PRICE SEVEN CENTS

Undergraduate Enrollment At U. of D. up 15 Per Cent

Vice-President John E. Hocutt Reports Increase
With 5,950 Undergrads — Fresh Total Near That Of Entire Undergraduate Students A Decade Ago

The University of Delaware has enrolled 5,950 undergraduates, an increase of more than 15 per cent over last year, according to John E. Hocutt, vice-president for student affairs.

The figure includes 2,005 freshmen, Hocutt said, which is almost as many as the entire undergraduate enrollment of 2,096 in the university just 10 years ago.

Hocutt said incomplete registration figures show 5,950 undergraduates; 3,196 extension students; and 1,789 graduate students for a total 10,935.

The total figure is expected to exceed 11,000 after Saturday, last day for registration.

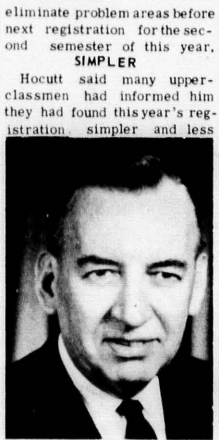

Commenting on the university's inauguration of a computerized registration procedure, Hocutt said it would have been physically impossible for the 5,950 undergraduates to register in a single day under the previous method.

"We did experience some problems in the registrations procedure, but just about every institution which has undertaken registrations by computer has had difficulties at the outset."

"Overall, our problems were less severe than those experienced on the initial computerized registration by most institutions," Hocutt said.

Hocutt commended both faculty and students for their understanding of the difficulties involved in making the transition from conventional to computerized registration.

He noted that the university's records office hopes to eliminate problem areas before next registration for the second semester of this year.

SIMPLER
Hocutt said many upper-classmen had informed him they had found this year's registration simpler and less time-consuming than for previous registrations. For the most part, conflicts and other problems experienced by some students in the recent registration have been resolved.

The 15-plus per cent increase in undergraduate enrollment compares with the national average of about nine per cent for total collegiate enrollment, which indicates the rapid growth of the university, Hocutt said.

Public Meeting On Referendum Slated Monday

No Tax Rate Increase
Involved In Thursday
Voting On Bonded Debt

The Newark Board of Education has called for a public meeting to discuss the referendum to be held in the local school district next Thursday, with the public meeting to be held in the Central Junior High School auditorium next Monday evening at 7:30.

There is no tax increase involved in this referendum, as the school district is simply seeking permission to sell bonds, not raise the bonded indebtedness tax rate. And there will be two bonded indebtedness referenda, with both ballots printed on one piece of paper.

Part A of the ballot will offer Newark residents opportunity to vote for or against a bond issue, with the state supplying 60 per cent of the funds and the Newark area, 40 per cent, to build a 24-classroom elementary school in Chapel Hill; to purchase future school sites before developments are built in order to save taxpayers money; and seating for the Christiana High School Stadium.

Part B of the ballot will offer choice on approval of money to purchase instructional equipment for Newark schools. School Board President Albert H. Jones, Jr., points out that even though there are two referenda on the same day, there is really one issue, the educational program in Newark.

"With Newark's rapid growth, it is rather obvious that we need both schools and equipment, but in compliance with state law they are being separated into two items on the ballot," Jones explained.

"There is no tax rate increase of any kind attached to either or both of these referenda."

"If both referenda are successful, the bonded indebtedness tax rate will not go up," he stressed.

"The bonded indebtedness tax rate in fiscal 1966 was 59.2 cents; the bonded indebtedness tax rate in fiscal 1967 -- this year -- is 59.2 cents. If voters approve both items on this referendum -- buildings

4,300 Laid Off With Chrysler Supply Strike

Production At Newark
Halted As Stockpile
Of Parts Is Depleted

Some 4,300 production workers at the Chrysler assembly plant in Newark were idled at the end of the second shift last Tuesday night because of a lack of assembly material with the strike of 4,200 United Auto Workers union members at a stamping plant in Twinsburg, O.

The Newark plant which assembles Plymouths and Chryslers, receives door panels, fenders, hoods and rear decks from Twinsburg.

