and no doubt they will be phrased differently. Too many other attractions; unawareness of the vitality; handicaps in the technique which prevent appreciation. There are many others but perhaps these will be enough to consider. Each one of those mentioned, and the many possible combinations of these make up that vague antipathy for the boy who doesn't like literature.

There are at least two approaches to the problem. I believe the general approach is something like this. Teacher says, "Johnnie, this is good for you; probably you don't like it. I'm not surprised that you don't for you are an exceedingly dumb little child. But never mind, you have to get this if you are going to pass the examination, and you know the goblins will get you if you don't pass." Of course, no teacher has ever said this, especially an English teacher, but she started with this assumption, and rationalized certain arguments with this aim in mind. To borrow an expression of Dr. Briggs of New York University, "this is the way to make the class sick of the classic."

Then there is the other point of view in which the teacher recognizes that he is in competition with hundreds of other interests and that he must be so clever in the presentation of what he thinks is good that he convinces his public that it is good without his public knowing that it is being convinced.

Let us carry on the analogy of the national advertising writer a bit farther and see if the figure continues to be of any value. In the organization of a national advertising campaign, the first step is the preparation of a consistent plan. You know what you have to sell; now you must decide how much time and money you are going to devote to the various mediums, what magazines you will use, what type of illustrated material would be appropriate, and so on. Let us think of the classic in this way. Ask yourself some of the following questions. Do you constantly show yourself interested in the product which you are advertising? Do you always speak well of your product? Could you benefit by the so-called "teaser-method" of advertising in which just enough is told to sharpen the curiosity?

The second necessity in a national advertising campaign is to put up your article in an attractive package. When you consider the enormous amounts of money spent every month to impress you that Campbell's soup, for example, is better than any other kind of canned soup, you realize the immense amount of attention that is directed toward the package. It is well known to advertisers that the good impression formed by the container may be quite sufficient to keep that person "sold" in that line of goods. Do you think the average teacher makes an attempt to put up literature in attractive packages? See the other packages which are clamoring for consumption by the youthful customers! There is the vast field of second rate literature which is more readily apparent to their experience. Then outside the field entirely there are the packages containing the myriad interests of young life—sports, jazz, gasoline and all the rest.

The final rule for the campaign which bears any relation to our subject is that you must never relax your efforts to keep the product before the public. Advertisers have discovered that you can't work up a demand for an article and then expect that demand to continue; you must keep on advertising. Do you continue to advertise the things you think are worth while in literature, or do you allow your class to use some splendid selection as an exercise in grammar? Why, I once heard of a teacher who used Milton's "L'Allegro" as an exercise for the discovery of Greek legends; and I know of a college teacher whose idea of presenting Shakespeare is to have a student make a vocabulary of all the obsolete words.

Now it is obviously easy to suggest a thing of this sort without having anything definite in mind as a remedy. I have a good friend who is very successful in teaching "Macbeth." She has talked it over with me, and we have agreed on some of the following things. It should never be studied until it has been read; if you must drop one or the other, omit studying rather than reading. It is an immensely interesting thing to watch a group of boys as they come up to this fine old story. Almost always they are prejudiced against it. It is a classic; therefore it's dull, they will surely be bored, and so they proceed to enter that state of coma generally conceded to be an English class. You should hear this friend of mine read the first scene. Fortunately she was never trained in oratory, but she has been trained to read with imagination, and with a few words of explanation to start with, the first scene as she reads it is guaranteed to start something in the boy. I think that is the most necessary thing—to start something, for the English teacher can a whole lot better stand active dislike of his article than passive acceptance.

Scene II has to be hurried, just as at a regular performance, you can fairly hear the mental late-comers stumbling down the aisles and falling tardily into their seats, but before the scene is over if you haven't begun to interest the boys in your group, then you must be reading very badly, for you have a hero such as Horatio Alger or Diamond Dick never thought of. A man with the nerve and the physical strength to "unseam him from the nape to the chaps." From then on, it's only a question of directing the interest you have already gained. Never breathe a word about a moral till you get to the end of the story and then they will begin to tell you the moral. And don't be afraid that Shakespeare would be insulted by the colloquialisms with which young America will praise the story. As a practical playwright interested in box office returns, I haven't any doubt William Shakespeare is as much pleased by "Say, that's a hot play" or "That Lady Macbeth, she was a wow" as by some of the emaciated feeble praise of the scholastics.

