Football's grip on us

oe Flacco dropped back to pass and threw a perfect spiral to a streaking Kevin Michaud for a touchdown, and the crowd erupted in cheers.

That's not just a fond memory from last fall – that's what Blue Hen fans saw last Saturday.

Don't let the scorching temperatures fool you, fall is right around the corner. Several hundred ardent Blue followers couldn't team in its first scrimmage at Delaware Stadium.

Although the biggest cheers came on Flacco passes and Omar Cuff runs, the really encouraging part of the scrimmage was the defense, which was played with a fierce intensity often lacking last season.

The fascinating thing, though, is the grip that football has on us.

It's truly amazing that hundreds of people will sit on white concrete and silver aluminum seats and bake for 90 minutes in the August sun to watch a team practice. Yet, it goes on at schools and in professional training camps all over the country.

Drive up to Lehigh and see how many people come out to watch the Eagles practice during the sweltering weeks of early August. Sixty thou-sand fans showed up to watch a Packers scrimmage earlier this month. I can name three or four big time colleges that had more than 65,000 people for their spring scrimmages. It's unbelievable.

Main Street passersby could see the house frame being built in front of the New Ark United Church of Christ, Volunteers from the church worked alongside members of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark to complete the project as part of a joint Vacation Bible School.

"It's been a wonderful fellowship that has formed," said pastor David Weddington of New Ark United Church of Christ.

Each evening, volunteers gathered for dinner and felowship before picking up their hammers and getting to work.

Wall panels were completed on site and then moved to Claymont Street in Wilmington, where they will be assembled into a two-

Workers ranged in age from teenagers to 90 years old and included veteran Habitat volunteers and people doing it for the first time

"This has been fabulous," said Kathy Stoner-Lasala, minister at the First Presbyterian Church of Newark. "We've made a huge commitment to Habitat, which we don't take lightly. We realize now how much fun that commitment is and how our lives have been enriched by it."

The project involves a financial commitment. The churches will be donating $25,000 to Habitat for Humanity over the next five years. Part of those funds will be raised through buffet brunches at Shaggys on Main planned for the first Sunday of every month.

This is the second summer the two churches have worked together on mission projects. Last year, they volunteered time at the Emmaus House, Food Bank and other Newark-based aid organi-

5K run to honor former NPD chief

Tewark residents are invited to honor the life and service of Newark's late police chief William F. Nefosky by participating in an inaugural 5K walk/run on Sunday, Sept. 9, at 10 a.m.

Nefosky, a 28-year-veteran of the Newark Police Department, died Jan. 16, of pancreatic cancer. His dream of being police chief in his hometown, realized just 11 months before his death, was cut short by his untimely death. He was 52 years old.

Newark Police Department and its Fraternal Order of Police Lodge #4 is sponsoring the race. An organizing committee includes members of Nefosky's family.

"The purpose of the event is to do two things: host a memorial activity in honor of Bill Nefosky and to donate proceeds to the American Cancer Society," said Cpl. Greg Micolucci.

The run will start and finish at 15 Innovation Way. Members of the police department will provide escort on the course, which will wind through scenic Newark trolley service along Main Street and Elkton Road will begin Dec. 3, as part of a plan to increase public transportation options throughout Newark, said Newark's Mayor Vance A .Funk III on Monday.

The plan by the Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) also includes the construction of a DART bus transit hub on Delaware Avenue, which is expected to open in the spring of next year.

According to city officials, the trolley route will consist of a loop beginning on Main Street and ending on Delaware Avenue. The route will include stops on Elkton Road, Park Place and Academy

Mayor Funk said he hoped the trolley service would attract people to downtown Newark while alleviating congestion. "It will be a really big improvement for mass transit in Newark," Funk said.

"What we are trying to do is to get people out of their cars to elimi-

My thoughts turned quickly to the 1952 season, my first as sports information director at Delaware. It was Dave Nelson's second year as athletic director and head football coach and the beginning of an exciting era when his Delaware Wing T-Offense and the young men who perfected it attracted national attention.

But what a difference half-a-century makes!

Nelson-coached Chance teams were composed of two-way starters who played the greater part of every game. Some fans have forgotten that Little All America QB Don Miller also was a capable defensive back.

