University Asks $5.3 Million In Additional State Funds; Budgetary Process Analyzed

By CARI DeSANTIS

University officials presented their justifications for a $5.3 million requested increase in state appropriations to the State Budget Office in Dover last Monday.

In the first of several hearings on the subject of increased state appropriations to the university, chairman of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Samuel Lenher, read a general statement of the value of the university to the state, and President E.A. Trabant gave a slide presentation on the university's financial needs for 1977-78.

For the academic year 1976-77, the university originally requested a $5.2 million increase over their then $25 million budget. The requested increase was then pared down to $3.2 million and eventually unmet. The state allotted the university only an additional $926,698. The university's overall allocation was ultimately reduced by $258,672 through a one per cent state wide budget cut. As a result, a $145 tuition increase was enacted.

This October, Gov. Sherman W. Tribbit announced another one per cent across-the-board budget cut to affect the state's 1977 budgets. This amounts to a $431,902 decrease in the amount allotted to higher education in the state.

This one per cent cut, in addition to the state's financial troubles, the university's history of cut and unmet budget increase requests and governor-elect Pete du Pont's campaign statement that the university would not receive any more money from the state pose the threat of an additional tuition increase again next year.

This threat of another tuition hike has given rise to that annual questioning of the university's budget. Just what is the university budget and how does it work?

The university is a land-grant university, which means that it is not totally a public university, nor totally a private institution. For revenue, the university must rely on state appropriations and private gifts and endowments.

The five major sources of revenue for the university are: students and their families (tuition and fees, auxiliary enterprises); state government appropriations, contracts and grants; the university endowment and temporary investment incomes and other university sources; federal government appropriations, contracts and grants; and donors and benefactors.

According to Anthony F. Graziano, assistant provost for Budget Planning, the university's piece of the total began to "diminish" in about 1970-71, when less funds were available. At the same time, student tuition and fees began to increase as a portion of the total. The 1967

MCDONALD'S ON E. Main St. was the scene of an explosion attributed to a gas leak Wednesday morning. Contractors knocked remaining walls down that afternoon and a fence was erected. Owner Leonard Dukart says he plans to build a new McDonald's at the site.

McDonald's Explosion Injures 23 Gas Leak In Basement Causes Estimated $500,000 In Damages

By KATHERINE WALSH

A gas explosion demolished the McDonald's at 324 East Main St. Wednesday morning, injuring 12 employees and 11 customers and causing an estimated $500,000 in building and equipment damages, according to Newark police chief William Brierley.

Both the Newark police and the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company responded to the explosion after a CB radio operator contacted the police, he said. The kitchen blast was the result of a gas leak, according to Brierley.

"There was a gas build-up in the basement," Brierley said, but the police are not yet certain of exactly how it ignited. "A number of things could have caused it to ignite," he said, "it only needed one spark."

"I smelled gas, the floor rose up, I heard a boom and then everybody ran," said McDonald's employee, Wayne Malin, who was inside the building when the explosion occurred. Other employees present said they smelled gas also and described the explosion as similar to an earthquake, happening suddenly and without any noise. Gas Station attendants at the nearby Texaco station said their building shook when the blast occurred.

All of the injured were taken to the nearby Newark Emergency Room and most were treated for cuts and bruises. Two employees, however, sustained more serious injuries and were transferred to the Wilmington Medical Center, Delaware Division.

Twenty-year-old assistant manager Faron Johnson, of North East, Maryland was in the basement of the building at the time of the blast. According to the owner of the Newark McDonald's, Leonard Dukart, it took 35 minutes to free Johnson from the rubble. He was being treated for minor burns. The other employee, who sustained serious injuries was Joan Brown of Newark. Brown was admitted to Delaware Division for x-rays for possible broken ribs.

Dukart said he plans to assist his Newark employees by either transferring them to his Concord Pike McDonald's or furnishing them with wages until another building can be constructed. He predicted a 90-day period until the new building could be completed.

According to Brierley, the building is now a "pile of rubble," completely levelled Wednesday afternoon by a contractor. A fence has been erected temporarily around the debris. A more thorough investigation of the explosion is planned, said Brierley.

Old College Remodeling to Begin Next Month

By MARTIN GOLDBERG

Old College, built in 1834 and the oldest building on campus, is going to be renovated beginning this January, in order to meet state building codes, according to Leonard Cannatelli, planner coordinator of Facilities Planning.

The building does not meet the codes because the fire escapes are antiquated and proper exit stairways must be constructed, said Cannatelli.

The renovation will include remodeling the entire inside of the building, he said, adding that the dimensions of the structure will stay as they are now and the main staircases on the second floor will remain intact. The staircase is located in the foyer of the second floor. It leads to the third in a semi-circular design.

He said the exterior of Old College will be repaired where needed. Damaged windows will be repaired, the brickwork will be repointed where the corners have broken off, and most of the ivy will be removed for repainting.

The renovated building will house the departments of art history, museum studies, art conservation, and the Winterthur program, said Cannatelli. The Winterthur Program for the study of early American culture consists of graduate courses and laboratory work in the Winterthur Museum in Greenville.

A large art gallery will be built on the second and third floors, he said. It will be used for classes during the day and open for students to browse through during the evening. Two other, smaller galleries will also be built, said Cannatelli.

Special parking areas will be established and elevators will be built for the handicapped. Two brick stair towers will be installed on the rear of the building to serve as fire escapes, according to Cannatelli.