To sum it all up, perhaps we can put it this way: The book, whatever it is, which has now become a classic, was written in a turbulent, quarrelsome workaday world. It was good. It lasted beyond his day; therefore it still has the strength to be treated for the vital, virile thing it is and not something precious which must be protected by rolls of cotton batting, "ohs" and "ahs."

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

AN APPRECIATION

Nov. 18, 1929.

The Newark Post,
Newark, Delaware.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I wish to thank you for the prompt service you and your staff have shown, both in the Newark Post and delivery. I spent four years in Newark, employed by the Continental Fibre Co., a member of the Continental Band.

I left Newark and my many friends to try and do better as to my education, and the Westinghouse Tech. was the school that I picked, as this is one of the noted sections for night schools. I came here to study electricity and succeeded, and the Newark Post has surely been inspiring as to the news of the home folks.

Enclosed is a check for the new year. I thank you.

"Think this!—I am going to win."
"Think not of what has been."
"Think 'Victory,' think 'I can,'"
Then you are a winning man.

Christendom For A Warless World

Dear Mr. Jacobs:

In going through my desk I came across the enclosed, written in March, 1922.

While it is not addressed to or prepared for an argument like our friendly one, I offer it for the consideration of yourself and our friends.

Very truly,
Edw. L. Richards.

Fellow Christians and Sister Churches of all Lands:

The small fraction of the Christian Church which ventures to address this appeal to you, does so in a spirit of fervent hope that we may give our united strength wholeheartedly to uphold and advance the standards of peace which some followers of Christ have long cherished as a fundamental Christian principle.

Christianity seems to us to face a grave crisis and a divine duty. In this aftermath of history's most terrible war, we see two paths before us. One leads inevitably to another war by renewed preparedness of the most efficient military, economic, educational and religious means of waging it. The other begins with a complete rejection of war, and of all preparations for it, for any purpose and against any people; it demands definite organization for peace.

These two paths lie in opposite directions; we cannot possibly follow them both. There is no shadow of doubt on which of them are found the footprints and the sign-posts of Jesus Christ our Lord. Christ would not send His disciples where He himself does not lead. "Follow me," has been forever His watchword. Shall not, then, the Christian Church follow its Leader with perfect loyalty along this path?

Such loyalty to Christ is consistent with loyalty to one's native land. The higher loyalty includes the lower, and gives to it all its best and brightest substance. The Christian's love of country finds its source, its inspiration and its direction in his love of God and his fellow-men. Christ taught the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man; His church transcends all divisions of nationality, all prejudices and hatreds of nation for nation and of class for class. It must rise to the height of its divinely given mission. It must not depend on the leadership of generals or admirals, or financiers; nor await the changing policies of statecraft. In time of war, as in time of peace, it must keep its eye single to God's commands, and must draw constantly its Founder's immortal and stupendous contrast between that which is Caesar's and that which is God's.

As Christians, we are striving for "a warless world." We are firmly convinced that this can be achieved only by refusal to participate in war, simply and sufficiently because war is by its very nature at variance with the message, the spirit, and the life and death of Jesus Christ. We unite in supporting treaties of arbitration and conciliation, limitation and reduction of armaments, international courts of justice, a league or association of nations for the preservation of peace. This is well; it is a great achievement for statesmen to accomplish these things; but it is not sufficient for the Christian Church.

A principle is greater than any or all of its applications. The fundamental peace principle of Christianity demands the utter rejection of war, unequivocally and without compromise. With this principle in its charter the Christian Church can always utter a clear and unmistakable verdict on any specific measure of statecraft that is proposed; it will not be misled or coerced, by argument or by force, into participating in any kind or degree of preparation for war, or into lending the sanction of Christianity to the waging of any war whatsoever.

The achievement of all the great moral reforms in history has awaited the development of a deep religious conviction in the hearts of the people. Vital, uncompromising Christianity when applied to great moral issues, has never failed to bring the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth another step nearer to realization.

The most pressing reform of our time is to abolish war, and to establish exclusively peaceful means of settling disputes and promoting co-operation among the nations. These peaceful means cannot prevail until the nations beat their swords into plowshares and learn war no more. To accomplish these results, the Christian Church in practice and profession must condemn the whole system of war unequivocally and finally, relying not upon armed preparedness, but upon the awakened conscience of mankind.