And other players on the early to mid-1950s teams were not the physical behemoths we see today. Steve Butcher, one of the first tackles ever to play for the Blue and Gold, weighed 212 pounds, and Nick Mergo, a three-year letterwinner whose teams won 23 of 27 games, weighed 220. Most of the linemen whose names and exploits we remember - Johnny exploits we remember – Johnny Borresen, Paul Mueller, Frank Gyetvan, Frank Heilig, Johnny Meccariello, Jerry Weis, Duke Shelton, Lenny Williams, Bob Trivits and Bob Peoples – ranged from 185 to 210. Star end and place kicker Frank Serpico, dubbed "The Splendid Splinter" by his teammates, was 5'10", 165 pounds.

Compare these statistics to those of the current roster, which boasts 24 players who weigh between 250 and 295 pounds and three linemen – Rich Beverley, Matt Hesseltine and Demitrius Hester – who tip the beam Changing conditions in the world on intercollegiate athletics also have altered team requirements. In the 1950s, Delaware teams gave their opponents from Connecticut, Rutgers and Temple all they could handle. In recent years, those teams have elected to compete at the highest level of NCAA competition, while Delaware has been struggling to maintain respectability in the expanding and improving Colonial Athletic Conference.

In the months ahead, Delaware fans will learn whether there are enough big bodies to meet their expectations!

For the first time Tuesday night, residents who live near the McVey Elementary School had a chance to meet face to face with Christina District School Board members about the recently installed fence at McVey.

About 12 residents were in attendance at Keene Elementary School and made it clear to the board that they were not happy.

Residents who live near the school, located at 908 Janice Drive, became upset when the school officials began installing a $20,000 fence around much of the 14.27-acre school grounds, limiting the amount of use of the roughly eight acres of land behind the school.

Businesses enjoy football season

a lot of places. It's a big deal to fans and even a bigger deal to the local economies.

Newark is no exception.

Local businesses – liquor stores, restaurants, bars, hotels, gas stations and grocery stores – are affected significantly by 20,000 people gathering at the stadium on fall Saturdays.

People are definitely interested to see if Delaware can improve on its uncharacteristically sub-.500 season of last fall. They are interested to see if the defense, which was ranked last in the conference, has improved. They are interested to see if the talented younger players are as good as advertised.

Yes, yes, it's only a game. I know that. But fans are interested and definitely have a much brighter attitude when things go well for the Hens than when things go poorly.

Sports are about entertainment and distraction. Football just so happens to provide both to a fairly large contingent of people here and around the country.

For some, like the 300 of us in attendance Saturday, the distraction and entertainment just starts earlier and lasts a little longer.

Hopefully, for Blue Hen fans, the sight of Flacco touchdown passes will be repeated throughout the fall.

Laptops on vacation?

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

It is vacation season and many folks are leaving town... but are they leaving their laptops? The answer is no; some 20 percent take their laptops with them. Whether you're taking it to stay connected to work or your teen is taking it to play games or movies on the road, many families bring their laptops with them on their family vacation. If you do take

Since I'm headed out of town soon, I thought I'd check out the site. OnGuardOnline. gov (English version) and Alertaenlinea.gov (Spanish version) offer sections devoted to laptop security, including tips for computer users and a game, "Mission: Laptop Security," that quizzes computer users on safe practices. For example, is your laptop safer in the trunk of the car, under the driver's seat, or should you take it inside the restaurant with you? (Answer: take the laptop inside.) Should you place your laptop in the hotel room safe, or locked with a security cable to a heavy piece of furniture? (Answer: Either one, as long as you secure your laptop and don't just leave it in the hotel room.)

A bit o' Ireland come to the Newark area

bit o' Ireland descended upon the Newark area, specifically St. Mark's High School off of Kirkwood Highway, this past Sunday, Aug. 12, when nearly 950 Irish Step Dancers competed in the Irish Culture Club of Delaware's 28th annual Feis & Festival. Feis is a Gaelic word that means, "party." From 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.,

From 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., cheerful, colorful bedlam reigned supreme at St. Marks. Girls in pretty dresses decorated with Irish symbols and boys dressed in black danced the reel, the jig and the hornpipe. Their upper torso held stiff, their arms pressed against the sides and their faces "stilled" the dancers flew across stage and platform — kicking, stomping, tap-dancing and leaping into the air. Each rapid leg movement is precise, on cue and marking time. (Think Riverdance!)

