Law Applicants Increase Daily

This is the first of a two-part series on law school admissions, The Delaware Law School and the possibility of a university law school.—The Editor.

By MIMI BOUDART

The prospect of being accepted at any law school looms very dim this year for thousands of qualified students and especially for Delaware residents.

According to a New York Times reporter Fred Gramam, "the nation's 147 law schools are able to take fewer than one-half of those who want to enroll. In 1961, 23,099 people took the law school aptitude test (LSAT), while over 150,000 took it in 1971."

Law school enrollments rose from 141,499 in 1961 to 94,499 last year. Among women, enrollment soared from 1,489 in 1961 to 8,914 in 1971. Yet, unless many new schools are built in the near future, many experts believe that the present schools cannot absorb the yearly increase in qualified applicants.

A few years ago only 181 students in Delaware took the LSAT, while in 1970, 339 students took it.

Last year, a university sub-committee on legal education sent a questionnaire to twenty law school deans in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and the District of Columbia asking them for their school's enrollment figures for Delaware residents. The results from the ten deans who responded are distressing to Delaware residents.

Only two schools, Howard University and the University of Baltimore had an over 20% enrollment of Delaware residents. Out of 100 average Delaware applications, Villanova University has only eight Delawareans enrolled. The University of Maryland and Catholic University have Delaware enrollments of 12 and five students respectively.

The questionnaire also asked these law school deans if there was a need for a law school in Delaware and a need to train more lawyers. In answer to the first question, yes-6, don't know-2, no-1, no answer-1. The second answer elicited this response: yes-8, no-2.

In response to this crying need for a law school in Delaware, Dr. Alvin Avins, a lawyer with many impressive degrees, established the Delaware Law School last AMTRACK, the National Passenger Service, has threatened to reduce Penn Central rail service on the New York-Washington corridor. This would mean an increasing burden on the limited number of trains serving Newark and Wilmington. The Mid-Corridor Railway Commuter Association, a group of Del., N.J., and Pa. commuters, has formed to oppose the service cutback. A Friday evening and Monday morning train are among those in jeopardy of being cancelled.

Tenured English Profs Receive SGA's Report On Dr. Gordenstein

By MIMI BOUDART

On Tuesday, the English department's Committee on Promotion and Tenure, agreed to make the Student Government Association's Ad Hoc committee report on Arnold Gordenstein part of the record if Gordenstein asks for reconsideration of his case

In a letter sent to the SGA, Charles Bohner, chairman of the English department and of the Tenure and Promotion committee, explained that "Under committee procedures, the request for reconsideration of a decision is made by the individual faculty concerned. The committee normally reconsiders its decision during the semester in which the request is received."

Bohner further explained that there is a precedent in the English department for reconsideration of a contract termination. In 1969, in the fall of his fifth year at the university, John Reddington's contract was not renewed. Reddington waited until the following year, 1970, during his final year to ask for a reconsideration of his case. Bohner claims that it is beneficial to wait a year so that more favorable evidence may be gathered to strengthen a teacher's dossier. Bohner also said that Reddington's case was voted upon quite soon after he requested the new hearing. Reddington's contract was not renewed and he left in the Spring of 1971.

Bohner admitted that "The SGA's report has given additional information about Gordenstein's teaching. Clearly, it is information which we did not have before, and which strengthens the case positively." He added though that, "We must go deliberately in these matters but Mr. Gordenstein will get quick results if he asks for a new vote."

Yesterday, Gordenstein asked Bohner for reconsideration of his case "at the earliest possible convenience." He hopes that his hearing will be held before Spring vacation.

Gordenstein thinks that the SGA's report "is incontrovertible because it is based on original research by the students involved. The students displayed the best scholarly means but could not take a neutral position because of the nature of the subject. Gordenstein feels badly that the students who wrote the SGA report have spent so much time working on it. "It is a shame that so much energy is used for so little results," he says.

If his contract is renewed, Gordenstein has some novel ideas for the future. He, and some professors who teach courses in Latin American history and political science, are considering the possibility of Pan-American or Inter-Continental Studies Programs. He is convinced

Gilbert F. Establishes Security

RHA Begins Investigation

By DEBBIE APTT

As a result of robberies in Gilbert F for two consecutive weekends the Residence Hall Association has established a task force to look into the problem of security on this campus.

The main purpose of this force will be to help educate the students as to what is happening and what needs to be done.

The situation of security was brought to light by an RHA representative from the Dickinson E & F dorms.

CHANGE HALLS

A request was made to have one of the two women's dorms changed to a male hall for security purposes.

At the present time the two female halls are isolated at the very end of campus, with a bridge on one side and a road on the other side, making it very susceptible to anyone.

With warm weather coming this presents even more of a threat because many robberies occur from people climbing in through the opened windows on the first floor.

GILBERT F

Gilbert F, a women's residence hall on east campus, has temporarily solved its burglary problems, it was noted at the meeting, by posting two girls at the exits from midnight to 5 a.m. on weekends to check that the doors stay closed.

The university has informed the women that should this tactic continue to prove successful they will supply paid guards to take over the posts.

A majority of thefts come, however, from a lack of student initiative.

RESPONSIBILITY

It must be emphasized that students must take the responsibility of locking their doors and windows at all times when they are out of their rooms. Only in this manner can security be bettered.

The task force set up by the RHA to help remedy this problem will meet with directors of the Residence Life office and the Security office.

The joint session will be made in an effort to brainstorm some plan to alleviate the numerous breaking and entering and thefts at Delaware.

STUDENT EFFORT

The main emphasis is to be placed on the fact that in order to increase security for students the effort must be made by the students.

Personality Spotlight

Nurse Comforts Laurel Ill

By BARBARA HERRON

After working for several years in a crowded hospital, Blanche Moore came to the university health center to get to know people.

Moore, a licensed practical nurse, spent several years as a private nurse, and seven and one-half years working in intensive care at Wilmington General.

BLANCHE MOORE

The consolidation of three Wilmington hospitals was the precipitating cause for her move to the infirmary. As a result of this merger, working conditions were changed, and she thought that much personal contact with patients was lost. From her genuine concern for people, she felt that "this wasn't nursing."

SALARY

she stated that "money isn't the big thing when you work. Helping the students is better than a big paycheck." At the infirmary, she finds the personal contact with students that was lacking in a large hospital. In this sense, she finds her career in the infirmary challenging, while at Wilmington General, surgical nursing was challenging in a professional sense.

