Cooch's Bridge, Elkton Stops On Battle Of Brandywine Program

Motor Caravan Will Hold Exercises
At Two Historic Spots; Three-Day
Celebration Of 150th Anniversary Of Battle

PICTURESQUE PROGRAM

Cooch's Bridge and Elkton will be stops in the itinerary of the motor caravan which will participate in the observance of the 150th anniversary of the Battle of the Brandywine which will be held for three days, beginning September 9. A committee for Delaware, with Frank V. du Pont as chairman, has prepared a tentative program which will probably be accepted as it stands with some additional activities.

A motor caravan will assemble in front of the Municipal Building, Wilmington, at 1 o'clock, daylight time, and will proceed to Cooch's Bridge, where a wing of Howe's army was temporarily halted in its advance to the Battle of the Brandywine, and where the Stars and Stripes are thought to have been first unfurled in battle. Exercises and ceremonies will be held at the Bridge. From there the caravan will go to Elk Landing, Elkton, where Howe landed with his army. Appropriate exercises will be held on the old wharf. Elkton organizations will meet the caravan in Elkton to escort it to Elk Landing.

Other parts of the program already planned are as follows:

It has been proposed that the Wilmington Council of Boy Scouts together with Scouts of Kennett Square and West Chester will encamp on the battlefield on the night of September 9. Competent speakers will tell the boys of the battle during the evening and the typewritten descriptions of what happened at certain important spots so that the Scouts may be able to give information to visitors to the battlefield on Saturday, September 10.

The historical pageant, an outstanding feature of the September 10 program, is assured through the acceptance of the invitation to participate on the part of the Veteran Guard, First Pennsylvania Militia, of Swarthmore. The Guard is already drilling and rehearsing the members to represent the Fourth Battalion of the First Pennsylvania Militia, which was engaged in the Battle of the Brandywine. AMBULANCE CALLS

On Friday, Henrietta Money, colored, of Christiana, was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, in the Newark ambulance. Bert Crow and Alfred Ewing made the trip.

WASHINGTON CHURCH

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. Harvey Ewing, of this town, is serving the Hamline M. E. Church, on Sixteenth street, in Washington, D. C., every Sunday during August and for one Sunday of September. Dr. Ewing spends every week-end in that city.

Lindbergh May Land In Newark For His Visit To Wilmington

It is quite possible that in a short time Newark will have an airport closely adjacent to it. Last week a committee from the Delaware Aero-nautic Association, in company with Walter Powell, examined the Dameron farm as a possible site for an airfield that would serve Delaware and be maintained by the city of Wilmington. The committee was very favorably impressed with the location and is expected to return this week for a further examination. In the meantime the Chamber of Commerce is working on the proposition.

Should the field come to Newark, it will probably be a combined municipal and government port, as it would probably be taken in the system laid out for the proposed extension of the (airmail) service from New York to the South, that will have 50 foot beacons set every 20 miles.

School Registration

Friday, August 26 will be registration day for all children who expect to enter the first grade in the Newark public schools. Registration will be in the new school building from 9 to 12, standard time. Children should be accompanied by parents. Only children who are 6 years of age or will be 6 on or before January 1, 1928, will be allowed to enter. Miss Sara Steele and Mrs. Emma Robinson will be registrars.

The following information will be required about each applicant for entrance: General state of health, hearing, vision, distance from school, address, telephone number and medium of transportation. A birth certificate should be furnished.

Three Men Escape From Elkton Jail

Rip Up Part Of Corridor Floor And Squeeze Through Hole In Cellar Floor

Three men escaped from the Elkton jail Sunday by ripping up the floor in the corridor, making their way to the basement and then squeezing through a hole in the wall left by workmen who had installed a new sewer.

The escaped men are: H. C. Bryan, who was held on a charge of forgery, awaiting the arrival of police authorities from West Virginia, and Edward J. Thompson and William Witmer. The latter two were being held on charges of breaking into freight cars at the Conowingo Dam operations.

The men were not confined in cells and had the run of the corridor and were seen in the jail by deputy sheriffs and guards after 1 o'clock on Sunday morning. Just what time they made their escape the authorities do not know. There are about 40 other prisoners in the jail at present and that they did not join with the fugitives is believed to have been because they were asleep at the time.

As soon as the absence of the men was noted a description was sent to all towns and cities within a radius of one hundred miles and all the roads and railway stations were watched. Details of police kept a strict watch on all automobiles but the men are still at liberty. Sheriff Logan believes the men boarded a freight train and have gotten out of the state.

All the fugitives are young men and were dressed in the clothing they wore when arrested.

Oliver Haynes, colored, charged with murder, who had just as much chance to escape as his cell mates, did not take the opportunity and it was he who notified the sheriff of their escape. Forty-eight prisoners were confined in the jail and at least twelve of them could have escaped if they had wished. A number of these are Federal prisoners sent to jail by the United States Court. All of the men were awaiting the September term of court.

WARNING TO MOTORISTS

All magistrates have been notified that the State law requiring rear view mirrors on all cars is to be vigorously enforced. The fine for delinquency in this respect is $10.

Aetna Delegation To Go To Alexandria

Will Take Part In Monster Volunteer Firemen's Convention Held By One Of Oldest Companies In The Country

Tomorrow morning at the meagre hour of one, 35 members of the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company will embark in one of Stiltz's buses for Alexandria, Virginia, whereto they will represent Newark in a mammoth volunteer firemen's convention. They will take part in a parade and convention festivities tomorrow, leaving Alexandria late in the evening to return to Newark at around 7 o'clock Friday morning.

Alexandria, which is a city about the size of Wilmington, has one of the most famous volunteer fire fighting organizations in the country, having been in existence for well over one hundred years. For the past 47 years it has been holding conventions and carnivals attended by fire companies from many surrounding states. This is expected to be the biggest convention in the history of the organization and will be the first one that Newark has attended. There will be volunteer fire companies attending from New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, all of the Southern states and many Western states.

The Aetna delegation will be in charge of the social committee composed of R. E. Ramsey, Lester Hill, Charles Tasker, Walter Powell and Guy Hancock.

New Service Will Certify Field Seeds

Department Of Agriculture Will Aid
Work Of University In Selection
Of Alfalfa And Clover Seed

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, of the United States Department of Agriculture, has announced the inauguration of a seed verification service, for verifying the origin and identity of field seed in commerce. This will become effective September 1.

In Delaware this service will supplement the work of the Department of Agronomy of the University of Delaware, which has been running verification tests on both foreign and domestic seeds; particularly alfalfa and red clover. The verification of alfalfa and clover being of primary importance to the farmer.

The Extension Department of the University has already issued a bulletin on foreign seeds prepared by Professor George L. Schuster and J. M. Graham which is available, gratis, on request. The Department of Agronomy is now running tests on domestic alfalfa and red clover seeds, the complete findings of which will be published later. The following domestic alfalfa seeds are now under test: Kansas common; Utah irrigated and unirrigated common; Montana unirrigated common; Ontario variegated; Dakota Grimm, and Michigan Harding. With these tests and seeds (Continued on Page 8.)