He said the opening of bids for contractors was advertised Monday, Nov. 22. He said all bids will be due on Dec. 7 and the project will be started in early January. He said the building should be completed in January, 1978.

Cannatelli said funding for the project is coming from private sources and the plans for the renovation have been in formulation since July 28, 1975.

Creative Crafts for Under the Christmas Tree

By CAROL F. COLEMAN

Potter, weaver, jewelry-maker, sculptor — each of these labels seems distinct: a separate art entry. But the potter weaves a multitude of colors into his clay; the weaver uses bits of clay and beads to create a desired textural effect and the jewelry-maker sculpts designs and figures to give his pieces form. It appears that all is one and one is all, and borrowing and lending are part of the process.

The interaction of these craftsmen can be seen by the display of the Winter Craft Show pieces in the cramped confines of Gallery 20. Warm and cold, bright and dull were placed together. Joy Schweizer's warm woven shawls were not more than three feet from Mitch Lyon's stone cold porcelain-stoneware pieces. Wearable items such as ponchos, shawls and woolen hats were extended above and around cups, saucers, wall hangings, quilts and pillows.

Last Saturday's opening exhibited a wide array of works by local artists. All of the items are for sale, with prices ranging from $9 to $90 in the macrame pieces alone. Many found it a perfect opportunity to do some pre-Christmas shopping by picking up a patchwork quilt or buying a soft sculpture for the kids.

Carol Ann Minerick sculpts with raw canvas by stuffing the material and transforming them into pillow-type objects. Minerick uses old and new in each piece she creates. Her most recent creations are done with socks found in an antique store. Most of her pieces are indistinguishable forms which allow the imagination to take control. Minerick feels there is a large amount of labor to this type of craft, saying that "sometimes these pieces are more work than a big painting."

Another indicator of the upcoming holidays were the Christmas tree creations by Cissy Johnson, a graduate student in sculpture. The ornaments, caricatures of angelic figures, are an off-white color and are made of a salt dough which can be baked in a regular oven.

Andrea Robinson's macrame neckpieces, exhibited on black silhouette figure forms, are not only handsomely displayed, but strikingly constructed. These pieces combine intricately woven natural cords, beads, perfectly marked pheasant feathers and shells such as sand dollars. Robinson prices her works according to the amount of labor involved. Most average $2 an hour with the smaller ones ranging slightly higher at $3 an hour.

Weavings are generally more expensive than clay pieces due to the higher cost of materials employed in weaving processes. For weavings, cost is estimated by labor as well as materials, and marked up with a percentage for the gallery. Mitch Lyons, Professor of Fine Arts at Moore College of Art, explains that clay is valued according to "how the craftsman feels about the work. After that comes factors such as how much space is in the kiln and then how salable the piece is."

There are three types of pottery represented at the show: raku, stoneware, and porcelain. Lyons combines porcelain and stoneware in his own work but explains the process is like mixing oil with water. It is extremely difficult to combine the two.

Most of the items exhibited were reasonably priced — an advantage which is not usually the case in galleries today. Sales seem to be going well, with buyers ranging from interested students to a representative from the Delaware Art Museum.

The Winter Craft Show will run from Nov. 20 until Dec. 23, Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The gallery is located at 20 Orchard Rd., for those who have a few extra dollars in their pockets and need a few extra packages under their tree.

Starvation Relief Fundraising Begins

University Community Asked For Donations to Aid the World's Hungry

The university Starvation Relief Fund has been established for the fifth consecutive year by The Review to help ease the plight of the world's hungry people. Contributions from the entire university community are welcome.

All donations will be deposited in a special account with the Delaware Trust Company and will be distributed equally between CARE, UNICEF and the Salvation Army.

Proceeds from the drive will be sent in the name of the university community.

The Relief Fund will begin today and run until Dec. 17. Contributions will be accepted at the Review office, B-1 Student Center, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday. Checks should be made payable to the Starvation Relief Fund.

Donations may be sent through the mail, addressing contributions to The Review, B-1 Student Center. Anyone wishing a receipt should include their name and a return address.

Names of contributors will appear in The Review on Dec. 17, the last issue before Winter Session.

The Review hopes to collect $300 this year and will publish the amount of money collected during the drive regularly, until the final issue.

THE PROGRESS OF THE Starvation Relief Fund drive will be illustrated on this man's cup. Donations will be accepted at the Review Office, B-1 Student Center, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Dec. 17.

ratio of student, government, and university shares of the total cost of education was 22:48:30. In 1975-76, the distribution shifted to the students in a 34:46:19 ratio.

For the past seven years, the university has raised tuition annually so that the current cost for an in-state student is more than double that in 1970-71.

According to Graziano, university officials are concerned that the state financial subsidies are no longer adequate and that tuition levels have increased to a level no longer affordable by many Delawareans. To Graziano, the problem is not indiscriminate spending by the university. Compared to similar universities, "We spend what we should spend and about the way we should spend it," he said.

University expenditures depend on two major factors—inflation and the size of enrollment, he added. The whole basis of the operating expenses of the university's budget are the unit costs, according to Graziano. A unit cost is the expense involved in running one course or department.

"This is a purely simple-minded cost accounting approach," said Graziano, adding that courses are not considered qualitatively.

Unit cost figures are more important than opening the university's books, said Graziano, because they are used as indicators to find "problem areas."

