Death Strikes Ranks Of Old Residents Here

Four Well Known Men and Women Die During Past Week; Jacob Tasker Held Honor Of Oldest Man In Community, Mrs. Gregg Oldest Woman; Town's Oldest House Loses Mistress

FUNERALS THIS WEEK

Jacob Tasker, aged 93 years, Newark's oldest resident, and Mrs. Rebecca Gregg, the town's oldest woman, were both called by death during the past week. Mr. Tasker succumbed to an attack of pneumonia Monday night. Mrs. Gregg passed away Saturday. Their combined ages totalled 186 years.

Mr. Tasker died at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. J. J. Boland, on Academy street, where he spent his declining years. He was a native of Virginia. His grandfather immigrated from Ireland during early colonial days, and was a pioneer in the southern states. Mr. Tasker's mother, Mrs. Susan Thorpe Tasker, was a member of an old Virginia family.

At the opening of the Civil War Mr. Tasker was living in Maryland. His family was divided to the flags. Finally he decided to join the Confederacy, and while a young man, joined the Grey in the Army of Virginia. An iron puddler by trade, he was pressed into service in southern foundries, until he decided to come North. After a year of thrilling adventures, he finally got through the lines and settled once more in Cecil county, rejoining his young wife. For the next thirty years, he was associated with the old Whittaker iron foundry at Principio.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon, beginning with brief services at the Boland home here, followed by services in the church at Principio Furnace, Md. Rev. J. P. Otis will officiate.

Mr. Tasker leaves eight children, nineteen grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren.

A resident of this town for practically her entire life, Mrs. Sarah Gregg died Saturday last at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Clyde Baylis, No. 34 North Chapel street, of the infirmities of age.

Deceased was a great favorite with neighbors and friends in the community and her death was mourned by all who knew her. Besides her granddaughter, Mrs. Baylis, she is survived by four sons and three daughters. Funeral services were held yesterday from the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. Clyde Baylis, with interment in Sharp's cemetery, in Cecil county, Maryland.

LOCAL DRIVER CAUGHT IN JAM

John Chambers Must Serve 45 Days in Jail as Result of Auto Smashup Saturday

Two Newark negroes figured in an accident in Wilmington last Saturday evening. As a result, one, Herbert James, 32, is suffering from a badly lacerated head and body, while the other, John L. Chambers, 30, is in the Workhouse, serving a 45-day jail sentence.

Chambers, employed by the Feder Motor Company, and well known in the town, was driving with James in Wilmington, when the car collided with one operated by Frank Hartman, of Wilmington. The accident took place at Lancaster avenue and Union street. The Chambers car was thrown on the sidewalk and badly wrecked. James was thrown out. Chambers escaped injury.

Asks Clemency

In police court Monday morning, Chambers was charged with driving a car while intoxicated. While only having one leg, he is well known for his skill in handling a car. As he hobbled into court, to hear a verdict of $300 fine and 60 days in jail, the defendant asked for clemency from the court.

"Judge," he said, "I have never been before a court or jury in my life." Judge Hastings, in view of Chambers' inability to pay the fine, sent him to the workhouse for forty-five days. James was treated at a hospital and sent to his home here.

PASTOR ASKED TO STAY HERE

Rev. Frank Herson Will Likely Hold Over For Ninth Year

Interest is manifest in local church circles regarding the possibility of the M. E. Conference, now in session, of returning Rev. Frank Herson to his pastorate here for the ninth consecutive year.

Mr. Herson was formally invited to return to his congregation a few days ago. He is now attending the sessions of the conference being held in Dover.

If the popular pastor is returned, the action will mark a conference record of service in one church.

Lunches To Cease

It has been reported on good authority that the High School cafeteria, operated since the beginning of the term by Mr. and Mrs. Collins, will close on Thursday of next week, just prior to the Easter vacation period.

Insufficient patronage and low charges are said to be the reasons given by Mrs. Collins for the proposed action.

Newark Man Escapes From Hotel Blaze; Sought Rest In Mountains; Got Excitement

R. O. Bausman, County Agent with the Experimental Station of the University of Delaware, recently had a thrilling experience and made an extraordinary escape when the Meadowside Hotel—about two miles from Mt. Pocono, Pennsylvania—at which he was staying, caught fire and burned to the ground.

Mr. Bausman, who has been suffering with ill health, went to the hotel Monday, the 15th, for a rest. The night of his arrival he was awakened at about 2:30 a. m. by a ruddy glare and the odor of smoke. Quickly jumping from his bed, he rushed out into the corridor and discovered it to be filled with smoke. With the ordinary avenue of escape cut off, he went back to his room, secured his possessions, and climbed out through a window upon the second floor roof.

Here he found a boy, and seeing that the lad was about to leap to the ground cautioned him not to jump. However, overcome by fright, the boy did not heed Professor Bausman's advice and jumped. He landed on his head, suffered a concussion of the brain, and at present his condition is considered serious.

NOBLE DRAMA HERE ON 16th

Footlights Club To Cathex Campus Doings In Thespian Net

The Footlights of the University of Delaware will present their burlesque-revue entitled "Smax and Crax" in Wolf Hall the evening of Thursday, April 16. As the show will not play Wilmington this year it is expected that the local engagement will find the auditorium packed.

The show this year is somewhat an improvement over last year in that there is a semblance of a plot running through it and an original musical score penned by Givan and Carey.

Prior to the Newark engagement, the show opens in Milford at the Palace Theatre and then travels to Harrington, Lewes, Georgetown and Oxford. As yet Middletown and Smyrna are to be contracted for.

Original skits to be used in the Newark engagement include "Night Life In South Hall, or Fleeing the Hounds of Ben-Hur" in which Givan will portray a flying Dutchman in search of the price of eggs in lower Sussex county. Another skit written for the college town engagement is "The Long Lost Monocle From The Aenid, or The Morse Code."