Chrysler's local stockpiles of these parts were exhausted by the end of Tuesday's second shift at midnight.

Chrysler's layoff -- affecting more than 38,000 workers by Thursday -- comes just five days after introduction of its 1967 models.

The nation's third largest automaker said virtually all its hourly wage labor force of 110,000 will be idled by the end of next week unless the Twinsburg strike is settled.

Plant shutdowns began Monday with the laying off of 8,100 workers at Chrysler's Hamtramck (Mich.) assembly plant at Detroit.

After the strike is settled, production workers at Newark will be called back when the parts stockpile "is replenished to a point sufficient for rescheduling normal production," company officials said.

Chrysler said three days in the normal interval between shipping of parts from Twinsburg and their arrival at Newark.

University Coed Killed Saturday As Cars Collide

Meadowood Resident
Elaine Yanchulis, 18
Dies In 2-Car Wreck

Elaine Yanchulis, 18, of 105 Spring Glen Drive, Meadowood, a freshman coed at the University of Delaware, was killed and seven other persons injured in a two-car accident on the South Market Street overpass at 8:30 p.m. last Saturday.

In the fatal accident which occurred just a few hundred feet south of the Wilmington line, state police said a southbound car operated by Margaret M. Cannon, 18, of 1501 Binder Lane, Willow Run, slid on the wet surface of the overpass, into the path of a northbound car driven by Marvin A. Wiesen, 36, of Dover. The cars collided.

Miss Yanchulis, a University of Delaware freshman, was taken to Delaware Division where she died 45 minutes later from a crushed chest. She had been a passenger in the Cannon car.

The two drivers and five passengers in Wiesen's car were also taken to Delaware Division where one was admitted. Miss Cannon is suffering from a fracture of the pelvis.

Solemn requiem mass was offered Wednesday morning at Holy Angels Catholic Church, Newark, for Miss Yanchulis. Interment was in All Saints Cemetery, and friends called Tuesday night at the William J. Warwick Funeral Home, Newark, where the Rosary was recited.

Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Yanchulis; a brother, William A. Jr., at home; and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Yanchulis, Shenandoah, Pa.

Most People Lack Minimum In Diet For Health, U.D. Speaker Cautions

Two-thirds of the people of the world are on a diet below the minimum needed for health, and millions of children are suffering from a lack of protein, according to Mrs. Dorothy Jacobson, assistant secretary for international affairs at the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Speaking at the recent 7th annual National Food Distribution Conference at the University of Delaware, Mrs. Jacobson said as many as half the children under six in underdeveloped nations of the free world, alone lack sufficient protein in their diet.

The deficiency has serious physical effects; it also causes severe mental retardation that cannot be changed by a better diet later. Many of the people now accused of being "naturally lazy and indolent" are in fact, products of infant malnutrition, according to Mrs. Jacobson.

"If the food situation is bad now, how much worse will it be in 1980 -- when there will be one billion more people than there are now?" Mrs. Jacobson asked.

The United States is sending food supplies to 66 food deficient countries. However, even if we put all available acres back into efficient agricultural production, within 20 years the world need for food

The seminar was under the direction of Robert W. Cook, director of the division of technical and business services at the University of Delaware, and Dr. Robert M. Stark of Delaware's civil engineering faculty.

Central PTA Meeting Planned Wednesday

Two-thirds of the people of the world are on a diet below the minimum needed for health, and millions of children are suffering from a lack of protein, according to Mrs. Dorothy Jacobson, assistant secretary for international affairs at the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Speaking at the recent 7th annual National Food Distribution Conference at the University of Delaware, Mrs. Jacobson said as many as half the children under six in underdeveloped nations of the free world, alone lack sufficient protein in their diet.

The deficiency has serious physical effects; it also causes severe mental retardation that cannot be changed by a better diet later. Many of the people now accused of being "naturally lazy and indolent" are in fact, products of infant malnutrition, according to Mrs. Jacobson.

"If the food situation is bad now, how much worse will it be in 1980 -- when there will be one billion more people than there are now?" Mrs. Jacobson asked.

