When Marty McFly asked Doc Brown why he built a time machine out of a DeLorean, he only had one answer.

"The way I see it, if you're gonna build a time machine into a car, why not do it with some style?" he replied.

That's exactly what the owners of Captain Blue Hen Comics were thinking when they parked a DeLorean in front of their store Wednesday in celebration of "Back to the Future Day," which pays homage to the popular film trilogy from the 1980s.

"Back to the Future Part II" shows characters Marty McFly (Michael J. Fox) and Doc Brown (Christopher Lloyd) traveling three decades into the future to Oct. 21, 2015, to prevent Marty's son from going to jail.

Fans celebrated across the country on Wednesday and many theaters even showed the movie.

Joining the ranks of major cities like New York and Philadelphia, Newark will soon be home to a bicycle share program.

Initiated by the University of Delaware's College of Health Sciences and paid for by sponsors, the program will be free to riders for the first four hours.

Some of the bikes will be stationed at the STAR Campus, home to the College of Health Sciences and a growing number of businesses. However, bikes also will be available other places on campus and around the city.

Kevin Rude, of Newark, brought his DeLorean to Blue Hen Comics on Wednesday in honor of Back to the Future Day.

FUTURE

From

Days of Knights featured a Back to the Future board game, and the Newark Area Rotary Clubs held a "Save the Clock Tower" fundraiser at the clock tower near the corner of Main and Academy Streets. Money raised will be donated to The Delaware KIDS Fund, which provides goods and services to children at risk and in distressed situations.

The clock tower is a reference to the first movie in the trilogy, in which Doc and Marty power their time machine using a lightning bolt that struck the clock in the courthouse square. They learned of the lightning strike through a newspaper article from the future that advertised a fundraiser to help repair the damaged clock.

At the comic shop in Market East Plaza, visitors obtained a new Back to the Future comic, bought themed sandwiches from the food truck Wildwich and posed with a DeLorean.

Kevin Rude, of Newark, purchased the DeLorean 20 years ago because not only is he a fan of the movie, he also liked the car's "timeless lines."

"Plus, it's easy to clean," he said. "A lot of people didn't even know the car until the movie."

Rude added that he doesn't normally show off the car — he drives it.

"We take it to go get ice cream," he said, laughing.

However, when he was approached about bringing it to Wednesday's event, he couldn't say no. He said he's just happy he can bring joy to movie fans of all ages and raise money for The Delaware KIDS Fund.

"I'm glad to help any charitable cause," he said.

Sarah Laskowski, 17, of Bear, had her picture taken inside Rude's car and, as a fan of the movies, was pretty excited.

"This is like once in a lifetime," she said.

She said she first watched the film in middle school and was immediately drawn to all of the futuristic gadgets the movie predicted might be available in the future. Now that the "future" is finally here, Laskowski said she's a little disappointed there are no hoverboards or flying cars quite yet.

"I think this is so cool," she said. "The future is actually here today. No stuff really flies, but it's still cool."

Rebekah Fowlkes, 25, of Newark, who was dressed as Marty McFly, and Harry Simon, 22, of Dover, who was dressed as Doc Brown, also posed with the car.

Fowlkes was dressed in full McFly gear from the self-drying jacket down to the self-tying Nike shoes and the pink hoverboard. She said she often wears her costume to comic conventions.

Simon, who donned a patterned shirt and a wig of crazy white hair, said he first watched the Back to the Future movies when he was 10 years old and was hooked.

"I've been looking forward to this day for most of my life," he said, calling himself a "super fan."

Aside from the fact that the films are meant to be comical, he said he enjoys them for other reasons.

"I like the science fiction aspect of it," Simon said. "And the fact that they used a hunk-a-junk car and made it famous."

"It's a timeless movie," he added. "For some reason, people just keep coming back to it."

At Switch Skateboarding, Niki Vella and her 11-year-old son, Francis, posed with a replica of the pink hoverboard Marty rides in the second movie.

"We're very happy Newark decided to do this," she said.

Joey Simpers, owner of Switch, said he ordered the hoverboard online and invited people inside the shop on Wednesday to take pictures for discounts on their merchandise. Meanwhile, the film played on TVs around the store.

"We're fans of the movie," Simpers said. "Who isn't?"

Vella said she was a huge fan in the 1980s and passed her love of the movie onto her son, who she says is "obsessed."

On Wednesday, Francis couldn't even decide on a favorite character.

"That's a hard one," he said. "But the hoverboard is cool."

Signal planned for frustrating Main Street crosswalk

Light will be installed this winter

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

Motorists often get stuck waiting several minutes for pedestrians to cross East Main Street at the University of Delaware Green, but a new signal planned for the crosswalk may soon alleviate some of the standstill, especially during class changes.

For years, the city has been working with the Department of Transportation and the university to develop a plan to signalize both the crosswalk there and on Delaware Avenue at The Green. The projects will improve pedestrian safety and traffic flow; however, work on the Delaware Avenue signal has been pushed back due to a proposed cycle track and other issues.

Last week, council approved the funding for the Main Street signal, and construction is slated to begin this winter.

Public Works Director Tom Coleman said the signal will be timed with the light at Main Street and South College Avenue, meaning when that light turns red for Main Street traffic, so too will the new light at the crosswalk, allowing allow pedestrians to cross. When the light turn green, pedestrians will have to stop to allow traffic to flow.

Currently, traffic must constantly yield to pedestrians in the crosswalk.