Fellow Christians, we can scarcely exaggerate the loss and suffering of the Great War. There is a bitter Macedonian cry in our afflicted time for physical help and healing, but far more for the things of the Spirit—for faith and hope and love. What greater message of cheer and reconstruction could be brought to mankind today than the assurance that all who bear the name of Christ in every land have solemnly resolved to have no part in war or in preparation for war, but henceforth to work unitedly for peace by peaceful means alone? Shall we not make this venture of faith together in the love that beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things, and that never fails? Shall the torch of spiritual heroism be borne by the Church of the living Christ, or shall leadership in the utter rejection of war pass from our hands to men of braver and truer spirit? Which Master shall we who call ourselves Christians be known by all the world to serve, the God of Battles or the Prince of Peace?

With love and greetings to you all, we are your sincere friends.

WANT POULTRY SHOW ENTRIES

Poultrymen Urged To Enter Production Classes In State Show To Be Held In Milford Next Month; Last Week For Entries

As has been previously announced, the annual state poultry show will be held in the Community Building in Milford on December 3, 4 and 5, under the auspices of the Delaware State Poultry Association in cooperation with the State Board of Agriculture and the Extension Department of the University of Delaware, and every effort is being expended by those in charge to make this show an outstanding success for the benefit of the poultry industry in this section of the country.

A special invitation is being extended to the poultrymen of the state to exhibit in the production and egg classes, as these two departments of the show should be of particular interest to all the poultry raisers since practically all of the chickens that are raised in Delaware may be regarded as production stock. Announcement has been made by Secretary H. S. Palmer that all exhibit entries must be completed during this week in order that sufficient space and arrangements may be made in the show building. Those poultrymen who have not made their entries, but who are planning to exhibit at this show, should get in touch with Mr. Palmer immediately. He can be addressed at Wolf Hall, Newark.

In addition to the many commercial exhibits which will be of interest to every poultry farmer, there will be many entries of mature birds, baby chicks and eggs, all of which will make this show the best one that has ever been held in Delaware. A worthwhile educational program also has

DELAWARE LOSES TOP P. M. C., 18-6

Blue And Gold Sustains Sixth Defeat In Game At Chester; Craig Stars In Last Period; Last Game With Haverford, Saturday

The University of Delaware football team matched ariel tactics with P. M. C. last Saturday, at Chester, and lost another football game, 18 to 6. However, Delaware's "Ace" Captain Taylor, spent most of the game on the bench, suffering from an old injury to his back. This marked Delaware's sixth defeat of the season out of seven games played. The other game was a scoreless tie with Susquehanna. Next Saturday, the Blue and Gold will play its final game of the season against its ancient and deadly rival, Haverford. The game will be played at Haverford.

Delaware changed its attack somewhat in the P. M. C. game, going into the air in the first quarter, P. M. C. followed suit, but few passes were completed by either team, and neither team gained any advantage. Morris, doing the heaving for Delaware in this period, threw long passes which in most cases were knocked down, while P. M. C. resorted to short passes over the line.

In the second period, P. M. C. started a long passing offensive which clicked, and took the ball to Delaware's 24-yard line. From there the P. M. C. backs smashed through a weakening Delaware team for a touch down. A little later in the period P. M. C. scored a gain on a pass started at midfield.

The rest of the half seemed to be of small benefit to the Blue and Gold for P. M. C. again smothered the local eleven under a passing attack, scoring the third and last touchdown.

In the last quarter, Delaware came to life again with one of its best offensive gestures of the season. Craig was sent in the backfield and ran wild. A pass to Fulling gained 20 yards was followed by a 14-yard gain around end by Craig, but a fumble on the 35-yard line gave the ball back to P. M. C. P. M. C. returned the ball by way of a punt, and Craig started down the field again. He took the ball around end for a large gain, and then received a pass from Ross, which placed the ball on the 46-yard line. Craig then passed to Sloan for a 10-yard gain, but here again a fumble on the next play gave P. M. C. the ball. P. M. C. punted back, and Craig and Ross advanced the ball again on the P. M. C.'s 15-yard line. The next play was a pass from Craig, which Fulling pulled down over the goal line. A few minutes later the game was called. Lineup:

LIFE OF THE SPONGE

It is difficult to comprehend that the sponge in daily use was an animal and not a vegetable growth of the ocean. Sponges live their own lives and eat their own food as other animals do. The separate existence of a sponge begins when a tiny particle breaks away from the parent. The particle, after being whirled about for a time by tides and currents, eventually attaches itself to a piece of rock, and from that home it seeks its own livelihood. The food of infant sponges consists of yolk cells, which contain a form of nourishment. Later, as the sponge grows, it requires something more solid, and this is brought by the currents.