WALTER POWELL SAILS FRIDAY

Walter Powell, who will be a delegate from Delaware to the American Legion Convention in Paris, will sail for Europe Friday on the U. S. Shipping Board liner, "Roosevelt." He will be accompanied by Dr. A. J. Gross, of Wilmington. Mr. Powell and Dr. Gross will take a ten-day trip through England, Scotland and Ireland before going to Paris. After the convention closes, they will take a four-weeks' motor tour on the Continent, returning to the United States about November 1, on the "President Harding."

SQUIRE GOES TO BUFFALO

Judge and Mrs. Daniel Thompson are leaving today for a motor trip to Buffalo. They will return next Tuesday. During the Judge's absence his office will be in charge of Miss Alice Kerr.

Aetna Wins Cup In Elkton Parade

The Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company won the cup for having the most men in line in the Elkton Firemen's Parade, held last night in conjunction with the annual Carnival of the Elkton Fire Company. Aetna took the Stutz engine and was accompanied by the Continental Band. There were 14 companies in line and 6 bands. It was estimated that fully 10,000 people witnessed the parade. The Parade was led by the Elkton Girl Scouts.

Other companies winning prizes were, Middletown, for the company making the best appearance; Aberdeen, for having the best band; Chestertown, for coming the greatest distance.

The Elkton Company has ordered a new $8,000 apparatus to supplement the two machines it already has.

One week from tomorrow, Aetna will parade again at North East.

University Prepares Exhibits For Fair

Extension Departments And 4-H Clubs To Make Instructive Displays; Other Exhibits Ready

The various extension departments of the University of Delaware have been allotted a building at the Wilmington Fair, starting at Elsmere Labor Day and continuing for six days and nights, and are preparing interesting and instructive exhibits to show the various phases of their work.

The New Castle County 4-H Clubs, under direction of Ed Willim, Jr., will display their completed projects. The poultry, potato and other agricultural projects will be exhibited on a competitive basis.

New Castle County Agent R. O. Bausman will have a particularly effective graphic exhibit showing the value of alfalfa for hay, and clover (Continued on Page 8.)

Dog Catchers Do Much Business In Newark

There are many disgruntled dog owners in Newark today, due to a visit from the dog catchers. Forty-two warrants have been issued for delinquent owners whose dogs have been captured. The visit of the wardens, who are acting as dog catchers, has greatly stimulated the business in dog licenses and the count for Newark now stands at 1,000.

While considerable publicity has been given the new dog law, many people seem to misunderstand its provisions and are up in arms about its administration. The law states that all dogs must be licensed, and that between sun-up and sunset from March to October, no dogs are allowed to run at large, and that means that on an owner's property the dog must be tied, in an enclosure from which he cannot escape, or under direct control of the owner. Dogs may be used for hunting, if under control of owner. No dogs may run at large after sunset at any time.

Captured dogs are taken to Wilmington where they are kept in a pound for 48 hours before they are put to death. Owners may retrieve dogs at the pound.

Mrs. J. Pearce Cann To Be Chairman In Arranging For National Music Contest

Mrs. J. Pearce Cann, of this town, has been selected to serve as chairman of this locality in the great Atwater-Kent National Radio Audition, which will be given under the auspices of the Atwater-Kent Radio Foundation, of Philadelphia.

This audition will provide a means of discovering, encouraging and developing unknown young men and women singers of exceptional talent and of letting the world hear them by radio. In an effort to discover the rare voices, the foundation will undertake to search the entire country for beautiful voices and to offer singers an opportunity for full development, and the co-operation of music lovers in each State has been enlisted.

In Delaware, the Wilmington Music Commission has consented to sponsor the undertaking and has appointed Mrs. Robert P. Robinson, of Claymont, honorary chairman and Mrs. Josiah Bacon, of Claymont, active chairman. Mrs. Cann has been chosen to organize the work in this locality and to appoint a committee to assist her.

The plan is to interest those young men and women, between the ages of 18 and 25, and to hold an elimination contest in each town which desires to enter the contest. The two winners, a boy and a girl, will then be privileged to enter the State and then the district contest, at which time two winners, a

Senator Reeves Dies Of Appendicitis

Senator From This District Expires
Last Night In Wilmington; Vacancy
To Be Filled Next Election

Joseph N. Reeves, of Delaware City, State Senator from this district, expired last night in the Delaware Hospital, Wilmington. An attack of appendicitis, with which Senator Reeves was stricken on August 6, was the direct cause of his death. No funeral arrangements have as yet been made.

Senator Reeves was 54 years of age, having been born in Delaware City in 1873. He was at one time in the foundry business in Pennsylvania, and at the time of his death was manager of a large alfalfa farm at Reayhold. He was very active in the work of the Episcopal Church at Delaware City.

The deceased was always active in Republican politics and in the last election was prevailed upon to become a candidate for State Senator from this district. He won and took an active part in the affairs of that body at its last session. He was interested in the affairs of the State and made a valuable member of the body to which he had been elected.

Mr. Reeves is survived by his wife, three brothers and two sisters. Arrangements for the funeral will be made today. Services will be in charge of the Episcopal Church at Delaware City.

The death of Senator Reeves will leave a vacancy in the State Senate which will have to be filled at the next election.

IMPROVEMENTS AT CENTER HALL

The contract will be given out this week for improvements to be made at Center Hall, at the corner of Main and Choate streets. The property, which is owned by the Improved Order of Red Men and the Heptasophs, will have a new glass front, similar to that on the Newark Inn. There will be three show windows, two of which will probably be occupied by an automobile concern. The stairway will be moved to the rear of the building. The corners and supports of the front will be faced with stucco to conform with the old building. Interior changes will be made, on the second floor. A concrete pavement will replace the old brick sidewalk along the front.

PLAY BY DAUGHTERS OF POCOCHONTAS

Under the direction of Mrs. Harvey Dickey, a cast chosen from the members of the Daughters of Pocochontas are rehearsing "Beantown Choir," which will be presented in Center Hall about the middle of September. The definite date will be announced in the near future.

boy and a girl, will be chosen to enter the national contest in New York City. By this process of elimination, each community may enter its best singers in a State radio audition, the State winners to compete in the district radio audition, of which there will be five in the United States. The National final audition in New York City will bring together five young men and five young women who will have been adjudged the most pleasing singers. To them the judges of the final audition will award the national prizes, five to men and five to women. The two winners in the first place will each receive a gold decoration, five thousand dollars in cash and two years' tuition in a leading conservatory; the winners of the second prizes will each receive two thousand dollars and one year's tuition; the winners of the third prizes, one thousand dollars and one year's tuition; of the fourth prizes, five hundred dollars; of the fifth prizes, two hundred and fifty dollars. The expenses of the contestants in the district and the national auditions will be paid by the Atwater Kent Foundation, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. J. O. G. Duffy, of Cooch's Bridge, has been selected as sub-chairman of Mrs. Cann's committee. Mrs. Cann will announce the names of the other members of the committee in the near future and plans will then immediately be made for the local contest.

Old Town Hall Completely Restored

Historic Shrine Now Occupies Proper Place As Priceless Heritage

Completely restored, after many years, during which time it had rapidly deteriorated until it had become an eye-sore, the Old Town Hall, one of Wilmington's most sacred shrines, now occupies its proper place as a priceless heritage. With the alterations made to conform to the original as much as possible, the bright new paint, the attractive brick and iron fence in front, the historical building seems no longer out of place on busy Market street. It is justifying the judgment of those who were responsible for its restoration.