Proud and protective parents hovered nearby, ready to do battle with anyone who might distract their child while he or she performed. Videotaping was strictly forbidden since each dance club fiercely guards their specific dance style.

There are two kinds of Irish solo step dancers defined by the shoes the dancers wear: hard shoes or soft shoes. Soft shoe dances include the reel, slip jig, light jig and single jig. Hard shoe dances include the hornpipe, the treble jig and the treble reel.

A hard shoe dance emphasizes the beat.

"They tell a story with the feet," Anna Sporay, one of the event organizers, explained. "You can close your eyes during a hard shoe dance. Just listen." She talked about how her daughter, a talented step dancer, once performed at the Maryland School for the Blind and how the blind students loved the emphasized beats of the

Newarker receives national award

Being wheelchair-bound does not keep Edward Turnberger of Newark from being the most mobile volunteer at VITAS Innovative Hospice Care® of Delaware.

He was recently honored for his efforts at the company's prestigious National Employee Recognition Awards.

VITAS, the nation's leading hospice provider with 8,640 employees, each year recognizes those who best serve their patients, families and fellow employees. Turnberger, a VITAS volunteer since 2005, was among this year's 25 honorees.

As the owner of a fleet of wheelchair-accessible rental vans, Turnberger has the means to transport patients. When a VITAS patient in a nursing home, for example, spoke nostalgically about the farm on which he grew up, Turnberger drove the man to see the farm. When gas prices rose prohibitively high, Turnberger was the only volunteer willing and able to visit VITAS patients living in nursing homes 50 miles away. Turnberger also volunteers with Meals on Wheels and the Delaware Commission for the Blind.

As one of the "best of the best," Turnberger received the Richard Wolf Volunteer Achievement Award and a weekend celebration at a beachfront hotel in South Florida.

Soft shoe dances, such as the slip jig, can be graceful and full of jumps. The soft shoe reel is faster and stronger than the slip

Nine separate dance competitions were held at Sunday's event beginner, advanced beginner, novice, open, preliminary championship, open championship, figure dancing, adult, and the N.A.F.C Junior Irish Championships (which is held every 5 years). Dancers were grouped according to age. Fiddles, accordions, keyboards and other assorted instruments - live and taped - accompanied them.

Upstairs, an Irish Art competition and an Irish Bread competition took place. Irish tea and other assorted goodies were sold. People relaxed in the cafeteria, ate, listened to Irish Music performed by live musicians and watched a group of women dance an Irish Ceili, which is similar to American Square Dancing.

Moreover, there were vendors, everywhere - selling everything Irish - jewelry, clothes, insignias, costumes, shoes, hats, booklets and more.

We have competitors from all over the U.S. and Canada," commented Nora Smith another organizer of Sunday's festival. 'Sometimes we have competitors from Ireland. Not this year,

We've all heard stories about stolen laptops on the news or from friends and colleagues. No one thinks their laptop will be stolen- at least not until they find the trunk of their car broken into, notice that their laptop isn't waiting at the other side of airport security, or get a refill at the local coffee shop only to turn around and find their laptop

Simple advice from the Web site helps to reframe how we should think about our laptop. First they say, treat your laptop like cash and keep it locked up. Be aware of where you leave it. Mind the bag, get it out of the car and don't leave it "for just a minute." Of course you want to keep your passwords elsewhere and pay particular attention in airports and hotels.

Area Rotarians welcome international scholar

Delaware and Maryland's Eastern Shore – will be hosting a Rotary Foundation Scholar during the 2007-08 academic year.