ON A BANANA FARM

"This month let's go to work on a banana farm and discover how fruit is grown. This is the logical place to go before we look into the work of the other departments, for if there were no farms the other departments would not exist.

"Imagine then that you are assigned to an Overseer as his Time-keeper. Your duties are the same as his except that he is responsible for what you do and he will, for at least six months, give out all work orders while you watch what is being done.

"It is well for you to pick up such information as you can for when you are given a small farm to run your troubles will begin. You will soon discover that an Overseer will gladly teach you what he knows if you will show an ordinary amount of interest and intelligence.

"Another man who can help you is the Negro foreman. He is usually a Jamaican and raised among bananas. Remember all this when you get your first farm and do not arrive immediately at the conclusion that the road to the knowledge of fruit cultivation has any short cut.

"The average far mhas about seven hundred to eight hundred acres; a large farm from twelve hundred to fourteen hundred and a small farm from four hundred to five hundred acres. They are divided into sections of one to thirty acres and interlined with tram lines where the fruit is hauled. Your first ride is apt to be the most interesting as you go trailing along under the banana trees, winding around fallen logs and plants, sometimes crossing small wooden bridges and now and then riding over a bridge perched high in the air connecting the banks of a lagoon full of reeds, water and lazy alligators. . . .

"It will be difficult for you at first to distinguish the number of hands a stem of fruit has, and you will find it a bit puzzling to determine the grades. But practice makes perfect and before long you will pick out the six, seven, eight and nine hand bunches and properly classify them. These points you must know, for they are among the most important things you will have to decide.

"Another part of your work is superintending the laying out and the digging of drains to carry off excessive water in certain sections. You will have to locate the proper height and the contour of the land and make certain that the water will pass along into the rivers and brooks or the ditches along the trams. There must be no flow back and the water must run steadily downward to the spillway.

"Other work that comes under your supervision is circling and forking, ballasting and grassing trams, cleaning pastures, making trash pads, cutting leaves on fruit cutting days, cleaning camps where your labourers live and other various jobs necessary to the proper management of a farm. Do not be discouraged if you are slow to learn. You are bound to win out if you stick to it, and, as I said before, keep asking questions of your foreman.

"Your day generally commences at six o'clock when the stockman brings your saddled mule to the front gate. You will not return to the house until eleven o'clock when you will be quite ready for dinner. Usually you do not go out in the afternoon but will write up some of the numerous farm reports. When your work is done you sometimes drop over to the next farm to exchange ideas with your neighbour. . . .

"Your riding mule is as comfortable as a hard pine log and . . . His steps are short and mincing and his joints are made of steel. Walk him or gallop him and you will remain happy."—From "The Romance and Rise of the American Tropics," by Samuel Crowther.

THE HOMING COW

The agricultural correspondent of the Daily Telegraph relates a curious story of a homing cow. It was sold at Tonbridge Market and taken by motorlorry to a farm fifteen miles from its old home, but next morning it was found outside the familiar shippon. The "homing instinct" is mysterious. It is questionable whether it ought to be called an instinct at all, for, according to the current theory, pigeons use some kind of rudimentary intelligence in their "homing flights," and bees observe landmarks. But the theories are advanced tentatively, and for all the work of a generation of ornithologists, who have "ringed" innumerable swallows, there are many baffling circumstances in the parallel phenomenon of the migration of birds.

Bees, pigeons, swallows—and we must add cats—they are all creatures with a right air of mystery about them. Bees murmur languorously through the poetry of all the world; cats were worshipped in Egypt and are given the freedom of the palace of Siam. "Sister, my sister, O fleet, sweet swallow," as the Swinburnian nightingale sang, "the way is long to the sun and the south"; and the fifteen-mile walk of the cow was long, but it is difficult to be lyrical about a cow. Yet this cow—may its memory be cherished!—has known how to appeal to our sense of mystery, just as much as the storied swallow and the exemplary bee.—Daily Telegraph (London).