DelDOT will build the signals using city funding and will take out one parking space on Main Street during the process. The project is estimated to cost $115,563 and includes an upgrade to a black fluted ornamental pole and mast arm requested by the university. Coleman said UD agreed to fund the $9,102 upgrade and will reimburse the city once everything is installed.

Following reimbursement, the project will cost the city $106,461.

Councilman Rob Gifford questioned why the city didn't ask UD to contribute more money toward the new signal because the crosswalk is partially on their property and used frequently by college students. He encouraged staff to seek additional funding from the university.

"I don't think we asked for more than necessarily this," Coleman responded.

Rep. John Kowalko echoed Gifford's concerns.

"I think it's the responsibility of the University of Delaware to contribute to a situation that they are in some ways responsible for," he said.

Councilman Stu Markham asked for a police presence to enforce the new signal rules once it is installed.

"This will do no good if the students ignore it and just walk across," he said.

Council voted 6 to 1 to pay DelDOT $115,563 for the new signal with Gifford as the opposing vote.

Newark author pens first self-published book

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

When 59-year-old John Micklos, Jr. thinks back to his childhood, he remembers his fear of the basement. Like most children, he was scared of the darkness, the creepy creaky stairs and the shadows of what may or may not have lurked behind that box of old winter sweaters.

And don't forget about that "moany, groany, chill-you-to-the-boney" sound, as he calls it.

Eventually, Micklos, now an author of nearly 25 children's books, outgrew his fear, but as kid he was much like David — the main character in his latest title, "The Sound in the Basement."

The picture book is his first self-published title by his own First State Press and chronicles the adventures of young David as he overcomes his fear of the basement and searches for the source of the "moany, groany, chill-you-to-the-boney" sound he keeps hearing.

Micklos, who was born in Newark but grew up in Pennsylvania, moved back to the area with his family 35 years ago and lives in the West Meadow neighborhood off Possum Park Road. His interest in writing started when he wrote his first book in second grade called "Tubby the Pig on the Moon," although it was never published.

He studied journalism and creative writing at Ohio University and spent 30 years working at the International Reading Association on Barksdale Road, which is now called the International Literacy Association. Micklos was editor-in-chief of Reading Today, the IRA's membership newspaper for literacy academicians and classroom teachers and interviewed several children's authors while working at the newspaper.

"By reading their books, it kind of deepened my interest in children's literature," he said.

He started writing "Daddy Poems" and other family-related poetry books as well as numerous history and social studies books about the Revolutionary War, Alexander Graham Bell and Amelia Earhart on side until 2011, when he decided to make writing his main focus.

Micklos said writing a book takes a lot of time, patience and creativity. He worked on "The Sound in the Basement" for 15 years before publishing it himself a few months ago, choosing to find his own illustrator rather than go through a commercial publisher.

"I wanted creative control over it," he said. "I had this vision for the book in my head."

Micklos said he wanted to write a book that would help kids face their fears, whatever they may be, and a lot of kids fear the basement. He pulled from his own life experience in coming up with the story because he, too, used to be terrified of going down there. He remembers telling his mother to keep the door open and talk to him from the top of the stairs whenever he went into the basement.

He said "The Sound in the Basement" can relate to any fear and is meant to teach children that things are not always what they appear to be — sometimes it's just their imagination playing tricks on them.

Unlike David, Micklos never overcame his fear, he just grew out of it.

"Maybe if I had read this book I would have," he said.

Over the years, Micklos has enjoyed writing non-fiction but said there's nothing like seeing pictures bring his fiction stories to life. He loves being able to inspire and teach young readers and hopes his books become part of children's favorite memories with their parents.

"As an author, that's kind of the ultimate — to know families are enjoying your book together," he said.

The book is available for purchase on Amazon.com.

Newark-based author John Micklos recently penned his first self-published children's book under First State Press.

community," said Michael Smith, director of strategic initiatives and partnerships for the College of Health Sciences.

The bike share will begin in the spring.

To run the program, UD has contracted with the Gotcha Group, an Atlanta-based company that runs advertising-supported bike and car share programs at several college campuses. As part of the deal, Gotcha will supply at least 75 bikes initially, with the expectation of adding 25 bikes annually for the next three to five years.

The bikes will be stored in "corrals" around Newark, and riders will be able to use a smartphone app to gain access to a bike.

"The corrals will be strategically located in eight or 10 places around the community and campus," Smith said, noting the exact locations haven't been decided. "You can pick it up whether you're going to Main Street or class."

Advertising on the corrals and the bicycles will pay for the $1,200 cost of each bike and allow most riders to use the program for free. However, those who keep the bikes for longer than four hours will pay approximately $5 per day.

One of the sponsors is SevOne, the technology company that recently opened an office at the STAR Campus that will house more than 200 employees.

Rick Harman, vice president of human resources for SevOne, said the program will be beneficial for the company's workers, who will be able to use the bikes to get to other areas of campus or to downtown.

"It will be great for us as a tech start-up looking for a creative way to get around other than cars," Harman said. "We have a young active group, and it's fun to say, 'Let's hop on a bike and head to the Creamery or the Little Bob.'"

Ricky Nietubicz, spokesman for the city of Newark, said that while the city is not financially involved in the program, the bike share fits in with several other initiatives Newark has undertaken recently to make the city more bike-friendly.

"It's really exciting," Nietubicz said. "We're very hopeful it will work out."

City to convert to LED streetlights

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

The city of Newark is planning to replace nearly 2,000 streetlights with LED fixtures that officials say last longer, will reduce light pollution and cut down on maintenance and energy costs.

