Halloween events planned this week

IME TO "SUIT UP" and join the marchers on Main Street for Newark's 51st Halloween Parade on Sunday.

Jennifer Jones of the Newark Parks and Recreation said costumed families and individuals wishing to march should come to George Reed Park to register before the parade begins at 1:30 p.m. Groups or organizations must make arrangements with the parks and recreation department prior to Sunday.

recreation department prior to Sunday.

There is no raindate if the parade is canceled. "Last year's 50th anniversary parade was canceled and we were really upset," said Jones.

The parade starts at the corner of Tyre Avenue and Main Street and ends at North College Avenue. Winners in the three prize categories of Float, Large Marching group and Family Marching group, will be announced in front of the Carpenter Sports Building at approximately 3:30 p.m.

Among those expected to march are the Haunted Hearse, YoUDee, and Ronald McDonald. In addition, numerous scout troops, at least four automobile clubs, and "tons" of local legislators will join community organizations and school groups in costumes. "Caravel is sending a Homecoming Convert-

Jones said marching bands will include groups

Grove, Christiana, and Newark high schools.

Starting at 1:30 p.m. on Sunday, Main Street will be closed from Tyre to College avenues. Part of Delaware Avenue will be closed from 1:45 to 2:45 p.m. while vehicles in the parade exit the Newark High School parking lot.

Downes teacher tops in nation

ETERAN TEACHER Carol Antes was disappointed at the lack of reaction to Downes Elementary School's first "math newspaper." Even though its publication was the result of her summer-long project designed to emphasize the importance of math at school and home, the "no budget" "Math Matters" drew little parental or even student notice.

But after being named to the first USA Today All Teacher Team, the Newark teacher is more committed than ever to the project. "Math has always been my passion," Antes said, "and I started 'Math Matters' because math needs more focus in primary

No 'typical' night in Newark

■ Editor's note: This is Part Two of a three-part series.

ARTICIPANTS IN THE Citizens' Police Academy had the opportunity ride along with Newark patrol officers and found there is no such thing as a "typical" Saturday night in Newark.

■ 10 p.m. The officers assemble for rollcall, listening to a review of reports from the prior shifts. As they are dismissed to their jobs, they lay out all the equipment they carry, including guns, on the table before them. The shift supervisor checks the equipment to make sure everything is in safe working order. He advises that some items will be needing replacement in the near future.

■ 10:20 p.m. We start with a property check at city hall, walking around the building, inside and out, to check doors of offices, loading docks and storage rooms. "The city manager wants us to do this several times each night," says the officer. "There have been times when the doors are left open."

■ 10:35 p.m. Out on patrol we hear a report of an overturned jeep with trapped driver on South College Avenue at the Uni-Mart. Since we are nearby, the officer turns on his flashing lights and races to the scene.

However, on reaching the area, there is no sign of an accident. The officer tells me this happens and now the police and emergency personnel must circle the area to locate the accident.

See POLICE, 2

Maintaining a presence is more than just flash

POLICE, from 1

He checks back with the police dispatcher as we make a U-turn, passing other police vehicles responding to the radio report. We learn only that the call came from the Uni-mart and an officer will check to see if the caller is still there.

Meanwhile the police cruiser in which I am riding is circling the area, further and further out from the call location. An ambulance and paramedic vehicle speed down South College, slowing as they also realize there is no immediate place for their services.

The radio crackles repeatedly with calls from other units asking for more specific information and reporting on places they have already searched. Finally, the officer in my car decides there are enough vehicles involved and advises dispatch he is returning to his patrol area. "It even could be a hoax and that really burns me," he says. "Look at all these personnel 'out of service' on this call."

As we proceed toward down-town Newark, a fire engine passes, called out to the accident as well. Almost five minutes later, as the officer checks out a vehicle without taillights on Academy Street, another officer calls in on the radio to tell the dispatcher he has found the jeep in a ditch. It is outside the city limits on West Chestnut Hill Road and county personnel are on the scene. The reporting officer advises all Newark units to pull back.

■ 11 p.m. A report of a "half-naked" man running in and out of a house on Prospect Avenue turns out to be an over-exuberant Yankees fan watching the World Series with a group of friends. He admits he ran outside and yelled but said he was fully clothed. Officers from the three police cruisers lined up in front of the house advise the group to keep the party quieter.

■ 11:20 p.m. We go to the apartment of a man who claims someone has been waiting outside his place of work for months and following him home. The man and his two children tell the officer the unknown follower also recently followed them from a supermarket. The man is very upset, saying he has already put in a police report about this before and wants something done to stop it happening. He has absolutely no idea why this person would follow him. He does not recognize the person whom he describes.

The officer gives the man some suggestions about how he might help the police identify the follower. "This is getting too close," says the man. "Now it's my children, too."

The officer prepares a police report of the incident and takes it into the apartment for the man to sign. When he returns to the car, he says the man had begun crying and says he might take his family back to their native country. "Imagine, we're the last line of defense for that man before he leaves this country after 22 years," says the officer.

11:45 p.m. As we return to patrol, the officer explains that he usually patrols continuously throughout his shift. "We call it 'flashing the colors," he says. "We want to make a presence out here."

In one of his few complaints of the evening, he notes that "you never know how many crimes are prevented" by a police vehicle cruising by at an opportune moment. "That's a 'thankless' part of the job," he says.

On a more upbeat note, he talks about his eight months of experience on the Newark police force. "I grew up in a town where almost everyone was in the NYPD and I wanted to be a police officer ever since I was 4 years old," he recalls. "I took criminal justice at the University of Delaware and I was really glad when I was accepted for the Newark Police."

Admitting police work in Newark is a far cry from New York City, the young officer says he likes the variety and opportunity of a small police department. "I spent several hours one day chasing down dogs," he says with a laugh. "I didn't mind it – that's part of the job, too."

More seriously, he reports that people sometimes apologize for calling him to questionable crime situations. "I tell people, 'if you think it's a crime, we want to know about it," says the officer. "Call us."

He reflects back on the man with the unknown follower. "That's the thing about this job, it's never exactly the same call twice," he says. "I love this job."

midnight. We pass a police roadblock set up on Main Street to check vehicles and drivers for possible violations. "We do this on busy nights to try to reduce the amount of aimless traffic," the officer explains. "Maybe the ones without any particular destination will decide it's not worth it and go home."

■ 12:15 a.m. A bumped fender at Chapel and Main street claims the officer's attention. It is not serious but everyone exchanges driver and insurance information "just in case." As we sit in the parking lot at the Space II Pizza shop, now closed for the night, vehicles continue to pour into Newark on Main Street. A radio report advises of a subject lying on the sidewalk in front of Grotto Pizza.

■ 12:40 p.m. The officer is told to respond to an accident at Delaware Avenue and College Square Shopping Center. Reaching the area, we see cars on the side of the road near the entrance to the shopping center. Turning into the parking lot, we pass part of a car's bumper and then see the vehicle that apparently lost it.

The officer first determines if there are injuries and then tells the people standing by the car to wait while he checks out the cars in the road. We drive back out onto Library Avenue and advise those persons to drive into the shopping center.

Once everyone is assembled, the officer methodically sorts witnesses and those involved in the accident, taking names and getting facts from each

He inspects the damage to the vehicles and tells the driver of the car with the lost bumper that it has to be towed. No one is hurt, but one of the drivers is going to get a ticket.

Sitting in the police vehicle, he calls in the drivers' identifications and tag numbers, checking for possible warrants and other information. He starts the lengthy paperwork.

As this proceeds, the radio in the car carries a series of reports about a party on Wilbur Street, requests for more officers on a call, and two separate loud parties on Cleveland Avenue. The officer has to call in repeatedly for his background information and report number. "When it gets really busy, dispatch can't respond to us all right away," he explains.

The officer determines that the driver of the towed vehicle lives near Routes 40 and 13 and has no way to get home. "I'll probably have to take her home, but I need permission from my supervisor," he says.

Unable to reach the supervisor on the radio, he decides to return to the police station to determine what to do.

■ 1:15 a.m. As we drive down a still lively Main Street, a report comes over the radio requesting officers to respond to a fight in progress at the Deer Park Hotel. A few minutes later we pass the scene where groups of people continue to party on the hotel porch as helmeted police officers arrive on motorcycles and from cruisers to deal with the combatants down on the sidewalk.

■ 1:30 a.m. Back at the station, the officer finds out he will take the stranded driver home. Showing no dismay at his new role as a taxi driver, he shakes hands and says goodnight. "Any time you want to see what it's like out there, come ride along with me," he concludes cheerfully.

A lot of people talk about improving education...

Tim Boulden is actually doing something about it!

Governor Tom Carper comes to Newark to sign into law Representative Tim Boulden's legislation for smaller class sizes.

Endorsed by the Delaware State Education Association

Reducing class size is big improvement

...Bravo to Rep. Tim Boulden and other folks at Legislative Hall for casting their votes for children, parents and teachers.

We returned to school this September to discover classes of 22 students in kindergarten through grade three. You couldn't wipe the grins off the faces of teachers and parents alike. Finally a year in which our students will not waste the first 30 days waiting to see if another class will be added to reduce bulging class sizes, a year in which we can start with 22 students in class instead of the customary 27 to 32 students, a year in which teachers are supported to to do what they do best – teach.

