RICHARDS SECRETARY OF STATE--THE APPOINTMENT CONSIDERED A GOOD ONE

Governor Pennewill has announced the appointment of Charles Sudler Richards, Georgetown, as Secretary of State, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William T. Smithers.

Mr. Richards is a well known attorney, the brother of Robert H. Richards, prominent lawyer of Wilmington. A young man of only 33, he has shown much ability both in his legal practice and as deputy attorney general, some years ago.

This is the third man to serve under Governor Pennewill as Secretary, and each county has been represented in the appointments.

The general expression is that the present choice is a wise one.

The new secretary will assume his duties at once. He is a member of the Board of Pardons, State Board of Supplies and the Boulevard Commission.

The New Garage

A distinct addition to the business section of the town is the fine new building being erected on Main street by A. F. Fader.

A wide central stairway leads to the second floor, fitted up as a hall, to which the moving picture performances will be moved in the near future. It is tastefully finished in soft shades of green, well ventilated, with several exits, etc., and provides a pleasant place for this popular amusement.

The first floor is completely equipped as a modern garage, which promises to be the scene of a thriving business.

There is storage space on one side for eight machines and on the other for ten. A turnboard and pit, concrete floor with drains, etc., also a gasoline pump with an automatic registering apparatus attached are some of the fixtures which mark the establishment as an up-to-date one.

The west end of the building is being nicely finished as a hardware store, which will be owned and managed by Thomas A. Potts.

The exterior of the building corresponds to the appearance of the interior. Large glass doors at each end of the garage, and an electric sign add to the general impression of progressiveness. The concrete pavement to be laid from the building to the street will add neatness to the place.

Under Discussion

The Actna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company have two plans under discussion—whether to buy land and erect a building on the Main street, before the price of land becomes higher, or to buy an automobile engine to complete their fire equipment. It is expected a public meeting will be held some time in the near future, to which the townspeople will be invited, to discuss the subject and help them decide.

Two hundred feet of new hose has been purchased and was placed in the engine house last Saturday.

THE HISTORY DEPARTMENT OUTLINED

Professor Vaughn, the head of the Department of History at Delaware College, organized by authority of the last Legislature, is getting his department in shape. He comes highly recommended, and has taken hold of the work with an enthusiasm that is meeting with hearty approval.

The bill has created considerable comment throughout the State and will be watched with interest. The provisions of the Act give Professor Vaughn a good working foundation and an authority well defined. In fact, no department of the college is on such an independent basis. The work on Delaware History will be given its proper perspective and in all probability the economics will be given special attention,—on State as well as National questions of the day.

The Students' Conferences and Lectures will be announced later.

Professor Vaughn gives the following outline of the courses to be pursued:

1.—History of Delaware.

This introductory course is designed to give a thorough survey of the history of the State from the earliest times down to the present with special reference to Delaware's relation to the history of the Nation. It will be required of all Freshmen.

2.—Ancient History.

After a preliminary study of the ancient Oriental nations, the history of the Greeks and Romans will be taken up with sufficient detail to make clear their political, social, economic and intellectual life, and their contributions to our civilization. Freshman.

3.—Mediaeval and Modern History.

The aim of this course is to give a general view of the period since the overthrow of Rome by the German tribes. It will trace the rise of the great European nations and of modern institutions, and will attempt to bring the student in close touch with modern conditions and problems. Sophomore.

4.—History of the Nineteenth Century.

On account of the great importance of recent history a special course is offered on the period from 1815 to the present time. It is especially recommended to students who wish to be in touch with the epoch-making developments of the past century and to keep abreast of contemporary history. Junior.

5.—Advanced American History and Government.

Intended for students who already possess a fair knowledge of United States history and government. Special emphasis will be given to constitutional and economic questions and to the place of the United States as a world power. Junior.

6.—Economics.

A full year will be devoted to this subject. During the first term the student will consider the fundamental principles of the subject, while during the rest of the year he will attempt to apply these principles to the economic problems of the day. Senior.

Professor Vaughn will have his offices in the Library Building.

Football Practice

Work has already begun on Delaware's gridiron.

Coach McAvoy started Monday to get the men in order for the opening game with Williamson School of Media, Pa., Sept. 23.

The team will be largely composed of old players. Among these are Captain Taylor, F. A. Dean, V. H. Handy, A. C. Huston, J. G. Atticks, G. P. Middleton, S. D. Loomis, E. W. Loomis, E. E. Todd, H. T. Ennis, William Cann, W. M. Schlittler, A. R. Hanson, and D. B. Ayerst.