The beautiful arched doorway leads right into the large room, which occupies the entire ground floor. In the center of the rear is a small rostrum, with its curved back necessitating a bay on the rear of the building. Four stately white columns, extending to the ceiling, are on the central portion of the floor. They are grouped together in square form. Two fireplaces are along each wall.

Flanking the principal entrance to the building are beautiful white colonial stairs, which meet at a common landing right above the entrance and proceed to the second floor. There are three large, high ceiling, and well lit rooms here. There is one in the center, similar to the first floor, and it is flanked by two similar rooms. The central room has windows to the rear and sides, while the side rooms have windows to Market street and to the sides.

From the second floor there is another stairway leading to a large unfinished portion, comparable to an attic. In the forefront of this is the compartment for the large dial of the clock. A stepladder leads to the beautiful cupola.

Painted in white and mahogany, so predominant in colonial days, the interior of the building is very pleasing, not only for its simple beauty but also its lightness and airiness. Besides the Market street entrance, there are two rear entrances, one at each side. These doors lead directly into the main floor. All the doors retain the original locks. Keys, six inches long, are used to open them.

One year after the building was originally erected, in 1798, the death of Washington was observed. Banquets were held there on the occasion of the election of Jefferson, and on February 22, 1815, the hall was illuminated in celebration of peace with England. Among other affairs held in this shrine was a dinner to Lafayette, and a similar affair to Caesar Rodney upon his departure as Minister to the United Provinces of LaPlata. Martin Van Buren attended a public dinner held on July 22, 1829, given for Louis McLane upon his departure as Minister to England. Receptions were also given here for President Jackson and General Harrison. In July, 1851, Henry Clay's body lay in state. A gala occasion was held on April 3, 1862, when the flags captured at Port Royal by Admiral S. F. du Pont were hung on the walls. The assassination of Lincoln brought forth resolutions at a meeting held on April 18, 1865. During the World War this venerable building served its purpose, when in the fall of 1916 a meeting on National Preparedness was addressed by Hon. George Gray and Major-General James Harrison Wilson. And from 1917 until 1919, when America's boys were overseas, it was the headquarters of the Delaware Chapter of the American Red Cross. Yet, these are but a few of the events held within its walls.

Approximately $43,000 was involved in the work of restoration of this building. A part of the money was raised by popular subscription.—Delmarvia Star.

NOTHING IS "FREE"

A card on a free towel case where the public is permitted gratuitously to wash its hands reads, "Why use two towels when one wipes dry?"

That is a question worth considering with respect to all "free" things. The unthinking say, "Use all you want of that, it is free." But only the selfish and the unthinking will so reason.

There are few things in this world that are free in the sense of being without cost. Somebody pays for the towel; somebody pays the man who brings the towels and puts them into the case; somebody pays for every service, else the servant cannot continue to serve.

And when careless people trample the grass or raid the flower beds or damage the benches in the parks, or deface the walls of public buildings or waste or misuse other things that are offered freely for public use and enjoyment, everybody must pay. The wrong and injustice is not less because the cost of the carelessness and waste is spread widely.—Detroit News.

Reed Birds Safe From Gunners This Year

Inasmuch as Delaware is not a rice producing state, there is no possibility that Delaware gunners will be allowed to shoot the succulent reed bird this fall. The following information, secured by the Delaware chapter of the Isaac Walton League and the Maryland State Sportsman's Association, from the Bureau of Biological Survey, explains that reed bird shooting in Delaware and Maryland has been illegal since 1916 and that there is no chance of an amendment to allow the killing of "reedies" this year:

There have been many petitions, both from Maryland and Delaware sportsmen, containing thousands of signatures along with co-operation of the numerous sportsmen's organizations requesting that the closed season on bobolinks, better known as "reed-birds," be rescinded in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

According to officials of the Biological Survey, no matter how many petitions or requests may be presented to the bureau, there is no chance whatever of enjoying gunning for the toothful morsels this year, as it has been illegal to kill bobolinks since the Migratory Bird Act, and Regulations between Great Britain and the United States was concluded August 16, 1916, and became effective December 8, 1916, as follows: "Migratory Insectivorous Birds," bobolinks, catbirds, flycatchers, grosbeaks, humming birds and many others of this species.

However, there were provisions made that the rice growing states would be permitted, with proper restrictions, to kill bobolinks, also known on the rice fields as "rice-birds," and this is still allowed, with more stringent regulations, while through the efforts of former U. S. Senator Saulsbury and the senators from Maryland and Virginia an open season was secured after being closed for a short period of time.

A protest was entered by Great Britain and Canada that while they had lived up to the treaty by prohibiting the killing of this species of migratory bird, the Bureau of Biological Survey was permitting them to be killed in various States of the Union that had no rice fields. After several meetings with the solicitor-general of the Department of Agriculture and officials of the Bureau of Biological Survey, Delaware Chapter Isaac Walton League of America found that it would require an act of Congress and an act of Parliament of Great Britain to kill reed birds in States that do not produce rice. It was also declared by officials of the Bureau of Biological Survey that the department could not continue longer to allow a violation of this law, inasmuch as it was duty bound to live up to the signed treaty, which classes the bobolink as an insectivorous bird.

However, in Maryland it is unlawful to gun for blackbirds on the feeding grounds of reed birds until September 1.

Under the Delaware State Game and Fish laws, the penalty for killing of non-game birds, or during a closed season; carries a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $25 for each and every bird so killed. Under the Federal law a violation of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act carries a penalty of from $1 to $500 and imprisonment of from one to three years.

Whatever enlarges hope will also exalt courage.—Johnson.

Re-Forestation In Delaware Growing

State Board Has Furnished Many Seedlings; Growing Fresh Supply

Commenting on the project of reforesting the waste lands of Delaware, Secretary Wilson, of the State Board of Agriculture, recently presented the following report of the work done during the past two years in reforestation:

"During the past two years, the State Board of Agriculture, co-operating with the Federal Government, under the Clarke-McNary Act, has been working on the project of reforesting the waste lands of the State. Much of the land in Delaware that cannot be used for farming can be made valuable by the growth of timber. During the last year, the State Board of Agriculture has distributed in the State, free of charge, 2,000 yellow pine, 13,800 black walnut, 12,000 locust, 15,000 poplar seedlings, and 3,500 seedlings of other varieties.

"The 2,000 yellow pines were furnished the Agricultural Department of the Laurel High School, upon request. Sussex county is particularly adapted to the growing of the 'Loblolly' pine tree. It is very difficult to obtain seedlings of this variety or to transplant the trees, so the State Board of Agriculture purchased and distributed the Yellow Pines, with the hope that they would prove successful in the Sussex soil. The other seedlings were distributed to those persons having land they wished to plant in timber; and, from reports received in the office of the State Board of Agriculture, the seedlings are making a very good growth so far.

"In view of the fact that Loblolly Pine seedlings are so difficult to secure, the State Board of Agriculture in the spring of 1926, purchased a supply of the Loblolly Pine seeds. These seeds were planted by Clayton A. Bunting, of Bunting's Nurseries, Selbyville, Delaware, in cold frames, and it is expected that a supply of pine seedlings will be ready in the spring of 1928 to fill the requests already received.

"Clayton A. Bunting has also co-operated with the State Board of Agriculture in the purchasing and distributing of the seedlings. He has taken care of receiving and keeping the trees, and of sending them out to the persons desiring them for reforestation purposes, also of advising the kind of trees suitable for the State.