Those present at the dinner were members of the firm from the Wilmington office, and from many plants scattered throughout the country.

Local Drivers In Mixup on Main Street Sunday Night

An accident which resulted in severe damage to one of the machines, occurred Sunday evening last opposite the Washington House hotel on East Main street.

The front axle assembly of the Colmery car was almost completely torn away from the body, although headlights and fenders suffered little damage. The McAllister machine was damaged about the rear fenders. The latter machine is reported to have attempted a turn out from the Washington House driveway into Main street, where the collision took place. Damages are understood to have been settled between the two men.

Cannery Faces Season With Renewed Hope

Withdrawal Of Half The Tomato Acreage Partly Made Up In Renewals Monday; Maryland Group Slow To Come In Fold; Four Want Manager-ship

With the immediate future of the canning plant here a clouded issue, disappointed in the loss of expected dividend checks, and about 350 acres short in signed contracts for 1926, over 100 tomato and corn growers of this section met officials of the United Packing Company in Wolf Hall here Monday afternoon.

Fears that a combination of unrest and lack of acreage to operate the plant this season were dispelled, however, when J. Irvin Dayett announced that 213 acres of tomatoes had been contracted for at the meeting, together with over 150 acres of corn. This, it is reported, brings the total to within 150 acres of the required amount to assure operation.

Boyce Holds Floor

W. Truxton Boyce of Stanton, chairman of the Board of Directors of the United Packing Co., presided and delivered himself of several pertinent remarks.

Speaking of the loss sustained on the pulp market last year, Mr. Boyce said:

"You would have had $30,000 to $40,000 to divide among you if the pulp price had not turned as it did. You received $12,000 per ton for your tomatoes, a price better than that paid by scores of canneries in the State."

Mr. Boyce then stated that four applicants were in the field for the position of manager to succeed H. Richardson Cole, resigned.

Rumored Aspirants

The Post has been informed that two local men are rumored as applicants for the job. They are John F. Richards and Wallace Cook. Lester Scotten of Smyrna, has also been mentioned as a candidate.

According to Mr. Boyce, the 1926 tentative price to the growers of tomatoes will be $12.50 per ton; that the salary of the new manager will be $40.00 per week, with a 5 per cent bonus on all production over the $12.50 rate.

Mr. Boyce waxed indignant during his talk when a grumble arose from a farmer in the audience concerning "you directors." He called attention to the fact that the Board administers the firm here without a cent of remuneration, that it works always to the best interests of the farmers, and that it will continue to do so with their support.

New Plant Discussed

Among the rank and file of growers at the meeting, no little interest was manifested in the rumor that a new cannery may be started near Elkton this year. Names of the backers of the move were not announced, however.

A group of growers from the Elkton district, however, firmly held out against contracting Monday.

It was this group which withdrew their contracts totalling over 200 acres during the past month. Spokesmen at the meeting Monday stated to The Post that they wanted to know who would manage the plant this season before renewing their contracts.

Directors were optimistic over the outlook and were pleased at the ready response accorded their contract offered for 1926.

A representative of the American Can Company was present and outlined the present conditions of the industry. He said the United plant here "surpasses in efficiency and equipment 75 per cent of the canneries on the peninsula."

Only a small part of the session was devoted to speaking. A steady rumble of conversation as the growers "talked it over" with their neighbors in the seats, pervaded the hall. One by one, as their reached their own decision, they either stepped forward, and signed up or left the building.

From the general impressions gained Monday, confidence has been expressed by all concerned that the plant here will again operate.

ADVERTISING

The force of advertising is invisible but you can feel it, and Ernest G. Hastings, managing editor of the Dry Goods Economist, tells a story of a conversation between an advertising man and a merchant that illustrates the point in interesting fashion.

"Ever have your hat blow off?" asked the advertising man.

"Yes," said the merchant. "What blew it off?"

"The wind."

"Did you ever see the wind?"

No.

"Well, advertising is like the wind—an invisible force. You can't see it, but you can and will see the results just as you saw your hat go rolling down the street."—Jayhawk Press.

COLORED MEN OFFERED HELP

Experiment Station Here Confers With State Colored College Officials

In the hope of making the work of the Extension Department of the University of Delaware more valuable to the colored residents of Delaware, Kent County Agent Wilson, with Dean McCue, of the University, and others of the Extension Department, visited the farm school for boys and girls, a couple of miles north of Dover, the past week, and held separate conferences with the boys and girls entered as students there. The conferences were of a preliminary character, being participated in by many farmers and their wives, who were asked to give thought to their problems, and present them to the University of Delaware officials at a later date, at which time efforts would be made to determine how the offices of the Extension Department of the University might be used to aid the farmers with their troubles. It was the first conference of its kind ever held in the State, and much good is expected to result from it, provided the colored farmers and their wives bring to subsequent conferences some details of what they need most in the way of advice.

The Extension Department officials will also hold similar conferences with the members of the county granges, seeking ways in which they may best serve the farmers with their problems.

RESENT TRASH SENT FROM CITY

Harmony Grangers Reply To "Clean Up" Suggestion From Wilmington; Mermaid News

The Harmony Grange, of Mermaid, met in the local hall on Monday evening, and an unusually large attendance was noted. The regular order of business was followed. The fertilizer order was closed and forwarded. Then a heated discussion arose concerning the question of the farmers keeping the roadsides fronting their farms clean and orderly.

Due to the fact that this is the year of the Sesqui-Centennial and that many motorists will be passing through Delaware, a request came from Wilmington that the farmers make special efforts to improve the appearance of the countryside. The farmers, however, feel that the city people's lack of co-operation removes this obligation. It appears that motorists from the city do not hesitate to scatter tin cans and waste paper about the country with no consideration for the farmer. It was reported that recently a truck-load of trash from Wilmington was dumped near the farm of Frank Klair opposite the Midway garage. Consequently, the farmers want the city residents to display more consideration.