Murray, who played with Exeter, and Kelley, a former Wilmington High School star, are two of the new candidates. Others trying for the team are E. R. Manning, A. F. Dean and L. L. Lank.

FARMERS' BOY DAY

If the weather is pleasant on Saturday next, it is probable that there will be a large attendance at the Farmers' Boy Day at the State Farm. The College authorities are co-operating with the State Board of Agriculture and the various County Superintendents of Public Schools to bring out a large attendance of boys and girls who are either now identified with farm life, or who are particularly interested in Agriculture.

There is much more to be seen on the farm at this season of the year than there is at the time when Farmers' Day is held in June. At the present time, for example, many of the plots of corn and soy beans in the Agronomy field are being harvested, and these plots teach a great many lessons in regard to the adaptability of varieties, and the importance of feeding the crop rather than the soil. On the farm proper, everyone is busy harvesting 50 acres of corn and practically the same area of soy beans for hay and for seed. Here is demonstrated on large areas what soy beans will do in taking the place of red clover—which many are now having difficulty in producing—and alfalfa, which it is practically impossible to grow in many localities.

In the orchards Prof. McCue has a number of interesting experiments showing the value of different cover crops and their effect upon the soil. The orchards never looked better than they do at the present time, and to see and hear explained the experimental objects for which the orchards are maintained will in itself be worth a journey to Newark on Saturday.

In order to increase the interest in Farmers' Boy Day, the College has inaugurated a competitive essay contest, and are offering prizes for the three best essays on "The State Farm and Its Work," "The Influence of an Agricultural Education upon the Efficiency of the Farmer," or "What is the Greatest Need of Delaware Farmers."

The first prize will be a registered Berkshire pig, valued at $15. The second prize will be one bushel of soy beans of the highly prized Wilson variety; valued at $4.00. The third prize will be one bushel of Johnson Co. White seed corn, valued at $3.

The essays must be in the hands of Prof. Haywood by October 15. The best essays will be published in the Newark Post.

Prof. Tuck, head of the Extension Department of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be the principle speaker of the day. Prof. Spalding, Superintendent of Public Schools of New Castle county, and Professors McCue and Cannon, of Delaware College will also have something to say.

At the conclusion of the exercises at the farm, through the courtesy of Dr. Harter and the Athletic Association, everyone is invited to attend the football game at the College between Williamson and Delaware. This will give the visitors an opportunity not only to see the College, inspect its buildings, etc., but also an opportunity to have their blood stirred by royal battle on the football field.

While it is hoped that the present pleasant weather will continue, it has been thought best, in case it is inclement, to postpone the event until some future time.

The College authorities wish to repeat the invitation that they have sent out over the State, that while this day is primarily intended for the boy and girl of school age, everyone who feels an interest in this work is cordially invited.

Every school teacher in town should be at the College Farm on Saturday—and the professor too.

The Red Men's Band recently organized, is progressing nicely. All the members were beginners, and Instructor Constantine, of Wilmington, pronounces them to be doing well. They hope to make their appearance as a first class band by Christmas time.

DEATH OF SECRETARY OF STATE SMITHERS

The news of the death of Hon. W. T. Smithers, came as a shock to the entire State, early last Friday morning.

Although Mr. Smithers had been in poor health for the past two weeks and was under the care of Dr. E. F. O'Day, no one considered his condition serious. He attended to his duties as usual, and on Thursday felt that he was improving. Accompanied by Mrs. Smithers he attended an entertainment in Dover Opera House, halted at the State House on his return, read in his own home until about midnight, when he retired. Finding that he was restless and breathless with difficulty, he arose and sat in a chair for greater comfort.

His condition was not yet considered alarming, but Doctors O'Day and E. S. Anderson were summoned. All their efforts to bring relief proved of no avail.

The patient grew steadily worse and died about one a. m., being conscious until the last.

Mr. Smithers was a member of the State Highway Commission, and a short time ago toured through Sussex over several proposed routes. It is believed he contracted a cold at that time, which proved fatal.

William Townsend Smithers was born at Frederica, August 26, 1863. He was the son of Joseph and Mary (Townsend) Smithers, and was educated by private tutors and at the Academy of Professor William Reynolds, at Wilmington. He entered upon his legal duties in 1877, with Hon. Nathaniel B. Smithers, of Dover, a relative, and was admitted to the bar in Kent county on October 21, 1882.

Mr. Smithers was a Republican and always took an active interest in political and State affairs, though he was never offensively partisan, hence the esteem in which he was held by men of other political parties. His first official party connection was in 1882, when he became secretary of the Republican State Central Committee.