STRANGE IN THE NIGHT

Newark resident Jean White stayed up late last Sunday to watch the old house on South Chapel Street ride down the street to its new site.

"It was incredible," White said. "I wish more people could have seen it."

This is the second move for the obviously sturdy old house which sat on Main Street when it was first built over a century ago before being moved back to make way for a service station.

Moving and saving the residence, which was slated for demolition as part of the development of the former Newark Lumber property, was a "personal project" of Newark realtor Al Schweitzer and an unnamed partner. "For the cost to move it, including permits, we're probably looking at five figures," said Schweitzer last week. Schweitzer said the house will not be permanently installed at the new site until "we get a rezoning done." The realtor did not want to consider what would happen if the rezoning is not done. "We're not expecting that," he said. "We're already planning to reconvert it to apartments as it was before it became vacant."

Christina District votes for waiver

District close to proper student-teacher ratios

By STEVE WESTRICK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Christina School Board voted unanimously in special session this week to obtain a waiver from the state law mandating student-to-teacher ratio in classrooms.

Most of the approximately 30 people attending the meeting held Tuesday at Christiana High School were school administrators there to answer questions.

The waiver for House Bill 758 allows the district to bypass legislation requiring a teacher for every 22 students in grades kindergarten through third grade.

Deputy school superintendent Frank Rishel said the district has come close to the required limits in all schools.

"In most classes, we meet, or are very close to meeting, the law," said Rishel. "Our concern is if other kids want to attend the schools (under School Choice)."

Board members berated state representative Timothy Boulden (R-Newark), co-sponsor of the bill, who attended the meeting. "We are at a point where the legislature has put this board between a rock and a hard place," said James Kent. "Dealing with this kind of mandate is very hard to follow. We don't have the building space and the legislature is providing no financial help. When mandates come along, they have to come with financial resolutions — otherwise it's just passing the buck."

But Boulden said the law requires only a student-to-teacher ratio and not a student-to-classroom ratio. "I guess I am a little confused with some comments by the board," Boulden said. "The bill is not perfect but when you look at the (lower classroom) numbers, we have succeeded."

The board told Boulden he should have been at their regular meeting on Oct. 13 to explain to the specialist teachers why they lost their classrooms because of the need for extra space to make the student-to-teacher ratio.

By law, the district can only get a waiver for this year. Despite the vote for a waiver, Rishel said the number of students in a classroom will not increase dramatically in the future

DECISION '98 – 10TH SENATE DISTRICT AMICK VS. AMSLER

Amick wants to look at healthcare

TEVEN AMICK (R-Newark West) is seeking a second term in the 10th Senate District of the Delaware Assembly.

Amick said the state should take a more active role in controlling growth and development. "This is no longer just a problem in our area or even in New Castle County," he said. "It now effects Kent and Sussex counties as well.'

Since growth and development severely impact not only the congestion of our roads but our schools, water and sewer, as well as libraries, and other government services, Amick said it is very important that the state adopt aggressive policies to Amick ensure the quality of life.

According to Amick, 70 percent of current school funding in Delaware comes from the state and only 30 percent from school property taxes. "Due to its budget surplus, the state is financially able to take over the local tax share over a five year period thus largely eliminating local school taxes," Amick said. "Each taxpayer could expect an almost complete elimination of school property tax under this plan.

Amick said the property tax has always been an unfair and uneven, regressive tax. "We have the opportunity to remove this tax and we should take it," said Amick. "The trick is to do so without eliminating local control of schools."

In regard to surpluses, Amick said they first should be used to pay off state debt. "When you win the lottery, you should first pay off your credit card, and the same common sense applies here," he said.

Then, the state should aggressively pursue

"one time" purchases of open space and other resources which will soon be lost and can not be replaced.

For future initiatives, Amick said the state needs to hold public hearings on the question of managed health care and the extent to which it is meeting the health care needs of Delawareans.

"Citizens complain health care decisions are being made by insurance companies and not by doctor and patients," he said. "We are told patient hospital stays are determined by others as well and the state needs to look carefully at this matter."

In addition, Amick wants the state to make every effort to encourage the involvement of parents in our children's schools. "The General Assembly should investigate ways to make our schools more "user friendly" for parents and to make sure the input of parents is encouraged and valued," he said.

Amick serves on five Senate committees, including Ethics, Legislative Council, Executive, Highways and Transportation and Community/County Affairs.. He previously served four terms in the House of Representatives.

A Newark resident, he is an attorney with the law firm of Cooch and Taylor in Newark.

Amsler would re-route Newark truck traffic

OLITICAL NEWCOMER MARK AMSLER is challenging Steven Amick in the 10th Senate District.

Amsler said the state has an important role to play in controlling runaway development and suburban sprawl which detract from our communities' quality of life and make it difficult for businesses to attract new people to the area. "The legislature should see to it that developers help share the cost of constructing needed schools, roadways, pedestrian rights-of-way, police substations, sewers, and parkland and open land acquisitions," said Amsler. "Also, in northern New Castle County, all future residential and business development should be carefully reviewed to ensure that Amsler there are adequate water supplies to support (them) and that the White Clay Creek and other natural resources are not dam-Amsler said the state of Delaware and the federal government currently pay for over 75 percent of Delaware's public school funding. The state might consider returning some of the property tax funding for (schools) back to homeowners," said Amsler.

However, this should only be done if a "clear, permanent state revenue source" for public school funding is available.

In addition, Amsler said the state should find ways to streamline school administration, promote more efficient local school governance and put more education funds into the classrooms.

Finally, he wants to the state to complete a review of the current system for funding vocational-technical high schools to ensure tax dollars are being well spent.

Amsler said in light of the current worldwide financial downturn, the state needs to be realisitic in regard to any surpluses. If there were a surplus, Amsler said important uses would include funding first time initiatives and startup costs for new businesses, new community programs and pilot programs for agriculture, community services and the arts. He would also support a tax rebate, paying down the state's debt, acquiring open land and wetlands to be protected from development.

Amsler said money should also be put toward building needed classroom space and hiring the best new teachers available.

If elected, Amsler wants to rebate property taxes to some of the neediest working families. develop youth employment programs for the greater Newark area, develop more financial incentives to encourage first time home ownership, make healthcare more accessible, affordable and consistent for all citizens. He also wants to guarantee a living wage for all working families and improve the University of Delaware's responsibility and involvement in the community's living standards.

"I also want to coordinate and rethink the plan for controlling and re-routing traffic in the

DECISION '98 – 23RD REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT BOULDEN VS. CEBULA

Boulden supports state funding for school classrooms

Boulden

West) is seeking a third term in the years.' 23rd Representative District.

Boulden believes the Legislature's role in controlling growth is to see that efforts by all concerned are continually coordinated. "I have always supported the notion that the elected officials in the city of Newark, along with New Castle County, should be responsible for land use management, through efforts which include a comprehensive plan," said Boulden. "However, these efforts must be coordinated with the state, most importantly Del-DOT, if we are to have responsible land use management.

Boulden said New Castle County's Unified Development Code is a good example of how a local government has taken responsibility for controlling growth through a concerted planning effort.

Boulden said he supports the proposal he co-sponsored for school funding in the last session and intends to work on it again in January. "This proposal would essentially eliminate school property taxes over five years and the state would assume all local school costs," said Boulden. "In exchange, residents would see a 20 percent reduction

IMOTHY BOULDEN (R-Newark in their school taxes every year for five

Boulden said this proposal would remove the increasingly difficult burden of passing referenda in the districts for capital improvements and operating expenses.

Boulden said some of future state surpluses should be used for the school funding. Other uses Boulden would have for surpluses are continued personal income tax cuts, and exempting seniors' pension income from state income taxes. "I plan to introduce legislation in January for a $30,000 exclusion on pension income," said Boulden.

Although he does not support increased budget spending, in the event of a surplus Boulden would support one-time expenditures, especially for infrastructure needs, as well as a reduction in current state

Boulden said, in addition to those already stated, he has several issues for action if he is re-elected. "I want to continue the class size reduction effort I became involved in when I was first elected," he said. "I plan to introduce legislation that will reduce class sizes

Cebula pledges to solve Newark's truck problems

Cebula believes the legislature has a duty to be involved in planning for controlled growth in Delaware. "As a Delaware realtor I have observed on a daily basis the need for us to control the unbridled development and sprawl we are experiencing," said Cebula. "(And) all branches and levels of government must cooperate for the benefit of the people we serve.'

Development is more than building new houses, said Cebula. It Cebula involves ensuring the necessary integrated transportation systems, water supplies, schools, health care facilities, and green space to ensure that all Delawareans experience a quality of life.

Cebula said the current property tax system of funding public education is unacceptably regressive. "No low income person should have to decide between paying their property taxes to keep their home or buying the food and medicine they need to sustain life," he said. "I support full state funding of Delaware's public schools."

Having worked as an instructor and substi-

While funding schools, Cebula said the legislature must avoid the micro-management that has led to some current problems. "The current five-year projection, which has already been projected downward, is too short of a time frame to use for such an important social function,' he said. "We must tie in whatever revenue source we use with a non-negotiable cost-of-living adjustment making funding of public education an automatic yearly budget item."

Future budget surpluses should go to the most immediate needs which are to fund social programs, according to Cebula. "We have some of the best senior centers and senior programs anywhere, yet, because of bus breakdowns, many of our seniors are denied access," he said.

