Three Welsh men stood on 33,000 acres in northern Delaware in 1701 as William Penn handed them a land grant that set the wheels of the area's history in motion. The area, which now encompasses Glasgow, St. George's, and parts of Newark, was soon known as Pencader.

The 300-year-old event will be celebrated tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Glasgow High School. The Delaware Academy of Science and the Iron Hill Museum created Pencader Heritage Day with a number of cosponsors, including the Christina School District, Newark Senior Center and Wintertur Museum.

Newark Police are investigating two similar incidents involving assaults on women within a 10-hour period in the city earlier this week.

According to Sgt. Gerald Simpson, Newark detectives couldn't say for certain on Wednesday that the incidents are linked or the same suspect. "Certainly the fact that they happened within 10 hours in the same general area by a suspect with a similar description, strongly suggests it is the same person," said Simpson. "It would be better if it were only one person we were dealing with, but we just don't know, yet."

The first incident is a kidnapping that occurred between 9:15 and 9:30 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 1. The victim was in her vehicle, in a parking lot in the 100 block of Madison Drive between townhomes on Madison Drive and Dickey Park, when the suspect confronted her. The suspect, described as a black male, about six feet tall, with a skinny build, one-inch Afro hair style, wearing a black puffy jacket with a hood and square stitching and blue jeans, got in her vehicle and demanded that she start driving.

"The area has the history of Iron Hill mining, Finns from Long Island settling here, being developed as University of Delaware, and a Chrysler plant was built here. There is a rich history of keeping up with the world."

Glasgow High School is "in the center of the Pencader area," said assistant principal Bill Conley who will be the master of ceremonies for the event.

In Welsh, Pencader means "high seat," as in, a high seat of government and clergy, Conley said.

It might be that the Pencader area was to be the center of the Welsh government here, which may be how they came up with the name 300 years ago, he added.

The day will open on the Glasgow football field with the Kirk Middle School band, Glasgow High School band, Gauger-Cobbs band and the Closed during construction from April-September 2002

New Castle County held a groundbreaking for the $5.5 million expansion of the Newark Library on Friday, Sept. 28.

The 11,700 square foot addition will expand the Newark library to 26,000 square feet. Features new to the facility will include a new meeting room, a quiet-study area, the Delaware Collection Room on local history, an area designated specifically for teens, two small two-person study rooms and a coffee bar. Some of the existing familiar features at Newark to be expanded include the adult area as well as the space allotted for audio-visual media such as videocassettes, CDs and DVDs. The largest increase of the existing departments will be dedicated to the children's area, which will double in September through March 2002. The library will remain open during this time.

The second phase of construction will run from April through September. This will include the renovations to the existing structure. The Library will be closed during this six-month period.

The projected grand reopening is scheduled for October 2002.

The architectural firm is Morris Ritchie Associates Inc. of Towson, Md.

The construction management firm is Barclay-White Inc. of Christiana.

The prominent Charles Parks statue will be removed during the construction period, then be relocated to a more appropriate area in front of the building.

The main entrance and exit to the library will be relocated to East Main Street, with the Library Avenue exit being retained.

Continues to be a major concern

The Christina District School Board recently joined the Delaware Board of Education in refusing to accept applications for new Charter schools this year.

According to district officials, Christina lacks adequate staff to make sure those who wish to open a charter school meet the necessary qualifications.

The lack of available space for a new charter school in the district is also a factor in school board members' six-to-one vote

The open application period for new charter schools is from Nov. 1 to Dec. 31 each year. But the state Department of Education decided earlier this month to not accept applications this period, citing the need to get more acquainted with state policies regarding charter schools.

"Our first priority is to support the 10 existing charter schools in this state," said Jennifer Davis, secretary of the Policy and Administrative Services branch of the DOE.

Although the state will not be accepting any charters this period, any individual or group that wishes to open a charter school can still apply to the district in

Brookside Shopping Center struggling to revive

Happy Harry's drug store, Wilmington Trust bank and national retailer among incoming tenants

By KATY CIAMARICONE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Approximately one year after a winter fire destroyed some of its stores, the Brookside Shopping Center will be finally getting a makeover within the next six months.

Owners Capano and Sons so far have leased two shops within the center, former home to the Brookside Bowling alley that burned down and never reopened. According to James Cubbage, the state fire marshal, the cause of the fire is still under investigation.

The new and improved site will include a Happy Harry's store and pharmacy, a high-tech Wilmington Trust and a national retail store, as well as some other retail stores, said Louis Capano III.

"We're just trying to bring that shopping center back to life," Capano said. "We want to get it looking warm - I think it will start looking more appealing once we get that Happy Harry's and then a national retailer in there."

The 11,000-square-foot Happy Harry's will feature a drive-through window so locals can pick up medicines and other remedies without even getting out of the car.

"It's supposed to be a top-of-the-line Happy Harry's," said State Representative Stephanie Ulbrich (R-Newark South.) "Apparently, it's going to be a drive-up facility, so, many people in the area will benefit from that. And it's going to be pretty large - larger than the Happy Harry's in College Square."

Ulbrich said she is always happy to see an area that's damaged become rebuilt and revitalized. "And I'm always happy to see the rebuilding of facilities that already exist, rather than finding new places to build. New Castle County has about as much as it can hold right now."

The owners are negotiating with representatives from three national retail stores to decide which one will be located in the now dirt-covered remnants of the Brookside Bowling Alley. That property will be rebuilt to 25,000 square feet.

Capano said they also plan a freestanding Wilmington Trust kiosk within the center parking lot, at the site of the former Firestone building, which has been demolished. The bank will be operated solely by machines and modeled after the Wilmington Trust facility at Boyd's Corner.

Talk of renovations, however, has sparked some unanswered questions for business owners inside the shopping center.

James Doody, owner of the Brookside News Center, wants to know about the future of his store, which has been closed since August, due to flooding. The newsstand was not directly damaged by the February fire, but it endured significant smoke and water damage and was never totally repaired, he said. "We've (since) had water damage every time it rains."

He finally had to close down the newsstand on Aug. 9 after more than 240 gallons of water gushed in during a severe rainstorm. He has been unable to reopen since that time.

Capano said he is working on relocating the newsstand and other tenants to other parts of the shopping center. He said he plans to either relocate the Books and News store or renovate the rained-out space.

Other business owners also have more questions than answers. "It's just been rumors galore lately," said Cheryl Roberts, whose family has owned the Brookside Country Maid since 1983.

On Tuesday, Roberts said she heard that the Brookside News Center will be relocated next to the Country Maid, into the former produce store site. The produce store closed earlier this year because financially, "they just couldn't make it," Roberts said.

A Capano and Sons construction superintendent on the scene said his crewmen have spent the past two weeks tearing off the fire damage in the vacated area and the newsstand. The company was held up from work for a while because they had to get building permits; but, other than that, he would not confirm or deny any rumors.

Md. man breaking into cars in Pike Creek

New Castle County Police arrested Daniel Taylor, 22, of Old Telegraph Road in Maryland, and charged him with two counts of felony theft, misdemeanor theft and trespassing.

On Friday, Sept. 28, Officer Joe Lear contacted a maintenance man from the Arundel Apartments in Pike Creek who reported a vagrant has been sleeping in the laundry rooms of the complex. Officer Lear contacted residents of the complex and identified the subject as Daniel Taylor. A computer inquiry revealed Taylor was wanted for not paying various fines in New Castle County.