Abundance consists not alone in material possession, but in an uncovetous spirit.—Selden.

RUNNING WATER MAKES KITCHENS WIFE SAVING

"One of the six important steps in making the kitchen 'Wife Saving' in farm homes," says Kate Henly Daugherty, County Home Demonstration Agent for the New Castle County, "is that there must be water at the sink with a sanitary waste disposal. A plentiful supply of running water helps more than any other one thing to lighten kitchen work. Without a water system in the home it has been estimated that it requires 20 days in the house by the bucketful and 10 days to carry it out, or a total of one month per year spent at this task. At that rate it does seem that a water system would soon pay for itself."

Mrs. Daugherty says, "I am sure that money could not buy from Mrs. Eugene Minner the water system which Mr. Minner installed in their kitchen during the contest last spring. Not only do they have hot and cold running water at the sink, but since the contest they have equipped a nice bathroom with hot and cold running water. Mrs. Minner says that she doesn't know now how they ever managed without these conveniences. She states further that it certainly beats the old iron pump and having to carry the water from the shed up two steps into the kitchen and the waste water out the same way."

Mrs. John Reynolds, of Middletown, found that her sink which was on the opposite side of the kitchen from her worktable and stove, was too far away and required her taking so many extra steps for her water that she had a new sink installed near her preparation center and left the old sink for the men to use in connection with their milk vessels. She is quite delighted over the convenience which this change has given her and states that she wishes she could have joined a Home Demonstration Club and contest years ago for she thinks that she would have looked several years younger by saving herself so many miles of walking.

"There are numerous ways to obtain running water for the farm kitchen," continues Mrs. Daugherty. Some of these methods are electric pumps, gasoline engine pumps, wind mills, hydraulic rams and last but not least, a covered tank or sixty gallon barrel on a scaffold or shelf outside of the kitchen wall that the sink is located on. With a force pump the water can be pumped to the barrel through an ordinary rubber garden hose and with a pipe extending from the lower part of the barrel through the kitchen wall to the sink, one need only turn the faucet to at least have cold running water in the kitchen. Unless this barrel is protected it will likely freeze during the coldest weather, but it could be used the greatest number of months in the year. This method and the hydraulic ram are the simplest and most economical of any type of farm water system. Water can easily be pumped from a near-by spring to the house by use of the hydraulic ram.

The Extension Service of the University of Delaware will be glad to send free bulletins to any one desiring information on the subject of water system in the farm home.

BUTTERFLIES AS PETS

With kindness and patience almost every living thing can be tamed and made a pet—even butterflies, than which there are no creatures more "light-headed" and irresponsible for their movements. Yet, when treated patiently and assiduously, even the butterfly replies to human kindness.

Some years ago a lady was presented with two butterflies in the pupae stage—that is, they were yet in the form which insects take as they change from the state of caterpillar or larva, and before they burst out into their winged or perfected condition. Now she is of a sweet and gentle nature, and it came to her it might be possible to have butterfly pets.

She laid the pupae on a tiny bed of cotton wool, and placed them in a cabinet with glass doors, standing where the sun shone into her well-warmed bedroom. Day after day she gave a look at the little chrysalides, and, in time, she saw to her immense joy a yellow butterfly had appeared during the night.

She was greatly puzzled as to how to feed it, for it was still early spring, and flowers and blossoms were lacking. Thinking about this she went into her greenhouse, and there a small so-called "fairy rose" took her eye. She snipped off the rose, dropped a little honey and water upon it, and put the rose into the cabinet. The butterfly that was fluttering slowly around, almost immediately settled on it, and, attracted by the fragrance of the honeyed petals, it took its first meal there and then, right before her eyes. Within a fortnight, when she called it, "Psyche," the butterfly would rise, flutter a little, then settle on her outspread hand. After a time, it would fold up its wings, and rest there in full confidence.

Already the other chrysalis had come to life, and a lovely peacock butterfly, so called on account of its markings like the peacock, had appeared. It was fed like the first, and soon it also delighted in being talked to. Most of all, did the two enjoy being slowly, softly wafted through the air, and danced gently up and down and round about, while they were being supported on the hand of their mistress.