"Too many old people, about my age," she humorously commented, "have this thing about long hair." Resisting many popular myths concerning students of today, she emphatically stated that too often the news emphasizes negative aspects of college life; many people are unjustly influenced by the headlines without searching further.

IDEAS ALTERED

She candidly remarked that many of her own ideas regarding students were altered after working at the university. "I may not agree with all they say, but they do have good reasons for why they think as they do...I'm getting an education about why students think and feel as they do."

Moore voiced concern that too many students do not utilize the infirmary's services to the fullest. The infirmary's potential assistance to students is not restricted to treating physical ailments. Moore stated that any student was welcome to stay overnight if only in need of a good night's rest. If a student is upset, she added, and wants to rest undisturbed, he may come to the infirmary.

With brisk friendliness and concern Moore adds a personal touch to a stay at the infirmary.

Suffocates Black Culture

White Education Crippling

By RHODA MAST

"I worry about black students because things are not getting any better on a campus like the University of Delaware," commented Dr. Charles Hurst, President of Malcolm X College during his speech on "Black Education Progress" Tuesday evening.

"Education has crippled us more than all the diseases put together, because there is no attempt to social exposure." This view was expressed by Hurst throughout his speech. Hurst, wearing a short-sleeved brown shirt and a gold medallion, noted that Vietnam and pollution have been caused by educated men and not by the illiterate.

He feels higher education is geared to brainwash black students into valuing white culture rather than appreciating their own. Using his own experience as an example, he said that after receiving his Ph.D., he felt he should talk, walk, think and visit Europe like a white man. He said it struck him while he was viewing ruins in Rome that there were probably ruins as good in Africa. This was when he became more fully aware of the educational brainwashing he had undergone.

SWAHILI

Hurst noted that Latin and Greek, dead languages are still studied, while Swahili needed for understanding the black heritage, is seldom offered at universities.

"Being black is a way of life and dealing with alienation among Blacks is the main issue rather than integration," Hurst told an audience of mostly blacks in the Rodney Room. "We need to study ourselves instead of having others study us and tell us about ourselves. There is an ignorance among white Americans about black culture that makes even educated people believe myths like blacks are largely shiftless, destructive and happy-go-lucky."

STAGES

Hurst traced and illustrated three stages of the black people in the past twenty years. At the beginning of this period blacks tried to 'become white' by spending millions on cosmetics to make

Roy 'Rides the Rail' On Bahamas Cruise

Fifth in the series on Winterim trips. Due to its length, this story will be published in two consecutive parts.—The Editor

All great scientists and men of the sea have left the world diaries to attest to their experiences. Some, like Darwin and Prince Henry the Navigator, have left journals which have had a marked effect on the course of history.

The university's Bill Condit, AS3, is no exception and offers a diary of a Winterim marine biology cruise near the Bahamas, perhaps to go down in the annals of history. The first half is reprinted below:

By BILL CONDIT

28 DEC. '71

We are late leaving for Beaufort because of car troubles with Avis or something like that. Once underway, boredom sets in until a botticelli game begins. A bad ball joint starts making noises and gets steadily worse. Unable to continue safely in the same car so (stop) at Elizabeth City, N.C. and new car is called for and arrives after an hour and a half layover at a gas station with incredibly bad hamburgers.

Arrive DUML about 2230 hours and find that I am assigned to the bowels of the ship again. Ah well, rumor has it that Don Winslow spent four years at sea without a porthole.

29 DEC. '71

Shove off at about 0830 hours to the farewells of the crew's loved ones. George (the other OPC) is smiling wickedly on the dock. I sense that he knows we are sailing into the Devil's Triangle with four women aboard. Bad omen after bad omen.

We begin the cruise by sampling the coastal waters for suspended sediments, chlorophyll, and other organics. At each station a pump was lowered to depth of three meters below the surface and five jugs of two-and-a-half gallons apiece were filled. Then the pump was lowered to a depth of about three meters above the bottom and the jugs were filled again. Nansen bottles were placed on the pump's cable and tripped when the pump had descended to its greatest depth.

Reversing thermometers record the temperature of the water at depth and the water sample in each bottle is tapped for salinity measurements and nutrient analysis. The water in the jugs is filtered through Milipore filters of first eight microns and then 0.45 microns.

These will be analyzed later at the Smithsonian for quantitative mineralogical data. A subsample is filtered through an eight micron Milipore for chlorophyll content.

The sea is rough enough that some scientists have trouble gaining their sea legs. Roy threw up.

30 DEC. '71

Continue sampling suspended sediments off the North Carolina Coast. A transect takes us out to water deeper than 40 meters (the length of the pump hose) so instead of lowering the pump, a 30-liter Nissen bottle is lowered to grab a water sample. Roy threw up.

Make An Effort

A new student government at the university is on the brink of being chosen. The deliberations have all been finalized and the end products are ready for judgment. After nine months of work on the part of several dedicated people, it is now up to you, the students, to show some interest.

Often times it's easy to ignore the polling places and let the rest of the campus decide the issue for you. It's easy to sit back and complain about how somebody else is running the government. But it's a little harder to read and understand the two proposals, and it's a little tougher to take time to discuss them with a friend so you can gain some insight into the issue. Making an intelligent choice between the two should be the result of these efforts—efforts which reflect an active interest in organizing the student body.

Students are the lifeblood of a university but without a unifying force to guide them, they get lost in the shuffle. A student government provides this force, but only to the extent that its constituents care. We cared enough to criticize the old form of government and work toward the development of a new one. Can we prove that we care enough to actually make a new one work?

Read each proposal in today's Review, make a choice and then go to the polls next Tuesday and Wednesday to vote. It may be a little harder than ignoring the fact, but it's worth it.

Democratic Voice

Students need a fairer shake.

A close look at the structure of this university shows that students often have little control or input into the monolithic structure that is the university.

It is unfortunate that in a country which professes to be democratic, virtually all of its institutions, business corporations, interest groups and organizations are headed by an oligarchy (government in which the ruling power belongs to a few persons). This does not have to be.

What is so wrong with having an organization which is run on the input and consensus of the members and not just a select few. It is perhaps true that it takes longer to get things done when they are done democratically. But this is outweighed by the advantage in allowing those who will be affected by decisions having a say in them. America needs democratization of its institutions. The best place to start is in the universities where open minds and equalitarian instincts are supposed to abound.

We feel that the faculty senate should be expanded to give students an equal voice with the faculty in general university matters such as academic structure and course changes, and regulation of the university community. Administrators should administer what the students and faculty decide. The power of administrators to decide policy should be curtailed.