On Sept. 29, at 6:45 a.m., Police found Taylor sleeping inside the laundry room area of the apartment complex in possession of a hypodermic syringe, change and several compact discs. After arresting Taylor, Police learned he had allegedly broken into nearly 20 cars in the area of Milltown Road and Duncan Road earlier that morning. Taylor had broken into approximately 50 additional cars over the past two weeks in the area of Sherwood Park and Arundel.

Mobile park owner must permit oil deliveries to tenants

Attorney General M. Jane Brady announced last week that the Consumer Protection Unit of the Attorney General's office has successfully secured continuing deliveries of heating oil to residents of the Maple Square Mobile Home Park, located off West Chestnut Hill Road near Newark. Superior Court Judge John E. Babiarz Jr. granted the State's motion which requested an end to impediments to the deliveries, production of documents, and payment of costs related to the filing of the motion.

The consumer Protection Unit had received between six and ten complaints from tenants during the past several weeks indicating that Maple Square, and owner Harry R. Messick, had blocked oil deliveries intended for tenants living there, ostensibly requiring that the tenants convert their mobile homes to propane heating. Conversion to propane heating can cost in excess of $1,000, and many of the tenants are retired and living on fixed incomes.

The court order also directs the defendants to pay $250 to the Consumer Protection Fund to compensate for the State's costs.

Delaware National Guard unit activated

On Saturday, Sept. 29, the Delaware National Guard's 166 Security Forces Squadron, part of the 166th Airlift Wing, based on the New Castle County Airport's Air National Guard Base, was called to active duty as part of the partial mobilization authorized by President Bush. The unit is activated for up to 12 months, unless sooner relieved.

"The squadron consists of air-personnel trained as Security Police and in its pre-mobilization role, provided force protection and facility security for our Air Base," said Col. Ron Mehan, 166th Airlift Wing commander. "What their exact role will be for the duration of the mobilization has yet to be determined," he

The woman was able to get free after putting up a struggle as the suspect threatened her. She ran up to a group of persons standing outside nearby apartment buildings. They let her use the phone to call the police but the suspect fled in an unknown direction before the police arrived.

"The only real difference in the descriptions is the height," said Simpson, "and people often do not see things in the same way, so that is not necessarily significant."

Simpson said the department has not had an incident of this kind recently. "There has been nothing of this nature in a long time in Newark," said Simpson. "Yesterday, while the officers were kicking it around, no one could think of any other incidents with suspects that might have been similar to this - (not even) a purse snatching-type incident that didn't appear to be an assault at the time."

Newark Police patrols are on the alert for persons matching the description of the suspect, but they are not targeting any one area, according to Simpson. "We can't say a person would go back (to the same locales)," he said. "Each time officers come on duty they are given information on recent incidents and suspects and they will be on the lookout for anyone meeting these descriptions."

Police are asking that anyone who might have witnessed anything to call Detective Ellen Marshall at 302-366-7110, ext. 137, or Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333.

Local school students raising funds to help victims of disaster

Garage sale, baked goods at Newark Charter tomorrow

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Fifth- and sixth-graders at The Newark Charter School are hosting a garage sale tomorrow to benefit the victims of the tragedy in New York. Household items, clothes and baked goods will be available, rain or shine, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the school on Barksdale Road in Newark. All proceeds will be sent to the Red Cross.

Schools in the Christina District also have been participating in patriotic/USA pride activities in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C. Many are involved in fundraising events and other activities intended to honor and benefit the families of victims, rescue workers, and various charities.

According to Judy Baldwin at the Sterck School for the Deaf, students there have been making star-shaped pins which they sell for $2 each. "The children in the dorms made them - each one is painted differently, but they are all red, white and blue," Baldwin said. "The proceeds are going for the 'four-legged' rescue workers in New York because the children learned that the dogs need boots, antibiotic creams, food, gauze, etc."

According to Maclary Elementary School principal Richelle Talbert, six Christina sites - including students, staff and parents - participated in collecting items such as tissues, aspirin, coffee, canned goods, water, bottled juices, Gatorade, drink boxes and pouches, creamer, sugar and magazines. In total, an estimated 60 medium-sized boxes were filled with donations. Participating sites were: Maclary Elementary, McVey Elementary, Stubbs, Elementary, West Park Place Elementary, Leisure Elementary, and Special Services. The donations were shipped to the USO in Dover.

Gallaher Elementary held a Hearts Across America event in the grassy area out in front of the school. Students, families and staff there donated nearly $1,000 in change to benefit the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund.

According to principal Josephus Clark, first-grade students held hands and stood in the form of a heart, second-graders formed another heart, and third-graders another. Fourth-graders formed a heart to encircle the other three. A brief ceremony commemorating the victims, and acknowledging the fundraising took place during this event.

McVey Elementary School collected $468.13 for the Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund in classroom jars. Students there also wrote letters of thanks and praise to the firefighters, police and Emergency Medical Technicians in New York City and those who responded to the crash site at the Pentagon. "I'm proud of the efforts of all Americans, but especially of our children," said McVey principal Sue Zigler.

Newark High School students, staff and parents created a "supporting hands and hearts" banner to give to one of the fire companies that responded to the Students at Downes Elementary School are running laps for fitness as well as fundraising this year. "We called this program 'Trek Across America' in the past," said teacher's aide Sue Coffing. "This year we're calling it 'Trek For America' and donating money from sponsors to the Sept. 11 Fund in New York." Students in the fitness program run laps three days a week during their lunch times, trying to reach the number of miles it would take to span the United States.

Existing businesses hope renovations bring more customers for all stores

"I don't know what's going on, exactly," he said.

Bobbie Young, who has worked at the Brookside Laundromat for the past five years, said she heard that a Charcoal Pit is going to be put on the site. "That's just what I heard," she said. "People talk."

Despite the lack of confirmed information about the renovations, Young, like most retailers in the center, said she thinks they will improve sales for the existing businesses.

Right now, the half of the center adjacent to the Books and News is completely torn down, with a fence around it. "I was afraid they were gonna leave it that way forever; it's been so long since the fire," Young said. She said having a Happy Harry's a few doors down will help bring attention to her store. "People still come in and say, 'I didn't

For the three months that Ramos has worked at Dollar General, business has been steady. "But I think if we get the other stores it will be a lot better," she said. "People see the shopping center like this and they think it's closed."

Ramos doesn't think Happy Harry's will pose competition to her store. "No, their prices are too high; I'm not scared."

Agostino Ferrandelli, who has owned Agostino's pizza shop next to the Country Maid for four years, said he will be glad to have new neighbors. "More stores mean more traffic and more traffic means more customers," he said. And he believes that a Happy Harry's will help the overall atmosphere of the center. "It which the school would be located. But local school boards can vote to also reject charter applications, as the Christina board members did. The district will probably vote on the issue every year from now on, said Deborah Rodenhouser, supervisor of student assignments for Christina District.

"We don't have adequate staff to be able to do what we need to do in the first place," she said. And though charter schools take students away from their assigned schools in the district, she said, districts do not receive funding to support charter schools.

Administrators must also save space within the home district for students who decide to go to charter schools, but later choose to attend school in their home district again.