He said that the university's unit costs are comparable to those of similar universities.

The largest amount of allocated money in the primary programs area is for instruction. In the areas of instruction and general expenditures, Graziano said the university is comparable to similar schools, yet he said "We're spending a little less than we used to (on instruction)."

The next largest chunk is allocated to student aid. Of the $5.3 million requested increase in state appropriations, approximately $150,000 is earmarked for additional student aid. Although the state has appropriated significant increases in student aid since 1972, a drop in private gifts and grants for student aid has offset the increases, said Graziano.

Major increases in expenditures and occurring in such areas as laboratory facilities, utilities, and personnel benefits.

"Some of our labs are even less equipped than some high schools," said Graziano, "equipment is becoming more and more expensive." He cited a three per cent increase in utilities, which the university hoped to make up by reducing through attrition the number of people in Plant Operations.

He also explained that the large increase in personnel benefit spending occurred in 1974 when the state increased the benefits for the state retirement plan—money that comes out of the university's pocket. Graziano said the university has had to increase employee benefits to keep in competition with other employers, so "other areas have to be cut down."

He added, "Those things that are getting the bigger piece of the pie are things the university cannot control."

Before Sound Guard, the only way to prevent your records from wearing out was not to play them.

Magnified, you can see record vinyl wearing away.

With same magnification, record vinyl shows no wear.

If you've played any record often enough, you've heard the inevitable occur. It wore out.

While "pops," "hisses," and other surface noises began making their appearance on your favorite records, high frequency sounds—like violins and flutes—began disappearing.

The villain behind this destruction is friction. (If a diamond cuts through steel, you can imagine what a diamond stylus does to vinyl records.) Fortunately, from outer space has come a solution to record degradation. It's called Sound Guard.*

A by-product of research into dry lubricants for aerospace applications, Sound Guard record preservative puts a microscopically-thin (less than 0.000003") dry film on records to protect the grooves from damage. Yet, remarkably, it does not degrade fidelity.

Independent tests show that Sound Guard preservative maintains full amplitude at all audible frequencies, while at the same time significantly retarding increases in surface noise and harmonic distortion.

In other words, when applied according to instructions, a new record treated with Sound Guard preservative and played 100 times sounds the same as one in "mint" condition played the first time!

Sound Guard preservative comes in a kit (complete with non-aerosol pump sprayer and velvet buffing pad). It is completely safe and effective for all discs, from precious old 78's to the newest LP's including CD-4's.

Recently introduced to audiophiles, Sound Guard preservative is now available in audio and record outlets.

Parliament Receives Assembly Proposal

The Labor government in Great Britain has introduced a bill in Parliament which would give Scotland and Wales their own legislative assemblies. These proposed assemblies would have the power to appropriate money and make laws, but not the power of taxation.

The bill was drawn up to appease Scottish and Welsh nationalists who desire greater degree of independence. Parliament would finance the assemblies with annual grants.

Bombs Disrupt Mexican Inauguration

Tuesday's inauguration of Mexico's President-elect Jose Lopez Portillo was marred by the explosion of six bombs in Mexico City. One of the bombs went off near the Camino Real Hotel, where many of the 102 foreign dignitaries attending the inauguration were staying.

Rosalynn Carter, wife of President-elect Jimmy Carter, attended the inauguration as did Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and his wife Nancy, but Carter arrived after the blasts had occurred.

Appointees Aim for Smooth Transition

Jimmy Carter has released a list of 131 people who will participate in the transition from the Ford to the Carter administration.

Forty appointees are "transition liaison officers", who will work under Jack H. Watson Jr., the transition coordinator, and with agency heads in the Ford administration.

Some political observers say that Carter's selection of liberal, activist aides and new recruits is representative of the poor- and consumer-oriented administration coming into office.

Appointed to lead the transfer of authority at the Treasury, Labor, and Commerce Departments is Jerry Jasinowski, an advisor to Hubert Humphrey and an economist. June J. Christmas, a black physician on leave from her post as Commissioner of the New York City Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services, will direct the transition of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the largest federal agency.

Approximately one-quarter of those appointed were women. The average age of the appointees is 34.

Gilmore Wins Death Wish

Gary Mark Gilmore won a victory Tuesday, as the Utah Board of Pardons voted in a 2-1 decision to uphold his sentence of death by firing squad.

Gilmore has been fighting the attempts made by objectors to the death penalty, saying "I accepted the sentence that was given me. I believe the sentence was proper."

He was sentenced to die on Oct. 7 for the murder of a motel clerk during a robbery attempt, and he was scheduled for execution on Nov. 15.

A new date of execution will soon be decided upon by five anonymous volunteers.

Greater Flu Shot Turnout Desired

The free swine flu shot program in Delaware that began in October and is scheduled to end later this month has vaccinated about 15 per cent of the state's eligible population.

Hugh L. Blumen, the state immunization coordinator said that the university has already vaccinated about 4,000 people, and if the pace keeps up, state officials hope the flu season will arrive with about 50 per cent of the over 18 population inoculated.

Blumen added that public health clinics have already vaccinated some 53,000 people.

Reaching Out

Christmas is approaching, and with it a much needed respite from the various rigors of the academic life. For ten short days, we will be able to forget about finals and term papers, A's and F's, and eating in dining halls.

As we buy gifts for our friends and relatives, we should remember that millions of people will not give gifts this year.