As spring passed into early summer, she opened her windows, but for several days neither of the butterflies went farther than the window-sill. And aye they came back when their mistress called their names, "Psyche" and "Eros."

Then one sunny forenoon she saw them take flight, and join some butterflies hovering in the flower garden beyond the window. With them her pets fluttered. She called to them, and they knew her voice, and came home. The next morning, they again flew into the garden, and that night they both returned, settling on her hand as she stood on the garden path. The following morning, the two butterflies fluttered forth, and away over the garden and lawn. That afternoon, their mistress called and called. Her two pets came not. Next day, it was stormy and thundery, and after the weather had cleared a yellow butterfly was found lying on the bedroom sill. By two specks on the left wing, it was recognized. But the other pet butterfly was never again seen.

As Sir John Lubbock, one of the most trustworthy of nature men, has said, "Kindness and patience conquer all nature." And Sir John made close friends with wasps!—By N. Tourneur.

ENGLAND YIELDS AN ANCIENT WELL

An artesian well, unknown and in disuse for more than 100 years, was recently discovered by the Salford fire department in England. Although the existence of the well was suspected a few years ago when efforts were made to dig a site for a gasoline tank, it was not until a recent water scarcity came about that any excavations were made to verify the suspicion. After five feet of clay and concrete had been removed the mouth of the ancient well was revealed. After hundreds of gallons of "spa ling" water had been pumped a man was lowered to inspect the well.

Water engineers have stated that the well may be anywhere from 200 to 300 years old.

HOLIDAY WRAPPED CANDY SELLS WELL

Special one and two-pound boxed candies, in Thanksgiving wrapper, are meeting with wide sale for the holiday by Harry Kenyon, Inc., wholesale confectioner and tobacconist, at 203 Market street, Wilmington. These boxes have been good sellers with retailers, many of whom have placed repeat orders.

Although Christmas is still some time off, cigarettes and cigars in special wrappers are already beginning to arrive and are being stocked by Kenyon's. All indications, judging from the business now being enjoyed, point to a record Christmas business, stated Mr. Kenyon.

STATE P. T. A. NEWS

The first issue of "The Delaware Bulletin of Education" has been received by former subscribers to the "Delaware Parent-Teacher," the publicity chairman of local Parent-Teacher Associations, who are subscription agents, and all teachers of the State. Due to the co-operation of the State Board of Education with the State Parent-Teacher Association and the Delaware Citizens Association, the scope of the magazine has been broadened. The advisory council of the magazine, which is edited by Etta J. Wilson, includes: H. V. Holloway, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; W. A. Wilkinson, Department of Education, University of Delaware; Allan Hulsizer, Director of the Demonstration School; S. M. Stouffer, Superintendent of the Wilmington City Schools; H. T. Ennis, President Delaware Parent-Teacher Association.

The striking cover design, in which the Henlopen Light appears, is the work of Miss Amy Gardner, in charge of Adult activities in the State-wide Art program. Articles by Dr. Jesse H. Newlon, Director of the Lincoln School of Teachers College, Columbia University; Dr. Ruth Andrus, Director of Child Development and Parental Education in the State of New York, and others by leaders working in Delaware appear in this number. To date the Parent-Teacher Association of Trinity Colored School has been the most active in securing subscriptions.

The program chairman of local Parent-Teacher Associations in Kent and New Castle counties and any others interested will meet with Miss Gardner and Mr. MacFaddin for aid in developing their December programs according to the following schedule: Dover, November 27th; Middletown, December 4th.

The Art section for white leaders begins at 7 o'clock, followed by the Music section at 8. The Music section for colored leaders must meet promptly at 7 o'clock in order that the Art section may start at 8. These meetings will be held in the public school buildings.

NEWPORT TRUST COMPANY CLOSED DOORS MONDAY

The Newport Trust Company, of Newport, formerly a National bank, but operating under a State charter since 1928, failed to open its doors on Monday morning. Reports released later stated that the bank had closed due to a condition of decreasing deposits and frozen and non-liquid assets. It is understood that depositors will all be taken care of, but it is not definitely known whether or not the bank will reopen. This is said to be the first State bank ever to have closed.

The following notice was placed on the doors of the bank Monday morning: "At a meeting of the directors of the Newport Trust Company, held on November 16, 1929, it was unanimously resolved that by reason of the unusual withdrawals of deposits during the past month it would be for the best interest of depositors and stockholders that the bank be closed and that the State Bank Commissioner be requested to assume charge of its affairs."