No individual or group has ever applied to the Christina School District to get a charter approved, but with the state not accepting applications this year, there is the possibility that some could, she said. "We're just not equipped to deal with it."

Since 1997, the number of Delaware charter schools has grown from one to 10, with five more scheduled to open next year. Those five schools will not be affected by the board's decision. "We need time to review current policies and procedures in light of recent challenges in opening new schools," Davis said.

Three new charter schools opened this year on time – the Newark Charter School, Kumba Academy and the Georgetown Charter School – but not without delays. "They each had challenges – they all had site issues," Davis said. "One (challenge) is finding a suitable facility and making sure it will meet all requirements."

Gregory Meece, director of the Newark Charter School, which opened on schedule last month, said he understands the board members' decision to halt applications for now.

"They just haven't built up the structure within the Department of Education to handle the amount of applications they're getting," said Meece.

According to Meece, the charter approval process is time-consuming for DOE members, as well as for the charter school staff.

The Newark Charter School was admitted in March of 2000, and after that, NCS board members had to meet periodic checkpoints to open on time.

But even with public support and more than enough student applications, there were a few problems getting it off the ground. The founding members had to search high and low to find a location which was properly zoned – and had suitable space to fit the school. DOE members even extended the December deadline so they could secure a spot.

The problems were ironed out; the school eventually opened on time and is running smoothly, but it was just one in six charters state officials had to review last year. And it wasn't the only one with hurdles in the way of its opening.

The process is compounded for the state when there are multiple charter school applications being filed each year.

The state received six applications this year, five of which they approved. The MOT Charter School in Middletown was rejected because of delays in the opening process.

Charter Schools too desirable ?

The Christina School District has followed the State Board of Education in establishing a moratorium of new applications for Charter Schools.

Six years after the General Assembly approved having Charter Schools in Delaware, there could be 15 of the facilities throughout the state in December 2002.

This does not include any groups that are, and still may be, applying to set up schools within the coming months. Some local school districts, like Red Clay for instance, will still accept applications this year.

Obviously, parents, educators and communities around the state are solidly in favor of the concept of Charter Schools. But, even after five years, state board members claim they are not prepared to deal with the number of applications that have been made annually.

Christina officials, with apparently no incentive to welcome the facilities at all, said they are "not equipped" to accept any applications.

We can understand that the system needs to be evaluated and retooled; but, we would not want this one-year hold to become a permanent excuse to stall the institution of new Charter Schools.

Despite, misgivings and failures in individual instances, established Charter Schools around the country have been showing success.

The Center for Education Reform issued data in September indicating "Charter Schools are working, parents are happy with them, traditional school districts have been propelled to make improvements and children are thriving in the setting..."

The results from CER's survey of 346 of the 2,030 Charter Schools operating in 2000-2001 showed that most charters serve students persistently underserved by the current system — including at-risk, minority and low-income students.

Two U.S. Department of Education studies confirmed that Charter Schools drive local districts to implement new educational programs or make changes in existing programs.

An Arizona study found that the longer a student attends a Charter School, the greater the academic gains — with no similar results found among district students.

I recently visited your community for the funeral services for Matthew Flocco. I just wanted to say that I was so impressed with the compassion that I saw in your community! While traveling to the cemetery, I saw a young woman who stopped her car on the road and was standing in the median waving our nation's flag at every car that went by. I don't know who she was but, I could tell that she was a very proud American! I also saw so many people that came out of their businesses to pay their respects. This was truly a touching moment for me!

Your online newspaper is a great way for me to see what is going on in my home country as well as my hometown. I am currently studying abroad as an exchange student in Japan, after recently graduating from Newark High School. It brings tears to my eyes when I see how much patriotism people in my country are showing. I only wish it didn't take a tragedy of this proportion to see it. Japan is very supportive of America's anti-terrorism, and I find comfort in talking to my friends here about the tragedy. I hope things calm down soon, but until then, I will keep reading! God Bless America!

Mr. Caldwell was 49 years old and was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 2, 1877.

He was one of the first graduates of the Jacob Tome Institute and the honor man of the class.

He was principal of the high school at Chesapeake City, for nineteen years. Ten years ago he was made superintendent of county schools.

George W. Hill died suddenly

On Monday Newark sustained another sad loss in the passing of George W. Hill, one of Newark's oldest and most beloved residents.

Mr. Hill, whose 88th birthday was Aug. 7, was taken with a stroke of apoplexy while reading the paper on his front porch on Chapel street.

Mr. Hill worked for Curtis Brothers in the local plant for 25 years. After this, he worked in the

It completely overflowed its banks, taking six feet of the Berg's backyard with it. The water surrounded the house, flooded the garage, moved railroad ties from the driveway and carried off picnic benches.

The force of the creek was such that it ate into the bank along North Star Road, forcing state highway crews to dump dirt and concrete blocks into the creek to prevent further erosion and possible damage to the road.

Enrollment drops in area schools

School enrollment in the New Castle County School District has dropped 5,067 since September 1978.

Because of the low enrollment, plans have begun in the district to close some of the schools. At the school board meeting last Thursday, board watched the puzzle-like construction along Route 273/Ogletown Road for the past year will be glad to know that the pieces may soon come together.

According to Harry Cooper and Bob Muir, DelDOT engineers for the $20.8 million project, ramps and two eastbound lanes over the bridge at Route 4 could be open as early as November.

Widening Rt. 896 slowly but surely

The two northbound lanes on the ever-widening Route 896 could be ready for traffic by the end of the year, according to project engineer Joe Serbu.

"We'll have those lanes ready and striped for north and south traffic first," explained Serbu.

"Then we'll shift traffic onto that while we finish the road where the existing 896 is now."

GUEST OPINION

The cost of doing nothing about alcohol abuse in Newark

By Richard Waibel

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

The Downtown Newark Partnership's vision statement describes what we all are trying to achieve: "By the year 2003, Downtown Newark will be a highly friendly downtown. Its buildings will be 100 percent filled with a diverse business mix that serves residents, seniors, teens, kids and students alike. Downtown will be the place to find upscale, unusual "non-mall" shops that draw local residents and people from other cities. Its business mix and uniqueness will make Downtown Newark a great place to shop, stroll, sit and spend the day."

Following the economic enhancement study conducted by HyettPalma in 1997 and the formation of the Downtown Newark Partnership, Main Street has experienced considerable redevelopment. In addition, issues such as traffic flow and parking are being studied and addressed. Unfortunately, there are still too many vacant storefronts, which could very easily be transformed into bars catering to college students.

Yogi Berra said it best, "When you come to a fork in the road, take it!" The City of Newark and the economic redevelopment of Main Street have come to a fork in the road. One fork will continue to see more and more establishments opening up on Main Street that depend upon the sale of alcohol. Communities that have taken this path have found that this leads to higher crime rates, more alcohol-related accidents, vandalism, and neighborhood deterioration (see <http://www.health.org/gov-pubs/PHD822/aar.htm> for more information). Happily, there is another alternative: using a campus-community initiative to create changes that discourage business practices which promote high-risk drinking.

All agree that Main Street's continued vitality depends on many kinds of retail stores, and few would disagree that professionally and responsibly managed dining and entertainment establishments benefit other retail businesses. It goes without saying that this economic redevelopment strategy depends on a proper balance of businesses to enhance the intended family-friendly environment.