He was an excellent speaker, being always in demand at commencement exercises and patriotic celebrations.

He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1896, which

TREND OF HIGHER EDUCATION IN DELAWARE

How well this purpose was realized is shown by the magnificent support that the farmers of the State have given the College in providing one of the best farms in the State for its use, making two large appropriations for its equipment, and finally by an appropriation that was made largely on faith, for the Agricultural Extension Department.

Those who are familiar with the work of the Legislature appreciate the fact that many of its members did not really see the need of liberal appropriations for these special purposes. But they were broad enough when the fact was presented to them that it was for the purpose of developing the agricultural resources of the State, to give the plan their sanction by their votes.

After the College took possession of its new property it then remained to demonstrate to the people of the State that it could carry on the promises that it had made to the Legislature. That these promises have been fulfilled to the letter is demonstrated by the increasing number of visitors at the Annual Farmers' Day held at the farm, and the interest shown by these visitors. Many of the most conservative farmers who were inclined to criticize the State for making such liberal appropriations for the College, have expressed themselves as being entirely pleased with the results attained. The Agricultural Department of the College has demonstrated that it can grow large

PLAIN PEOPLE--ADDRESS BY W. E. COLE, OF DELAWARE CITY

The 100th anniversary of West Nottingham Friends' Meeting, near Rising Sun, Md., was held last Saturday.

Addresses were made by many prominent Friends.

The following was delivered at the morning session by W. E. Cole, the popular conductor on the Delaware City road:

PLAIN PEOPLE.

A noted English lady historical and biographical writer, opens one of her interesting volumes entitled William Penn, with the statement concerning the quiet neighborhood of Wiltshire, England. Here is the chancel of Christ Church there is a much visited monument which has been erected to the memory of a man whose only title to fame is that he was the ancestor of a great Quaker.

We are here today at the solicitation of those who are descendants of the early settlers in this community. The first settlement was upon a grant of land known in the legally preserved record of the county, as the Nottingham grant from this same great Quaker, William Penn. And what is the paramount object upon this occasion, if not to review and proclaim our admiration and appreciation of the many good and noble deeds accomplished in the many struggles of these early settlers and their descendants, and especially so of those descendants whose careers are dated from the establishment here of this "The Little Brick Meeting House" as a place of divine worship, just one hundred years ago? For what higher purpose can a voice be raised than an effort, feeble though it be, to help keep alive the local history of those times and to perpetuate their memory.

Now, do not suppose, even tho I may look it that I am able to go back one hundred years and speak with any degree of accuracy from personal recollection, but it is a noted characteristic of real old people that they can tell more about what took place in their early childhood than they can of what took place much more recently, or even what is taking place at the present time. Whether or not it is a sign I am getting in the real old class, what little I may say here today, at least from this platform, will be from my personal recollection in early boyhood of the religious, social, educational and industrial history in connection with the lives of a "Plain People" commonly called "Quakers," but by themselves called "Friends"—a name that automatically suggested itself and was accepted by them at a very early stage of the formation of their religious associations owing to the kindly and neighborly friendliness displayed by them toward all men and especially between each other among all those of their particular way of thinking.

The religion of these "Plain People" in form, or rather in the absences of form, for all forms far as practical was superceded, in a large measure, by a silent mode of worship. They gathered in silence sometimes remaining so throughout the entire meeting.

It was occasionally complained of as irksome—the period of self examination and keeping company with one's self. Well, a man, especially one with many shortcomings and often in a large measure with imaginary cares and troubles, don't always find himself agreeable company and seeks to have his attention diverted by being talked to or otherwise entertained. But here at this little brick meeting house there was no one particularly specified or ecclesiastically authorized in advance to do the talking, and he who volunteered so to do, if any did, did so upon his own initiative. Upon his own invitation he arose and stood before that gathering alone and with no other excuse than a conviction which he believed the spirit of God had indelibly stamped upon his mind—that he was there because he was a man with a message.

But how about a woman with a message. Was she there? She also was there, and as God has endowed some women with a higher order of intellect than some men, who can truthfully gainsay that these women speakers among these early "Friends" (or later ones either for that matter) were not and are not righteously within their province as granted according to the Divine proclamation, "Beloved, I send my messenger." There is a claim, however, that man never got along with woman, and by trying to do so he lost all at the start. But when and where did he ever get along without her? While he may not have gotten along as well with her as he might if he had been without fault himself, as he has never gotten along at all without her, it must be owing to her that he has gotten along even as well as he has.