The meeting was in charge of Sister Ethel Brackin. There were readings by Anna J. Dennison, Paul Mitchell, Brother Hicks, Lillian Springer, Emeline Mitchell, and piano solos by Miss Amy Hicks. A sketch of Betsy Ross making the first flag was presented with Sara Pennington, Steele Atwell, Addie Klair, Pearl Harrington and Blanch Derriksen taking part. The next meeting will be on Monday night, with Sister Belle Chambers in charge. The feature of this meeting is that it will be Sisters' Night.

In the morning, Mr. Patterson noted the absence of the car, but later found it parked in the street nearby. Balked in their efforts to drive it off, the alleged thieves abandoned it.

Says July 4 Was Not Date Of American Independence

American independence was not born on July 4, 1776, nor was the Declaration of Independence actually signed on that day, according to Professor Walter L. Whittlesey, of the Political Department of Princeton University.

"What was actually done on our first Fourth was only to agree to the final draft of the poster which John Dunlap printed on the night of July 4, 1776, for public distribution," said Professor Whittlesey. "By that date our thirteen original States had been solemnly and officially independent for two days. The tie with Great Britain was cut by resolution of Congress on July 2."

KILLED WHEN TRAIN HITS CAR

Accident Near Newport Friday Night Proves Fatal

A colored man is dead, and a white man is in a serious condition in the Delaware Hospital, as a result of an accident, in which their automobile was struck by a passenger train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, at a crossing a short distance from Smith's Corner, near Cranston Heights, and just west of the Landenberg Junction, at about 6.30 o'clock Friday night.

Gene Pierce, colored, 50 years old, who lived on the Causeway, was pronounced dead in the police ambulance on the way to the Delaware Hospital.

The injured man is Frank Gegumde, 42 years old, of Minquada.

The machine, which was traveling towards Newport, was struck by passenger train No. 24. The train was eastbound, and carried the automobile for a distance of about a quarter of a mile, stopping a little past the Landenberg Junction.

Both men were able to talk a little after the accident, according to persons who were present at the time. The white man told where he lives, and was about to tell the name and address of the colored man, when he fainted. It is said that Pierce was able to mumble only a few words.

According to a few boys, an automobile had crossed the tracks, and the machine in which the two men were riding, was directly behind. Evidently, they thought that they would be able to cross, but were struck by the oncoming train.

TWENTY TONS OF STEEL FOR BANK

Newark, March 23.—Twenty tons of structural steel make up the framework for the new Farmers Trust Building here, according to estimates by R. B. Smith, resident engineer.

The steel was set in place during the past week and is now being riveted by structural steel workers from the Walter Knopf Company, of Allentown, Pennsylvania.

The apparent unusual strength of the overhead girders, productive of some comment by on-lookers during the past few days, brought forth yesterday a trite explanation from Mr. Smith. Said he:

"The load a roof must carry is a great deal more than its own weight. To the layman, these girders look mighty heavy. To the engineer, however, they are just right. Snow load, wind load and many other strains must be figured into the load a roof must bear. Besides, there's a forty-one foot span of space to bridge."

And so this Bank performs its duties to the community, leaving no stone unturned to give of its unseen Sturdiness in courteous, useful service.

"Listen to your own instincts; they will tell you the truth. Have courage enough to believe them and to obey them. Never let such a microbe as the love of popularity get into your moral life. You can get along without the praise, or even the approval of other people, but you cannot get along without the approval of your conscience. I would not give a fig for a person who is always taking his color from his surroundings; always deriving his moral judgments, not from his sense of right, but from his idea of what other persons will think."

(From The Post, June 7, 1911.)

The New Sewer System

On the face of early comments, general approval has greeted Council's plans for the extension of sewer lines into the Depot Road section of Newark. The cost to be borne by property owners has not as yet been worked out. Quite naturally, the owners want to know. For that matter, there are numerous other details pertaining thereto they want to know.

The general plan, however, should appeal to every resident of the southern end of town. It is a progressive step. Moreover, it will permanently safeguard the town's water supply. While initial costs may seem high, the net results cannot be other than continued building, high property values and a healthy community.

The $100,000 sewerage system and the extension of gas mains from Wilmington, completed within the year, would be accomplishments of which any town might well be proud.

One Way of Having "Fun"

A handsome young police dog was found grovelling in abject terror on a West Main street lawn Saturday afternoon. Children playing nearby were hustled home by frightened mothers, and anxious eyes followed the first man to approach the dog. He was bitten on the hand. A few minutes passed, a group collected. Cautiously they approached and closed in.

A moment of struggling sufficed to remove a string of empty cans wired to the animal's tail. Fortunately these were men who knew dogs; others might have used bullets.

Someone thought it great sport—this torturing of high strung animal temperament. He is probably the type who lashes a colt under its first harness, who delights in cursing an umpire, who howls at a scratch on his finger.

So he probably had a lot of fun Saturday.

1248 Issues Without "Missing The Boat"

(From Caroline Sun, Ridgely, Md.)

With this issue The Caroline Sun completes its 24th year, having been established March 15th, 1902. We look back with pleasure the years that have been so well spent, and we hope that the coming years will be better spent, as we continue our journey week by week. To publish a live paper in a town the size of Ridgely is no trifling matter—in fact it is rather a hardship. We are thankful to say, however, that for twenty-four long years we have endeavored at all times to give the best that is within us, never shirking obligations we owe to our family of readers. Twenty-four years, our friends, have we been with you. Not a single issue of The Sun has been missed during that long period of time; neither has the editor who came here with the paper, missed a single issue during all these years. Whether this is a record, we are unable to say, but we hardly believe there is another newspaper man in the bounds of Maryland who has seen his own paper go to press 1248 weeks without skipping a number.

So with the closing of our 24th year, let us look to the future with brighter prospects for a larger and more progressive Ridgely, and when we have completed our quarter century mark—twenty-five years—we hope to be able to say—"Well Done, Thou Good and Faithful Servant."