Recently, the number of Main Street businesses selling alcohol has increased. Unfortunately, many of these establishments have happy hours, time-limited drink specials, and similar promotions that often encourage people to drink more than they normally would. As residents have noted, the proliferation of establishments offering such "deals" makes the downtown increasingly less appealing for other retail establishments. Just as bad, the secondary effects of high-risk drinking flow into the neighborhoods and onto our local roadways with tragic results. It is worth noting that studies show that alcohol consumption increases as the price decreases; conversely, drinking, even by the heaviest drinkers, declines as the price of alcohol increases.

For the past five years, the University of Delaware and the city of Newark, with a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, have been working to curb binge drinking by changing the attitudes, policies, and practices affecting high-risk drinking, both on and off the college campus. The Building Responsibility Campus/Community Coalition differs from past efforts by identifying such drinking practices as a public health issue, and—at the same time—emphasizing that the rights of the community take precedence over the behavior of the individual. In addition to holding individuals responsible for their own behavior, the Building Responsibility Coalition has identified environmental factors that contribute to alcohol abuse. These include alcohol advertising and marketing, institutional practices, as well as social and cultural beliefs about alcohol and its consumption.

Following a city council workshop in June, a series of ordinances and ordinance changes are being written to address some of the irresponsible practices associated with the sale of alcohol. Of course, there are inherent costs for enforcement and implementation. But, what are the costs of doing nothing? The current costs to the community—in terms of law enforcement, deterioration of property values, economic influence on other retail businesses, reduction in the quality of life in neighborhoods, vandalism, personal injury, crime and other violence, not to mention quality of life—are substantial, and they are generally hidden from the public.

Some believe that high-risk drinking among college students is primarily a University problem. However, since much of the drinking takes place off-campus and alcohol is not sold by the University, it is also a community problem. While the University has made many changes including initiating a three-strikes-and-out suspension policy and sending letters to the parents of students found guilty for violations of the campus alcohol policy; a 5-Star Greek Rating system, and increasing the number of alcohol-free activities both on and off the campus, all agree that more can be done. Further, the City of Newark has addressed the issue with deed restrictions, ordinance changes, and enforcement practices. Critics maintain that if changes are made in Newark, the problems associated with alcohol will be moved outside of town. But, it is very unlikely that responsible retail practices associated with the sale of alcohol will force students to drive to Elsmere or Stanton.

So Yogi is right, we have come to a fork. Let's take the right one so that Newark remains a family-friendly, student-welcoming, bustling, prosperous town.

Going on with our lives is healthy – but not necessarily obvious or easy

By Dr. Nan F. Schiowitz Ph.D.

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

A financial expert, being interviewed on the radio, was asked whether New Yorkers would be able to comply with President Bush's directive to "resume normalcy" in the coming days and weeks. The expert replied, "You know, it's like when parents die, or a friend passes away, or when someone is killed in a car crash, you suck in your gut and go on."

Is this man for real? Does he really believe what he is saying? And, even if we could manage to do his bidding, would we want to? Is it healthy or even possible for us to put aside all that we have seen, heard, and experienced over this agonizing week of death and devastation?

The answer to the last question is a definite NO! So then, our challenge is to somehow face into and cope with the multitude of losses we have suffered since September 11th.

First of all, we need to realize that loss is extremely stressful and painful, and that none of us have been spared. For some, the losses have been very personal—a friend, colleague or family member died in the buildings' collapse, or is missing and presumed dead. New Yorkers and residents of our nation's capital are being confronted with the acrid stench and smoke, increased security, and drastically changed landscape of their everyday world.

These are concrete reminders of what has been lost. For those of us further removed, the losses are less palpable, more abstract, but no less real or personal. As Americans, we have lost our innocence and basic sense of security. Riveted to our TVs, we watched over and over as two major symbols of American economic and military might crashed and burned before our very eyes.

For those of us who could not leave our screens, the need to see it over and over was the first step in our grieving process. We were in shock, and needed to face the reality of what had happened. Only a few days ago, many people admitted that they had shed no tears since learning of the tragedy. "What's wrong with me?" they lamented. "I'm a loving, compassionate person and I feel nothing."

Grief or bereavement literally means, "to be deprived by death," and is a complicated affair. It appears in different forms over time, and can be masked by other emotional states or symptoms. We know someone is grieving when a person talks about their loss, weeps, or shows sorrow in other ways.

Many of us have cried our way through the week after the tragedies, but there are countless others who were, like my friend, shell-shocked and numb.

Another friend—normally sensitive and brought to tears over smaller matters, has felt nothing but rage, and struggled to channel it in appropriate ways. Others are feeling lost and confused, hopeless and despairing, and even physically sick in response to this tragedy.

For those of us who have come through relatively unscathed, we may be vulnerable to a kind of "survivor guilt." Why was I spared, when so many innocent people were not? Is it legitimate for me to feel lucky and grateful for what I have, when all around me is lamentation and pain.

While these are normal and common responses to catastrophe, it is important to move through them—getting stuck in such feelings breeds depression and powerlessness.

It's also important to remember grief comes in waves. If we stay open to the painful feelings—"riding the waves" of fear, yearning, sadness, and anger—they will pass.

It takes courage and fortitude to withstand wave after wave, especially when we don't know when they will subside. We are tempted to "suck in our gut and go on." But, if we follow this advice, we risk getting caught in the undertow of chronic sadness, despair, and other physical or psychological health problems.

So, how do we mourn and live at the same time? Seek out caring people and find friends or family who understand and will listen. Join support groups with others who are dealing with similar problems.

Connect with others and tell how you are feeling. Sharing will help you work through the grief and feel less alone. Take care of your health. Maintain regular contact with your family doctor or therapist. Eat well, exercise, and get plenty of rest.

Accept that life is for the living—it takes great effort to re-engage in work and relationships, and not dwell on your losses, but is a critical element in healing.

Try to hold off on making any major changes, such as moving, remarrying, changing jobs, or having another child. Give yourself time to adjust to your losses. Be patient—it can take months or even years to absorb a major loss and accept your changed life.

Realize that well-intentioned friends may not realize this when they urge you to "let go" and "move on." Seek outside help when necessary—if your grief seems like it is too much to bear, or is interfering significantly with your everyday functioning, seek professional assistance. Reaching out is a sign of strength, not weakness.

Do something positive for a friend, give money or time to a charitable organization, or your community. Helping others makes us feel more connected and powerful in the world.

Live compassionately—going through a tragic loss can make us more empathic and sensitive to other peoples' pain and suffering. Putting compassion into action will make the world a better place!

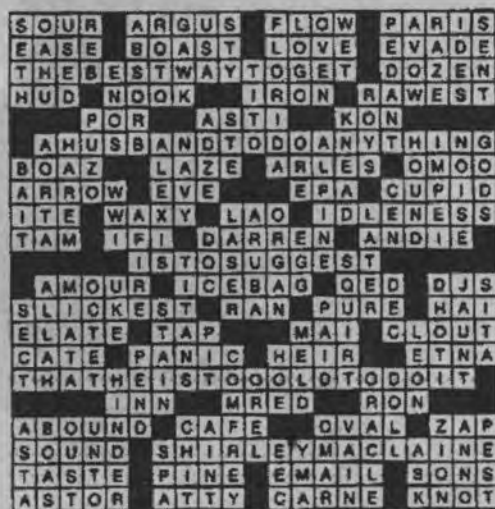

Schiowitz practices at The Brandywine Center, LLC, a group of all women therapists working to help others reach meaningful solutions to the challenges in their lives.