Veerendra Bommenahalli Veerabhadrappa from India is one of nearly 800 scholars from 70 countries that received a scholarship this year. He is studying Environmental and Energy Policy at the University of Delaware Veerabhadrappa chose to pursue higher studies in this field because he is interested in ment, pollution control, renewable energy, disaster management and sustainable development. According to Veerabhadrappa, 'environment protection, energy self sufficiency and resource planning are bigger issues in developing countries like India.

es, poverty and illiteracy make at Rotary club meetings, schools, things more difficult. By acquiring greater knowledge in the field I hope to work and bring about positive change in this scenario.'

The scholarships, which are designed to further international understanding and goodwill, provide for study abroad in more than 165 countries where Rotary clubs are located. During his stay, Veerabhadrappa will be speaking civic organizations, and other forums about life" in his home country.

Veerabhadrappa arrived this month to begin his studies and will be hosted by the Newark Rotary Club. If you are interested in having a Rotary Scholar speak to your group or organization, please contact Jen Reider at newarkrotary@comcast.net.

City gets 25 acres of open space

Development Group, to incorporate the home - where it stood - into the site design.

of Chris Locke Development Group named the benefits to moving the home. The house has suffered water damage and can't be seen by passersby where it sits now, he said. An expert house moving company will relocate it to a spot along Casho Mill Road where it will be visible to the Newark com-

David Ames, director of the University of Delaware's Center for Historic Architecture and Design, said he "stood firmly on the fence" on the matter.

Ames and his students will be working to survey and document the property, home and supporting buildings. They will assist the developers in determining which portion of the early-19th century house should be saved.

Ames said, overall, he supported the project, calling it "quite excellent planning" and the "kind of thing we're trying to encourage."

In the end, council agreed, voting 7 – 0 in favor of the project.
"I think it's going to be a very positive aspect of the west side of Newark" said Council as a least of the west side. Newark," said Councilman Jerry Clifton in voicing his support.

The condominiums will be built on 13 acres of the property nearest Casho Mill Road. The remainder of the site – 25 acres will be dedicated to the city as public open space.

The project calls for three styles of attached senior housing to be built – "big house," courtyard and townhouse - and includes a clubhouse with a pool and fitness center and a half-mile walking trail that will be open to the public.

Councilman Frank Osborne. who supports Newark becoming a destination for retirees, was pleased by the project. "I think this is something we really need," he said.

Several councilmen worried about traffic safety on Casho Mill Road, as residents of the new adult community will likely be crossing Casho Mill in order to travel Thorn Lane to Elkton Road.

Councilman Doug Tuttle said the city needed to work with Delaware's Department of Transportation (DelDOT) for a better utilization of the traffic signal at the intersection of Casho Mill and Elkton Roads. Currently, no left turn is allowed there.

Jeff Lang of Lang Development Group said he would send a letter to DelDOT noting council's concerns and asking what measures could be taken. "We don't want to build a project that is not safe,"

"Saw Mill Place" had more supporters than a previous plan to develop the Wilson Farm with 72 non-age-restricted townhouses. The developer of that project, Caldera Properties, withdrew the application just before City Council had a chance to review it in September 2006.

"I think we have to keep in mind how far this project has traveled," said Councilman Paul Pomeroy, noting the amount of "angst" he heard from people in his district about the Caldera project. "Compared to what we had before, I think you folks really took the time to do this right," he told Lang Development Group.

He pedaled through 11 states and parts of Canada; changed four flat tires; weathered one minor accident; and covered an average of 70 to 80 miles per day, sometimes traveling more than 100 miles before stopping for the night.

He climbed the Tetons and crossed the Continental Divide: rode through towns with doubledigit populations; saw roaming bison packs and endless fields of corn and soybean.

He met people – fellow bikers that joined him for legs of his journey, employees at bike shops and natural food stores, restaurant owners, a shoe repairman, even a baker.

And, he documented his travels with photos and journal entries posted to an Internet blog, where family and friends could go to read about his adventure, sharing it, in a way, with him.

Many of those supporters were on Apple Road last week, waiting, excitedly, for Wisniewski to pedal his last half-mile home. The homecoming attracted a crowd of about 25 people waving signs and cheering on a smiling Wisniewski as he came into view.

Norman Sasowsky called his friend's journey "utterly remarkable," one only to be undertaken by a "very, very special per-

One of Wisniewski's daughters, Erin Madonna, called her dad's trip "inspiring," especially, she said, since he battles a disease that limits what he could eat along the way.