The effort is part of the Delaware Municipal Electric Corporation's LED Streetlight Conversion Project and last week, council voted unanimously to allocate the necessary funding to participate.

Newark's Electric Department will replace 1,982 cobra-head streetlights with Leotek LED fixtures, which, according to Electric Director Rick Vitelli, were recommended based on cost, warranty and references from other cities that installed the same lights.

Main Street's fixtures have already been converted to LEDs, so the pending work will be focused on other major roads like Delaware Avenue, Elkton Road and Cleveland Avenue. Streetlights in residential areas will not be affected.

Vitelli said switching to LED will reduce maintenance costs due to the avoided labor associated with changing the current light bulbs, which costs $13,562 a year.

The city will also save approximately $90,573 per year in energy costs. The new bulbs produce better light distribution and less light pollution, Vitelli said.

Converting to LED will cost $459,759, but Finance Director Lou Vitola said last week that DEMEC has secured a low-interest loan commitment from the Delaware Sustainable Energy Utility to buy the lights. After installation, DEMEC will invoice the city for its share in the program costs to meet the repayment to the SEU. The city will then use the energy efficiency component of its green energy funding for its share of the program costs, as well as money from the Conservation Advisory Committee.

The only out-of-pocket investment for the city is the $100,000 allocated to the CAC, which will be paid back in less than 14 months, Vitola said.

Council unanimously approved the spending.

"I really strongly support this," Councilwoman Marge Hadden said. "It really is the way to go, and these lights will last 20 years."

68th-annual parade headlines slate of Halloween events

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

Whether you're a ghou, goblin, princess or witch, there are plenty of ways to celebrate Halloween and autumn in Newark. Here are five events in the next two weeks that are sure to get you in the spooky spirit.

Suburban Plaza Harvest Festival

Saturday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Suburban Plaza

Head down to Suburban Plaza off Elkton Road on Saturday for the 20th-annual Harvest Festival, a free family-friendly event packed with entertainment, prizes and Halloween-themed fun.

A costume contest for children 12 and under will begin at 11 a.m. in the Plato's Closet parking lot with Suburban Plaza gift certificates for first, second and third-place winners. Concord Pet will also be hosting its annual doggie costume contest. Registration is from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and a winner will be announced at 2 p.m.

Starting at noon, there will be free hot dogs and soda as well as food samples in front of Amalfi Pizza, free cotton candy at Fulton Paper, cookie decorating at Acme, face painting at Second Source and raffle prizes. Children can also go trick-or-treating at participating stores around the plaza and meet costume characters like Elmo, Darth Vader and Princess Anna and Princess Elsa from Disney's Frozen.

Attendees are encouraged to participate in a poison apple contest, hula hoop contest and watch a variety of shows taking place in the park next to Painting with a Twist throughout the event.

Newark Arts Alliance Harvest Arts Festival

Saturday, Noon to 5 p.m.
Academy Lawn

Stop by Main Street's Academy Lawn on Saturday afternoon for the seventh-annual Harvest Arts Festival hosted by the Newark Arts Alliance and sponsored by the Downtown Newark Partnership.

Admission is free, and more than 20 local artists will have fine art, crafts and jewelry for sale. There will also be live music and a children's art activity.

For a full list of artists, visit www.newarkartsalliance.org.

Newark's Annual Halloween Parade and Trick-or-Treat Main Street

Sunday, 3 to 5 p.m.
Main Street

This Sunday, take part in the local tradition that is Newark's 68th-annual Halloween parade and go trick-or-treating down Main Street for twice the fun.

Marching bands, floats, antique automobiles and costumed characters will stroll down Main Street from Tyre Avenue to the University of Delaware's Old College. Following the parade, costumed children can go trick-or-treating at many of the downtown stores and businesses as well as take pictures in a decorated area on Academy Street.

Main Street will be closed from Library Avenue to North College Avenue starting at 2:30 p.m., as will Tyre Avenue and Delaware Circle and Delaware Avenue from Chapel Street to Library Avenue. All municipal lots will offer free parking.

There is no rain date for the parade. In case of inclement weather, please call the Leisure Time Hotline at 302-366-7147.

George Wilson Center Halloween Party

Thursday, 4 to 5:30 p.m.
George Wilson Center, 303 New London Road

Children ages 3 to 12 are invited to the George Wilson Center on Thursday for a special Halloween party.

There will be games, refreshments and a costume contest.

The cost is $2 at the door.

Bird rescue volunteer sees work as 'giving back'

By KARIE SIMMONS

ksimmons@chespub.com

GET TO WORK

SPOTLIGHT ON NEWARK'S
WORKING MEN AND WOMEN

Paulette Derkach remembers the first time she set a bird free.

It was a warm, sunny day in Maryland, and the red-tailed hawk she was carrying was eager to get out — almost as eager as Derkach was to set it free. She opened the blue plastic bin, laid it on its side and knelt down in the grass to coax the bird out.

The hawk sat on the side of the bin for a moment, taking in the familiar surroundings, before spreading its wings and soaring into the sky.

Derkach was in awe.

"The raptors are just so majestic," she recalled last week. "They're so majestic when they open their wings."

Her first release happened just a few months after she started working with Tri-State Bird Rescue and now, almost seven years later, she has cared for and released more birds than she can count. She volunteers once a week at the rescue and research center nestled in White Clay Creek State Park just north of Newark, and to her, there's no better way to spend her time.