"The last Legislature created a Forestry Commission to take charge of the forestry interests of the State."

"The only place for a knocker about the house is on the outside of the door."

Veteran Engine

Grim and battle-scarred with the marks of rough experiences in the Civil War, the famous "General," historic locomotive of the old Western and Atlantic Railroad, has arrived in Baltimore, to take part in the Centenary Exhibition and Pageant of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from September 24 to October 8.

The "General" was shipped in two sections on special cars by the Nashville, Chattanooga, and St. Louis Railway and transferred to the Baltimore and Ohio line at Louisville. The old engine will not run under its own steam with brother engines in the Centenary pageant because its months of strenuous war-time service have told heavily, and it is feared the old boiler would not stand the strain.

Built in 1855, this picturesque iron horse is an eight-wheel, wood-burning locomotive weighing 50,300 pounds. It has four driving wheels, each sixty inches in diameter; a total engine wheel base of twenty feet, six inches, and a working pressure of 140 pounds to the square inch. The smoke stack is of the old balloon type, and the cow-catcher is much longer and larger than those on modern locomotives.

It is a matter of history that the old engine, captured by Federal spies and recaptured by resourceful Confederates, was the central actor in one of the most thrilling episodes of the Civil War. A party of twenty-two Union spies, disguised as refugees from the Yankee lines going to join the Confederate army, the story goes, suddenly made off with the "General" during a stop made to allow the passengers and crew to breakfast. The Confederate captain in charge of the train saw them start and immediately, with a small party of soldiers, started on foot in pursuit. A hand-car was soon found and put in operation, but this was ditched on a short curve where the Federal raiders had stopped long enough to tear up the track. It was not until three different locomotives commanded by the Southerners had overcome all obstructions that the fugitives were finally overtaken, forced to abandon the stolen engine and chased into the woods. Eventually, the whole party, known in history as "Andrews' Raiders," was captured.

The "General" saw further service in hauling a train load of ammunition up to General Johnston's lines in the battle of Kennesaw Mountain in 1864. On the return trip, with bomb shells exploding constantly in the vicinity, the old engine brought back a large number of wounded soldiers.

The locomotive was also the last Western and Atlantic Railroad engine to leave Atlanta when Hood's army evacuated that city, and it was thought just before leaving that it would be impossible to get away, but they managed to leave in safety, and the locomotive went southward with a train load of refugees and war equipment.

The veteran engine, retired from active service after the war, was placed on display in the Union Station at Chattanooga, where it will be returned following its stay at Hatcher's. This journey to the Baltimore and Ohio exposition grounds is the first trip of the historic engine from its permanent resting place at Chattanooga since the Tennessee Centennial Exposition of 1896.

At the exhibition, the "General" will be given a place of honor befitting a veteran war-horse who has suffered heroically in a great struggle.

Wanted, A Traffic Officer

Now that Newark lays claim to the distinction of being third largest town in the State, it should bulwark the boast by supplementing its public service to take adequate care of its increased responsibilities.

There are a number of things lacking in the third largest town, but one of the most serious inadequacies is police protection; particularly in regard to traffic control. Local citizens have, for years, bragged with ironic mirth of their one-man police department. One man police protection in a town of Newark's population and area doubtless is humorous to anyone who does not have to rely on that protection. The Council has recently seen the point of the joke and has reached the stage where it is talking of another officer. The Council has also taken some steps to provide safeguards in the way of traffic lights. While we don't like to crowd our earnest, but deliberate, city fathers too vigorously on these matters, there is one problem that should be taken care of at once, even if the measures are temporary.

Saturday night traffic conditions on Main street are not only annoying, but dangerous. There is a constant and seldom broken stream of cars going in both directions during most of the evening, and pedestrians have to be particularly alert and nimble if they wish to cross the street at any point. Automatic light signals, which have been promised at intersections along Main street, will partially solve this problem, but, in addition, there is vital need of a traffic officer to be stationed in the middle of the long block from Academy street to College avenue. There is nothing in this stretch to break the lines of traffic, and, unless a safe crossing is provided, someone, sooner or later, is going to be struck. The least the Council should do is to engage a special officer to direct traffic at a point midway in this stretch on Saturday night.

Drinking or Driving?

Whatever views may be held concerning the prohibition law, there is no room for a difference of opinion regarding the "personal rights" of drinkers to assume the responsibilities of driving a car while under the influence of alcohol. With the modern need for speed to avoid traffic jams, the motorcar takes upon itself more of the nature of a projectile than a mere vehicle and a fine sense of judgment is continually being called upon in the matter of its guidance.

Can drinking and driving continue to mix? The question is entirely outside of the elusive arguments which feature ordinary discussions of the prohibition problem. The issue is clear-cut. There can be no question of "individual liberty," "state's rights," nor "ability to enforce." Means for detecting the intoxicated driver can be made readily available and the weight of public opinion will almost unanimously support the officer in his arrest. With a mounting toll from motor accidents, already out of all reason, and with the situation being aggravated by an increasing number of cars, it seems only a question of time before the drinking driver must be ruled off the road. At present, unless the driver is obviously drunk, he is not interfered with until something happens. If detected then, it is too late and the stiff sentence, that faces him, if convicted, makes him exercise every bit of influence he can command to avoid conviction, while his honest contrition and the inability of the law to prove that he had been drinking, usually keeps the fact off the records.

Should the law against "drinking and driving" be fully enforced, it is probable that a great many roadhouses, "ostensible" inns, and casual "speakeasies" would be forced to close their doors, and one of the most vulnerable points of attack, by critics of prohibition, would be largely eliminated. The effects of such action would, however, be much wider than this, for, today, with our changed habits of living, it is almost impossible to drink anywhere without at least some of the party driving cars afterward. If drinking is indulged in in the home, guests must later return to their own homes and, with a more common ownership of the automobile, friends are chosen because of common interests rather than neighborly convenience. As a consequence, they usually live some distance away and travel by car. If the drinking is done at some resort, hotel, club, or even by the roadside, the effect is to all intents and purposes the same.

A few have chauffeurs of their own; it is probable that recourse to the "taxi" would become more common; but it must be obvious that the divorcing of driving from drinking would seriously handicap the drinking by motorized liquor-law violators. If it comes to a question of choice between the use of one's car and the desire to drink, there is every indication that the car would receive first choice, particularly among the new class of drinkers who have been recruited from among the younger generation. It is difficult to see how this choice can be successful, and permanently avoided.—Christian Science Monitor.

Bureau Of Foreign And Domestic Commerce

An office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has been opened in Wilmington, and, commencing September 10, will be in position to give information to manufacturers, importers and exporters to foreign domestic markets.

John H. Farrell, formerly in charge of the Houston, Texas office, has been placed in charge of the Wilmington office. Heretofore, Delaware firms have been forced to obtain their trade data from the Philadelphia office.

Some of the practical aids the Wilmington District Office will be able to render American manufacturers and exporters in Delaware in the profitable marketing of their goods in foreign countries are: Facts concerning the market and competitive conditions abroad; actual trade opportunities for the sale of American products; the furnishing of sales information on prospective purchasers and agents; data on the best methods of marketing, packing, shipping, and financing.