An original Quaker has been described as a perfectly upright gentleman, with perfectly good intentions, who wore a broad rimmed hat but who never smiled. But that is not according to my recollection which embraces a fairer type of man. Well do I remember among these "Plain People" in my early boyhood days, the joy and gladness in connection with their social side of life. While they may not have been as some of us who are descendants of them, so quick to compromise upon questions of social amusement of doubtful propriety, they might and most likely did, measure more fully to the "standard" advocated by the late John B. Gough, when on matters pertaining thereto he said, "Thank God for our seasons of healthful mirth, for they the times well spent."

While they shunned with a steadfast determination any disposition for the sake of mere worldly display to ape the fashion set by that certain rich man who was arrayed in purple and fine linen, they cultivated tardiness, and they did not object to faring sumptuously every day, especially upon occasions when they gathered at their hospitable homes a circle of invited friends, where each had brought his soul to commune with a soul.

They proved conclusively that religious, social, educational and industrial life among these "Plain People" was well worth the living.

Now, it is not for me here today to speak further upon this subject, or upon any other subject in fact, for we are working under the necessity of a prearranged program, the construction of which had to be arranged with a thought proportionally upon a matter directly connected with all things, and from which the affects of the workings of an invisible divine Higher Power, no man can discount, and that is Time, the allotment of which, among the speakers for this occasion provided not only for the able and interesting ones who have spoken before me, but also for those who are likewise to follow me.

With my best wishes for your enjoyment here today and my sincere thanks for your kind and friendly attention, I will close by making an announcement that my short multiplication of words is now ended.

Heart Cheer

"Patience is the key of content."

"The seeds of virtue grow best when planted early."

"Greatness may be present in lives whose range is very small."

"I know that the earth exists, It is none of my business why, I cannot find out."

"I would but waste time to try, My life is a brief, brief thing, I am here for a little space, And while I stay."

"I would like, if I may, To brighten and better the place."

"Without haste and without rest, Let each man wheel with steady sway."

"Round the task that rules the day, And do his best."

"It is easy enough to be pleasant When life flows along like a song."

"But the man worth while is the one who will smile."

"When everything goes dead wrong;"

"For the test of the heart is trouble, And it always comes with the years,

"And the smile that is worth the praises of earth,

"Is the smile that shines through tears."

"When fortune treats you slightly And everything goes dead wrong, Remind her that you still are free To labor and be strong; To him who bravely does his part Misfortune is no crime, Just hold your grip and keep up heart And learn to hide your time."

"The surest road to greatness lies Through hard and patient work The glorious name that never dies Comes not unto the shirk; Fame sits upon an eminence, A pinnacle sublime;

"He who would win must seek her thence Strive on and bide his time."

"Go onward, O'er the future's hills The dawn falls cool and sweet, Go onward, He can win who wills And bows not to defeat, Go onward, though your path may lie

"Through calumny and slime, The way will brighten by and by, Go on and bide your time."

"Could we judge all deeds by motives, See the good and bad within, Often we should love the sinner, All the while we loathe the sin; Could we know the powers wor-

"ing To o'erthrow integrity, We should judge each others er- 1918 With more patient charity."

"There never was day so dark and drear But what, ere the sands had run,

The clouds would shift and the havens clear To the sullying face of the sun.

"There never was cruel stab or blow Inflicted by foe or friend But there was balm, God willed it so—

"Twill come out right in the end,

"Oh rainy days! Oh, days of sun! What are ye all when the year is done?

"Who shall remember snow or rain? Oh, years of loss! Oh, joyful years!

"What are ye all when Heaven appears,

"Who shall look back for joy or pain?"

MR. FRAZER'S BODY TO BE BROUGHT HOME

The following clipping from the Every Evening of September 16th gives the report from Minister Horace G. Knowles concerning the death of Joseph A. Frazer, at Oruro, Bolivia.

The family of the late Joseph H. Frazer, of Newark, who died in Bolivia, South America, has received detailed advices in regard to his death, through the Department of State at Washington.

Immediately following the announcement of the young man's death, Congressman Head called at the department and requested that a full report be obtained from Minister Horace G. Knowles at La Paz, and that if possible, the body be sent home at once. The minister acted promptly and obtained the consent of the Bolivian government for the immediate removal of the body, notwithstanding, under the laws of the country, there is a two-years restriction in such cases.

The funeral of the deceased in La Paz was attended by American and English residents in large numbers and many beautiful floral tributes were placed on the casket. The clergyman who officiated at the funeral in La Paz will accompany the remains to the United States and take part in the services to be held in Newark.