Derkach, who lives in North Wilmington, joined Tri-State after retiring from an administrative office job at a chemical company. She had always loved birds and enjoyed watching them in her backyard, so when she heard Tri-State was looking for volunteers, she jumped at the opportunity. She is now a certified bird care assistant.

"I said to myself, 'That might be something I want to do when I retire,' so I did it," she said. "I feel good about it. I feel like I'm doing something good for the environment and giving back when I come here and help the birds."

Tri-State Bird Rescue and Research was founded in 1976 and operates today out of the Frink Center for Wildlife. The nonprofit has 12 paid staff members and more than 200 volunteers who work together to rehab injured, orphaned and oiled wild birds with the goal of returning healthy birds to their natural environment. So far this year, they have cared for more than 2,400 native and 500 non-native birds.

Take a quick tour around the property, and it's clear there is something at Tri-State for every bird — pools for water birds like ducks and gulls, incubators for baby birds, large cages for hawks, owls, eagles, turkeys, woodpeckers and songbirds, and even an oil spill facility where birds are washed with Dawn dish detergent to clean their feathers.

Derkach said people call Tri-State to report injured or sick birds in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware and if they can't bring the bird in themselves, a volunteer traps the bird and transports it to the Newark facility — but it's not easy. In fact, Derkach said it can be quite dangerous.

She recalled a time when she was taking an owl out of its cage so the veterinarian on staff could administer medicine. She threw a sheet over the bird just as she was trained to do, but when she tried to grab its feet, one of the owl's talons dug right into her finger.

"That was not fun," she said, laughing.

A typical day at Tri-State for Derkach starts with a shift meeting during which supervisors talk about the birds at the facility and if any have been released.

"Everybody always cheers when birds have been released," she said.

Last week, there were 33 birds in-house and most were raptors, or birds of prey. Derkach said owls, falcons, hawks and eagles are usually injured by impact or a fight over territory, while songbirds like robins and warblers often fly into windows, suffer cat attacks or get sick from dirty bird feeders.

Derkach said humans are to blame for many of these injuries.

"They're losing their habitats because we keep building and building, so they have nowhere to go to look for their food except for where people live and there's more chance of them getting injured that way," she said.

Next, Derkach feeds the birds pre-made plates that are a mixture of mice, rates, moles, quails or worms, veggies and other protein depending on the species. She also administers treatment and sometimes cuts open a dead mouse to hide the medicine inside. Some of her other duties include changing water, putting down pine needles for the owls, cleaning cages of food scraps and feces and looking for pellets.

"Bird poop is a good thing around here," she said. "It tells you the bird is eating and it's digesting."

Regardless of her task, she has to be very quiet when interacting with the birds so as not to startle them in their cage and even wears a mask and gloves for the baby birds so they don't get attached.

"They think whoever is feeding them is the mother," she said. "Those birds will imprint, and you don't want them to imprint on humans."

Derkach has cared for a wide variety of birds during her time as a volunteer, but her least favorite are the pelicans, she said. During her second year at Tri-State, she helped house a group of pelicans over the winter and it was anything but easy.

"I love pelicans at a distance but after taking care of them, they're not my favorite anymore," she said. "They're really smelly."

Toward the end of her shift, Derkach pulls food for the next day using a recipe chart that tells her which bird gets what type of food. She said some birds normally eat fish and eagles eat rats, while gulls get a plate full of scraps of dead mice and other meat and vultures get plates of old, rotting meat. Once she's finished making the mixtures of fruits, vegetables and protein, she cleans the kitchen and heads home.

"After you've done everything, it's pretty exhausting and you can really say you've done a good day's work," she said.

Every now and then, Derkach will get to release a bird, which is her favorite part about her job. Songbirds are released on the Tri-State property, and birds like ducks and gulls are released near the water. However, raptors are returned to where they were found because they are territorial where they hunt.

She recalled a time when she returned a seagull to Rehoboth Beach and the woman who originally found the bird wanted to be a part of the release, which made for a special moment.

"That was really cool," she said. "In general, the true reward for volunteering here is to be able to release a healthy, beautiful bird back to its natural environment."

Derkach said she enjoys working at Tri-State and can't think of a better way to spend her retirement than giving back to her surrounding environment. Sometimes taking care of birds can be hard work, but it's the most rewarding and exciting work she's ever done.

"I'm always coming home telling my husband, 'You'll never believe what I saw today,'" she said. "I love that."

Police: Newark man admits stabbing psychiatrist to death

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

A Newark man has been charged with the brutal slaying of a Hockessin doctor.

Christopher Frick, 21, stands accused of first-degree murder, home invasion, burglary and other related offenses. He is being held at Howard R. Young Correctional Institution without bail.

Police identified the victim as 55-year-old Dr. Caroline Ekong, a psychiatrist at the Rockford Center in Stanton. Ekong was found dead in her home in the Sanford Ridge neighborhood just before 4 a.m. Oct. 14.

Cpl. Tracey Duffy, a spokeswoman for the New Castle County Police Department, said Frick broke into the home and confronted Ekong. Frick then allegedly stabbed Ekong numerous times, killing her.

A short time later, Frick drove to a residence in the Autumnwood neighborhood near Hockessin and called 911 to report "what he had done," Duffy said.

"Frick allegedly planned this incident for some time," Duffy said.

She said Frick knew Ekong through a "professional interaction" but did not elaborate.

However, a review of the Rockford Center posted online under the name Christopher Frick is critical of the facility, with the author comparing his time there to being in prison.

"The person who imprisoned me was Caroline Ekong, whose ego is so large that she would never be able to admit that she was doing wrong," the posting reads, in-part.