Foreign Trade Opportunities, or the actual request for his products in foreign markets. The announcement of specific opportunities for the sale of American goods are published in "Commerce Reports," an official weekly magazine published by the Bureau. The names and addresses are not given in these announcements but are furnished to bona fide American firms, (whose names and interest in foreign trade are recorded on the Ex-

The opportunities are also put out in mimeograph circular form every week under the heading of "What the World Wants," and firms on our Index will be placed on the Bureau's mailing list to receive regularly this particular circular.

When the confidential information furnished regarding an opportunity for sales in foreign countries is too detailed to be given in a "Trade Opportunity" announcement, it is embodied in a confidential bulletin or circular, which is sent to firms that are listed on the Exporters' Index. The Exporters' Index service will be explained in a subsequent paragraph.

Lists of buyers in foreign countries. This District Office will maintain in its files trade lists of foreign importers and dealers arranged according to commodities and the principal countries throughout the world where American goods are in demand. Copies of such lists will always be available to firms on the Index.

COVERDALES RETURN

Without any particular formality, on Saturday morning, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Coverdale will again open a Coverdale's Restaurant in Newark. They will open in the same place they left 10 years ago, and which has been run since as the Newark Inn. The name Newark Inn has been dropped and the establishment will be known as Coverdale's.

The Coverdales are well known in Newark to everyone who can hark back to 1916 and 1917 when they had their former restaurant in this town. Mrs. Coverdale's cooking is still remembered by not only those who took their meals with her, but by Newark housewives who called on her for cakes, pastry and other dainties. The building which will house the new Coverdale's has been completely renovated, repainted, redecorated and refurnished throughout and will be a welcome addition to Newark's list of hosteries. It will specialize in home cooking in its restaurant and home atmosphere in its rooms.

The Etiquette Of Hotel

There are certain recognized rules of etiquette that apply especially to one's conduct in hotels and restaurants. The more familiar one is with this code, the more one not only enjoys but appreciates the increasingly varied service rendered by these establishments. Formerly a hotel existed primarily for tourists but today it is a field of multitudinous activities and entertainments of all kinds, so that a well-equipped hotel is now a center of general interest and is considered an important link in the chain of social and civic activities.

Modern living conditions in large cities are more or less responsible for this changed viewpoint, and, even though there may be "no place like home," a hotel often proves itself a satisfactory and most convenient substitute. While the general procedure of arrival at a hotel, registering and being shown to one's room is presumably well understood, there are a few incidentals worthy of special mention. One of these is the advantage of a reservation made in advance, allowing time for a reply, in case one cannot be accommodated. This correspondence not only serves as an introduction when one is patronizing a hotel for the first time, but the letter will be on file and will establish the identity of the guest should he have future dealings with the establishment. It is well to have one's arrival in correct form, as to hand baggage, checks and mode of conveyance to the door. There are plenty of attendants usually available to carry bags and suitcases and to see a guest laden with these things does not create a good first impression.

The doorman who assists the newcomer to leave her taxi and removes the hand baggage is in close touch with the porter's department, so that a bell or signal brings someone to look after all these belongings. There is no necessity for being over-solicitous with regard to them provided each piece is properly marked or tagged with name or initials. The page or hallboy who conducts the guest to her room carries the hand baggage and the porter comes later with heavier pieces.

How to Register

When several arrive in the same group it is permissible for one to register for all, if that is more agreeable to the others. This is one of the few instances where a woman should always write her title instead of her signature. That is, a woman should use her title of "Mrs." or "Miss" as a prefix to her name on a hotel register, as "Mrs. Henry Clark Smith" or "Miss Frances Smith." Mother and daughter traveling together should have both names entered on the register, the daughter's name on a separate line, using "Miss" as a prefix for the little girl and "Master" for the boy. In the case of an infant and nurse, it is proper to say, "child and maid."

The general custom in America is to write only the name of the city and state where one resides, but should there be spaces on the register calling specifically for street and house number, these details should be listed in the proper column, as the fact that the register is so arranged is sufficient indication that the requirements are different from usual in this particular locality.

Rates for Tipping

Whatever one's personal attitude may be with regard to the practice of tipping, it is well to have an idea of the general custom prevailing in hotels and restaurants particularly in large cities. It should be remembered that the majority of employees in these establishments are foreign-born and naturally have the European point of view with regard to perquisites, which make them not only acceptable but expected. Too lavish tipping betrays ignorance and is always a mistake, while a quietly given perquisite in the correct proportion to the service rendered indicates satisfaction and appreciation. While all such fees are details for the individual to decide, there is a sense of proportion to be recognized and where one demands and receives extra attention, whether from maids, waiters, telephone operators or other attendants it does not seem inappropriate that such service should be rewarded.

Dress in the Restaurant

A man should invariably check his coat and hat with the attendant at the door of the dining-room, but a woman may act her pleasure in the matter and not remove her wrap until she reaches the table, when it may be slipped over the back of her chair. It is, however, much better for her to follow the rule laid down for men and check all her belongings except hand-bag, at the door. Many a handsome wrap has been damaged by having something spilled on it by a passing waiter and in a crowded restaurant there is little space for an extra chair to hold a woman's outer garment. In entering a public dining room the headwaiter leads the way, the woman follows him and the escort comes last. Where there are several in the group, the women all go first and the men follow. In case the headwaiter should not be at the door when the party arrives, the group stands for a moment near the door until he is free. A waiter draws out a chair for each lady and seats her, or, in a less formal restaurant, the escort performs this service.

Whether a woman guest in a hotel shall wear her hat in the restaurant is largely a matter of personal preference. In a large city hotel where many come in from outside, most women feel less conspicuous if dressed like the other patrons who probably are not residents of the hotel. For breakfast, many women come to the hotel dining room without hats, while for other meals they prefer to follow the style of outside patrons. Conditions are quite different in a strictly residential hotel, so that in all such details points of etiquette vary and good judgment rather than absolute rules must govern.

In planning for departure there are several important details that must not be overlooked. The usher should be notified to make out the bill in ample time to allow for checking the items before payment. Unless the guest is known to the management, the bill should be paid before the porter is summoned to take away the baggage, as there is a close connection between the porter's department and the cashier's ledger and it is well to avoid any possibility of misunderstanding or embarrassment. It is advisable to leave a forwarding address in case telegrams or mail arrive after departure. Always allow time for possible delays, as even in the best-equipped hotels instant attention is not invariably at hand, and steamers and trains do not wait. It is pleasant to have everything in connection with one's departure as well as one's arrival create a good impression, so, if one is not opposed to the practice of tipping, one is wise to slip something into the hand of the elevator attendant and remember the doorman and the porter. Whatever it is one's pleasure to give on leaving, let it be accompanied by a bright smile and a friendly "good-by." Kindly appreciation and evidences of good will are usually remembered after mere cash is forgotten.—Christian Science Monitor.

by having something spilled on it by a passing waiter and in a crowded restaurant there is little space for an extra chair to hold a woman's outer garment. In entering a public dining room the headwaiter leads the way, the woman follows him and the escort comes last. Where there are several in the group, the women all go first and the men follow. In case the headwaiter should not be at the door when the party arrives, the group stands for a moment near the door until he is free. A waiter draws out a chair for each lady and seats her, or, in a less formal restaurant, the escort performs this service.