In addition to new senior busses, Cebula said the state should fund additional classrooms crucial for Delaware's burgeoning school population. Surpluses should also go to

DECISION '98 - 14TH REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT DILIBERTO VS. FLYNN

DiLiberto wants seatbelts installed in school busses

ICHARD A. DILIBERTO (D- councilmembers. Newark East) is seeking a fourth term in the 14th Representative District

In regard to growth, DiLiberto said the state legislature has made it clear to New Castle County government that the state has legal authority to take over jurisdiction for development, and introduced several pieces of legislation to do

According to DiLiberto, the county responded by adopting the Unified Development Code, with assurances to the legislature that DiLiberto future development will be screened extremely carefully, with strict attention paid to community impact, including, traffic, water, sewer, and general quality of life issues.

State legislators can also protect their constituents from irresponsible development by maintaining a good relationship with County

"When I get calls or letters from my constituents regarding county issues, I pick up the phone and advocate for my constituents with these elected officials," said DiLiberto. Finally, state legislators can help control overdevelopment through acquisition of open space like the University of Delaware's "Judge Morris" property, which abuts Roseville Park and Middle Run Natural Area. "The state has entered a contract to purchase the 504.66 acres to maintain it as a natural area and we will use the land to expand White Clay Creek State Park, and the farmhouse will become a community center," he said.

In the area of school funding, DiLiberto said he co-sponsored legislation which would have abolished the local school property tax. "The state would absorb the tax over a period of five Flynn believes some planning on the part of the state is necessary in order to provide the infrastructure needed for the area to grow. "I believe that the local community should control growth through advanced planning," said Flynn. "A legislator from Sussex County has very Flynn little interest in the traffic problems of Newark.

Flynn said he has long been an advocate of restructuring school funding to limit the need for referenda and property tax increases. According to Flynn, the state senate should pass the bill that was unanimously passed in the house of representative for the state to fund the schools 100 percent. "Cur-

"With a change in the state funding, tax reductions and the enactment of accountability measures, there would be many advantages to the taxpayers, school districts, local elected school board members, school employees, students, parents and retirees.'

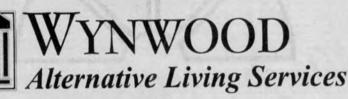

When surpluses arise because of overtaxing of citizens, the money should be returned to the taxpayers in the form of a refund, said Flynn. "Individuals should have the right to decide how their money is spent," he said, "not the state."

If elected, Flynn would like to increase the exemption on taxable income from retirement income and pensions. He would

In addition to funding social programs, other initiatives Cebula would propose, if elected, include making it more difficult to carry concealed deadly weapons on the street and in schools; passage of a Patient's Bill of Rights to ensure access to quality health care for all; and review of legislation regulating home nursing care.

"There is (also) $5.5 million available from the Federal Government for special projects in education and I want Delaware to tap this resource and set up a pilot project in the arts for children with disabilities," Cebula said.

He would also work to promote boot camps for non-violent offenders and expanded mandatory drug treatment programs.

Cebula pledges to find a solution to the Newark specific issue of safety issues raised by tractor trailers clogging city streets. "Most of us here in Newark have had to back down the road at the 896/West Main intersection in order for a semi to make the turn,' he noted. "(And) as I've gone door-to-door, residents and I have been unable to conduct a simple conversation because of the din (of traffic)."

The Newark resident said towns in other parts of the country are taking action and Delaware must follow their lead.

Currently a realtor for Prudential Preferred Properties of Newark, Cebula has lived in Delaware for the past nine years.

Previously, Flynn also said he is concerned about small business development, crime, and senior citizen issues.

Traffic is currently a major problem in the 14th District, he said. "I would like to see zero tolerance for violators of laws concerning speed limits, traffic signals and stop signs," he said. "I would also like better and quicker response from state agencies to citizens' concerns."

years, at 20 percent per year, from the General Fund."

According to Diliberto, a separate resolution establishes a committee to conduct a comprehensive examination of Delaware's system of school finance. "We set aside $48 million to finance proposals that may be enacted into law as a result of the reform committee's report, due to the Governor and General Assembly by February 15, 1999," he said

In addition, a major legislative priority in 1999 will be the elimination of reduction of the school property tax for senior citizens and others, said Diliberto.

DiLiberto would like to use future state surpluses to continue recent tax cuts in Delaware. "But, we cannot rely upon this "boom year" to accurately predict the future," he said. We must continue to fund our "rainy day fund" at two percent of our revenues, to prepare for bad times."

According to DiLiberto, it is easy to promise broad tax elimination in one giant step, but not fiscally responsible. "Our careful fiscal planning has paid off in real results. State income tax rates are at their lowest rate in generations. The State's bond rating is at its highest level in history and Delawareans are employed at record levels. And we continue to be one of only five states with no sales tax."

Initiatives DiLiberto would propose, if re-elected, include a pilot program to equip some Delaware school busses with child restraining devices.

Also, DiLiberto said the state must provide more classroom space for schools to implement the already-enacted reductions in class sizes. "We can use future surplus dollars," he said. "We have a duty to solve the problem."

As a "citizen" legislature, with people of all careers serving as legislators, DiLiberto said that Delaware representatives should have current and relevant experiences. "I know the difficulties of raising children in the new millennium," he said. "My experiences mirror those of most folks in our district, and I try to reflect the needs of my constituents every day I am in Dover."

DiLiberto serves on the judiciary, public safety, corrections, education, health & human development and house rules committees. He was appointed to the Commission on Delaware Courts 2000 and the Delaware Courts Planning Committee.

Merchants must be committed to each other

THE DOWNTOWN Newark Partnership, the new Apower panel created earlier this year to lead economic development and retention here, begins its work, we suggest the group look to its roots.

When the long-forgotten Newark Chamber of Commerce became the present-day New Castle County Chamber, a void was created in Newark's downtown. Newark merchants were left with no organization to advocate for them or assist in their struggles against the mall and new strip shopping centers.

Wisely, the city aided creation of the Newark Business Association and, for many years, this group provided the assistance necessary for the small businessperson. The NBA created the popular Newark Nite street festival, the real purpose of which is to lure persons who normally do not spend time or money downtown back into the area. Trickor-Treat Main Street, which takes place next Thursday, serves the same purpose. Also, the NBA offered training, coordinated advertising promotions and a place for the non-chain businessperson to have a voice...and be heard.

passing umbrella board, one comprised of all the key players in Newark's economy, surfaced. We have applauded city council for its wisdom in creating this new partnership and the mayor, city manager and University of Delaware president for their support, both philosophical and financial.

However, while the partnership surely will be visionary in its early activities, there's not one group devoted to the well-being of downtown merchants.

We urge the partnership leadership to fill this gap sooner as opposed to later. A subcommittee or similar group that is devoted to the promotional interests of smaller downtown merchants should be developed.

However, the merchants themselves also have to step forward and be willing to work together to lure shoppers away from the Wal-Marts.

They must be willing to fund image and group advertising that will draw people to downtown Newark. And they must not anticipate a horrendous increase in profits just because they pay $50 in dues to a merchants group.

Merchants must be committed to But as the pool of volunteers the merchants groups in the same diminished and Main Street pros- way they are to their own business-

EDUCATIONAL PERSPECTIVES

September 30 – A date that will live in infamy in Delaware

By JACK BARTLEY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

LL THROUGHOUT THE CHRISTI-NA School District, teachers have been taking attendance, usually in some kind of homeroom setting, in order to produce an accurate count of students in each school. Administrators chide the teachers to take this student count seriously since it will ultimately determine the number of teachers or "units," as we are so robotically referred to, that the school will be assigned. Schools that fall short of the count that will support the number of teachers on hand will, I suppose, have to cough up a "unit" like a cat disgorging an unwanted hairball. If the count is Bartley too high, the theory is that additional "units" will be assigned to take up the overload. The September 30 student count is the magical deadline date Delaware has established to determine a school's "unit" count. Is this delay in balancing a school's needs educationally sound? Apparently no one in the legislature values a student's education enough to understand the impact of having 34 students, or more, crammed into a laboratory class or essay-filled English course for over an entire month waiting for corrective action to be taken. Of course, when corrective action is taken, it can mean disrupting the schedules of many students and teachers who have by this point in time adjusted to each other's learning and teaching styles.

Unfortunately, in the last paragraph I may have given the impression that corrective action would eventually be taken. For most students and teachers, adjustments never occur. Last year I had 42 students in a college preparatory biology lab course. There were so many students, I had to run labs in shifts, giving one half the class paper work to do at their desks, while the other half conducted their lab. The next day, the students would reverse roles. Could I give the students proper attention in the lab? No. Could I give them proper attention at their desks? No. Was there the hoped-for correction in class size after the September 30 count deadline? No.

I would like to say that things have changed for the better this year, but I can't. Some lab science, foreign language, social studies and English classes continue to rise above the thirty students per classroom ratio. In the Christina School District, there are honors earth science and honors chemistry classes with more than 34 students in a room. In the case of the earth science course, there are three additional students who would like to take an honors level course, but are refused entry due to overcrowding. Why are our very best students being denied the opportunity to pursue excellence in their academic careers when tens of thousands of dollars are being spent on students who couldn't care less about their education?

I can't answer that question, and apparently administrators and legislators throughout Delaware have chosen to ignore it. Many believe that excellent students will achieve great results no matter what kind of academic situation confronts them. While it is true that they will most likely succeed, the fact remains that they have been short-changed in one of the most influential development times of their lives.