Wisniewski has Celiac disease, a digestive disorder that interferes with the absorption of nutrients from food. People who have the condition can't tolerate a protein called gluten found mainly in foods that contain wheat, rye and barley.

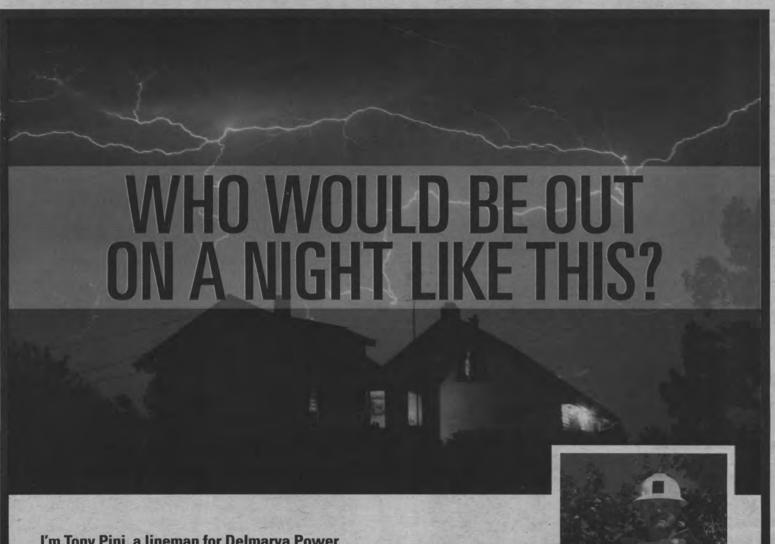

He set out on his cross-country journey, in part, to raise awareness about Celiac disease and to see if the trip could be completed by someone who couldn't depend on a biker's main source of energy - carbohydrates.

Of the places he stopped for food, he said, about 92 percent of them had some idea of what Celiac disease was, but only 2 percent were able to prepare special food that met his dietary requirements.

He frequented natural food stores and Asian restaurants. Of one fortuitous discovery he wrote on his blog, "After days of potatoes or no carbs, finding the China Buffet in Hot Springs was great...rice to a Celiac is like manna from heaven!'

Even facing these challenges, Wisniewski completed the trip successfully, cycling into Newark on the hottest day of the summer and wearing socks with flying pigs on them, a gift from his wife, Karen Barker.

As he greeted his family and friends, he spoke of the remarkable journey he had just completed, and his joy at being home. "As Dorothy said in Oz, 'there's no place like home," he said. wanter and and a terral and the fact and and and

Hennessy offers more than soccer

By TOM TOMASHEK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Ian Hennessy has his doctorate in molecular biology from Columbia University and has compiled a top-notch soccer profile as both a player and coach.

The upbeat Irishman chose sport over science shortly after completing his doctoral work over a 5 1/2 -year span, a decision that led him to the University of Delaware a year ago after assisting one season at Rutgers and another four at Boston College.

Hennessy, 40, said there never was any difficult decision, explaining that soccer has always been his passion going back to his junior days in Ireland. He was a four-year College standout at college standout at Seton Hall and spent the next 12 years playing professionally for several teams before heading back to campus life.

As for his educational quest at one of the nation's most presti-gious universities, he said he has always been the curious sort who enjoys a major challenge, but don't misinterpret this to mean he saw Delaware soccer - only one winning season since 1986 - as being a challenge.

"When I came down, I didn't know what to expect," Hennessy said in his rich Irish brogue, "but when I looked around I was convinced that this was an opportuni-ty and not a challenge," Hennessy said. "It will take a few more years, but all the resources are here, for the most part. We have the strength of the university - its academics, campus, and facilities and the soccer-rich area we're

Based on UD's recent soccer past, he faces an imposing uphill climb. He finished his inaugural season as a head coach 6-8-2, the program's 10th consecutive losing season, and faces the task of developing a winner in the Colonial Athletic Association, one of the NCAA's top Division

Even his cast-iron resolve must have been tested late last summer during a pre-season scrimmage with Division III Messiah

Friday night lights returns

Newark High to get its lights; raising money for project now the top priority

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

There's a strong possibility the Newark Yellowjackets will be able to play their entire 2007 home schedule under the lights at Hoffman Stadium this fall, after opener is scheduled for Friday, September 14, against Concord. The game has a 7 p.m. kickoff, and now it appears the game will not have to be moved to Saturday

A total of $27,000 has been raised to replace the stadium's 20year-old, unsafe lighting system. Some additional maintenance will also be completed.