Whether a woman guest in a hotel shall wear her hat in the restaurant is largely a matter of personal preference. In a large city hotel where many come in from outside, most women feel less conspicuous if dressed like the other patrons who probably are not residents of the hotel. For breakfast, many women come to the hotel dining room without hats, while for other meals they prefer to follow the style of outside patrons. Conditions are quite different in a strictly residential hotel, so that in all such details points of etiquette vary and good judgment rather than absolute rules must govern.

"THE FIRE BRIGADE"

Nine out of every ten fires might have been prevented.

It is this appalling fact that prompted the production of "The Fire Brigade" the spectacular human interest story of the fire fighters that is to be shown at the Arcadia Theatre, Wilmington, the week of August 29th.

The picture, however, is not merely a preachment, but one of the most entertaining and thrilling pictures ever produced, though any audience viewing it cannot help but be impressed by the needless loss of life and money through flames.

"The Fire Brigade" was sponsored by the leading fire chiefs throughout the world in convention at Louisville, Kentucky, and in the production the director was given the full co-operation and valuable aid of the Los Angeles Fire Department.

The romance that is the basis of the story is of the love of a fireman and a pretty girl and of the big part that a terrible conflagration plays in their lives.

Charles Ray, May McAvoy, Holmes Herbert and Tom O'Brien people the cast.

Award of $1000 for Negro Musical Compositions

The award of the $1,000 in cash prizes, offered by Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, for the best compositions by Negro composers, will be made officially, and the names of the prize winners announced at the annual convention of the National Association of Negro Musicians, Inc., to be held at St. Louis, August 20-26 inclusive. The announcement of the successful contestants will be made at the Artists' Concert on Thursday evening, August 25.

The prizes were offered by Mr. Wanamaker at the convention of the National Association of Negro Musicians, Inc., held in Philadelphia one year ago. He divided his offer into five classifications, which included almost every field of music, both vocal and instrumental, as the composers were allowed considerable latitude in many of these classifications.

The contest aroused great interest among the Negro composers of the country, as more than two hundred and sixty compositions were submitted, and virtually every State in the Union was represented. The judges held their meeting in the Wanamaker Store, Philadelphia, in June, when the successful compositions were selected, although the names of the winning composers are not yet known even to the judges. The judges were Henry T. Burleigh, the famous Negro composer and singer; Charles M. Courboin, official organist of the Wanamaker Store in Philadelphia; Carl Ditt, President of the National Association of Negro Musicians, Inc.; Samuel L. Lacia, Music Editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and Clarence Cameron White, head of the Department of Music of the Institute of West Virginia.

The judges consider that Mr. Wanamaker's offer has done more to arouse the interest of colored musicians in creative work than anything that has yet been done along these lines. They found the results of the contest most encouraging, and, although the large number of classifications and prizes, as well as the simple forms of certain of the classifications, brought in a great many works that had small chance of winning a prize, still there were many compositions which denoted a very considerable degree of talent for composition, while others showed much learning, not only

TREE GROWS RAPIDLY

The Red Pine, also called Norway Pine, is one of the most important pine trees native to North America. It is found from Nova Scotia south to central Pennsylvania and west to Michigan and Minnesota. The Red Pine has few enemies, grows rapidly, and if given care and protection will produce large quantities of high-quality wood. It is one of our most attractive and useful evergreen trees.

Mr. Love, as President of the Association, will be introduced to the delegates on the evening of the delegates of the prize winners by Carl Ditt, President of the National Association of Negro Musicians, Inc., and Mr. Love in turn will present Mr. Lansidel, who will announce the names of the successful contestants, the class in which they won the prizes and the names of the compositions.

Downie Bros. Wild Animal Circus Coming to Newark

Circus day is children's day. It belongs essentially to them. Tradition has made it so. There was a time when "taking the children to see the animals," was the most convenient excuse offered by those who thought it against religious scruples or their fancied dignity, to go to the circus. Happily that form of hypocrisy is now about extinct. Years of the most careful effort by the managers of these shows to eliminate everything and anything in the slightest degree immoral or impossible in the character of their exhibitions, or in the demeanor of their employees of whatever rank, has at last convinced the public generally of the absolute cleanliness and morality of the circus as a place of entertainment, and with such comprehensive shows as are these great consolidated institutions, a source of practical and profitable instruction. There is no longer any excuse or apology for going to the circus. The presence of clergymen at every performance, with seldom an exception, attests the general and sensible change of consideration for the circus by church people. But all this does not release anyone from a moral obligation to take their children to see the animals and the accompanying circus performance. It is really not only a matter of extreme delight to the children to see the "show," but it is a duty as well as a pleasure upon the part of parents, relatives and friends to enable them to see it.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

An appetizer—just a mere bite of something especially pungent and tasty, attractively served and made as inviting as possible, is now served by most hostesses as the first course of the dinner, whether the latter be just a little dinner for friends, or a more formal affair. The appetizer may be of fruit, fish or vegetables, as one desires. Genuine Switzerland cheese, because of its aromatic alpine flavor and its peculiar adaptability for harmonizing with other foods, makes a most inviting appetizer.

Switzerland Pigs in Blankets

Cut cheese in strips one-fourth inch square and two inches long. Brush lightly with mustard and wrap each in a wafer thin slice of bacon. Place on a hot griddle or under the broiler and grill until the bacon is crisp. Serve on strips of freshly made toast, garnishing each strip with a spring of watercress.

Cheese and Tomato Canapes

Cut thinly sliced bread into rounds, toast one side and butter the untoasted side. Lay a slice of tomato on the buttered side, cover with a disk of cheese, sprinkle with paprika and salt and place under the broiler or in a hot oven until the cheese is soft and slightly brown. Garnish with minced green pepper and pimiento.

Fringed Celery

Cut celery stalks into two-inch pieces and fringe each end one-half inch deep. Place in ice water for an hour, then drain and wipe dry. In the cavities of the celery place strips of cheese which have marinated in French dressing for a few minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very cold.

Apple Sandwiches

Slice a tart red apple very thin without peeling it, and cut each slice across; remove seeds; cut thinly sliced cheese in the same way and put together between the apple slices, sandwich fashion, the pale yellow of the cheese showing between the red skin of the apple. Fasten with toothpicks and serve at once.

Toasted Cheese

Toasted cheese make a tempting appetizer served before a Dutch lunch. Slice cheese in square pieces one-quarter inch thick, and toast under the broiler. Meantime heat saltines in the oven, place a square of cheese on each, brush lightly with mustard and top with a disk cut from canned pimiento.

Sardine Rose Canapes

On six rounds of buttered graham bread, place a slice of tomato and a slice of cheese. Skin and bone six sardines, mash well and then add one hard-boiled egg, finely chopped. Season with salt, pepper and paprika and moisten with mayonnaise. Place this pulp in a pastry bag and press through the rosette tube, placing a sardine rose on each round of cheese. Garnish with chopped parsley.

Because of the opening of school and college, the month of September seems to many people like the real beginning of a new year. Why not start a budget if you are not already living on the budget plan?

Tin darkness with use, and this tarnish protects the tin. Therefore tin utensils should not be scoured simply for the sake of making them bright. When food dries or burns on tin utensils it may be removed by heating a weak soda solution in the pan and then washing it thoroughly.

Change the kind of bread you use from time to time. Instead of always serving white bread, have whole wheat, rye, raisin or date bread once in a while; make rolls of different kinds, corn bread, baking powder biscuits, muffins, hominy or graham gems, corn sticks, corn pones, or oven toasted bread.