A few weeks ago in an opinion column in this newspaper, Martin Groundland, a former elementary school principal, applauded the efforts of a few legislators to promote H.B.758 to reduce class size and unit count ratios in elementary schools. Unfortunately, no help is on the way for secondary schools. In addition to reducing class size, he correctly stated that effective staff development will be a necessary and critical component of any academic improvement plan within the staff members to develop. Delaware continues to short-change the educators of the state, and ultimately the children of the state, by failing to provide funds for competitive salaries and meaningful teacher enrichment and staff development programs. All the testing, standardsbased education programs, and accountability threats will not improve education in Delaware unless legislators are willing to commit sufficient funding to attract more and better teachers in this increasingly competitive market. Until that commitment is realized, a count of students in each classroom should be taken on the 30th of every month, not just September, to serve as a reminder to our students and the people of Delaware that the educational needs of our students are not being met.

For staff development to be effective, it helps to have talented

After spending the weekend in Washington, D.C. with 22 other award winners and hearing what "extraordinary things" those teachers are doing with their children, Antes arrived back at her Newark classroom inspired.

"I came back with this feeling that the newspaper could be an important beginning" to raise math awareness among Downes primary students and "I need to make it a priority," said Antes.

She may not have to beg funds for publication of Issue Two. In addition to the crystal trophy she received at USA Today headquarters, Downes will receive $2,500 to spend as Antes wishes.

Last week, as her current students trickled into Antes' classroom probably unaware that their teacher was one of a pool of 600 nominees for best educators in the country, Antes was surprised with a local reception.

Copies of the USA Today article announcing the All Teacher Team were passed around as colleagues, parents and former students offered congratulations. Delaware's Education Secretary, Dr. Iris T. Metts, praised Antes and Mayor Hal Godwin read a proclamation declaring Oct. 15 "Carol Antes Day" in Newark.

Then on Tuesday another huge floral arrangement arrived with congratulations from the president of Shippensburg State College where Antes graduated in 1969.

Last spring, two parents of Antes' students compiled the lengthy nomination form and forwarded it to USA Today judges. Cindy Wagner and Joan Pierson ended their nomination statement simply: "To us, Carol will always be teacher of the year."

Another parent, Patricia M. Walsh, herself an educator at the University of Delaware, said she is "inspired by Carol's dedication, energy and enthusiasm" and her talent to stimulate top students as well as those with special needs.

Another nominator was a person who had witnessed Antes interaction with a troubled student, who lived at night in a homeless shelter and often was the subject of classmate jokes. "This child was simply dismissed by-other teachers, but Mrs. Antes was able to bring a smile to his face and make him feel special," said Stephanie L. Arrants.

A former student, now an eighth grader at Shue-Medill Middle School, said Antes' greatest achievement has nothing to do with academics. In his nomination letter, he recalled how Antes made sure another third grader at the time who had Down's Syndrome, felt at home in her classroom.

'She made sure he had his own desk with his own name tag and sat with regular kids," the boy wrote to USA Today, "David died suddenly, The class was devastated. Mrs. Antes comforted us and made sure we were able to cope with the

Make your team work at home and in the workplace

■ This weekly feature on the Lifestyle page is authored by the staff of the Newark-based Cooperative Extension Service.

Teamwork is a hallmark for many of today's workplaces and families. When it works, it's a win-win situation for employee and employer or family members. Benefits of teamwork include improved job satisfaction and improved performance. These same ideas apply at home too.

The team approach is a distinctive style of working together aimed at harnessing the combined talent and energy of people. Teams must rely on group collaboration if each member is to experience the optimum of success.

By Maria Pippidis

Unfortunately, some managers call their groups "teams" but never allow them to truly function as teams.
Those managers might feel threatened by sharing power and decision-making with employees, or they might just not know how to build effective teams.
This happens in families too. If one person is calling the shots all the time, other family members don't develop their own skills as team members, may get resentful or not do their part.

If you find yourself in that kind of situation, here is a list of questions to stimulate discussion and the birth of a high-performing team:

What keeps you from being as effective as you would like to be? What keeps the staff/family from functioning as an effective team?

What do you like about this unit that you want to maintain? What suggestions do you have for improving the quality of your working relationships and functioning?

The next step is to get everyone involved. Each team or family member should answer these questions individually, then record everyone's respons-

From there, the group can set priorities on problems they want to address, and begin working on high priority issues. Setting a time for follow-up is essential and holding additional meetings is important to building trust and retaining a team spirit.

BUILDING ON HISTORY

T THE UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE, even the construction fences can provide a history lesson.

Employees, students and visitors to the University of Delaware Mall recently noticed eye-catching additions to the protective fencing surrounding the renovation of Memorial Hall.

In late September, 14 rectangular panels, each 4 feet high by 10 feet wide, were installed on the fence. Illustrated with text and color, the panels show architectural drawings and historic and recent construction photographs which tell about the building's history as well as its future.

Beginning on the north Mall, in the front of Memorial Hall,

A University of Delaware student strolls past one of the signs on Memorial Hall construction fence highlighting the building's history. The photo showing children (upper right) who helped raise money in 1922 to build Memorial Hall adorns another sign on the fence.

a panel dated 1917 shows a design of the campus and the central portion of Memorial Hall's massive rotunda that was "the unifying structure between Delaware College and the Women's College."

Heading west, toward Hullihen Hall, the next panel spotlights three individuals who played major roles in the birth of the structure as a library: former University presidents Samuel Chiles Mitchell, who envisioned the new library as a memorial to Delaware's World War I dead, and Walter Hullihen, who initiated the statewide campaign on behalf of the building; and H. Rodney Sharp, who led the fundraising campaign committee to build Memorial

The next panel shows that area schoolchildren were solicited for small contributions while raising money for the building.

Other panels, extending along the west side of the construction area to the south end of the Mall, show events during and after the opening of the Hall.

Passersby can read about the groundbreaking on Dec. 11, 1923, when administrators and faculty pitched in to help excavate the basement of the new building. The pomp and circumstance, with flags waving and soldiers marching, that marked the building's dedication on May 23, 1925, are also noted.

The long-time custom of honoring Delaware's war dead from the First World War, the 1937 flood that destroyed books and documents, and the look of The Scrounge in 1950, when it was located in the basement of Memorial Hall are here as are the arrival of the carillon in 1959 and the transfer of 300,000 volumes to the Morris Library in 1963.

The last two panels spotlight the current renovation and the expected conclusion in 1999, when the department of English and the University Writing Center will move into the building.

Barbara Broge of University media services, who worked on the project over a six-month period, said she found it both fascinating and a challenge. In preparing the text, she researched the history of Memorial Hall, using books by University of Delaware historians as well as information and photographs from the University and state archives.

Many of the older pictures were in black and white, and she colored them to make a uniform presentation of the project and enhance the images. All the work was done on the computer.

Color Reflections in Philadelphia produced the color graphics and affixed them to sheet metal surfaces. University carpenters used plywood backing to attach the signage to the fencing.

Need is three times as great this year

The Newark Area Welfare Committee will hold its annual Good Neighbor Day on Friday, Oct. 30, when volunteers will solicit funds and sell beans for soup in front of banks and supermarkets around Newark.

Committee member Marjorie Purcell asked that people contribute generously. "Every penny of your contribution will go to local people in need," Purcell said.

Members of the Committee, whose Members of the Committee, whose motto is Neighbor helping Neighbor, will volunteer their time for the project from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. next Friday.

The volunteer organization, has been providing emergency assistance to Newark residents for more than 60 years through its food cupboard as well as financial help for utilities, rent, medicine, car repair and other emergencies.

Shoes are provided for children in need and for adults who need them for work.

In addition, each year the committee assembles and distributes about 400 Christmas baskets with food and turkeys donated by the community.

Purcell said the committee distributes about $30,000 each year in addition to donated foods and other supplies. Most of the money comes from individuals and businesses in the Newark aréa. About one quarter of the funds come from the city of Newark and other governmental and social agencies.

"Our allotment of cash was depleted by Oct. 8 this year," said Purcell. "There is a crying need for extra funds – and the need for both cash and food is is up threefold."

Persons who wish to mail a donation, can send it to NAWC, P. O. Box 951, Newark DE, 19715.

To arrange to contribute a frozen turkey to be used in a Christmas basket call volunteer coordinator Beverly Stout at 368-9354. Pickup and storage of turkeys can be arranged.

Teenage art exhibit comes to Wilmington

The fact that there is a new photo exhibition at the Delaware Art Museum is always good news, but hardly the kind to make the front page. It becomes closer to front page material, however, when you know that the 13 photo artists whose works are being shown are all teenagers!

The show, from now through November 29, is called "Picture Delaware: Landmarks of a New Generation. The exhibition presents a new and personal view of what constitutes a "landmark" to today's teenagers. Some ideas are very new landmarks and others are new ways to see old landmarks. Come prepared to enjoy yourself and to learn about Delaware through the eyes of its youth.

Photographer Bob McAteer, who was artistic director of the Picture Delaware project told me that the photographs in the show represent, 'quite possibly the most heartfelt, richly textured and honest portrayal of Delaware ever created." Bob continued, "They (the photos) represent such diverse subjects as a Sussex County chicken barbecue, the Delaware River with the Salem Nuclear Power Plant as a background, a family cutting down a Christmas tree and Dick's Barber Shop. The images invite audiences to share in the lives of the young people, to participate in family events and to celebrate the history of their neighborhoods and their state."