Parade, Collectible's Care, museum activities for kids, part of celebration

► PENCADER, from 1

Newark Fife and Drum Corps playing colonial music.

Marching along will be Keene Elementary School children dressed as citizens of Great Britain, Brader Elementary students in Welsh attire and McVey Elementary students in Swedes clothing. They will have flags that they made of the three countries that first settled in the Pencader area.

In light of the recent national tragedies in New York, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D.C., the parade will also be a chance for community members to rally in support of the country, McFalls said.

"We want the people to join in the parade in support of a nation of liberty," McFalls said.

Glasgow High's cheerleading coach will sing "God Bless America."

The Christiana Fire Company, Delaware State Police and Belvedere Fire Company will also be present for a tribute to the policemen and firefighters who died in New York.

The gym will house the conservation staff at Wintertur Museum and art conservation students at the University of Delaware. People are invited to bring up to three collectibles or family heirlooms for the experts to examine and give tips on care.

"We will help people understand the nature of the objects, not what it's worth, but what the object is and how to care for it. People should come out with a clear understanding of what they have and a clear path on how to care for it," Greg Landrey of Wintertur said. "We wanted to be a part of this event for several reasons.

"One is to help people appreciate their local history and have a greater interest in preserving it whether it is a building or a book, or whether it is personal history or local history."

Visitors to the event can peruse portraits with Pencader and Newark themes done by Christina School District students, displays by community organizations, and try on historic costumes.

Staff from Wintertur, and the Hagley and Iron Hill museums will also have hands-on arts and crafts activities for kids.

The classrooms will be occupied with speakers focusing on the history of the area. The topics range from Welsh poems and stories to the history of a black Civil War soldier, to family history.

"This event is a piece of a larger program to build a new Iron Hill Museum and restore the existing one to the schoolhouse," McFalls said. "It is a fun free day of patriotism for family and a way to celebrate freedom and the rich history of this area."

NEWARK OUTLOOK

Keep finances strong, now

The acts of terrorism on Sept. 11 have directly impacted the lives of thousands of Americans who have lost a loved one and indirectly affected us all. One of the areas of people's lives that have been affected is their personal finances.

Some people lost a spouse or partner who provided all or part of their household's income. Some lost their jobs. Others lost their health insurance, as well as their job.

Some people incurred unanticipated expenses for hotels and meals while stranded away from home during airport closings or costs for alternative methods of travel. And all investors are affected by the impact of the terrorism upon financial markets.

For many families this has become a financial emergency. Keeping your finances strong and rebuilding financial stability is key to the future.

By Maria Pippidis

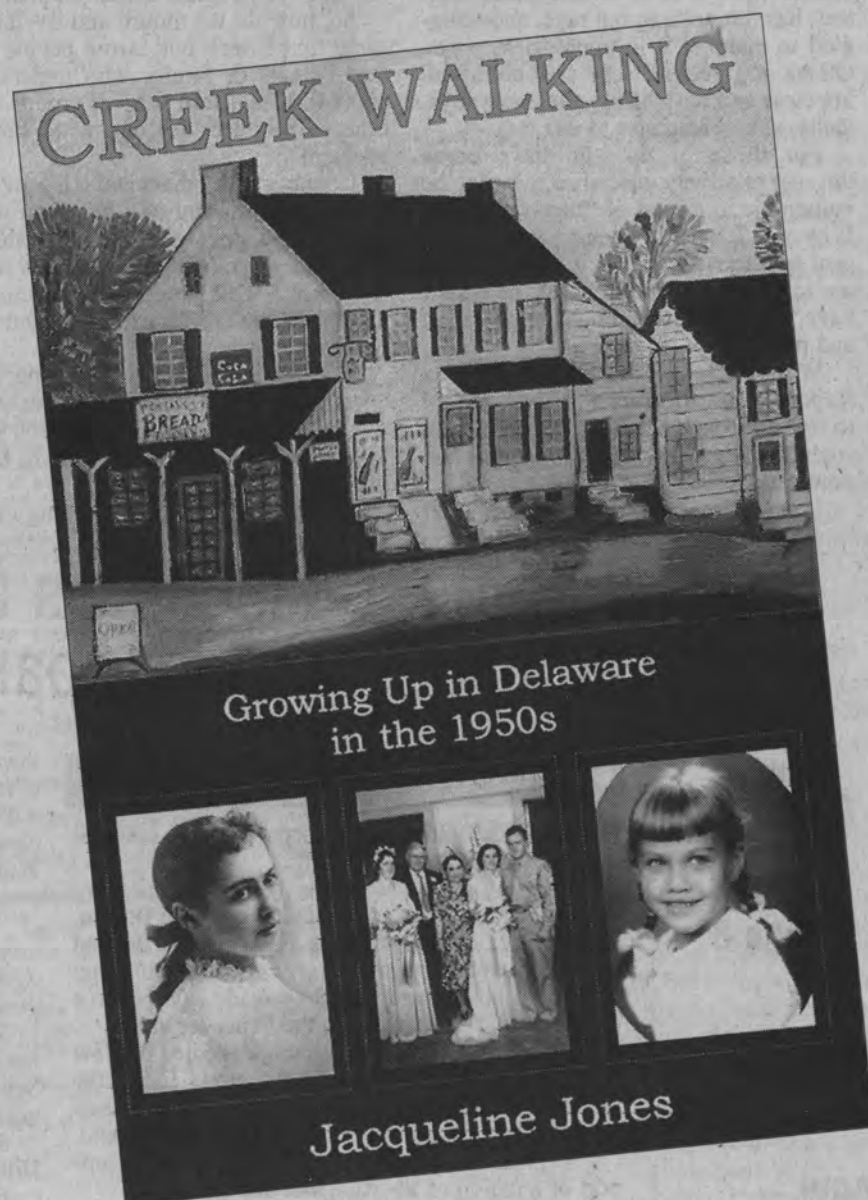

If you will have difficulty paying your bills as a result of a loss of household income, let your creditors know now, before you become delinquent on bills. Tell them the circumstances and negotiate for a reduced or delayed payment. Note the name of the person that you speak to and the date and follow up all phone calls in writing summarizing the agreed upon terms.

Investigate life insurance benefits, compensation payments announced by airlines and government agencies, and payments from an employer, as well as state unemployment benefits and any other payments available to unemployed workers through their union or trade association.

Experts suggest developing a one-page resume that stresses job skills, rather than chronological dates of employment. If you have samples of your work available on the Internet, add the Web links so that employers can easily learn more about you online.

Jones's account tells a larger story about the folkways of the Protestant of Native-American hunting grounds into a colonial port on the busy Christina River; the decline of the port when it was bypassed by canals and railroads; and finally, the emergence of a thriving service and consumer economy in northern Delaware.

ic boom in northern New Castle County, have produced some remarkable changes in the school itself.