Police: Man robbed Taco Bell, bank

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Delaware State Police have arrested a Newark man they say robbed a fast-food restaurant and a bank last week.

Daniel R. Kalinowski, 20, was charged with two counts of first-degree robbery and one count of wearing a disguise during the commission of a felony. He was committed to the Howard R. Young Correctional Institution in lieu of $100,000 secured bail.

According to Sgt. Richard Bratz, the first robbery happened just before 7:30 p.m. Oct. 15 at the Taco Bell in Chestnut Hill Plaza in Brookside.

Kalinowski allegedly waited in line until all the customers got out of the way and then approached a cashier and demanded money, implying he had a gun. He took an undisclosed amount of cash and left in a white Nissan sedan, Bratz said.

The following day, at approximately 11 a.m., Kalinowski struck again, this time at the Artisan's Bank at 2424 Pulaski Highway in Glasgow, police said. With the hood of his sweatshirt covering his face, he allegedly demanded money from a teller, again implying he had a gun.

After receiving cash, Kalinowski left on foot. Responding officers found him about a half-mile away in People's Plaza shopping center, Bratz said.

Detectives linked Kalinowski to both robberies "after obtaining evidence from the scene, conducting interviews and utilizing other investigative measures," Bratz said.

Gunmen rob Brookside Wawa

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

Police are searching for two masked gunmen who robbed a convenience store in Brookside early Sunday morning.

The robbery happened at 3:30 a.m. at the Wawa located at the corner of East Chestnut Hill Road and South Chapel Street.

Sgt. Richard Bratz, a spokesman for Delaware State Police, said the two men confronted three employees at the front counter and demanded money from the registers. The clerks complied, and the men left on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash.

No one was injured.

Both men were described as 150 to 170 pounds, had their faces covered, wore dark hooded sweatshirts and carried handguns. One was between 5 feet, 10 inches and 5 feet 11 inches tall, and the other was slightly taller.

Bratz said no surveillance footage is available.

This marks at least the third time this year that the Brookside Wawa was robbed at gunpoint, with the earlier incidents happening May 7 and May 26.

Anyone with information about Sunday's incident is asked to contact DSP at 302-834-2630. Information may also be provided by calling Delaware Crime Stoppers at 1-800-TIP-3333, via the Internet at www.delaware.crimestoppersweb.com, or by sending an anonymous tip by text to 274637 (CRIMES) using the keyword "DSP."

Cash, marijuana stolen during break-in on Westfield Drive

A resident living on Westfield Drive, near Casho Mill Road, is missing cash and medicinal marijuana after someone broke into a home last week, police say.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the break-in occurred sometime between Oct. 11 and Sunday while the resident was out of town.

Spadola said police believe the thief entered the home through a second-floor window. An outdoor bench had also been moved underneath the window and is thought to have helped the thief gain access.

No other items were reported missing from the home and Spadola said police do not have any suspects at this time, although they continue to investigate the incident.

Cellphones, tablet stolen at house party

Someone stole several electronics during a house party in Cherry Hill Manor over the weekend, police say.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the theft occurred at approximately 2:30 a.m. Saturday during a party at the home, which is located in the unit block of Ethan Allen Court.

The resident told police there were less than 10 people at the party, but he didn't know all of them. He noticed his iPhone was missing during the party and discovered another cellphone and a tablet computer were missing from his room the next day.

The stolen items are estimated to be worth roughly $1,000.

Spadola said police continue to investigate the incident but do not have any suspects at this time.

between 4:30 and 10:10 p.m. on Oct. 14 in the 200 block of East Main Street.

The victim told police she left her apartment to go to class and returned to discover her laptop, which she had left on the couch, was gone and so was money that had been in a desk.

The laptop is valued at $350.

Spadola said police did not observe any signs of forced entry and have no suspects at this time, although they are still investigating the incident.

Police: 93 tires dumped 'unlawfully' on Brookhill Drive

Police are looking for the person who has been illegally dumping used tires on city property.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the suspect has dropped off 93 tires on Brookhill Drive in the South Chapel Industrial Park between Oct. 7 and Oct. 12.

Spadola said police believe the suspect, who was caught on camera driving a dark-colored pickup truck, has dumped tires there three times. They were discovered by a city employee and cost $357 to remove.

Police continue to investigate the incident, and Spadola said if the suspect is found, he or she will be charged with unlawful dumping.

Laptop, cash taken from Main Street apartment

A University of Delaware student is missing her laptop and an undisclosed amount of cash after someone burglarized her apartment last week.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, the theft occurred sometime

Driver crashes into bridge, flips car on North Chapel Street

By KARIE SIMMONS
ksimmons@chespub.com

A woman suffered minor injuries after she lost control of her car Monday afternoon and hit the side of a railroad bridge on North Chapel Street, causing the vehicle to flip over, police said.

The driver was identified as Sophie Marine, 19, of Wilmington.

According to Cpl. James Spadola, a spokesman for the Newark Police Department, Marine was driving her 2016 Hyundai Elantra north on North Chapel Street around 1:56 p.m. when she lost control of the car underneath the CSX railroad bridge and hit the right side of the bridge.

After striking the bridge, the car flipped over and landed on its roof, Spadola said. A nearby citizen helped Marine out of her car while police and paramedics responded to the scene. No other vehicles were involved in the crash.

Spadola said Marine was wearing her seatbelt but suffered minor injuries to her legs and was taken to Christiana Hospital for treatment.