The United States is sending food supplies to 66 food deficient countries. However, even if we put all available acres back into efficient agricultural production, within 20 years the world need for food will outstrip food production. Surplus food from all highly productive countries in the world will not be sufficient to feed the world if trends continue, Mrs. Jacobson said.

"These trends must be changed -- now," she told the conference audience. "The world cannot face the violence resulting from world starvation. Controlling population growth, alone, won't solve the problem immediately."

The answer lies in encouraging underdeveloped countries to help themselves, Mrs. Jacobson believes.

While the United States will continue to provide assistance, new legislation will provide for aid only to countries with self-help agreements.

"Help them improve the rice paddies instead of building steel mills," Mrs. Jacobson advised.

Effectively increasing agricultural production and providing efficient food distribution in these countries involves tremendous difficulties.

Even in the hungriest countries of the world, only 75 per cent of the food produced is ever eaten -- the remaining 25 per cent is wasted or spoiled.

The greatest contribution the food industry of the United States can make is passing on their sense of industry, ingenuity and salesmanship, Mrs. Jacobson believes.

Neide, a University of Delaware graduate engineer succeeded J. J. Salvoara as Newark's third city manager in 1957, and is receiving an annual salary of $11,000. A proposed ordinance deleting the salary range of the city manager in the current ordinance, was approved 6-0 at a first reading last Monday, with Councilman Henry R. Folsom, Jr., absent.

NEW SALARY
The resolution adopted unanimously for employment of Stiff as Newark's fourth city manager, includes a salary range of $14,000 to $17,000 annually, with a $500 per year increase for approved performance at the end of the first six months of Stiff's service at a starting rate of $15,000.

Mayor Norma Handloff said that it would require "two or three weeks" for the new city manager to make the move, but a tentative starting date of Monday, Oct. 17, was agreed upon. Councilman Arthur P. Mayer observed that Stiff "with seven kids, might need an extra week" to locate living quarters in Newark, but the two-week transition period was approved.

Assistant manager for Mt. Lebanon Township since June, 1964, Stiff was born Nov. 8, 1930; received a BS in business administration as an accounting major at Gannon College, Erie, Pa., in 1958; and is a candidate for his master's degree in governmental administration at the University of Pennsylvania Fels Institute of local and state government.

AIR FORCE VET.
He served in the U.S. Air Force in 1951-53; was office manager and field foreman in the division of public works, Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1948-51, and in 1953-60 after military service; and superintendent of public works in Ashtabula from 1960 until his appointment as assistant city manager at Mt. Lebanon.

Mr. and Mrs. Stiff are the parents of seven children. A proposed ordinance for more equitable reapportionment with revision of the six municipal voting districts was approved unanimously last Monday with the first of two required readings.

Charles M. Eissner, a member of the Newark Election Board, relayed a request from Harold M. Grant, board president, to change the boundary between the new 1st and 2nd districts from the C&O - B&O Railroad to Barksdale Road to provide for equity in apportionment with the development of Williamsburg Village and Garden Acres in the 1st district.

NO CHANGE!
Councilman David H. Doehle objected to any change from original recommendations made "by a large committee" of which Grant was a member "on the basis that Grant had a chance" to present his proposed change in committee.

Solicitor Clyde M. England, Jr., said that "if there is very much moving around at the second reading" of the proposed ordinance, he would recommend that it be re-advised, since reapportionment "concerns a basic right" of the people.

Councilman Fred Wakefield said that he was "not wholly sold" on the reapportionment proposal, and "may have some opposition at the second reading," while Councilman Olan R. Thomas said he "was disappointed that the original 1st district can't be maintained."

CAREERS DAY
Careers Day will be conducted this Saturday by the University of Delaware college of agricultural sciences, beginning at 9:30 a.m. in Agricultural Hall on the local campus.

BILL CONNER and DOUG BUCK

For Full-Time Government—Starting a new government is a 25-hour-a-day job, and Bill Conner will devote full-time to the task. He will give up his business activities, and he won't maintain a private law practice on the side.