Of course, you've heard it all before—people all over the world are starving. But this time don't just listen to it, understand it. Realize that there are many more people living in poverty than attending universities. They must cope with finding their next meal not just passing an English course.

Our spirit of giving should extend beyond the people we know. Those people do not need proof that we care. Other inhabitants of our global village, however, need our charity merely to survive. To paraphrase an oft-used postulation, if every member of the university community contributed one dollar to the Review's Starvation Relief Fund, the money could help hundreds of needy people fight starvation and malnutrition.

Big deal, the cynics snicker. What good will one dollar, or $20,000 for that matter, do against such a massive problem? It is true, any sum of money we collect will benefit relatively few people so afflicted, but it is the quality, rather than the quantity of our charity that counts. It is obviously beyond any one person's means to finance the nourishment of the world's famine-stricken multitude. But that doesn't mean we should help no one instead.

We must do what is feasible: contribute to charity in relation to ability to do so. When we do our Christmas shopping, we should spend that one extra dollar to do something meaningful for our troubled world. Someone, somewhere will be grateful for it. Only fate prevented it from being us.

Teachers Know Best

To the Editor:

I should like to comment on the letter from Mr. Edgar Isaacs in the Review for Tuesday, Nov. 23 which you headlined "Classrooms without Communication." Mr. Isaacs is critical of the lecture system of instruction and of the lack of relationship between instructor and student in such a situation.

All of us who teach here are aware of the deficiencies of the lecture method. It tends to be impersonal and one-sided. But given the conditions under which we have to teach, it is about the only alternative we have. These conditions include large classes in large lecture halls. It is difficult to have a personal relationship with 300 students in a class. When we do try to establish better communication with members of such a large class by asking for and answering questions, we soon find that almost no one but the asker of the question is listening to the response to it.

A flaw in Mr. Isaacs' legitimate complaint is his statement that the lecturer does not consult the students about what they want to hear, and that he or she alone decides what is the proper business of a course. Teachers feel that students have come to the university to learn, and to accomplish that, they attend classes. How can they dictate what is taught? If they know enough about a subject to say what should be taught, then they should not be taking that course at all! We must work on the assumption that we, the teachers, have a greater knowledge of the subject being taught than those who are listening to us.

It is a fact of life here at the University of Delaware that many classes will contain many kinds of students and lots of them. The teacher of such a class is faced with the problem of getting across a certain amount of knowledge to this very diverse group, diverse in ability, in interest and in attentiveness. Sometimes we fail. But the failure is not one-sided. We have spent much time preparing lectures, and trying to think of ways to excite students about a subject about which we are ourselves excited. The large class is a challenge, but it can also be a disappointment when our efforts are met with indifference and inattention. When we are met half-way by students who listen and care we are overjoyed.

Readers Respond Open Letter

On October 20, 1976, the University of Delaware Coordinating Council (UDCC) failed to stop the 1976 Homecoming Queen Activities, even though we were aware that the contest probably violated Title IX of the Education Act of 1972. In carrying out this activity, the UDCC realizes that it contradicted Federal law and university policy. However, this awareness of violation of university policy and Title IX was not recognized by the UDCC as a body until after the Homecoming Queen Contest was consummated. The UDCC recognized its error in a formal motion at its November 17th meeting. The motion, passed 13-0-3, read: "In retrospect, the UDCC recognizes the fact that it was in violation of Title IX when it supported the Homecoming Queen Election. In addition, the UDCC authorizes President Marty Knepper to draft a letter addressed to the university community explaining our actions."

The UDCC realizes that it committed an error and would like to apologize to the University community for allowing a discriminatory Homecoming Queen Contest to be run by one of the student government bodies at the University of Delaware, in this case the IFC (Inter-Fraternity Council). In an attempt to make certain that future Homecoming Queen Contests are run in a non-discriminatory manner, the UDCC has established a committee to formulate guidelines for future Homecoming contests. To gain further input about Homecoming, the UDCC is also placing a referendum question on the ballot in the upcoming UDCC special election. The question reads as follows:

The selection of a Homecoming Queen has recently been a controversial issue on campus. There was much discussion on a number of issues concerning this event. Because this is a campus-wide activity, your answers to the following questions will aid your student government in formulating a policy regulating the Homecoming Queen event.

1. Should the Homecoming events include: a. the selection of a Queen (female only)? b. the selection of a King (male only)? c. the selection of a King and Queen? d. the selection of a single student Homecoming representative (i.e., host, hostess, monarch, etc.)? e. none of the above

2. Do you favor student government financial backing of this Homecoming Contest? ———yes
————no

We would appreciate your help in answering these questions so that we, the UDCC, can serve your needs and interests as your student government.

E. Martin Knepper
UDCC President

Rebuke of Apathy

To the Editor:

The letter submitted by the Student Apathy Party, I feel demands a reply from one who can accurately assess the development of the UDCC in the past year. The implicit accusation involved in the letter that the present members of the UDCC have been unable to represent and work for student concerns is grossly insulting and insensitive to those elected last spring who have literally begun to turn the UDCC around and transform its purpose and goals to make it a more viable organization.

But first to respond to several points raised by Mr. McElroy. His contention that the Student Apathy Party inherently represents 90 per cent of the student body is again, insulting to the entire student community. Did the SAP consider the possibility that many students would have liked to vote, however they did not feel qualified to vote for candidates they knew little about. Arriving at school in September and voting on candidates that same month is hardly giving students a fair chance to make a comfortable choice between possibilities. In other cases candidates ran unopposed, in the sense that there were only four candidates running for four positions.