Meanwhile, students can have a partial input by volunteering to serve on faculty and administrative committees which still have student openings.

America Speaks!

In these days of apathy and uninvolved on the part of the majority of our citizens, we feel that it is truly admirable when a person decides to speak his or her mind on one of the important issues of the day, especially if the opinion is not in tune with prevalent thinking.

With these thoughts in mind, it is with great pride(?) that we reprint this letter that originally appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer on Thursday, March 2. The letter is reprinted in its entirety.

To The Editor:

I cannot for the life of me see what all the fuss is about fur coats. Animals are here on this planet for our personal use as we see fit.

Certainly, we are superior and they are here for our comfort and convenience. They are only taking up precious ground that people could be building houses on.

I do not hate animals nor do I feel all this pampering is necessary. I feel animals are here for one reason, to be used as man sees his needs. They certainly cannot think or feel like a person.

The Great IPP Scandal

by ART HOPPE

Washington

Washington is talking about little else these days than The Great IPP Scandal. On the theory that the rest of the country, as usual, doesn't know what Washington is talking about, here is a brief outline of the plot:

It begins with The President Nixon deciding he'd like to have the GOP Convention this summer in San Diego, it being nearby to the White House in San Clemente and handy to Tijuana.

Unfortunately, San Diego is always jammed to the rafters with tourists in August anyway and why didn't the Republicans go have their convention in Appalachia or someplace, thank you.

That's where the giant International Peanuts & Popcorn conglomerate stepped in. As a gesture of good will toward the local community, IPP offered the Republicans $400,000 in cash and popcorn (which isn't peanuts) if they'd hold their convention in San Diego, which didn't want it the first place.

But that was okay because IPP explained it would make the $400,000 back selling peanuts (which isn't popcorn) to the delegates during the three-day convention. So it was strictly a business deal.

A week later, the Republicans' Justice Department approved a merger between IPP and the Sure Fire Fire Insurance Company.

So much for the unrelated facts. The scandal broke when Andy Jackson, a known columnist, leaked a memo from IPP's tough, widely-respected female lobbyist, Dowdee Whiskers, to her bosses.

"Don't worry, gang," wrote Mrs. Whiskers, "the deal's in the bag. In return for our $400,000 the President, the old Attorney General and the new Attorney General have promised us six more mergers, the Washington Monument and two utility infielders. Please eat this memo."

The moment the story was published, Mrs. Whiskers vanished on a long-planned vacation to Denver where she had a long-planned heart attack.

Immediately Republican leaders from coast-to-coast began issuing statements—two or three per leader. In their final statements all agreed they hadn't bothered to inform top GOP officials of the $400,000 contribution because if the party knew how rich it was it might get overconfident.

Meanwhile, the new Attorney General, taking bold action in the crisis, wrote an incriminating letter to, of all people, the Democratic National Committee and then demanded a Senate investigation to clear his name.

He hadn't read the incriminating letter to the Democratic National Committee before he signed it, he explained, because he was a very busy man and didn't have time to read all the incriminating letters he sent to the Democratic National Committee.

From her hospital bed, Mrs. Whiskers issued a statement firmly denying what her memo said had any relation to what her memo said.

To clinch the matter, IPP officials said Mrs. Whiskers wasn't a tough, widely-respected lobbyist at all but really a zany, drunken crackpot, whom they'd retained as their top Washington representative for years because they believed in hiring the handicapped.

So the scandal, of course, involves the management of IPP. Imagine a huge corporation that would hire drunken crackpots, alienate San Diego and pay $400,000 for what the Republicans wanted to give them for nothing.

It's unbelievable.

Readers Respond Coalition Support?

To The Editor:

I have watched with great interest the genesis of the Newark Voters' Coalition. I have held for a long time that constructive political changes are possible only when the people who want them are willing to undertake a concerted assault on a political system which seems at times unable to overcome its own inertia. Since 1968 I have been involved in such an assault through Delaware's Democratic Party; in that time I have devoted considerable time and effort to the cause of remodeling politics and issues in Delaware. I mention this background in an attempt to forestall personal criticism and confine discussion to the issues which I will raise.

The Newark Voters' Coalition's posters proclaim its goal as being "A Government BY the People & FOR the People." It is certainly difficult to take exception to that slogan; I would only ask, "Who are the People?" Although the Coalition's definition of "the People" is not currently available, after reading their material one is drawn to the conclusion that their People consist, to a very large extent, of students at the University of Delaware. In short, the Coalition appears to be calling on us students to seize the political power we received with the eighteen-year-old vote, and to use this political power to turn out Mayor Handloff and Councilmen Varrin and Thomas.

Now, I have been relatively active in state and local politics for the past four years; but, if I were asked, I don't think I could mention a single thing that Mrs. Handloff or Messrs. Varrin and Thomas have or have not done. If I, who am not particularly apathetic, am so unknowledgeable about the affairs of the City of Newark, what must be the state of ignorance of the vast majority of students here at the University of Delaware!

I am wholeheartedly—in fact, violently—in favor of young voters using their new political power to force constructive reforms through a lethargic political system. But I am also in favor, just as strongly, of political campaigns being conducted on the basis of issues being presented to an electorate which understands these issues. How many university students understand, or care about, Newark's tax structure, street cleaning, garbage collection, or water, sewer, or electrical rates? And yet these are the nuts and bolts issues that mayors and councilmen are called on to decide. The injection of propagandistic phrases can't solve these problems. Now I assume that the Coalition's

Work-Study Students

To The Editor:

One statement in the article in the Review on March 10 on thirteen students losing their jobs at the Instructional Resources Center needs to be clarified.

The federal government does not provide matching funds for work-study students; it provides 80% of the wages with the department having to pay only 20%. Therefore, employing non work-study students takes considerably more money than employing work-study students. The IRC has, I am sure, employed as many qualified and

To The Editor:

I am writing in reply to William Calhoun's letter of March 10, 1972 concerning amnesty for draft-evaders and deserters. Mr. Calhoun's "two irresolvable conflicts" are nothing but sophist legerdemain.

Most people offer amnesty for draft-evaders and deserters because since 1965 this country has been sending masses of its soldiers to Vietnam to kill and maim in a war which is both legally and morally indefensible. We have violated both the Geneva and Hague Conventions, and the

War Society's Fault

To The Editor:

In reference to the March 7 editorial supporting full amnesty for draft evaders, your statements have disturbed me to an extent where I feel compelled to dependable work-study people as possible.