For Experienced Men—Getting the new government off on the right foot calls for experience. Bill Conner knows your problems first-hand. In his professional life, he has dealt with local, state, and Federal problems. As a private citizen, he has been active in New Castle, Wilmington, and suburban neighborhood affairs; and has served five years on a school board.

Doug Buck has been active in Delaware public life on the state and local levels. As an architect, he is professionally involved in an area over which county government can have the greatest influence—housing and zoning.

For Your Equal Voice—Bill Conner and Doug Buck are free agents. Their nominations were not surrounded by the headline-making machinations of city and county political bosses. As a result, they aren't obligated to anyone. And their election will prevent one-party government where the people are just taken for granted.

BILL CONNER AND DOUG BUCK WILL MAKE YOUR NEW COUNTY GOVERNMENT WORK FOR YOU

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK - OCTOBER 9-15

THE WEEK -- AND AETNA'S YEAR 'ROUND EFFORT'

National Fire Prevention Week is a one-out-of-52 shot to make the public aware of the danger of uncontrolled fire -- and State Fire Marshal William R. Favinger reports that for the 8th successive year, fire loss in 1964 exceeded $1-billion.

But Newark's volunteer fire-fighters of the Aetna Hose, Hook, & Ladder Co., labor 52-weeks each year on 24-hour call duty, to protect lives and property in the Newark area -- and in outlying districts when emergency distress calls are received.

Next week, Aetnamen will volunteer additional time to present demonstrations of fire-fighting techniques and of fire-prevention measures, in effort to safeguard the lives and property of people in this community -- and will be ready, too, for any alarm.

We are grateful for Newark's Aetna Hose, Hook & Ladder Co. manned by dedicated volunteers.

THE CITY MANAGER WAS UNDERPAID

When J. Francis Neide steps out of office as Newark city manager on Oct. 17, the date scheduled for a change of guard, his successor will immediately step into a job that will pay him $3,900 more than the annual salary received by the veteran who has run the city well since succeeding J. J. Salovaara as Newark's second CM in 1959.

A native of nearby Kennett Square, Pa., and a University of Delaware graduate where he performed as "the best little halfback Delaware ever had," according to local sage and sportsman John L. "Bubs" Eubanks, Francis Neide has long resided in the city he has served well as the city's chief executive.

We have no fault to find with the $15,000 starting salary to be paid Edward R. Stiff, 35-year-old assistant manager at Mt. Lebanon Township, Pa., who has been appointed to succeed Neide -- it was a case of pay or forget him -- but it points up the injustice of underpaying tried and true performers.

Red Lion Plans 147th Church Year Services

Founded with a wooden building in 1819 the 147th anniversary of Red Lion Methodist Church will be observed this Sunday with special homecoming services at 11 a.m., and at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m., Pastor Irvin R. Pusey advises.

In 1853, the present brick structure was built, and in 1959 an educational unit and sanctuary were added.

During the past year, two acres of ground has been purchased; a 150-car parking lot constructed; the sanctuary air-conditioned; and a new organ installed. Ladies of the church will serve a fellowship luncheon between services, and in addition to special music by the Merritt Kirk Quartet, the three church choirs will sing. "Red Lion Methodist Church warmly invites everyone to share in the observance of this 147th anniversary," Pastor Pusey said.

BAKE SALE

Senior high youth of the Newark Methodist Church will have a bake sale this Saturday at 10 a.m. in front of the Newark Department Store.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Noise from some cars and trucks in Newark is excessive according to reports I am getting from irate citizens. Our present ordinance outlaws "excessive or unusual noise," but this is a matter of opinion. This type of law had been thrown out by other courts. We must do something to get an enforceable law.

To give the police department a more practical ordinance to enforce, I have proposed that the noise be measured by a Sound Survey Meter. Then a reading above the maximum permitted level would result in an arrest and fine.

Our tests on Newark streets show that more cars and trucks would pass the test. Only the worst offenders would exceed proposed levels.

This new ordinance needs the support of the people who feel that some of the noisiest vehicles are too noisy. Your readers should write to your paper, to me, to other councilmen, and to the mayor if they want to cut down on the noise from our streets.