District Christina School officials announced at the end of the school year that the current lighting system was unsafe, and therefore could no longer be used, out of concern for spectator

"We've had our community take on this cause, to keep the Newark tradition of Friday night games going," said football coach Butch Simpson. "The community has made a statement to keep the games under the lights. It's amazing, witnessing this history at Newark High School."

Simpson said he extends his thanks to those have taken up the cause. "People with little or no connection to our football program have helped out.Parents of our band members are getting involved. People who understood through in a big way, and they have touched our hearts," he

Simpson added the goal was not to upgrade the facility, but to maintain what was already in

"Football weekends begin on Friday nights, at a high school game," said Simpson, "and after a nerve-wracking summer, I'm cautiously optimistic that we'll be ready to go on opening night."

The University of Delaware football team, looking to rebound from last year's 5-6 campaign, was picked No. 19 in the pre-season The Sports Network Top 25 poll announced Tuesday morn-

Delaware, one of four Colonial Athletic Association teams to appear in the top 25, received 340 total points. The Blue Hens were the only team in the top 25 that posted a losing record a year ago and were one of only four teams that did not finish the 2006 campaign ranked in the top 25.

The Blue Hens, who will open the season Aug. 30 at CAA foe William & Mary, have now been picked in the top 25 in three pre-season polls. Earlier this summer, Delaware was picked No. 24 in the College Sporting News poll and No. 20 in the Sports Media Entertainment Network poll.

Two-time defending champion Appalachian State was the preseason No. 1 pick for the second straight year as the Mountaineers collected 67 of a possible 71 first place votes for 1,771 points. Overwhelming but not devastating

In Delaware's first nine regular-season games, the Blue Hens won four games and tied two others. Of their eight losses, they were never beaten by more than two goals and lost five by only a goal. The four Blue Hen conference wins matched Delaware's combined total from the previous four seasons.

Thirteen lettermen from that squad have returned for preseason, including five of the top six scorers and two experienced goalkeepers. Hennessy also assembled a promising recruit-ing class led by transfers Steve Cavalier from the University of Pittsburgh and Tolu Ololowafe from the University of Michigan.

And despite belonging to a highly-rated soccer conference nationally, Hennessy has upped the stakes. He added non-conference foes Duke, North Carolina State, and Rutgers, all three road games and the latter two at the top of the schedule. He explains that to build a quality program, teams must play quality opponents.

"I saw improvement last year from beginning to end, but I want this to be a nationally-recognized program and we don't have that yet," he said. "We got to be positive, bash down the old stuff and continue building brick by Hennessy's passion for the sport apparently has no bounds. While he has embarked on a major campaign to turn the UD soccer fortunes around, he also has stepped out into the community, working with some of the state's soccer leaders and players. He also has enlisted Blue Hen players and alumni to contribute time to activities on and off the field. This past summer they helped organize a 5K race that raised $2,500 for the Prevent Child Abuse Delaware organiza-

"I don't want our kids to exist in a bubble as student-athletes,' he said. "The modern world is such a connected place . . . I want our players to get out into the community and help with social causes when we have time.'

Coaching doesn't have to be a rocket science, but Hennessy a scholar in molecular biology - appears determined to show the academic side of athletes . . . and still win.

The 2007 college football season is only a few weeks away, but don't fret if you can't get to see some of the University of Delaware home or away games this year.

As preparations continue for the inaugural season of Colonial Athletic Association Football, featuring former Atlantic-10 teams such as the U of D, Villanova, U-Mass, and James Madison, CAA Football Commissioner Tom Yeager has announced the league has signed on to a 31-game tele-vision schedule on CN8, the Comcast Network and Comcast SportsNet.