Jones received a B.A. in American Studies from the University of Delaware in 1970, and a Ph.D. in American History from the University of uninsured such as the Delaware Healthy Children program (1-800-996-9969).

Workers whose employer no longer exists, or people who did business with firms in the World Trade Center, may need to rely upon their own records to document their employment history or prove eligibility for benefits.

Put some emergency fund money in another type of cash asset than mutual funds or money markets, such as an I bond or bank CD, for increased liquidity in uncertain times.

Remember that investing is a long-term proposition and history tells us that there can be prolonged periods of declining stock prices. That is why stocks are not recommended for short-term (less than five-years away) financial goals. The stock market is very efficient and share prices generally reflect events such as this.

Add the costs for alternative forms of transportation and other unforeseen expenses to your household spending plan and adjust other items as need.

Reach out for financial as well as emotional support. Many churches and community organizations are assisting victims of this terribly tragedy. Everyone in the country has been affected by this event in some way and the level of compassion and support is high.

of the DuPont company. Although some would suggest that author Jacqueline Jones labors under the burden of the memoirist's greatest curse — she had a happy childhood — her book offers a moving evocation of what is gained and what is lost when communities, families, and individuals necessarily change over time.

The book tells the story of a little girl growing up in Christiana in the 1950s, and the story of an American crossroads transformed over time. Wedged between two dramatically different, extended families, she tries to make sense of the social signifiers that crosscut even this tiny village in New Castle County — differences between blacks and whites, ordinary everyday life was infused with high drama. Sunday afternoon family gatherings, school days, and church services all manifested the social dynamics of a compact little community that seemed resistant to "progress," variously defined.

Yet the determination of Christiana's black residents to integrate the local school is revealing of political tensions in small-town, mid-20th century America.

Jones places this one decade in the town's past within the larger sweep of Delaware history. In the process she chronicles a series of economic and social developments that span the last four hundred years: the transformation

American history, Jones blends personal memoir, family history, local history, cultural anthropology, and contemporary social commentary to examine a particular place and time. In the 1950s, the residents of Christiana knew little about the town's glory days of yore, and they could not predict the future, with its crush of superhighways and mega-shopping malls. She is therefore able to give the town what it has heretofore lacked — its own history.

Returning to her elementary school, she finds that the students are much like herself, when she was in the same classrooms four decades earlier. And yet the effects of the ongoing civil rights Revolution, combined with the econom-

Civilization at Brandeis University, where she teaches courses in American social history.

She is the author of several books, including Labor of Love, Labor of Sorrow: Black Women, Work and the Family from Slavery to the Present (1985), which was a Bancroft Prize winner and a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize; and (most recently) American Work: Four Centuries of Black and White Labor (1998).

In 1999 she was awarded a MacArthur Fellowship. She and her husband Jeffrey Abramson, professor of politics at Brandeis University, have two daughters, Sarah and Anna.

National Depression Screening Day timely

Twenty million Americans each year develop some form of depression and it is estimated that over 50,000 Delawareans, ages 20 years and above, are affected by depression each year. This year, Depression Screening Day also is the one-month anniversary of the Sept. 11 American Tragedy, and more people than ever may be experiencing depression, anxiety or post-traumatic stress.

The Mental Health Association in Delaware is coordinating National Depression Screening Day on Thursday, Oct. 11, in collaboration with 20 other local organizations. Over 20 sites statewide will offer free, anonymous depression screenings. At some locations, the screenings will be conducted in Spanish.

Common symptoms of depression include: feelings of sadness; loss of pleasure in usual activities; feelings of hopelessness, helplessness and worthlessness; changes in sleep and appetite; loss of energy or restlessness; and thoughts of death or suicide.

According to Diane Treacy, Executive Director of MHA, "Unfortunately, only one-third of those suffering from the disorders actually receive treatment. However, depression is one of the most treatable of illnesses, with the vast majority of sufferers showing improvement in eight weeks."

Other surprising facts about this misunderstood disorder include: twice as many women as men suffer from depression, but risks for bipolar disorder (manic-depression) are similar in men and women; recent studies have shown that heart attack survivors with major depression have a 3-4 times greater risk of dying within six months than those who do not suffer from depression; dysthymia is a mild form of depression that lasts two years or more.

Other noteworthy facts: the World Health Organization estimates that by the year 2020, unipolar major depression will be the second-most burdensome illness in the world, surpassing respiratory infections and tuberculosis; and teen suicide rates have increased more than 300 percent since the 1950s.

Attendees at the FREE screenings will have the opportunity to hear an educational presentation on depression and manic-depression, complete a written screening test, and talk one-on-one with a mental health professional. Those who appear to need further evaluation will be given referrals to local treatment services.

DELAWARE THEATRE COMPANY

"One of his best plays. Crackling tension... ferocious comedy and drama. A top American playwright in bristling form."

- Frank Rich, The New York Times

Winner of the 1984 Pulitzer Prize, Glengarry Glen Ross is David Mamet's savage comedy about a group of small-time, boiler room real estate salesmen scraping out a living by pushing worthless plots of land on reluctant buyers. Uncompromising in its ferocity, Mamet's writing soars with the brutal power and wit of a viciously competitive world where closing a sale is the only means of survival.

Coaches try to change attitude

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

There are many people that predicted a down year for Delaware football – at least compared to last year's semifinal appearance. Nobody, however, could have foreseen the finger-pointing and me-first attitude that has cropped up. It simply is not normally part of Blue Hen football.

Sure, there were going to be some losses. But in all fairness, the Hens should've (could've) beaten Rhode Island. There's a team that's 4-0 now. No matter what, they weren't going to beat Georgia Southern. The Eagles beat Delaware last season and the bulk of that team returned.

The Hens surely would've beaten West Chester and did dominate UMass.

So where exactly is the problem?

Well that didn't really surface until last week's mess up at Northeastern. The offense posted its worst output in school history – 56

Glasgow tops Newark

Dragons soccer squad earns 3-2 win over Jackets

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

If the Glasgow High soccer team isn't playing well, then there should be a lot of teams worried when it finally does turn things around.

The Dragons blanked cross-town rival Newark 3-0 Tuesday night at Hoffman Stadium to improve their record to 6-1.

Glasgow got a first-half goal from David Nimrooz on a penalty kick late in the first half.

Tolu Olowalafe knocked home the game's second goal from 18-yards out seven minutes into the second half.

Matt Goff on an assist from Justin Esposito scored the final goal in the game's 76th minute.

"I'm happy to get the win," said Glasgow coach Bob Bussiere. "But we're just not playing as well as we could be. We're not really reaching our potential."

"We certainly have some talent on the team and that kind of takes over in big games. But we're not doing the fundamental things that typical Glasgow teams have done in the past."

Glasgow's dominance was apparent in the shot total. The Dragons outshot the Yellowjackets 19-7. Newark goalkeeper Matt Wells did make nine saves.

"I'm embarrassed," said Newark coach Hugh Mitchell. "It was a terrible display for everybody that came out to watch us." Newark travels to Dover for an important matchup of top 10 teams Saturday night while Glasgow travels to Caesar Rodney for another big upstate-downstate game.

"We break the season down into quarters," Bussiere said. "We played well in early games against Dover and Sallies. But we haven't had the achievement and development I'd like to see since then."