North Chapel Street was closed for about an hour while crews cleaned up the crash and towed the vehicle.

Marine was cited for inattentive driving.

'Training took over' for off-duty UD EMT who saved woman

By JOSH SHANNON

jshannon@chespub.com

As a member of the University of Delaware's student-run ambulance crew and a lifeguard in the Outer Banks, David Baquet has received plenty of training in CPR. However, he had never been called upon to use those skills in a real-life situation.

Until, that is, a lunchtime stop between classes last week led to the UD senior being in the right place at the right time to save a woman who went into cardiac arrest in a car traveling on Main Street.

"It's an amazing feeling," Baquet said Monday, adding, "It's crazy to think about."

The incident unfolded at approximately 2:30 p.m. Oct. 14. Baquet, a 22-year-old native of Frederick, Md., had some time between classes at Willard Hall Education Building, so he went next door to The Deer Park Tavern to grab lunch.

As he ate, someone ran into the restaurant and asked if anyone knew CPR.

"I stood up and I was like, 'This can't be happening,'" Baquet said. "He said, 'Come with me,' and everything just happened."

NEWARK POST PHOTO BY JOSH SHANNON
David Baquet, a volunteer EMT for the University of Delaware's student-run ambulance crew, was off duty and having lunch at The Deer Park Tavern when he revived a woman who was in cardiac arrest.

When Baquet got outside, he saw a car pulled up on the sidewalk outside the Deer Park and a man trying to unbuckle his unresponsive wife from the passenger seat. The 69-year-old woman, who has not been publically identified, had stopped breathing.

Baquet helped get the woman out of the car and onto the sidewalk, where he began chest compressions.

"My training took over," he said. "I wasn't thinking about anything else."

He was later joined by EMTs from Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. as well as New Castle County paramedics. According to Aetna officials, the woman began breathing on her own and was sitting up and talking before leaving the scene. She was then taken to Christiana Hospital, where she was admitted in serious but stable condition, according to paramedic spokeswoman Cpl. Abigail Haas.

Haas said the incident shows the importance of bystanders performing CPR.

"The Chain of Survival begins with the bystander recognizing that a patient has gone into cardiac arrest," she said. "That first link of the chain is vitally important to the patient surviving a cardiac arrest, as they are the person that first recognizes the patient's heart has stopped, first calls for help and initiates chest compressions. Bystander CPR buys the patient time."

She said the survival rate for people who suffer a "witnessed sudden cardiac arrest" has risen significantly in New Castle County in the past five years, attributing that to "the willingness of bystanders to perform chest compressions on the victims of the cardiac arrest."

Despite receiving accolades from Haas and fellow members of the University of Delaware Emergency Care Unit, Baquet brushed off the attention.

"I was in the right place at the right time," he said, crediting his success to the training he first received as an ocean lifeguard in Duck, N.C. "Anyone from UDECU could have done it."

UDECU consists of approximately 50 trained student volunteers and provides 24/7 ambulance service to the campus and also backs up Aetna throughout Newark.

Baquet has been a member of UDECU for a year but said he has never been dispatched to a serious medical call. Last week's incident affirmed his desire to continue working as a volunteer EMT, he said, noting that he also hopes to pursue a career in special education.

After the patient he saved headed to the hospital, Baquet went back to class with his unfinished Deer Park lunch in his hands.

"I couldn't even talk, I had so much adrenaline going," he said, later adding, "I took my meal to class and ate when everything started calming down."

Newark Post editor Josh Shannon learns to shoot from Sgt. Chris Jones of the Newark Police Department as part of the citizen's police academy.

A day at the firing range with NPD

Josh Shannon

A few weeks ago, the officers running the Newark Police Department citizen's police academy asked how many of the class members had experience firing a weapon. Everyone raised their hands, except for me and one or two others.

It's not that I'm opposed to guns or scared of guns. I just wasn't raised around them. My family members don't hunt and my friends don't go to the shooting range, so learning to shoot was never on my radar.

That said, I was intrigued by the idea of trying it out and learning more about the weapons police officers use. So, it was with anticipation, and perhaps a bit of trepidation, that I showed up at the police shooting range near New Castle on Saturday with my citizen's academy classmates.

One of the first things I picked up on was that I wasn't alone in being unfamiliar with guns.

Lt. Bill Hargrove, a firearms instructor for NPD, said a lot of cops come to the police academy not knowing how to shoot, or just dislike shooting in general.

"It's gotten worse over the years," Hargrove said. "People aren't going into the military, aren't hunting and aren't growing up around guns."

On the positive side, he said, gun neophytes are easier to teach. I guess I fell into that category.

Sgt. Chris Jones, another NPD firearms instructor, began by talking to us about basic gun safety.

"The No. 1 goal is that everyone leaves with the same number of holes in your body as you arrived with," he said, only half-joking.

NPD officers primarily use two types of weapons — a handgun and an AR-15 semi-automatic rifle.

The AR-15s, which are being phased in to replace older rifles, were the subject of controversy last year when NPD requested funding to purchase them. Some members of city council and the public expressed concerns about the weapons, though council eventually supported the purchase unanimously.

Jones explained that handguns are only reliable for short distances, so officers use the rifles anytime they get called to a commercial building alarm or in the unfortunate case of an active shooter.

Hargrove pushed back against perceptions that the rifles are too militaristic.

"You look at it and it looks real intimidating, but it's not much different than other rifles," he said. "Any one of you could get this rifle at Cabela's today."