'We reached an agreement that every team in the CAA would be on at least once," said Yeager," and after that, the best game of the day would be selected.

The Blue Hens will have a big part during the year, including the season opener, when Delaware travels to Zable Stadium in Williamsburg, VA, to play against the William & Mary Tribe on Thursday night, August 30. Kickoff is scheduled for 7:30

"We have acquired the largest FCS conference television package in the country," said Yeager.

behind the fund raising campaign is David Dworsky, a former Yellowjacket quarterback in 1980, and currently a vice president of card services for Bank of America.

"We have lights and poles, but one of our concerns about finishing on time is the weather," said Dworsky. "And, of course, we still have to finish raising the rest of the $100,000 for the project.'

Dworksy explained about $27,000 has been raised so far, thanks to private and corporate doners. So how will the rest of the money be earned? "That's a great question," said Dworsky, "It's going to take a lot of work, but we're ready to finish what we

One way to accomplish the goal is through fund raisers

The first of many is a Bike and Blues Festival this weekend, and they plan to sell a lot of t-shirts during the upcoming football season and school year.

The next big event is set for August 31st, when the Jackets play St. Elizabeth's in a preseason scrimmage. Normally, only a handful of people attend the pre-season action.

"But we're hoping for a big crowd, because we'll have lots of activities for children, and some local places are donating food and other items to help raise some money," Dworsky said.

Dworsky added the various school clubs and organizations will also conduct fund raising events the rest of the year.

DART buses and the Newark trol-

Dawn Hopkins, a representative for DelDOT, said in by e-mail that the transit hub will be built on the parcel of land where the vacant No Name Pizza Restaurant is currently located and will also link bike and pedestrian paths. "The new transit hub will provide a place of coming together for all local transit services," Hopkins said. It will help consolidate the interconnectivity of the Delaware Transit Corporation, City of Newark and the University of Delaware."

According to DelDOT, the transit hub will include the construction of a 12-foot by 32-foot bus shelter and the widening of Farmer Lane. Hopkins said she expected these additions to ease car traffic flow between Main Street and Delaware Avenue and to centralize bus activity.

"The location and visibility of the hub will reinforce the ideal that transit is an environmentally friendly, important, safe, convenient reliable and cost-efficient mode when traveling to and from the Newark community," Hopkins said.

Funk said that the plan has been in the works since 2004. Many city officials and town residents originally opposed the project because it recommended buses to transport riders through Newark. However, the agreement to use trolleys instead of buses for the transportation system was the major compromise in pushing the plan forward, Funk said.

Two trolleys that will be used in Newark are currently being used in Wilmington while the transit plan is finalized.

plan is finalized.

"We are trying to make Main Street more adult and young adult friendly," said Funk.

The project is expected to cost about $1.7 million and will be funded by the State of Delaware and the Federal Highway Administration.

Resegregation could be shortcoming of NSA plan

► SCHOOLS, from 1

fault of the school board, it was not the District administrators nor the human resource personnel, it was my own [teachers'] union that held things up.'

Boyle was RIF'd from his position as a fourth grade teacher at Stubbs Intermediate School. At previous board meetings, he eloquently expressed his belief in himself and other RIF'd teachers, telling boardmembers that the students at Stubbs needed highquality teachers and he wanted to be there for them.

[The school board] told me to hold on, and thank God I did, because I got a call to come back," Boyle said. "I've gotten my certification as a Special Ed teacher, so I asked what schools needed one - as soon as I heard Stubbs, I said 'stop right there; that's where I want to be.'

Boyle also had high praise for Stubbs principal Mae Gaskins, one of the downsized District administrators who were bitterly resented for being assigned in another RIF'd educator's place in 2006. "She is a true leader," Boyle said, "and I'm so happy to be back working for her. My colleagues [at Stubbs] are happy to be back, also,"

Financial Review Committee (FRC) chair Frank McIntosh told the board that he and his colleagues found District finances in "good shape" as of June. "The projections indicated that we received $6.6 million more than budgeted for 2007," McIntosh reported, "and spent $16.8 million less than budgeted. The District made two repayments to the State of $1.2 million and $1.6 million [toward the $12.2 million borrowed in 2006 to cover the District's deficit]."