To get iron rust stains from an enameled sink, bleach them with a solution of oxalic acid. Repeat until the stain disappears, then rinse thoroughly.

The reason it is better for a child to learn to eat cereals and fruit without sugar is that many sweet foods spoil the appetite for other foods that are needed, and by adding sugar to everything a taste for sweet foods is needlessly developed. Any candy or sweet foods should be given, sparingly, at the end of a meal.

Cook a sprig of mint with new peas, a few grains of curry with lima beans, a bay leaf with tomato.

Salt and sweet, judiciously used, is a good combination of flavors. Sweet potatoes go well with ham, tongue, and other smoked meats. Many sweet pickles are brined before they are made into pickle. Jelly and speed preserves are good with ham or cooked beef. Some people like both sugar and salt on a cantaloupe. Serve saltine crackers with a fruit salad.

Windfall and imperfect apples can be made into apple sauce and canned for winter use. Do not add any more water than is necessary to keep the apples from burning. Sweeten to taste, pack hot, and process in the water bath for 5 minutes.

If sliced ham is very salty, soak it in buttermilk or sour milk before cooking.

Whether you are building a new home, remodeling an old one, or merely rearranging your kitchen equipment, you will find Farmers' Bulletin 1513-F, "Convenient Kitchens," helpful.

Cottage cheese is high in food value. It contains all the constituents of milk except the cream. Like milk, cottage cheese is a source of protein, which is used to build and repair body tissues.

After carefully washing it cook rice in a large quantity of actively boiling salted water until it is done through but not soft. Drain in a colander and set over hot water, covered with a cloth, so each grain will swell and remain separate.

You can have shortcakes whatever the season. When fresh peaches are over, bananas are always available, and the dried fruits, such as apricots, prunes, figs, and dates, are excellent when made into a thick sauce and served on biscuit dough with whipped cream.

SPINACH FOR FALL

Take off ten inches of soil from the asparagus plants and sow bone meal and nitrate of soda on the crowns. Then cover with soil again and dig in some cow manure on top. Cut out the old wood from raspberry and blackberry plants when the crop has been gathered. Sow lettuce and spinach for fall use.

BIRD'S SHARP EYES

After experiments by scientists in Great Britain several conclusions were reached about the ability of birds to see. Among these are: A thrush sees a worm writhing in grass 100 yards off. A sparrow 50 yards away sees a dripped crumb or pea and immediately darts to it. The swallow, skimming along 40 miles an hour, marks down gnats 100 yards ahead. A hawk, poised 300 feet above a tangled brake, detects a mouse through heavy growth. Eagles and vultures possess super-telescopic sight and their vision is even keener.

WOOD ASHES ON ASTERS

Stake up the cosmos before it is bent down by a heavy rain. It is well to put wood ashes on the asters, but be careful not to injure the shallow roots in digging.

OUT-DOOR GOOD MANNERS

Pennsylvania has a law prohibiting the gathering of flowers, ferns, shrubs and trees along a private or public road and provides for a heavy fine and even imprisonment for violators. Recently a motorist stopped along a highway in Bucks county and started to help himself. A traffic officer put him under arrest and a justice of the peace backed up the officer with a fifty-dollar fine. Nature Magazine is conducting 'the National Out-Door Good Manners Campaign.

FERTILIZE THEM NOW

August is the time to pot the Jerusalem cherries for winter flowering. They require good soil, plenty of sunshine, and moist but well-drained earth.

The fall flowering plants like dahlias and chrysanthemums must be well fertilized from now on to give the best results. Liquid manure applied every two weeks is excellent.

CUT PHLOX IN AUGUST

When phlox has finished blooming cut them off to the ground, and it will flower again in the late fall. If your phlox is troubled with mildew, shake powdered sulphur on them.

YOU STILL CAN PLANT

In August you may still sow the seeds of plants like hollyhocks, sweet-williams, forget-me-nots, and wall flowers. These plants grow more quickly than others and can still store away enough energy to carry them over the winter.

PLANTING BULBS

In planting new iris, avoid the mistake of burying the roots. It is usually considered best to leave the top of the bulb exposed. If you haven't ordered bulbs for spring flowering, it is high time to do so.

BIRD A POLICEMAN

Throughout the year the mockingbird sings as he eats the rice weevil, clinch bug and cottonworm, or wild fruit. He polices his territory, sounds alarm to all birds in the neighborhood, and is unfearing in defense of his home. He selects a thicket near the habitation of man and builds a coarse nest for the four to six greenish-blue eggs which are freckled at the larger end.

HE CHASES THE CROW

Perched on an outstanding dead limb near his nest site, prepared for passing insects, is Sir Kingbird, one of the most common of our large flycatchers. His range extends from central Canada through all parts of the United States except the southwest. The male bird's pet aversion is the crow which he will chase from the premises, even inflicting severe punishment with his strong bill.

A WISE BLUE JAY

Mrs. Kate Holden of Memphis tells Nature Magazine she was puzzled by the antics of a blue jay flying madly among the branches of a wide-spreading elm. She discovered the wise bird was taking advantage of a heavy dew the night before and busily knocking the moisture off the leaves and on to its wings, thus taking its morning bath.

War Linotype Doing Its Peacetime Bit

From printing peace treaties in Paris to setting up copy for an army pamphlet on how to lunge and thrust with a bayonet is beating plowshares into swords with a vengeance. Yet that is part of the life history of Linotype 22,551, now in operation at the Infantry School Printing Shop, Fort Benning, Ga.

This machine went overseas like any doughboy and was used at the Chaumont headquarters of the American Expeditionary Force, setting up Pershing's general orders and citations for heroism in action against the Germans. Later it did its bit transforming copy into type for the Stars and Stripes, the daily newspaper of the A. E. F.

When President Wilson and his diplomats gathered in Paris for the Peace Conference, the veteran linotype was put to work again. It assisted in getting out the Treaty of Versailles, which determined the terms of the peace between Germany and the allied and associated powers. When the plenipotentiaries came home the diminished American forces in France brought their machine with them. In the course of time it was shipped to Georgia for the work of the Infantry School.

At Fort Benning it has no palatial quarters such as it enjoyed in Paris. The historic machine inherited the corner of a shabby old dairy barn equipped with a concrete floor, and here it carries on its peace-time mission of turning out small problems for infantry officers and enlisted men. —New York Times.

A love of beauty creates a desire for finer living in a moral sense; it is uplifting and brings men nearer to their Creator. The first duty of all who come in contact with the growing child, is to foster his inherent love of the beautiful and especially does it devolve upon the teachers of the allied arts to radiate enthusiasm for the appreciation of and desire for beauty wherever it is found. The children must be steeped in the love of beauty and crave a desire to create beauty in all things.

This is education; to teach the child that it is his privilege to come in touch with the Infinite. Reading, writing, and arithmetic are of value in helping him to attain this end. It is only the small minority who need to major in mathematics, or become expert penmen or public readers, but the vast majority will walk in the paths of life, with much drudgery to overcome, many temptations to face, much sorrow to endure. So the wise educators are learning that the most important factors in the curriculum are those which help the child to find his soul and to give expression to it in his own individual way.—William H. Vogel.