Note on Hanging

(From Dover Index.)

Punishment for crime is not a mere vengeance of society on criminals. It is also a deterrent. A warning to others of the personal consequence of crime. The hanging of the Negro Butler at Georgetown was deserved punishment. Even the suspension of his body for an hour or so for public view was something deserved by such a brute, black or white. We however fail to see any good purpose in such a thing. On the contrary it probably did harm. The excessive curiosity that leads persons to visit a hanging is not easily understood. It seems to us that such persons are mentally or morally twisted. In other days it was a custom to leave executed criminals on the gibbet for days or weeks but we thought the custom had passed like other things that seem brutal to us now. However no matter what we think of the Georgetown incident it cannot help to continue to discuss it. It is well to forget it. The fact that Butler was a Negro probably did not enter into it, and no one of that race should think so. The crime was an unusually brutal and repulsive one and the brute that committed it offended against a law common to all whatever their race or color and the laws of God.

"That Braggart Butler"

(From Delaware State News, Dover)

The cause of Prohibition in these United States is not helped to any material extent by the actions of such of its advocates as the contemptible General of the Marines, Smedley Darlington Butler, who failed in his efforts to clean up wet Philadelphia, and more recently failed to even live up to the common rules of decency.

The scorn of the American people for General Butler's action in accepting the hospitality of a Colonel of the Marines at San Diego, Cal., and then reporting his host for serving intoxicating liquor at the banquet given in his (Butler's) honor is virtually unanimous.

Newspapers have been almost a unit in condemning Butler's ungentlemanly conduct. "General Smedley D. Butler has not been raised appreciably in American esteem by his course of conduct following the welcoming party that was given in his honor at the San Diego, Cal., naval base," said the Wilmington Evening Journal last Saturday. And that same day the Wilmington Evening Journal remarked editorially: "General Butler has accused his host of being intoxicated; but wait

The New Eastern Shore Program And What It Proposes To Accomplish

By FRED P. ADKINS
Chairman Organization Committee

Just what does the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association propose to do? Along what lines will it operate? From what point of view will it approach the innumerable problems which the Peninsula presents?

The Association will attempt to deal with the Peninsula's problems just as any wise and prudent man would attempt to deal with them if he was the sole owner of the Peninsula and all it contains.

Anyone who owned all of the agricultural land in the Peninsula would be anxious to put that land to the best possible use. He would be anxious to increase the value of that land by increasing production. He would see to it that the crops which were best suited to a particular locality were planted. If there was idle land, he would bring in people from the outside to till it.

In order to put the Peninsula's agricultural land to the best possible use, anyone who owned all of it would advertise it. He would bid for home-seekers and settlers.

That is just what the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association proposes to do. It does not own any agricultural land but it wants to help the people who do own it to put that land to the best possible use. That means more people, more production, more business—more business for the merchant, for the bank, for the manufacturer—for everybody. If one man owned all of the agricultural land on the Peninsula, he would not only try to put it to the best possible use but he would be anxious to do everything he could to secure the best possible market for its products. He would help the men on his farms sell their crops. He would encourage them to put their produce on the market in standardized packages which bore organized trade marks and which would, if possible, command a premium.

In every way that could possibly occur to him, any man who owned all of the land on the Peninsula would help solve those marketing problems which are becoming increasingly intricate and increasingly embarrassing to the individual who attacks them single handed.

That is just what the Association wants to do—help solve the marketing problem. In addition to advertising the land itself, it proposes to advertise the things the land produces. It will help producers, who ask assistance, to organize. It will attempt to create new market outlets and it will stand behind each individual producer and see to it that he receives as much for his product as anyone else receives for products of the same quality.

Anyone who owned all of the Peninsula would make it a point to see that the Peninsula's industrial opportunities were properly utilized. In order that they might be utilized, he would see that they were properly advertised. While building up agriculture on the one hand anyone who owned all of the Peninsula, would build up industry on the other.

Again, that is just what the Association proposes to do.

The owner of the Peninsula would find that he had many miles of ocean front, many miles of river front that should be the sites for resorts and for part season homes. He would advertise these sites among the people who are looking for opportunities of that until he hears from the host of American people who condemn such conduct."

There are but samples of what has appeared in many newspapers throughout the country, although most of them have been much more vigorous than the Wilmington dailies in criticising Butler's unsportsmanship.

If this braggart General of the Marines who spent two years blowing his horn in Philadelphia about what he intended to do to the rum-sellers, had sincerely objected to the use of liquor at the banquet given in his honor, why did he not voice those objections to his host when the liquor first made its appearance at the table. Instead of that, he accepted the hospitality, and then at the first opportunity thrust a dagger into the back of his host. Such things as this do a thousand times more harm than good to the already unpopular cause of prohibition.

kind. He would attempt to realize the largest amount possible from his resort and home site opportunities.

And that is just what the Association wants to do—advertise the Peninsula's resort and home site possibilities.

Anyone who owned all of the Peninsula would see to it that thousands upon thousands of people came down every year as tourists and sight-seers. Anyone who owned the Peninsula would be proud of it. Being proud, he would talk about it—in the newspapers and magazines. As a result, people would come down to see what the talk was all about. Each visitor would spend a considerable amount of money, and the man who owned the Peninsula would benefit.

The Association plans to tell the story of the Peninsula in the newspapers and magazines. It plans to bring people down to see the opportunities and resources which the Peninsula has to offer. The Association knows that each one of these visitors will be a source of income to every line of business on the Peninsula. Finally, anyone who owned all of the Peninsula would want to know all of the facts about it. He would want to know how many acres of each particular type of land he had to offer.

He would want to know how many sites for resort hotels he had. He would want to know how many miles of desirable ocean frontage or river frontage there were. He would want to know what crops made the best showing and in what particular districts. He would want to know what industries were best suited to the Peninsula and what the best locations were for them.