The funds allocated to IRC not only for workers but for all other services and materials is not sufficient this year supposedly due to cuts in the university budget made by the State legislature. Certainly the Office of Business and Finance can find the small amount of money necessary to keep well-trained employees on the job until the end of the semester in IRC without putting the whole university in the red!

Coping with Steam

To The Editor:

I believe I have a solution to the problem of coping with the many steam holes abounding on the campus.

With the heightened interest in things political nowadays, the students at the U. of D. should petition the Federal government to develop the campus as the University of Delaware Hot Springs National Park. Not only would this be an ideal way of coping with the smelly steam, but also it could solve some of the monetary problems of the university. Why, the revenue from picture postcard sales alone would be enormous! Add to that the increased money flow from the thousands of tourists coming to see this great natural wonder, plus the money the Federal government would allocate to the geology department to find the origin of the holes, and the administration could practically eliminate tuitions.

To do this, however, we should and must eliminate the political apathy on our campus. With my tongue held firmly in cheek I urge all to register to vote, and with their new-found political power work to achieve our goal of a National Park and state University on the same hallowed grounds.

'Africa Today'

Dr. Livinus Ukachi, in coordination with the Student Center, will present the next session of the short course "Africa Today" on Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. in the Kirkwood Room of the Student Center. Featured will be a film "Africa Speaks" in which five university students discuss African leaders. No registration is required and all members of the university community are invited to attend.

UN Charter in our prosecution of the war, slaughtered a million Indo-Chinese and made refugees of three times that number. Those who deserted or evaded the draft during this tragic period (which still continues) are the ones who are to receive amnesty. It is not to be a perpetual policy, which Mr. Calhoun mistakenly assumes, and once we stop killing innocent people in Asia, I'm sure the problem of desertion and evasion will not be so acute.

Mr. Calhoun also states that amnesty is "unfair to those who have served and grossly unfair to men who have lost their lives." As a Vietnam veteran, I do not consider amnesty as being at all unfair to myself or those who died. The deserters and draft-dodgers did not send all those men to fight in Nam; the government sent them. The deserters and draft-dodgers are not responsible for those 55,000 deaths; the U.S. government is. So I suggest that we stop mistakenly trying to punish those who saw we were wrong, before the rest of us did.

Obviously, some of those who left, did so for something other than morale qualms, but I think the great majority of them are truly, very conscientious young men. It takes a lot of guts, and a lot of conviction to say goodbye to one's home and loved ones. I know. But I was going to Nam, and the odds said I would be back. There was no such hope for those who went to Canada, or elsewhere. That's courage that I admire. Let's bring them home. We need them.

Partisan Politics

To The Editor:

University of Delaware students have finally recognized their political power. But if their attentions are confined solely to the non-partisan city elections, students will be sacrificing much of their influence. In 1972, Delawareans will elect a President, a United States Senator and Congressman, a Governor, and other state and county candidates. To make their interests known to the candidates and to have them worked upon, university students must work through the two political parties.

For Delaware students, the best way to become involved in partisan politics and to try to influence the choice of candidates is to meet with representative district committees, the basic unit of Delaware politics, in their areas. The 26th Representative District includes most university dormitories south of Main Street and east of Elkton Road. The 26th Representative District Democratic Committee is eager to give the university students the political voice they deserve. 'War Monger'

To The Editor:

It seems hard to decipher for which side Blair Caviness was writing in his letter in the March 14 issue of the REVIEW.

Caviness argues that the representation of Americans as "war mongers" is completely unrealistic." But he goes on to write that if one were to give that definition to a war veteran, he would "then punch you out." If this is true, as we must assume from Caviness's letter since it is stated as fact, then maybe the war monger representation is not "completely unrealistic."

Play Tells Story Of Adam & Eve

"Today I named the fliers, crawlers, swimmers, growlers, and hoppers. Further note: There are creatures here of every conceivable kind, but I, Adam, am the sole and single man."

But then there was Eve, and that's when the trouble started.

Mark Twain turned on his genius, infectious humor, and penetrating insights into the foibles of human nature full force in "The Diary of Adam and Eve" as he examined man's first encounter with woman.

The Alpha-Omega Players, the nation's most active repertory theatre group, will present a play adapted from the short story on Mar. 21 at 8 p.m. in the Rodney Room of the Student Center.

The fully staged production, first presented on Broadway in 1966, intersperses laughter with reflection, joy with sadness and respect with satire.

Starring in the production will be Craig Torrence as Adam, Barbara Lowry as Eve, Jem Graves as The Snake, and Scott Avery on guitar.

The Alpha-Omega Players' appearance at the university is sponsored by the Student Center and the Faculty Senate Committee on Cultural Activities and Public Events. Admission is free and open to the public.

Overcrowded Law Schools...

September. Avins had tried to start a school under the auspices of the university, but was refused. Avins is one of the law school's two trustees.

Many educators and Delaware lawyers are looking askance at Avin's school because it is being run "as a shoestring operation." Although Avins lists six faculty members in his handbook, he is the only full-time teacher with one part-time instructor teaching one course. The other four teachers are "on leave."

Avins has 120 students enrolled paying $1,000 tuition plus various fees. Tuition is the school's only asset. To compound the inexpensiveness of its operation, the school has no building, but rents an office from the YWCA in Wilmington and classrooms for $6.50 a night. So far, the school only has commitments for 5,000 volumes of the 20,000 volumes needed for the law school's library's accreditation.

According to an article in the November '71 issue of Delaware Today, the Delaware Law School hopes to be accredited by the American Bar Association (ABA) by the time its first class graduates. This seems highly unlikely, since it will take more assets than it presently has to meet the ABA's requirements of "a minimum of three full-time instructors and not less than one for each 75 students or major infraction thereof, in addition to a full-time dean and a full-time librarian. Also two-thirds of the total hours of instruction should be taught by full-time faculty only."

Avins knows that he cannot remain in the YWCA to be accredited so he claims that he is saving the tuition for a $300,000 building. The author of the Delaware Today article, Neil Fitzgerald wonders if the "first and second year classes should finance the construction or purchase of such a building." Perhaps, the author suggests, Avins ought to have some other means of revenue than tuition.

The Delaware Law School does not seem to be meeting the great need of a law school in Delaware because out of 134 students enrolled, only 23 are Delaware residents.

Next time: Should the university establish a law school?