The work of LeAnn Austin of Newark, a 7th grader at the Cab Calloway School of the Arts in Wilmington, was my favorite and is with my column today. It is one very well known to area residents and travelers, the clock tower at Pennsylvania Station at Front and French Streets in Wilmington. Most of us see it from the outside front of the old station looking in. LeAnn has chosen to show it to us from the Track Two platform, rather inside the station looking out.

The young photographer said about her work, "It is a landmark simply because of its uniqueness and importance. It represents the contrast between the old and the new. The station has been changed many times but the clock stays the same." She concluded, "I wonder if the watchtower weren't there, would he station have the same effect on me?"

An insightful young woman and fine photographer for sure.

Curator McAteer shared an interesting story about images in his catalog for the show. "Discussing how the landmarks chosen hadn't included any negative images such as graffiti, I asked some of the students if they couldn't show the 'underbelly' of our state. The response was immediate and heartening, 'I thought we were supposed to show

The clock tower at Pennsylvania Station, Front and French Streets in Wilmington, is one of 64 works by teenagers now on exhibit at the Delaware Art Museum through November 29.

Delaware the way we saw it!" Right on, kids!

Speaking of the exhibit's catalog, it has the same name as the show. It is 128 pages and contains all of the photographs you may see in the gallery. In addition to enjoying it yourself after you visit the show, it would make a great gift for a young photographer on your Christmas list. The catalog is available in the Museum Store just off the main entrance lobby of the building.

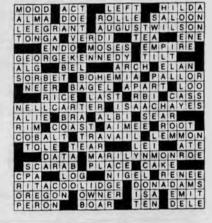

In case you miss it at the 2301 Kentmere Parkway gallery in Wilmington, it will also be hung at two other places. From Jan. 20 to Feb. 28, 1999, it will be at the Swell C. Biggs Museum of American Art in Dover and from April 2 to 25, at the Rehoboth Art League.

The 13 artists whose works are on exhibit at DAM through the end of next month are, from New Castle County: LeAnn Austin, 12; Cynthia Lan, 16; Jason Nickle, 13; Kerry O'Reilly, 16; Fabian Richards, 16 and Corey Stansbury, 13. From Kent County: Philip Harris, 12; Ricardo Irizarry, 12 and Michael Rios, 17. From Sussex County: Justin Brooks-Ward, 13; Teia Johnson, 15, Rastafari Oney, 15 and Chrissy Ownes, 17.

State manufacturers get help with global competition

The Delaware Manufacturing Extension Partnership will receive $300,000 from the U.S. Department of Commerce to improve Delaware manufacturers competitiveness in the global market

According to U.S. Congressman Mike Castle, the money will enable small to medium-sized manufacturers get business advice, services they need to help improve their productivity and increase profits.

"The Delaware Manufacturing Extension Partnership program is a cost-effective, federal-state, publicprivate partnership that will give small and mid-sized Delaware manufacturers the competitive edge in today's global marketplace," said

The Partnership is part of a nationwide network of more than 70 nonprofit centers. The purpose of these centers is to provide small and mid-sized manufacturers with the help they need to succeed.

Located in all 50 states and Puerto Rico, the centers are linked together through the Department of Commerce's National Institute of Standards and Technology. This technology allows all firms to have access to more than 2,00 knowledgeable manufacturing and business specialists.

"This federal funding will enable the center to help businesses assess where they stand," Castle said. "[The firms]] will get technical and business solutions, assists in the creation of successful partnerships, and offer seminars and training pro-

On The Issues ...

The General Assembly has recently enacted legislation that makes both schools and students much more accountable. Aggressive standards are being applied to both. It remains to be seen just how all this is going to work.

However, one thing is abundantly clear. The General Assembly failed to create any form of accountability for parents! This, despite the strong feeling of nearly everyone involved with the education of our children that the most important missing element in our education process is the involvement of parents committed to ensuring the education of their children.

The next General Assembly should mount a significant effort to ensure that the State and its schools do everything they can to increase the direct involvement of parents in their children's education.

For example, the parents should not only be permitted to sit in on the classes their children are attending but also be invited to participate. Employers should be encouraged to permit parents the time to visit children's schools not just after school hours but during academic days. Parents should be specifically informed of just what the educational process expects of them.

Much can be done to encourage parental involvement through the use of new technologies such as posting assignments on the Internet and the use of E-mail. We have spent very large sums of money to provide fiber optics to class rooms throughout the State but, thus far, have barely scratched the surface of the new capability to foster interaction between schools and parents.

We, as parents, cannot turn over the education of our children to the schools and then ignore it! There is simply no substitute for the active intervention of a concerned parent in the growth and development of a child. The General Assembly can not create the kind of schools we all want in Delaware without a commitment to encourage parents.

New unit brings hot water to residential taps in seconds

NIBCO INC. is manufacturing and distributing a new low-cost hot-water circulating unit with the trademark name of Just Right, which delivers hot water to every tap in a residence's plumbing loop within seconds.

Featured in Popular Science magazine, the new unit is not a pump, uses no electricity and has just one moving part – a small valve. The patented device uses convection to keep hot water rising and cold water falling within the plumbing loop and can save the average household 7,000 to 14,000 gallons of water per year, according to the company.

Because it has just one moving part, the unit can operate virtually maintenance-free over the life of the plumbing system. Just Right is designed for use in both residential and light-commercial applications. Basements are an ideal setting, but the unit will also work in structures on slabs or crawl spaces if the hotwater line is situated above the heater and not in the slab.

A plumber or do-it-yourselfer can install the unit using only three compression fittings, packaged with the unit, to install the half-pound device. The fittings permit a quick and easy connection to the main water supply line, whether it is made of copper or CPVC. To complete the recirculation loop, a return line must be run from the most distant hot-water outlet back to the Just Right unit.

Call NIBCO at 1-888-350-0833 for more information about Just Right or visit their web site at www.nibco.com.

Founded in Elkhart in 1904, NIBCO is a leading provider of flow-control products to customers in the residential and commercial construction, industrial and irrigation markets. NIBCO has 11 manufacturing plants located throughout the United States and in Mexico and Poland, and four distribution centers strategically located in Columbus, Ohio; Atlanta, Dallas, and Los Angeles.

Check plumbing before buying

Are you planning to buy a new home, or remodel your present one? Often, the most important specification details are overlooked-especially regarding materials that won't be seen once the drywall has been nailed up and the job is finished.

To help homebuyers and homeowners determine if their contractor is making the best choice of materials for their plumbing system, the Copper Development Association has developed a simple home plumbing test:

1. Does the home's plumbing material have a 50-year warranty?

2. Is the home's plumbing system impermeable. For example, can it block contaminates from penetrating pipe walls?

3. Are the joints reliable, will they withstand rapid pressure and temperature changes?

4. Will the pipe specified perform well in hot and cold weather? Is it easily thawed, if necessary?

sary?
5. Does the pipe specified resist punctures and abrasion?

6. Can it inhibit the breeding of harmful germs?

7. Will it burn, or give off toxic fumes, when exposed to fire?

8. Will it withstand the weather and the sun's ultraviolet rays?

9. Will it increase the home's investment or resale value?

10. Does it have nationwide approval of building inspectors and engineers?

Your home won't pass the test if it has an inferior plumbing material. When it comes to a quality plumbing system, only copper will do.

For a free brochure "Why You Should Choose Copper Plumbing," contact the Copper Development Association at 800-741'-6823.

Information is also available on the World Wide Web by visiting CDA's "The Copper Page." at http://piping.copper.org.

Is your heating system ready?

By getting a preventative maintenance check for your heating system now, you can lengthen the life of your system, prevent unexpected and costly problems, and ensure your family's comfort during the cold winter months.

"As soon as the weather starts to change, it's a good idea to schedule a preventative maintenance check to ensure your heater will perform properly this winter," said Charles Walker, residential marketing manager of Conectiv Services. "There's nothing worse than finding out your heating system doesn't work once the winter freeze sets in."

When a heating system sits idle for several months, parts may corrode and need cleaning or replaceworking properly.

ment. If parts need to be replaced and are not in stock, it may take days to repair. "During a cold spell, the last thing you need is for you and your family to be without heat," said Walker.

It is also important to make sure your service provider is technically qualified for the specific service needs of your complete heating and cooling system. An efficient heating system may save you money and make your home more comfortable.

In addition to a professional and comprehensive preventative maintenance check, Conectiv Services also encourages homeowners to turn on your furnace before you actually need it to make sure it's working properly.

Winner Nissan Buick Verifies Claim That Cars Will In Fact Sell For $99 On Saturday, October 24th.

Common Insurance Definitions

Here are some common auto insurance terms and their definitions to better help you understand your auto policy:

DEC Page / Declarations - A summary of coverages, limits and information in an insurance policy. It contains the "who, what, when and where" information for the policy.

Deductible - An amount the insured agrees to pay as part of a loss, usually reduced or eliminated with increased premium.

Collision Insurance - Auto coverage for direct and accidental loss to the covered vehicle resulting from upset or its impact with another vehicle or object. An auto running off the road and striking a tree would be covered under collision.