He would want to know everything about his property so that he could project a sane, conservative development program, and so that he could advertise and publicize the Peninsula intelligently and effectively.

That is just what the Association proposes to do—establish a Research Department which will make it possible for anyone either in the Peninsula or outside of it who wants to know anything about the Peninsula's

The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence will be observed by the Sesquicentennial International Exposition, which opens at Philadelphia, June 1, 1926.

Benjamin Rush, Signer

Much of the credit for stamping out the yellow fever plague which ravaged Philadelphia in 1793 must be given to that distinguished physician, Benjamin Rush, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, which will be commemorated by the Sesquicentennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, June 1 to December 1.

It has been estimated that he saved the lives of at least 6000 people in Philadelphia, and is said to have treated as many as 100 persons in a single day. In the midst of deaths in his own family and those of his friends, he kept going night and day, sometimes fainting on the street from exhaustion.

Benjamin Rush was descended from one of Cromwell's officers who had come over to America. He was graduated from Princeton College when only sixteen years of age, and afterward studied medicine in Edinburgh, London and Paris.

At the age of twenty-four Benjamin Rush occupied the chair of chemistry in the medical school in Philadelphia, a member of one of the youngest faculties that ever sat in professors' chairs. Certain additions were made later to the institution, the oldest medical school in the country, and it was finally merged in the University of Pennsylvania.

This eminent physician of early American days was well known as an author and possessed of a great talent for public discussion. Even while he was a student in London he was an earnest defender of the rights of American colonists.

In the fifth year of his professorship he became famous by his oration delivered before the Philosophical Society on the history of medicine among the Indians. He especially discussed the evils of the intemperate use of intoxicating spirits, which is probably the first instance of such a discussion in Philadelphia.

The address did much to make him one of the political leaders in the stirring times which were to come. He was elected to the Provincial Conference of Pennsylvania, and was afterward elevated to Congress, not long before the passage of the Declaration of Independence, which he signed with his father-in-law, Richard Stockton, of Princeton, whose daughter, Julia, he had married.

Shortly afterward he received the appointment of surgeon-general of the United States Army for the Middle Department. After about six months he was made physician-general.

When Benjamin Rush died in 1813, a contemporary paid him the following tribute: "The sensation throughout the whole country was intense. Everyone had heard of Dr. Rush, and all that were interested in medicine or philosophy, in common humanity or in the honor of their country, felt that they had lost a friend and benefactor."

THE "Book of Kells" is a Latin manuscript of the four Gospels. It is one of the most beautiful of all manuscripts. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century.

The "Book of Kells" is not now complete. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century.

Not only is the "Book of Kells" a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century, but it is also a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century.

However, despite the fact that the book is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century, it is not now complete. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century. It is a masterpiece of the art of the sixteenth century.

Part of The Story of The Book of Kells

By CORNELIUS TILGHMAN

PART ONE

I
In the library of Trinity College, in Dublin, there is an ancient manuscript, the original of the famous "Book of Kells." The baffling intricacy of its designs, the clean-cut, unwavering sweep of its decorative spirals, the inspiring reverence and painstaking labor that brought it into being make it one of the most interesting and, at the same time, one of the most beautiful manuscripts ever produced by hand of man.

This priceless volume is estimated to be eleven hundred years old, and some historians place its age at fourteen hundred years. The writing and all the illuminations have been done by hand; and according to authorities the book was written and illuminated by the scholar-monks in an old monastery at Kells. Nothing of this monastery, which was founded by Saint Colum Cille sometime during the first half of the sixth century, remains today.

Saint Colum Cille is sometimes referred to as Columba, or as Columbkille, or yet again as Hy-Columbkille. He was born in the northwest section of Ireland at about 521 A. D. He is commemorated as one of the three patron saints of Ireland on June 9, the anniversary of his death in 597. Because of unfavorable political conditions in the part of Ireland in which he was born, Columba took himself to Kells and established there a monastery. The place became for a time a sort of royal burying ground, and in Macbeth, Shakespeare tells of King Duncan's body being.

"Carried to Columbkille,
The sacred store-house of his first predecessors,
And guardian of their bones."

II
THE "Book of Kells" is written entirely in Latin and several different handwritings may be distinguished. In writing of the book, Sir Edward Sullivan says: "The actual writing of the 'Book of Kells' is in itself the embodiment of an early Irish School of calligraphy, which sprang into being in circumstances for which it would be difficult to find a parallel in the history of handwriting in any part of the world. It is acknowledged on all sides that before the arrival of Saint Patrick in about the year 430, the inhabitants of Ireland were all but destitute of a written literature of any kind. Christianity had undoubtedly made some little way amongst the people before the landing of Patrick, and possibly a few Latin manuscripts may have been used in the service of the earliest missionaries in Ireland. In the written Irish language we have no work surviving, except the 'Book of Armagh,' of an earlier date than 1100 A. D."

The "Book of Kells," unfortunately, is not now complete. The manuscript at Trinity College consists of but 339 pages on which have been inscribed the Eusebian canons, the genealogy of Christ and selections from the gospel. How much of the original is missing can only be surmised. It is supposed that the missing sections were lost when the book was stolen in 1006.

Not only is the "Book of Kells" incomplete, but it has been defaced at least twice within the last century. Sometime during the first of the nineteenth century an ignorant bookbinder "trimmed" away part of the original illuminations from the edges of a number of the pages. The page on which appears a portrait of Saint John is one of the pages to have suffered the most at the hands of the unlettered binder. Another outrage perpetrated on the venerable manuscript was when Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort signed their names on one of the blank sheets. The librarian who had charge of the "Book of Kells" at that time not only allowed the royal signatures to be affixed, but is reported to have actually solicited the Queen and her consort to write their name on one of the pages of the precious manuscript.