According to patrolman Arthur Geesaman of the Newark police, Deborah was hit on S. College Ave. in front of Smith Hall at about 9 a.m. Geesaman, who investigated the accident, said Melie suffered a badly bruised knee and possible concussion and is now with her parents after spending six hours in a hospital. No charges are being placed against either Melie or the driver of the car.

Movie Review

Critics See Film As Art

By CHRISTOPHER HORAK

Christopher Horak is the regular film critic for THE REVIEW. In lieu of a movie review, Horak here presents his philosophy on film. The Editor.

The acceptance of film as a legitimate form of art is one of the major developments which occurred in the sphere of culture in the U.S. during the past decade.

Whether this change in attitude is a result of "enlightened critics" or a more sophisticated audience in general, it is not so much a question of why, but of what took America so long.

Even if one does not consider that the Europeans have always thought of film as art, America still produced such great artists as Griffith, Welles and Ford. Yet looking over the history of film it becomes clear that the cinema was not considered art, because the artist had not yet been identified.

THE STAR

It was the star and his performance which was evaluated, not the total work of the director. This prominence of the actor was not only due to the attitudes of the movie moguls, who saw film in terms of box-office, but also a failure on the part of the critics to differentiate between the aesthetics of the theater and the non-dramatic elements of film technique.

Finally in the late fifties and early sixties, the critics of "Cahier du Cinema" and Andrew Sarris in America formulated the auteur theory, thus recognizing the director as the artist in filmmaking.

MAN IN CONTROL

Only by identifying the director as the man in control of the total work, his personal vision transcending the individual contributions of the production company, could film criticism begin to develop a criterion for evaluation.

Naturally there were critics like Pauline Kael who could not accept the making of a film as anything but a group effort, including cameraman, scriptwriter, and editor. But then Kael, although highly articulate, is also leader of the anti-film-as-art forces.

STYLE

If the director is the controlling artist, his work can be seen in terms of style. The elements of the style are either concerned with philosophical perspective and/or film technique. Thus the auteur theory presupposes a consistency in the style of the director no matter what the subject matter or what genre he is working in.

Being such a young art, film is still evolving. Many aesthetic problems remain to be solved, yet the auteur theory is an intelligent step toward the study of film art.

Coalition

There will be a political rally today at noon in front of Russell Dining Hall, in order to give students an opportunity to rap with candidates in the upcoming city elections.

The rally, sponsored by the New Party, will feature a band and surprise speakers. The rain date is Sunday, March 19 at 3 p.m. in room 100, Wolf Hall.

Silhouetted Sound

By ALICE SIMPERS

It was a regular university Tuesday night, the stars twinkling in a slightly polluted jet sky. West campus slumbered, enveloped in quiet. Then, at about 7:30 p.m. Rodney A and B dormitories were emitting sounds, music. The Free Form Workshop had begun.

The gathering was slow with just an alto sax, bongos, and drums. Later came congas, a guitar, flutes, microphones, musicians, and an evening of creativity. The musicians then began to "get it together" and by 8:30 p.m. the workshop was in full swing. Fenix, the organizer, by this time was deeply into the piano, his eyes radiating extreme satisfaction.

Monday evening, Fenix, who was formerly a disc jockey for WRTI (Temple University station) and is now attending the university stated his expectations and aspirations for this workshop:

"Music is the healing force of the universe. Music is all around us. Music is motion, color, light, energy, action. Music is peace. Music is tranquility. Music is love."

"Many times we look one another in the face and we quickly turn away either because of ignorance, distrust, or ambiguity. But certain times in our own life we have to begin to deal with our own environment, to deal with our own self. This dealing with oneself and one's environment has to begin very, very soon, because time is so very important."

Fenix explained that the workshop is a beginning for musicians to express themselves, in relation to people of their same spirit. For three weeks it has been a meeting of minds "from every framework of music within our scope." It is by no means, he added, a concert, merely, a place to really put yourself out, to meet people with whom you share a similarity of purpose.

"So many times I've heard musicians, poets, artists, actors come to me and say, 'Wow! There's really no place to exhibit my work,' or, 'There's no real place where I can play my ax (which is his instrument).' So now there is a place. Rodney A and B basement lounge from 7-midnight on Tuesdays will be open to musicians who want to express themselves. Also, Fenix's Far-In Production will be opening another workshop in Rodney C and D which will be for folk musicians, poets, artists who want to exhibit their work, and actors — who would like to stage or put on short plays.

"The people who have attended these workshops either to listen, or to take an active part, are very beautiful to me because they overcame the initial paranoia of being in a place where all types of people are. They overcame the paranoia of color and ego in order to produce a movement, a motion, a direction."

Many more people attended Tuesday night's workshop than on the previous meeting nights. Those who couldn't deal with the happenings left; but those who stayed were able to partake in a very unique experience. People were playing, singing, dancing, laughing. But most of all, people were sitting with their heads open, digging on the sounds. There existed a feeling of unity in the room.

At 10:30 p.m., when the workshop session came to an end, the musicians packed up their instruments and left, each to his own private destination. But for a few hours on Tuesday night, some people at the university really touched one another.

"The biggest problem with beginning anything nowadays is that people are very, very paranoid and they have a right to be because we have so many things to fear," said Fenix. "But if you don't stand for something, you will fall for anything. So I put my hopes in the hands of the 'boundless one' and my desires for a creative, expressive unity of thought to develop. I put these desires in the sea or the universal flow. Peace."

Calls For Year Round Winterim

Glazier Wants Reform

By STEVE ANDERSON

"If we have something this good part of the year why can't we have it the rest of the year."

Joel Glazier, ED3, was talking about Winterim. He and Dr. Sarah S. Van Camp, assistant professor in the College of Home Economics, attended the third annual 4-1-4 Conference in Chicago earlier this month. The 4-1-4 Conference (4-1-4 is shorthand for a curriculum innovation at many small, liberal arts colleges whereby students take four courses in the fall, one short course between semesters, and four courses in the spring) is an association of colleges which have a winterim-type program.

"Delaware appeared to be the most innovative school there," Glazier said. "Our Winterim was the most flexible of anybody's. Most of the schools there (about 200 were represented) were small colleges. A lot of them set their programs up in March for the following January."

"But here you can start a winterim project right up to the day winterim starts," he continued. "Also, a lot of the little schools just squeeze a traditional semester course into a month long course. They don't give students and faculty an opportunity to create innovative, new courses outside the traditional curriculum. It was a big ego trip for me....finding out that our program was so good. Everybody at the seminars I went to was really impressed with it."

