L'ENVOI

Dortha Hill

Oh, Delaware, thy colors are carried by the night;
Thy blue the sky above us, thy gold the stars of light,
And day upholds thy banner, thy blue and gold endure,
Thy colors in the sunlight bright blue and sun-gold pure.

The ivy that grows clinging against thy russet wall
As if it drew life from thee has heard with us thy call.
Oh, may thy courage, mater, stir each and every heart
As does the breeze the ivy whirling its leaves apart.

Oh, Delaware, thy columns grow whiter in the sun;
In memory they linger when days with thee are done.
Oh, may thy inspiration spread forth as doth thy wall
That all may hear and answer thy great and noble call.

FAREWELL TO FACULTY

Good-bye to a humorous smile beneath a serious moustache;
To inverted logic made to sound like cynicism;
To yellowed notes recopied to serve a few years more;
To violent violet ties—the ties that blind.
Good-bye to all that.

Good-bye to scholarly attitude in immaculate brown attire;
To kindly helpfulness and reverence, the classics;
To a slam of the brief-case on the desk, and a hearty laugh;
To a southern culture and calm.
Good-bye to all that.

Good-bye to thought too rapid for expression in tangled words
To dainty delicacy in professional guise;
To keen eyes fixed on infinity just outside the window.
Good-bye to nuggets of wisdom.
Good-bye to all that.