The following telegram from Minister Knowles, to the Department of State, forwarded shortly after Mr. Frazer's death, has been transmitted by the department to the family of the deceased:

Legation of the United States of America—La Paz, Bolivia,

Aug. 21, 1911.

To the Honorable, the Secretary of State, Washington—Sir: I have the honor to confirm my cablegram of today informing the department of the death of Joseph H. Frazer. He was a citizen of the United States and his residence there was with his parents, at Newark, Delaware. He came to this country seven years ago and had been following his profession of mining and civil engineer. For the past three years he had been engaged in railroad work, and as a partner of A. W. Yount, located at Oruro, he had in the last two years undertaken and performed with marked success, several large and important contracts. At the time of his death the firm was engaged as principal contractors in the construction of the railroad to run from Rio Nulatos to Potosi. They were about to close a contract for the construction of 300 kilometers of railroad in the southern part of Chile, involving many millions of dollars. He had already, at the age of 29, established a reputation on the West Coast of South America as one of the best and most reliable contractors that ever came here. He possessed unusual ability as an engineer and contractor, had an enormous amount of energy and was a hard worker. He had marvelous influence over his workmen, all of whom preferred to work for him rather than to play with other men. He made the laborers feel that he was one of them, and as such he treated them with kindness and consideration, which had a reformatory and constructive influence even on the roughest characters.

From the lowest workmen to the party giving the contract he had their confidence, admiration and esteem, which grew into an intense affection. It may be truthfully said that not another contractor in South America stood in such favorable position and had before him such a bright career. It is the opinion of eminent men here that had he lived until 40 and continued his career, he would have surpassed the achievements and reputation of Henry Miegs. * * * His success here is a shining example of what it is possible for a young man with ability, energy, character and ambition to accomplish in South America.

He had made all his plans to return to the United States next month to visit his family and friends for the first time since he left there seven years ago. For the last five or six weeks his physical condition was very much run down by unbroken and overwork. It is said that three weeks ago he had several fainting spells at the dining table in his home in Oruro. The following week-end—the first of this month—he went with a party of five on a duck shooting trip to the Desaguadero river. The party spent four days there and killed 1,645 ducks. His score was next to the highest, about 500. The weather was cold and damp, and the men were in the water or wet most of the time. His physical condition, when he went on the trip, the exertion and shock incidental to firing daily, not less than 200 heavy gun charges, and exposure for four consecutive days produced only the natural result. He contracted a severe cold and came to this city on the 9th inst. Malignant influenza developed, and one week later, the evening of the 16th inst., he died. He was buried from the Legation on the afternoon of the 18th. The body was thoroughly embalmed and enclosed in a zinc-lined, sealed casket, which will make it possible to send the remains out of the country within the prescribed period of two years. * * *

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,
Horace G. Knowles.

This is of especial interest to this community as it is the turn of New Castle Presbytery to fill the office.

A meeting of this Presbytery will be held in Red Clay Creek Church on October 3, when several candidates will be unofficially discussed.

SYNODICAL MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Synodical meetings of the Women's Missionary Societies will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, October 25, the morning session being devoted to Foreign and the afternoon to Home Society work.

About seventy-five delegates are expected, each society in the three Presbyteries being entitled to a home and a foreign delegate.

Packing The Delaware Apple

A bulletin under the Division of Agricultural Extension of Delaware College has been published recently which discusses The Box Pack for Delaware Apples.

The writer, Prof. C. A. McCue, Horticulturist at Delaware College, gives the essentials for a good box pack, with the hope that Delaware growers will use this way more extensively in the future than they have in the past.

The casker has discovered that he can grow as good an apple as the westerner and, generally speaking, an apple of better flavor. Growers realize that the size and attractive appearance of the box has a great deal to do with the selling of the fruit. When this has been attempted in Delaware, the fruit has, quite frequently, been improperly packed.

The Bulletin gives special directions in a plain and practical way.

Synod Of Baltimore To Meet In Wilmington

The Synod of Baltimore, comprising New Castle, Baltimore and Washington Presbyteries in Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Northern Virginia will meet this year in Central Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, from October 23 to 25. The Synod meetings are second in importance only to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. Many distinguished visitors are expected and there will be much to interest the general public.

About 200 commissioners are expected, the minister and an elder from each Church being the delegates.