They can find the advertisement of the final consideration of the ordinance in your paper, and should attend that council meeting to show that they want noise controlled.

Very truly yours,
David H. Doehrlert
Councilman 3d District

Yellowjacket Research At U. of D. Offers Aid Against Sting Menace

Being stung by a yellowjacket is a painful experience, but to a hypersensitive person, it can be fatal. Since a wooded area may have two nests per acre with up to 1,000 stinging yellowjackets, control is important to farmers, outdoorsmen and homeowners.

To adequately control yellowjackets, you have to know their life history and habitat, according to Dr. Paul Catts and Fred Preiss in the department of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware. Their project to provide necessary information is part of long range research on the urban impact on woodland ecology, with work carried out in the 35-acre university woodland.

Yellowjacket nests are hidden three inches to a foot underground, and the best way to find the nests is to watch flying yellowjackets; they fly horizontally while hunting food -- vertically into the nest.

These wasps seem to prefer higher ground covered with leaves or underbrush.

The size of a cantaloupe, nests are made of "paper" which the yellowjackets produce from well-chewed wood. The nest is suspended from the surrounding earth with the same material. A level landing platform and a tunnel lead from the ground surface to the nest itself.

Inside the nest are tiers of honeycomb-like cells containing yellowjacket larvae. The queen lays eggs and the workers, which are sexless females, care for the larvae and forage for food. The workers have an egg-laying organ which is modified to sting.

Workers and drones do not survive the winter, and if more than one queen overwinters from each nest, they each make a new nest in the spring. Just before winter there may be as many as 50 queens in a nest, according to Catts.

The population of the nest is at its highest in the late summer and early fall -- as many as 3,000 yellowjackets may be in a single nest.

As soon as the peak of the yellowjacket population is reached, skunks begin to show up at the university woodland, Catts says, and by October all the wasp nests are destroyed. Skunks are apparently tolerant of yellowjacket venom and regard the wasps as a delicious addition to their diet. They eat the entire population, digging up the nest to get at the larvae and pupae.

Unfortunately skunks aren't the entire answer to the yellowjacket problem since the skunks are potential carriers of rabies.

Catts hopes research at the university will lead to other biological control methods.

However, yellowjackets can be controlled with a DDT powder, such as a 65 per cent dust, liberally sprinkled around the nest opening and into the opening itself. Use the DDT at night, he cautions.

A bait can be used to control yellowjackets especially in picnic areas where the pests come from many nests which can't all be located. Combine equal parts of elder vinegar, sugar and DDT liquid or powder. Place in small paper cups out of children's reach. The bait is not attractive to honey bees so it won't hurt them, according to the entomologists.

As far as humans are concerned, yellowjackets are villains. However, they too, have their place in woodland ecology. They are part of the woodland sanitation department -- necessary scavengers that devour decaying organic matter. Usually, according to Catts, yellowjackets are only dangerous when the nest is disturbed. Even then they generally will not follow a victim more than 25 feet.

Nonetheless, people eating in the open have been stung in the mouth or throat by biting into a piece of food on which a yellowjacket has just landed.

Richard Foodim To Add Violin For UD Quartet

Richard Foodim, violinist, will join the University of Delaware Greenwich String quartet this season.

He succeeds Liane Marston, the only distaff member of the quartet which last year completed its first year of residence at the university. Other quartet members are Laurence Shapiro and Heim Shtrum, first and second violinists, and John Thurman, cellist.

Foodim comes to Delaware after a year as principal violinist with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. Philosophy major during his undergraduate days at Bard College, he holds his master of music degree from Indiana University.

In addition to six formal camps concerts by the ensemble, each instrumentalist will present a solo recital. The first program is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 20, at 8:15 p.m. in Mitchell Hall.

Salem Methodists Plan Homecoming

Salem Methodist Church will have its annual homecoming service this Sunday, observing the 159th anniversary of the church.

The Rev. Preston W. Spence, pastor in 1926-1929, will speak at the 11 a.m. worship service; Mrs. Frank Morrison will be the organist, and there will be special music by the Salem Choir, with Richard Ward to be guest soloist.