Comprehensive Coverage - Broad coverages or an extensive amount of coverage for physical damage losses other than those caused by collision or upset. Hitting a deer falls under comprehensive as does a broken windshield.

Bodily Injury - Also known as injury liability, it covers personal injury, death, sickness, disease or death sustained by a person as a result of a vehicle crash.

Uninsured / Underinsured Motorist Coverage - This provision provided protection, for bodily injury and property damage, against both drivers who have no insurance and those whose coverages proves inadequate at the time of an accident.

Auto insurance is important! If you do not understand your policy limits and coverages, contact your agent or insurer for a complete review of your policy.

The Newark High football team keeps taking everyone's best shot and continues to stand.

The Yellowjackets rallied for a 7-6 victory over an emotional William Penn squad Friday night at Hoffman Stadium. The win - the Yellowjackets' 17th straight improved their record to 5-0 on the season and 2-0 in Flight A. The Colonials dropped to 2-3 overall and 1-2 in Flight A.

Trailing 6-0 entering the fourth quarter, Newark's Richie Parson burst up the middle for a 12-yard touchdown run to tie the game. Amy Hunt's successful extra point gave the Jackets a 7-6 lead.

The Colonials drove the ball to the Newark 15 on their last drive but two consecutive big losses secured the Newark victory.

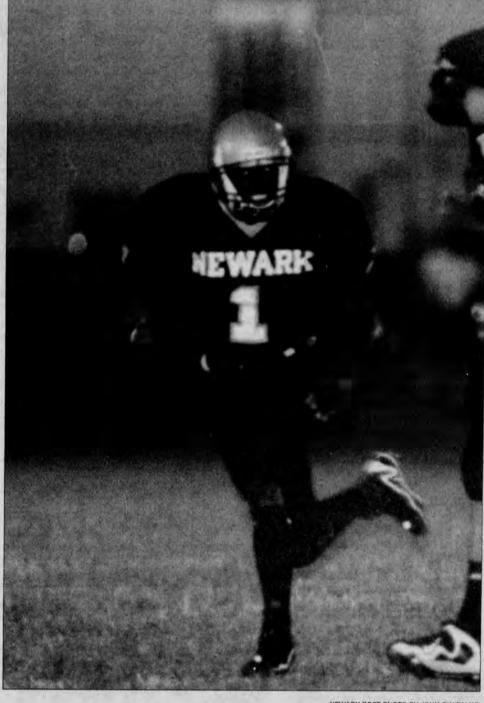

"We have the greatest respect for the William Penn program," said Newark coach Butch Simpson. "They played a great game. We feel fortunate to win."

From the game's outset it was evident that the Colonials were playing with more sense of urgency.

They held Newark without a first down on the Jackets' first two offensive possessions and scored on a 50-yard drive of their own to take a 6-0 lead.

Christiana High proved it could run the football with several different backs as it racked up 274 rushing yards in a 37-14 victory over cross-town rival Glasgow Saturday night at Glasgow stadium.

Florida transfer Corwin Evan led the charge from his fullback position with three touchdowns and 98 yards on 15 carries. In all, seven Vikings carried the ball.

Still, Evan believed the key to Christiana's (4-1) ground dominance is the offensive line.

"Today the line blocked great," he said. "They covered every hole and just got everyone blocked."

At the 11:25 mark of the second quarter, Glasgow gained its only lead of the game when Joe Swift capped an eight-play drive with a 15-yard run up the middle. Dragon quarterback Matt Folke then found Ben Garrett for the two point conversion, giving the Dragons a two point lead because the Vikings had missed an extra point after a first quarter touchdown.

The Vikings answered the score by driving 68 yards on 13 plays to regain the lead. The drive featured only one pass, a nine yard completion from Jeff Tatnall to tight end Chris Tarabicos, and was capped by a one-yard Evan dive.

"It was a good effort tonight,"

Christiana High took two big steps toward winning the Flight A championship last week.

After edging Alexis I. DuPont 2-1 in overtime last Thursday, the Vikings came back and defeated crosstown rival Newark 3-0 Tuesday afternoon.

The wins improved Christiana's record to 11-0-1 overall and 5-0 in Flight

"These were two good wins for us," said Christiana coach John Kendall after his team's victory over Newark. "The A.I. game was a rough one but we really wanted this one badly. The tough part of our schedule was at the end. We played A.I., Newark, Sallies and Glasgow all in a row. To get these two wins is huge."

Both Kendall and Newark coach Hugh Mitchell agreed that the biggest play in their game was a direct kick goal that Greg Victor pounded home in the game's 14th minute. Victor's shot was awarded after the referee called Newark for a hand ball.

"That was the key to the game," Kendall said. "Greg Victor's goal was big. It got us that first goal and the lead."

Mitchell agreed with the Kendall's assessment, if not the call, that led to the

"It's hard to start down 1-0," Mitchell said. "That was a questionable call with our guy making a good shoulder pass. But you have to give Greg Victor credit. He made a great shot.

Flanigan helps lead Spartans over Sallies

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Poor St. Mark's High. Among the nine starters it lost from last year's state champion soccer team was a Mercedes-Benz-like center midfielder in Dan Keane.

So what does Spartans coach Tom DeMatteis have to replace Keane in what is arguably the most important position on a soccer field? How about a Porsche in the form of Adam Flanigan.

The bad news for opponents is that Flanigan's only a sophomore. Fresh out of the showroom. And he was in full racing form Tuesday night at Baynard Stadium against Salesianum School, helping drive the Spartans to a 2-0 victory with his tireless play. Flanigan, who played mainly in the back earlier in his club career with the Kirkwood Blast, tracked down balls in the defensive half of the field and helped shift the offense into high gear for nearly the entire 80 minutes.

That effort was especially noticeable because, although the speedy Sals have plenty of horsepower, on this night, there was no one comparable to Flanigan to steer it from the midfield.

"He's been our savior," DeMatteis said of Flanigan, who's scored 11 goals and added 10 assists this season. "He's been our most consistent player all year. You figure we lose a Dan Keane (now starting for the University of Delaware), that's going to be a big hole. But he's done a great job of filling that role for

"He really should have been with the varsity last year," DeMatteis added, "but he was behind Keane and Hogan. So we kept him with the freshmen and (junior varsity teams) where he was great."

DeMatteis brought Flanigan up in time to play in some state tournament games last year, so he knew what he had in his garage.

"I knew it was going to be tough following a guy like Keane

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

BRANDON HAMAN CHRISTIANA HIGH

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

RANDON HAMAN has always been a big threat to opposing football teams from his position in the Christiana secondary. Now opponents have to worry about him on special teams and offense as well.

In addition to having another fine defensive game in the Vikings romp over Glasgow Saturday night, the junior returned a punt 88 yards for a touchdown and another one over 48 yards to the12-yard line. He also had a 70-yard run while playing halfback.

"I've always wanted to play both ways," said Haman. "I love being able to make the big play."

"Brandon has too much potential for him not to be involved in the offense," said Christiana coach Marvin Spence. "He has great natural ability. In fact, he's had two older brothers play very successfully here and he's the best of the bunch."

Spence feels that Haman is already one of the top defensive backs in the state.

"He's just great on defense," the coach said. "But now he's added another dimension to us. He definitely makes us better."

Returning kicks gives Haman a chance to use his running ability in the open field.

"It gives me another chance to make things happen," he said.

He'll be one of the players that Spence and the rest of the Christiana coaching staff will be looking to for big plays in Saturday's big game against crosstown rival Newark.

"This is our chance," Haman said. "We've been getting better each week. Now it's time to play in a big game. We want to do something this year. We want to win championships – Flight A and more."

Glasgow falls to Middletown

By STEVE WESTRICK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The combination of Middletown's defense and Glasgow's inability to take advantage of scoring opportunities led to the Cavaliers' 1-0 field hockey victory Oct. 14 at Glasgow.

The only goal scored, with 2:30 left in the first half, came when visiting Middletown's Jes Spence took a pass from Donna Brovey firing a shot that found the Glasgow goal.

The score was especially deflating to the Dragons who were able to control the flow of the game in the first half.

Until the 4:00 mark of the first, Glasgow (2-6) kept the ball in the Cavaliers' end of the field. However, a long shot by a Cavalier deep into the Dragon zone changed the momentum of the game as the ball would almost exclusively stay near Glagow's goal.

FIELD HOCKEY

"We had a few big break downs on defense," Glasgow coach Lisa Kosanovich said. "They scored because we were not pressuring them."

A controversial call occurred midway through the second half. At the 9:59 mark, it seemed that Dragon Katie Manchester had scored the tying goal. However, the official waved off the score.

"I was waiting because at first I thought someone had kicked it in," Kosanovich said explaining that if the ball goes off a players foot into the goal it is waved off. "But [the official] ruled that it did not hit any Glasgow stick. In field hockey if someone on your team doesn't hit the ball the goal doesn't count. But I saw the ball redirect, so it was hit.

"That play hurt us. But I thought we should have scored more than one goal anyway," she said.

Statistically, the game was even.
Glasgow had four shots on goal, compared to two by Middletown.
The Cavaliers led in long hits two to one, while Glasgow had more penalty corners 14-9.

Middletown coach Anne Moody gave a lot of credit to her senior defensive players for the victory. Those players include, fullbacks, Kim Clay and Jessica Cline, center-halfback Sarah Moody, left-halfback Christie Stevenson and goalie Ruth Parcells.