Among the speakers who have already been secured for the meetings are—

President Francis L. Patton, of Princeton Theological Seminary, and President George B. Stewart, of Auburn Theological Seminary, New York State. There will be a number of board secretaries among the speakers, including the Rev. Dr. George Mackenzie, secretary of the College Board, the Rev. Dr. Stanley White, secretary of the Foreign Board, and David McGough, Forward Movement secretary, the Rev. J. Ernest McAfee, secretary of the Home Board and the Rev. Mr. McGourrah, who will talk on "Church Finance."

Dr. N. H. Miller, of Washington, a former pastor of the Newark Presbyterian Church, has been State Clerk of the Synod for many years.

A new Moderator will be chosen on the first evening. This elec-

WILLIAM T. SMITHERS

"THE REST IS SILENCE."

Those who knew William T. Smithers have not yet sufficiently recovered from the shock of his sudden death, to give due recognition to his remarkable personality nor to reckon the usefulness of his life.

He was a man of varied talents and it is difficult to place him in his proper niche. Aside from his literary attainments, his firm hold and strict attention to duties—to us he appeared a genius for doing good. He was not aggressive, but strong. There was nothing of the stubborn in his nature, but the firm—and a strength and firmness so combined with a genial grace, that drew to him a host of friends.

Always a staunch Republican he was never a bitter partisan and was held in the highest esteem by those of different political faith. Unlike most men in public life, he made no enemies. He could disagree with a man and still hold his friendship and admiration.

His most prominent work in public affairs was as secretary of State. This appointment was a fortunate one. He served well and with a pleasing dignity fitting to that office. Giving a detailed attention to his duties, he reflected credit on the administration and honor on the State.

The younger members of the last Legislature recall with pride and profit, the privilege of knowing this man. He welcomed them and was ever ready to listen or explain some question in doubt.

Especially was he a young man's man. He had ideals and could inspire. He was magnetic, appreciated the dreams of youth, and urged men on. As in his commencement address here last June he was constantly showing the pleasing outlook on life to those who saw aright. Today, tomorrow, life to him, was a symphony of colors and a joy in the living. As a public official, as a citizen, as a strong, kind, manly man, the church, the community in which he lived and the State will sadly miss him. But his life is an inspiration most worthy of emulation.

DELAWARE NEEDS NO RECALL

WHY attempt to bring this so-called reform movement of Recall of Judges into Delaware? Not one of the advocates of this Oregonian lad has ever had occasion or has ever dared to question the Courts of this State.

Delaware can well afford to challenge any State in the Union from Oregon all the way in the integrity of her courts. To agitate this question here, where there is not the least semblance of the need for such radical action, is an insult to the men on our bench and a reflection on the State that does not speak well for those espousing the cause.

Granting for the sake of argument that the recall would remedy a corrupt bench (which we do not believe) no one will maintain that Delaware needs it. And until we face that condition let us bend our energies to the solution of those questions that demand our attention.

There are questions of public policy for the general good that can well be made local issues in the next campaign, but certainly the Recall is not one of them.

BOYS' DAY AT THE FARM

THE Agricultural Department of Delaware College is keeping abreast with the times, and considering the short while it has been provided with a working field, has made wonderful strides.

The corps of professors is meeting the Delaware farmers more than half way, and their interest in him and realization of their obligation to him has now gone a step nearer—a most cordial and enticing invitation has been ex-

Mitchell's Letters To Appear In Sunday North American

The Sunday North American has arranged to publish a series of twelve articles by John Mitchell on important phases of present day industrial conditions. One will appear each week, beginning next Sunday, September 24.

No man in the country is better fitted by experience and temperament to discuss the vital issues which affect the wage earner and industry. He has earned the confidence of his fellow-workers, the respect of employers and the admiration of the great public. His integrity is unquestioned; his grasp of these big questions unequalled. And he writes with a direct simplicity that gives vigor to his views. Every worker—every citizen, indeed, who is concerned in the problems of the day—should follow this series in the Sunday North American. Following are some of the subjects to be treated:

The Wage Earners and the Trusts.

The Wage Earners and the Judiciary.

The Wage Earners and Labor Organizations.

The Wage Earners and Occupational Diseases.

The Wage Earners and Compensation for Accidents.

The Wage Earners and Industrial Efficiency.

The Wage Earners and Immigration.

The Wage Earners and the Church.

The Wage Earners and Unemployment.

These articles are bound to create an unusually large sale for the Sunday North American, and it would be advisable for all who are interested in the above articles to see their newsdealer and order him to reserve a copy.

HIGHER EDUCATION

as economically as the most practical farmer, and it is generally admitted by those who know the College Farm that it is growing year by year in its productiveness.