Unlike last year at this time, there is not yet a public outcry for school supplies, either. "Only 62 percent of the budgeted amount [for Supplies and Materials at school sites] had been spent by the end of May," McIntosh said. "There was concern that schools were not spending what could be spent; but we're happy to report that they found it within themselves to pick up the pace of spending in the last month of the school year.'

McIntosh cautioned the board, however, that belt-tightening and conservative spending were not over, yet. "Overall, the financial performance of the District these past 12 months has been extraordinary," he reported. "While this is true...diligence is the order of the day as there are heavy obligations due to the State over the next four years.

District financial officer Patrick O'Rourke echoed the FRC's analysis of his department's management in the 2006-07 school year. "A District our size should have a Reserve balance of $8 million," O'Rourke told the board. "We have managed to put back only $1.5 million in our Reserve this year, but that's a huge success story.

In addition to establishing a Reserve and repaying a portion of the State loan, O'Rourke also reported that none of the standard units [educators] were being paid out of the District's local funds - a practice that led to the multimillion-dollar deficit in May 2006. O'Rourke stated that "the local payroll will be tight" until October when tax revenue is released to school districts in Delaware, but the District could manage with monies on hand. He also noted that, with continued watchfulness, the District could be expected to repay the remaining $9.4 million due the State by 2010 as required.

O'Rourke said loss of tax revenue to Charter schools and increased costs for teacher salaa concern. "We're doing everything we can to stem the tide of students Choicing out of the District," he said, "but that's likely to increase in the near future.'

School superintendent Lillian Lowery was almost giddy with relief and hope after an agonizing first year in the District. "I nearly fell off my seat to hear kudos for our human resource department from Mr. Boyle," she said. "At this time of year, they are under siege - at least until the Sept. 30 unit count comes in [and more teachers could be brought

Lowery reported on the Neighborhood Schools Act plan that is slowly taking shape. (See Newark Post issue, Aug. 10). "The District went into this process with a proposal," Lowery said, "but the public came to the meetings and said, 'let's change that a little;' so the administrators let them take us in the new direction and it has paid dividends. This has been a really collaborative effort by all our community."

School board vice-president John Mackenzie agreed. "The [NSA] design plan has taken a very different form than I was expecting before we started," he said. "The ugly reality, though, is the tax impact the new plan will have.

Mackenzie estimated that the cost would mean an almost 3 percent increase in the local tax rate. 'It doesn't sound like a lot, but it will take a hard sell," Mackenzie said. "Also, we're last in line the State raised taxes, the County raised taxes, the city raised taxes and we're the only entity that has to ask the taxpayer's permission to do it."

Boardmember George Evans expressed worry about the pub-lic's apparent desire to keep District schools in Wilmington open and also putting a midis, this plan puts us back where we were," Evans said. "It isolates students in the city for the first eight years of their education; but, it's gonna' come down some people have to be careful what they ask for - resegregation may be the shortcoming of this plan."

4-Hers take home state fair prizes

ewark area 4-Hers competed in many events at the Delaware State Fair this year. Several residents took home prizes for successes in the archery and speaking competitions.

Delaware State 4-H hosted its first ever archery competition this year. The 4-H contestants displayed their skill and accuracy on two different types of bows: a compound bow, a stiff bow that uses pulleys to bend the limbs, and the recurve bow, which is a smaller, energy efficient bow.

Winners from New Castle County in the intermediate division for compound bow included Hunter Pleasanton of Bear, first place winner, and Joshua Schea of Newark, third place winner.

Delaware 4-Hers were also given the chance to compete in a statewide public speaking competition. The contestants, who had previously won contests at the county level, further honed their public speaking skills, practiced projecting their voices and overcame that last little bit of stage fright to speak to their audiences.

They competed in four different divisions, determined by age, and gave speeches that lasted from two minutes, for the youngest group, to up to seven minutes for the high schoolers.

Winners from New Castle County included the following:

Beginner (8-9 years old)
- Third place winner was Bobby

Johnston of Newark – "Getting Messy at Environmental Science Camp."

Novice (10-11 years old) - Second place winner was Daniel Schea of Newark – "Frogs of Our Time."