Luncheon will be served in the fellowship hall by ladies of the church.

The Rev. Arley B. Golden is pastor of the church.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN TO HEAR WORRILOW

The first meeting of the season for the University of Delaware Women's Club will be held next Wednesday, at 8 p.m. in the Rodney Room of the Student Center.

Mrs. Val Arnsdorf program chairman, will present Dr. George M. WorriLOW, university vice-president.

Referendum

and equipment -- the bonded indebtedness tax rate next year in the Newark special school district will still be 59.2 cents," Jones said.

The one major factor that has caused the Newark district to schedule this referendum is to keep up with the numbers of children coming into the Newark schools, Jones added. The Newark district is educating one out of every ten children in the public school system of Delaware, and the number is going up, Jones added.

The school district has doubled its enrollment every seven years since 1945. We are well over 11,000 this year, and by 1968, when the new elementary school will be needed, we'll be considerably beyond the 12,000 mark in student population.

"We must have a place for these children to attend school and necessary equipment to carry on their education," the president of the Newark Board of Education concluded.

18th Century Britain, Topic For Symposium

"Man Versus Society in 18th Century Britain" is the topic for a symposium scheduled for Oct. 14-16, sponsored by the Conference on British Studies in conjunction with the Winterthur program of the University of Delaware.

Politics, economics, and religion in the 18th Century as well as literary, musical and visual arts will be considered in a series of lectures on Saturday and Sunday mornings at the University of Delaware, and Saturday afternoon and evening at the Winterthur Museum.

Friday night at 8:30, the University String Quartet will present a concert of 18th-Century music in Wolf Hall Auditorium, followed by a reception for members and guests to meet the speakers and some 125 scholars from universities, museums and libraries throughout the United States and Canada, who are expected and the lectures by the visiting professors.

Farm Research

Aids Producers

Plus Consumers

Consumers as well as the agricultural industry benefit from research, according to Dr. William E. McDaniel, dean of the college of agricultural sciences of the University of Delaware.

Speaking to more than 1,000 people attending Farm and Home Field Day at the university's Georgetown Substation on Aug. 10, he emphasized that American consumers are the best fed in the world cultural efficiency.

McDaniel said farmers have teamed up with agricultural industries and land grant universities to produce more per acre, per animal, per man-hour and per dollar.

In 1930, more than 20 per cent of the work force of the United States was used on farms.

"Today, farming uses less than eight per cent of the workers, but turns out food and fiber to better feed and clothe 71-million more people," McDaniel said.

Each American farmer today provides enough food for himself and 33 others. According to McDaniel, this tremendous agricultural development has come about largely through research.

"In the 25 years since its purchase, the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation has produced many research findings that have helped make agriculture more profitable. At the same time, these findings have helped keep consumers better fed."

Thousands of experiments were conducted in those 25 years at the substation, McDaniel pointed out. He cited more than 80 different research projects currently underway, including variety tests on field and truck crops, weed and insect control, sub-irrigation and trials on growth regulators.

"Soybean research alone involves almost 3,000 individual test plots," McDaniel said.

SPAGHETTI SUPPER

A spaghetti dinner will be served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Christiana Fire Co. in the fire hall this Saturday, from 4 to 7 p.m. Takeout orders also are available.

Art Department Plans Lectures Free To Public

A series of special lectures by the art department faculty is scheduled this year at the University of Delaware.

Topics for the evening lectures, all open to the public without charge, have been chosen by faculty members from their artistic interests. Julio Acuna, department chairman, said the series is another attempt to give the public awareness and appreciation of various art forms.

Another separate series of lectures by artists from the surrounding area also is scheduled by the university. The first of these was held last week when Baltimore Artist Grace Hartigan discussed her work in a public lecture. Acuna said each lecture is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. in Sharp Laboratory Room 130. The schedule for faculty lectures:

Oct. 27 -- "Architecture of India -- Constructed Ornament," Mrs. Margaret P. Allen, assistant professor.