All of this has, of course, taken time, and it was not until these facts were demonstrated to the satisfaction of the constituents of the College, that they were willing to have their boys come to Delaware College for its course in Agriculture. They are coming now, as the present entering class abundantly indicates, and if there is no mishap in the administration of the affairs of the College, there is every reason to believe that it is now entering upon a new era of usefulness to the State.

Without depreciating the work of the other departments, it is plainly evident that the Agricultural Department occupies a field that no other department of the can not evade. "Public Service" College possibly can occupy. In the natural course of events it is but reasonable to suppose that most of the young men who go out from the Agricultural courses of the College will remain in the State, and the State will get the benefit of their knowledge and its application to the soil. On account of their training they should make better citizens, and the State should be the richer for having the benefit of their training and experience. This, unfortunately, cannot be true in many of the other courses. The engineering interests of the State are limited, and it is a regrettable fact that most of the men who graduate as engineers will be obliged to seek employment outside of the borders of the Commonwealth. Furthermore, on account of its unique relation to the every-day affairs of the State, the Agricultural Department is bound to be of greater and greater service to the farmers themselves each year. While the number of students in agriculture may increase, and we hope they will, it is probable that for every student receiving instruction in the College, from 50 to 100 farmers in the State will receive benefit either from personal contact with the various experts in the Department, from the reports on specific experiments in the different phases of agriculture, or from their visits to the College farm, where they can see for themselves the cause and effect in agriculture.

It should be always remembered that a College supported and administered by the State bears a responsibility to the State that it and "The greatest good to the greatest number" must of necessity be the actuating motive if the college is to retain the loyal support of its constituents.

STORIES For LITTLE FOLK

BETWEEN THE DARK AND THE DAYLIGHT
WHEN THE NIGHT IS BEGINNING TO LOWER,
COMES A PAUSE IN THE DAY'S OCCUPATION
THAT IS KNOWN AS THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

(Written for "The Post.")
BIRTHDAY MEMORIES.

We all like folks to notice our birthdays, so because September is his birth month, I am going to tell you the story of Eugene Field—a man who loved little ones.

When Eugene Field was only seven years old, just the age of the little ones to whom I am now talking, his mother died and the little boy went to make his home with a kind aunt. He was not able to see his father very often, but had to do his talking with him by way of letter writing. Probably this is the way he learned to love to write.

As he grew into a tall broad-shouldered boy his father sent him to college. He wanted him to become a lawyer like himself. The boy tried because he was anxious to please, but he gradually drifted into what was for him a much pleasanter task—writing beautiful verses for the little folk.

His favorite companions were boys and girls. During the last twelve years of his life he lived in a rambling old house, surrounded by a large shaded lawn. It was on a quiet street in the city of Chicago. Every child in the neighborhood knew where this jolly friend lived.

When the weather was nice he would bring his work out on the lawn. It wasn't a quiet place to work, and he had many interruptions. He tells us himself it was a place where

"Dear little children go romping about,
With dollies and tin tops and drums;
And my! how they frolic and scamper and shout
Till bedtime too speedily comes."

His poems that we all love so well were written in the midst of the shouts of children from whom he gained the suggestion and inspiration.

When he went to visit older people, if there were children in the house, it was never long before he was off in a corner with them. One time he went to visit a famous minister. Soon after he entered he was introduced to the boys and girls. He greeted them with the question: "Where is the kitchen?" They all trooped off to that part of the house and found the remains of a turkey which was placed in the centre of the dining room table. They had a fine time around this banquet board, their visitor telling them wonderful stories all the while.

The people all over the land wanted to hear this man read and tell his own stories, for when he told them they were even more beautiful than ever.

He used to travel about reading Lullabies, Little Boy Blue, etc., before large audiences. When away on these trips he never forgot that he had seven merry boys and girls at home. It was his habit to buy all sorts of queer playthings. Sometimes it was a fine gun he bought, sometimes a pop gun, a red top or gay trumpet; but quite as often it was a dolly, a little boat, some cakes or candy.

All of his own children he called by some odd pet name.

When his first daughter was born, he called her "Trotty," while "Pinny," "Daisy," "Googhy" and "Posy" were names given to others in the family.

One evening in early November this devoted father spent a quiet time in his home. He and the one of the boys whom he called "Daisy" went to sleep together as usual. Early in the morning the boy awoke to find that as his father "was dreaming an angel song" had awakened him just as his own "Little Boy Blue." During the quiet hours of the night he had slipped into the far unknown country from which none have ever returned, and all America mourned the loss of one of her sweetest story writers.

Do you remember "Little Boy Blue"?

The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and stanch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is covered with rust,
And the musket pounds in his hands.