Teachers Battle For Honorarium; College Cites Deficit In Funds

By BOB DIKE

A heated battle appears to be developing over last December's decision by the College of Education to rescind the $50 honorarium normally paid to local elementary and secondary school teachers, who accept student teachers under their supervision.

The Newark Schools

Education Association, along with the Stanton, Mount Pleasant, and the A.I. Dupont Education Associations, have urged their membership not to accept any student teachers (as of Sept. 1972) from the university until the $50 honorarium is reinstated.

Speaking for the Newark Schools Education Association, Mrs. Sandra Idstein stated, "The association does not consider $50 as adequate compensation for the amount of work demanded of teachers for this service. The amount of time and effort involved in the student-cooperating teacher relationship is at least as extensive as that involved in the professor-student relationship in a Special

Save The Woods!

There is a fantastic piece of woods near the Pencader complex. It borders the side of the parking lot which is near the High Rises. The woods border the Fairfield Community. It is a very fine retreat for those of us students who have discovered it. It is an unexploited wooded area which still has underbush. Lately I have noticed markers (in the woods) and am concluding that much of the fine woods that have been left will be bulldozed.

The Pencader complex already has fine inroads and an ample amount of paths and roads. I would like an explanation as to all the markers which are scattered throughout that piece of woods.

Emily Tuthill, AS2

This is an excellent query and this is one way students can help the campus community by making public, reliable rumors. The first person contacted was Victor S. Rubin, superintendent of grounds in the office of plant operations. "I know of no plans," he said, while admitting that he could be wrong. He suggested that I contact the Office of Planning for further details.

And so I checked with Richard Walker, superintendent of construction in the planning office to see what they had in way of plans. He said that there were two things that could be assumed from the markers.

There is going to be a water pumping station on New London Road side of the Christiana High Rise apartments. "The markers which she probably saw were for the water pipe lines for the Christiana complex," said Walker. He assured me that this would not mean a wholesale cutting of woods.

However this query and the backup investigation led into the revealing of an interesting plan. According to Walker, there is a possibility that there will be an additional parking lot behind the high rises. "We have plans for a parking lot; but it is not approved yet," he said.

The proposed parking lot is supposed to add an additional 200 spaces to the present 200 car capacity. "It is just a matter of time before the parking lot plan is approved," commented Walker. He admitted that this would mean the cutting down of a lot of trees in the near vicinity.

Walker said that the landscaping in this area included a rather wooded area of sizable trees and shrubbery. "I would suggest to anyone who is interested in pursuing this subject to contact Richard Walker in 224 Hullahen Hall or send me your suggestions in writing.

Hot Chocolate

Being a 'hot chocolate' fan, I find it very hard to reconcile to the fact that I cannot get anymore hot chocolate from the scrounge. For the past few weeks, the hot chocolate machine has disappeared and I would appreciate very much if you could get this problem rectified soon.

Frances Wray AS5

With the help of John M. Gerrity, manager of the student center dining hall, you will be drinking hot chocolate again in the next few days. Gerrity was very helpful in his attitude and explained why the problem existed.

The problem, he says, is due to the fact that these machines are designed for a light use and not for the type of use in the scrounge. This heavy use melts the seals and causes all sorts of problems. "We hope that the new ones will be better than the old ones and will last longer," said Gerrity.

Summer School

I would like to make my summer plans and I wonder when the summer school catalogues are coming out?

Diary Of Winterim Bahamas Cruise ...

31 DEC. '71

New Year's Eve brings continuation of work for Doug. Occasionally a wave breaks overboard so I can't say it was a dry New Year's Eve. We are off South Carolina and Guy Lombardo is not. I am glad. Ken is reported missing but a check of the head proves he is with us.

We have all taken an intimacy quiz and I am smarting from a low score. Guess I have no chance of making any of our female compatriots. I shower anyway and have an aura of Lifebuoy about me. Roy throws up.

1 JAN. '72

The seas are particularly rough this morning. Can this be a sign for the whole year? We continue sampling water for suspended sediments.

Off Georgia now and weather is improving. Already, people are becoming irritable. Probably because all the Playboy nudes have been scrutinized carefully and our minds are becoming idle.

Ken appears from below

decks like Captain Ahab and defeats his white whale (Fred) on the other side of a chess board. Roy says his arms are tired from clinging to the toilet.

2 JAN. '72

Off Florida coast now. Weather is warm and calm. A transect over the Blake Plateau takes up to depths of up to 900 meters. Interesting graben structures appear on the depth recorder.

At first I think I am hallucinating from the electronics room odor but the mate, Howard, confirms my findings. He said he was a geology student once. Howard is a good ol' boy, but he's full of bullshit.

3 JAN. '72

Today was exactly like yesterday in every respect. Never have two days happenings been so exactly alike. Actions have become mechanical, thoughts nonexistent. On land we would be in a rut, at sea we are in a trough.

4 JAN. '72

Today we finished suspended sediments work off Cape Kennedy. We are buzzed by a menacing helicopter who thinks we are Russians because the "Eastward" is a North Sea trawler loaded with sophisticated electronic gear.

I feel like Bucher of the "Pueblo." The sun sets next to a launching tower creating a scene of an egg frying sunny side up beside a piece of skinny sausage. Roy threw up.

5 JAN. '72

Arrive at the Blake Escarpment and Blake-Bahama Basin area and begin piston coring. It is a Ewing type with a barrel length of 20 feet triggered by a gravity core so that the core free-falls 14 feet.

We are looking for a unit which laps up against the escarpment and underlies the B-B Basin and is believed to be post-Cretaceous and pre-Miocene age.

Winterim Conference...

Committee, which has responsibility for helping students and faculty set up winterim projects, approving the projects, and funding them if necessary (and possible.) Joel is one of two student members of the committee.

There were only nineteen other students at the conference out of a total of 300 people.

"I think we should take more students to conferences," said Van Camp. "We faculty should get them more involved in the planning stages."

Most of the three day meeting was in the form of small seminars and informal meetings in which various problems of setting up and succeeding with a winterim program were discussed. For example, representatives from Cornell University and the University of Maryland talked with Van Camp and Glazier about the problems of setting up a program at a large school.

Glazier strongly praises the winterim program. "If we can have something this good part of the year, why not the whole year. Let's eliminate finals and required courses and have winterim all year long," he said. "During winterim school is less formal... you get to know your teachers. Then in February it's back to the regular grind," he continued. "It makes me hate the rest of the year."

themselves more acceptable, he said.