Harold W. Horsey, State Bank Commissioner, made the following statement Monday when asked about the bank's request:

"The State Bank Commissioner therefore took charge of the trust company and it did not open November 18, 1929. This action is the result of a frozen or non-liquid condition of the company's assets and the gradual decrease in its deposits. The company's cash reserve has therefore been reduced and it has had difficulty in meeting its demands during the past week."

The last examination was made by the State Bank Commissioner June 1, 1929. At that time there were no irregularities disclosed and it may be authoritatively stated that the present situation is not due to any shortage or irregularities in the company's accounts.

Owing to the extremely unsettled condition of the security market recently, I feel that it is most essential that the public be assured that the closing of this bank is not attributable in any degree whatever to the stock market."

MYSTERIES OF MACKEREL

This promises to be another successful mackerel season. The most interesting thing about the mackerel is its habit of schooling in great numbers. All move almost as a unit. Single schools may be large or small and fishermen say the individual schools hold together like tribes of people, through their whole migratory period. The fish in such individual schools will run surprisingly alike as to size.

A vessel may catch 40,000 pounds of mackerel and no fish vary more than a few ounces from another in weight. One vessel may be taking two-pound mackerel, while another a quarter of a mile away will be getting pound-and-a-quarter fish.

As a rule the mackerel is an exclusive fish, although occasionally fishermen find a few shad or alewives mixed in with their hauls. How, and why, the mackerel hold together in schools, no scientist can explain. Some say "feed"; others "protection from their enemies"; fishermen suggest that it is simply "thar natur," a sort of prenatal instinct of sociability such as prompts many birds to fly in great flocks.

Their enemies are legion. The devastations of the sharks, whales, porpoises and dogfishes probably being ten times greater than all that the fishermen are able to catch for human food. Very likely this is the purpose for which the mackerel was created, along with those predaceous enemies which devour it.

Prosperity often presages adversity.—Hosea Ballou.

Prosperity let's go the bridge.—George Herbert.

CONSUL GENERAL VISITS SCHOOLS

Messersmith addressed the high school assembly on the subject, "International Understanding as a Means of Cooperation between Nations." He spoke of the economic and political problems, with which a consul has to deal; the results of which create either a friendly or hostile attitude between nations. He emphasized the reading of biographies of leading statesmen of South America, who might be compared with Washington, Franklin or Jefferson.

The Newark Schools are observing National Book Week with a program arranged by Miss Greta McKensie, chairman of the School Library Committee, and the Book Week Committee. Included in the program is an assembly, which will be held tomorrow, during which three book reviews will be given, and six readings heard on "The Pleasures of Literature." Book Week exhibits have been arranged in the library which include posters, descriptions of books, and book covers. Book reviews are available to all pupils, and each is being persuaded to read a book, this week. The library work has been correlated with Book Week to inspire an interest in literature.

The magazine campaign, recently conducted by the Newark Schools, resulted in a net profit to the general association of $140. The Blue Team, of girls captained by Elizabeth Dean, won the contest in conjunction with the campaign.

A photograph, presented by the Newark New Century Club, has been installed in the music department of the Newark Schools.

Lodge Notes

JR. O. U. A. M.

Thirty-five loyal Americans assembled around the camp fire of the American Flag Council, No. 28, Jr. O. U. A. M. Councilor Lewis gave encouraging reports from the sick brothers. Brother Durnall expects to return from a Philadelphia Hospital the end of the week; Brother Heavell has returned from the Homeopathic Hospital; Brother A. N. Smythe has returned from the Flower Hospital and is back at his work. State Councilor Henry Mote is still making official visits to various Councils of the State. He is always glad to have the brothers go on these visits. Friday night we visit Delaware City.

Brother Geo. Goldey gave an interesting talk on the Robinson-Clapper Public School Bill now pending in Congress. He dwelt on the benefit we as well as our children would derive from such a bill favorably passed. At a date to be announced later he will speak on "Opposition to the Bill." Let us spread the news and watch for the date, as this talk will be worth while.

Let us also remember our membership campaign. We would like to increase to 225, which we can do with little struggle. Next Monday night we are counting on 50 to be present. Can we count on you.—A. Neal Smythe, Publicity Chairman.