Time was when the little toy dog was new,

And the soldier was passing fair,
And that was the time when our Little Boy Blue
Kissed them and put them there.

"Now don't you go till I come," he said,

"And don't you make any noise,"
So toddling off to his trundle-bed
He dreamt of the pretty toys,
And as he was dreaming an angel song

Awakened our Little Boy Blue—
O, the years are many, the years are long,

But the little toy friends are true
Aye, faithful to Little Boy Blue
they stand,

Each in the same old place,
Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
The smile of a little face,
And they wonder as waiting these long years through,

In the dust of that little chair,
What has become of your Little Boy Blue

Since he kissed and put them there.

Oxford Fair Opens Tomorrow

"There's Fair spirit in the air," says the Oxford Press, and the annual exhibition of the Oxford Agricultural Association will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 20, 21 and 22.

Secretary Tom Grier has been visiting horse shows and fairs in Wilmington, Pottstown, West Chester and additional towns in the interest of Oxford fair. The string of horses listed for the 3 minute trot and 2.20 pace on Thursday, 2.30 pace, 2.25 trot and 2.15 mixed on Friday, gives assurance of horse entertainment on the track.

Each department in the buildings and elsewhere will be made attractive and indications are that numbers of exhibitors from the three counties will have their best goods in line for blue cards.

There will be machinery of the right kind to interest farmers and auto-lovered people will see something to make them disposed to sell their horses.

The officers and managers are a unit in regard to snuffing out games of chance, fakirs, etc., and will not encourage operations that smack of gambling.

Elementary Union Meets in Newark

The Elementary Union of the Sunday Schools of New Castle County was held in the M. E. Church, Newark, last Saturday afternoon. This movement among the schools of the State embraces those schools who follow the graded work, basing their grading on the age of the child rather than the plan followed by the public school.

There are now six of these unions in the State, four in Sussex, one in Kent, and one in New Castle, the latter being the youngest of the group.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. Rowan, after which Mrs. Haddock, the President, presided. Miss Barker, of Sussex, who recently represented that county at the International Convention held in San Francisco, was present and told of that large and enthusiastic gathering. The Delaware unions were not recognized at that convention owing to the fact that their meetings are only held quarterly, while the international constitution requires monthly meetings.

The matter was discussed, but decision postponed until a later meeting.

Miss Barker spoke decidedly in favor of graded lessons, stating that the convention reported one school in every twelve following this form of work.

Miss Wells conducted a class for beginners, beautifully telling the lesson story of Daniel.

A Round Table led by Miss Mendinhal brought out many helpful suggestions.

The Fourth Ecumenical Conference of Methodism will be held this year in the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, Canada, October 4 to 17 inclusive. This gathering is brought together by the churches once every decade, the place of meeting alternating between the old and new world. The last meeting was held in London in 1901. The most noted speakers of this denomination from both the eastern and western hemispheres are on the program.

Rev. Vaughn S. Collins has been enjoying strawberries of the fall variety picked from plants in the M. E. Parsonage garden, Middechown. The plants are of the American and Productive variety, the former beginning to yield about August 20 and the latter are about to ripen.

Middletown boys seem determined to have a gymnasium. They have organized to work for that end, each member of the association to make small weekly payments. Entertainments will be given to secure funds for the purchase of apparatus.

Conference Academy, Dover, opened last week, with 67 pupils, the largest enrollment for many years.

Arrangements are being made by Elizabethtown Council to have the western section of town sewered this fall. Work will be commenced within a few days.

Oyster tongers along the Chesapeake are making large catches of the oyster in fine condition.

J. Rankin Davis, Delaware College, 1911, will take up studies in the law school, Yale.

The Students' Handbook of Delaware College has been distributed among the student body. It is full of useful information concerning things in the college world. The book was edited by H. T. Ennis, B. W. Ward and A. S. Houglum, and published by the Index print, of Dover.

Early risers in different sections of the country report signs of frost on last Thursday morning.

From the many thousands of birds on the river front and marsh lands it was expected that this would be one of the best gunning seasons in a decade. So far the sportsmen have been disappointed and the birds unusually hard to get.

The squirrel season opened in Delaware on Friday.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Delaware Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at Milton, September 27, 28 and 29. Among the speakers is Mrs. Ella Boole, of New York State. The goldenrod is yellow,

The trees in apple orchard

With fruit are bending down,
The gentian's bluest fringes
Are curling in the sun,
In ducky pods the milkweed,
Its hidden silk has spun.

The sedges flaunt their harvest
In every meadow nook;

By all these lovely tokens