However, despite the fact that no actual remains of the monastery itself exist today, the book has fortunately not been completely destroyed nor its wonderful artistry entirely marred. The "Book of Kells" survived the Danish invasions of the tenth century and was carefully treasured in Kells Church until the year 1006. During that year, the book, at that time complete and bound in covers of heavy gold thickly studded with various precious stones, was stolen. A few months later, however, the remains of the stolen manuscript were found tipped of their former bejeweled gold covering. The book was discovered buried under a pile of sod not far distant from the original monastery. From then on the "Book of Kells" was kept in the monastery until Henry VIII attacked and forced the monastery to surrender.

III
GERALD PLUNKET, of Dublin, then secured possession of the manuscript, which he retained until it was taken by Archbishop Ussher, who had been given a commission by James I to make a collection of antiquities related to the English Church. What is now remaining of the original of the "Book of Kells" came into the collection at Trinity College in 1661—five years after Ussher had died.

The writing in the book is in narrow columns with the margins embellished with pillars. Arranged above the pillars are evangelical symbols of the evangelists mentioned. The capital letters at the beginning of the gospels are decorated with quaintly grotesque human heads, some of which are on bodies that end as serpents' tails. The work is done in inks of black, blue and red—inks of which the secret of making is lost.

To the educated modern eye, the drawing might appear crude and awkward. But when one considers how long ago these drawings were made, one will not hastily criticize imperfections of figures and the failure to follow nature more closely. The degree of respect for the persons portrayed is measured by the size of the drawing. The Christ, for instance, is drawn larger than any other figure. The Virgin Mary is the second in size and in veneration. Satan appears extremely small. This is to show how feeble the Evil One is in comparison with the powers of goodness.

In illustrating one of the genealogies of Christ, the illustrator must have been in a very unmonkly mood, for imps are portrayed frolicking about on the sacred page with a childish freedom from the restraints of dignity. One imp is seen nibbling on the toe of his neighbor. Another is in the act of executing a series of backward somersaults. A third of the ghoulish tribe is swinging an inflated bladder, that which later became the trademark of the court jester. Two more of the imps—and these, surely, must not be masculine imps—are pulling each other's hair. While others are sticking out their tongues.

Despite the fact that the book was decorated long before the art of coloring had become a science and modern laws of art had been established, the color arrangement is distinctly striking, not to say truly artistic. However, an attempt at description here would be futile.

Tomato Growers Face Problem In Unsold 1925 Pack

Delaware and Eastern Shore Canners Holding One-Half Last Year's Crop In Storage; Foreign Competition Adds To Worries, Is Claim

Not for many years have the tomato growers of Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland been up against the proposition that appears to confront them this spring. Roughly estimated there is about half the crop of last year's canned tomatoes still stored away in Delaware and the Eastern Shore, unsold, and as the tomato crop is one of the largest grown, particularly in Delaware, the question of whether to reduce the acreage or try to compete with foreign-grown crops which began coming to these shores the past year is a problem which the marketing experts and farmers have not yet decided.

The perplexities of the situation are added to by the program which Campbell's of Camden, Heinz and Snyder and other large packers of tomatoes have set up for their establishments. Throughout New Jersey from which state Campbell's get most of their tomatoes, the company has, according to reliable information, been making contracts with farmers at $22 a ton.

Previously and late last year, Campbell's maintained weighing stations and provided transportation from many points in South Jersey for tomatoes to their Camden manufactory. All the farmers of a given section had to do was to haul their tomatoes to that point, where Campbell's, through trucks, train and boat, weighed them and attended to the transportation. The price contracted for was $17 a ton. But this year, the Camden plant is contracting in Jersey at a rate reputed to be $22 a ton and the farmers must weigh and make arrangements to see that their

Inspection For Distinguished Rating To Be Held Here on April 12-13

Announcement was made recently that the annual inspection of the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Delaware will be held on April 12 and 13. The inspection will be conducted by Major Robert M. Danforth, who was a brigadier general in the field artillery during the World War, and Major T. J. Johnson.

The inspection will determine whether the Delaware battalion will continue as a distinguished college in the R. O. T. C. area. Delaware has held this grade for the past two years and Major Underwood and his assistants are making preparations to retain the place.

For some time there has been talk that the Delaware R. O. T. C. would be assigned to Fort Niagara for summer training but this has been denied with the announcement that Plattsburg has again been selected. Captain Morse and Captain Whittemore, located at Delaware, will again be at Plattsburg.

Weekly Hints For Your Garden

By T. MOORE WHITEMAN
Horticulturist

The article appearing in last week's issue of The Newark Post applied mainly to the last week in February.

For those not having prepared flats and sown seed for spring plants it might be said that this is the last week it should be done in order to have plants ready to transplant into the open by May 15. There is not much gained by setting plants outside before that date. If you have seedlings coming along now grow them cool and transplant at least once before setting outdoors.

Before planting seed be sure to have a fairly porous and moderately rich soil. Sift two-thirds good garden loam and one-third well-rotted manure through a three-eighths inch mesh wire screen. Mix thoroughly. If available, add a small quantity of good, clean sand or leaf mold.

Place one-half inch of straw or sphagnum moss in the bottom of the flat for good drainage. Then fill level with sides with the prepared soil. Pack lightly. Make rows with the edge of a trowel.

The depth of sowing varies, of course, with the size of the seed. However, for asters, annual larkspur, candytuft, blue lace flower, delphinium, and seed of similar size, sow so that the seed will be one-quarter inch deep only when covered. This is important now especially, since the sooner the plants reach the surface the sooner they will develop into a suitable size for setting out.

Naturally, care must be taken in watering so that no seed is uncovered. Use a small watering can, a fine hose spray at a distance, or a hand bulb. In watering fine seed such as snapdragon, which is broadcasted, place a piece of cheesecloth on the soil surface before sprinkling. In watering the flats, the secret lies in soaking the soil thoroughly and then deferring the watering operation until the soil is nearly dried out. This does not mean until it is completely dry on top. By watering in this manner you most nearly approach outdoor weather conditions.