Cole, Colonials get first win

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

William Penn scored two third quarter touchdowns, and its rugged defense controlled St. Mark's potent offense for most of the game, as the Colonials defeated the Spartans 14-6 Saturday afternoon at Bill Cole Stadium.

The non-conference victory had plenty of significance for William Penn (1-2), since it was the team's first of the year, after tough losses to Salesianum and North Bergen, N.J., and it marked the first win under new and ferocious Colonial pass rush, and heavy swirling winds.

Spartan coach Vinnie Scott said the Colonial's huge defense dominated throughout the game. "I didn't expect them, (the line), to be that superior, but you have to give them credit, they just wore us down up front," said Scott.

The Colonials had a sub-par offense for the half, completing three passes for about 40 yards, and adding about forty more on the ground, primarily by Rob Edwards and Ron Kimbrough.

All that changed early in the second half, as the Colonials scored on their first possession of the third quarter. After the Spartans went three and out, William Penn moved 57 yards on eight plays. Junior Quarterback their first-ever win over the Hens.

Worse than that is what came afterwards. Players challenged other players' attitude and preparedness.

Coach Tubby Raymond felt that nobody (or very few anyway) on the team thought the loss was there fault. They all played well and thought somebody else was responsible.

That certainly isn't a good sign for a team that still has to play a very difficult schedule, starting with this week's game at 3-1 New Hampshire.

What is a good sign is that Raymond and the coaching staff recognized the problem and have addressed the team about it.

The thing is, this is a problem that cannot be solved by a coaching staff. This is all on the players.

Hopefully, Raymond can get the players to recognize what the staff already has. Then it's up to the team to change.

There are a lot of good players still on this football team. It can still be a good year. Let's see if the team can get things turned around.

Glasgow soccer rolling

The Glasgow High soccer team took a big step toward winning a Flight A championship with its 3-0 victory over cross-town rival Newark Tuesday night.

The Dragons have been impressive through the first month of the season. They earned a 4-0 dominating victory over a highly touted Dover team and played Salesianum — who is one of the top two teams in the state this season — very well. In fact, that was a game that could've very easily been tied at the end of regulation.

Glasgow has also picked up victories against Christiana, Middletown, Delcastle and William Penn along the way.

There is also a very big conference game with A.I. du Pont that is still ahead.

Tigers sweep past Jackets

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Things got a little more difficult for the Newark High volleyball team last Friday night.

The previously undefeated Yellowjackets ran into a tough Alexis I. Du Pont squad and were swept 15-2, 15-10 by the Tigers.

The loss dropped Newark to 5-1 on the season and left it a game behind A.I. in the Flight A race.

"Well, we finally ran into some good competition," said Newark coach Lisa Ueltzhoffer. "A.I. is a very good team, the strongest we've played so far."

"I saw some moments of brilliance out there but I also saw our inexperience show through most of the night."

The Tigers trounced the Jackets in the opening game of the match. A.I. jumped to a quick lead and never looked back on its way to the 15-2 victory.

Newark, however, bounced back in game two.

The Jackets reeled off the game's first six points. A.I. responded with eight straight points of its own to take the lead.

After a series of sideouts and long rallies, A.I. still led 12-10. The Tigers then asserted themselves, scoring the last three points to put the match away.

"They just looked more experience and more seasoned in big matches," Ueltzhoffer said. "They did the little things right."

"We were tentative and made some poor choices."

Newark was led by Kristen Mitchell, who had seven kills, 11 digs, seven perfect passes and a block. Lauren Nachodil added nine assists, seven digs and an ace, Megan McLaughlin had four kills, a block, six digs and a perfect pass, Jayme Pieniaszak had five digs and four perfect passes, Amber Walker had two kills, six digs and a perfect pass and Rachael Finkley had a kill, an ace, three digs and two perfect passes.

Newark will play at Glasgow Friday night.

Cole took the helm this fall, replacing Bruce Reynolds, who guided the Colonial football program for nearly three decades. Reynolds replaced Cole's father, Bill Cole, Sr., for the 1974 season. The two legendary coaches ran the team for more than a half century, stretching back to 1949.

The first half mirrored William Penn's game against Sallies one week ago, with neither team moving the ball well, or putting themselves in good scoring position. After a scoreless first half, the Colonials had not scored a point in six quarters.

The Spartans, now 2-2, managed less than 70 yards total offense in the first half, without starting quarterback Joe Wright, out with a leg injury, sustained against Newark. Quarterback Craig Wood directed a Spartan offense that could only muster three first downs against a stingy end zone from one yard out with about six minutes left in the quarter. When the two-point conversion failed, the Colonials led 6-0.

Cole said it was important to get the lead. "It was great to put some points on the board, since we hadn't scored for a while, and we haven't had a lead," he said.

Penn then made it two scores in a row. After St. Mark's again failed to gain a first down, the Colonial's got the ball back in excellent field position after a great punt return to the St. Mark's 26 yard line. Three plays later, John Henry's wind-blown pass into the end zone was intended for Edwards, but wound up in the hands of William Brown for six. Kimbrough's two-point conversion made the score 14-0, with about four minutes left in the third quarter.

Edwards scores three to lead the Spartans

By JOE BACKER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

St. Mark's forward Ryan Edwards is in the "scoring zone", and his Spartan teammates hope he stays there for the rest of the season. Edwards scored three goals Tuesday afternoon to lead St. Mark's to a 4-2 victory over an improving St. Elizabeth squad. That's seven goals for Edwards in his last three games for the Spartans.

St. Mark's veteran coach Tom DeMatteis said the team is playing at mid-season and improving with each game. "We're coming together and playing better all the time, and that's what we're hoping for as a team," he said.

Edwards opened the scoring at the nine-minute mark on a nifty assist from Matt DelleCave. After some fairly even play, Edwards again found the range at 18:15, with DelleCave adding another assist for a 2-0 lead.

St. Elizabeth began a counter-attack, but found the Spartan defensive zone difficult to penetrate. Eventually Viking senior forward Ryan Ven Duren found an opening and scored at 36:15 cutting the lead in half.

The Spartans were able to rebuild the two-goal lead just before halftime, when Dustin Duchene headed in a ball from Tyler Bastianelli.

Viking keeper Cecil Hoskins turned back five shots, while Spartan goalie Chris DiNuzzo made four saves in the first half.

St. Elizabeth first-year coach Ed Gibbons said he was pleased with his team's effort. "We've been working hard in practice all season, and the team has come a long way to play this well against a very good opponent," he said.

Lightning struck again for the Vikings as Matt Gibbons scored at the 53-minute mark. Gibbons said the team's confidence began to soar from that point.

"We were very happy to be only one goal down with lots of time left, but I also think we got a little nervous, thinking we had a chance to beat this team," he said.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

RYAN EDWARDS – ST. MARK'S

Ryan Edwards had a break-out week for the St. Mark's soccer team.

The senior Spartan netted seven goals in the Spartans' three victories. He had only one goal prior to his scoring barrage.

"He has tremendous ball skills," said St. Mark's coach Tom DeMatteis. "Now he is knocking the ball off more and creating a lot of things for himself and his teammates."

Edwards scored three times in the Spartans' 3-1 victory over Alexis I. Du Pont, he scored once against Maryland power John Carroll and three more Tuesday against St. Elizabeth.

Edwards has helped St.