With Martin Luther King came an era of awareness, dignity, male identity, and the new belief that a black was someone. Stokely Carmichael created the "Black Power" era. Finally Malcolm X contributed a new kind of black man. Rather than educating away from black people, he wanted to educate toward them and eventually toward all mankind, Hurst said.

Hurst thinks the main power of blacks in the future will be political and in twelve years there will be a black vice-president or president. Until that time the black political party should not be permanent, but learn to play Democrat against Democrat, Republican against Republican for their own advantage, he added.

Teacher Honorarium...

Problems course." Idstein added that teachers very often do not keep the money for themselves but instead donate it to their department for the purchase of new supplies and equipment.

Dr. Charles Staropoli, director of clinical studies at the University, cited financial problems and a re-structuring of the student-teacher program as primary reasons for the honorarium's termination, while adding that the $50 is understood to be a token, as the amount after taxes is only $35.

According to Staropoli, $21,000 was allocated for students and co-operating teachers, and with 600 student-teachers this year, the program was short $9,000. "Usually there is enough money around to cover this amount, but because of the financial situation no money was available," explained Staropoli.

Two alternatives are being considered in lieu of the $50 honorarium. The first alternative would allow co-operating teachers to enroll in a university course at no charge, while the charging of a laboratory fee for student-teachers is a second possible substitute for the honorarium.

Dr. Staropoli chided the association for their delay in communicating with him over the matter and also felt their position is rather, "unprofessional for a professional organization."

Newark Voters Coalition...

candidates are in favor of lower taxes, garbage collection, solving the traffic problem, and all sorts of other really neat stuff. But how many university students understand these issues? How many are willing to try to understand them?

If I could be convinced that the Coalition satisfied the following criteria, I'd support it wholeheartedly:

1. The Coalition should make a determined effort to educate students about local issues. Local issues are NOT phrases like "A Government BY the People and FOR the People." Local issues ARE detailed programs for tax reform, for more efficient provision of city services, and for more energetic pursuit of environmental protection.

2. The Coalition should demonstrate that it is not ego-tripping on the eighteen-year-old vote. It should be able to show an honest concern for the welfare of the City of Newark, and not just a desire to flex political muscles without any real goal or purpose.

3. Students at the University of Delaware should begin to develop a concern for the community in which they live. If students don't care about Newark, how can anybody justify their voting for its government? And, right now, I don't see too much evidence of students' concern for the Newark community.

But right now I am disturbed by the Newark Voters' Coalition's failure to state its precise goals before it states its methods. Its goal appears to be to get its candidates elected. Buy why? What will they do once they're in? Why should I vote for them, rather than for Mrs. Handloff?

So, until I am convinced otherwise, I am afraid that the Newark Voters' Coalition does not really deserve students' support; neither, however, does Mrs. Handloff. Unless students here begin to take an active interest in this community's strengths and shortcomings, problems and answers, they should stay out of municipal politics.

Helfand Dispells Enigma . . .

very successful since his senior year in high school when he posted a 9-1 record. As a sophomore at Delaware, Helfand has a winning record on a mediocre team and as a junior, he was a major contributor to the 18-2 record that Delaware compiled.

Golf coach Scotty Duncan commented on just why Helfand is so successful in all of his endeavors. "Ken is an individual who early in life learned to discipline himself and as a result he is able to become a hardnosed competitor. He has a certain type of magnetism that seems to draw people to him for leadership. This trait has brought him recognition in everything he has done both academically and athletically and we're tickled to death to have him as a member of our team. This year's squad is potentially the best I've ever had at the university and I think that Ken and Pat (Nilon) will give the inspiration and leadership necessary for a successful season."

Helfand has played his last game at the Delaware Fieldhouse but his golf opponents this spring should beware. It's doubtful that Helfand will leave any worse than he started-on top.

Coach Duncan sums it up well by saying, "I sure wouldn't want to compete against him. The name of the game in golf is put the ball in the hole or go home and Ken doesn't go home very often."

which the Hens led until the final week of the season last year.

"There are a number of good teams in the conference this year," he said. "Lafayette is definitely the team to beat, no question about it. Rider will be difficult, and Lehigh also looks strong. It's certainly a tough proposition for us, but we're really looking forward to the challenge. I'd just like to get outside, though."

SCRIMMAGE SET

Weather permitting, Hannah will get his first challenge tomorrow afternoon when the Hens entertain PMC in a scrimmage game behind Delaware Fieldhouse. The regular season opens Wednesday, when American U. comes to Newark for a 3 p.m. encounter.

Helfand 'Dispells' Two - Sport Enigma

By DICK McALLASTER

In this age of specialization in college athletics, the two sport athlete is a rarity. Ken Helfand transcends this rarity to the utmost degree.

Helfand has represented the university in varsity basketball and golf for the past three years. This year he was co-captain of the basketball team and will be co-captain of the golf team.

As a basketball player, "Helf" has had many unique experiences. Although he is only 5 feet 10 inches, his quickness allows him to compete with the taller men. As a senior in high school, he led P.S. Dupont to the state championship and a 19-2 record. En route to the championship, Helfand earned All-State honors.

Helfand's freshman year at the university saw him leading the team in scoring and assists. As a sophomore, he had his best varsity year statistically. Even though the team had a mediocre record, Helfand's contributions earned him All-MAC 1st team and All-ECAC Division II honors. He didn't score as high as clip as he did as a freshman, but Helf maintained a 15 point average while emerging as the team playmaker.

Last year's team tested Helfand's talents. A series of resignations by key members of the team left a very depleted squad of six players. Even though the team ended up with a losing record, Helfand's leadership qualities shone brightly. He sacrificed some scoring in order to take full advantage of the scoring talents of Lee Swayze.

This past season culminated all of Helfand's efforts. While relaxing at his apartment, he commented on the team that won 18 of 25 games. "This year's team was the best I've ever played on. The increased recruiting effort over the past couple of years was evident this year.

KEN HELFAND

Delaware basketball is on an upsurge and I hope that the rise continues. In order to attract good competition, the university has to move up to the competition's level both in talent and won-loss record."

In golf, Helfand has been

Hen Nine Prepares For 33 Games; Hannah Anxious For Outdoor Play

By JOHN BURKE

Seven weeks of indoor practice at Delaware Fieldhouse has Bob Hannah and his Blue Hen baseball team itching to get outdoors in preparation for an ambitious 33-game schedule.

"I'm especially anxious to get outside because it provides me a much better opportunity to evaluate the players' progress," said Hannah, who has 100 career wins against just 56 losses in seven years at Delaware. "We're all tired of playing indoors."