Secondly, what reasons are you giving for not taking the UDCC seriously? You wish to become a part of that group by magically manipulating your, "apathetic majority," into votes, but you give no inherent evidence that the SAP can offer students anything but a catchy campaign slogan. I have campaigned all over campus for the past four weeks reassuring organizations that the UDCC can offer them something if those in positions of leadership actively involve and support them, in a sense give them the chance I think they want to buy into the organization.

As a final note, don't concentrate on the UDCC's problems in the past, don't be attracted to a campaign that emphasizes negativism, and glorifies a condescending attitude towards students. I believe students do care but need and want to be better informed. We in student government are trying hard to get our trip together and we will actively ask for and accept your opinions and enthusiasm along the way.

Karstens' Believe It Or Not

Two Sypherd Residents Relate Amazing Coincidence

By JENNIFER SCHENKER

"Hi, my name is Karsten," says the guy with the accent, "Hi, my name is Karsten," repeats the guy to his right, also in an accent. Most peoples first reaction is, "Okay, where is the profile

punchline?" But there isn't one. By a simple twist of fate both share the same name, both were born in the same foreign city, both live on the second floor of Sypherd, both engineering majors, and both are freshmen.

During the first week of school, two young men from Germany felt the need to use the facilities at about 1 a.m. Karsten Petersen turned up his stereo so as not to miss a note while on his journey, opened his door and quietly walked down the hall.

A split second later, another door further down the hall opened. Karsten Somann wandered through the halls asking anyone he could find if they had seen his lost shoe, jacket or belt. Shrugging his thin shoulders, he stumbled down the hall towards the bathroom.

It was there in the lavatory that the two first met, introduced themselves, and one by one discovered their similarities and differences.

Petersen, is a member of a family who loves to travel. Born in Hamburg, Germany, Petersen has also lived in Nigeria and Iran. Karsten Somann was also born in Hamburg, just 10 miles from where Petersen lived in Germany.

In 1974, Petersen's family moved to the Hockessin area of Delaware. He attended McKean High School for his junior and senior years.

Somann lived in Germany until 1966, when he entered a boarding school in Epsom, England, where he obtained all of his previous education.

"Life in Sypherd is not much different than life in the boarding school in Germany...everybody parties as much over there

Concerned Irish Visit Delaware In Support Plea

By JENNIFER SCHENKER

Lady Patricia Fisher, a former member of Parliament and founder of the Women Caring Trust, and Joan Robbins, a co-chairwoman of the trust, appeared before about 50 university students in Smith Hall on Tuesday to raise "interest, compassion and cash" for their homeland, Northern Ireland.

Fisher formed the group, a non-political and non-sectarian fund-raising organization in 1972 to counteract the continuing violence in Northern Ireland. This violence has caused the deaths of thousands of people in the past decade and has produced a turbulent lifestyle that the organization believes may permanently harm the psychological and emotional stability of Northern Ireland's youth.

"In urban areas such as Belfast, Derry, Newry, and Dungannon, mothers are afraid to let their young children go outside the "peace" boundaries of their religiously segregated ghettos for fear that they might be caught in a crossfire. It's difficult for Americans to imagine what it's like for them," said Robbins.

In these areas, the trust provided funds for seven used double-decker buses to be recycled and equipped with sand boxes, art

UDCC Elections

Nominations for the at-large position of the University of Delaware Coordinating Council (UDCC) will be accepted today at 308 Student Center. The election for Secretary and the at-large member will take place on Mon., Dec. 6. Students may vote at the Student Center and Rodney and Pencader dining halls.

Trying to Get the Feeling

"Outbursts," a children's theatre program, will be presented at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow in Bacchus in the Student Center.

Selections of poetry and songs, depicting joy, meanness, caring, love and letting off steam, will be featured.

The program is open to children six years old and older, and admission is 25 cents.

Studying the Great Outdoors

A three-credit course on outdoor education will be offered at the university during Winter Session.

Designed for teachers, recreation supervisors, youth leaders, and outdoor enthusiasts, the course will offer background knowledge and experience on organizing and conducting outdoor educational programs, through lectures, demonstrations, field investigation, and individual and group projects.

For information on how to register, contact the university's Division of Continuing Education, at 738-2741.

Graduate Scholarships Available

Graduate scholarships of $5,000 each are being offered to students of Scottish descent to study in any of the universities in Scotland. The program is being sponsored by Saint Andrew's Society of the State of New York, and more information can be obtained at the International Center. Deadline for applications is Feb. 1, 1977.

Research Award Given to Professor

A Research Career Development Award from the National Institutes of Health has been given to Dr. Roger Wagner, assistant professor of life and health sciences at the university.

The awards are given to those scientists with outstanding research potential who require additional training in productive scientific environments in preparation for careers of independent research in health-related sciences.

UDCC Candidates for Secretary

Contenders Air Viewpoints

By LORRAINE BOWERS

"The UDCC's (University of Delaware Coordinating Council's) lack of student support creates much of its inefficiency, which in turn breeds apathy," said Bill Garrett adding, "There are student concerns that would benefit from a strong student lobby."