After our time in the classroom, we headed outside to try our hand at firing the weapons. Jones and Hargrove guided us through the process step-by-step.

It took a little getting used to the feel of firing a weapon, but much to my surprise, every one of my shots hit the target.

In the end, while I'm not exactly planning to rush out and get my concealed-carry permit, it was an eye-opening experience and a good chance to experience a little of what cops go through to get their weapons qualifications.

And, yes, everyone went home with the same number of holes as they arrived with.

Newark Post editor Josh Shannon is enrolled in the citizen's police academy and is writing a weekly, first-person column about his experience. Contact him at 443-907-8437 or jshannon@chespub.com.

June-December 1913: Bank balance June 1 was $3,388.32 Poor Mr. Claringbold was still trying, for at least the third time, to get the $30,000 assessment on his Main Street property reduced, but council refused.

Council rented a safe deposit box at Farmers' Trust for $5 per year and borrowed $2,500 to set up a sewer construction fund. Anyone opening a fire hydrant for any purpose except to fight fire would be fined $15 for each offence. The Levy Court of New Castle

Out of the Past

County gave council permission to lay a sewer line along the Wilmington and Newark Turnpike between town limit and McKee's Lane. Some questions concerning a poolroom came but no details are given.

Aetna's annual appropriation was raised to $500. The sewer line contractor was charged 10 cents per 1,000 gallons of water needed to back fill the trench. A plan was worked out with B&O Railroad to lay sewer line under tracks at three grade crossings in town. Delaware College wanted North College Avenue paved.

Purchase of land from the Edward Wilson estate for a sewer pumping station on New London Avenue was authorized. An additional $12,000 for sewer construction was borrowed for three months at 6 percent. For the first time, the Women's College is mentioned when a 4-inch pipe was laid to provide water. Council demanded Jacob Thomas Company repair drain pipe damaged when they dynamited a tree stump on North College Avenue.

See the original minutes at Pencader Heritage Museum, 2029 Sunset Lake Rd. (Rt. 72 south of Newark.) Regularly open first and third Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Other times by appointment. Contact the website pencaderheritage.org or call 302-737-5792 for an appointment. Family friendly, handicapped accessible and always free.

OBITUARY

Barbara Colbert Dawson

Barbara Colbert Dawson, 69, of Newark, DE, passed away on October 17, 2015. She was born in Bloomsburg, PA, to the late Ralph E. Colbert Sr. and Helen Illig Colbert on December 31, 1945.

Barbara graduated from Newark High School, before attending the University of Delaware. She retired from Alliance Bank in Pennsylvania after a long career in banking and finance. She was active with many different church communities including Immanuel Methodist in Townsend, Good Shepherd Baptist in Bear and Skyline Methodist in Pike Creek.

Family and friends were Barbara's passion and delight. She was highly involved in many of her children's and grandchildren's sports and activities. She loved to host and entertain, frequently holding celebrations at her home.

Barbara was a life-long animal lover, having innumerable pets over the years. She was especially fond of cats in all shapes, sizes and colors and helped many strays find forever homes.

Barbara is survived by her husband Ron Dawson, children Paula Pennington of Wilmington, John "Ed" (Caraline) Hickman of Potomac, MD and Matt (Danielle) Hickman of Philadelphia, siblings, Shirley Edder of Indiana, PA, Ralph Colbert Jr. of Newark and Sherman Colbert of Newark, step-children, Donna (Bob) Harvey of North East, MD, Debbie (Tim) Leflar of Elkton, MD, Ronald (Bernadette) Dawson of Abington, MD, grandchildren Vance, Helana, Angelina, Jillian, Sterling, Jared, Bennett, Tiffany, Courtney, Meghan, Katelyn, Alexis, Savannah, Madison, Cameron and great-grandchildren Baylee, Gabby, Jase, Brennan and Mason.

A visitation will be held Friday, October 30, 10 a.m. at the Christiana Presbyterian Church, 15 N. Old Baltimore Pike, Newark, DE 19702, a memorial service celebrating Barbara's life will begin at 11 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, please consider memorial donations to Faithful Friends Animal Society, 12 Germay Drive, Wilmington, DE 19804.

Out of the Attic

The Cooch House (part 4)

This week's Out of the Attic item is a current picture of the bridge crossing the Christina River looking east, taken from the driveway to the Cooch House.

Thomas Cooch, a miller, came from England in 1746 and bought 200 acres, later expanded to 850 acres, on which he built his grist and saw mills and later an iron furnace. He built the first section of the house in 1760, his great-grandson built the addition in 1865, and family descendants still own and live in the house today. The land, road, and bridge have all acquired the Cooch name.

A late 17th – early 18th centuries dirt road connected Head of Elk (Elkton) in Maryland with Christiana in Delaware. Both ports shipped agricultural and iron-based products out and received manufactured goods into the area. Once called "Post Road," the Delaware portion became "Cooch's Bridge Road."

The road also served travelers going up and down the East Coast. Alternate routes for travelers were New Castle to Bear to Aiken (Glasgow) to Elkton to Perryville or Wilmington to Newark to Rising Sun to Conowingo. These three routes were the shortest distance to go between the Delaware and Susquehanna Rivers. In 1783, French and Colonial troops crossed Cooch's Bridge headed from New England to Virginia, where they defeated the British and German forces at Yorktown to end the war and secure the independence of the United States.