A GIANT SILKWORM

Some caterpillars are handsome. The largest of our giant silkworms, the Cecropia caterpillar, says Nature Magazine, is a beautiful creature, often measuring four inches when full grown. Conspicuous fleshy protuberances or knobs that are illuminated with vivid colors, such as coral red, yellow, and blue, adorn the body, itself a delicate bluish green.

GOOD TIMBER TREE

The Black Walnut is more fortunate than many trees in that it has only a few common names. Throughout its entire range of 650,000 square miles it is called Walnut, Black Walnut or Walnut tree. It is found from southern New England to Minnesota and south to Florida, and is an important timber tree, producing excellent timber and fine nuts.

New Service Will Certify Field Seeds

available with Government certification, the farmer of Delaware is assured of being able to obtain the best possible seed for his purpose.

The proposed service is the outgrowth of recommendations made at seed marketing conferences held in June and November, 1926, in Chicago, to devise and suggest means by which verification of origin may be accomplished. The tentative plan for a seed verification service, developed at those conferences, was later approved by the International Crop Improvement Association and Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association (now Farm Seed Association of North America), with the recommendation that the details be worked out by the department.

In June of this year, at the time of the regular meetings of the Farm Seed Association of North America and the American Seed Trade Association, the details of the proposed service were presented for discussion. A number of seedmen made informal request that this service be established this year and that they be permitted to issue verified-origin seed certificates under the proposed plan. Other seedmen stated that they were considering the matter favorably and, if possible for them to conform to the requirements of this service, would file application soon after the announcement of the organization of the service.

In this service only the verification of origin and identity of seeds is contemplated. There has been considerable discussion in recent years concerning the value of origin of growth of certain seeds, particularly alfalfa and red clover seed. Congress has enacted legislation to furnish protection from undesirable foreign strains of red vlover and alfalfa seed by coloring such seed upon entry into the United States. This protects the American farmer from objectionable foreign seed but it is also very desirable to protect him against seed produced in this country that is not adapted for his use. This protection may be accomplished by a seed verification service.

Under this service the origin of a given lot of seed sold by an authorized vendor of inspected seed may, by an examination of records by a Federal seed inspector, be traced back to the place the seed was produced. Such records would cover all lots of seed from the time they are received from the grower until they leave the seedmen's warehouses. In addition to the records themselves, files of samples of all lots offered for sale would afford another check on the identity of these lots.

Under the proposed plan, seedmen who comply with the regulations and provisions of the department governing the service, may issue United States verified-origin seed certificates on seeds which have been previously verified as to origin by an authorized inspector.

The outstanding feature of the service is the United States verified-origin seed certificate which will be used on tags or labels by seedmen authorized by the department to issue it. Those who are given the privileges of this service may announce the fact, in a form approved by the bureau, on letterheads, circulars or other advertising matter.

RURAL CLUBS TO HAVE INTERESTING MEETINGS

Now that vacation time is nearly over, women throughout the country are turning their attention to the various necessary preparations for the winter months. At present, many women are canning fruits and vegetables to tempt the appetite when the family grows tired of winter staples; others are planning and making new frocks for the children to wear to school; while still others are thinking of what the house needs to make it more attractive and cozy for those long "shut-in" months.

Club meetings, which have been replaced by trips to the beach, picnics, etc., during the hot weather, will soon be resumed. Nothing would be more interesting or worthwhile than to consider some of the aforementioned problems at these meetings, for the exchange of many ideas is always most helpful to the perplexed home-maker.

Mrs. McKinley, who recently succeeded Miss Wood as State Home Demonstration Leader, has prepared a schedule of meetings for the Fall and Winter months, beginning in September, on such timely topics. She suggests that she would be glad to have any group of rural home-makers in any community who would like to have this work, write her in the near future in care of the University of Delaware, Newark.

Eggs rank high in digestibility—whether you eat them raw or cooked. The advantage is probably on the side of the slightly cooked egg—especially in the case of the egg white.

for pasture. Colored photographic plates will be arranged under an alternating lighting system to bring out the advantages of the two crops. Extension Poultryman H. S. Palmer will also have a graphic display of eggs, showing by contrast good and bad methods of grading and packing eggs.

The Department of Agronomy will show the results of variety tests on wheat; wheat taken from three experimental plots in different parts of the State will be shown, both in the head and threshed.

The Horticultural Department will exhibit methods of grape pruning, probably having two complete vines, one pruned and the other unpruned.

The Department of Plant Pathology will demonstrate the characteristics of diseases in different types of plants and fruits.

Mr. A. D. Cobb will be in charge of the complete exhibition.

At a meeting of the superintendents of the various departments, Mrs. Frederick C. Snyder, in charge of the women's and children's department had 872 exhibitors at that time and by the time of the Fair she expects to have more than a thousand. This will give the woman's department alone a most magnificent display of crocheting and knitting, embroidery work, plain and fancy sewing, baking and preserving.

The exhibits by children will be one of the most interesting.

Reports made of the exhibit of foreign machinery indicates that this will be larger than at any previous exhibit. The large amount of ground surrounding the Fair gives the farm machine manufacturers a splendid opportunity to demonstrate what his machine can do. It is anticipated that the value of the farm machinery will be worth many tens of thousands of dollars.

In the cattle department of which A. E. Tomhave of the University of Delaware is superintendent, blooded cattle from lower Delaware will compete with fancy herds from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Upper Delaware. Mr. Tomhave is planning to have the judging done under a tent so that the judges may explain why they award honors to this or that exhibit and the spectator can listen in comfort. There will be Ayreshires from Sussex county, Herefords from Pennsylvania, and Holstein-Friesians, Jerseys and Guernseys from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

The display of poultry promises to be one of the best in years. Charles C. Speakman has many fancy flocks already entered and there will be hundreds of the choicest birds exhibited.

Mr. Speakman is offering a ten dollar gold piece for the turkey exhibited that weighs the heaviest.

Reports from the fruit and vegetables, swine and sheep, flowers, pigeon and pet stock indicate that the exhibits will be so numerous that it will require hours to inspect them.

The horse show on two days in the week and the Boys' and Girls' Club exhibits all of the week will be two features not to be missed. Then there is the big midway and the free vaudeville and running and harness races, with automobile races on Saturday.

Y. W. C. A. BENEFIT

The August tournament of the Yorklyn Gun Club, through the kindness of Mr. Clarence T. Marshall, recently afforded an opportunity for the persons interested in the District Y. W. C. A. to earn more than $725 for the Association. Mr. Marshall turned the serving of meals for the three-day shoot over to the Y. W. C. A. and offered to match every dollar taken in by an additional half dollar. Communities throughout the State where Girl Reserve Corps have been organized contributed food and money for the enterprise and mothers of the girls belonging to the Association and other women interested in its welfare did the work.

Miss Shallcross, Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Pool, of Middletown, took charge and were assisted on different days by women from Marshallton, Newark, and Middletown.

Newark sent over twenty dollars and on Friday of the tournament Mrs. Hossinger, Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. Wheelless, and Mrs. Cobb spent the entire day at Yorklyn helping in the preparing and serving of the meals.

Every one who contributed to the success of the undertaking is most heartily thanked by Miss Shallcross, treasurer of the District Y. W. C. A., and Miss Good, field secretary.

It could probably be shown, however, if one cared to take time to show it, that it is easy to get vexed about mismanagement of the finances of a town without knowing how they might be better managed.—Woodrow Wilson.