It is hardly necessary to state that a sunny window is the ideal place for the flats. But do not have them in a close atmosphere as the tendency will be to produce spindly seedlings. Give them plenty of ventilation, avoiding drafts, a night temperature of about 55 degrees and you will have strong, stocky plants.

MINSTRELS BY LODGE ATTRACT

Big Crowd On Hand To Witness Amateur Show Last Week

All the glamour which surrounds an old-time minstrel show was apparent in the Opera House here Thursday evening last, when the Jr. O. U. A. M. amateur troupe held forth.

The house was crowded when the curtain rose. The time-honored "circle," flanked by end men wearing vivid shades of green and red, the engaging interlocutor, Sambo and Rastus jokes, the irrepressible "ballad singer"—all were present.

Mr. Henry Mote made a capable interlocutor. End men numbered the following: T. R. McMullen, Frank E. Mote, Ralph Whiteman, Earl Mote, Kinsey Whiteman and Franklin Knotts.

In the circle were E. L. Shakespeare, Edward Patchell, Clarence Poole, Harlan Tweed, Marion Walls, J. Tweed, W. W. Dempsey and W. Paul Rhodes.

The Continental Band gave their services to the show and played the overture. Music was also furnished during the evening by the Jr. O. U. A. M. orchestra. A musical skit by Messrs. Shakespeare, Poole, Patchell, Sweeney and Hegaman was a feature. "Embalming Ebenezer," another sketch, pleased the crowd.

Charles W. Colmery, business manager of the show, reported a goodly sum cleared for the Orphan's Home fund. The home is raising money for the purchase of a high grade dairy herd.

ELKTON LOSES WITH 4 MEN

County Seat, Crippled By Loss Of Deibert, Fold Up In Last Minute

After a game fight, lasting through the regular time limit and one extra period, Elkton's basketball team, with only four men in the lineup, went to pieces against Belair in the final minute Thursday night. The Harford Countians rang up 14 points in two minutes, winning 40-26.

At the end of the first extra period, with the score still tied, Deibert of Elkton was banished from the game. With no substitutes, the team was forced to play four men. That ended the game as far as chances to win were concerned.

Deibert was a star of the game during his tenure in office at center, caging five field goals and two fouls. Boote of Belair, however, took down the scoring honors with 20 points, half of his team's total.

The game was fast and furious throughout and thrilled a large crowd of spectators. The lineup:

Methodist Quoit League In Action; Merry Battles Seen As Teams Organize

The utterly harmless but highly exciting game of indoor quoits has taken the place of "lodge meetings," "sick friends" and similar excuses offered by friend husband when he arrives home late in the evening. From now on until June, the Methodist Men's League of the local church will be pitching "ringers," with reckless abandon, twice each month. Their quoit season is under way and going full steam ahead.

Six teams have entered the field for the tournament, including within their ranks such near-champions as Will Lovett, Harrison Gray, Earl Dawson, Dr. Crooks, F. A. Cooch and cent of the deaths, might have been avoided in a majority of instances, if pure milk had been used, according to officials of the State Board of Health.

Years ago, all babies were nourished by mothers, but statistics obtained by the state officials show that practically all of the victims last year were bottle-fed babies. Pure milk with intelligence in proper feeding methods, might have saved most of their lives.

Premature birth, which in many cases might have been prevented with proper instruction in the care of the mother was second highest with 19 per cent.

Pneumonia took 19 per cent. Congenital debility, meaning babies born too weak to fight to continue to live, was third with 18.7 per cent. The other ailment, which went to make up the five embraced in the more than 75 per cent of fatal ills, was malformation with 4.8.

Other causes were whooping cough, 2.6 per cent; meningitis, 2 per cent; influenza, 1.2 per cent; tuberculosis, .5 per cent; bronchitis, .3 per cent; convulsions, .7 per cent; other causes, 17.4 per cent.

With the work which Dr. C. A. Sargent will inaugurate during the spring and summer, giving advice to mothers and aiding them as far as suggestion goes with the ills that beset their children, a big improvement will be developed, it is believed, this year.

He will tell the mothers what they need to do, but will not treat any of the children, or mothers, that being a matter for the family physician.

Rev. Frank Herson, and as the showman says, "others too numerous to mention."

Good-natured rivalry has sprung up between the teams, considerable secret practicing in parlors and on the back porch has been reported, and the games will, no doubt, uncover a great many sensational performers.

"Cow Capacity" Key To Problem Of Dairy Owners

Larroe Expert Urges Buying Of Good Feed, For High Production Of Milk; Much Depends On Owner Of Herd

"Cow Capacity" is what causes a cow getting ten pounds of grain a day to produce 35 pounds of milk, and another cow, under the same conditions and on exactly the same kind and amount of feed, to give only 20 pounds of milk, says the Larroe Institute of Animal Economics.

"Producing milk is not much different than producing shoes or any other commodity except that we here have to deal with a living animal with a milk-producing ability that is more or less inherited," according to the Institute. "One shoe-maker can turn out a pair of shoes to sell at five dollars while another cannot afford to sell them for less than seven dollars. There is a big difference in the production costs. Similar differences hold true in dairying. The breed of the animals, their feed, the quality of the animals, and their management, all have their effect on the cost of their milk production. A good dairyman may be able to produce milk at a price that would financially cripple another dairyman."

"Feed is the largest single item in milk production. It takes about the same amount of feed to keep a high producing dairy cow alive as it does to maintain a cow of limited production. A cow cannot turn out nutrients in the form of milk which she does not receive in her feed, and the big difference in the production of milk from individual cows lies in the kind of feed they are fed and the amount they are able to consume and convert into milk. A heavy producing cow can utilize a large amount of feed, while the small producer wastes it. It is this cow capacity that makes the large producer a more economical producer than the low producer."