Mark's to a 6-2 record with its only two losses coming to out-of-state teams.

"Before he would sometimes try to do too much with the ball," DeMatteis said of Edwards. "Now he's being smarter and creating and it's helped him and the team."

Delaware to host NCAA lax

First-round games at Delaware

The University of Delaware's Delaware Stadium has been selected as a host site for the first round of the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Tournament for both the 2002 and 2003 seasons.

The NCAA confirmed Monday that the University of Delaware and 22,000-seat Delaware Stadium will be the South site for the first round of the tournament Sunday, May 12, 2002 and Sunday, May 11, 2003. Brown University in Providence will serve as the North first round site for those seasons. This spring Hofstra and Johns Hopkins will serve as quarterfinal sites with the semifinals and championship set for Rutgers University May 25-27.

"This is a tremendous honor for the University of Delaware," said Delaware lacrosse coach Bob Shillinglaw. "Delaware Stadium is one of the best locations in which to have this type of event and I know the NCAA is happy to be returning to our campus. It's great news for the sport of lacrosse in the state of Delaware as far as youth groups are concerned and gives the university a chance to showcase our outstanding facilities. We are excited to host the event, and hopefully we will be playing in it as well."

NCAA Men's Lacrosse Tournament action returns to Newark for the third time in history and for the first time since 1986 when Delaware hosted the NCAA semifinal and final. That year marked the first time the NCAA men's lacrosse tournament went to a Final Four format.

Delaware Stadium also served as host of the NCAA final in 1984. Johns Hopkins defeated Syracuse 13-10 before 17,253 fans in that game. North Carolina defeated Virginia 10-9 in overtime in the 1986 championship game.

Last year's first round games drew 3,246 fans at Hobart College and 4,128 at UMBC.

Spartans soccer still the favorite

► POST GAME, from 12

So, don't go ordering championship jackets just yet.

But, one thing is for sure, Glasgow has certainly proven that is among the state's best.

St. Mark's soccer streaking

There are some of the opinion that the St. Mark's soccer team's streak of five straight state championships is in jeopardy this season.

It certainly is possible that the Spartans won't win a sixth straight title this fall. But before everybody gets carried away with that notion, they should consider a couple of things.

One is that St. Mark's still has not lost a game to an in-state team since the middle of 1997. The Spartans have gone 50 straight games without a loss to a Delaware team. They have compiled a 49-0-1 record in that span.

Secondly, the Spartans have a pretty good team this year. Sure they lost two one-goal games to strong out-of-state teams. But they also have a 3-1 win over John Carroll (Md.). Salesianum tied John Carroll 1-1 earlier this season.

Until somebody in the state beats St. Mark's – it is still the favorite.

midway through the fourth quarter, when reserve quarterback Kyle Muller tossed a 60-yard TD bomb to receiver Tim Smith to close the gap to 14-6.

With less than two minutes to play, Muller tried again to hook up with Smith, but this time Edwards intercepted to stop the Spartan drive.

Cole said making some half-time adjustments helped the Colonials pull out the win.

"Our coaches upstairs noticed some things about their defense, and we were able to take advantage in the third quarter," said Cole.

Regarding his first victory as head coach, Cole said, "It's not about me at all, it's about the players, and I have a lot of confidence in these kids. This team is a work in progress. This week the Colonials host Blue Hen Conference rival McKean Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. The Spartans, meanwhile, have another game against a highly ranked team, this time, it's the Dover Senators, Friday night at Baynard Stadium in Wilmington.

ting the Spartans were soon dashed, however, when

St. Mark's essentially clinched the game thirty seconds later on Edwards's third goal of the game. DelleCave also completed a hat trick, getting his third assist of the day.

DeMatteis complimented several players after the game.

"DelleCave had an outstanding game (this afternoon), and I thought sophomore Ryan Flannigan played a very consistent game, too," he said.

Gibbons said despite the loss, there were a lot of positives in the game.

"This was the type of game a team can learn from, and hopefully build on for the rest of the season."

Gibbons also said Matt Haney and Mike Crowley turned in terrific performances for the Vikings.

The Spartans, now 6-2, next turn their attention to Holy Cross of New York, the only team to beat St. Mark's last season. Saturday's game begins at 1 p.m. at St. Mark's.

U of D Football - vs New Hampshire 10/6

Hens hope to get back on track

UNH beat Delaware last season

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Coming off one of the most inept performances in its history, the University of Delaware football team stands at a crossroad heading into Saturday's game at New Hampshire.

The Atlantic-10 tilt against the Wildcats could determine if last week's debacle against Northeastern was an aberration or if the Blue Hens are in for a long season.

The 20-7 loss to the Huskies was disturbing in several ways. The Hens were limited to their lowest total yards output (56) in their illustrious history. The team had zero yards rushing. But what probably most upset the coaching staff was the finger pointing amongst the players afterward.

"There probably weren't three guys on the bus that thought they cost the team to lose the game," said coach Tubby Raymond. "They all thought they did OK and it was somebody else's fault."

"If we don't accept responsibility that each guy needs to, then we won't win another game."

Winning against New Hampshire was going to be a tough chore anyway. The Wildcats were the only team to knock off Delaware in the regular season last year — a 45-44 overtime thriller at Delaware Stadium.

This year, New Hampshire has begun the season 3-1. The Wildcats won their first three games before dropping a 38-28 decision to William & Mary last week.

The game will match the team's strengths against each other. Clearly, the Delaware defense is the stronger unit this season. But it will face an offense is second in the Atlantic-10 in scoring (35.2 points per game) and among the nation's top 10 in rushing offense (264) and total offense (475).

Running back Stephan Lewis leads all I-AA players in scoring with a 17.0 point per game average and 11 touchdowns. He is second in all-purpose running with a 247 yard average and fifth in rushing with a 151 yard per game average.

In addition UNH has a fine quarterback in Ryan Day. Day has thrown for 844 yards and six touchdowns. He has also rushed for another 346 yards.

"Seventy percent of their offense is run from the shotgun," Raymond said. "The quarterback is a player and they have a good back."

Defensively, however, New Hampshire has struggled. The Wildcats rank last in the Atlantic-10 in passing defense (278 yards per game and 10th in total defense (430 yards per game. They also rank last in scoring defense, giving up 31 points per game.

"Their defense has given up a lot of yardage," Raymond said. "If we can get our guys cranked up and we can move the ball a little, I still think our defense is as good as anybody in the league — but they have to play." Getting the players to play has been Raymond's biggest task this season. He cited several plays from the Northeastern game in which Husky players were diving over blockers to make plays.

"Did you ever see any of our guys do that. The difference between winning and losing is so fine."

Raymond also thinks his team is so used to winning that they don't think they have to work as hard.

"Once they've been to Paris, they're not willing to dig holes anymore," he said. "I think our problem is psychological and I'll treat it like that."

For his part, New Hampshire coach Sean McDonnell believes Delaware will come out stronger.

"You know the tradition of that football program," McDonnell said. "Look at the guys they have back. Look at the coaching staff. They have pride. They have talent. As a coach you're worried."

"I anticipate a much different team than what I saw on film last week."

Kick off is at noon at Cowell Stadium in Durham.

UD halfback Butter Pressey breaks loose for a long run in the Hens' opening game against Rhode Island.