Garrett, who is running on the Student Apathy Party ticket, said "Hopefully, my somewhat unusual campaign in its direct appeal to the apathetic student will foster increased interest in the election and hence the UDCC."

The UDCC "has a lot of potential as long as people are willing to work together," said junior Dave Gregg, an engineering major.

Gregg, cited his "perfect attendance" for UDCC meetings and said he has held positions on three UDCC committees and has been a member of the Faculty Senate.

Through this involvement, Gregg said he feels that he has demonstrated an interest in student affairs. The office of secretary requires a person "with a knowledge of the present state of affairs," he said.

Dave Hango, a sophomore political science major said he feels that a stronger student government can be created by working through increased student involvement. "One person cannot cause change," he said.

"I feel that apathy and lack of confidence are the two major problems facing us today," said Hango adding, "these problems will not vanish overnight."

He emphasized that with equipment, jungle gyms and sliding boards. "These playbuses serve as nursery schools on wheels providing constructive activities and a lot of fun for the children," said Robbins.

Whenever possible and especially in the rural areas, the trust institutes integrated activities such as picnics and trips. Fisher said, "I think it's important for the children to be integrated, and I wish they would do this in the schools. As one little boy told me, 'I couldn't shoot someone I went to school with.'"

The trust supports and works closely with Voluntary Service Belfast (VSB). The VSB directs the work of college-age people who volunteer to work in Northern Ireland for a small salary. Robbins said that young people are needed to direct the activities on the playbuses, work as counselors in integrated camps, and other activities involving Ireland's children.

The two women urged the students who attended to work with the children in Ulster and said that interested parties could volunteer through Pacem en Terres, 1106 Adams St., Wilmington, DE, 19801.

the support of the student body, UDCC can make a "fresh start."

The student government can "rejuvenate" itself by drawing feedback from organizations below the "UDCC hierarchy," according to Mark Mankin, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The officers must spend more time listening to groups like the Resident Student Association (RSA), Black Student Union (BSU), and hall governments to build "a sense of community at all levels," said Mankin.

"As long as we don't face complete exclusion from the decision-making processes, there is reason for hope."

"The relationships within the university" indicate that there is no "concept of community," said sophomore Debbie Morris who added that there exists a possibility for "effective interaction and communication."

Students are involved in decision-making committees like the Faculty Senate and this represents a potential for student input, she said.

"I accept responsibility for myself and my situation, and act upon the premise that I can do something about the way things are," explained Morris.

Bob Pete a junior in civil engineering, said he would like to get involved in the UDCC and "bring pressure" on the administration "to treat the student body as something more than an endless source of money."

Pete plans to work on the evaluation of "professors as teachers." He said, a new attitude on evaluations is important because many students feel that "a majority of professors do an inadequate teaching job" and that student evaluations are often "regarded lightly, if at all."

If elected to the office of secretary, Connie Younger a senior sociology major, said she plans to complete programs already in progress. For the UDCC to be an effective organization, she said, "goals must be accomplished, not simply stated and multiplied."

"I prefer to devote my time to working... to achieve the goals now being pursued," said Younger. She emphasized the need for communication between the "average student" and the council because "this is where the council's future strength and effectiveness will come from."

... 1977 Appears Promising

Rounding out the backfield is Craig Carroll. Carroll has gained 1065 yards as a junior, and is undoubtedly the most underrated and underpublicized Blue Hen. Carroll, an exciting runner, could improve his utility by cutting down on his fumbles. Nevertheless he led all Delaware rushers with 743 yards, and will have a good shot at achieving his personal goal of 1,000 yards in a season next year.

One man on offense who may be irreplaceable is senior end Larry Wagner. Wagner, whom the Dallas Cowboys have shown an interest in, caught 33 passes for 484 yards, won the William & Mary game with a diving touchdown catch, and had key catches in the Temple upset.

Brian Adam will return at tight end. Adam, a junior, missed the middle portion of the season with a broken wrist. Nevertheless, he was the second leading pass receiver.

The defensive line will be the least of Tubby Raymond's worries for the next two years. Of the starting unit and the backups, there are only two juniors, Bob Huff and Tom Weber. The rest are sophomores, and even if they don't improve next year, the defensive line will still be devastating.

The foursome of Mike Mill, Bob Huff, Herb Beck, and George Hays should continue to be a quarterback's terror.

Behind the front four, Delaware will have the tough job of filling Bello's position. At the moment, sophomore Carl Radich seems to be a leading candidate.

The left-linebacker position has been vacated by senior Frank Marolla. Junior Paul Schweizer will probably trade in his role as the special-teams leader for a starting role on defense. Right-linebacker Pat Cannon, a junior, will most likely retain his position.

The two safety positions will be filled with returning lettermen. Junior Herb Orensky will repeat at strong safety, while free safety Mike Randolph, also a junior, will return.

Pietuska, who led the defense with seven interceptions, and Bob Slowik will both graduate, leaving the two cornerback positions open. Rich Cowen, a sophomore who saw considerable action in the latter half of the season, should take one of these slots. Sophomores Wayne Karch and Bob Brown will battle it out for the remaining position. Statistically, Karch and Brown are dead even, as both made interceptions against pathetic Davidson earlier this year, and both made 13-yard returns.

And last, but not least, Delaware will have to find another kicking foot the likes of Hank Kline's. Kline set two Delaware records this season. He connected on a 48-yard field goal in the 24-24 Villanova tie. Kline also shattered his old extra-point record, by booting 33 straight this season.