Hannah's main problem this spring appears to be the lack of an established pitching staff. Of the seven returning lettermen due back, only two—Bob Roelke and southpaw Joe Nolan—are pitchers. Collectively, they hurled only 33 innings last season.

PITCHING?

"Pitching certainly remains a question mark at this point," said Hannah. "Potentially, we have a good collection of pitchers, but as of now, we lack in leadership at this position. They've made good progress as a group, but it's really difficult to tell until I watch them outside under true competitive situations."

Seven other pitchers are presently competing for the remaining starting jobs. They include seniors Terry Brown and Glenn Forbes, junior Dave Hannaway, and sophomores Rick Shaw, Larry Ryan, Greg Diehl, and Bob Anderson.

HITTERS RETURN

Offensively, the Hens do not seem to be as uncertain this spring—last year's top three hitters are all returning. Heading the list is senior and captain Fred Blome, who led the 1971 team in batting average (.351), runs (23), and walks (18), and tied for the team leadership in hits (27) and doubles (3).

Outfielder Mark Cacciatore, like Blome, was an instrumental member of last year's squad. He tied Blome in doubles and in hits while compiling an average of .346, second best on the team. Cacciatore also tied Charley Riley, another returning letterman, in home runs with three. Riley, a shortstop, had an outstanding .277 average last year after not playing ball for four years. Senior catcher John Aneruosis also will be back—he hit .318 a year ago, the team's third highest figure.

"All of these boys played excellent ball last year," said Hannah. "Blome has exceptional leadership qualities and the other fellows respond well to him because of this. And Riley has surely proven to be a very positive addition to the program. All the upperclassmen are good leaders."

Hannah, however, may be forced to do some shuffling among his returning players. "Blome has been bothered with a shoulder problem, and may play first base until it gets a little warmer," he said. Second base also remains an uncertain position. Senior Bob Riley lettered at that spot a year ago, but has been switched to third base this winter. Cacciatore could be moved to the infield to fill the vacancy at second base.

Review photo

"We're lacking defensively if Blome or Cacciatore is moved to the infield," Hannah noted. "However, we have some fine outfield prospects who would allow me to move either one. Gary Begnaud has been every impressive there, as have Andy Haman and Ken Rouh, a freshman. We have as good depth as we've had in some time, and this allows me to move the personnel around more."

DIFFICULT TASK

Hannah foresees a difficult task this year in winning the MAC Western Section title.

At N.C. State Tomorrow

Trackmen Open Outdoor Season

A schedule which features 13 meets, only one of which will be at home, highlights Delaware's outdoor track season.

The Hens, under head coach Jimmy Flynn, will open their year tomorrow at North Carolina State in a triangular meet that will include Appalachian State along with the Wolfpack. This will mark the first time the Hens will be meeting either of the schools.

Reappearing on the schedule after a one-year absence is Temple. The Owls will replace Lehigh, one of the two teams that handed Delaware a loss in last year's seven-meet schedule.

BUCKNELL HOME

Otherwise, the dual-meet schedule remains the same as last season. The opponents include Gettysburg, Lafayette, Rider, Drexel and Bucknell. The Bisons, incidentally, will provide the opposition in the Hens' lone home appearance of the year. That meet is slated for April 22.

The trackmen will have an opportunity to compete against some of the top people in the East as the Hens are entered in four relays—American University, April 1; Colonial Relays in Williamsburg, Va., April 7; Mountaineer Relays in Morgantown, W.Va., April 15; and the Penn Relays, April 28-29. They are also scheduled to compete in the IC4As, May 26-27.

HURDLES STRONG

"I think are strengths and weaknesses outdoors will be the same as they were indoors," noted Flynn. "That means we will be strong in the hurdles with captain Bob Stowe and Joe Schlosbon. Our quarter-milers—Lloyd Mears, John Flickinger, and Ed Mongan and half-milers—Mongan, Pete Sukalo and Chuck Stewart all look good."

For the first time in several years, the Hens appear to have depth in the distance events with three milers—Mike Diamond, Paul Maguire, and John Strojny and three three-milers—Bob Mueller, Rick Whaley, and Ken Hunt.

With the 220 also appearing to a potentially good event, it leaves just the short sprints as the weak area in the track events for the Hens.

It's a different situation in the field events.

FIELD EVENTS WEAK

"We're very weak there," confirmed Flynn. "We're poor in the shot put. We don't have a high jumper who can go over 6'2". And, we have question marks in the javelin and pole vault."

The Hens' best field events will be the long jump with Jim Sieman, who has the ability to leap 23 feet; and the triple jump with John Fisher and Preston Bowden, both of whom are capable of breaking the school's outdoor record of 45'10 1/4"

Delaware also has potential in the discus with John Denver, John Hrycak and Greg Carney and in the javelin with Charles Palmer and Chris Zahl.

Scrimmages Improve Depleted Stickmen

By BILL HOEFMAN

Although Delaware's stickmen have lost 15 lettermen and nine of ten starters through graduation, lacrosse coach Mickey Heineken is still optimistic for a good season.

According to Heineken, "the team is coming along very well considering the great loss of lettermen. We look forward to Lee Levis, a top-scorer last year, with 33 points to lead the offensive attack." There are only five returning lettermen with Levis the only previous starter.

"The team will have to shape up tremendously in the course of their first few games if they want to make a success of the season," related Heineken. Villanova, a non-conference team, is the Hens' first opponent, March 28 at home. The team will then begin a defense of their MAC title the first week of April with contests at Gettysburg and Lehigh.

In two scrimmages, Heineken has been pleased to see that the team has been coming along so well, but does admit there are numerous flaws in the team's defense. He commented: "Our inexperience really showed in the scrimmages. We don't set up for goals well enough. But I think we can remedy that in the next few weeks with the right practice drills."

Heineken will leave the goalie position open another week or so because he is more concerned with obtaining a well balanced midfield. "Once I find out the style our midfield will use, it will be easy to find a goalie suited to that style. I believe the key to a winning team is good midfield depth." Heineken wants to concentrate the team's efforts on a better defense in the upcoming scrimmages because he believes a good defense will improve other aspects of the team's game.

On defense, the only experienced players will be Steve Mockbee, Bill Cain, Tom Hnatowski and Ray Druss. Fred Schademan and Jeff Young will provide the backbone of the midfield. Co-captains of the team are midfielders John Miller and John Feeney.

Heineken cites the teams to beat this year as F&M, Lehigh, Bucknell and Drexel. The Hens' schedule is expected to get