"I think Glasgow did a nice job of keeping our offense in check," Moody said. "We were able to keep the flow of the game wide open and our defense came up big."

Kosanovich said her team must learn to get ready for every game.

"We just can't seem to get up for these games," she said. "We get up for the Brandywines. But games like this where we should do well, we just don't get up for."

Christiana football cruises by Glasgow

CHRISTIANA, from 21

Christiana coach Marvin Spence said. "A couple of times [our team] could have quit but didn't. When Glasgow scored we came right down the field and answered."

Evan's third touchdown, a five yard dive, set the halftime score at 18-8.

In the second half, Viking Brandon Haman brought the crowd to its feet with two dramatic punt returns. The first, which came at the 9:29 mark of the third quarter, saw Haman be immediately hit after fielding the ball. However, Haman was able to stay on his feet after the contact, and break one more tackle, before rushing 88 yards down the sideline.

The second return saw Haman, take a reverse from Rush, and return the ball 48 yards to the Glasgow 12-yard line. That return would set up the last score of the game, a 12-yard touchdown run by sophomore Danny Foster.

"Our special teams have been helping us along all year," Spence said. "When you have kids like Brandon [Haman] and Virgil [Rush] anything can happen."

BUY • SELL • TRADE

In addition to Haman's punt returning, he added 70 yards on just two runs from scrimmage. Foster rushed for 67 yards, on 12 carries.

"[Christiana] has a plethora of backs," Glasgow coach Mark DelPercio said. "They saw us play and knew we have weaknesses and were able to take advantage of them."

After Haman's first punt return, Glasgow went to the air and looked like it might get back into the ball game when Folke connected with Javon Chandler for a 63-yard gain. That play, which left the ball at the Vikings' 5 yard-line, set up a rushing touchdown by Folke. After the two-point conversion failed, Glasgow had cut the Vikings' lead to 10 points with an entire quarter to play.

However, the Dragons were unable to drive the ball in the fourth quarter. Thus, when Rush intercepted Folke and returned it 36 yards for a touchdown, the game was sealed with 3:15 left.

The win builds momentum as the Vikings prepare to host unbeaten Newark tomorrow at 1 p.m..

"We have a big schedule," Spence said referring to Newark, at Brandywine Oct. 31, and William Penn Nov. 21. "But we've got a young team and I've been telling them they don't have to wait until next year to win some games."

Blue Hens back in playoff hunt

Win over Youngstown restores confidence

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

What a difference a week makes. It wasn't too long ago that the University of Delaware football team and its fans were bemoaning a heartbreaking 52-45 loss to William & Mary. It was already the second loss of the season and the defense looked like it couldn't stop anything. This all in what was supposed to be a championship year.

Well, maybe it will be anyway. The Blue Hens (5-2 overall, 2-2 Atlantic 10) rebounded from that loss to the Tribe with an impressive 30-20 road victory over defending national champion (and sixthranked) Youngstown State.

The defense looked better and the offense was able to run the ball and keep the Penguins' offense off the field.

Now with a week off before facing Atlantic-10 rival Maine, the "Needless to say, that football game is just what the doctor ordered," said Delaware coach Tubby Raymond of the Youngstown State win. "It was very difficult after losing to William & Mary. It was a game we probably should've, could've won and then to lose it the way we did was not easy.

"But we came a long way last week. The development of the defense from the William & Mary game to the Youngstown State game was amazing. It's taken awhile to get going - and we're not there yet - but we're a lot closer to where we want to be.'

Raymond and the team are looking at the week off as a way to get prepared for final four games - all against conference foes.

"We're using this hiatus as a breather between seasons," Raymond said. "We just need a break and then we'll get going into our Atlantic 10 schedule.

Delaware's next opponent Maine has a 4-3 overall record, including a resounding 44-10 victory over Villanova. The Black Bears visit James Madison Saturday. Richmond, Delaware's opponent on Nov. 14, is 5-2 overall and 3-1 in the league. The Spiders play at Northeastern Saturday and at Villanova

In addition to league leader William & Mary, Massachusetts and Richmond only have one league loss. Northeastern, Villanova and Rhode Island still only have two losses each.

"This conference is the best I've ever seen," Raymond said. "And we still have Maine, Connecticut and Richmond to play. They are all still in the hunt to win the championship. And James Madison has lost some close games to the league leaders."

Raymond planned to give his team two days off earlier this week and will not practice Saturday or Sunday either.

POST PICKS OF THE WEEK

Well, we couldn't have been more wrong about the Middletown-Salesianum game last week. The Cavs rolled to a big victory and looked awesome in doing so.

We won't make that mistake

There are several big games this week and we'll have another go at them.

CARAVEL (4-2) VS. TAT-NALL (4-2) - Friday night at Caravel's Bob Peoples Stadium, 7:30. This is a huge game as far as the Division II state tournament is concerned. Both teams need a win if they want to get a leg up on an at-large berth. Tatnall has played very well all season. The Bucs, though, have faced some very difficult competition. That should help in this case. The Pick: Caravel 22, Tatnall 14.

ST. MARK'S (3-3) VS. WEST CHESTER EAST (Pa.) -Friday night at West Chester East, 7:30. The Spartans still have a legitimate shot of making the Division I state tournament, but a win here is a necessity. West Chester East is a good team that beat Downingtown last week. We feel St. Mark's, though, is back on the right track now.

The Pick: St. Mark's 16, West Chester East 13.

NEWARK (5-0) VS. CHRIS-TIANA (4-1) – Saturday afternoon at Christiana's Coder Field, 1. This is the biggest game of the weekend with two crosstown rivals squaring off in a huge Flight A game. The Yellowjackets are looking to keep their unbeaten streak alive while the Vikings are making their push for the Flight A championship and a trip to the state tournament. Both teams are explosive. Both teams have good defenses. Newark, however, has a slight edge at this point of the sea-

The Pick: Newark 14, Chris-

WILLIAM PENN (2-3) VS. McKEAN (1-4) - Saturday afternoon at William Penn's Bill Cole Stadium, 1:30. The Colonials have lost two straight heartbreakers. They'll get well in a hurry this week.

The Pick: William Penn 36, McKean 6.

HODGSON (2-3) VS. DICK-INSON (3-2) - Saturday morning at Dickinson, 10:30. The Silver

Eagles had an extra week to prepare for the Rams. Dickinson is coming off a one-point victory over Mount Pleasant. If Hodgson can iron out some of its silly mistakes, it could be a strong team.

The Pick: Hodgson 21, Dickinson 20.

GLASGOW (1-4) VS. BRANDYWINE (4-1) - Saturday afternoon at Brandywine, 1:30. The Dragons have faced a rough schedule. All four of their losses have come to top five quality teams. Unfortunately, they face another one this week. Glasgow is definitely getting better. Look for a competitive game. Brandywine, however, still has too much.

The Pick: Brandywine 22, Glasgow 16.

Junior Blue Hen Bantams open hockey season

The Delaware Jr. Blue Hens Bantam B Traveling Team opened their 1998-1999 Ice Hockey Season in the Delaware Valley Hockey League (DVHL) this past weekend under new head coach Alex Carey.

On Oct. 17 they lost to the Harrisonville, Pa. Holy Name Vipers 5-4 despite outshooting them 57 -30. Andrew Wissler was outstanding in goal for the Vipers stopping 53 shots. On Oct. 18, the Bantam Jr. Blue Hens traveled to Hollydell, N.J. and crushed the home team Gladiators 10-2.

At the University of Delaware Gold Arena on Saturday the Bantam Jr. Blue Hen goal scorers were Gary Wright, Andrew Cassidy, Kyle Morrison, and Steve Williams. Chris Tyczkowski, Rick Crabill, and Goalie Rich Neylan had assists in this contest.

Eight Bantam Jr. Blue Hens figured in the scoring on Sunday in Hollydel. Josh

Allen picked up two goals and Chris Proctor had two goals and an assist. Josh Dries had a goal and three assists for a playmaker. David Kitchen and Nick Hurd picked up their first goals in this new DVHL season. Andrew Cassidy and Gary Wright each collected a goal and an assist in the game. Steve Williams scored his second goal of the season to finish the scoring.

Next weekend finds the Bantam Jr. Blue Hens playing the Hershey (Pa.) Bears at the Twin Ponds West Arena on Oct. 24th. They host a very tough Reston (Va.) squad on Oct. 25, at 6:30PM in the University of Delaware Gold Arena.

because he was such a great player," said Flanigan. "So I just figured I'd come in an work as hard as I can and hopefully do the job. I'm glad that things are working out for me, but I worked hard and set my goals. And the guys have really brought me in and helped my confidence."

Flanigan picked up his 10th assist in the second half with his team leading 1-0. His kick found the head of senior Jason Dzielak, whose shot glanced off a Sals' defender, but Dzielak slotted home the rebound for his 10th goal of the season

Dzielak gave the Spartans a 1-0 lead early in the first half by finishing a pretty passing sequence that he initiated.

Dzielak, who scored 27 goals last season but may be just as valuable this season because of his leadership and making his goals count, sent Adam Stuller away on the right wing with a deft chip. Stuller then launched a low, hard cross that found Greg Czerwinski, who deftly one-timed a short pass back to Dzielak near the top of the penalty area. Dzielak measured the chance and used his powerful right foot to send a shot screaming past goal-keeper Phil Szcerba.