But don't be disheartened by all of the graduations. Remember three months ago? Remember how the "experts" predicted that, with all of the positions vacated by last year's seniors, Delaware would be lucky to finish .500? One can be sure that these same "experts" will have more doomsday predictions about Delaware's chances in 1977. But you'll know better...

Hen Swimmers Win In Washout

By SUSIE VAUGHAN

The Delaware swim team drowned Elizabethtown Wednesday, 90-13, sweeping all but one event in what was almost a freshman time trial.

Freshman Dave Emich made his debut with a win in the 100-yard freestyle in 51.0 and a second in the 200-yard freestyle behind Bruce Vickroy.

Freshmen Bret Hatt and Don Pfarr swept the 200-yard backstroke in 2:15.3 and 2:21 respectively. Frank Walton went out fast to win the 200-yard breaststroke.

In new freshman style, Dennis Brestovansky dove to a first place in the one-meter optional event and second in the required behind Bill Dally. "I was so nervous," he said — reflecting old freshman style, "I wasn't hitting the end of the board on my approach. So, I had to adjust everything else."

Len Weber's 55.0 split in the medley relay is close to his last year's ECC championship time. Other strong returning lettermen performances include captain Paul Bernardino's 5:10.0 win in the 500-yard freestyle and Reid Stoner sub-minute 100-yard backstroke. Junior Mike Dressel took the 50-yard freestyle in 22.7 and Brian Murray won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:10.0.

Tomorrow the swimmers will travel to Franklin & Marshall who Bernardino describes as "just as bad as these guys (Elizabethtown)." But they will peak for the season's biggest meet next Saturday against American U. who topped Delaware by eight points last year. "We haven't seen their times, but, going on what we have, if we swim our best we could beat them," Bernardino claims.

Booters Fall Short Of No. 1

By JOHN ALLEN

"Any time we can win ten games in a single season I'll take it and run," said Delaware soccer coach Loren Kline. "It was great to pick up some post season play in the ECAC'S, and I have to be enthusiastic about next year."

The difference between a super season and a good season for the booters this year, however, was two penalty kicks. Two Sundays ago the Hens lost 2-1 to LaSalle on a penalty kick in the finals of the ECAC southern regional championship.

Two weeks before that game Bucknell dropped the Hens 1-0 on a penalty kick. The loss to Bucknell not only robbed the Hens of an ECC Western Division championship but swept away the Hen's number four ranking in the East and a berth in the NCAA's playoffs.

The booters ended up with a 10-3-2 record and took a second place in the ECAC Southern Regional championship. Three of the Hens, co-captains Dino Mangione and Dave Ferrell along with George Caruso, received All-ECC Western Section honors. Ferrell was also the East Coast Conference M.V.P.

One of the reasons Kline will be looking forward to next season is sophomore John McCloskey, who led the team in scoring the past two years. In fact, only four of the Hens will be lost to graduation this spring. They are co-captain Dino Mangione, Chris Donahue, Dave Hartzell, and Dave Sokola.

Other returning players responsible for Kline's optimism are Ferrell, Caruso, Bob McCloskey, Bob Wright, goalie Rich Cropper, and goalie Tom Calvert—the entire starting defense.

"We had a successful season, and it should be as good or better next year," commented Ferrell. "Our biggest problem will be finding two halfbacks to replace Dino (Mangione) and Dave (Hartzell)."

The problem might not be finding two halfbacks, but deciding which of the available players to use. Freshmen Dan Kandra and Steve Sawyer have seen a great deal of action at the halfback position and have, in Kline's words, "Been looking good".

Sophomore John Berry (originally a wing) was moved to the halfback spot this year and has shown steady improvement at that position. Junior Jeff Bushman had also shown promise at halfback until getting injured. If the team has as much depth as expected next year the Hens may be able to afford the luxury of moving Ferrell up to halfback from defense to take advantage of his powerful shots.

The front line will lose Chris Donahue but should be strong again with the return of Lindsey Walter and McCloskey at the other two spots. Among those who will be looking for a job up front are J.D. Kelly, Bob Crowley, and Jimmy Hartzell.

Add the remaining bulk of an undefeated J.V. team, and give everyone another year's experience in spring and summer leagues, and the booters could be better than ever next fall.

After freshman Sandy Lins won the 50-yard breaststroke by a margin of nine hundredths of a second, and Lynn Hoffman's 50-yard butterfly victory, the Hens trailed by one point.

But co-captain Alicia Grodsky's 100-yard butterfly win and Lins, winning effort in the 100-yard freestyle with a personal best time of 56.19, pulled Delaware ahead by two points.

They pushed the lead to ten points with a 500-yard freestyle sweep by Phyllis Beck in 5:35.8 and freshman Barbara Robinson. With Karin Murgatroyd's three-meter diving win, the Hens went into the last event, the 200-yard freestyle relay, with a six-point edge.

Anchor Lins left the block behind her Shippensburg opponent, and sprinted to even the race, but was touched out. The team of Hoffman, Pembroke, and Valerie Wells, and Lins were clocked in 1:45.55, while the winning time was 1:45.71.

Last year the Hens dropped to Shippensburg 86-45. Tomorrow Delaware will take on Franklin & Marshall away.