"Many dairymen are misled by a false economy into buying 'cheap' feed for their herds," according to the Institute. "In most instances the cheap feed is not really worth as much at its price as another feed at a higher price. A group of cows on feed selling at $54 a ton, averaged 81 cents worth of grain for every 100 pounds of milk produced. A similar herd on $52 feed averaged 87 cents of feed for each hundred pounds of milk. This means that on the basis of milk produced on the higher priced feed, the $52 feed was really worth only $48.40 a ton, or $3.60 less than the price asked for it."

Grange Corner

A plan for increasing the effectiveness of the Grange, in a national way, has been devised by dividing the country into five regional districts, each to be supervised by a deputy, acting under orders from the national master. This indicates increasing Grange activity in behalf of the rural welfare, and is to assist in promoting several advance projects which the Grange will undertake this year.

Two handsome new Grange halls dedicated within a month is the news that comes from Rhode Island, one of the small Grange states but thoroughly organized and very active.

On the Farmer's Week programs in nearly all the states the Grange is now definitely recognized, with frequently a Grange Day, especially set aside, which large numbers of the organization members attend. On such recent occasions at the state agricultural colleges in Iowa, Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin the master of the National Grange has been one of the principal speakers; while he and various other Grange leaders have addressed many other big farmers' gatherings of state-wide character.

One of the active Grange members of New York is Mrs. Florence Knapp, who is secretary of state, the first woman in the United States to hold that position. Mrs. Knapp recently expressed her interest in Grange progress by offering a handsome silk flag to the Grange of the state which should make the highest score for the year 1925. A keen competition resulted, culminating in the award of the flag at the State Grange session.

Several masters of State Granges are trustees of state universities and colleges of agriculture, Grange influence thus effectively manifesting itself in the administration of these educational institutions.

A call for the Grange in Montana is to be met by the sending of organizers into that state, where the farmers are coming to see that the Grange can do far more to promote their interests than some other farm organizations in which they have been putting their trust. A few subordinate Granges were established in Montana several years ago and the formation of numerous locals between now and July 1st is promised.

The company which the National Grange created two or three years ago to carry automobile liability insurance for Grange members only has proved a thorough success and is extending its business into all the Grange states. During its last fiscal year this company increased the volume of its business, over the previous year, by nearly 70 per cent.

The last session of the New York State Grange conferred the sixth degree at Watertown upon a class of 1087 candidates, established a new high mark in the organization. This too in spite of the fact that a terrific blizzard was sweeping over the Empire State at the time, preventing many from taking the degree who had intended doing so.

Every energy of the National Grange, backed up by State Granges and by subordinate branches of the Order in general, is being concentrated in opposition to the plan at Washington for the creation of a national department of education, wholly under Federal control. The Grange has invariably been the advocate of home control of schools and looks askance at the proposed "Federalizing" of the public school system.

For Next Sunday

Following their annual custom, the members of the choir of the First Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Alexander D. Cobb, will present a sacred Easter cantata on next Sunday evening, March 28, at 7:30 p. m.

This year the choir has selected "The King Eternal", a text by Herman von Berge, set to music arranged by Ira B. Wilson. The entire composition is featured by impressive chorus work, requiring careful interpretation. Contrast is secured by the introduction of a mixed quartette in several of the chorus numbers, which will feature Miss Mary Houston, soprano; Mrs. L. L. Lewis, contralto; Mr. James M. Barnes, baritone; and Mr. Eugene Kennedy, tenor.

The solo parts will be handled by Miss Mary Houston, soprano; Mrs. Robert Seasholtz, soprano; Mrs. L. L. Lewis, contralto; Mr. Eugene Kennedy, tenor; and Mr. Alexander D. Cobb, baritone.

A cordial invitation is extended to the people of Newark and vicinity to attend this service of music, which this organization offers as its contribution towards Newark's observance of the Easter season.

On Sunday morning special music will be rendered by the Junior Choir of the church. This organization is composed of boys and girls of the church and was recently organized by Mr. Cobb to supplement the services of the older group.

Pan-Hellenic League Closes Successful Season of Activity

Tonight will mark the close of the Pan Hellenic Basketball League season at the University of Delaware when the Phi Kappa Tau five will meet Sigma Phi Epsilon in the third of a series of three championship games played during the last three weeks.

These two teams were the winners in their respective divisions in the playing for possession of the silver Inter-Fraternity games. They are now cup to be given to the winner of the playing for possession of the silver championship series.

The Pan-Hellenic Basketball League was instituted last year as part of the movement to bring the various fraternities of the school in closer contact. A cup was secured and offered to the winner of a series of games which were to be played in the school gym.

Death Strikes Old Residents

wood, N. J. Mrs. Elliott was the daughter of the late Benjamin F. and Jane Handy Caulk, and was born near Townsend, Delaware, November 19th, 1840. Her father owned the Elliott property in Newark, recently sold to the University of Delaware. It is located on Main street, and for years he conducted a drug store in the eastern end of the building.

Mrs. Elliott lived fifty years in this site. The original building still stands, and is being used by the University to house officials. It is the oldest building in Newark, and the writer has been informed it is more than two hundred years old. No living person remembers just when it was erected.

The funeral of Mrs. Elliott will be held Friday, March 26th, at 2 o'clock, services to be conducted in the Episcopal church at that hour. Interment will be made in White Clay Creek cemetery. She lived and died in the Christian's hope of eternal life. Patience, and a forgiving disposition were truly characteristic virtues of her nature, and during the many vicissitudes of life, when she was brought to the straining point of tribulation, she invariably had recourse to her Bible, and sought comfort and relief. It can be truly said of her and without successful contradiction, that, if she could not say good of a person, she never railed or expressed evil against them. She was a noble example of Christian fortitude and patience, she truly endured to the end.

MRS. ELWOOD McKEE

Mrs. Sara J. McKee, widow of the late Elwood McKee, died at her home, No. 342 East Main street, on Monday night, after a short illness.

Mrs. McKee is survived by a sister, Miss Laura Cavendar, at home, and one brother, in Kemblesville, Pa.