Dec. 1 -- "The Camera's Influence on Painting: Past and Present," Byron P. Shurtleff, assistant professor.

Jan. 5 -- "Ceramics in our Contemporary Society," James R. Gervan, assistant professor.

Feb. 23 -- "Towards the Development of a Personal Form of Expression in Painting," Acuna.

Age-Old Dehydration Of Food Used With Refinement For Current Table

A thousand years ago people kept foods from spoiling by drying them under the sun or over a fire. Using the same basic method -- dehydration -- modern food technology has come up with some new ways to preserve foods, according to home economists reporting at Farm and Home Field Day last month.

Frances Shoffner, Sussex county home economics extension agent, and Mrs. Mary Sudler, Kent and Sussex county home and youth agent, told their audience at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation that too much flavor was lost in older drying methods. New processes try to retain fresh food flavor and extend the length of time foods can be kept.

For instance, fruit in frozen concentrated juices is dried at a low temperature. Oil from rind is added to concentrated citrus juices to increase flavor. According to Mrs. Sudler, these concentrated juices have changed eating habits of the American family.

Miss Shoffner said freeze-drying is a new preservation method that also retains flavors. Foods are frozen and then dried very quickly. These foods stay the same size and shape as when fresh, except they are much lighter in weight.

She compared the foods to a natural sponge; when water is added to freeze-dried foods, they absorb it just as rapidly as a sponge.

Containing only two per cent moisture, these foods will not spoil for a long time. Even seafoods such as shrimp will keep without refrigeration for as long as two years if freeze-dried.

While the U.S. armed forces are largest consumers of freeze-dried products, the foods also are available to homemakers in cereals with fruit and as dried mushrooms. Complete meals are available, including packages containing a meal of scrambled eggs, sausages and fried potatoes, or a complete porkchop dinner.

These packaged meals may be too expensive for family use, but they are valuable for mountain-climbers or backpacking campers who must conserve on weight of food.

The saving in shipping weight and refrigeration is worth the added processing cost to the armed forces. "And, they taste better to the fighting men than K rations ever did," Miss Shoffner added.

Safety Council Advises Caution For School Bus

With the opening of the school season, the Delaware Safety Council suggests that parents teach their children the following rules about the use of school buses:

Leave home in plenty of time so that you don't have to rush to catch the bus, but don't leave so early that you'll have to wait more than five minutes.

Wait well of the roadway. Don't distract motorists.

Stay well back until the bus comes to a full stop. Use the handrail on boarding. Take a seat and remain seated until the bus comes to a full stop at your destination.

If there are no available seats, stand holding onto two seats, one with each hand.

Comply promptly with instructions from the driver and from your school bus patrol. Keep books and packages in your lap or under your seat, never in the aisle.

No loud talking or active play. Quiet conversation is all right except at railroad crossings, where the driver must listen for trains.

Don't do your homework or eat your breakfast on the bus.

Never stick your head or a hand or elbow out of a window. Leave the bus quickly and quietly without crowding or shoving, and don't linger at the loading zone.

CHS Thespians Plan Assembly For Wednesday

Thespians Troupe 2437 of Christiana High School will launch their 1966-67 season with an assembly program at 1:30 p.m. next Wednesday.

Thespians are chosen on the basis of a point system listed by National Thespian headquarters. Beginning in ninth grade, a student may record dramatic activities to be evaluated by the Thespian sponsor, and 10 points are required for membership. In addition, the applicant must be considered a credit to his school and community.

At present, there are already 13 Thespians in the Christiana Troupe, but triple that number is working enthusiastically to add to points already earned.

The purpose of Wednesday's program is to encourage more students to become Thespian members.

President William Fletcher, master of ceremonies, will introduce three skits directed by Thespians Mike Montgomery, Lorry Dalton, and Barbara Parkes.

Their casts will include Karen Edwards, Tom Simpers, Sharon Brinkman, Maureen Golder, Wayne Horne, Rhonda Leasure, and Joseph McGowan. The backstage crew will include Richard McGuire, Christine Casey, Cynthia Fraser, and Kathy Temple.

Parents and friends are invited to attend.