St. Mark's finished with a 21-12 edge in shots on goal, but most indicative of the edge in play, a 7-3 advantage in corner kicks.

"I think the big difference was we appeared to be more mentally prepared to play than we've been in a number of our games this year," said DeMatteis, whose team improved to 10-1-1. "On that first goal, that was as nice a connection of passing as we've had this year.

"Those two (Dzielak and Czerwinski) are as much a reason as we won the game as any. And (sweeper back Jeremy) Doucette deserves mention; the whole defense. That's our fourth shutout in a row, which is kind of modest, but it's a good little streak we've finally put together."

Kirkwood Lightning win two games

The Kirkwood Lightning under-14 girls team won two games to improve its season record to 6-2 in the the PAGS league.

The first win was a 4-1 triumph over Interboro. The second was a 4-1 victory over Springfield.

Lauren Kovach and Erin Frederick were the goalkeepers. Danielle Unflat, Kenya Hodges, Chrissy Reyes and Neddie Hughes played strong defense.

Lindsay Strickland, Paige Guilfoyle, Lauren Kemer, Alicia Robert, Alexis Fredrick and Sonrisa Lewis scored the goals.

Christiana tops Newark in Flight A soccer

► VIKINGS, from 21

"It just changed the game for us, being down that early."

Christiana added a second goal in the first half as Tom Alexander scored in the 21st minute.

Newark tried to rally in the second half. Much of the play in the second 40 minutes was in the Christiana zone. The Yellowjackets, however, were unable to convert any of their opportunities into goals. They did have one point-blank shot bounce off the post.

Newark ended up outshooting Christiana 11-7 and had more corner kick opportunities as well.

It was Christiana, though, that scored the goals. Johnny McClain sealed the Vikings' victory with another goal in the 75th minute.

"Give Christiana credit," said Mitchell, whose team dropped to 8-3-1 on the season. "They wanted it more than we did. And if we're going to give up our [Flight A] title, there's no better team to give it up to than this one.

"John [Kendall] has done a great job with this team. I know he faced some adversity during last season and it really wasn't fair. Here's someone that's never done anything underhanded, never been unprofessional and he had to endure a lot of criticism last season.

"I would like to know where those people are now. You couldn't ask for a better person to be a coach."

Hunt's winning kick special for team, coaches and family

By MARTY VALANIA

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

As the Newark High band began playing the national anthem, Newark assistant football coach Doug Hunt walked down the sideline and threw his arm around his kicker.

About an hour and half later that same kicker, Amy Hunt, split the uprights with a booming extra-point kick to give the Yellowjackets a 7-6 lead over rival William Penn. Normally reserved on the football field, a fist-pumping Amy sprinted off the field and jumped into the waiting arms of her dad. Dad, also typically very reserved on the sideline, threw his fist high in the air.

The celebration was a quick one because there was still 11:06 remaining in what was a very intense game. It was, however, a special one for those involved.

The one-point lead, of course, held up and that go-ahead kick turned into the winning kick. It was, however, one she agonized over for most of the game.

The Colonials scored in the first quarter to take a 6-0 lead. William Penn's extra-point kick, though, was blocked. As the game wore on Amy realized that winning the game might come down to her kick.

"I was so nervous," she said after the game. "I knew the whole time that we would score and I'd have to kick the extra point. But I have to give all the credit to Dave Lewis (holder) and Frank Kurz (snapper). They did the hard part.

"It just feels great. It's really overwhelming."

Amy, a senior, is a first-team All-State player on the Newark High girls soccer team and plans to play soccer in college next year. She has also been a cross country runner during her high school career.

Unfortunately, Amy has also had to endure several surgeries on her legs to try and relieve a circulation problem.

The problem led to her not running cross country last fall. It also led to her practicing kicking a football and set the tone for her being on the team this year.

"We saw her kicking last fall and I told Doug, 'that's our kicker next year,'" said Newark coach Butch Simpson. "She's done a great job for us."

Doug Hunt has been an assistant coach at Newark for 22 years. Amy's brother Scott quarterbacked the Jackets to the state championship game in 1995.

"We've all known Amy basically since she was born," Simpson said. "We've known the family forever. You don't realize it when it happens because you're caught up in winning the game. But when you look back, it was a great moment. It's why you get involved with coaching."

Amy works with her dad in practice. She has a daily routine of kicking and other workouts that last over an hour and a half.

"She really hasn't had a great week of practice," Doug said before the William Penn game. "I work with her every day. And that probably is a source of great frustration for her."

Dad might have had that week of family tonight."

practice in his mind when he asked Simpson if the offense was going to go for a two-point conversion or the kick following the touchdown.

"I was thinking, 'why in the world would we go for two when all we need is the kick," Simpson said laughing afterwards. "There was no doubt we were going to kick it." Once the decision to kick was made, however, Doug felt good.

"I really had in my mind that she was going to make it," he said. "It really meant a lot to see it go through the uprights. It was really neat."

Simpson, too, was confident.

"It didn't cross my mind not to [kick it]," he said. "I have complete confidence and faith in Amy Hunt.

"She is a competitive athlete that has been in many pressure situations of her own during her athletic career. What she has accomplished, with the pain she's had to endure in her legs over the years, is incredible.

"My concern on any kick is if there's going to be a good snap, a good hold and can the line keep it from getting blocked. If all those things go right, I'm not worried about Amy making the kick."

The confidence was obviously warranted. The kick was high, straight and long like a 300-yard drive down the middle of the fairway.

And while short and sweet on the sideline, there's little doubt that there was a longer family celebration later in the night.

"Doug doesn't usually show a lot of emotion," Simpson said. "But I can tell you, that's one very happy family tonight."

Fourth-quarter touchdown leads Newark to victory touchdown pass to Gerald Hynson to cap the drive.

NEWARK, from 21

Then in a situation eerily similar to last year's regular season meeting between these two state powers, William Penn threatened again late in the second quarter as well. The Colonials moved all the way to the Newark two-yard line with 38 seconds to play before intermission. Facing a fourth-down-and-one situation, William Penn shunned the field_goal attempt and went for the touchdown. The Jackets, like they did a year ago, stopped the play cold and took over the ball.

"Our game plan was to be aggressive," said William Penn coach Bruce Reynolds about the decision not to kick the field goal. "We didn't feel we could play conservatively and win the game."

"I think that picked us up a little going into halftime," said senior linebacker Justin Caserta, who recovered two fumbles in the second half. "I personally thought that after their loss to Brandywine, they were going to come in here and play their best game of the year. They had a lot of fire."

The Yellowjackets picked up the pace in the third quarter, twice embarking on long drives only to have them both stall in Colonials' territory – once on an interception.

The drives, though, did change field position in Newark's favor and the Jackets were able to take advantage when William Penn fumbled at their own 20-yard line late in the third quarter.

Three plays after Caserta pounced on the loose ball, Parson scored his touchdown and Hunt split the uprights to put Newark ahead 7-6.

William Penn, on its first offensive play after the touchdown, promptly fumbled the ball back to Newark again. An interception ended that drive and the Colonials got the ball at their own 11-yard line with 9:01 to play in the game.

Ten plays later they had the ball at the Newark 18-yard line. Newark's Danny Strengari, however, broke through the line and sacked Davis for a nine-yard loss, forcing a William Penn time out. This time the Colonials did set up for what would've been a 44-yard field goal attempt. Holder Scott Linus bobbled the low snap, however, and his attempt to run the ball was stopped well short of the first down.

With 2:22 to play in the game, Newark took over the ball at their own 25-yard line needing only a first down to seal the victory. Parson gained seven on first down and appeared to be headed for more on second down when he fumbled. The ball laid on the ground for what seemed like an eternity before Newark quarterback Charlie Porter completed a 15-yard sprint and dive to recover it and save the

Architecture of old hotels highlights local author's book

Newark-area resident Bryant Tolles' passion is the architecture and history of tourism at the grand, old resort hotels in New Hampshire's White Mountains and other resort regions of the Northeast.

His new book, "The Grand Resort Hotels of the White Mountains, A Vanishing Architectural Legacy," recently published by David R. Godine, explores the architectural, economic and cultural history of the first structures in America designed exclusively for the tourist trade.

From 1875 until the first world war, tourists spent weeks, months and, sometimes, entire summers at the grand hotel complexes that were like small cities unto themselves, even having their own heating plants and generators.

Mothers, children, nurses and maids would take the train from New York or Boston and arrive in the White Mountains with steamer trunks filled with clothes and other necessities. Fathers and husbands would commute from the cities on weekends. According to Tolles, hotel carriages and, later, motor cars would whisk guests from the nearby train stations to the hotel. With manicured lawns, elegant gardens and the latest conveniences like electricity, elevators, telephone lines and private baths, the hotels offered their guests only the best.

Golf courses, tennis courts, hiking and carriage trails, bowling, fine dining, an orchestra and an artist-inresidence added to the ambiance, Tolles said. The hotels even fielded their own "nines," staff baseball teams to play teams from other hotels for the entertainment of

Two that do remain in New Hampshire, he said, are The Baisams in Dixville Notch and the Mount Washington Hotel in Bretton Woods. Both are large, ornate struc-

The 250-page book contains more than 200 photos, many of them taken by the author. An associate professor of history and art history at the University of Delaware, Tolles attributes his interest in these grand resorts to being a native New Englander, who spends part of each summer in New Hampshire.