For a time Cooch's Bridge road got in such poor condition that it was made a toll road to raise the money to maintain it. With the coming of the railroads – the New Castle and Frenchtown to the south and the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore through Newark to the north in the 1830's, much traveler traffic was diverted, and the road tolls were ended. In its time Cooch's Bridge has been an open plank span, a covered wood span, an iron span and as it is now.

Out of the Attic is produced in partnership with the Newark Historical Society. The Newark History Museum, located in the old train station under the South College Avenue bridge is open Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is free. For more info, call 302-234-4145 or visit www.newarkdehistoricalsociety.org.

Newark girls XC running strong as championships loom

By JON BUZBY

JonBuzby@hotmail.com

The Newark girls 2014 cross-country season was one to remember.

Newark's top runner, Rachel Beston, ran to a second-place finish at the 2014 DIAA Cross Country State Championships a week after becoming just the school's third female Blue Hen conference champion in school history. Newark placed fourth in states and second in the conference meet. It was one of the best seasons in school history.

Following in the footsteps of last year's team, the 2015 cross-country squad raced out to a solid start and has continued to improve as it approaches the latter part of its season.

Newark opened the season placing fourth out of 24 teams at the White Clay Creek Classic on Sept. 11. The Yellowjackets then split a tri-meet, defeating Appoquinimink but falling to defending conference champion Charter School of Wilmington. Newark also split its second tri-meet, outracing A.I. du Pont but failing to outrun Middletown.

Head coach Gordon Thomson was pleased with his team's start.

"The key to our good start was the character of the ladies on our team," Thomson said. "We are so lucky to have smart, motivated, fun and very team-oriented women. They really like each other, so the team chemistry is very nice. When you have that, anything is possible."

Newark continued to improve as the calendar rolled over to October, led by some of Beston's best performances of her four-year varsity career.

"Rachel is better than last year," Thomson said. "Not only is she willing to do the small things to improve herself, she has a true love of the sport, so it's a lot of fun for her too."

Beston, a senior, placed 13th out of 300 in a national class field at the Paul Short Invitational, held at Lehigh University on the first weekend of the month. She followed that performance up with a first-place finish in a tri-meet at White Clay Creek State Park as the Yellowjackets swept Concord and Mount Pleasant. Beston then shaved 50 seconds off her personal best time on her way to placing second at the Joe O'Neill Invitational on Oct. 16 at Bellevue State Park. Newark placed seventh out of 35 teams.

"What has made me a stronger runner than last year is a combination of staying healthy, better base miles from summer training and my experienced coaches," Beston said.

While Beston is enjoying tremendous success during her final cross-country season running for Newark, freshman sensation Naomi Dawkins' performances are providing the Yellowjackets with a glimpse of a promising future.

"Naomi came from Shue Middle School, so we were aware of her," Thomson explained of his rookie star, who placed ninth at the O'Neill Invitational. "But, we didn't know that she would be our No. 2 woman. She had a great summer of training thanks to her family. She is a unique kid, lots of fun and not afraid of anything."

Other varsity runners include Xia Howard, Kendra Cutler, Cassie O'Quinn, Virginia Milham and Rebecca Alexander. The seven who make up the varsity roster have one regular-season meet left at the Killens Invitational on Oct. 23 and then head to the conference championships on Oct. 30 at White Clay Creek State Park, where the Yellowjackets will enjoy a home-course advantage.

"Winning conferences would be phenomenal," Thomson said. "Wilmington Charter has had a strangle hold on that title for a while. The meet is on our home course ... so we will be feisty."

Newark trounced by defending state champs William Penn

By JOE BACKER
Special to the Post

Defending state champion

William Penn jumped out to an early 21-0 lead then cruised to a 42-14 Blue Hen Conference victory over Newark on Oct. 16 at Hoffman stadium, spoiling the Yellowjackets' homecoming celebration.

Colonials senior running back Kamau Floyd ran wild in the first quarter, scoring on touchdown gallops of 28 and 51 yards. By halftime, Floyd had accumulated nearly 100 yards rushing.

When Frank Burton scored on a 9-yard touchdown pass from Penn quarterback DJ Johnson early in the second quarter, it appeared a rout was taking place. But to their credit, the 'Jackets continued to play well and eventually were able to move the ball on offense.

Newark finally scored with less than two minutes left in the half to cut the Penn lead to 21-8. Quarterback Andrew DelPercio found Brendan Sherman behind the Colonials defense for a 54-yard scoring play.

"We're still not playing the game of football the way a coach wants the game to be played," Newark coach Butch Simpson said. "We're putting in all the hours of practice, but we're not completely there. We still turn the ball over, but our effort was there and I felt we played hard, and I think maybe we surprised them a little in that we played that hard and hung in there."

Penn's offense picked up the pace in the second half, scoring three more touchdowns, including an 85-yard kickoff return by senior Chi-Chi Amachi.

One of the bright spots for Newark was the improved play of the offense, specially the success of senior receiver Brendan Sherman. In addition to his first-half touchdown, Sherman also scored on a 76-yard pass from DelPercio in the third quarter.

"All week long, my coaches have been telling me to step up and be more of a team leader, and I tried to bring that out, help my team and be the best player they want me to be," Sherman said. "We fought hard tonight, and that's what our coaches wanted us to do."

William Penn improved to 6-0 on the season. The Colonials host Concord on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m.

Newark's record fell to 2-4. The Yellowjackets will travel to The Charter School of Wilmington on Saturday with the opening kickoff set for 10:30 a.m.

"So we are going to regroup and see if we can get a couple of weeks where we can get our pride back and hopefully we will continue to play hard and play better, and the rest will take care of itself," Simpson said.