Diplomats Dunk Delaware

Franklin & Marshall Bury Hens In Opener, 80-52

By TED YACUCCI

LANCASTER, PA. — Delaware's Ron Rainey got a rough initiation in his first game as head basketball coach Tuesday night as the Hens were demolished 80-52 by Franklin and Marshall in their season opener.

Things started bad and got progressively worse for the Hens as their 28 per cent shooting average in the first half would indicate. They shot a slightly better 46 per cent in the second half, while recording 26 turnovers for the game.

High hopes for a strong opening performance were shattered quickly by the Diplomats as they scored the game's first two baskets before forward Bob Cook tallied for Delaware following an offensive rebound. F&M then used their wide-open offense to capitalize on a disorganized Hen defense and spurred to a 19-7 lead.

"We were much too anxious offensively," commented Rainey. "After they got the early lead we started forcing shots and taking shots we shouldn't have taken. Instead of bringing the ball down and setting up our offense, we tried to score too fast and played right into their hands."

Rainey substituted freely for the starting five of forwards Cook, Brian Downie and Gerry Gallagher and guards Steve Fischer and Emanuel Hardy. It wasn't the Hens' night however, as no combination seemed potent and the Diplomats went into the locker room leading 43-19 at halftime.

"I just don't understand it," said dejected forward Dennis Purcell. "We worked so hard the last six weeks looking forward to this opening game. Everyone's attitude has been excellent and then this happens. I guess we'll see just how much character we have on this team by how we come back in our next couple games."

Second half action began better for Delaware as Purcell, Cook, and guard Mark Mancini kept the Hens even with F&M. Purcell connected on four baseline jump shots, and some defensive changes kept the Diplomats from scoring at will.

As the half progressed, however, F&M went into their four corner offense again, enabling point guard Don Marsh to continually drive past Hen defenders and feed forwards Kevin Hopson or John Boyer for easy layups. Hopson finished the game with 25 points, and Boyer netted 15.

The Diplomat lead reached as high as 30 points in the second half at 65-35, as even a full-court press employed by the Hens for several minutes could not disrupt their opponent's momentum.

The only good aspect of the game, according to Rainey, was the opportunity to see a lot of players. He added that "sometimes a loss like this can help the team, experience-wise."

"We are definitely going to work more on not being pressured into not playing our game. A loss like this makes us realize that we have to go out to practice tomorrow and work harder than ever," Rainey said. "We just have to forget this game and start moving toward our goals, which includes the ECC's Jan. 26."

The Hens will try to take a giant step forward as they travel to Washington D.C. tomorrow night to face the George Washington team.

SOARING SKY-HIGH for a rebound are Brian Downie and Bob Cook. The Hens dropped their season opener to Franklin & Marshall 80-52.

Swimmers Lose By Split Second

How much does it take to lose? The Delaware women's swim team would answer 16 hundredths of a second, for that was the margin of the deciding relay in Wednesday's 66-65 loss to Shippensburg.

The meet was tight all the way with Delaware winning all but three firsts and Shippensburg cleaning up the seconds and thirds.

Bleacher Bum

Wait 'Til Next Year

By Alan Kravitz

The dream is over.

This year's feisty Blue Hen squad, which strove all season for national recognition, will be known to many as just an also-ran. And all because an unscrupulous Northern Michigan team thumbed their noses at the rule book and beat the Hens on what will probably be the most controversial play in Delaware football history.

Coach Tubby Raymond wasn't ashamed of his team. "I thought our kids played well all year. It's sad they have to leave feeling that they failed."

Captain Gary Bello, the senior middle-linebacker who led one of the stingiest defenses in Delaware football history, seemed pleased with the '76 campaign, despite the bitter ending. "I don't have any regrets about this season. It was a great season, something I'll always remember. After the game, there were a lot of guys who were crying. The reason was not because we lost, but because the season was over and out team unity had ended. This year was just a total team effort."

Many of the returning players were not satisfied. Sophomore cornerback Rich Cowen said, "What a lousy way to end the season. I wish we could start next season right now. I can't wait to play again."

And Cowen isn't the only one who can't wait to get started. Raymond and his assistant coaches are now combing the region for talented high school athletes.

Next year's schedule is similar to the 1976 slate. Eastern Kentucky will host the Hens in the opener. West Chester, Morgan State, Temple, and The Citadel, then visit Delaware Stadium in succession. After the Hens travel to Villanova, they host Middle Tennessee and Connecticut, which is followed by a trip to Davidson for an extra-point kicking practice session. Two weeks later they finish up the season with Colgate.

As is the case with every football team, 1977 will be a "rebuilding year" for several facets of the Delaware team.

The offense faces a revamping of the line, with the graduation of Joe Susan, Bob Toresco, Bill Heckler, and Dave Fritz. Sophomore guard John Morrison will be the only returning starter.

Jeff Komlo will return at quarterback, although Jim Castellino can be expected to battle for the job. After the Northern Michigan game, Raymond saw Komlo's development at quarterback as one of the better results of the 1976 season. "He's just a little bit away from being a quarterback," the Delaware coach said. "He doesn't run as well as he could, and he throws too many interceptions."

In the backfield, Ivory Sully, a sophomore, will take over Bob Sabol's position at halfback. Sully saw considerable action this season, averaging 7.1 yards per carry. Junior Dave Bachkosky will return at fullback. Although Gregg Perry will be sorely missed, Bachkosky had a lot of experience, especially in the latter part of the season.
